PARA, a City of Southern America in Braſil, about the River of the Amazons, gives name to a little Country called The Government or Capitania de Para, and is poſſeſs'd by the Portugueſe, who have ſome Colonies there. Lon. 3. 28. Lat. 1. 30.

PARABOLANS, a Name given in the firſt Age of the Church to certain Clerks of Alexandria, who courageouſly adventur'd into the Hoſpitals, to aſſiſt and comfort thoſe that were ſick, and had the Plague. They are mentioned in the Theodoſian Code, and their number fixed; for they had been to the number of five or ſix hundred: and being all under the Biſhop s Juriſdiction, the Governours of Egypt were diſturb'd at it. Cod. Theod. de Epiſc. & Cler. Baronius A. C. 416.

PARACELSUS (Philip Aureolus Theophraſtus Bombaſtus de Hohenheim) was born in 1493 in a little Town near Zurick in Swiſſerland, called Einſideln. His Father called William, and the natural Son of a Prince, was well skill'd in the Sciences, and took great care of his Education. Paracelſus admirably anſwer'd his Expectations, and as his Inclination led him to the ſtudy of Phyſick, he made great Progreſs in the ſame in a ſhort time, and travelled into France, Spain, Italy, and the Empire in order to be acquainted with the moſt celebrated Phyſicians there. After his return into Swiſſerland, he made his abode at the City of Bale, where he read Phyſick Lectures in the German Tongue, as Ramus and ſome others inform us. In the mean time Paracelſus found a new way of preparing Phyſick, and made uſe of Chymical Remedies, which had ſo good Succeſs, that he acquired much Reputation thereby; and more-eſpecially, as having cured Diſeaſes before held incurable. One John Lichtenfels, a Canon, falling extream ſick, promiſed him a conſiderable Sum if he would recover him, which Paracelſus effected, but the other refuſing to pay was ſued by him; but the Judges having ordered the Canon to pay him only the uſual Fee, he was ſo enraged thereat, that he forſoke the City of Baſil and retir'd into Alſatia. He uſed to laugh at the ordinary way of practiſing Phyſick, and gloried to have overthrown the Method of Galen, which he ſaw was imperfect and doubtful, whereby he contracted the Hatred of the Phyſicians. We have his Works in Eleven Volumes by the Title of Opera Medico-Chymica ſive Paradoxa. He has writ ſeveral other Things that have not been publiſhed, but remain in Manuſcript in ſeveral choice Libraries. He boaſted, that he could by his Remedies keep a Man alive for ſeveral Ages, whereas he himſelf died when but 48 Years old in 1541, and was buried in the Hoſpital of S. Sebaſtian at Saltzburg, where may be ſeen his Epitaph. Several Authors have writ againſt him, becauſe they did not well underſtand him, if his Admirers may be credited. *Melchior. Adam in vit. Germ. Medic. PARADIN (William) a Native of Cuiſeaux in Burgundy, and Dean of Beaujeu, was in great repute in the XVIth. Age, and alive in 1581. He publiſhed divers Books, which manifeſt that he was not meanly learned, the moſt conſiderable whereof are, The Chronicle of Savoy, divided into two parts; the firſt treating of the Earls in ſixty Chapters, and the ſecond of the Dukes; The Hiſtory of the Gallican Church; Memoirs of the Illuſtrious Houſes of France; The Hiſtory of Ariſteus, about the Tranſlation of the Law of Moſes; The Hiſtory of our time; The Annals of Burgundy, in three Books; Memoirs of the Hiſtory of Lyons; and ſeveral other Latin and French Tracts, with divers Tranſlations. He had a Brother called Claude Paradin, Prebend of Beaujeu, and a Man of Learning, who lived in 1565, and writ divers things; as the Genealogical Alliances of the Princes of France and Gaul; The Tetraſtichs of the Bible; Heroick Emblems, &c.

PARADIS (Romulus) an Eccleſiaſtick, lived in the XVIIth. Age, under the Papacy of Paul V. and was born in Citta Caſtellana, a Town of the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate. He was learned in the Law and other Sciences; writ excellent Latin, and was a curious Poet; died young about the time he was to publiſh a Poem entituled, Maxentius, and a Volume of Letters. He had printed a Collection of Poems, and the Inquiſitor who Licenſed them, being offended to ſee the Name of Paradis in the Frontiſpiece of a profane Work, told him very ſeriouſly, He muſt put three points only after Romulus inſtead of the ſame. Paradis laugh'd at the Ignorance of the Man, and for fear of any farther Trouble, left the Matter in the ſame manner as that able Inquiſitor had order'd it; in the mean time his Work met with very good Succeſs, and his Friends congratulated him on all hands, and ſaid, M Paradis, your Verſes are very pleaſing. Pray, reply'd he, call me no more M. Paradis, leaſt you bring me under the Inquiſition; my Name is changed, and I am called M. Three Points. This Story was ſoon publiſhed, and ſerv'd for Paſtime at the Court of Rome ſome time. Janus Nicius Erithræus Pinac. Imag. Illuſt. p. 2. c. 54.

PARADISE. This Word is derived from παράδεισος which ſignifies a Garden, but is not originally Greek, for the Jews uſe the word Pardes in this ſame ſence in the Books of the Old Teſtament, and it's generally believ'd, they borrowed it from the Perſians. We call the place where our fore-father Adam was created, Terreſtrial Paradiſe, and Divines make uſe of the word Paradiſe when they ſpeak of the Abode of the Happy, yet we do not find this Word in all Moſes's Law, becauſe he does not ſpeak in his Books, of the State of Souls when ſeparated from their Bodies; tho' there is ſome reaſon to believe, when he ſpeaks of Iſaac in theſe Words, Appoſitus eſt populo ſuo, he intimated, that his Soul was gone to a particular place amongſt thoſe of his Nation, which was interpreted by the Jews to be the Boſom of Abraham the Father of all the Faithful and True-Believers, and it's in this ſence that our Saviour's words to the penitent Thief, Hodie mecum eris in Paradiſo, are to be underſtood. Maldonat in his Commentary upon the 27th. Chapter of S. Matthew, is of this Opinion, becauſe the Boſom of Abraham, as he obſerves, was the place where the Saints were detain'd until the Heavens were opened after Chriſt's Aſcenſion. All Divines give the Name of Paradiſe to the Heaven that is to be the Reſidence of the Happy, but differ about the time of their Admittance therein; the Weſtern Church holding, That the Souls of the Bleſſed enjoy their Happineſs now in Heaven, whilſt the Eaſtern denies it them till after the laſt Judgment. M. Simon ſays, The Greeks diſtinguiſh two ſorts of Paradiſes; the firſt a place of Light and Reſt mentioned in their Liturgy, wherein the Bleſſed expect the laſt Judgment; and this they call in their publick Office for the Dead, Paradiſe, Light, Life, Happineſs the Boſom of Abraham, and Manſion of the Living, &c. The Second Paradiſe ſhall be the Eternal Happineſs which they will enjoy in Heaven after the day of Judgment; for it's only then, ſay they, that Jeſus Chriſt will come as Judge, and will ſay to the Bleſſed, Come and enjoy the Kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the World. Terreſtrial Paradiſe is that pleaſant place where Adam and Eve lived until they were driven out of it for their Diſobedience. The Fathers and Doctors of the Church have endeavoured with great care to find what part of the World this was in, but without Succeſs. The moſt common Opinion is, of thoſe who place it in Meſopotamia towards Armenia, and underſtand by Eden the Country which ſtretches between Euphrates and Tigris to the Mountains of Armenia. Others mark its ſituation towards the Caſpian Sea, among the Mountains of Armenia. Some ſay it was in the Iſland Ceylan; ſome place it in Sumatra; others in the Canaries: Nay, ſome would have it upon a high Mountain, in the upper Region of the Air; nor did others ſtick to remove it to the ſurface of the Moon; but to paſs by theſe, and others that would have it to be in Heaven, and give an Allegorical meaning to Moſes's Deſcription of it; Some Modern Authors are of Opinion, that the Terreſtrial Paradiſe was in that Land, ſince called the Land of Canaan, Palæſtina and the Holy Land; and they endeavour to confirm their Opinion thus; 1. Geneſar, which is the Name of a Lake in Palæſtine, which was formerly a Valley, ſignifies, ſay they, in Hebrew, The firſt Garden, or the Garden of a Prince, that is, of the firſt Man. Jordan is form'd of Joer and Eden, which ſignifie, the River of Eden, the River of Delight; ſo that there is reaſon to believe, that the Terreſtrial Paradiſe was not far off this Lake. 2. God has always lov'd and favour'd this Country more than any other part of the Earth, as appears by theſe words, Eſt Terra quam Jehova Deus tuus curat. Semper ſunt oculi Jehovæ Dei tui in ea: It was there he eſtabliſh'd his Temple, and accompliſhed the Myſteries of our Redemption. 3. Moſes and the Prophets call ſeveral places in Palæſtina, the Garden of God, or Terreſtrial Paradiſe. 4. Joſephus obſerves, That the two Pillars on which Seth the Son of Adam had engraven an Abridgment of Arts and Sciences, were found in Syria. As to the Rivers of Paradiſe, they ſay that Jordan was the great one, which afterwards divided it ſelf into four other, viz. Piſon, Gihon, Tigris, and Euphrates, but that in proceſs of time, Sand had fill'd up the ancient Sources; that the Piſon croſs'd Arabia Deſerta, then the Happy, and diſembogu'd it ſelf into the Perſian Gulf. The Gihon watered Arabia Petræa, and emptied it ſelf into the Red Sea: The Euphrates and Tigris ſtream'd from Eden into Aſſyria and Chaldæa, whence they diſcharg'd themſelves into the Perſian Gulf. They that place the Terreſtrial Paradiſe in a Plain on the top of Mount Taurus, or towards Mount Ararat, ſay, That the four Rivers mention'd in Scripture, have their Sources there; that the Piſon is now called Phaſis, and the Gihon, Araxes or Araſſ; for Gihon in the Chaldaick, and Arax in the Perſian Tongue ſignifie a River. The Learned are divided in their Opinions as well about the exiſtence of this Paradiſe, as about the place were it was; Viega, Genebrard, Oleaſter, Eugubinus, and Janſenius think the Waters of the Deluge have quite deſtroy'd it: Others hold, that it's ſtill in being, and S. Auguſtin ſays, Eſſe Paradiſum illum fides Chriſtiana non dubitat. Some will have it to be on high and inacceſſible Mountains of Armenia; that Enoch and Elias were carried thither to live out of Mens ſight until the coming of Antichriſt. Hoffman adds, That it's certain, Paradiſe had a Being before Adam, and proves, That it did not exiſt before the Creation of the World, becauſe it was Terreſtrial, and is deſcrib'd with Fruit-bearing Trees, Rivers, &c. He ſays, There is reaſon to believe it was in a very temperate Climate, and thinks, that it contributed to the long Life of Adam and his Succeſſors, until Intemperance, the Source of Diſtempers, got into the World to ſhorten our Days. He believes the Deluge has quite deſtroy'd that Paradiſe, and depriv'd it of all that render'd it pleaſant, therefore concludes it Folly to loſe time in its ſearch, ſince it wants its primitive diſtinguiſhing Characters, and ſmiles at the Jews for thinking Elias and Enoch were carried thither; whereas they were really taken into the Celeſtial Paradiſe, of which our Saviour ſpoke on the Croſs, and which S. Paul ſaw, viz. the Third Heaven. PARAGOIA, Paloan, or Calamianes, an Iſle and Kingdom in the Indian-Sea, put among the number of the Philippine-Iſles; near an hundred Leagues long, twenty broad, and two hundred in circumference, the moſt weſterly, leſs fertil and leſs inhabited of any of them, ſituated between the Iſle of Borneo, and that of Manilla. It was never conquered by the Europeans.

PARAGUAY, called by Herrera, Rio de la Plata, a great Country in South America, between Braſil and Peru, comprehends the Provinces of Paraguay, Uraguay, Parana, Guaira, Chaco, the River of Plata, wherein is alſo a River of that Name ariſing from the Lake of Xarajas. This Country is fruitful in all things, having Mines, Sugar-Canes, and a Plant called Coparibas, whoſe Juice is excellent Balm. Its Cities are l' Aſſumption, a Biſhop's See, as well as Buenos Ayres, Santa Fe, Carricutes and Itapoa, and belongs almoſt all to the Spaniards.

PARAIBA, a Province and City in South America in Braſil, with a large Haven belonging to it. The Country thereabouts is called the Government of Paraiba, Capitania de Paraiba. The City ſtands upon a River of the ſame Name; was taken by the Hollanders from the Portugueſe in 1634. and called Frederickſtadt. But the Portugueſe quickly retook it, and gave it the Name of Noſtra Sennora des Nieves; who have alſo in that Country the Forts of S. Katharine and S. Anthony. Here is a vaſt River called alſo Paraiba. Its Mouth lieth 21. 40. South Lat. And it is a noble River, full of Fiſh. There are three Rivers called by this Name. The firſt between La Plata and S Vincent. This is the ſecond. And the third is in the North part of Braſil. The French were the firſt that planted on this River, and were expelled by the Portugueſe in 1584. Since which time the latter have poſſeſſed it. It entereth the Ocean by a large Mouth in the Lat. of ſix degrees, to the North of Cape Blanco two Leagues. After the Dutch took Olinda, the Portugueſe much encreaſed this Colony: On the South ſide of the River lieth Paraiba three Leagues from the Ocean, and is called alſo Philippæa. It has a convenient Haven and is well inhabited, but ſlightly fortified. Laet.

PARALIPOMENA, or Chronicles, two Canonical Books of the Old Teſtament, in the beginning of which are the Genealogies of the principal Families of Iſrael. The Author of them is not known. But 'tis like that he that writ them was the ſame that compoſed the firſt ſix Chapters of Eſdras. S. Jerom. Præf. ad lib. Paral. &c. Bellarm. de Script. Eccl. Huet. Dem Evang.

PARANA, a Province of South America, in the Country of Paraguay, where the Spaniards have four Colonies, S. Ignatius, Itapoa, or l'Incarnation, Acaraio, or la Natividad, and S. Maria d'Ignaza, and wherein is alſo a River of the ſame Name that diſchargeth it ſelf into the Plata, and another called Paranaiba, which falls into that of the Amazons.

PARANYMPHI, were thoſe who conducted the Bridegroom and Bride to the Church on the day of the Celebration of the Marriage, and preſented them to the Prieſts in the Abſence of the Parents. This Cuſtom is mentioned in an Epiſtle of Pope Evariſtus, who lived about the beginning of the IId. Age of the Church. And Pope Soter, about the end of the ſame Age, ordered that a Wife ſhould be reputed lawful, when the Prieſt had beſtowed the Benediction, the Parents given her in Marriage according to the Cuſtom of the Chriſtians, and the Paranymphi conducted them. Du Cange Gloſſarium Latinitatis.

PARAPHRASE, (Chaldaick Paraphraſe.) Its commonly believed that the firſt Tranſlation of the Bible was into Chaldee. And that the Ignorance of Jews in the Hebrew Tongue, after the Babyloniſh Captivity, was the Occaſion of that Verſion called Targum, or the Chaldaick Paraphraſe, which is neither done by one Author, nor at the ſame time, nor upon all the Books of the Old Teſtament. The firſt upon the Pentateuch, was done by Onkelos, a Proſelyte, who lived about the time of our Saviour, if we believe the Hebrew Authors. The ſecond upon the Pentateuch, is attributed to Jonathan, the Son of Uziel, who is not the ſame with Theodotion, Author of a Greek Tranſlation, as ſome have imagined, grounding it upon the Etymology of the Word Theodotion, which in Greek has the ſame ſignification as Jonathan in Hebrew, that is, The Gift of God. The third upon the ſame Book, is called the Targum Hieroſolymitanum, or the Jeruſalem Paraphraſe; the Author of which is not certainly known, nor the time when compoſed. Schickard believes it to bear the ſame Date as the Talmud of Jeruſalem, which was writ about three hundred Years after the laſt Deſtruction of the Temple. Burnt in the ſeventieth Year after our Lord's Incarnation. There is beſides theſe three Paraphraſes upon the five Books of Moſes, another upon the Pſalms, Job, and Proverbs, which is attributed to Ralf Joſ. ſurnamed The Blind. There is one alſo upon the Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Eccleſiaſtes, and Eſther, but the Author not known. And we have a Chaldaick Paraphraſe upon Joſhua, Judges, Kings, and the Prophets, by Jonathan the Son of Uziel, who according to the Jews had before writ the Paraphraſe upon the Pentateuch. Several Learned Men believe that all which the Rabbins ſay concerning the Antiquity of the Chaldee Paraphraſes is fabulous, and that the oldeſt of all the Tranſlations is that of the Septuagint. It's added alſo that they are later than S. Jerom, who having great acquaintance with the moſt Learned Rabbins, and writ ſo much upon that Subject, could not fail of ſpeaking of the Chaldaick Paraphraſes if there had been any ſuch in his time. The Jews affirm they were compoſed in the time of the Prophets. And they have them in ſo great Veneration, that they are oblig'd to read every Week in their Synagogue, a Section of the Paraphraſe of Onkelos, when they have read an Hebrew Text in the *Bible. PARCÆ. 'Tis the Name of the three Siſters, Clotho, Lacheſis, and Atropos, which are by ſome made to be the Daughters of Jupiter and Themis, by others of the Night, Chaos, Neceſſity, &c. they were the fatal Siſters or Goddeſſes of Deſtinies, which governed the Thred, that is, the Courſe of Man's Life; the youngeſt whereof held the Diſtaff, and drew the Thred, the next, ſomewhat older, turned it upon the Spindle, and the third, already grown old, cut it off; whereupon enſued Death. *Heſiod. in Theog. PARDON. The Jews have a Feaſt called Jonhucchippour, that is, The day of Pardon, or Propitiation, celebrated on the tenth day of the Month Tiſri, which anſwers our September, appointed in Leviticus, ch. 23. v. 27. They ceaſe from all work on this day as on the Sabbath, and eat nothing at all thereon. Rabbi Leo of Modena obſerves, that the Jews uſed formerly a Ceremony on the Eve of this Feaſt, which conſiſted in ſtriking thrice the Head of a live Cock, and ſaying every time, Thou muſt be ſacrificed in my ſtead. Which Ceremony they called Capara, Expiation. But it is now obſerved neither in Italy, nor the Levant, as knowing it to be ſuperſtitious. They eat plentifully on this Eve, becauſe of the Faſt on the next day. Several bathed themſelves, and cauſed thirty nine Stripes to be given them, which they called Malcud. Thoſe that had detained any thing unjuſtly from another, if their Conſciences accuſed them, did then make Reſtitution. They begged Pardon of thoſe whom they had offended, and forgave them by whom they had been injured; gave Alms, and generally did all that ought to accompany true Repentance. After Supper ſeveral clad themſelves in White, and in that poſture, without any Shoes, went into the Synagogue, which all that Night ſhone with Lamps and ſmall Wax-candles; where every Nation, according to its Cuſtom, made divers Prayers and Confeſſions in token of their Repentance, which laſted at leaſt three hours before they went to bed. Some of them ſpent the whole Night in the Synagogue, praying to God and repeating of Pſalms. About the break of the next day, all returned into the Synagogue dreſt as before, and ſtayed there till night, ſaying their Prayers, Pſalms, and Confeſſions, without Interruption, and begging of God to pardon the Sins they had committed. But upon the approach of the Night, that is, when the Stars began to appear, there was an Horn ſounded, ſignifying that the Faſt was at an end. Whereupon departing the Synagogue, they ſaluted, and wiſhed one another long Life and Happineſs, bleſs'd the New-moon, and returning to their Habitations, broke their Faſt, and fell to eating. PAREUS (Ambroſe) of Laval, in the Country of Main, Chirurgeon to Charles IXth. and Henry III. of France, made his Name famous to Poſterity for the Works he has left behind him. He lived in the Laſt Age. And obſerving there were but very few Books of Chirurgery in the French Tongue, and that there was a multitude of others in all ſorts of Sciences, reſolved to adorn it with what was beſt in an Art he had practiſed for forty Years with great Reputation. He laboured at this great Work which contained twenty ſix Treatiſes with Cuts. James Guillemeau, the King's Chirurgeon, rendered it into Latin, and got it printed in 1582. PAREUS (David) born at Frankenſtein in Sileſia, An. 1548. He was Profeſſor of Divinity at Heidelberg 38 Years, and was much taken notice of for his Commentaries on the Scripture, and his Diſputations againſt Cardinal Bellarmin. His laſt Work was in poliſhing of the Body of Divinity begun by Urſin. He died An. 1622, aged 74, having three years before had a Viſion in his Sleep, of the City and Caſtle being all in a Flame, whereupon he cried out, Good God avert this bad Omen, and preſerve thy Sarepta. And accordingly the Town was ſacked by the Spaniards a little after his Death. His Commentaries on the Romans were burnt at London, by the common Hangman, and cenſur'd by the Univerſity of Oxford, for expreſſing himſelf ſeditiouſly concerning Government. He had a Son called Philip, who alſo wrote divers Treatiſes. Both their Works were printed in three Volumes at Francfort, in 1647. Crocus Elenc. Scrip. S.

PARIS, upon the Seyne in the Iſle of France, is one of the faireſt and greateſt Cities in the World, the Capital of the Kingdom of France, has a Parliament, Univerſity and Archbiſhoprick, under which are Chartres, Meaux and Orleans. Authors cannot agree as to the original of its Name, or who was the Founder of it. We can only ſay with Euſebius, that it is older than Rome, though we know not who built it. Julius Cæſar ſpeaks of Paris as well as Julian the Apoſtate who ſtaid there a great while during his reſidence in Gaul. The Greeks and Latins call it variouſly, as Lutetia, Leucetia, Leucotetia, Pariſii and Lutetia Pariſiorum. All Authors almoſt agree as to the original of this Name, taken from the Mariſhes that were near that City, which made it extreme dirty, Lutetia coming from Lutum, ſignifying Dirt. Paris is uſually divided into three parts, the City, Town, and Univerſity. The City is very ancient, built in an Iſle formed by the Seyne, where may yet be ſeen the two old Gates which are the great and little Chatelet. What is moſt conſiderable in it are, the Metropolitan Church of Notredame, la Sainte Chapelle, with ſeveral other Churches, and the Palace, where the Parliament and other Sovereign Courts hold their Seſſions This Palace was the ancient reſidence of the Kings, and the Hall of S. Louis may yet be ſeen in the Conciergerie there. The Town lies to the North part, is lower than the reſt, and built laſt, has eight Gates, is very numerous as to Inhabitants, contains a vaſt number of Churches, Palaces, &c. the moſt famous Building whereof is the Louvre the King's ordinary reſidence ſince Lewis XIIth. Philip the Auguſt began this Sumptuous Edifice in 1214, to lay up his Treaſure and Records therein, and to impriſon Perſons of Quality. Charles the Vth. repaired and enlarged it. And afterwards Francis Iſt. Henry IId. Charles IXth Henry IVth. Lewis XIIIth. and the preſent King Lewis XIVth. of France, have at ſeveral times added to it. Here alſo is to be ſeen the Cardinal's Palace, built by the Cardinal and Duke of Richlieu, and called now the Palace Royal. Beſides ſeveral other Palaces or Houſes of great Note; the Arſenal, Baſtile, the great and litle Chatelet. The Univerſity which Monſieur de Balzac called The Latin Country, and others The City of Learning, is the third part of Paris, and ſtands higher than the reſt. It's believed Charlemaign laid the firſt foundations of it. Lewis the VIIth. and Philip the Auguſt contributed much to the increaſe of it. The Sorbon is the moſt eminent part of that Univerſity. The Houſe of Navarre or de Campagne was founded by Jane of Navarre, the Wife Philip the Fair, in 1304; and the College of Harcourt, by Ralph de Harcourt, Prebend of Paris, in 1280. Cardinal le Maine built that called according to his Name, in 1302. That of Bayeux was founded by William Bonnet, Biſhop of that City, in 1308. The College of Montague has for its Founder Giles Aſſelin, Archbiſhop of Roan, who founded it in 1314. Thoſe of Rheims and Narbonne were built by the Prelates of thoſe Cities, the laſt by Bernard de Fargie, in 1317. and the other by Guy de Roye, in 1412. I paſs over others built by Regular and Secular Perſons, in all above ſixty, with about 8 thouſand Scholars. To Paris belongs the firſt Parliament of France. Philip the Fair fixed it, and eſtabliſhed the Chamber of Inqueſts, which Charles VIIIth divided into two, and appointed the Tournelle; the Chamber of Inqueſts was afterwards augmented into five; Francis I. created that of the Demeſnes; and Henry IIId. added thereto that of the Requeſts of the Palace; the Court des Comtes or a ſort of Exchequer, where the Finances and Demeſnes of the King are Regiſter'd and taken care of, was erected at Paris at the ſame time as the Parliament was; Charles VIth. eſtabliſhed the Court of Aids, in 1355; Henry II. added a Chamber thereto, in 1551; and Lewis XIIIth. afterwards added a third. Here is alſo a Court of Mints. The Treaſury Chamber is the Juriſdiction of the Treaſurers General of France; the Conſtable, and Marſhals of France, the Admiral and great Maſters Inquiſitors, and General Reformers of the Waters and Foreſts have their Juriſdiction at the Marble Table; the Baily of the Palace hath his Chamber or Court in the Grand Hall; without the Walls of the Palace is the Great Council in the Cloiſter of S. Germain de Lauxerrois; and 'tis the Juriſdiction of the great Provoſt of the Houſhold, that of Paris for adminiſtring Juſtice and Management of the Affairs of that great City is held in the grand Chatelet; the Provoſt of the Merchants or Major, and Echevins or Sheriffs have theirs alſo. There is yet a Court of Juſtice ſuperior to all theſe I have ſpoken of, which is the King's Council, and is divided into the Council of State, Exchequer, and la Conſeil des Parties; or a ſort of Court of Chancery, which receives Appeals in ſeveral Caſes. The Council of State is compoſed of perſons whom the King is pleaſed to call to it, and are called Miniſters of State. The Council of the Finances conſiſts of a Super-Intendant, Intendants, Comptrollers, Regiſters and other Officers. la Conſeil des Parties is compoſed of the Chancellor, Councellors of State, and Maſters of Requeſts. Thoſe who have formerly writ of the Antiquity of this City, affirm it contained thirty four thouſand Houſes, and that its Walls were 1800 Perches in Circumference; but our modern Writers averr it contains no leſs than fifty thouſand Houſes, and 413 Streets. having daily increaſed ſince Clovis I. choſe it for his reſidence, and that almoſt all the other Kings, his Succeſſors, did ordinarily live there. Next we muſt take a little notice of its Hoſpitals, Bridges, Squares, Gates and Suburbs. In the Town ſtands the Hoſpital of S. James, in S. Denys Street, believed to be founded by Charlemaign; that of the Quingevingts Aveugles and l'Hotel de Dieu attributed to S. Lovis; thoſe of S. Gervais and S. Catharine; the three of Enfants Rouges, or Red-coats, Holy Ghoſt and of the Trinity; that of Incurables, l'Hotel des Invalides, the Hoſpital General, and ſeveral others in the Suburbs, about Thirty in all. The moſt remarkable Bridges are, the little Bridge Pont S. Michel, le Pont N. Dame, le Pont au Change, and le Pont Neuf. There is beſides in the Iſle le Pont Marie, le Pont de la Tournel, and le Pont au Double; the others are thoſe of l' Hotel-dieu, and of the Thuilleries, called la Pont Rouge. La Place Royal in S. Anthony's Street is not only the fineſt Square in Paris but perhaps in the World; in the midſt whereof is the Statue of King Lewis XIIIth. on Horſeback in Braſs: there is beſides, la Place de Greve, Marche Neuf, between Nôtredame Church and the Palace; that of the Dauphine, la Place S. Michel, la Place Malbert, &c. Place des Victoires, is alſo a great Square, ſo call'd, becauſe of a curious Statue there of Lewis XIVth. crown'd by a Victory, with a great many Bas-Reliefs, repreſenting the moſt Remarkable Victories of this Prince. This Statue was erected by the Duke de la Feuillade, Marſhal of France, &c. in the Year 1686: Tis Braſs Gilt, ſtanding upon a Pedeſtal of Marble, ſupported by Four Slaves, and Ornamented with Trophies and Bas-Reliefs of Braſs, repreſenting the moſt Remarkable Paſſages and Actions of his Majeſty's Reign. The Groupe of this Statue conſiſts of three Figures, the King in his Royal Robes being the principal; the other Two being a Victory, who ſtanding behind him, puts a Crown upon his Head, and Cerberus lying at his Feet. The King's Statue is Thirteen Foot high; and Cerberus at his Feet repreſents the Triple-League, over which that Monarch is ſuppos'd to Triumph: The Victory has one Foot upon a Globe, in a Riſing Poſture, and another in the Air, ſhe ſpreads her Wings for a Flight, and crowns the King as ſhe Sweeps along. This Groupe all together, with the Globe, Hercules's Club, the Lion's Skin and Helmet, weighs about Thirty thouſand Weight, and yet was Caſt at one Single Running, which extraordinary Circumſtances make the whole Performance not to be Parallell'd, there being nothing of this kind, either in Antiquity or Hiſtory, comparable to it. The Pedeſtal upon which the King ſtands, is White Marble ſtreak'd, and Two and twenty Foot high, &c. Amongſt the Ornaments of this City may be conſidered its ſeventeen Gates, whereof eight are in the Circuit of the City, and nine within the Incloſure of the Univerſity; of which many have been pulled down; as that of Neſle, S. Michael, &c. There is not one of theſe Gates but has very fine Suburbs adjoining to it, as S. Anthony, Charonne, S. Martin, S. Denys, Montmartre, S. Honorè, S. James, S. Marcel, S. Victor, and S. Germain, which at this Day equals for its Grandeur and Magnificence of Structure, the faireſt City in France. Paris ſuffered much by the Inroads of the Normans, who came before this City in 845 and 856, and beſieged it in 886 and 890, and was alſo much afflicted with the Cruelty of Strangers under the Reign of Lewis, ſurnamed for his Travels, d'Outremere. The Engliſh made themſelves Maſters of it in the Reign of Charles VIIth. The ſeditious Party of the League got it in the Reign of Henry IIId. who was baſely murthered under the Walls of it, in the Year 1589. It was almoſt all conſumed with Fire, in the Year 585. Suffered another Conflagration, in the Year 1034. And a terrible Inundation, in the Year 1206; Paris ſtands in the Iſle of France, and its Territory, called Pariſis, formerly extended as far as Pontoiſe on one ſide, and Claye towards la Brie on the other. It's well inhabited all about it; for there are no leſs than Ten thouſand Villages and Caſtles within Ten Leagues round it. Paris was formerly only a Biſhop's See, under Sens; but at the Requeſt of King Lewis XIIIth. Pope Gregory XVth. erected it, in 1622, into an Archbiſhoprick. The Archbiſhoprick of Paris was, in 1674, advanced to the Dignity of a Dutchy and Peerage, in Favour of Francis de Harlay Chanvalon, the preſent Prelate. The Cathedral Church is Notredame, whoſe firſt Foundation is attributed to Childebert Iſt. King Robert cauſed it to be rebuilt. And his Succeſſors continued his Deſign till the time of Philip the Auguſt, who finiſhed this magnificent Structure, by the Care of Biſhop Maurice of Sully. There are in Paris Forty four Pariſhes, Forty five Monaſteries, and almoſt as many Nunneries, beſides a great many Collegiate Churches. Morery makes Denys the Areopagite, the firſt Biſhop of Paris; but Sirmondus in his Diſſertation de Duobus. Dionyſiis, and Launoy in a Treatiſe of the ſame Name, affirm, that 'twas another Dionyſius who liv'd a great while after the Areopagite: Some other Authors have endeavour'd to confute theſe Two Learned Men. The Reader may ſee the Caſe argued on both ſides, in Schelſtrat Ant. Illuſt. 2. P. Diſs. 3. cap. 3. Art. 3. Among the Councils held in France, by the Aſſiduities of Hilarius of Poictiers, to re-eſtabliſh the Orthodox Faith againſt the Arians, that of Paris is the moſt conſiderable, thought to have been held about 362. M. le Fevre, in the Reign of Lewis XIIIth. gives an Account of this Council in the Fragments of S. Hilarius, the Title whereof imports, that it had been held apud Pariſæam Civitatem, which is explained to be Paris, by M. le Fevre, Cardinal Baronius, and others, beyond all Contradiction. We have in the ſame Place the Epiſtle which the Biſhops of France writ to the Eaſtern Prelates, wherein they explain their belief touching the Conſubſtantiality of the Son with the Father, and acquaint them with the Excommunication of Saturninus of Arles. In the Year 824 there was a Council held at Paris, in the Reign of Ludovicus Pius, in which the Controverſie concerning Image Worſhip was diſcuſs'd. This Council conſiſting of the moſt eminent Biſhops of France, examin'd Pope Adrian's Letter to Conſtantine and Irene, for the ſetting up of Images and after a full Debate of the matter, the Council concluded with a Temper betwixt the Two Extreams, That Images were neither to be broken and deſtroy'd, as ſome held, nor yet ſuperſtitiouſly Worſhipp'd, according to the Doctrin of the Second Council of Nice. The Acts of this Council were thrown into an Epiſtolary Form, and printed at Francfort in 1596; and afterwards inſerted into the Libri Carolini, by Goldaſtus, and publiſh'd in 1608 Bellarmine endeavours to confute this Council, in Append. ad Tract. de Cult. Imag. It has been ſince defended by Dallæus and Spanhemius. The Acts and Hiſtory of this Council, may be ſeen at large in le Cointe. Dallæ. de Imag. IV. cap. 6. *Spanheim. Hiſt. Imag. Reſt. This City was almoſt totally conſumed with Fire in 585, before which misfortune Gregory of Tours ſays, that there was a Brazen Mouſe and Serpent dug up, in digging the Foundations of a certain Houſe, which the Superſtition of the Ancients did look upon as Taliſmans that preſerved the City from Fire. In 1420 Henry the Vth. of England poſſeſſed himſelf of this City, and by marrying Katharine, Daughter to Charles VIth. of France, Henry VIth. of England was crown'd at Paris in 1422; and again in 1431, this City was poſſeſs'd by the Engliſh until 1435, but the Diviſions of England, in the time of Henry VIth. occaſioned the loſs of France. In 1588 the Inhabitants barricadoed the Streets againſt Henry IIId. at the Inſtigation of the Duke of Guiſe, head of the League; and that ſame King being about to revenge this Inſolence, was ſtabbed by James Clement a Dominican Friar. In 1590 this City was reduced by Henry the IVth. to ſuch dreadful Famine as is ſcarce any where to be read of. In 1610 Henry the IVth. was ſtabbed here by Ravaillac. In 1649 they were again reduced by Famine, and forced to comply with the Queen Mother of France. Paris is 170 m. S. PARIS, Son to Priamus and Hecuba, called otherwiſe Alexander, whoſe Mother when with Child of him having dream'd that ſhe was brought to Bed of a Firebrand, the Southſayers told her that the Child ſhe went with ſhould occaſion the ruin of Troy. Whereupon his Father ordered him to be made away as ſoon as born. But Hecuba, taken with his Beauty, took care to have him brought up by the Shepherds on Mount Ida. Being grown up, he fell in love with the Nymph Oenone, by whom he had two Sons. Having acquired great Fame for his equal Deciſion of Controverſies, he was choſen by Juno, Pallas and Venus, to determin which of them was moſt beautiful, and had the beſt right to the Golden Apple brought them by Diſcord at Peleus's Wedding, having this Motto, Detur Pulchriori. He decided for Venus, who had promis'd him the moſt beautiful Woman in the World, which he preferr'd to Juno's Kingdom, and Pallas's Wiſdom. He won the Prize at the Wreſtling Games at Troy, from Hector himſelf, who thereupon drawing his Sword, to have killed him, he diſcovered that he was his Brother, and being kindly receiv'd by his Father, a little after he was ſent with a Fleet of 20 Ships to Greece, to demand Heſione, and entertain'd by Menelaus, who being oblig'd to go for Crete, Paris laid hold of the Opportunity to take Helena away. But Herodotus ſays, that he took Sparta by force, and carried her off againſt her Will, with all the Royal Treaſures. From this Rape followed the Trojan War, wherein he and Menelaus fought Hand to Hand, and Paris, being almoſt conquer'd, was carried out of the Battle by Venus. He afterwards killed Achilles with an Arrow, which he thruſt into the ſole of his Foot, as he kneeled before an Altar in order to marry his Siſter Polyxena, for which he was afterwards killed by Pyrrhus. He was reckon'd fitter for Amours than Arms. Hence Ovid,

PARIS (Matthew) an Engliſh Benedictin, belonging to the Monaſtery of S. Alban, liv'd to the Year 1259, and was counted one of the greateſt Men for Learning and Ingenuity in his Time; for he underſtood Painting, Architecture, Mathematichs, and was a good Poet and Orator for that Age; and moreover a conſiderable Divine and Hiſtorian. He had ſeveral Employments conferr'd upon him, and was pitch'd upon to Reform and Viſit Monaſteries, and bring up the Practice to the Inſtitution. He was a Perſon both of Probity and Courage; and ſometimes declaim'd againſt the Vices of the Engliſh Court, not ſparing the Pope's Officers, when he found them incroaching upon the Privileges and Liberties of his Country. He calls his Hiſtory, Hiſtoria Major, which he divided into two Parts: The firſt begins with the World, and reaches to William the Conqueror; (though ſome Authors queſtion whether he was the Author of this Book) The other begins with the Conqueror, and is carried on to 1250, which he afterwards continued to 1259, in which Year he died. A Monk of the ſame Monaſtery continued this Hiſtory to 1272, or 73. i.e. to the Death of King Henry IIId. *Matth. PARKER (Henry) Son and Heir to Sir William Parker, by Alice his Wife, the Siſter and Heir of Henry Lovel, had Summons to Parliament in 21 H. 8. by the Title of Lord Morley, in right of his Mother, to whom that Title deſcended through the Iſſue of a ſecond Son of that Stock, he was ſucceeded by his Grandſon Henry, and he by the Lord Edward his Son, who was one of the Peers that gave Judgment of Death upon Mary Queen of Scots, at Fotheringhay. This Edward married Elizabeth, the ſole Daughter and Heireſs of William Stanley, Lord Monteagle, in whoſe right his Son William bore the Title of Lord Monteagle, and was the perſon to whom the Letter was delivered, whereby the dangerous Powder Plot came to be diſcovered. PARLIAMENT. 'Tis the Name of the Courts of Judicature in France: ſo called for that therein are debated the right of Parties, and a Deciſion made of the ſame. Under the firſt and ſecond Race of the Kings Juſtice was ordinarily adminiſtred at the Court of thoſe Princes, and in their preſence. King Pepin, deſirous to paſs into Italy, and not being able to preſide at the ordinary Aſſemblies of Juſtice, inſtituted about 755, or 56, a Parliament conſiſting of divers Lords of his Court. They were uſually held twice a year, but at days and places uncertain. The ſucceeding Kings made ſome alteration in the Parliament, which was always Ambulatory, and follow'd the Court, till the Reign of Philip the Fair. This Prince willing to rid himſelf of the importunity of Pleaders, and to ſave his people a vaſt expence which they were uſually at in following the Court, declared the Parliament ſedentary at Paris. The Edict bears date in 1302. It ought to have been held twice a year, to wit, on the eighth day after Eaſter, and at All-Saints, and every Seſſions to continue at leſt two months. The King made choice of two Prelates and two Barons to preſide there which were afterward uſually Archbiſhops or Biſhops, and Princes or ſome great Lords of the Court. There was then but one Chamber, called the Prelates-Chamber, for that it was compoſed of divers Eccleſiaſtical Perſons. Neceſſity afterwards and multiplicity of buſineſs obliged the Kings to increaſe the number of thoſe Chambers. That of Inqueſts which was the firſt and the principal was called by the name of the Grand-chamber or Grand-vault. The Chancellor or ſome one of the Prelates was Preſident there, and in their abſence, three of the principal and ancienteſt amongſt them. They were called Maſters of Parliament till the Reign of Philip de Valois, who by his Edict, in 1343, honoured them with the title of Preſidents. The firſt whereof was Simeon de Bury. The others that preſided in this Charge, though they had not the Name of Preſidents, were Hugh de Courcy, William Bertrand, &c. The Parliament of Paris is called the Court of Peers where the Dukes and Peers and other Officers of the Crown take the Oath. Thither they have their Suits reſtored, and are judged when accuſed of any Crime. This Point is ſo peculiar to this Court, that it was looked upon as great Injuſtice, and an Infringment of its Privileges, to grant Commiſſions to form Proceſſes elſewhere againſt the Marſhal de Marillac and the Duke of Montmorency. The Provinces under the Juriſdiction of this Parliament are the Iſle of France, Beauſſe, la Sologne, Berry, Auvergne, Lionnois, Forez, Beaujalois, Poitou, Anjou, Angoumois, Main, Perche, Picardy, Baie, Champagne, Touraine, Nivernois Bourbonnois, and Maconnois. The Parliament of Paris has ſeveral great Prerogatives, viz. as having Cognizance of the Right of the Regale and Peerages, excluſive of all other Parliaments. The Suits alſo both Civil and Criminal of the Peers of France, and the Right of their Peerages held by them in Appennage of the Crown, are in the firſt place cognizable before them. Matters controverted relating to the Univerſity of Paris, and to ſeveral other Communities, Cauſes wherein the Attorney General is concerned, Criminal Proceſſes againſt the great Officers of the Crown, and of Preſidents and Councellors of the Court, Treaſon, the Confirmation of the Privileges of Cities and other Communities, the Interpreting and Reforming of Cuſtoms, the Verifications of Edicts, Statutes and Declarations of the King's of France, do all belong to this Aſſembly. Where, beſides the Dukes and Peers, Bailiffs and Sheriffs, and all the Judges and Magiſtrates take their Oaths, and upon their Summons do immediately appear before them. This Parliament conſiſts of eight Chambers, which are, the great Chamber, the five Chambers of Inqueſts, and the two Chambers of the Tournelle. The great Chamber is compoſed of the chief Preſident, ſeven other Preſidents a Mortier, and twenty nine Councellors, to wit, ten of the Clergy, and nineteen Laicks. The Dukes and Peers have there their Seats and deliberative Voices, and ſo have Councellors of Honour, and Honorary Councellors; the Abbot of S. Denys in that Quality. the Archbiſhop of Paris, as Duke and Peer of France. The Maſters of Requeſts have alſo Seats and Voices there; but there cannot be admitted above four of them. Every Chamber of Inqueſts conſiſts of two Preſidents, and twenty eight Councellors. The Tournelle for Criminal Matters is compoſed of four Preſidents a Mortier, and eighteen Councellors, eight of the great Chamber, and ten of the Inqueſts. The Tournelle for Civil Affairs has four Preſidents, and ſix and twenty Councellors ſix of the great Chamber, and twenty of the Inqueſts There was alſo a Statute-Chamber erected by Henry the Fourth, in 1597, to take Cognizance of Cauſes and Proceſſes, wherein thoſe of the reformed Religion were concerned; but it was ſuppreſs'd by an Edict of January 1669. During the Vacations from the ſeventh of September, till the day after Martin maſs. There was another Chamber eſtabliſhed by the old Ordinances, for the deciding of certain caſes that required expedition, and could not ſtay. The ſecond Parliament of France is that of Toulouſe, inſtituted by Philip the Fair, in 1332, and fixed there by Charles VIIth. in 1443, under whoſe Juriſdiction is Languedoc, Vivarois, Velay, Gevaudan, Albigeois, Quercy, Rovergne, Lauragois, the Country of Foix, and part of Gaſcony. The Councellors of the Parliament of Paris pretend to have a Right to ſit in the other Parliaments. King Charles VIIth. in 1454, granted to the Councellors of Toulouſe the ſame right in the Parliament of Paris where the Ordinance was refuſed to be confirmed; whereupon the Court of Toulouſe put out a Decree in 1466, wherein they proteſted the Councellors of Paris ſhould not be admitted at Toulouſe without they firſt verified the foreſaid Ordinance. The third Parliament is at Grenoble, and comprehends Dauphiné, call'd at firſt by the Name of the Delphinal Council, but Charles VIIth. made it a Parliament in 1453. The fourth is at Bourdeaux, inſtituted by Lewis XIth. and takes in Perigord, Limoſin, Bourdelais, Landes, Saintogne, Baſadois, the higher Gaſcony, part of Biſcay and Medock. The fifth at Dijon, for Burgundy, was ſettled by Lewis XIth. in 1476, and rendred ſedentary by Charles, VIII. in 1492. The ſixth the Sovereign Court of Normandy, at Roan, erected under the Name of Exchequer, by Philip the Fair, in 1302, was made perpetual by Lewis XIIth. in 1499; and Francis the Firſt gave it the Name of Parliament in 1515. The ſeventh is the Parliament of Provence, ſeated at Aix, which was eſtabliſhed by King Lewis XIIth. in 1501. The eighth that of Bretany, erected in 1551, at Rennes, by Henry IId. and has ſince been transferred to Vannes, in 1675, to be convened every half Year. The ninth is the Parliament of Pau, that takes in the Biſhopricks of Leſcar and Oleron, and was erected by Henry IId. King of Navarr, and Prince of Bearn, in 1519; and re-eſtabliſhed by Lewis XIIIth. in 1621. This ſame Prince inſtituted alſo, in 1633, the Parliament of Metz, for the Countries of Meſſin and for Metz, Toul and Verdun. The Parliament of Franche-Comte. at Dole, erected by the preſent King, is now at Beſancon. Under the Name of Parliaments perhaps may be placed the Sovereign Councils held for deciding of Cauſes without any further Appeal; as that of Perpignan, where the Officers wear a red Robe Arras, chief for Civil Affairs, Tournay and Pignerol. The Council of Alſatia held at Enſiſheim was transferred to Briſac on the twenty third of September, 675. Thoſe of the Reformed Religion have had in ſome Parliaments Edict-Chambers, as they call them, which are now all ſuppreſs'd. Thoſe of Paris and Roan, in 1669 The Bipartite-Chamber of Caſtres, in 1679. Divers Authors have treated particularly of the Parliaments, as Fauchet in his Origines des Dignitez, & Magiſtrats de France. PARMA, a City of Italy, the Capital of a Dutchy of the ſame Name, a Biſhop's See formerly under Ravenna, and now under Bolonia, where there is alſo an Univerſity founded by Rainucus Farneſe, in 1599. It's the ordinary Reſidence of the Duke and his Court, ſtands upon the River of Parma, that divides it into three Parts, which have Communication by three Bridges The Duke's Palace, his Gardens, the Cittadel, Cathedral and Fortifications, are worth the Obſervation of Travellers. This City is very ancient, and after the Fall of the Roman Empire had divers Lords. The Emperor Frederick Barbaroſſa beſieged it two Years, but in vain. But after many Revolutions, the Church being in peaceable poſſeſſion of this State, Pope Paul IIId. called before Alexander Farneſe, made Peter Louis Farneſe, his Son, Duke of it. He was diſturbed in his Poſſeſſion by the Emperor Charles Vth. But it was eſtabliſhed in this Family by the Marriage of Octavio with Margaret of Auſtria, natural Daughter to the ſame Emperor. The City of Parma is three miles in Circumference. Its Cathedral has an excellent Dome painted by Le Corregio, who was of Parma as well as Parmigiano. The adjacent Country is very fertil, and the Cheeſe made there is in eſteem throughout all Europe. In this Place is an Academy of excellent Wits called Innominati. They chuſe rather to be wiſe indeed, than to be reputed ſo, and have contributed much to the Reputation of the City. The Duke's Territories lie between the Milaneſe, Modena, and the Republick of Genoa, and comprehends, beſides the Dutchy of Parma, that of Plaiſance, l'Etat de Buſſeto, and that of Val di Taro; beſides which, he formerly poſſeſs'd the Dutchy of Caſtro and Ronciglione. The principal Cities are Parma, Plaiſance, Borgo di val di Taro, Buſſeto, Borgo, S. Donino Fiorenzuola. Parma ſtands 26 miles S.E. of Cremona, 34 S.W. of Mantua, 72 S.E. of Milan, 86 N.W. of Florence, and 220 of Rome; Lon. 30. 40. Lat. 44. 24. Leand. Alberti.

PARMENIAN, a Schiſmatical Biſhop of Africa, choſen by the Donatiſts after the Death of Donatus their Chief, to govern the Church of Carthage, in 368. The Catholicks finding the Church outrag'd and miſrepreſented by Parmenian's Writings, challeng'd him to a publick Diſpute which Parmenian refus'd, upon pretence that the Catholicks were too impure and unſanctify'd for the Converſation of him and his Party: His Errors were afterwards confuted by Optatus, and S. Auguſtin. Optat. lib. 1. Baron. A. C. 368.

PARMENIDES, of Elis, a Philoſopher, the Son of Pyres, and Diſciple of Zenophon, others ſay, of Anaximander. Euſebius ſays, he liv'd in the 86 Olympiad, about the 316 or 318 Year of Rome. He was the firſt that ſaid, the Earth was round, and the Center of the World, and that there were two Elements, Fire and Earth; adding, that the firſt Generation of Men came from the Sun, and that that Star was cold and hot, which are the two Principles of all Things; that the Soul and Spirit are the ſame thing; and that there are two ſorts of Philoſophy, the one grounded upon Truth, and the other conſiſting in Opinion His Philoſophy is in Verſe. Plato hath writ a Dialogue entitu'ed Parmenides, or the Idea's. Diogenes Laertius, lib. 9. vitæ Phil. Theophraſtus. Plutarch. Clemens Alexandrinus, &c.

PARMENIO, General of Alexander the Great's Army, who upon divers Occaſions gave him Teſtimonies of the eſteem he had for him, as Parmenio had given proof of his Courage. That Prince cauſed him and his Son Philotas to be put to Death, as having being accuſed, together with Dimnus and Nicomachus for conſpiring againſt his Perſon. He was adviſed withal, by Alexandra, upon the offers made him by Darius King of Perſia, to give up unto him all the Country on this ſide the River Euphrates, and his Daughter Statyra to Wife with Ten thouſand Talents of Gold to buy a peace of him; and the Propoſal ſeem'd ſo advantageous to Parmenio, that he expreſs'd himſelf thus; Were I Alexander I would except of theſe Offers; to which that Prince reply'd, And I alſo were I Parmenio, meaning, that the Proffer, tho' big enough for one of Parmenio's ſize, was too little to tempt ſo great a Prince as Alexander. Plutarch.

PARNASSUS, called by the Barbarians Liacura, according to Sophian, a Mountain of Phocis, having two tops conſecrated to the Muſes and their ordinary abode, often mention'd in the Writings of the Poets. There was alſo a Town of this Name in Aſia Minor, in the Province of Cappadocia, a Biſhop's See.

PARNAW, Lat. Parnavia, a City of Livonia and Province of Eſtonia, ſubject to the Swedes. It ſtands at the Mouth of a River of the ſame Name upon the Bay of Riga, 55 miles from Revel to the S. and Riga to the N. It's of ſmall compaſs but well fortified. It has a ſtrong Caſtle and a convenient Haven, and it was formerly a hanſe Town; it belong'd at firſt to the Poles, but in the laſt Century often taken and retaken, but the Swedes having ſeiz'd it in 1617, poſſeſs it ever ſince, together with the Territory belonging to it. It is Lon. 46.00. Lat 57. 20. Baudr.

PARNUS, a certain Man, who having loſt his Boat, quarrelled with every one he met about it. Hence came the Proverb Diſceptare ob Parni Scaphulam. Dioginianus apud Eraſmum.

PAROPAMISSUS, PAROPANISUS, an ancient Country of Perſia; the Moderns think it lies partly in the Province of Candabar belonging to the King of Perſia, and partly in the Cabul of the Mogul, between Aria, Bactriana, India, and Arachoſia. Ptolemy ſays, That the ancient Inhabitants of this Country, whom he calls by divers Names, were very Savage; and Curtius adds, They had no manner of Commerce with other Nations, that the Country is cold and barren, and the People dwell in Huts made of Brick. Alexander's Army ſuffered much in this place. It was the Name of a Mountain alſo, that ſtands to the North of this ſame Country, and which ſome, who have writ Alexander's Life, have called by miſtake Caucaſus; whereas Caucaſus lies between the Caſpian and Euxine Seas, to the North of Iberia, a Country Alexander never ſaw; but the Name of Caucaſus being much more famous than that of Paropaniſus the Greeks deſign'd to honour him, by ſaying, He had march'd as far as Caucaſus, to which Prometheus was faſten'd.

PAROS now PAXIO, an Iſland in the Egæan Sea, and one of the Cyclades, called by various Names, as Demetrias, Zacintha, Hiria, Hilieſſa, Cabarnis and Minoea, as Pliny and Stephanus of Byzantium inform us, hath always been famous for its white Marble It's alſo noted for its fair Water, and want of Mice. The Venetians were Maſters of it, but the Turks took it from them, together with Negropont, about 1470. It was formerly a Biſhoprick under Rhodes. Pliny. Strabo. Stephanus. Ferrari in Lex. Geog. &c.

PARRE (Catharine) Daughter of Sir Thomas Parre, of Kendal in Weſtmorland, and Siſter to the Lord William Parre, Marqueſs of Northampton: She was firſt married to John Nevil, Lord Latimer, and after his deceaſe, to Henry the VIIIth. who liv'd with her three or four Years, after whoſe Death, ſhe was married the third time to Thomas Seymour, Lord Admiral of England, and died in 1548. She was, when Queen of England, complain'd off to the King as enclining to ſome New Opinions, and having Heretical Books in her Cloſet; upon which Information, the King was prevail'd on ſo far as to ſign a Warrant to commit her to the Tower, but the Warrant which was deliver'd to Wriotheſley, Lord Chancellor, being dropt by him, by chance, and carried to the Queen, ſhe immediately made the King a Viſit, who diſcourſing her upon ſome Points of Religion, and finding by the Modeſty and Submiſſion of her Anſwers, that ſhe was wrongfully accus'd, reſolv'd not to proceeed in the Proſecution, and was reconcil'd to her. Baker's Chron.

PARRE (Thomas) born in Shropſhire, in 1483, and brought up to London by the Earl of Arundel, upon the account of his Age, being then almoſt One hundred and ſixty Years old; neither was his Conſtitution ſo much worn, but that in all probability, he might have held out ſome Years longer, had not the change of Air and Diet haſten'd his End, which happen'd in the Year 1635. Baker's Chron.

PARRET, a River in Somerſetſhire which runs from South to North into the Severn Sea, watering by the way Croket-horn, South-Petherton, Longport, and Bridgwater.

PARRHASIUS, a Native of Epheſus, and Citizen of Athens, was the Son and Diſciple of Evenor, and the Contemporary of Zeuxes, whom he overcame, in the famous Conteſt between 'em, by deceiving him with a Curtain which he had painted ſo excellently well, that his Antagoniſt miſtook it for the Nature it ſelf. He was the firſt that obſerv'd the Rules of Symmetry in his Works, and was much admir'd for the Livelineſs of his Expreſſion, but above all, for the Elegancy and Softneſs of his Out Lines, and for Rounding off his Figures, ſo as to make 'em appear with the greater Strength and Relievo. He was wonderfully fruitful of Invention, had a particular Talent in Small Pieces, and finiſh'd all his Works to the laſt Degree of Perfection; but withal, was ſo extravagantly Vain and Arrogant, that he commonly writ himſelf Parrhaſius the Beaux, wore Purple, with a Golden Crown upon his Head, pretended to derive his Pedegree from Apollo, and ſtil'd himſelf The Prince of his Profeſſion: But to his great Mortification, he was at laſt humbl'd by Timanthes of Sicyon, who, in a publick Diſpute between 'em, was voted the better Painter. Sueton. Quintilian. Diodor. Sic. Pliny, lib. 35. cap. 10.

PARRHASIUS (Janus) a Grammarian born at Coſenza, lived about the end of the XVth Century, and was in eſteem for his Knowledge; he taught a long time at Milan; thoſe of the ſame imploy with him, caused him to be expell'd by ridiculous Calumnies caſt upon him, becauſe his Learning was a continual reproach to their Ignorance. Parrhaſius extreamly troubled with the Gout retir'd to Coſenza, and died there. His Wife was the Daughter of Demetrius Chalcondylus. Divers Works are attributed to him, tho' he publiſhed none but Commentaries upon Claudian, and Ovid's Poem in Ibin. Paulus Jovius in Elog. Doctor. Cap. 127. Pierius. Valerianus. Simler, &c.

PARSHORE, a Market-Town and Thorough-Fair in Worceſterſhire, on the River Avon, over which it has a Bridge. It is the Capital of its Hundred, and was formerly beautified with an Abbey. It ſtands 78 miles from London.

PARSIS, a ſort of Pagans in the Kingdom of Cambay or Guzurate, a Province of the Empire of the Great Mogul in the Main-land of India, deſcended from the Perſians, who retir'd thither to avoid the Perſecutions of the Mahometans in the VIIth. Age. For Abubeker having attempted to eſtabliſh Mahometaniſm in Perſia, the King, who found himſelf too weak to oppoſe him, embark'd with eighteen thouſand Men at the Iſle of Ormus, and landed in Indoſtan on the Terra Firma of India. The King of Cambay, who was alſo a Pagan, receiv'd him, and gave him leave to dwell in his Country, whither that Liberty drew divers other Perſians, who have there retain'd their own way of Living, and ancient Religion. They believe that there is but one God, who hath created and preſerves the World, but that he hath ſeven Deputies, who take account of all that paſſes in the Univerſe, and execute his Orders there for the good of Man, and the preſervation of all Things. Under theſe ſeven Deputies they place beſides ſix and twenty others, who are inferior to them both in Dignity and Office, and they invoke them all, and adore them almoſt as Gods. They have no Moſques or Temples for the Exerciſe of their Religion, but ſet aſide for this purpoſe ſome Chamber in their Houſe. Their Days of Worſhip are the firſt and the twentieth of the Moon. Their Doctors or Prieſts are not diſtinguiſh'd from the reſt of the Parſis but by a Woollen Girdle, or one made of Camels Hair. They take particular care of Fire, as a Symbol of the Deity, wherefore they never put out a Candle or Lamp, and ſuffer their Fire never quite to extinguiſh: And if a Houſe be in danger of being burnt, they do not throw Water thereon, but endeavour to ſtifle the Fire with Earth. Their Law forbids them to eat of any living Creature, and herein they imitate the Banians; but theſe Prohibitions are not ſo ſevere, but that in caſe of neceſſity, or of War, they kill Sheep, Goats, Deer, Poultry, and Fiſh, and eat thereof; but they ſtrictly abſtain from Beef and Hares-Fleſh, neither do they ever kill Elephants, Camels, or Horſes. Mandeſlo Tom. 2. d'Olearius.

PARTHAON, the Son of Jaſon Faræus, who had a very rich Brother called Merion, a great Miſer. Jaſon having a Son born him invited all the Princes of Theſſaly to the Feaſt, of which he appointed his Brother Merion to be Maſter; who being intent on his Buſineſs, Jaſon, under pretence of Hunting robb'd his Houſe of twenty Talents of Silver to defray the Charge of the Supper; which Merion hearing of, he called his Nephew Parthaon, ἀπὸ τȣ̃ πέρθειν τὴν οἰκίαν, importing the Plunder of his Houſe. Polyænus.

PARTHENAY, a City of Poictou in France upon the River Tove, in the middle between Tours to the N. and S. Maxences to the S. ſix Leagues from each. Baudr.

PARTHENIUS, of Nice, a Poet who lived in the beginning of Auguſtus's Reign, writ a Diſcourſe which we ſtill have, entitled, Ἐρωτικῶν παθημάτων, or de Amatoriis Ærumnis, and dedicated it to Cornelius Gallus, Governour of Egypt. He writ alſo the Praiſes of Aretas, his Wife, and ſeveral other Pieces. It's ſaid he was made a Slave in the time of the Mithridatick War, that Cinna made him free, and that he died in the time of Tiberius. If we believe all that Sudias ſays upon this Matter, we muſt ſuppoſe Parthenius was taken when very young, for there was above ſeventy Years between this War and the Reign of Tiberius; however it be, it's ſaid Virgil was his Scholar, and that he imitated him in a Poem attributed to him, called *Moretum. PARTHENOPE, the Name of one of the Syrens, who failing to charm Ulyſſes and his Companions with their ſinging, threw themſelves into the Sea out of deſpair. The Poets ſay, That ſome went on one ſide, and others on the other, and that Parthenope landed in Italy, where afterwards the Inhabitants finding her Tomb, built a City there, and called it according to her Name, Parthenope; but they ruined it afterwards, for that they had forſaken Cumæ to ſettle there; but being advertis'd by the Oracle, that in order to be freed from the Peſtilence that troubled them, they muſt reſtore the City of Parthenope, they cauſed it to be re-built, and called it Neapolis, becauſe of that new Reſtauration; now called Naples. Ruſcelli Nell. Indice de gli Huomi illuſt.

PARTHIA, the Country of the Parthians, a Province of Perſia, that formerly gave name to a great Empire. It lies in Aſia between Media, Hyrcania, Aria, Carmania, and the Province of Pharſi; and is now called Arak, or Erak and Terak, and Arak Atzen, when diſtinguiſhed from Arak Arabi the Country of Bagdat: Others ſay, That the Parthia that now is, comprehends the Province of Khæmus, and part of that called Choraſan. The parts of this Country were Comiſena, Parthiena, Coræna, Paratanticena and Tabiena. Ptolemy reckoned in his time five and twenty Cities in Parthia, the Capital whereof was Hecatompolis which ſome take to be Iſpahan. It was a deſart and barren Country; and Strabo ſays, The Macedonians ſlighted it, and made no ſtay there, for that they could find nothing wherewith to ſupport their Army: However, it grew at length ſo powerful, that the Parthians diſputed for the Empire of the Eaſt with the Romans. Arſaces was the Founder of it, and his Succeſſors took the Name of Arſacides until the time of Artaban, who was kill'd by Artaxerxes the Perſian. This Empire laſted four hundred Years, having been eſtabliſhed about 250 before Chriſt, and ended about the 227 or 28 Year of our Redemption. The Parthians were very cruel and debauched both as to Wine and Women, but otherwiſe good Warriours, and indefatigable in Labour. They were particularly noted for their Dexterity in ſhooting behind 'em as they fled. They had ſuch a ſuperſtitious Veneration for their Kings, that they kiſs'd his Feet, and never approached him but in an humble manner, touching the very Ground with their Mouths: Zenophon. Juſtin. lib. 41. Herodian lib. 6. Agathias lib. 1. Strabo lib. 13 Pliny. Appian.

PARTICULÆ, certain pieces of Bread which the Greeks offer in celebrating their Liturgy in commemoration of the Saints alive and deceaſed, for, beſides the Conſecrated Bread, which is offered in remembrance of our Saviour's Sufferings, they offer other Pieces of Bread in Honour of ſeveral Saints. Gabriel de Philadelphia. Traite des Particules.

LES PARTOIS, Lat. Pagus Pertenſis, a Tract of Champagne in France, having the Dutchy of Bar to the E. It's principal Town is Vitry le Francois.

PARTULA, a Goddeſs which the Romans believ'd had the care of Big-bellyed-women ready to lie-inn; for they had another Goddeſs called Natio, that was to look after New-born Children. Partula was not the ſame as Lucina, as it ſeems S. Auguſtin believed, when he ſpeaks of it in his Book de Civitate Dei, where he calls it Partunda. Partula, according to Tertullian, govern'd and look'd after the Women during the term of their being with Child. Lucina brought the Child into the World. But the Superſtition of the Romans went yet further, for they made alſo a Goddeſs to nouriſh the Infant, called Alemona, another to preſerve him from all Accidents during the ninth Month he ſhould be in the Womb, named Nona; and finally one to take care of him till the time of his Birth, if-ſo-be his Mother ſhould go with him till the tenth Month, and called by them Decima.

PARUTA (Paul) a Venetian, deſcended from a Family that has been eminent for good Services to their Country. He attain'd to great Knowledge in the Sciences, and his Parts procured him early employs in the Republick. He was ſent to ſettle the Frontiers of the State of Venice with the Archduke, which he ſucceſsfully accompliſh'd, was afterwards made Governour of Breſcia, Knight and Procurator of S. Mark, and Embaſſador at Rome to Pope Clement the VIIIth. He had other Commiſſions, which he diſcharged ſo well, and with ſo much Prudence as to be called the Cato of Venice. He died in 1568, aged 58. His great Imploys hinder'd him not from improving the Inclination he had for Learning, ſo that he compoſed divers excellent Works; as, The Hiſtory of Venice; Diſcorſi politici;

Perfezione della vertue politica, &c. Lorenzo Craſſo, Elog. d'Huom Letter. Ghilini, Theat. d' Huom Letter. Le Mire, de Script. Sæc. 16. &c.

PARYSATIS, Siſter of Xerxes, and Wife to Darius Ochus, King of Perſia, who began his Reign in the 330th, Year of Rome, was of a very cruel Nature. She cauſed Statira, Wife to her Son Artaxerxes, whom ſhe loved not, to be poiſoned, effecting it thus: She poiſoned one ſide of a Knife, with which ſhe divided a ſmall Bird, and giving the poiſoned part to her Daughter-in-law, who ſeeing her eat the other half, eat it without any ſuſpicion. The King angry at this, order'd her Woman Ginge to be try'd, who being abſolv'd by the Judges, he order'd her death himſelf, which created a continual Quarrel between him and his Mother, who made away all thoſe that complied not with her Humour, as Crenias de Gnide, a Phyſician that lived in Perſia at that time, witneſſeth. She depoſed in the Year of Rome 358, Tiſſaphernes Governour of Aſia, whom Tithrauſtes his Succeſſor afterwards kill'd. This Name has been common to ſome Princeſſes of Perſia. Plutarch in Darium. Juſtin, &c.

PAS, a Country and Seigniory in Artois that gives Name to one of the moſt Ancient and Illuſtrious Families in the Kingdom, which is that of the Marqueſs de Feuquiers, that is now a principal Barony of the Country of Saint Paul, ſituated upon the River Authia. Its Bailiwick was united to the Crown of France by the 37 and 41 Articles of the Pyrenæan Treaty, and is of great extent: And this Barony hath to the number of twelve Peers, among whom there are Viſcounts. There was formerly in this City a Caſtle which time has ruin'd; and we are inform'd by the Chronicle of Baldrick Biſhop of Noyons, that in 1032 there was a Collegiate Church alſo there, the Prebendaries of which had for a long time been the rewards of the Soldiery, which obliged Alviſius Biſhop of Arras, to unite them to the Revenue of the Monks of the Priory of Pas, in the year 1138.

PAS (Manaſſe de) Marquis de Feuquiers, was born at Saumur the firſt of June 1590: He was a valiant Man and ſignalized himſelf at divers Battles and Sieges; but yet a greater Politician. It was he that contributed much to the uniting of the Swedes and divers Princes and States of the Empire with Lewis XIII. and carried on that famous Negotiation with Walleſtein Duke of Freidland, Generaliſſimo of the Emperor's Forces, which would have had greater Conſequences, had it not been for the Death of Walleſtein. He died at Thionville the 14th. of March 1640.

PASCHAL (Charles) born at Caune in Piemont, in 1547. He was Councellour of State, and Attorney-General to the Parliament of Roan, and afterwards Embaſſador to Henry IIId. and Henry IVth. He was a Perſon of Character and Reputation, and left ſeveral Tracts by which we may Gueſs at the Strength and Politeneſs of his Parts, viz. The Life of Guy du Faur, Lord of Pibrac. Legatus. Cenſura Animi ingrati. Corona, &c. Ignatius de Jeſus Maria, Carm. de Chauſſe, Hiſtoire Eccleſiaſtique d' Abbeville.

PASCHAL (Peter) a Monk of the Order of Mercy, and afterwards Biſhop of Jaen, was a Perſon of Conſideration in Spain, in the XIIIth. Century. He read Philoſophy and Divinity to the young Monks for thirty Years together, and was afterwards made Præceptor to the Prince Don Sancho. He founded ſeveral Monaſteries of his own Order, and was afterwards taken Priſoner by the Moors of Granada, in the Year 1297, during his Captivity, he made it his Buſineſs to inſtruct the Chriſtian Slaves who were Priſoners with him, for whoſe uſe he compoſed ſeveral little Tracts, and at laſt ranſom'd 'em with the Revenue of his Biſhoprick, which was remitted to him for his own ſupport. In the Year 1300 he writ an excellent Book againſt Mahometaniſm, and by the perſuaſiveneſs of his Sermons and Exhortations, converted a great many of the Infidels; but ſome of the unconverted Moors, being enrag'd at the Succeſs of this Holy Man, put him to a cruel Death, after he had been four Years their Priſoner. Martyrolog. Roman. 23. Octob. Martin. de Ximina de los Obiſp. de Jaen. Bernard. de Vergas Chron. Mercinar.

PASCHAL (Valentine) of Udina, in Friuli, liv'd in the Pontificate of Paul Vth. and was Secretary to Cardinal Montalto. He wrote De Rebus Moſchicis. De Italiæ Fluminibus, &c. Janus Nicius Erythræus Pinac. 1. Imag. Illuſt. cap. 142, 143.

PASCHAL (Blaiſe) born at Clermont in Auvergne, was Son to a conſiderable Perſon, who was Preſident in the Court of Aides in Auvergne, afterwards Councellor of State and for the ſpace of nine or ten years executed the Office of Intendant of Juſtice at Roan. He was known to all the Learned of his time becauſe of his great knowledge in all ſorts of Sciences, particularly in the Mathematicks. It was he that inſtructed and educated his Son who never had any other Maſter, both in the Languages and the other Sciences; and the tutorage of ſuch a Father had ſo good a ſucceſs upon the Son, that he always appear'd in his Youth in every thing to exceed his Years, and paſſed in an Age full of learned and able perſons, for one of the greateſt Wits, profoundeſt Mathematicians, and moſt perfect Models of true Eloquence. One may ſee in the Prefaces of ſome Editions of his Works that take notice of him, how he learnt, or rather invented, if I may ſo ſay, in ſome ſort, Geometry at eleven years of age; at ſixteen he compoſed a Mathematical Piece of excellent worth; about nineteen he invented his Machine of Arithmetick that is admir'd by all the Learned. He afterwards fell to the making of thoſe famous Experiments about a Vacuum, which has convinc'd the Learned, That a great number of the effects of Nature ought to be attributed to the Gravitation of the Air, which were formerly aſcribed to the abhorrence of a Vacuum. And laſt of all, by a Vertue altogether extraordinary, he renounced at the age of thirty two, the advantages which his excellent Qualities might have procured him in the World, for to ſpend the remainder of his life, as indeed he did, in an exemplary Retirement. The Works he has left behind him are in eſteem throughout the World, as being accompliſh'd Pieces, and make Poſterity to regret the want of that Work he deſign'd againſt Athieſts, of which there are but ſome few fragments that have been publiſhed in a Collection of his Thoughts. He died at Paris Aug. 19. 1662, aged 39 Years and 2 Months, after a tedious ſickneſs, wherein he ſhew'd a moſt Chriſtian Patience. His Body was buried in the Church of S. Etienne du Mont. See the Preface of a Book entituled, De Equilibre des liqueurs & des Penſees. It will not be amiſs to obſerve his firſt Progreſs in Mathematicks, which conſidering his Age and Performance, was altogether extraordinary; for being but Twelve Years old, he deſir'd to be inſtructed in this Science by his Father, who conceiving it might prove prejudicial to his Learning the Languages, refus'd to gratifie his Curioſity; however, M. Paſchal importuned his Father ſo long, till he got a general Definition of Geometry, namely, That it teaches the Proportion that Lines and Circles have to each other: Upon this Notion of the Matter, young Paſchal went to work, at his Play-hours, and made himſelf firſt Definitions and Axioms; and then proceeding to Demonſtration, ſtruck out the firſt two and thirty Propoſitions of Euclid, and being ſurpriz'd at it by his Father, he demonſtrated his laſt Propoſition, and upon further Queſtions, went backward in his Demonſtrations, till he had run 'em up to his firſt Principles of Definitions and Axioms. M. Paſchal wrote the Provincial Letters againſt the looſe Caſuiſtry of the Jeſuits. He was likewiſe very remarkable for his Loyalty, and us'd to ſay, That no pretences of Grievance were ſufficient to warrant Reſiſtance, for tho' in ſuch a State as Venice, it would be a great Crime to ſet up a Monarchy, and extinguiſh thoſe Liberties which God had given that People; yet in a Conſtitution where Royal Power is actually eſtabliſh'd, there for the People to fail in their Regards to the Government, is a ſort of Sacrilege; becauſe in ſuch a Caſe the Government is not only a Reſemblance, but, in ſome meaſure, a Participation of the Power of God, which cannot be oppos'd by the Subject without a plain Reſiſtance of the Divine Providence and Oeconomy. Madame Perier vie de Paſchal. Bayle, Diction. Hiſt.

PASCHAL I. of that Name Pope, a Roman, choſen after Stephen IV. January 27. 817. He ſent his Letters into the Eaſt againſt the Iconoclaſts, but that deſign failing, he Excommunicated the Emperor Leo V. with his Iconomachi or oppoſers of Images, and receiv'd the exil'd Greeks at Rome, who had been baniſh'd for worſhipping of Images. In 821 he crown'd Lotharius the Emperor on Eaſter-day. He was accuſed for having abetted an Aſſaſſination committed in his time, but he cleared himſelf by Oath before the Embaſſadors of Lewis the Debonnaire, and died May 12. 824, having held the See ſeven Years, three Months and ſixteen Days. Anaſt. in Vit. Pont.

PASCHAL II. a Tuſcan, called before Rainier, was choſen after Urban II. Aug. 12. 1099. He excommunicated the Antipope Guibert, and reduc'd to their Duty ſeveral little Princes who abuſed the Romans and troubled the Repoſe of Italy. In 1102 he celebrated a Council at Rome, and another at Guaſtalla upon the Po in Lombardy, for the Reformation of Manners; and paſſing thence into France, held another Council at Troyes in Campagne. This Pope had a great deal of Difficulty to maintain his pretended right of Inveſtitures to Benefices, againſt Henry King of England, and Henry IV. the Emperor; but he came to an Accommodation with the firſt, and the other dying, his Son Henry V. who had been expell'd from the Throne at the ſollicitation of Urban II. deſirous to be crown'd by the Hands of the Pope, according to the uſual manner, Paſchal in 1111. refuſed to put the Crown upon his Head, if he would not renounce his Right to the Inveſtitures. That young Prince diſdaining ſuch a Propoſal, cauſed the Pope, Clergy, and principal Perſons of the City to be taken up, and impriſon'd them for two Months in a Caſtle in the Country of the Sabines, until the Pope conſented to do what he deſired, and crowned him. It's ſaid, that Paſchal giving to Henry part of the Hoſt he had conſecrated at Maſs, ſpoke theſe words, May it pleaſe your Majeſty, In Confirmation of a ſolid Peace, and our mutual Union, I give you the Body of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt, born of the Virgin Mary, and that died upon the Croſs for us, as the Catholick Church believes it.) In the mean time the Cardinals condemn'd this Conceſſion of the Pope, who revoked it in a Council. He died January 22d. in 1118, after he had been Pope eighteen Years, five Months, and ſome Days. Hoffman ſays, That having taken one part of the Hoſt, and given the Emperor the other, he expreſs'd himſelf thus, Sicut pars hæc vivifici corporis diviſa eſt, ita diviſus ſit à regno Chriſti domini noſtri qui pactum hoc violare tentaverit; i. e. May he be excluded the Kingdom of Heaven that goes about to violate this Agreement: Sigon. lib. 10. But the Emperor had ſcarcely enter'd Germany when the Pope ſtirr'd up the Saxons againſt him. by whom being overcome, he was forc'd to reſign his Right of Inveſtiture. Platina ſays, That Guibert the Antipape being dead, Richard, Count of Capua, ſet up Albert in his ſtead, who was quickly forc'd to abandon his Pretenſions and retire; after which they choſe one Frederick, whom they alſo turn'd out in 150 Days; and after him one Maginulfus, a Roman, uſurp'd the Title at Ravenna. but was expell'd in a little time. Paſchal cenſur'd the Biſhop of Florence for ſaying, That Antichriſt was then born. Platina. Baronius. Henry Caniſius, &c.

PASCHAL, Archdeacon of the Roman Church, made himſelf Antipope at the Election of Pope Sergius I but he died a little after in 687. He muſt not be confounded with Paſchal, another Antipope againſt Alexander III. It was Guy of Crema, whom Adrian IV. made Cardinal in 1155, and ſent him into Germany, to allay the Anger of the Emperor Frederick Barbaroſſa; but he join'd himſelf to Octavian, who had been created Pope, and taken the Name of Victor. Guy ſucceeded him under the Name of Paſchal in 1164, and died ſix Years after. Baronius A. C. 1164 and 1170. Ciaconius, in Vit. Pont.

PASCHASE (Ratbert) Abbot of Corbie, liv'd in the IXth. Age, in the time of Lewis the Debonnaire, and Charles the Bald. He writ a great many Books. We have them collected into one Volume in Folio, by the care of Sirmondus, who publiſh'd them firſt at Paris, in 1618, comprehending twelve Books, being Commentaries upon S. Matthew; three of Expoſitions upon the Pſalms, five upon the Lamentations of Jeremy, one upon the Body and Blood of Chriſt in the Euchariſt; an Epiſtle upon the ſame Subject, and the Life of S. Adelard, Rufinus, and Valerius. He died April 26. 851. Proteſtants maintain, that he firſt introduced the Belief of the Real Preſence of the Body of Chriſt in the Euchariſt. Trithemius ſays, That Paſchaſe lived in 880, in the Reign of Charles the Fat. The Curious may ſee this Author's Life which the Learned F. James Sirmond has cauſed to be printed in the beginning of his Works. Dacherius has ſince publiſh'd a Treatiſe of Paſchaſius de Partu Virginis. And Mabillon has publiſh'd another call'd Vita Sti Walæ Comitis & Abbatis Corbienſis. Bellarmin. Voſſius. Le Mire. Spicil. Tom. 12. Mabillon Tom. 1. S. Ord. Bened.

PASCHASINUS, was Biſhop of Lilybæum in Sicily, and liv'd in the Vth. Century. He aſſiſted at the Council of Chalcedon, in Quality of Legate to Pope Leo, in the Year 451. And 'tis ſaid, he wrote the Acts of that Council, by a Letter which he wrote to Pope Leo, in the Year 454. It appears that the Vandals under Genſerius, over-run Sicily, and that Paſchaſinus was made a Slave in that general Misfortune. Iſidor. cap. 11. de Vir. Illuſt. Ado in Chron. Baronius in Annal. &c.

PASES, a famous Magician of old who by his Enchantments could repreſent great Feaſts with Waiters belonging to them, and make the ſame diſappear when he pleaſed. It's ſaid That he had what the French call A flying Piſtolle, that is, a piece of Money he had made, which when he had pay'd it away, always return'd into his Purſe again; whence the Proverb, Paſetis obolus, when one ſees ſome ſurprizing thing. Eraſmus in Adagiis. Suidas.

PASIPHAE, the Daughter of Apollo, married Minos King of Creet, and had by a Bull the Minotaur that was ſlain by Theſeus.

PASLEY, a Market Town of Clidſdale in Scotland, which gives the Title of Baron to the Family of Hamilton. It had anciently a famous Monaſtery, founded by Alexander II. High Steward of Scotland, the Monks whereof wrote a Chronicle of the Kingdom, called, Liber Paſletenſis, or the black Book of Paſley. The Church of this Town was inferior to few for ſtatelineſs of Building and Furniture. Cam. Brit.

PASQUALIGE (Zachary) a Theatin Monk of Verona, liv'd in the Popedoms of Urban VIIIth. and Innocent Xth. and wrote Variarum Quæſtionum Moralium Canonicarum Cent. 2. Deciſiones Morales. Praxis Jejunij Eccleſiaſtici, &c.

PASQUIER (Stephen) the King's Advocate in the Chamber of Accounts at Paris, was one of the moſt knowing Men of his time, and a great lover of Learning, about the end of the ſixteenth Age, and the beginning of the ſeventeenth; born at Paris in the Reign of Francis I. in 1528. He departed this Life in the ſame City, Aug. 31. 1615, and was buried in the Church of S. Severin. Stephen Paſquier had acquired an exact Knowledge in all ancient Hiſtory, and particularly that of France. We have his Enquiries in one Volume in Folio, his Epiſtles, &c. Sainte Martha in Elog. Gal. lib. 5. La Croix du Maine. Thuan.

PASQUIN, a Marble Statue that ſtands in a corner of the Palace of the Urſins at Rome, in the Ward called Rione di Barione. The Romans affirm, That Paſquin was a Cobler that lodg'd in that part of the City, about two hundred Years agoe, whoſe Stall was uſually full of idle Perſons that took pleaſure to hear the bitter Railleries he made againſt all ſorts of Perſons; that after his death, a Statue of a certain Gladiator, which was found under Ground near unto his Stall, was call'd according to his Name, and that they faſten to it in the Night-time Libels and Satyrs againſt thoſe they durſt not otherwiſe beſpatter. Upon it are engraven theſe words;

Paſquinus eram, nunc lapis;
Forſan Apis quia pungo.
Dii tibi culeum, ſi ſpernis aculeum.
Etiam mellibus ungo; veritas dat favos.
Et felle purgo; ſi ſapis,
Audi lapidem
Magis lepidum quam lividum.
Fruere ſalibus, inſulſe,
Ut bene ſapias.
Calcibus calceos olim aptavi,
Nunc rectos pedibus greſſus inculco.
Abi in lapidicinam, ſi ſpernis lapidicinium.
Sandrat. Sculpturæ veteris admiranda.

LE PASSAGE, a very ſafe Haven of Biſcay in Spain, lying in the middle betwixt S. Sebaſtian to the W. and Fontarabia to the E. Baudr.

PASSALORYNCHITES or PATTALORYNCHITIANS, Hereticks, the Followers of Montanus; they made profeſſion of never ſpeaking, and, for that purpoſe, always held their Finger upon their Mouth, grounding it upon theſe words of the 140 Pſalm, Pone, domine, cuſtodiam ori meo, & oſtium circumſtantiæ labiis meis. They begun in the IId. Age; and S. Jerom teſtifies, that even in his time he found ſome of them in Galatia, as he travelled to Ancyra. Philaſtre de Hær. c. 77. S. Aug. c. 63. Baronius in Annal.

PASSARVAN, a Town of the Indies, in the Eaſtern parts of the Iſle of Java, about the Cape of Balambuam, with an Harbour, ſtanding between Panarucan and Jortan, two other Cities in the ſame Country.

PASSAW, a City of Germany in the Lower Bavaria, a Biſhop's See under Saltsburg, called in Latin Patavia or Patava Caſtra, ſtands upon the Danube, where the Rivers Inne and Ille, which meet there, divide it into three parts, which are Paſſaw, Inſtad, and Ilſtad. The Biſhop who is Temporal Lord of this City, has a very fine Palace here, and a ſtrong Caſtle at Inſtad that ſtands between two Hills. The Cathedral Church of S. Stephen is remarkable for its Architecture, and ſome Biſhops Tombs to be ſeen there; that of Nôtredame of the Capuchins, famous for its pretended Miracles. The Jeſuits have here alſo a College and a curious Church; the others of note are thoſe of S. Michael, The Holy Croſs, S. Paul, &c. The City is large, and all the Houſes almoſt built of Wood, and ſuffered much by Fire in 1661. There are Pearls found in the River of Ille, and that Fiſhery is reſerv'd for the Emperor and Duke of Bavaria. It's an Imperial and Free City, but under the Protection of its own Biſhop, who has about forty thouſand Crowns Revenue from that Country. The ſtrong holds are Obernberg, where there is a good Caſtle, and a Paſs upon the River Inne, where they pay Toll; and Ebersburg, a Caſtle and Town upon the River Traun in Higher Auſtria. This City is famous for the Treaty of Paſſaw, held in the Month of Aug. 1552, between the Emperor Charles V. and Maurice Duke of Saxony, for the Eſtabliſhment of the Lutheran Religion in Germany. The principal Articles that concerned Religion, engaged the Emperor to ſet at liberty the Elector John Frederick, and the Landtgrave of Heſſe, and to aſſemble a Dyet in ſix Months, to find an expedient to reunite the Germans divided upon account of Religion by a General Council, a National one, or by an Aſſembly of the Body of the Empire: That this Aſſembly ſhould conſiſt of an equal number of prudent Perſons of the Roman Catholick and Lutheran Profeſſion, in order to find out a proper Method to ſettle the Affairs of Religion in the Empire; and that in the mean time, neither the Emperor, nor any other, ſhould under any pretence whatſoever, force any Perſon in matters of Religion; that the Princes and States of the Confeſſion of Augſburg ſhould not maletreat the Eccleſiaſticks or Seculars of the Romiſh Faith, nor moleſt them in the Enjoyment of their Poſſeſſions; and that the other alſo ſhould grant entire Liberty to thoſe of the Lutheran Perſuaſion in Religious Matters and Enjoyment of their Civil Rights; that Juſtice ſhould be adminiſtred in the Imperial Chamber of Spire without any regard to the Religion of either Party; that a like number of Lutheran Judges ſhould be ſettled there, as ſeven Years before; and that in the Oaths to be taken, it ſhould be free to ſwear in the Name of God and the Saints, or in the Name of God and upon the Goſpel; and that if the Affairs of both Religions were not accommodated in the ſpace of ſix Months after, the Roman Catholicks and Proteſtants ſhould however obſerve the Treaty and not fall out upon the ſcore of Religion Paſſaw ſtands 68 miles E. of Ratisbonne, 85 of Munchen, 134 W. of Vienna; Lon. 33. 48. Lat. 48. 28. Varillas Hiſt. des Revolutions en Matiere de Religion.

PASSERAT (John) a Native of Troyes in Campaign, and King's Profeſſor of Rhetorick at Paris, was accounted one of the moſt learned Criticks of his time. We are oblig'd to him for having enlarged Calepine's Dictionary. He died of the Palſie in 1602, aged 73

PASTON (Sir Robert) of Paſton in the County of Norfolk, was for his great Service in the late Troubles, and Activeneſs for the King's Reſtauration, by Letters patent bearing date at Weſtminſter 25 Car. II. advanced to the Degree of a Baron of this Realm, by the Title of Lord Paſton of Paſton in the ſame County of Norfolk; as alſo to the Dignity of a Viſcount, by the title of Viſcount Yarmouth, and to the Heirs Male of his Body. He married Rebecca, the ſecond Daughter to Sir Jaſper Clayton Knight, Citizen of London, by whom he hath had Iſſue, ſix Sons and four Daughters. His eldeſt Son William hath taken to Wife the Lady Carlotte Fitz-Roy, one of the natural Daughters of King Ch. II. Dugdale.

PASTOPHORI, certain Egyptian Prieſts, more venerable than the reſt, were ſo called, for that they wore the Mantle of the Goddeſs Venus, which was called Παςὸς by the Grecians. This word ſignifies alſo the Bed whereon was wont to be placed the Statue of ſome Deity. Hence Paſtophorium is ſometimes uſed for the Bed whereon lay the Ruler of the Temple, according to S. Jerom upon Iſaiah; and ſometimes for the Sacerdotal Mantle, and now and then alſo for the Refectory where the Prieſts uſed to meet together, as may be read in Eſdras, and the Book of Macchabees.

PASTORAL, a Poem, wherein Shepherds, Swains, Hunters, Fiſhers, Gard'ners, Labourers, Satyrs, Nymphs; and in ſhort, all ſorts of Country Perſons, were repreſented, and where nothing was to be heard but the Complaints of Lovers, the Cruelty of Shepherds, Diſputes who ſung beſt, the Ambuſhes of Satyrs, Raviſhing of Nymphs, and other little diverting Adventures, whereof we have Examples in the Idyllia's of Theocritus, and the Eclogues of Virgil. Several of the Moderns have imitated them in Latin, and in the Reign of Henry II. the French have made Paſtorals of this kind, ſome whereof may be ſeen in Ronſard. The Paſtoral Comedy now is a Dramatick Poem, like other Comedies, conſiſting of five Acts, containing ſeveral Intrigues, and agreeable Events of a Country Life.

PATA, a City and Kingdom of Africa, upon the Coaſts of Zanguebar. The laſt Accounts we have of Portugal, ſay, That the King of Pata in the Mozambick hath been re-ſettled in his Dominions by Don Pedro de Almeida, the King of Portugal's Vice-Roy of the Indies.

PATAGONS, a People of Magellanica, in South America, near the Sea of Braſil, whoſe Country was firſt diſcovered by Magellan, but as there is no Town in it, it's little known to us. The Inhabitants are eſteemed Gyants.

PATALENA, a Goddeſs of the ancient Gentiles mention'd by S. Auguſtin in his Fourth Book De Civitate Dei, Chap. 8. which took care of the Corn in the time of its coming forth of the Blade. It's deriv'd from Patere to open. Varro. Arnobius.

PATANA, a Country near unto Malacca, in the Peninſula of Indus, beyond the Gulf of Bengale, tributary to the King of Siam. The Town of Patana that gives it Name, ſtands upon the Sea-ſhore. The King's Palace, and that part of it where the Grandees of the Court live, is fortified with Palliſadoes. Its Air is very good, though they have a great deal of Heat there. Their Summer begins in February, and laſts till the end of October; and during the Months of November, December, and January, it rains continually, with the Wind at North-Eaſt. They have one ſort of Fruit or other every Month, and their Hens lay Eggs twice a Day; great plenty of Cattle and Fowl, and a vaſt number of Tigers, Monkeys, and Elephants in the Woods. The Inabitants are of the Mahometan Religion, and eat neither Pork nor Wild-Boar. They are ſtately and conceited in their Gate, but their Converſation is civil enough. The Chineſes and Siameſe, who have ſettled there, are very intelligent, and underſtand Sea-Affairs, but the Malacceſe apply themſelves only to Husbandry and Fiſhing. Mandeſlo, Tom. 2.

PATANS, a People of Indoſtan, or the Empire of the great Mogul in India, who retired into the Mountains about the Ganges, and are govern'd by Raja's. They formerly enlarg'd their Boundaries about Bengala, render'd themſelves powerful at Dehli, and brought ſeveral Raja's to be their Tributaries; but the Moguls, a People of Great Tartary, poſſeſſing themſelves of the Indies about 1401, they expell'd theſe Patans, who fled to the Mountains, and fortified themſelves there. They mortally hate the Moguls, and deſpiſe the Indians, and all the Idolaters, making profeſſion of Mahometaniſm, and always value themſelves upon the Power they had at Dehli before the Invaſion of the Moguls. Bernier, Hiſtoire de Grand Mogul.

PATARA, or PATAREA, now in Scamandro, a City of Lycia, a Biſhop's See, ſuffragan of Mira, was famous for the Oracle of Apollo, that gave Anſwers there for ſix Months in the Year. It is 80 Miles E. from Rhodes, and noted for the Birth of S. Nicholas, who was Biſhop of this Place. Ovid. l. 1. Metam.

PATAY, Lat. Patavium, a Town of Beauce in France; five Leagues N. of Orleans. Near this place, the French, under the Conduct of John Duke of Alenzon, obtain'd a great Victory over the Engliſh, commanded by Talbot, the Terror of the French Nation.

PATHMOS. See PALMOSA.

PATIN (Guy) a Doctor of Phyſick in the College of Paris, was in Eſteem for his Knowledge and Parts in 1640. He gain'd Reputation by his Reading, and writ with much Politeneſs. Several Authors ſpeak of him to his Praiſe. He was the Father of Robert Patin, a learned Phyſician, that died in 1671; and of Charles Patin, Doctor of Phyſick alſo, and Profeſſor at Padua, ſeveral of whoſe Works we have, as Theſaurus Numiſmatum, in Quarto; Numiſmata Imperatorum Romanorum, in Folio. Familiæ Romanæ, in Folio. Introduction to Hiſtory by the knowledge of Medals; A Tratiſe of Combuſtible Turf; Hiſtorical Relations, &c.

PATOUREAUX, a company of Vagabouds, which a certain Hungarian call'd Jacob, a White-Friar, got together in Germany, in 1250, under a pretence of making a Croiſade for the delivering of S. Lovis from his Captivity. Vid. JACOB.

PATRAS, or PATRÆ, a City of the Dutchy of Clarence in the Morea, near to the Mouth of the Gulf of Lepanto, and Cape Rio, called by the Turks Badra and Balabatra, ſituated about ſeven hundred Paces from the Gulf of Patras, where is the Port of Panorma. It's Cittadel ſtands upon the top of a Mountain. The Emperor Auguſtus gave its Inhabitants the Privileges of Citizens of Rome, becauſe it was a Place of retreat for his Ships. The Pagans worſhipped Diana there, the Goddeſs of the Woods, and ſacrificed yearly, a young Man and a Maid to her. Here was beſides very famous Temples dedicated to Minerva, Cybele, Atys, Jupiter Olympius, and other falſe Deities. Thither they came alſo to conſult the Oracles of Mercury and Veſta, which ſtood in the great Market-Place. The Ceremony was to perfume their Statues, and hang Lamps round about them. They afterwards dedicated, at the Altar, a Medal made of the Copper of that Country, and then ask'd Mercury's Statue what they had a mind to know, holding their Ear to it, and going out of the Place, ſtopping their Ears with their Hands, and look'd upon the firſt Voice which they heard after the removing of the Hands, as the Anſwer of the Oracle. The Apoſtle S. Andrew preached the Goſpel and ſuffered Martyrdom there. Patras is a City well peopled, eſpecially with Jews, who by their Commerce make it a Place of good Trade; and 'tis the only Place in theſe Parts, that the Greeks of the Neighbouring Iſlands, the French and Engliſh are wont to traffick unto. Its Air is not very healthy, becauſe of the adjacent Mountains and Waters that ſurrounded it. It was a Dutchy in the time of the Deſpotes of the Morea, and one of thoſe Princes finding himſelf unable to keep it, ſold it in 1408 to the Venetians, from whom the Turks took it in 1463. The famous Andrew Doria laid Siege to Patras in 1533, and made himſelf Maſter of it without much Reſiſtance, for that its Fortifications were out of order. A little while after he ſecur'd this Conqueſt, by reducing the Fort, which was forced to ſurrender, though formerly it held out a whole Year againſt the Emperor Conſtantine Palæologus, about 1450. The next Year after the Turks return'd with a numerous Army, and expell'd the Venetians, who took it again in 1687, thus: The Venetian Army parted from Chino, July 20. 1687, and next Day approach'd the Neighbourhood of Patras, on the 24th. was a Battle fought between them and the Turks, where the laſt were defeated, having almoſt two thouſand kill'd upon the Place, the reſt ſaving themſelves by flight. The Garriſon of Patras having ſeen this Rout, forſook the Town, carrying all the Artillery and Ammunition they had away with them. The Baſhaw Mahomet, who had ſix thouſand Men near the Caſtle of Romelia fled alſo, together with that Garriſon which is one of the Dardanelles of Lepanto. Guiſulderem Mahomet, who was encamp'd near the Caſtle of the Morea, did the ſame; and what is yet ſtranger, the City of Lepanto, which is very ſtrong, ſurrender'd immediately without Reſiſtance. The Greeks have a Cathedral Church at Patras, which is one of the four Metropolitans of the Morea, the other three being thoſe of Napoli di Romania, Carinthia and Miſitra. It's ſaid the Metropolitan of Patras has near a Thouſand Churches within the Bounds of his Archbiſhoprick. The Jews, who make up a third part of the City, have conſtituted a Court of the Elders amongſt them, to determine their Differences, and have four Synagogues. The number of all the Inhabitants in general, amounts to four or five thouſand; there are four Turkiſh Moſques. Within half a League of the City are the Gardens of Patras, in a Place called Glycada, that is to ſay, Sweetneſs, for that they are full of Citrons, Oranges and Pomgranates of admirable Sweetneſs. Four or five of the Citrons are ſold for a Penny, though they be twice as big as one's Fiſt, having a ſweet Pulp, and eat like an Apple, but the juicy part in the middle is ſowre. The Oranges are alſo very large, as thoſe of Portugal, whoſe Pulp is bitter, but Juice very ſweet. In theſe Gardens, beſides a great many curious Cedars, is the famous Cypreſs Tree ſo much admir'd, which is perhaps the oldeſt and biggeſt in the World; its Stock being eighteen Foot round, and its Branches ſtretching forth twenty Foot in Length, being of that ſort of Cypreſs which ſpread themſelves abroad. Spon Voyage d'Italy, &c. in 1675, P Coronelli Deſcription de la Morea.

PATRIARCH, from the Greek Πατριάρχης, that is, the firſt chief Father. Thus they call'd at firſt all the Heads of their Generations, mentioned in the Old Teſtament, from Adam to Jacob, which Name has ſince been given to the Biſhops of the Churches of Alexandria, Antioch, Jeruſalem, Conſtantinople and Rome alſo. The five principal Churches at Rome are there called Patriarchal, which are thoſe of S. John de Lateran, S. Peter of the Vatican, S. Paul, without the City, S. Mary Major, S. Etienne, and S. Laurence.

PATRIARCHATE. or Patriarchſhip. a Patriarch's See, before that Jeruſalem and Conſtantinople were erected into Patriarchal Sees. The 3 ancient Patriarchal Churches ſaid to be eſtabliſhed by S. Peter in the 3 parts of the World, at Rome, Alexandria, and Antioch, had every one the Limits of their Dioceſſes, and a certain extent of Provinces, wherein the Pope, in Quality of a Patriarch, and the two other Patriarchs, exerciſed their Juriſdiction, without having any thing to do within the Territories of each other. The Patriarch of Antioch had the Eaſt, that is, all Aſia, as far as the Indies. That of Alexandria had Egypt, Pentapolis, Libya Marmarica and all Æthiopia, under him. The Patriarchſhip of Rome took in all the Provinces of the Weſt, that is, all Europe, and all the Weſtern Provinces of Africa, from the Streight of Gibraltar as far as Tripoli. Beſides theſe there were three great Dioceſſes. to wit, that of Pontus; Aſia Minor, and Thrace. that were governed by their Synods; the Heads of which, who were called Exarchs, and Patriarchs alſo ſometimes, were, him of Cæſarea in Cappadocia, for the Pontick Dioceſs. which contained eleven Metropolitan Churches in the Provinces of Pontus, Bithynia, Galatia and Cappadocia. That of Epheſus, for the Aſiatick Dioceſs, conſiſted of almoſt all the reſt of the Provinces in Aſia Minor, comprehending alſo the Iſlands. And that of Perinthus or Heraclea, for the Dioceſs of Thrace, which had 6 Metropolitans But theſe Exarchs were ſubject to the Patriarchs, that is thoſe of Pontus and Aſia, to the Patriarch of the Eaſt or of Antioch; and that of Thrace, to the Patriarch of the Weſt, or Rome. When the two new Patriarchs of Jeruſalem and Conſtantinople were created, they were forced to diſmember ſome of the Provinces from the other Patriarchates. To the Patriarch of Jeruſalem was aſſigned the three Palæſtines, and ſome other Churches taken from the Patriarchs of Antioch and Alexandria. To him of Conſtantinople were granted the Pontick, Aſiatick and Thracian Dioceſſes, with the barbarous Provinces, to wit, thoſe that were out of the Bounds of the Empire, as Ruſſia and Muſcovia. But this ſame, for whoſe Grandeur the Emperors concerned themſelves, extended its Juriſdiction a great way beyond its bounds both in Aſia and Europe; for it took in Theſſaly, Macedonia, Greece, Epirus. Illyrium, and all that appertained to the Eaſtern Empire. Pope Adrian I. who ſent his Legates to the Second Council of Nice, held in 787 failed not to demand of the Greeks the Provinces which the Emperor Leo Iſauricus had diſmembred from the Patriarchate of Rome, and given to that of Conſtantinople. But there was no reſtitution made him. Maimbourg, Hiſtoire du Schiſme des Greecs. Spanheim ſays that Eccleſiaſtical Patriarchs had their Original in the Fifth Century and not from the Inſtitution of S. Peter nor S. Mark, ſuppoſititious Decrees of Popes. nor the ſixth Canon of the Council of Nice, to which Launoy, a Learned Roman Catholick doth aſſent. Socrates indeed aſcribes their Original to the eleventh Canon of the Second Oecumenical Council, under Theodoſius the Firſt, but that it was then uſed only for the Exarch of a whole Dioceſs. But Patriarch, according to the modern acceptation, begun in the Fifth and was more noted in the Sixth Age; but yet ſignifying no more (as he affirms) than Archbiſhop, until by Degrees the Name became reſtricted in the Eaſtern Church to the Five Patriarchal Thrones of Rome, Conſtantinople, Alexandria, Antioch and Jeruſalem, taking occaſion from the 28th Canon of the Council of Chalcedon, the Power of Patriarchs encreaſed in this Sixth Age by the favour of Juſtinian and other Emperors; hence came the ſubordinate Dignities of Syncelli, Protoſyncelli. Chancellors, &c. as may be ſeen in the Catalogue of Eccleſiaſtical Dignities of Conſtantinople. And in the ſame Age happened that famous Diſpute betwixt the Patriarchs of Rome and Conſtantinople about the Primacy, each of them pretending to it, becauſe of the Dignities of their Cities, old and new Rome. There being till that time an Equality of Juriſdiction among the Patriarchs. Whereupon both of them did aſſume the Title of univerſal Patriarch. And he of Canſtantinople was called ſo by the Emperors as appears by Juſtinian's Code, and alſo by Councils and the Clergy. But this Title was oppoſed by Pelagius II. and Gregory I. of Rome, as proud, new, blaſphemous, profane, deviliſh, fooliſh, frivolous, anti-chriſtian, &c. lib. 4. &c. 6 But their Succeſſors by the diſtance of the Emperors who then lived at Conſtantinople, and the diſtracted Condition of their Affairs, did not only encroach upon the Patriarch of Conſtantionple, but the Emperors themſelves at laſt.

PATRICIANS, the Name of thoſe deſcended from the firſt Senators made by Romulus, or Tarquin the Old, fifth King of Rome. The firſt were called the Grand Patricians, and the ſecond the Little Patricians. They were ſo intituled. for that they could name a Senator among their Anceſtors. Hence Patrem ciere: For the firſt Senators were called Patres by Romulus. The firſt Kings of France having found in their Country ſeveral great Perſons who bore this Quality of Patricians, retained it to honour thoſe withall whom they raiſed to the higheſt imployments in the Kingdom. And as it was out of this Order that the Governors of Provinces were choſen; hence the Name of Patrician is very often uſed by the Authors of thoſe times to ſignifie a Governour. Maimbourg Hiſtoire de Pontificate de Saint Gregorie le Grand. Roſin Antiq. Rom.

PATRICIUS, (Peter) a Native of Theſſalonica in Greece, a famous Advocate of Conſtantinople, flouriſhed in the Reign of the Emperor Juſtinian. Who being ſatisfied as to his Eloquence and ſingular Wiſdom, ſent him in 534. Embaſſador to Amalazuntha, the Queen of the Goths, who after the death of her Son Atalaricus, deſigned to reſign the Kingdom of Italy into the hands of that Emperor. and prevent Theodatus's coming to the Throne. Patricius, underſtanding the death of that Princeſs, as ſoon as he arrived in Italy, declared War againſt the Tyrant and all the Gothiſh Nation; after he had honourably acquitted himſelf in this Embaſſage, and divers others, the Emperor advanced him to the Dignity of Maſter of his Palace. He was again ſent on an Embaſſy in 550, to Choſroes, King of Perſia, in order to a Peace; and this great Man did not only diſcover an extraordinary Talent in the managment of thoſe weighty imployments, but alſo in his Hiſtory of Embaſſies, divided by him into two parts. The firſt whereof begins with the Embaſſy of the Parthians, to the Emperor Tiberius, to deſire a King of him, and concludes with the Embaſſy ſent by the Barbarians to Julian the Apoſtate, created Emperor in 361. The ſecond Part begins with the Embaſſy ſent by the Emperor Valerian to Sapor, King of Perſia, for a Peace, in 258, and ends with that ſent by Diocleſian and Galerus to Narſes, King of Perſia, to treat about a Peace, in 297. Theſe Fragments of the Hiſtories of Patricius have been tranſlated out of Greek into Latin by Chanteclair, with Notes, to which Henry Valeſius added his own, in 1648. *Hankius de Roman. S. PATRICK, Apoſtle of Ireland, and ſecond Biſhop of that Country, after Palladius, lived in the fifth Century. At 16 years of Age he was made Slave, and remained ſo for ſix years Then he became the Diſciple of S. Martin of Tours, who ordain'd him Prieſt, and ſent him into Ireland, where he laboured ſucceſsfully for ſixty years in the converſion of the Inhabitants. The Roman Martyrology makes mention of him the 17th. of March, and Bede wrote his Life in two Books. There are ſome Works attributed to him, but it's hard to determine any thing upon this Subject. The Fables related concerning his Purgatory, are not worth confuting. Baronius, An Ch. 431. Balæus de Script. Brit.

PATRIMONY of S. Peter, a Province of Italy belonging to the See of Rome, called there la Provincia del Patrimonie, ſituated between the Tyber, Marta and the Tuſcan Sea, the Capital whereof is Viterbo; the other Cities are Nepi, Sutri, Toſcanella, Civita Vecchia, Corneto, Bagnarea, Bracciano, Bolſena, and Monte Fiaſcone. This Province was given to the Church by Mathildis, Princeſs of Hetruria, in 1115.

1115. The Emperor Henry IVth. however raiſed Forces to recover it out of the Pope's hands, and had at firſt good Succeſs; but the Emperors, being then declining, the Popes at laſt carried it.

PATRITIUS, or Patrigio, (Francis) Biſhop of Gaietta in Calabria, lived about the beginning of the Sixteenth Age. He was a Native of Siena, and very conſiderable for his Learning. We have divers Works of his, as De Regno & Regis Inſtitutione, l. 9. De Inſtitutione Reipublicæ, lib. 9. &c. Theſe two Pieces were printed at Paris, in 1519. and 1531. in folio. and have been ſince abridged, and printed at Paris in 1549. Le Mire de Script. ſæc. 16. Ughel, &c.

PATRITIUS, vulgarly, Patrizio, (Francis) an Excellent Philoſopher who lived about the end of the Sixteenth Age, and was one of the moſt learned Men of his time. He taught Philoſophy at Rome and Padua with much reputation; but not going in to the Peripatetick Philoſophy, cauſed a difference between him and a Phyſician called Theodorus Angelucio and James Mazzoni. Of his Writing we have, Diſcuſſionum Peripateticorum Tom. 4. Philoſophia Paralleli militari. Nova Rhetorica. Nova Geometria. Della Poetica. Decade Hiſtoriale. He publiſhed alſo the Works of Mercurius Triſmegiſtus, that were printed in the year 1591, at Ferrara, by the Title of *Oracula Zoroaſtris, Hermetis, Triſmegiſti & aliorum ex ſcriptis Platonicorum collecta Græcè & Latinè, præfixa Diſſertatione Hiſtorica. PATROCLUS, Son of Menetius and Stelène, was bred with Achilles under Chiron, and kill'd by Hector at the Siege of Troy. See Achilles and Hector.

PATRU (Oliver) a Councellor in Parliament, and Dean of the French Academy, born at Paris in 1604, who having in his youth taken a Journey to Rome, met M. d'Urfe at Turin, who came to publiſh the Aſtrea, and ſpoke to him of the Curioſity of that Work in ſo intelligent a manner, that that Lord who had the reputation of being the moſt polite and ſubtil French Author, engaged him to come to his Houſe at Foreſt, in his way home, that he might have ſome longer Converſe with him upon that Subject. But this young Traveller came to underſtand that M. d'Urfe was dead as he paſſed by Lyons. Being returned to Paris, he frequented the Bar and carefully improved the Excellent Faculty he had both of Speaking and Writing well. The Reputation he acquired made him quickly worthy to be admitted into the French Academy, where he was received in 1640. At his Reception he made an Oration of thanks, which ſo highly pleaſed the Academicks, that they ordered for the future, that all who were to be taken in, ſhould make a Speech, to teſtifie their thankful acknowledgement to the Society, which is ſtill put in practice. As M. Patru was the only Man in the Kingdom beſt acquainted with the French Language, M. de Vaugelas borrowed much of his Aſſiſtance, for the compoſing of his excellent Book of Remarks upon that Tongue. And that Illuſtrious Author confeſſes in ſeveral places that he learn'd divers things of him, wherewith he has enriched his Work. All thoſe who have ſince writ beſt in French conſulted M. Patru as their Oracle. And his Pleadings, whereof there are ſeveral Editions, have ſerved as a Model to write correctly by in the French Tongue. In ſhort, He was Judicious in all; and there was nothing more reaſonable, than the Obſervations made by him upon ſuch Works both in Proſe and Verſe, as were ſubmitted to his Cenſure. And the other qualities of his Soul came nothing ſhort of thoſe of his Parts. He had a Vertue proof againſt the Corruptions of the World. And never was a more faithful and officious Friend. The Misfortunes he met with, according to the Fate of the greateſt part of Learned Men of extraordinary Merit, never diſturbed him. He was viſited in his laſt Sickneſs by a great Miniſter of State, who brought Commendations to him from the King, and after his death was lamented by all good Men in the Kingdom. He departed this Life at Paris, the 16th. of Jan. 1681, aged 77. Le P. Bouhours, Eloge de M. Patru.

PATTI, a Town of Sicily, a Biſhops See, Suffragan of Meſſina. It's called in Latin Pacta and Pacte. Count Roger, having ſubdued the Saracens, built this City near the Ruins of Tindaro, and Pope Boniface XIIIth. raiſed it to a Biſhoprick. Pyrrhus Roccus. Sic Sanct. Ferrari in Lex. Geogr.

PAU, upon the River Gave de Pau, a City of France, the Capital of Bearn, called in Latin Palum, is very large and well built. Henry d'Albret, King of Navarre, and Prince of Bearn, began a very fine and magnificent Palace, and eſtabliſhed a Parliament here in 1519, which was confirmed by Lewis XIIIth. King of France, and the Roman Catholick Religion introduced, which during the Civil Wars had been expelled by the Proteſtants; here is beſides a Chamber of Accounts, a College of Jeſuits, &c. De Marca Hiſt. de Bearn.

PAVENCE, a Pagan Goddeſs to which the Mothers and Nurſes recommended their Children to ſecure them from Fear, called by the Latins Pavor, from whence the word Pavence; but others ſay the quite contrary, viz. that ſhe was one which the Mothers and Nurſes invoked, and werewith they threatned their Children to make them afraid and be ſilent. S. Auguſtin. Lib. 4. de Civitate Dei.

PAVIA, Lat. Papia, Papia Flavia, Ticinum. A City of Italy, upon the River Teſino; the Capital of the Country called Paveſe, having an Univerſity and Biſhoprick immediately depending upon the See of Rome. It is ſituated upon the Brink of the River that ſupplies its Inhabitants with all Commodities and Neceſſaries deſirable. It's ſtrong both by Nature and Art, and a great Security, not only to that Country, but alſo to Lombardy. The Foundation of Pavia is ſo ancient, that the moſt Learned Hiſtorians ſay nothing but what is uncertain concerning it, yet there is ſome likelyhood that it was founded by the Gauls, a little after Milan; it was ſubjected by the Romans, and afterward ſacked in the Fifth Age by Attila, and ruined by Odoacer, who beſieged Oreſtes. Then the Lombards having made themſelves Maſters of it, after a long Seige under their King Albinus, made it the Capital of their Dominions. Charlemaign poſſeſs'd himſelf of it in 773, and took their King Deſiderius Priſoner, after which it became ſubject to the Kings of Italy, till the time of the Emperor Otho the Firſt, who took it in 951, and expelled Beranger and his Son. In 1004 it was almoſt all conſumed with Fire. And in 1059 its Inhabitants had a Cruel War with thoſe of Milan. It was ſince under divers Tyrants, until the Viſcounts of Milan united it to their Dominions. At the Seige of this Town, in 1525, was Francis I. of France, after he had taken Milan, made Priſoner. Odet de Lautrec won it for the French in 1527. And it was again taken and re-taken the next year: But at laſt it fell to the Spaniards, the French, being again defeated before it in 1625. Its Univerſity was founded by Charlemaign about 791. and re-eſtabliſhed by the Emperor Charles IVth. in 1361. It's the ſecond City in the Dutchy of Milan, and has one of the faireſt and largeſt ſtone Bridges in Italy, with many pieces of Antiquity, among which is the Caſtle, formerly the Palace of the Kings of Lombardy. S. Auſtin's Body is ſaid to be depoſited here in a Monaſtery of his own Order. In 1076 a Council was held here by the Emperor Henry IVs party who condemned Pope Gregory VIIth. he having excommunicated them before at Rome. Pliny, Tacitus, Ptolemy, &c. make mention of this City.

S. PAUL the Apoſtle, was born at Tharſus, the Metropolis of Cilicia, of Jewiſh Parents, of the Tribe of Benjamin, whence Tertullian and others will have that Prophecy of Jacob concerning his Son Benjamin, That he ſhall raven as a Wolf, in the morning he ſhall devour the Prey, and at night ſhall divide the Spoil, to be fulfilled in our Apoſtle, who perſecuted the Church in the firſt part of his Life, and fed it during the latter. Concerning his two Names of Saul and Paul, the firſt is ſuppoſed to relate to his Jewiſh Original, the latter to the Roman Corporation where he was born. Hence he was called Saul by the Jews, and Paul by the Gentiles. And ſome think that he took the Name of Paul upon his Converſion. He was brought up at Tharſus, which as Strabo informs us excell'd Alexandria, Athens, and Rome it ſelf, for polite Learning; and therefore was honoured by the Emperors with Immunities of Roman Citizens. He was at the ſame time brought up to the Trade of Tent-making, according to the Maxim of the Jews, that, He who teaches not his Son a Trade, learns him to be a Thief. Having laid the foundation of humane Learning at Tharſus, he was ſent by his Parents to Jeruſalem, to ſtudy the Law under Gamaliel fam'd for his Knowledge therein. And at the ſame time he became a Phariſee, which was the ſtricteſt Sect of the Jews, and the greateſt Haters of Chriſtianity. Whence Paul became engaged in a violent Perſecution. But as proſecuting that Deſign, was converted in his way to Damaſcus, as it is related at large, Acts 22. 9. After his Converſion, he left Damaſcus, whence it's ſaid he withdrew into Arabia, where he preached for three years. After which he returned thither, and convinced the Jews that Chriſt was the Meſſiah. Whereupon the Civil Powers being incenſed againſt him, he made his Eſcape over the Wall in a Basket. After which he came for Jeruſalem, and eſſay'd to join himſelf to the Church, who were ſhie of him becauſe of his former Perſecution, until Barnabas acquainted them with the manner of his Converſion. Here he preach'd and confuted the Helleniſt Jews, until a new Perſecution aroſe againſt him. So that leaving that place, he went for Cæſarea, and thence to Tharſus, from whence he went not long after to Antioch, where he aſſiſted Barnabas in preaching the Goſpel. About this time Judæa being afflicted with Famine, he was ſent by the Church of Antioch with Contributions to the Chriſtians there, and returning thither, he was by the Direction of the Holy Ghoſt ſent with Barnabas to preach elſewhere; whereupon they ſailed for Cyprus, and preach'd to the Jews at Salamis in that Iſland; hence they removed to Paphos, where they converted the Proconſul Sergius Paulus, and miraculouſly ſtruck Elymas, the Sorcerer blind who oppos'd it. After this he went to Perga in Pamphylia, whence he took Titus with him to Antioch, where he taught in the Jews Synagogue. But the Jews, being moved with Envy, raiſed a Perſecution, and expelled him. They went next to Iconium, where he had good Succeſs, but was alſo forced thence by the Jews, and came to Liſtra, where he cured one who had been a Cripple from his Mother's Womb, by bidding him riſe up and walk. Upon this the ignorant People would have offered Sacrifice to him and Barnabas, as Jupiter and Mercury. But the Jews having incenſed the Rabble, they ſtoned Paul, until they thought him dead, then dragged him out of the City. But reviving on a ſudden, he went to Derbe; and confirming the Chriſtians in thoſe places where he had formerly been, he returned to Antioch in Syria, whence he was ſent by that Church, to Conſult with the Apoſtles and Elders of Jeruſalem about Circumciſion and the Moſaick Ceremonies, and brought back the Decree againſt them, and after many other Travellings and Sufferings to be found in The Acts of the Apoſtles, he was at laſt ſent to Rome, having appealed to the Emperor from the Jews. He is ſaid to have converted Poppæa Sabina, Nero's Concubine, who was one of the moſt accompliſh'd Ladies in the World, according to Tacitus, if ſhe had been but chaſt. After two years Cuſtody at Rome, he was ſet at Liberty, and took a great Circuit, which ſome will have to be Greece and a part of Aſia, and others that he preached both in the Eaſt and Weſt. According to Clemens, his Fellow-labourer, he preached in the utmoſt bounds of the Weſt, and according to Theodoret he not only preach'd in Spain, but Britain, according to that of Sophronius, De Nat. Apoſt.

Tranſit & Oceanum, vel quæ facit inſula Portum,
Quiſque Britannus habet terras atque ultima Thule.

At his Return to Rome, in the eighth or ninth of Nero's Reign, he was as ſome ſay, together with Peter, caſt into Priſon. S. Chryſoſtom ſays, That Nero was chiefly enraged againſt him, for the Converſion of his Concubine, who thenceforth declined his Company. His Execution being reſolved on according to Baronius, he was bound to a Pillar yet extant in the Church of S. Mary, and ſcourged, and as led to Execution converted three of his Guard, who in a few Days after became Martyrs. Being come to the place, which was the Aquæ Salviæ, three miles from Rome, he was beheaded, and according to ancient Tradition, a Liquor more like Milk than Blood flowed from his Veins, which daſh'd upon his Executioner, and was the means of his Converſion and of many more. He ſuffered in the 68th. Year of his Age, and was buried in via Oſtienſi, about two miles from Rome, where Conſtantine the Great raiſed a ſtately Church over his Grave. The account which is given of his Perſon, Temper, and Writings, is as follows: He was of little Stature, and ſomewhat ſtooping, had a fair Complexion, grave Countenance, and pleaſant Look; but was of an infirm Conſtitution, and frequently troubled with the Head-ach, which many think to be the thorn in the fleſh mentioned in his Epiſtles. As to his Parts, he was of a clear and ſolid Judgment, quick Invention, and ready Memory; all which were improved by his liberal Education; and was of ſo great Repute, that S. Chryſoſtom mentions a Diſpute betwixt the Chriſtians and Heathens, wherein the firſt endeavoured to prove that Paul was more Learned than Plato, and in his Epiſtles his Knowledge of the Heathen Writers does often diſcover it ſelf ſo, that he ſeemed to be fitted by Providence to be the Apoſtle of the Gentiles. As for his Temper, he was ſo humble that none did exceed him, and ſo Temperate that he abridg'd himſelf of lawful Accommodations. He was admirable for his Charity, and inferior to none in Zeal. Nor were his Patience and Induſtry diſproportionable. As to the Obſcurity and Intricacy of his Style, S. Jerom's Cenſure, that he ſpoke right when he own'd himſelf rude in Speech, though not in Knowledge, ſeems very bold, to ſay no worſe. But that Father is univerſally noted for his Cenſoriouſneſs. That S. Peter ſays, There were in his Epiſtles δυσνόητά τινα, ſome things hard to be underſtood, is not altogether meant of the Profoundneſs of his Sence, nor Myſterìouſneſs of his Subject, but in ſome degree of his way of Expreſſion; frequent Hebraiſms, and often mentioning Jewiſh Opinions, together with thoſe frequent Hyperbata which he made uſe of through the fervour of his Spirit, and many of his native Cilician Phraſes which were foreign to the Greek. As for the Order of his Epiſtles, they are not plac'd according to the time wherein they were writ, but probably according to the Dignity of thoſe to whom they were ſent. Thoſe that would know the exact time of S. Paul's Voyages, and the Chronological Order of his Epiſtles, may conſult Biſhop Pearſon's Annales Pauliniana, printed at the Head of his Poſthumous Works at London in 1688. As for the Subſcriptions at the End of his Epiſtles, they are juſtly denied to be of any Authority, being wholly wanting in ſome ancient Copies, different in the Syriack and Arabick Verſions, and ſometimes diſagreeing with the Text. There was a Goſpel aſcribed to this Apoſtle, which S. Jerom thinks to be that of S. Luke, his conſtant Attendant. Beſides that, there is an Epiſtle to the Laodiceans, a Revelation, Book of Acts, and Epiſtles betwixt him and Seneca, fathered upon him. As to the firſt, Tertullian ſays, that it was that to the Epheſians, and Martian the Heretick changed the Title. However, ſuch an Epiſtle is ſtill exſtant, but S. Jerom tells us, was univerſally rejected. As for his Revelation, grounded on his Rapture into the third Heaven, it was forged by the Caineans, and approved by the Gnoſticks. Thoſe called the Acts are mentioned by Origen in Euſebius, but their Authority queſtioned. And his Epiſtles to Seneca are juſtly counted fabulous. Cave's Lives of the Apoſtles.

PAUL, Biſhop of Narbonne, is according to ancient Tradition Sergius Paulus, the Proconſul converted by Saint Paul in the Iſle of Cyprus, which is conteſted by ſeveral Learned Men of this Age; but their Objections, have receiv'd ſufficient Anſwers, and beſides moſt of the Martyrologies, and particularly the Roman, are poſitive for the Point. This Paul was of one of the beſt Families of Rome, and went through the moſt conſiderable Employments of the Commonwealth. Being ſent Proconſul into Cyprus, he had a deſire to hear S. Paul, who preached there at that time, but was diſſuaded by a Jewiſh Magician called Elymas, or Bar-Jeſu, who pretended to propheſie, yet was at laſt baptiz'd. It's ſaid the Apoſtle called himſelf Paul, from his Name; for it's obſerved he is always call'd Saul in the Acts of the Apoſtles till that very time. The ſame Tradition will have that Sergius Paulus came to viſit S. Paul when Priſoner at Rome in Nero's Reign, and that he accompanied him in his Journey to Gaul and Spain, and that he was ordained Biſhop of the Country of Narbonne by this Apoſtle. But ſome ſay his firſt See was at Beziers, which he left upon an Invitation from the Inhabitants of Narbonne, and left S. Aphrodiſius, Biſhop of Beziers. The Spaniards will have him their Apoſtle too, which is not altogether improbable, there being but little diſtance between their Country and Narbonne. However, thus far is certain, Sergius Paulus was the firſt Biſhop of Narbonne, where he ended his Days. The French Martyrology mentions him as the firſt Martyr of that Country. But it is not certain that he died a violent Death. Bollandus. S Marthe.

PAUL, the firſt Hermit, flying into the Deſarts to avoid the Perſecution of the Emperor Decius, took from thence an Occaſion to embrace a ſolitary Life in 253, and continued in his Retirement for the ſpace of fourſcore and ten Years, having begun it at twenty three, and dying at an hundred and thirteen. S. Anthony paid him a Viſit towards the End of his Life. S. Jerom, Sozomen, &c. There is a Religious Order commonly called the Hermits of Saint Paul, becauſe they acknowledged S. Paul, the firſt Hermit, for their Patron. This Order was firſt inſtituted in Hungary, by Euſebius of Gran, about 1215, and reformed by Paul, Biſhop of Veſprin, about 1363. There was alſo another Congregation of the Hermits of S. Paul eſtabliſhed in Spain and Italy, in 1553. Polydore lib. 7.

PAUL, the firſt Pope of that Name, ſucceeded Stephen IId. his Brother, in 857. He implored the help of King Pepin againſt the Greeks and Lombards, and died the 29th. of June, 867; having held the See ten Years and one Month. Anaſtaſius in his Liſe. Baronius in Annal. &c.

PAUL IId. a Venetian, before called Peter Barbo, Cardinal of S. Mark, and Nephew to Pope Eugenius IVth. was choſen after Pius IId. about the end of Aug. 1464. His Uncle beſtowed upon him the Arch-deaconry of Bolonia, the Biſhoprick of Cervia in Romagnia, the Office of Prothonotary Apoſtolick of thoſe called Participants, and made him Cardinal in 1440. Peter Barbo was deſigned for Buſineſs, and to that purpoſe he reſolved firſt to travel. But the News he had of his Uncle's Promotion to the Papal Chair, made him alter his Reſolution. Calixtus IId. ſent him Legate to Campagna di Roma. Some Authors ſay, He could weep very eaſily, and that he never failed ſhedding of Tears when he wanted powerful Reaſons to effect what he deſired, and that therefore it was that Pius IId. called him Our Lady of Pity. He was a handſome Perſon, and Magnificent, always eager to make a Figure; increaſing the Pomp of the Court of Rome, and beſtowing Scarlet Houſſings on the Cardinal's Mules. He died ſuddenly, July 25th. 1471, after he had eaten two Melons to dinner, aged fifty three years, ten months and three days, and held the See ſix years, ten months, and twenty ſix days. Ambroſius de Vignate. Orat. ad Paul. 5. Platina adds, That he was naturally fair ſpoken, and could feign good Nature when occaſion ſerved, but he was ſo mean ſpirited that when he could not obtain what he deſired, he would mix Tears with his Petitions. He complains particularly of him for turning out the Clerks of the Briefs, whereof himſelf was one, tho' it had been ordered by Letters Apoſtolick, and the Judges of the Pontifical Treaſure, that none who had bought his Place ſhould be put out of it. Whereupon the Clerks addreſſed him for Reſtitution. But finding him deaf to their Entreaties, they threatned an Appeal to all Chriſtian Kings and Princes, and to move them to call a Council, and force him to give a Reaſon for his Proceedings. Upon which Platina was impriſoned, fettered, and cruelly uſed for four months together, but was at laſt ſet at Liberty by the Intreaty of Cardinal Gonzague of Mantua. He diſpleaſed the People of Rome by giving Benefices to Foreigners which their Fore fathers had deſigned for Citizens. The Turks at that time invading Epirus, he ſent Nuncio's to adviſe all Chriſtian Kings and Princes to compoſe their Diſcords, and make War upon them, but without effect. He alſo ſtirred up the King of Hungary againſt the King of Bohemia, who had withdrawn himſelf from the Church of Rome. He ſubdued Count Averſa's Son, who denied Obedience to the Church, taking nine ſtrong and well fortified Caſtles in fourteen days time. Ferdinand, King of Naples, who lent him his Troops in this War, deſired to have the Tribute which he paid the Church remitted for the good Service they did. Alledging moreover, That his Uncle enjoyed the Kingdom of Sicily, tho' he paid for that and Naples too. Paul on the other hand recounted ſeveral good Services he received from the Church, and would not comply, which occaſioned Heats between them. He puniſhed ſome of the Inhabitants of Tagliacozzo, for holding, There was never any true Vicar of Chriſt ſince Peter, but ſuch as had imitated Chriſt's Poverty; then made a Promotion of ten Cardinals, and having brought the Princes of Italy to a Peace, he made noble Feaſts for the People after the ancient manner; propoſed eight Cloaks to be run for each day of the Carnaval by old Men, thoſe of middle Age, Jews and People of all ſorts, who pleaſed to take their Fortune; and appointed alſo Races for Horſes, Aſſes, Buffales, &c. to the great Satisfaction of the Spectators. But amidſt this Jollity Paul was ſeized with an unexpected Terror, upon News brought him, That there were two Conſpiracies againſt his Perſon, and immediately impriſoned all that he ſuſpected; and put ſeveral on the Rack, to diſcover the Sham-plots, and amongſt others, our Author, of whom he was very jealous; but ſent him his own Phyſician ſome days after, with a Promiſe of Liberty. And Platina asking the Phyſician in how long time it might be expected, had this Anſwer made him, That it could not be expected ſoon, leſt the Pope ſhould be charged with Levity and Cruelty, for having with ſuch Noiſe taken and tortured ſo many Men, and then letting them go immediately as innocent. And accordingly Paul began to accuſe them of Hereſie whom he had impriſoned and racked for the Conſpiracy. The great Crimes laid to their Charge were, That they inclined to Plato's Opinion concerning the Immortality of the Soul, and were great Admirers of Pagan Antiquities. But theſe Points being diſcuſſed, they were ſet at Liberty, after a Year's Impriſonment. This Pope is ſaid to have uſed Paint when he appeared in publick, and to have out-done all his Predeceſſors in the Coſtlineſs of his Pontifical Veſtments, eſpecially his Regno or Mitre which he enriched with Diamonds, Sapphires, Emeralds, Chryſoliths, Jaſpers, Pearls, and other precious Stones. He was at Charge of ſeveral magnificent Buildings near S. Mark's, and in the Vatican. But was no Encourager of humane Learning, branding thoſe for Hereticks that gave their Minds to it, and diſſuaded the People of Rome, from putting their Children to be brought up Scholars, telling them it was enough if they could read and write. He rais'd a great deal of Money by Tranſlating of Biſhops, and allow'd the purchaſing of Sallaries: With this Wealth he would ſometimes be very liberal, giving Exhibitions to the poorer Cardinals and Biſhops, and to Princes and Noblemen who were driven out of their Countries, and relieving poor Maids, Widows, and ſick People: He took care alſo, that Corn and all manner of Victuals ſhould be afforded cheaper at Rome than formerly.

PAUL III. a Roman, called before Alexander Farneſe, Dean of the Sacred College, and Biſhop of Oſtia, was choſen unanimouſly by 34 Cardinals preſent in the Conclave, after the Death of Clement VIIth. as a Reward of his Vertues and great Knowledge, whereof he had given Teſtimonies in the moſt illuſtrious Imploys of the Church. He was Son to Peter Lovis Farneſe and Janella Cajetan, made a Cardinal by Alexander VIth. in 1493, had the Adminiſtration of the Biſhoprick of Parma, and at ſeveral times the Option of thoſe of Freſcati, Paleſtrina, Sabina, Port, and Oſtia. He was Legate at Viterbo in the Marca Anconitana, and was very ſerviceable to the Holy See, and to Pope Clement VIIth. during his Impriſonment; for which Purpoſe he went Legate into Spain, to the Court of the Emperor Charles Vth. He was choſen Pope on the 13th. of October, in the year 1534, and crowned the 3d. of November, aged 67. He made a League with the Emperor and Venetians, againſt the Turks, which had no Succeſs, and it was ſaid to be through the Fault of Doria, Admiral of the Fleet. He was alſo ſo active that he got together in 1538 in order to a Peace, Francis Iſt. and the Emperor Charles the Vth. at Nice in Provence, where he was preſent himſelf and cauſed them to ſwear a Truce for ten Years. After which the Duke of Modena having refuſed his City where the Pope had ſummoned a Council to meet, he reſolved to celebrate the ſame at Vicenza, in the Territories of Venice; but the Proteſtants not finding this Place proper for them, it was aſſembled at Trent, where the firſt Seſſion begun on the 13th. of December, being the third Sunday of Advent, in 1545. This Pope eſtabliſhed the Inquiſition, and approved of the Inſtitution of the Jeſuits Order, with divers other Congregations, but was againſt the Interim made by the Emperor with the Proteſtants in Germany. He had a Son called Peter Lovis Farneſe, who was Duke of Parma, and left a Son called Octavio, who coming to know that the Pope deſigned to reſtore Parma to the Church from which it had been alienated, writ to Cardinal Alexander Farneſe, his Brother, that if the Dutchy was not confirmed to him, he would joyn with Ferdinand Gonzague, General of the Imperial Troops, who had already taken Plaiſance, for the Recovery of it. This Ingratitude ſo much afflicted the Pope, that he fell ſick of a Fever, and died at Mont Quirinale, the tenth of November, in the year 1549, aged 81 years, 8 months, and ten days. It's ſaid that at his Death he much abhorred the Ingratitude of his Kindred, and often repeated theſe words of the Prophet, Si mei non fuiſſent dominati, tunc immaculatus eſſem, & emundarer à delicto maximo. This Pope was Learned and Judicious, skilled in Aſtrology, writ very ingenious Verſes, ſeveral learned Epiſtles to Eraſmus, Cardinal Sadolet, and others, and Remarks upon ſome Epiſtles of Cicero, Bembo, & Sadolet. In Epiſt. Fr. Beaucaire. In Comment. rerum Gall. l. 23. & 25. Coccius in Theſauro, &c. Platina obſerves, that the Cardinals agreed the more eaſily in the choice of this Pope, that being 67 Years of Age, and of a weak and tender Conſtitution, they expected his Reign could not be long. Beſides, having always behaved himſelf with indifferency betwixt the Imperial and French Faction, neither made it their Buſineſs to oppoſe him. He was thought to have taken the Name of Paul, becauſe he was born in the Reign of Paul the Second. As he was bountiful in his Promotions, he was no leſs magnificent in his Structures, having in the firſt year laid the Foundations of that ſumptuous Building at Rome called the Palace of the Farneſi, which is not only one of the moſt noble and magnificent Edifices in that City, but in all Europe. The Maxim which this Pope obſerved of keeping himſelf in a diſcreet neutrality between the Emperor and French King, did marvellouſly contribute to his Eaſe and Proſperity; for by that means he was courted by both and lived without the Troubles and Expence of War, until he was neceſſitated thereunto by other Emergencies. But he did not carry himſelf with that Moderation towards King Henry VIIIth of England, againſt whom he iſſued out his Bull dated 30th. of Auguſt, 1535, whereby he cited him to appear perſonally before him and the College of Cardinals at Rome, to anſwer for all thoſe Sacrileges, Cruelties, Adulteries, and other Crimes whereof he ſtood accuſed. And in Caſe of refuſal, he declared him and his Subjects excommunicate, that he was actually deprived of his Crown and Kingdoms, and his Subjects abſolved from their Obedience; that all Actions of Religion were interdicted in his Dominions; and commanding all Eccleſiaſticks to depart his Kingdom, and the Nobility to riſe up in Arms againſt him. In 1540 he augmented and enlarged the Immunities and Privileges of the Chamber, and the Authority of the Referendaries, gave Liberty to Clergymen to diſpoſe of their Eſtates by Teſtament, without leave or interruption of the Apoſtolical Chamber; gave Liberty alſo to Jews which were converted to Chriſtianity to diſpoſe of their Eſtates according to their Will and Pleaſure. What ſhare he had in the Wars of Europe, and how he comported himſelf in the Tranſactions of the Council of Trent, and was affected with what paſſed at the Dyet in Germany, may be ſeen at large in the Hiſtory of that Council and thoſe Times.

PAUL IV. of Naples, Dean of the Cardinals, called before John Peter Caraffa, the Son of John Anthony, Son to the Count de Matalone, was choſen twenty two days after the Death of Marcel IId. May 25th on Aſcenſion-Day, in the Year 1555. He was then almoſt fourſcore years old, having been born in July, 1476. Was a great Scholar and good Linguiſt. Pope Julius IId. made him Biſhop of Civita di Chieti or Theata, and 'tis for this Reaſon that having afterwards together with Gaetan de Thienne founded a Congregation of regular Clerks, they gave them the Name of Theatins, which was that of his Church. Paul III. made him Cardinal in 1536, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Naples, but was kept out of Poſſeſſion by the Spaniards. It was in acknowledgement of the Favours of this Pope that he took the Name of Paul. He granted ſuch large Privileges to the Romans, that the People after having returned him their thanks, erected a Marble Statue for him in the Capitol. In the mean time he laboured as much as in him lay to reform Manners and Eccleſiaſtical Habits. He removed the Abuſe committed in Diſpatches through the Avarice of the Officers, condemned Impious Books and thoſe called Heretical, puniſhed Blaſphemers, forbid Stews, condemned Apoſtates, and expelled alſo his Nephews from Rome, for that they abuſed their Authorrity in acting againſt the Laws of Juſtice and Religion, which proved of fatal Conſequence to the Caraffa's. This Pope had formerly adviſed Paul III. to eſtabliſh the Inquiſition, and confirmed it again, by his Cares and Privileges obliged the Biſhops to reſide in their Dioceſſes, and the Monks to return to their Monaſteries; and in 1559 erected the Archbiſhoprick of Goa in the Indies, and thoſe of Cambray, Malines, and Utrecht in the Low Countries, with divers Biſhopricks under them; made an Allyance with Henry II. whom he ſollicited to undertake the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Naples, and laboured to re-eſtabliſhed the Roman Catholick Religion in England in the Reign of Queen Mary. He died Aug. 18. 1559. aged 83 Years, one Month, and two and twenty Days. The fury of the people was ſo great after his death, that they broke down the Statue they had raiſed for him, pull'd down his Arms and burnt the Inquiſitors Priſon, inſomuch that his Body was placed in the Vatican in a little Tomb built only of Brick. Pope Pius V. hath ſince put his Body into a Marble Tomb, which he cauſed to be made for him in the Church of the Dominicans de la Minerva, with an Epitaph upon it. He writ divers Treatiſes, as, De Symbolo; De Emendanda Eccleſia ad Paulum III. Regulæ Theatinorum, &c. Folieta in vit. Paul IV. * Platina's Continuator adds, That this Pope being of a Moroſe and Saturnine temper, ſhew'd great ſeverity and exactneſs of life, ſo that his Election ſtruck a great terror to all ſuch who were ill inclin'd to a Reformation, and not without reaſon; for tho' at firſt he palliated his Humor, and comported himſelf with an humble and affable Behaviour towards all, yet his fierce and ſupercilious Temper, returning to its natural courſe, all his Actions were influenced with a Spirit of Pride and haughty Severity, as appear'd in his Anſwer to the Steward of his Houſe, That he would be ſerved as became a Prince; and of his uſage of the Embaſſadors from England, ſent to Rome by Q. Mary and Philip her Husband, making 'em acknowledge the pretended faults and errors of that Kingdom, proſtrate themſelves at his Feet, and humbly beg Abſolution, and to be receiv'd into the Boſom of that Church, &c. The grudge he bore the Spaniards for ſequeſtring the Eſtates and Rents of his Family when they ſack'd Rome, and the ill treatment he receiv'd from the Vice King of Naples, made him joyn with the French and Switzers, and commence a War againſt Philip King of Spain which ended in the miſerable deſolation of Italy. By the vaſt expences of this War, the Pope's Treaſury being much exhauſted, many exhorbitant ways were contriv'd to recruit it; as doubling of Tithes upon Benefices, raiſing Gabels and Cuſtoms to an intolerable degree, &c. He farther ſeiz'd on all Horſes in Rome to ſerve in the War, and compell'd all the Friars to labour on the Works, and carry Earth to the Fortifications, converted many of the Churches into Granaries and Store-Houſes, which made all ſort of people conceive a deteſtable hatred againſt his perſon and actions, but nothing could incline his fierce and reſolute Spirit to Peace untill the French were defeated at St. Quintin; and then an agreement was made by the Mediation of the Venetians and Duke of Florence. Things being thus compos'd, he promoted the Court of Inquiſition, reducing ſeveral crimes, triable at other Bars of Judicature, to it. About this time the Emperor Charles V. renounced his Imperial Crown to his Brother Ferdinand of Auſtria, who was already elected King of the Romans, and his Kingdom of Spain and other Dominions to his Son Philip II. but the Pope would not allow this Abdication, alledging, that according to ancient Canons an Emperor could not make ſuch a Renunciation without the conſent of the Pope, and for that reaſon would never acknowledge Ferdinand for Emperor, nor under that Notion and Character receive Embaſſadors from him. This Pope falling into a Dropſie, ſummon'd all the Cardinals to his Chamber, and recommended to 'em the continuance of the Inquiſition, declaring, That he had experienc'd it to be the main ſupport of his Authority, and ſaid, that it would prove the chief Baſis and Pillar of the Papal Dignity. As ſoon as it was noiſed abroad, that he drew towards his end, the people roſe in a Tumult, and running through the City, curs'd his Name and Actions, and all the Family of Caraffa, and opening the Doors of the common Priſons, went to the Houſe of the Inquiſition, and having opened the Gates and releaſed the Priſoners, ſet fire to it, and burned all the Proceſſes, Papers and Records of that Court and had done the like to the Minerva, where the Judges of that Tribunal lodg'd, had not ſome taken care to divert their Fury. No ſooner was the Breath out of his Body, but the people made a publick Decree, That in whatever place the Arms of the Caraffa's were found, either painted or engraven, they ſhould be defac'd, ſo that in one days time, there were no Memorials of the Caraffan Family left in the whole City. John Baptiſta Caſtaldi in vita Pauli IV. &c.

PAUL V. ſucceeded Leo II. in the Chair, and had for Competitors the famous Bellarmine and Baronius amongſt others, who had very near carried it; his Name before the Election was Camillo Borgheſe, his Father being Antonio Borgheſe of Sienna, and his Mother a Roman Lady. His chief Studies were the Law, in which he became ſo famous, that he was advanc'd gradually till Clement VIII. made him Cardinal. He was choſen Pope unanimouſly, May 16. 1605. Being ſettled in the Chair, his chief Deſigns were levelled at ſcruing up the Eccleſiaſtical Dignity to the heighth, from which he ſaid, The remiſſneſs of his Predeceſſors had made it fall: and for this end he conſtituted a new Congregation at Rome, to contrive means how to Amplify and Enlarge the Authority and Dominion of the Church; and all his Nuncio's were prepared for that Deſign, and of thoſe Zealots, Oratio Mathei Biſhop of Gierace, his Nuncio at Venice, was the chief, as appears by that Extravagant ſaying of his in a Speech to the Doge and Senate of Venice; That Almſdeeds and other Works of Charity and Piety, frequent Communion in the holy Sacrament, and the moſt ſublime Works of Chriſtian Devotion were nothing, unleſs attended with reſpect and favour to the Eccleſiaſtical Liberty and Authority; adding, That the Pope had commanded him to perſiſt in this Opinion to the death, and accordingly he was reſolv'd to endure Martyrdom rather than be remiſs in advancing the Papal Authority. Nor was his Behaviour leſs Arrogant than his Words; however the Pope's Deſigns for ſeveral Months were not proſecuted with ſo much vigour as the matter requir'd. And finding that his Congregation for managment of the Affairs of England render'd King James I. more watchful, he delay'd the erecting of the Congregation abovementioned for fear of rendring other Princes Jealous alſo. His Deſighs were further retarded by Melancholy Apprehenſions of Death from a common Report about Rome, that the Images of the Virgin of Subiaco had ſweated, which is ſaid to be the common fore-runner of the Pope's Death. A Dutch Aſtrologer having alſo predicted, that his Reign ſhould be ſhort. His Friends, to cure this Melancholy, aſſembled all the Aſtrologers and Diviners of Rome, who ſaid, That there had been ſome unhappy influences which threated his Life, but now all things were auſpicious. Being thus reliev'd of his Melancholy, he reaſſum'd his Deſigns, and Endeavour'd to have the Council of Trent receiv'd in France, to have the Jeſuits in Spain freed from Tithes, and other things of that nature which uſher'd in Affairs of greater importance; as Firſt, He requir'd that the Republick of Lucca ſhould cancel the reſtraint which they had laid upon their Subjects as to trading with their fellow Citizens, who had retir'd from their Country becauſe Proteſtants; not that he diſlik'd but commended the thing, only he pretended that it ought to have been done by the Church, and therefore he would have it revok'd to make room for his Cenſure. The Second was the diſſolution of a Fraternity, ſet up for Devotion at the Jeſuits College in Naples, wherein they agreed to vote for none to be Magiſtrates but thoſe of that Fraternity, for which he was angry at the Neapolitans, alledging. That their diſſolving of it was an infringment on the Church Liberty, and therefore commanded thoſe Orders to be reverſed on pain of Excommunication. But he began to deal more roundly with the Venetians; being very urgent with them, and commanding them in a Magiſterial manner to contribute to the Emperor for carrying on his War againſt the Turks, at which they were highly offended, but gave a modeſt refuſal, which incenſed the Pope, who thought he might lay what Tax he would on Chriſtian States and Princes upon ſuch an Account; yet he thought it not a ſufficient Foundation for a Quarrel, but not long after laid hold on another occaſion. Scipio Saraceno, a Prebend of Vicenza, having affronted the Magiſtrates of that City, and given an intolerable abuſe to a Lady whom he could not debauch, by the advice of her Friends ſhe cited him before the Juſtice Court at Venice, where he readily appear'd, being ſupported by the Pope's Nuncio, who having ſignified the ſame to the Pope, he Storm'd and Rav'd at the Venetian Embaſſador, telling him, That he would not admit a Temporal Judge to take Cognizance of any Cauſe wherein a Churchman was concerned. He complained alſo, That the Venetians had made a Statute of Mortmain to hinder Laicks from bequeathing their Eſtates to the Church; and therefore they had incurr'd the Cenſures of the ſame: And he was yet farther enraged that the Venetians had prohibited the building of Churches without leave from the Senate. The Republick order'd their Embaſſador to repreſent to the Pope, That they could juſtifie from their Records, that they had been in poſſeſſion of the power to judge Eccleſiaſticks for Secular Cauſes above 1000 Years. That the Law of Mortmain was uſed by other Chriſtian Princes, and without the ſame they could not preſerve their force entire againſt the Common Enemy of Chriſtendom. The Pope was nettled with the Anſwer, but would not allow it, and threatned, That he would ſpill his Blood in the Cauſe, and make uſe of that power which God had given him over all things and over all Princes to depoſe them, that he could command Legions of Angels to his aid, and that he would never ſuffer the Clergy to be drawn before Secular Tribunals. The Senate finding their Liberty at Stake, ſignified by their Embaſſador, That they were unanimouſly agreed to defend the ſame, and that they would neither releaſe the Priſoners lawfully arreſted, nor repeal thoſe Laws ſo juſtly eſtabliſh'd. The Pope being inflexible, drew up two Briefs, one relating to the Laws, and the other to the Priſoners, the Prebend abovementioned, and the Abbot of Nerveſa, who was alſo under proceſs for Tyranny over his Tenants, Magick, Inceſt and Murther, and diſpatch'd the ſaid Briefs to his Nuncio; after which, calling a Conſiſtory, he explained himſelf with ſo much heat and vehemency, that he would neither admit Debate nor Advice, which highly incenſed the Cardinals, not accuſtomed to this way of proceeding. Baronius and Perron dealt with the Pope in private, and repreſented the danger of this Courſe, but all in vain. The Briefs being delivered on Chriſtmas day in the morning as the Counſellors were at Maſs, they were not opened becauſe the Doge Grimani lay on his Death-bed, and dying next Day, they declined opening them according to their uſual method, till a new Doge was choſen. The Pope hearing of the Princes death, ordered his Nuncio to proteſt againſt the Republick and their Election as null, while they remained under Excommunication; thinking by this means to throw a Bone of Contention among them, but that wiſe State kept firm to their ancient Principles, refuſing to give Audience to the Nuncio, or any other Foreign Miniſter, except it were to condole their Prince, and ſo compleated their Election January 10. 1606, and choſe Leonard Donate, a Senator of great Eminence, who by his Vertues and good Government recommended himſelf to all Mankind; and he was congratulated by all Foreign Miniſters but the Nuncio. The Doge, notwithſtanding, paſs'd the uſual Complement upon the Pope, who, contrary to his former Intentions, return'd a favourable Anſwer, and ordered his Nuncio to Congratulate the Doge. Hereupon the Pope's Briefs were conſidered, and the Senate conſulted with the moſt judicious and able Lawyers of their Age, as Antonio Pellegrini, Eraſmus Gratiani, and Father Paul of the Order of Servi, one profoundly learned in Theology and the Canons of the Church; conſulting alſo Men famous for Piety, and all the Law-Books and Writings of the moſt famous Men in Spain and France; and according to all, it was agreed, That the Papal Authority did not extend to Temporal Matters, and having receiv'd this as the general Opinion, they anſwer'd the Pope on January 28. 1606 to this effect; That their Laws were never queſtioned by any of his Predeceſſors; That the repealing of them would ſubvert their Government, and therefore they did not believe that they had juſtly incurr'd the Eccleſiaſtical Cenſure, conſidering that Secular Princes have receiv'd that power from God of making Laws, which no other Humane Authority is able to take from them, and much leſs his Briefs, which have no prevalence in Matters purely Temporal: Which Anſwer being delivered, the Pope ſaid it was frivolous, and therefore he was reſolv'd to proceed unto Sentence, and that the Senate muſt reſolve to obey; and if he did not receive ſatisfaction in 15 days, that he would proceed to Sentence. However time was protracted till the end of March, that Duodo, Embaſſador extraordinary from Venice, arrived and acquainted the Pope, That the Senate could not yield to his demands without betraying that power which God had put into their hands; and the Pope, on the other ſide, would liſten to no Argument, but told him, That his was the Cauſe of God and muſt prevail. Hereupon the Venetians communicated thoſe differences to Foreign Miniſters. He of Spain declin'd medling in it, but thoſe of the Emperor and France declar'd for the Venetians. Some of the Cardinals dealt with the Pope to delay Sentence, which he granted for 24 days and then publiſh'd it with the conſent of the Cardinals, and diſpach'd Copies of it to the Dominions of Venice. The Foreign Miniſters at Rome being diſſatisfied with this way of procedure apply'd to the Pope to moderate and prorogue the Sentence till means of an Accommodation could be found out. The News being come to Venice, the State ordered that Prayers ſhould be made in all Churches and Chappels, imploring the Divine Aſſiſtance, and recall'd their Embaſſador Extraordinary from Rome leaving Nani to reſide there, leaſt they ſhould ſeem to ſtand in open defiance of the Pope; and at the ſame time they communicated the rigour of the Pope's Sentence to Sir Henry Wotton, Reſident for England; having never till then taken any notice of the Controverſie to him, and order'd their Embaſſador in England not to diſcourſe of it to the King nor his Councellors. Sir Henry complained, That they had been more free with other Embaſſadors than him, but anſwered, That he could not underſtand that piece of Romiſh Divinity which was contrary to Juſtice and Moral Honeſty. The Republick, to avoid the ill conſequences of this Excommunication, forbid the receiving or ſuffering of any thing in their Dominions printed againſt them at Rome, and ordered all Copies of the Briefs or Bulls to be deliver'd up to the Magiſtrates on the higheſt penalties, to which the People obey'd univerſally and cheerfully, and teſtified their willingneſs to defend the Common Cauſe with their Lives and Fortunes. After this the Nuncio at Venice went into the Jeſuits College, where many of that Fraternity had been receiv'd, who were eminent for diſturbing the World, particularly in raiſing Commotions in Paris, Poland, Muſcovy, &c. and having frequented this Society, he made a viſit to the Doge, pretending grief for the preſent poſture of Affairs, and promiſing his utmoſt endeavours for an Accommodation, often invoking the name of God, whom he called Our Lord; and ſpeaking of the Pope he called him Lord alſo, ſo that it was hard to know when he meant the one or when the other; only ſome obſerving perſons being by, alledged, that when he ſpoke of God he kept on his Cap, but when he ſpoke of the Pope he took it off. In the mean time the Pope recall'd his Nuncio from Venice, and commanded their Reſident to leave Rome. The Venetians, in the mean time, commanded the Clergy to officiate as before forbidding thoſe that departed, to take any thing with them belonging to the Church; but in a little time the Superiors of the Orders Commanded them to leave their Territories. Then the Senate called for the Jeſuits, to know whether they would continue in the City or not, they anſwer'd, That they were willing to ſtay, and perform all acts of Worſhip, Maſs excepted: Whereupon the Senate reſolved they ſhould go if they would not ſay Maſs, and accordingly ordered them to depart, and leave their Plate, Veſtments and Goods; and the like Orders were given through all their Dominions. Hereupon the Jeſuits aſſembled their Votaries, gathered great Contributions from them, and perſuaded the Capuchins to march away in Proceſſion two and two with Crufixes on their Breaſts, thinking thereby to raiſe a Commotion among the people, who they believ'd would think there were ſo many Chriſts going from 'em. The Jeſuits were forc'd to pack off in the Night, the people following them in great crouds to the Boats, crying out, Let them go to the Devil. They plundered their College, however, e're they went, and hid their Plate and Moveables, and at Padua left Copies of a certain Book containing Eighteen Rules; the Seventeenth being, That they ſhould not in their Sermons inſiſt too much on the Energy and Grace of God. The Third was, That they ſhould be enjoin'd to believe according as the Hierarchy of the Church believ'd; that is, if the Church determin'd any thing to be white they ſhould believe it, though the colour appear'd black to the ſight of their own Eyes. But ſuch of the Clergy as were not ſeduced by the Jeſuits, continued firm notwithſtanding all the Cenſures of Excommunication, &c. The Pope finding that the Venetians had ſtill Maſs, &c. That all the Clergy did not abandon them; That the people made no Inſurrection, and, That the Senate continued unanimous, threatned the remaining Clergy with Excommunication, and promis'd preferment to thoſe that would come over. The Mendicants they enjoin'd to leave all they had for Chriſt, and if they could not do that, to ſuffer Martyrdom; the Rich they adviſed not to leave their Monaſteries and Poſſeſſions, but commanded them to obſerve the Interdict; but the Venetians guarded their Frontiers ſo well that not a Friar could get in with the Orders. Then the Court of Rome reviled the Venetians at all Foreign Courts, and the Jeſuits affronted their Embaſſador in Poland, which the King of Poland reſented, and made them beg pardon for it, complaining to the Pope, That his Nuncio ſhould preſume to publiſh Eccleſiaſtical Cenſures againſt Foreign Princes in his Dominions and therefore exhorted him to ſurceaſe from any further proceedings againſt the Venetians who had deſerved ſo well of Chriſtendom. The Miniſter of the Republick at Vienna prevail'd to have their Cauſe juſtified in Germany, as they did at firſt in Spain and France; but the Genoeſe and Tuſcans were their Enemies on account of old Grudges. King James I. of Great Britain did much applaud them, ſignified his deſire of a free Council, and inveighed againſt the Uſurpations of the Popes as exalting themſelves above God. The Dutch wrote obligingly to the Venetians, offering them Arms and Proviſions in caſe of a Rupture with the Pope. The Dukes of Mantua, Savoy, Tuſcany, and King of France, did them alſo many good Offices. The Venetians made civil returns to the ſeveral Princes, but continued ſtill firm to the Church of Rome, tho' the Jeſuits, in the mean time, in their Schools and Auditories, and by their Scandalous Libels, defam'd them all over Europe, and charg'd them with Lutheraniſm; ſo that the Republick taking their practices into conſideration, and finding that they were the Contrivers and Actors of all their Troubles, and had incenſed the Pope againſt them; and not only ſo, but that they were the common Incendiaries of Europe, did by a ſolemn Act of State, for thoſe and other heinous Enormities exclude them eternally from their Dominions June 14. 1606. This perpetual Baniſhment of the Jeſuits made the breach wider and more difficult to be reconciled, ſo that the Pope betook himſelf to new meaſures, viz. publiſhing a Jubilee, granting abundance of Indulgences and Remiſſions to all, except ſuch as belong'd to Venice. And tho the Jeſuits with utmoſt application did on the Frontiers of that State magnifie the benefits of them that enjoyed it, and aggravate the loſs of them that wanted it, yet the people were not at all mov'd with it. So the Pope finding that his Spiritual Weapons had no effect, he applied himſelf to the Temporal Sword, and deſired aid from the Spaniards which they promiſed largely; but dealt with the Venetians to ſupplicate the Pope to take off his Cenſures. And the French Embaſſador preſs'd them alſo to make the firſt overtures of Peace, but theſe Negotiations took no effect. The Senate, in the mean time, gave notice of it to King James of Great Britain, who anſwered, That he was highly ſatisfied with the unanimous Reſolution of the Senate to defend their Liberty, aſſuring them on the word of a Prince, that if they engaged in a War on this account, he would aſſiſt them with all his Power, not out of expectation that they ſhould quit the Communion of the Church of Rome, but from a principle of Juſtice, eſteeming himſelf oblig'd to vindicate the Authority of the Secular Power. Mean while the Spaniards endeavour'd to ſtir up the Turks againſt the Venetians, that ſo they might force them to a compoſition with the Pope; and for that end ſent their Armado who burnt Durazzo in Albania, brought off 150 People and 30 Cannons, thinking to lay the blame upon the Venetians; but the Grand Seignior being rightly inform'd ordered the Admiral of his Gallies to joyn with the Venetians againſt the Pope and Spaniard, which was accordingly done, but the Republick thought not fit to make uſe of them. The Pope, at the ſame time, imployed Writers to maintain, That all Marriages during the Interdict were unlawful, and the Children Baſtards: In anſwer to which, a Treatiſe which had been publiſhed by Gerſon 100 Years before, was then reprinted, which had ſo much Authority, that Bellarmine and Baronius both thought it worth their while to write againſt it, and the Venetians ordered the Learned of their ſide to defend it, who inſiſted on it, That the Pope's Power was only Spiritual; That he had no Authority to annul the Temporal Laws of Princes, which was contrary to the Scriptures and the Example of Chriſt and his Saints; That the Doctrine which teaches the lawfulneſs of proſecuting any Prince at difference with the Pope by open War or ſecret Treaſon is damnable and Sacrilegious; That by Divine Law the Clergy are not exempted from ſubjection to the Secular Power; either as to their Perſons or Eſtates; That the Pope is not Infallible but only in neceſſary points of Faith; that his power of binding and looſing is only Clave non errante, &c. The moſt remarkable of what Bellarmine and the Popiſh Champions urg'd was; That the Temporal Power of Princes is ſubject to the Eccleſiaſtical; That the Pope hath power to depoſe Princes for Errors in their Government, when he judges it may be beneficial to the Church; That he is the Supreme Temporal Monarch over all the World; and Appeals may be made to him from all Temporal Princes; That he can give Laws to all Princes and annul theirs; That the Clergy are not ſubject to the Temporal Law; That the Sentences of the Pope are to be obſerved whether they be juſt or unjuſt; That he is God upon Earth, and that his Sentence and Tribunal are the ſame with God's. And Bellarmine particularly aſſerted That to reſtrain Obedience due to the Pope only to Matters purely Spiritual, was to reduce it to nothing; That St. Paul appeal'd unto Cæſar and not to St. Peter, becauſe he would not make himſelf ridiculous in thoſe days, and that profeſſions of ſubjection made by the Ancient Popes to the Emperors, was to comply with the Humour and Affection of thoſe times. The Pope perceiving his Authority weakned by the ſtiffneſs of the Venetians, imploy'd France and Spain in a Mediation, but during the Treaties the Spaniards took Arms, and the Republick put themſelves in a poſture of defence, and deſired the French King to declare for them; but he anſwered, That it was not as yet time, and that there remain'd ſtill hopes of an Accommodation, for which end he diſpatched Cardinal Joyeuſe to Venice and Rome, who effected the Agreement after much debate, on condition that the Cardinal ſhould take off the Cenſures of the Pope in the face of the whole Senate, who were at the ſame time to revoke their Proteſt. That the Priſoners ſhould be delivered, and all the Religious perſons reſtor'd, excepting only the Jeſuits and fourteen other Friars, who were fled for their Crimes: And that an Embaſſador ſhould be immediately choſen and ſent to the Pope, and the Articles being agreed on, the 21ſt of April 1607 was the day appointed for putting them in Execution: And thus the Controverſie ended to the honour of the Venetians, who made the Pope yield in every thing; and leſt they ſhould ſeem to acknowledge a fault, they would not ſo much as accept of the Cardinal's Bleſſing, leaſt it ſhould be taken for an Abſolution. It was in this Pope's time, and ſoon after his promotion, that the Gun-pouder-Treaſon was diſcovered, to blow up King James of Great Britain and his Parliament, November 5. 1605; upon which Proclamations were iſſued, and Laws enacted againſt the Papiſts, and the Oath of Allegiance univerſally tendered; the form whereof, being carried to Rome, and examin'd by the College of Cardinals, it was concluded, That no true Catholick cou'd take it with a ſafe Conſcience, and therefore the Pope forbad it to the Papiſts in England. In 1607 the King of Congo ſent an Embaſſador to this Pope for Preachers, being inſtigated thereto by the Jeſuits, but the Embaſſador dying at Rome there was an end of that matter. In 1609 another came from Perſia, but it appear'd afterwards, that he came not from the Court on any Religious account, but as is probable, by the procurement of ſome Armenian Chriſtians, to procure favour from the Church of Rome. In 1610 the Pope Canoniz'd Ignatius Loyola and Charles Borromeo, Archbiſhop of Milan. In 1610 Henry IV. of France was aſſaſſinated by Ravaillac, to the great regret of the Pope, who had receiv'd much kindneſs from him in the Affair of Venice, inſomuch, that he condemned ſome Frenchmen at Rome to the Gallies for rejoicing at it. None of this Pope's Predeceſſors exceeded him in publick and magnificent Structures, which are too tedious to enumerate here. He eſtabliſh'd a Revenue, out of which every Month, was rais'd a convenient Portion to beſtow on an Honeſt and Vertuous Maid in Marriage. During the Wars between the Emperor and the Count Palatine of the Rhine he tax'd the Clergy to ſupport the Catholick Cauſe, and a new Order of Knighthood was inſtituted for the Extirpation of Hereticks. In his time began the great Controverſie between the Dominicans and Jeſuits, concerning the immaculate Conception of the Bleſſed Virgin. He died Jan. 24. 1621, having, during his Reign, created 60 Cardinals. Ricaut's continuation of Platina.

PAUL Patriarch of Alexandria, in the VIth. Age, lived a long time in the Deſarts of Egypt, where he was made Abbot of Tabennes. Pelagius, Pope Agapet's Nuncio at Conſtantinople, put him into the See of Alexandria after he had got Theodoſius and Gayan expell'd. The Emperor Juſtinian empowered him. in 536, to depoſe the Hereticks that had any Paſtoral Charges, which power he uſed without either prudence or precaution, ſo that his Enemies accuſed him of having contributed to the Death of the Steward of the Church of Alexandria, and was baniſh'd after having firſt been depoſed at Gaza in the Year 537. Liberatus in Brev. l. 23. Baronius A. C. 536, 537.

PAUL I. of that Name, Biſhop of Conſtantinople, before his Promotion to that See, a Prieſt famous for his Learning and Piety, was preſent at the Council of Nice, and choſen by the Orthodox there in 340. Euſebius of Nicomedia, an Arian, cauſed him to be baniſh'd and uſurp'd his See. After the death of this Arian Prelate, in 342, the people of Conſtantinople choſe Paul again; but, the Arians having choſen Macedonius, the Emperor Conſtance expell'd the firſt from his Church. Paul came to Rome, where Marcellus of Ancyra, Aſclepas of Gaza, and ſeveral other Prelates, expell'd from their Sees, were alſo. Pope Julius receiv'd them in a Synod, by which they were declared Reſtor'd, but the Arians made a Jeſt of this Reſtitution, and condemned Paul in a little Council held at Philippi in Thrace, in the Year 347. Some time after Paul was re-eſtabliſhed in his See at the entreaty of the Emperor Conſtance, whom fear oblig'd to it; but when the danger was over, he reſolv'd to remove him again, and reſtore Macedonius; and this was put in execution by one who carried Paul firſt to Theſſalonica, then to Singra in Meſopotamia, then to Emeſa in Syria, and laſt of all to Cucuſa, where the Hereticks cauſed him to be ſtrangled about the Year 351. PAUL II. a Monothelite Heretick, choſen in the Year 646, by the care of the Emperor Conſtans, the Son of Conſtantine, and Grandſon of Heraclius. Pope Theodorus excommunicated and depoſed him. This Condemnation provoked Paul ſo highly that he cauſed the Pope's Agents to be whipp'd and baniſh'd from Conſtantinople, and demoliſhed a Chappel which the Latins had in that ſame City, perſwaded the Emperor to publiſh his Edict call'd Typus, and fix it on the Church Doors as a Formula of Faith. He died, according to Morcri, in his Hereſie, in 651; his Memory was condemned in the Sixth Synod, and his Name ſtruck out of the Diptychs. Baronius in Annal.

PAUL III. a Layman, was put into the See of Conſtantinople after Theodorus, in 685, and died in the Year 691, being ſucceeded by Callinicus. Baronius in Annal.

PAUL IV. born in the Iſle of Cyprus, was choſen againſt his Will after Nicetas of Conſtantinople in 780. Theophanes affirms, that the fear of the Emperor's Threats made him receive into Communion the Iconomachi, tho in his Heart he was for the Worſhip of Images. However, not being willing to do Violence to his Opinion any longer, he Reſigned his See, and retiring to a Monaſtery, put himſelf under Pennance, for being over complaiſant to the Court. Theophanes Lib. 23. Baron. A. C. 780. 784.

PAUL, a famous Lawyer in the Second Age, was Councellor of State with Ulpian, and Papinian, under the Emperor Peſcennius Niger; and afterwards Paul and Ulpian were aſſiſtant Judges to Papinian in the time of Alexander Severus, and had other conſiderable Imployments. Spartian in Peſcen. Lampridius in Annal.

PAUL of Burgos, Carthagena, or St. Mary, a Spaniſh Biſhop in the Fifteenth Age, was born in the City of Burgos, and a Jew by Religion; the moſt noble and moſt learned amongſt them. Henry III. ſurnamed the Sickly, made choice of him for Tutor to his Son John II. It's ſaid, he was after that Chancellor of the Kingdom, and that he died Patriarch of Aquileia, Aug. 29. in the Year 1435. He made conſiderable additions to the Poſtils of Nicholas de Lyra upon all the Scripture, and writ another Treatiſe, entituled, Scrutinium Scripturarum in 2 lib. diviſum. One of his Sons named Alphonſo was Biſhop of Burgos after his Father, and compoſed an Abridgment of the Hiſtory of Spain, entitled, Anacephaleoſis Regum Hiſpaniæ. Mariana, lib. 9. Hiſt. ch. 8. Sixtus de Sienne lib. 4. Bibl. S. Trithem. & Bellarmine, de Script. Eccl. Aubert de Mire in Act. &c.

PAUL of Samoſata, Lat. Paulus Samoſatenus, an Hereſiarch, ſucceeded Demetrian in the See of Antioch in 262. He denied, with Sabellius the diſtinction of the three perſons of the Trinity, and with Artemon taught, that the Holy Ghoſt had deſcended into Jeſus Chriſt, operated in him, and then retired to the Father. He alſo held, That there were two diſtinct perſons in our Saviour, the Son of God, the Word, and Chriſt, who he ſaid did not exiſt before Mary, but was call'd the Son of God as a Reward for his Holy Works. Pope Dionyſius, and Dionyſius of Alexandria oppoſed him, and ſeveral Prelates aſſembled at Antioch, condemn'd him; and thereupon, leaſt he ſhould be depos'd, he abjur'd his Hereſie, but beginning to teach his Errors anew, the Clergy met again at Antioch, where one called Malchion having refuted him, he was condemned and depos'd. About the Year 260 theſe Prelates wrote a Synodical Letter, wherein, among a great many other things, they accuſe him of finding fault with, and blaming all the Interpreters of Scripture before his time; That upon Eaſter-day, inſtead of the uſual Hymns, he cauſed ſome to be ſung that were made in his own praiſe; That he kept ſuſpected Woman in his Houſe, and allow'd the Clergy of his Party to do the like. Upon his being depos'd, Domnus, the Son of his Predeceſſor Demetrian, was put in his Place, but Paul refuſing to quit the Houſe belonging to the See, the Catholicks applied themſelves to the Emperor Aurelian, who notwithſtanding he was a Pagan, gave it againſt Paul. His Diſciples were called Pauliamiſts. Euſebius. S. Epiphan. S. Auguſtin. Nicephorus. Prateolus.

PAUL d'EGINE, ſo called, for that he was born in that Iſland, named now Engia, with a Gulf of the ſame name, was one of the moſt famous Phyſicians of his time; liv'd according to Renatus Moreau, about the Year 380, or according to others in 420, in the time of Honorius and Theodoſius the Younger. It's ſaid he travell'd into Greece and elſewhere, to ſee how they practis'd Phyſick: At his return he made a Compendium of the Works of Galen, and publiſh'd others, whereof we have ſeveral Editions.

PAUL of Genoa, a Monk of Mount Caſſin, liv'd in the XIth. and XIIth. Ages, under the Reigns of the Emperors Henry III. and Henry IV. It's ſaid he was blind from his Birth, but that hinder'd him not to comment upon the Pſalms, Jeremy, the Evangeliſts, the Epiſtles of St. Paul, and the Revelations. He writ alſo a Treatiſe of the Diſputes between the Greeks and Latins. Poſſevin. Voſſius & Soprani, Scrip. della Ligur.

PAUL (Mark) or Marcus Paulus of Venice, Son to Nicholas Paul, both of them famous for their Travels. Marcus Paulus ſurnamed of Venice, liv'd in the XIIIth. Age in 1272. He travelled into Syria, Perſia, and the Indies. His Book entituled, De Regionibus Orientis, was printed together with the Travels of Sir John Mandeville and Ludolphus of Zuchen.

PAUL of Middleburgh, Biſhop of Foſſembrona was in great eſteem in the XVIth. Century; the ſurname of Middleburgh being given him becauſe of his being born in that City, which is the Capital of Zealand. He ſtudied at Louvain, and acquir'd ſo vaſt a knowledge in Phyſick and the Mathematicks, that Julius Cæſar Scaliger confeſs'd, he was reputed the greateſt Mathematician of his time. The deſire of Travelling made him leave his Country. He ſtop'd in Italy, where he was firſt made Phyſician to the Duke of Urbin, and it was by the favour of this Lord, and that of the Emperor Maximilian, that the Biſhoprick of Foſſembrona in Umbria was beſtowed upon him. He aſſiſted at the Council of Lateran, under Julius II. and Leo X. and to the laſt of theſe two Popes, he dedicated fourteen Books, De Paſchali Obſervatione, nineteen to Maximilian I. De die Paſſionis Dominicæ. He writ ſeveral other things, and died at Rome, aged 89, in the Year 1535. Bellarmin, de Script. Eccl. Ughel. Ital. Sacr. Julius Scaliger, Exerc. 266. in Cardan. Valerius Andreas. Bibl Belg. Voſſius, de ſcient. Math.

PAUL (Vincent de) Inſtitutor and firſt Superior General of the Congregation of the Miſſion, and of the Daughters of Charity, was born in the Village of Pouy near Acqs, in 1576, and died September 27. in 1660.

PAUL de CASTRO, ſo call'd, becauſe born at Caſtro, or Caſtrum Minervæ, an Epiſcopal See in the Kingdom of Naples, liv'd in the XVth. Century, and was reckoned one of the moſt Eminent Lawyers of that Age. He Practis'd above Fifty Years at Florence, Bononia, Siena, and Padua, and died at a great Age, in 1437. His Works are very Voluminous, and Printed at Venice and Frankfort. Trithemius de Script. Eccl. Fiſcard. in Vit. Juriſc. &c.

S. PAULA, the Diſciple of S. Jerom, very famous for her Piety and Knowledge, liv'd about the end of the IVth. Century, and was deſcended from the Families of the Scipio's, Gracchi, and from others, the nobleſt in Rome, and allied to another (by her Marriage with Toxotius,) no leſs conſiderable, by whom ſhe had four Daughters and one Son: Becoming a Widow, ſhe forſook all the Pomp and Delicacies of Rome, and confin'd her ſelf within the Grot of Bethlehem, there to ſpend her Life in Humility and Mortification. She learnt Hebrew, that ſhe might the more eaſily come to underſtand the Holy Scriptures, the ſtudy whereof was her Delight: She was beſides as a Mother to all the poor of the World that came to viſit the Holy Places, and a living Example of all Chriſtian Vertues. She died January 26, in the Year 404. S. Jerom, who hath writ her Life, ſays, ſhe lived five Years at Rome, according to her holy way of Retirement, twenty in Bethlehem, dying 56 Years old, 8 Months, and 21 Days. S. Jerom, in ejus vita, in Epiſt &c.

PAULET (Sir William) Grandſon to Sir John Paulet of an Ancient Family of that Name in Com. Somerſ. married Elizabeth the Daughter and Heireſs of John Denibemd of Hinton S. George in Com. Somerſ. from whom deſcended Sir Amias Paulet, Knight, Captain of the Iſle of Guernſey, and one of the Privy-Council to Queen Elizabeth, in the 29th. of her Reign, who with Sir Drew Drurie Knight, had the charge of Mary Queen of Scots ſome time before, and when ſhe ſuffer'd. He left Iſſue, Sir Anthony Paulet, who by Catharine his Wife, Daughter to Henry Lord Norris, had Iſſue, John Paulet of Hinton S. George, who by Letters-Patent, bearing date July 23. 3 Car. I. was advanced to the Dignity of Baron of this Realm, by the Title of Lord Paulet of Hinton S. George, and in the late Civil Wars had a Commiſſion from that King to raiſe a Regiment of 1500 Horſe. His eldeſt Son Sir John ſucceeded him, and departing this Life at his Mannor-houſe of Court de Weeke in Com. Somerſ. An. 1665, his Son John ſucceeding him, married two Wives, Firſt, Eſſex, eldeſt Daughter to Alexander Popham of Littlecote in Com. Wilts, Eſquire, by whom he had Iſſue, two Daughters, one married to Sir William Farmer, now Lord Leimſter, and the Second married to ——— Munſon, Eſquire. His ſecond Wife was Suſan, Daughter to Philip Earl of Pembroke, by whom he had the preſent Lord Paulet. This and the following Family deſcend from the ſame Stock. Dugdale's Baronage.

PAULET (William) Son to Sir John Paulet, deſcended of an Ancient Family in Com. Somerſ. a perſon ſingularly accompliſh'd with Learning and other excellent Parts, was in 29 Henry VIII. at the Creation of Edward Prince of Wales, made Treaſurer of the King's Houſhold, and the next Year, by Letters Patents, bearing Date 9 Martii, advanced to the Dignity of a Baron of this Realm, by the Title of Lord S. John. He was the firſt Maſter of the Wards, created Knight of the Garter, and accompanied the King at the taking of Bullogne, conſtituted one of that King's Executors, and appointed of the Council to his Son and Succeſſor Prince Edward; and upon the Removal of the Earl of Southampton from his Office of Lord-Chancellor in 1 Ed. VI. being then Lord great Maſter of the Houſhold, had the Cuſtody of the Great Seal. In 3 Ed. VI. he was created Earl of Wiltſhire, and in the 4th. of Ed. VI. conſtituted Lord Treaſurer of England, and the next Year honoured with the Title of Marquis of Wincheſter, ſoon after which, he ſat as High-Steward of England upon the Tryal of the Duke of Somerſet, being alſo Lord Preſident of the Council for ſome part of that Reign. He was in great favour with Queen Mary, becauſe he was one of the chief of thoſe who proclaimed her in oppoſition to the Lady Jane Grey. She confirm'd his Patent for the Office of Lord-Treaſurer, as did Queen Elizabeth in the Firſt of her Reign. This honourable Perſon died 14 Eliz. in the 97th Year of his Age, having liv'd to ſee 103 Perſons of his own Generation. It's reported.

That being aſk'd how he did to ſtand in thoſe perilous times, wherein ſuch great Alterations were made both in Church and State, he anſwered, By being a Willow, and not an Oak. John his Son ſucceeded, and in 15 Eliz. was one of the Peers who aſſiſted at the Duke of Norfolk's Trial, and his Son William, by Elizabeth, Daughter to Robert Willoughby, Lord Brook, ſucceeded him; and he was ſucceeded by William his eldeſt Son, by Anne, Daughter to Thomas Lord Howard of Effingham. He married Lucie, Daughter to Thomas Earl of Exeter, and was ſucceeded by his Son John, who married thrice, and was ſucceded by Charles his eldeſt Son, by Jane Daughter to Thomas Viſcount Savage of Rock-Savage. He married Chriſtian, the eldeſt Daughter to John Freſcheville of Stavely Com. Derby, Eſquire, ſince created Lord Freſcheville, who died, leaving no Iſſue. He married afterwards Mary, one of the Daughters of Emanuel Earl of Sunderland, by whom he hath two Sons, Charles and William, and three Daughters, Jane, married to the Earl of Bridgewater, and Mary and Elizabeth. The ſaid Charles, Marquis of Wincheſter, was created Duke of Bolton, An. William and Mary. Dugdale, &c. His Son, who is now Duke of Bolton by his Father's Death, came over with the Prince of Orange, and was very inſtrumental in the Revolution, upon which he was made Lord-Chamberlain to the late Queen of happy Memory, and ſince one of the Lords-Juſtices of Ireland

PAULI (James de) Ammanato, or Picolomini, a Cardinal, known by the name of Cardinalis Pavienſis, was born at Laques. He writ ſeveral things, whereof we have a Volume of Letters, and the Hiſtory of his time. He died September 17. 1479, at S. Laurence, near the Lake of Bolſena, being one and fifty Years of Age. Paulus Jovius, in Elog. c. 20. Leand. Alberti de Script. Ital.

PAULI (Simon) chief Phyſician to the King of Denmark, died in 1682, aged 77. We have divers Works of his, amongſt others Flora Danica, wherein he treats of the ſingular Plants that grow in Denmark and Norway. Quadripartitum Botanicum, wherein are collected all the Simples uſeful for the curing of Diſeaſes; and a Treatiſe of the Abuſe of Tobacco and Tea, which is ſo much the more conſiderable, for that ſeveral great Men, perſuaded by his Reaſons, have entirely given over uſing of both the one and the other. Memoirs Hiſtoriques.

PAULINA, a Roman Lady, the Wife of Saturninus, no leſs Illuſtrious for her Vertue than Birth, and no leſs beautiful than rich; a young Gentleman, named Mundus fell moſt paſſionately in love with her; and not being able to win her either by preſents or intreaties having in vain made her an offer of two hundred thouſand Drachma's, he reſolved to famiſh himſelf to death, but was comforted by one of his Father's Libertines called Idus, who corrupted ſome of the Prieſts of the Goddeſs Iſis, to perſuade Paulina that the God Anubis would ſee her in private. This Lady, thinking her ſelf much honour'd herewith, boaſted of it to her Friends and Husband, and lay in the pretended Chamber of Anubis, where Mundus was concealed, who ſometime after meeting her, informed her of what had paſſed. Paulina, raging with deſpair, prayed her Husband to be revenged for this Injury; who immediately went to complain of it to the Emperor Tiberius, and informing him of the truth of the whole matter, he cauſed thoſe abominable Prieſts to be crucified together with Idus that corrupted them, ruined the Temple of Iſis, and caſt her Statue into the River Tyber; contenting himſelf to ſend Mundus into baniſhment. Joſeph. l. 18. c. 4. *Bocace de Clar. PAULINA, Seneca the Philoſopher's Wife, would have died with that great Man whom Nero had condemned to death; and for that purpoſe cauſed her Veins together with her Husband's to be cut; but Nero who had no particular hatred to her, prevented the Deſign. She lived ſome years after, bearing in her Body and Face the glorious Marks of her conjugal affection, and witneſſing by her Paleneſs the great quantity of Blood ſhe had loſt. Tacitus, lib. 15. Annal.

PAULINUS of Aquileia, Patriarch of that City, or according to others, of Friuli, was a Grammarian, whoſe Vertue brought him into the favour of Charlemaign, and by whoſe means he attained that Dignity in 774, or 776, as others would have it. He appeared very eminent in ſeveral Councils aſſembled againſt Elipantus of Toledo, and Fœlix of Urgel, againſt whom he writ that Book we have of his in the Fathers Library, called, Libellus de Sanctiſſima Trinitate adverſus Elipantum Toletanum & Fœlicem Urgelitanum Antiſtites, dictus Sacroſyllabus. He died January 2. in the Year 802 or 803. Alcuin. in Epiſt. 81. & in Poem. 114 & 213. Ughel. in Ital. Sacr. Bellarm. de Script. Eccl.

PAULINUS, Biſhop of Antioch in the Fourth Century Euſtatius made him a Prieſt. He was never tainted with the Converſation of Hereticks. The Church of Antioch was divided by a Schiſm, and acknowledged two Prelates, Meletius and Euſtathius, but upon the death of the laſt Lucifer de Cagliari or Calaritanus put Paulinus in his place. He was accuſed for following the Sentiments of Sabellius, but he manifeſted the contrary to Athanaſius, who conferr'd with him. He was afterwards reconciled to Meletius, and came to Rome to demand the protection of Pope Damaſus againſt Flavian put in the place of Meletius. Paulinus died in 389. It was he that ordain'd St. Jerom his Friend and Defender. This Prelate is not the ſame with Paulinus Biſhop of Antioch who ſucceeded Philogonus in 319 and died in 324. Socrates, lib. 3. Theodoret, l. 3. Sozomen lib. 6. Ruſfin. lib. 1. *Baron. in Annal. PAULINUS, Biſhop of Rocheſter, was ſent with Juſtus into Great-Britain, in the Year 601, and was Conſecrated Archbiſhop of York, in 625; but being driven from his See, by Cadwalla, a Britiſh King in 633, he return'd to Canterbury, and the Biſhoprick of Rocheſter, having been then vacant for Six Years, he undertook the Government of that Dioceſs, being plac'd there by Honorius Archbiſhop of Canterbury, at the Inſtance of Eadbald King of Kent. He died on the 10th. of October, in the Year 644, and was buried in the Cathedral of Rocheſter, after he had been Biſhop there Eleven Years, Two Months, and Twenty one Days. Bede, Lib. 1. Cap. 29. Lib. 2. Cap. 20. Lib. 3. Cap. 14. Anglia Sacra pars prima. pag. 329.

PAULINUS, Biſhop of Nola, was born at Bourdeaux, or in the Neighbourhood of that Town, in the IVth. Century. He was a Perſon of the firſt Quality, and had the Poet Auſonius for his Maſter, with whom he afterwards kept a great Correſpondence. Auſonius, in his 24th. Epiſtle, ſpeaks to him thus:

—— —— Ego Sum tuus Altor, & ille
Præceptor Primus Veterum largitor Honorum,
Primus in Aonidum qui te Collegia Duxi, &c.

Paulinus immediately made him the following Reply in Iambick Verſe:

Tibi diſciplinas, dignitatem, literas,
Linguæ, & Famæ Decus,
Provectus, Altus, Inſtitutus, debeo, &c.

It is ſaid, that Paulinus was afterwards made Conſul at Rome, in 375. After his Conſulſhip, he travel'd, and made an Acquaintance with S. Martin, S. Ambroſe, and other great Men of the Church; and having ſpent Fifteen Years in Foreign Countries, he was Baptiz'd by Delphinus, Biſhop of Bourdeaux, in 391: Upon which, ſelling his Eſtate, and diſtributing it to the Poor, he made a ſecond Journey into Spain, fixing, for the moſt part, at Barcelona, and practiſing greater Degrees of Strictneſs and Severity than formerly, notwithſtanding the Solicitation of Auſonius, and ſome other Friends, to bring him back to a Secular way of living. In the Year 393, upon Chriſtmas-Day, he was ordain'd by Eulampius, Biſhop of Barcelona, being almoſt forc'd into Prieſts Orders by the Importunity of the People: Afterwards he was made Biſhop of Nola in Campagnia, but the Year when, is uncertain: In which Town he continued, till the Sacking of it by the Goths, which happen'd in 410. Paulinus died in May 431, being the 78th. Year of his Age. He was married to Theraſia, a Perſon of great Vertue, and who continu'd to live with him all along. Thoſe that have a mind to know more of this great Man, may conſult his Life, written by Sacchinus, and plac'd before the laſt Edition of Paulinus's Works. In ſhort, this Biſhop was a Perſon of great Piety, and particularly obliging to all People, in his Converſation: His Charity to the Poor, and good Nature was extraordinary, of which, beſides what we have ſaid already, Gregory the Great relates a very remarkable Inſtance, viz. When Campagnia was over-run and plunder'd by the Goths, Paulinus parted with all his Fortune for the Redemption of Captives; and underſtanding by a Widow, that her Son was made a Slave by the Enemy, having nothing to give her for his Ranſome, he offer'd his own Perſon in exchange for the other; which Overture being accepted, he went into Barbary, and having the King of the Vandals Son-in-Law for his Maſter, he made him a ſort of a Head Gardiner; but being afterwards known, he was honourably ſent back into Italy, had his Ship well freighted with Corn, and all his Fellow-Citizens ſet free, and permitted to return with him. Paulinus had a great Genius for Poetry, as appears, to ſay nothing more, from the Character of his Maſter Anſonius, who makes him this Complement.

Cedimus Ingenio, quantum præcedimus Ævo:
Aſſurget Muſæ noſtra Camæna tuæ.

As for his Elocution in Proſe, it was highly commended by S. Jerom, Si Sacras, inquit, Literas, te docere contingeret, & quaſi per Manus Myſteria tradere Scripturarum, naſceretur nobis aliquid quod docta Græcia non haberet. And afterwards, Si quaſi extrema Manus Operi tuo induceretur; nihil pulchrius, *nihil doctius, nihil dulcius, nihil quæ Latinius tuis haberemus Voluminibus. PAULINUS, a Man of Learning, in eſteem in the Court of Theodoſius, the Younger, was reſpected by the Empreſs Eudoxia for his Wit and Knowledge, ſhe her ſelf being alſo Learned. One day that Princeſs having received a Large Apple from Theodoſius, gave it to Paulinus, who (not knowing whence ſhe had it) gave it again to the Emperor; whereupon that Prince asked Eudoxia, what ſhe had done with the Fruit? ſhe made anſwer, ſhe had eaten it. But Theodoſius, ſhewing it to her, reproached her, with being unjuſt to him; and his Jealouſie broke forth againſt Paulinus, whom he put to death in the year 440. and put away Eudoxia, who betook her ſelf to a religious Life. Du Pin in Vit. Eudox. ex Oroſ.

PAULUS (Diaconus) a Cardinal of the Church of Rome, who according to Martinus Polonus, wrote the Lives of the Popes, but the Age he liv'd in is uncertain. See Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat. There was another of this Name, of Merida in Spain, who was much eſteem'd in the beginning of the VIIth. Century. There was likewiſe one Paulus Diaconus of Naples, who liv'd in the Reign of Charlemaign, and publiſh'd ſeveral Tracts. Sigebert in Catal. cap. 69. Gandavens. cap. 8*th.*

PAULUS VENETUS, was born at Udina in Frioli, was a Monk of the Order of S. Auſtin, and liv'd in the XVth. Century. He was counted one of the beſt Philoſophers and Divines of his Time, and wrote a Book againſt the Jews, Sermons, and ſeveral Philoſophical Tracts. *Trithem. de Script. Eccl. Spondan. A. PAULUTIUS (Anafeſtus) firſt Doge of Venice. That Republick was governed firſt of all by Tribunes that were yearly choſen, and which continued for two hundred years. But about 697 the Venetians choſe a Duke which was Paulutius, and who was ſucceeded by two other, after whom the Government of the Republick was given to the Generals of the Army, whoſe Power laſted but for one year. But about ſix years after they choſe Dukes as before, and it ſtill ſo continues. Hornius Orb Imp.

PAUSALIPPE, a vaſt Rock in the Road between Naples and Puzzoli, thro' which there is a Paſſage cut 20 foot broad and 20 high, where it is loweſt, and 440 paces long, as Dr. Burnet aſſures us. The Stone was imployed for building, which perhaps was the firſt Cauſe of making this Cave, though it was afterwards imployed as a Paſſage. It's mentioned alſo by Mr. Sands.

PAUSANIAS, King of Lacedæmonia, with Lyſander, were both ſent againſt thoſe of Athens, Corinth, and Argos, leagued againſt the Spartans; but the laſt having been killed in the Battle, in the 339th. year of Rome, Pauſanias, fearing the Reſentment of his Subjects, retired to Tegæa, where he quickly died, having ruled fourteen years.

PAUSANIAS, King of Macedonia, ſucceeded Amyntas II. in the 3663 year of the World, and reigned one year. Vide MACEDONIA.

PAUSANIAS, General of the Lacedæmonians, a great Man, but his Life ſtrangely mixed. For if his Vertues acquired him much glory, his Vices did as much obſcure it. His Valour at Platea, where he was General with Ariſtides, did very eminently appear, defeating Mardonius in the 275 year of Rome; but this Succeſs made him ſo inſolent that he became unſupportable, eſpecially after he had overcome the Perſians by Sea, and taken Byzantium from them; he ſet at Liberty the principal Priſoners without ranſom, and ſent word to Xerxes, that if he would give him his Daughter in Marriage, he would make him Maſter of all Greece. The King promiſed him his Deſire; but the Ephori began to miſtruſt Pauſanias, who continued theſe Practices though not long; for one of his Letters coming to be intercepted, and he fearing to be ſeized, withdrew into Minerva's Temple, where he was put to death 277 years after the Building of Rome. Cornelius Nepos in his Life. Thucydides. Diodorus. Plutarch, &c.

PAUSANIAS, a Grammarian of Cæſarea in Cappadocia, lived in the ſecond Century, in the Reign of Antoninus Pius, was the Diſciple of Herod of Athens, and lived a long time in Greece, and afterwards at Rome, where he died very old. He writ a Deſcription of Greece in ten Books which are ſtill extant. Julius Cæſar Scaliger treats him as an Impoſtor. But unjuſtly, as Voſſius obſerves. *Sylburgius in Not. ad Pauſ. PAUSANIAS or PAUSIAS of Sicyone, an ancient Painter, the Diſciple of Pamphilus, lived about the 170 Olympiad, in the 404 year of Rome, and three hundred and fifty years before the Chriſtian Calculation; he was the firſt that began to paint Ceilings and the Roofs of Palaces. He had ſo great a Love for Glycerium, the Noſegay-maker, that he drew her in his Paſſion making up a Garland of Flowers. That Picture was ſo much valued, that Lucullus gave two Talents for a Copy of it, in Athens. Horace. Pliny. l 21. c. 2. Varro, l. 3. de R. R. &c.

PAUSON, an able Painter of old, whoſe Poverty made way for the Proverb, Pauſone Mendicior. He had ſo little Fortune, that he was reduced to work for the Comedians and make Decorations for their Theatre. Having had Orders from a certain Perſon to paint him an Horſe tumbling, Pauſon prepared him one a running, which not preſently pleaſing this Curioſo, he turn'd the Picture upſide down, to let him ſee what he had required of him.

PAZ, a City of South America, in Peru, ſtands upon the River Cagana, between the Mountains of Braſil, which lie to the Eaſt, and the Lake of Titiaca to the Weſt.

PAZZI (Angelo) of Rimini, a Lawyer and Hiſtorian in the Sixteenth Age, employed by the Venetians to adminiſter Juſtice in ſeveral of their Cities, as Fadua, Verona, Bergamo, and Breſcia. He publiſhed a Volume of Conſultations, an Hiſtory of the War maintained by the Venetians againſt Philip Viſconti, and Francis Sforza, Dukes of Milan, until the Truce in 1441; and died aged 81 Years. Of this Family came that famous Magdalene Pazzi, a religious Carmelite, who died at Florence, in 1607, and was beatified by Pope Urban VIIIth. and canonized by Pope Clement IXth, in the Year 1669. Her Life has been writ in Italian, and tranſlated into French, and printed by Cramoiſi in 1670. Doctor Smith hath rendred it into Engliſh in 1687: and endeavoured to demonſtrate, that there was nothing but what was natural in her Miracles. *Machiavel Hiſt. PEAK, the Peak of Derbyſhire is ſeated amongſt the Mountains in the North-weſt parts of this County, and noted for three things; firſt, its Quarries; ſecondly, its Lead; and, thirdly, its wonderful Caves. As to its Lead, See DERBYSHIRE. The Caves are known by the Names of Devils-arſe, Elden-hole, and Pools-hole, all three of a vaſt height, length, and depth. From the firſt iſſues out a Water ſaid to ebb and flow four times in an hour, and to keep its juſt Tides; noted beſides for the ſtrange Irregularities of the Rocks within. Elden-hole is ſpacious, but has a low and narrow Entrance. The Waters which trickle down from the Top of it do preſently congeal into Icicles. We may add to theſe, Buxton Wells, where, out of the ſame Rock, in the compaſs of eight or nine Yards, riſe nine ſeveral medicinal Springs, eight of which are warm, the ninth very cold.

PEERS of France, Officers of that Crown, and chief Councellors of the Parliament of Paris, which is therefore called the Court of Peers. Anciently there were but twelve, ſix Eccleſiaſticks, viz. the Archbiſhop of Rheims, Biſhops of Langres and Laon, Dukes and Peers, and the Biſhops of Beauvais, Noyons, and Chalons ſur Marne, Counts and Peers. Then the ſix Laicks, viz. the Dukes of Burgundy, Normandy, and Guienne, the Counts of Flanders, Tholouſe, and Champagne. Some aſcribe their Inſtitution to Charlemagne, ſome to Hugh Capet, and others to Louis the younger, or rather to Robert the Sage, as Favin. And it's probable that the ſaid Prince deſigned to engage his Grandees to him by that Magnificent Title, as if they were his Equals. They were inſtituted to aſſiſt the King at his coming to the Crown, in judging of Fiefs and Differences among Vaſſals, to adviſe him in important Affairs and ſerve him in the War. They were all preſent at the Coronation of Philip Auguſtus, 1179, the greateſt Solemnity mentioned in the French Hiſtory; and according to their Dignity carried the ſeveral Regalia, as Crown, Sword, Spurrs, &c. The firſt Judgment of Note given by the Peers was An. 1202, againſt John without Land (as the French call him) King of England, Duke of Normandy, and one of their own Number; which is ſince increaſed to about 137, ſome of which are again re-united to the Crown. Lewis the XIVth. has created above 30. Favin.

PEGASUS, a winged Horſe, which the Poets have repreſented to us as the Son of Neptune, from the print of whoſe Hoof ſprung the Fountain Hippocrene. Bellerophon mounted on him in order to fight with Chimæra, and was afterwards placed among the Stars. But in reality this Pegaſus was the Name of Bellerophon's Ship, which has been the Ground of all the Fable. Others ſay Pegaſus ſprung from Meduſa's Blood that ran from her Body when Perſeus cut off her Head. Bochart. 1. P. de Anima, l. 2. c. 6. hath very ingeniouſly conjectured that Pegaſus was a Phœnician word, which ſignified a bridled Horſe, for that Paſgus in that Language was as much as to ſay, An Horſe with a Bit in his Mouth. And what yet farther clearly confirms this Conjecture is, that in the ſame Tongue Paras ſignifies a Knight, and from thence ſprung the Name and Fable of Perſeus, to whom was attributed winged Feet, as to Mercury, becauſe of the Swiftneſs of his Horſes.

PEGU, a Kingdom of Aſia, in the Peninſula of Indus, beyond the Ganges, was formerly very conſiderable, comprehending two Empires and 26 Kingdoms. But for ſome time paſt has only conſiſted of one or two, as having often been ruined by the Kings of Aracan, Brama, and Tangu, and particularly by that of Siam; a white Elephant having been the Occaſion of the War. It's ſaid that in 1661, the Tartars having conquered China, puſhed on their Conqueſts as far as Pegu, which belongs now to the King of Ava. It's a fertile Country, and much frequented by the Merchants of Europe. The capital City is Pegu, ſtanding upon a River of the ſame Name, which denominates alſo the whole Kingdom, and falls into the Gulf of Bengale. This City is divided into the new and old. The King keeps his Court in the new City, and the Citizens dwell in the old. The Houſes of this City are built of Wood, and covered with Tiles. The Streets ſtraight as a Line, and generally ſo broad that ten or twelve Men may ride a-breaſt through them, and are planted on both Sides with Indian Nuts. The Suburbs are very large. The Houſes built with Reeds, and covered with Leaves, which renders them very ſubject to Fire. The Ditch round its Wall is full of Water, wherein Crocodiles are bred, in order to hinder the Enemies from paſſing over it to ſurprize the Town. The King's Palace ſtands in the midſt of Pegu, and is fortified like a Caſtle. All things there are very rich and magnificent. The King's Apartment is painted of an azure Colour, has Foliages of Gold, and enriched with a vaſt number of precious Stones, that glitter moſt gloriouſly on all Sides. In this ſame Palace is a Varelle or Moſque full of Pagods, that is, of Idols, made of maſſy Gold and Silver, crowned with precious Stones, and adorned with Chains of Diamonds of an ineſtimable Value. All theſe Statues were put there by the King of Pegu, after the famous Victory obtained in 1568 over the King of Siam, in the War that was occaſioned by a white Elephant. For he underſtanding that the King of Siam had two white Elephants, he ſent to deſire him, by his Embaſſadors, to ſell him one, offering to pay him what Price he pleaſed. But he could not obtain his Deſire. To be revenged, he entered into the Kingdom of Siam with a potent Army, and took the capital City; which put the King into ſuch a Conſternation leſt he ſhould fall into the hands of his Enemy, that he poiſoned himſelf; ſince which time the Kings of Siam acknowledged the Sovereignty of the Kings of Pegu. But Raja Hapi, endeavouring to free himſelf from this Subjection about the year 1620, died at the Siege of Aracan. Pegu belongs now to the King of Ava, and the Frontiers of Pegu and Siam have been ſo much ruined by continual Wars, that theſe two Kings have been conſtrained to make a Peace, which they violate not, but by ſome ſhort Inroads they make with a flying Camp of twenty or thirty thouſand Men in the beſt Seaſon of the year. The People of Pegu are Pagans, excepting ſome who having made Alliance with the Portugueſe, have alſo embraced their Religion. Theſe Pagans believe that God is Author of all the Good that befals Men; but that he leaves the Diſpoſal of all Evil to a wicked Angel. Wherefore they have a greater Veneration for the Devil than they have for God. Their Prieſts are called Talapoi, who live only upon Alms; they highly exclaim againſt the Offerings made by the Peguians to the Devil; but they cannot aboliſh that Impiety. In 1567 the King of Pegu beſieged Siam with 1400000 Men, and took it after one and twenty Months. He had at that time twenty ſix crowned Kings his Vaſſals, and vaſt Treaſures of Gold, Silver and precious Stones. The Commodities of this Country are Benjamin, Long-pepper, Lacca, Rice, Wine, Sugar, &c. Hoffman ſays, that the Natives of Pegu have this particular Cuſtom: When any Strangers come to Traffick there, they ask what Stay they intend to make, and bring them ſeveral marriageable young Women, to chuſe which they pleaſe. If they like any, they agree for a certain Sum of Money with their Friend, that they may lie with and ſerve them whilſt they ſtay in the Country. At their Departure they pay down the Money, and the Women return to their Parents never the worſe look'd upon. And if they happen afterwards to marry, let their Husbands be of what Quality ſoever, if the Stranger returns into the Country, they come and live with him again, and when he departs into his Country, go back to their Husbands. Theſe Inhabitants of Pegu are ſaid to be deſcended from the baniſhed Jews condemned by Solomon to the Mines of Ophir. Mandeſlo. Tom. 2. d'Olearius.

PEIRESC, or Nicholas Claude Fabri, Lord of Peireſc, Councellor in the Parliament of Provence, one of the fineſt Wits of that Age, was the Son of Renaud Fabri, Sieur of Bongencier, &c. and of Margaret de Bompar, born in 1510. He ſtudied at Aix, Avignon, Tournon, and afterwards in Italy, and became well skilled in all ſorts of Sciences, eſpecially in the Knowledge of Antiquity, ſo that there was nothing curious he knew not. No one more affected to Learning, and none cultivated it with better Succeſs and greater Care than he. He died at Aix, June 24. 1637. The Roman Academy did him extraordinary Honours, and made his Funeral Sermon, whereat were ſeveral Cardinals, and all the Learned of Rome. His Elegy was made in above forty Languages, which we have in a Volume entitled, Pandegloſſia, ſive Generis humani leſſus in funere delicii ſui. Gaſſendus writ his Life, which the Curious may conſult. Divers Authors make mention of it alſo; as Bouche, Hiſt. de Provence. Pitton, Hiſt. de la Ville d'Aix, &c.

PELAGIUS I. Pope of that Name, a Roman, ſucceeded Vigilius, whoſe Archdeacon he had been, and Nuncio in the Eaſt, was elected April 16. in the year 555. and the Emperor Juſtinian, who loved him, and would have raiſed him to the Popedom even in the Life-time of his Predeceſſor, had a great ſhare therein. This Pope was accuſed of having contributed to the Death of Vigilius; but he cleared himſelf before all the World by Oath upon the Goſpel. He laboured much to have the Fifth Council received, and the Oppoſition made by the Biſhop of Aquileia cauſed a very long Schiſm in the Church. This Pope beſtowed the Pallium upon Sapundus of Arls. He died March 2. 559. Anaſtaſius, in Pelag. Baronius, in Annal.

PELAGIUS II. a Roman, was choſen after Bennet I. the 10th. of November, in the year 577. He was the Son of Wingil, the Goth. His Popedom happened in a very miſerable time; for the Lombards on the one hand ravaged Italy; and the Schiſm on the other ſide ſeparated from that Church the Biſhop of Iſtria and ſeveral other Prelates. Pelagius oppoſed John, Biſhop of Conſtantinople, who in a Council had taken upon him the Title of Oecumenical Biſhop. He died of the Plague, February 7th. 590, after he had reigned Pope Twelve Years, two Months and twenty ſeven Days. He had made his Houſe an Hoſpital for the Entertainment of the Poor, and built alſo a very magnificent Church, which he called S. Laurence. Gregory the Great ſucceeded him. We have ten of his Epiſtles yet left us. Anaſtaſius, Du Cheſne, &c. in his Life. Baronius, An. Chr. 577. It's convenient to take notice here, that there was one Pelagius a Deacon of the Church of Rome under Agapet, Vigilius, and Sylveſter, and John, Sub-deacon of the ſame Church, who have tranſlated out of Greek into Latin the Lives of the Fathers of the Deſart. The Learned think that this Pelagius was the firſt Pope of that Name, for that he was well skilled in the Greek Tongue; and that having been a Legate in the Eaſt, he might have met with that Manuſcript in Greek whereof Photius ſpeaks, and afterwards turned it into Latin. This John, the Deacon, is alſo believed to be John III. that ſucceeded Pelagius I. Photius Bibl. 138. Sigebert, in Cat. l. 117, & 118. *Voſſius, de Hiſt. PELAGIUS, firſt King of Leon, which ſome have ſurnamed The Saint, and others will have to be deſcended from the ancient Wiſigoths, lived in the VIIIth. Age. He for ſome time ſubmitted himſelf to the Dominion of the Saracens; but being ill uſed, he reſolved to ſhake off the Yoke of ſo barbarous a Tyranny. To which purpoſe he put himſelf at the head of the Chriſtians that had taken refuge in the Mountains of Aſturia; and having been declared King, he put his Troops in ſo good a poſture, that he overcame the Moors in one Battle, and laid the Firſt Foundations of the Kingdom of the Aſturii, Leon, and Oviedo, about the year 717, and reigned with the ſame good Fortune till 736 or 737. Mariana, Hiſt. Hiſp. Vaſee, in Chron.

PELAGIUS, Biſhop of Oviedo in Spain, lived in the XIIth. Age, compoſed a Hiſtory from Weremond II. till Alphonſo VIII. which Sandovall got printed in 1634. Vaſee, cap. 4. Le Mire, &c.

PELAGIUS, an Hereſiarch. Moreri gives this account of him. He was, ſays he, a Native of Great Britain, and according to ſome a Scotchman. S. Proſper calls him, The Britiſh Serpent. He embraced a Monaſtick Life in his Youth, and for ſome Years lived devoutly, if we believe S. Auguſtin and S. John Chryſoſtom, who wept betterly when he heard of his Apoſtaſie. But Iſidorus of Peluſium, and S. Jerom do not ſpeak ſo advantageouſly of him. So far is certain, He had a ſubtil and quick Wit, but Vanity and an ill uſe of Philoſophy engaged him in Errors. He maintained, That it was not only poſſible that Men could become impeccable in this Life; but affirmed, That ſeveral had actually attained that degree of Perfection, which is much the ſame with the Apathy or Exemption from Paſſion, which the Stoicks attributed to their Wiſe Men. He alſo denied the Grace of Jeſus Chriſt; and held, That by the natural Force of our Free-will we can work out our Salvation and acquire Bliſs. He was taken notice of for theſe Opinions in the Eaſt about 405, and afterwards at Rome, whence he parted in 410, when that City was plundred by the Goths; and went into Africa accompanied by his Diſciple, Cœleſtius; afterwards into Palæſtina, where his Letter to Demetrias, and his Book upon Nature, ſhewed clearly what he was. Whereupon being cited before an Aſſembly of Biſhops at Dioſpolis in Palæſtina, he manag'd his Buſineſs ſo well, that he deceiv'd them by his equivocal Anſwers and affected Submiſſions. And to be revenged, raiſed a Perſecution againſt S. Jerom, who was the firſt that wrote againſt him; and having publiſhed four Books of Free-will, thought to ſurprize S. Auguſtin. The Councils of Africa condemned his Tenets; the Popes, Innocent, Zoſimus, and Cœleſtine, anathematiz'd him, and the Emperor Honorius, by a Solemn Edict, baniſh'd him and his Adherents, out of Rome; whereupon he retired into his own Country, where S. Germain of Auxerre and S. Loup of Troy refuted his Errors. Beſides the above mentioned Errors, he denied Original-Sin, and held, That it deſcended to the Poſterity of Adam not by Propagation, but only by Imitation; whence he concluded, That the Children which died unbaptized, would be ſaved. He alſo maintained, That Grace is given to our Merits, and that they deſerve it. The Diſciples of this Hereſiarch, called Pelagians, were condemned in divers Synods, and at laſt in the Council of Epheſus. Their Error, which was flattering to Nature, took much with a great many; and the Pride of Man, who eaſily believes what ſuits his Vanity, renewed it ſeveral times. S. Auguſtin was choſen by the Councils of Africa to write againſt theſe Errors, which he did in his Books Of Remiſſion of Sins, Of the Grace of Jeſus Chriſt, Original Sin, and, His Treatiſes againſt Julian, S. Proſper, Baronius, Bellarmin, Sandere, Godeau. M. Le Clerc adds, That there is reaſon to doubt whether the Pelagius mentioned by S. Chryſoſtom and Iſidorus, be the ſame with him ſpoken of here, and adviſes the Curious to conſult the Hiſtory of the Pelagians and Semipelagians, in the IIId. Tome of P. Petau, Theological Dogms, or Voſſius and P. Noris on Auguſtine, who wrote a ſmall Volume in folio upon the Hiſtory of Pelagius, printed at Padua and Lyons. Spanheim adds, That ſcarce any but Latin Authors make mention of this Hereſie; That Pelagius, alias Morgan, was a Scotch or Welſhman. He agrees with Auguſtin, That he was a Man of a moſt accute Wit, great Eloquence, and well eſteem'd of for his Piety by many; That this Hereſie ſprung up in the beginning of the Vth. Century, and that he patronized his Errors with the Authority of Origen, Rufinus and his own Philoſophy. His principal Opinions, beſides the above-mentioned, were, That Adam was mortal by Nature and Condition before his Fall; That Sin was not the Cauſe of Death; That our Being, as Men, is from God; but our being Juſt, is from our Selves; That there were three ways of Salvation, viz. By the Law of Nature, Law of Moſes, and Law of Chriſt; That the Works of the Heathen were truly good and acceptable to God, though performed without the Aſſiſtance of Grace. He confounded Grace with the Power of Nature, and extended it to the revealed Will of God, with a certain inward Illumination of the Mind, which was given for a Help; but he was altogether ignorant of the Neceſſity of preventing, efficacious, and co-operating Grace, for the moving our Heart and Will. He held that Peace and Juſtification proceeded from our own Merits, according as we made good uſe of our Free-will, and endeavoured to keep the Commandments of God; and that it was not given through mere Grace, or by Faith in Chriſt; That the Cauſe of Predeſtination to Grace, and Glory, was the Fore-ſight of Good-works and Perſeverance in them from a right uſe of Free-will, the Grace of Apoſtleſhip excepted; That there was no Predeſtination to Death, but that God had only the Foreknowledge of Sins. His other Opinions of leſs note were; That Oaths were unlawful, and that rich Men cou'd not be ſav'd. Dr. Cave, in his Hiſt. Litt. ſays poſitively that he was a Welſh Man, but denies that he was ever Abbot of Bangor, or that he had two thouſand Monks under his Government, that he was baniſhed, or that he was Scholar of Cambridge, as Balæus and others write. A great many Authors have writ the Hiſtory of Pelagianiſm, both Proteſtants and Papiſts, among the former are the famous Archbiſhop Uſher and Ger. J. Voſſius, amongſt the latter are the famous Janſenius, of Ypres, an Enemy to his Doctrine, and Natalis Alexander, an Enemy to Janſenius. The moſt remarkable of Pelagius's Writings are fourteen Books of Expoſitions on the Epiſtles of Saint Paul, which are by ſome aſcribed to S. Jerom; but Archbiſhop Uſher thinks they are a Mixture of divers Authors. Yet Gardiner ſays, that they are wholly owing to Pelagius, but purged from his heretical Opinions by Caſſiodorus. His other Writings are Epiſtola ad Demetriadem, de Virginitate, in 413, and Libellus Fidei, ad Innocentium Papam, in 417. The Semipelagians, or Maſſilienſes, were thoſe who endeavoured to find a medium betwixt the Pelagians and the Orthodox; they had their firſt Riſe in France, about 430. Their principal Favourers were Caſſianus, a Diſciple of Chryſoſtom, Fauſtus, Abbot of Lyre, Vincentius, Biſhop of the ſame, Gennadius, Presbyter of Marſeilles, Honoratus, Biſhop of the ſame, and Hilarius of Arles. Their Agreement with the Pelagians was in the Power of Free-will, at leaſt as to the beginning of Faith and Converſion, and to the Co-operation of God and Man, Grace and Nature, as to Predeſtination, from Foreknowledge and univerſal Grace and the poſſibility of the Apoſtaſie of the Saints. Some of them did alſo mollifie thoſe Opinions, and maintained only the Predeſtination of Infants from a Foreknowledge of the Life they would lead. The great Oppoſers of this Doctrine were Auguſtin, Pope Cœleſtine, Proſper Aquitanicus, Fulgentius, Primaſius, Lupus Tricaſinus, Cæſarius Arelatenſis, &c. Beſides ſeveral Synods and Biſhops of Rome, Hormiſda, Fælix the IVth. &c. The original of the Predeſtinarian Hereſie in this Age is denied by Janſenius and others as well as Proteſtants, and looked upon as a Fiction of the Semipelagians.

PELAGIUS, a Cardinal, was, in 1221, ſent by Pope Honorius the IIId. as Legate in the Chriſtian Army commanded by John de Brienne, King of Jeruſalem; but he was ſo opinionative, that, contrary to the King's Sentiments, he engaged him to undertake the Siege of Grand Cairo with an Army of ſeventy thouſand Men. The Souldan of Egypt made himſelf Maſter of all the Paſſes, and cut off their Proviſions, inſomuch, that being ſurprized with an extraordinary overflowing of the Nile, which incommoded them very much, the Chriſtians were conſtrained to ſubmit to what Conditions the Sultan was pleaſed to grant them, which was, That they ſhould deliver him Damieta, Acre and Tyre, he giving them that part of our Saviour's Croſs which he had taken away from Jeruſalem. The Peace being ſigned and concluded, he freely ſent them all ſorts of Proviſions, and Ships to tranſport them wherever they pleaſed, with his Son in Hoſtage for the Performance of his word. In this Condition it was that the greateſt part of them took their way to Italy under the Conduct of King John, accompanied by Pelagius, who repented at leaſure that he had not followed the Sentiments of that Prince. Paul. Æmylius, Nauclere, Boſius upon the Year 1221.

PELASGI, This was the Name of the ancient Inhabitants of Greece, who were the Nomades, that is to ſay, Shepherds, changing their Habitations, from the Phœnician word Palout-Goi, a fugitive Nation, of which there remained ſome Knowledge among the Greeks.

PELASGUS, the Son of Jupiter and Niobe, according to Acuſilaus; ſaid by Heſiod to be born of the Earth, Autocthon, to intimate he was of the ancient Inhabitants of Greece. Apollodorus, lib. 2.

PELEGRINI, or le Pelerin, known by the Name of Camillus Pelegrinus, born at Capua, September 29th. 1598, was the Nephew of another Camillus Pelegrini, a Man of Learning, who acquired great Reputation by his Knowledge. He took Taſſo's part againſt the Academy of la Cruſca in Florence, and maintained that in Epicks this Poet excelled Arioſto. This Camillus Pelegrini the younger following the Example of his Family, made himſelf exquiſite in the Sciences, and at the Age of Twenty writ a Treatiſe of Poetry; and afterwards publiſhed other Works, as, Apparato all' Antichita di Capua. Hiſtoria Principum Longobardorum rum, &c. He died in the year 1664, aged 66. Lorenzo Craſſo, Elog. de Huom. Le Hen.

PELEUS, married Thetis, the Daughter of Neris, and had Achilles by her. He is not the ſame as Peleus, or Pelias, King of Theſſaly; for this was the Brother of Æſon, the Father of Jaſon, but unlawfully begot. He ſeized upon the Kingdom, in prejudice of his Nephew Jaſon. And that he might rid himſelf of this young Prince, who was very courageous, he adviſed him to undertake the Conqueſt of the Golden-fleece. Pelias ſuffered himſelf to be deluded by Medea, who promiſed to make him young again (as ſhe had done by Æſon, the Father of Jaſon) by drawing all the old Blood out of his Veins, and filling of them up with new. But Medea ſuffered him to die. Hygin. Fab. 24.

PELION, a Mountain of Theſſaly near unto Oſſa and Olympus, called now Petras, according to John Tzetzes. Dicearchus of Sicily, the Diſciple of Ariſtotle, found it to be higher than the other Mountains of Theſſaly 125 paces, as we are informed by Pliny, l. 2. c. 65.

PELLA, an ancient City of Cæloſyria, was a Biſhop's-See under the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, who did alſo reſide there for ſome years. This was the Place where the Chriſtians ſheltred themſelves during the Seige of Jeruſalem. It ſtands in the half Tribe of Manaſſeh, Eaſt of Jabeſh-Gilead; it was built by Seleucus, King of Syria, in honour of Alexander the Great, and therefore called by the Name of the Town where he was born. Euſeb. lib 3.

PELLA, a City of Macedonia, now called Zuchria, according to Le Noire, and named Janizza by Sophian. But this is not the ſame, for it was built by the Turks, this word in their Language ſignifying a New Town. Pella is yet in being, and they dig up Marble there. The Ancients affirm it to be the Place where Philip of Macedon and Alexander the Great were born; the laſt of which is called the Pellean by Juvenal, Sat. 10.

PALLETIER (James) a Doctor of Phyſick, and an Eminent Mathematician, was born at Mans, in Main, of a good Family, in 1517. La Croix du Maine ſays, he was a very excellent Latin and French Poet, a good Orator, Phyſician, and Grammarian, to which our Author agrees, affirming, That he had a great Stock of Sence, which he ſet off with a great deal of Spirit and Advantage. He wrote l'Art Poetique, La Savoye, a Poem. Oeuvres Poetiques. Dialogue d' l'Orthographe. L'Arithmetique. L'Algebra. Les Commentairs Latins ſur Euclide, &c. Poſſevin in Appar. Sac. La Croix du Maine Bibl. Franc. Sainte Marthe in Elog. Doct. Gall. Lib. 3. &c.

PELLEVE, or Pelve, (Nicholas) a Cardinal, Biſhop of Amiens, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Sens and Rheims, was the Son of Charles de Pelleve, Sieur of Juoy, Rebets, &c. of an ancient and conſiderable Family, and of Helene du Fay, born in the Caſtle of Jouy, on Monday Octob. 18. 1518. and bred up with much Care. He ſtudied the Law at Bourges where he afterward read in that Faculty, and was at laſt made Councellor in Parliament, and Maſter of Requeſts. He was in favour with the Cardinal of Lorrain, who contributed much to his riſing, and procured him the Biſhoprick of Amiens. Henry IId named him to that Dignity, and he poſſeſſed himſelf of it in 1553. He was ſent in 1559 to Scotland, and ſome Doctors of the Sorbonne joined with him, to endeavour to ſuppreſs the Reformation either by fair or foul means. Elizabeth, Queen of England, ſent Succours to the Scots; who beſieged the Fort of Leith, famous for the noble, warlike Exploits done there. Pelleve came into France to demand Succours; but a Peace was almoſt concluded at the ſame time. This was in the Reign of Francis IId. who died a little after. He followed the Cardinal of Lorrain to the Council of Trent, and finally, Pope Paul Vth. made him a Cardinal in 1560. This Prelate was then in France, and went not till two years after to Rome, where Gregory XIIIth gave him the Cardinal's-cap, and the Title of St. John and St. Paul. He lived twenty years after in Rome, and there ſerved the French Kings with a great deal of Ardency, as may be ſeen in the Letters of Paul de Foix, but he became after this one of the greateſt Sticklers in the League: wherefore Henry IIId. cauſed his Revenues to be ſeized in France, and by way of Rallery called him Cardinal le Pele. Then it was that he wanted the Relief of thoſe in the League, and the Bounty of the Popes who put him among the number of the poor Cardinals. However, after the death of the Cardinal of Lorrain, in 1588, he was made Archbiſhop of Rheims. He came to take Poſſeſſion of it in 1592, and in that City held an Aſſembly, together with the Princes of the Houſe of Lorrain, from thence returned to Paris; was made Preſident of the Council of the League, and of the Clergy in the States held there by that Party, where he died in 1594, a little after he had made his Submiſſion to Henry the Great, aged 76 years. The Writings of thoſe times give no very good Account of him. And the truth is, he was the moſt bigotted of any to that Party and to the Houſe of the Guiſes. Frizon. Gall. Purp. Sainte Marthe Gall. Chriſt. Auberi Hiſt. des Card.

PELLICAN (Conrade) a Proteſtant Miniſter of Ruſfach a Town in Alſatia, born January 8. 1478. The Name of his Family was Kurſiner, which he changed to that of Pellican. He was bred to Learning, and became a Franciſcan Friar in 1592. Preſently after his admiſſion he fell to hard ſtudy, and attained to great perfection in the Sciences. For, beſides Greek and Hebrew which he learn'd as it were of himſelf, he was well skilled in Philoſophy and Divinity, and taught with great Reputation. He held great Places and important Commiſſions in his Province, was ſent into France and Italy, to aſſiſt at the general Chapters held at Rhoan, afterwards at Rome and Lyons, and was made Guardian of the Convent of Bale in 1522. A little after he embraced the Opinions of Luther; and although at firſt he forbore to publiſh them for fear of trouble, he yet taught them in private, and favoured as much as in him lay all the Monks that had an Inclination that way. At laſt, in 1516, he quitted his religious Habit which he had wore thirty three years, and went to teach Hebrew at Zurick, where he married ſoon after, and lived till April 5 in the year 1556, the ſeventy eighth of his Age. He writ ſeveral things which have been printed in ſeven Volumes.

PELOPIDAS, a Theban Captain, was baniſhed his Country by a Faction of the Lacedæmonians who feared his Courage. In the mean time Phebidas, their General, took Cadmea, a Cittadel of the Thebans, in the 99th, Olympiad, and 373d. year of Rome. Pelopidas retook it four years after from them by a Stratagem; and put the Enemy to flight; and was preſent afterwards with Epaminondas, at the moſt noble Exploits during the Bæotick War, and eſpecially at the Battle of Leuctra in Bæotia in the year 383, and at the Seige of Sparta, in 385 of Rome. The Thebans ſent Pelopidas Embaſſador to Artaxerxes K. of Perſia, who honoured him very much. Having after this received ſome Affront from Alexander, Tyrant of Pheræ, he perſuaded the Thebans to make War upon him, wherein he was made General, and won the Battle; but was found ſlain among the Dead, in the three hundred and ninetieth year of Rome and the 104th. Olympiad. Xenophon, lib. 6. Diodor. lib. 15. Polybius, lib. 1. Cornelius Nepos, and Plutarch in his Life.

PELOPONNESUS, a Province and Peninſula of Greece, ſo called from Pelops, the Son of Tantalus; but is now called the Morea. It was anciently divided into eight parts, to wit, into Achaia, Arcadia, the Country of Argos, Corinth, Elis, Laconia, Meſſenia, and Sicyone; but now into the Dutchy of Clarence, which comprehends Achaia, Sicyonia and Corinth. The Belvedere, that was formerly Elis and Meſſenia. The Saccania, anciently the Country of Argos. And the Tzaconia, where were Laconia and Arcadia. This laſt part is alſo named, le Bras de Maino. The principal Cities are Coron, Clarence, Argos, Belvedere, formerly Elis; Maina, Lat. Leuctrum, Leontari, Megalopolis, Coranto, or Carto, Lat. Corinthus, Miſitra, Lat. Sparta, Patras and Napoli di Romania, &c. The Name of the War of Peloponneſus was formerly given to that waged by the People of this Peninſula, againſt the Athenians, which laſted from the 323d. year of Rome, in the 87th. Olympiad, till three hundred and fifty, when the City of Athens was taken. The Turks poſſeſſed themſelves of Peloponneſus in the Reign of Mahomet IId. but it has been re-conquered by the Venetians during the late War. Strabo, l. 3. Pliny, l. 4. Pauſanias, in Attic. Thucydides, Xenophon, Diodorus Siculus, &c. Vide LACEDÆMONIA.

PELOPS, The Son of Tantalus, King of Phrygia, paſſed to Elis, and marryed Hippodamia the Daughter of Oenomaus. He became ſo potent that all the Country that lies beyond the Iſthmus, and makes a conſiderable part of Greece, was called from his Name, and νῆσος which ſignifies an Iſland; Peloponneſus, that is, the Iſle of Pelops. The Poets feign that Tantalus ſerved-in his Son Pelops to the Table of the Gods. Ovid. l. 6. Metam.

PELORUM, a Promontory of Sicily, called Capo di Faro, or the Fare of Meſſina. It's thought this Name came to it from a Pilot which Hannibal killed there, thinking he had betrayed him. But afterwards, coming to know his Innocence, he erected a Statue for him there. Valerius Maximus, lib. 9. c. 8. ex. 4.

PELTAN (Theodorus Anthony) a Jeſuit, ſo call'd, becauſe he was born at Pelte, in the Dioceſs of Leige, was one of the firſt Religious of that Order. He was firſt Greek, then Hebrew, and afterwards, Divinity Profeſſor at Ingolſtadt, where he liv'd in Reputation, and died in 1584. His Works are De Peccato Originali Tract XVIII. De Satiſfactione Chriſti & Noſtra, & De Purgatorio, Lib. III. De Chriſtianorum Sepulturis, Exequiis & Anniverſariis. De Tribus Bonorum Operum generibus. Theologia Naturalis & Myſtica. De Sanctorum Origine, Cultu, & Invocatione, Reliquiis & Imaginibus. De Matrimonio. Paraphraſis ac Scholia in Proverbia Solomonis. Catena Græcorum Patrum in Proverbia, &c. He likewiſe tranſlated ſeveral of the Fathers into Latin. Valentin. Rotmar. de Profeſs. Acad. Ingolſt. Ribadeneira & Alegamb. Bibl. Script. Soc. Jeſ. &c.

PELU (Julius) Biſhop of Naumburg in Miſnia, died in 1554. He wrote Inſtitutio Hominis Chriſtiani. De Re-

Publica Germaniæ ſeu Imperio Conſtituendo, &c. Poſſevin in Appar. Sac. Miræus, &c.

PELUSIA, anciently Peluſium, now Belbeis, according to Gulielmus Tyrius and le Noire A City of Egypt, formerly an Archbiſhop's-See under the Patriarch of Alexandria. Damiata is built near the Ruins of this ancient City, and hath increaſed to its diſadvantage, whence it comes to paſs that it is often taken for Peluſium. Strabo, Pliny, Ptolemy, &c. The Hebrew Writers called it Sin or Sain. It was once 20 Stadia in Circuit, and The ſtrength of Egypt. It was ſeated on the Eaſtern-ſhore of the moſt Eaſterly Branch of the Nile, next to Judea and Syria. Sennacherib, King of Aſſyria, beſieging this Place, and hearing that the King of Æthiopia was coming with an Army to relieve it, retired about An. Mun. 3235. It was taken ſoon after by Nebuchadnezzar, and ran the ſame Fate with the Kingdom of Egypt in after times, till Antipater, Father of Herod the Great, took it, about 3895, fifty three years before Chriſt. It is probable that the old City was ruined by the Saracens, Anno Chriſti 640. And that Damiata, which afterward ſprang out of its Ruines, was built by them. The Writers of the Holy War called it alſo, Belbeis; for the Fate of which Place ſee DAMIATA, Ptol. Long. 63. 20. Lat. 31. 10. This City was finally laid in Aſhes by Amarick, King of Jeruſalem, Anno Chriſti, 1167, or 68, and never after rebuilt.

PELYS, a Town of Lower Hungary, Capital of a County of the ſame Name. It lies 15 m. S. W. from Vaccia, 26 from Alba Regalis, and 20 N. E. from Buda.

PEMBRIDGE, a Market Town of Stretford Hundred, in the Weſt of Herefordſhire, ſeated on the River Wye. It's a Place of good Antiquity, noted for its Horſe-fair, and ſtands 100 miles from London.

PEMBROKE, Lat. Pembrochium, the chief Place of Pembrokeſhire, in South Wales, ſtands upon a forked Arm of Milford-Haven, and in the beſt part of all the County. The Town conſiſts principally of one long Street, on a long narrow point of a Rock, and that but thinly inhabited. Yet here are two Churches within the Walls. The Earls hereof in former times were Count Palatines, and paſſed all things that concerned the County under the Seal of the Earldom. Thus it continued till the Reign of Henry VIIIth. when Wales, being incorporated into the Realm of England, the Authority of the great Lords there was diſſolved by Parliament, ſince which the Earls of Pembroke have been merely Titular; which Title is now enjoy'd by the Right Honourable Tho. Herbert, being devolved to him from his Anceſtor William Herbert, Lord Steward, created Earl of Pembroke, by King Edward VI. Anno 1551. It ſends one Burgeſs to Parliament, and is diſtant from London 107 miles.

PEMBROKESHIRE, Lat. Pembrochienſis Comitatus, is a Maritime County of South Wales, and that which runs furtheſt Weſtward of all the Country; it's called Pembrokeſhire from Pembroke, the chief place thereof, and is for the moſt part ſurrounded with the Sea, which incircles it Weſt and South and part of the Eaſt, where it alſo confines upon Carmarthenſhire, as it does Northward upon Cardiganſhire. From North to South it extends its ſelf about 26 miles, and from Eaſt to Weſt 20; the whole divided into ſeven Hundreds wherein are 145 Pariſhes and 8 Market-Towns, 16 Caſtles and 2 Block-houſes, anciently inhabited by the Dimetæ, and now in the Dioceſs of St. David's. Of all Counties of Wales this is counted the beſt, becauſe the leaſt Mountainous. About Tenby the Sea does ſo ſwarm with Fiſh, that the Welſh commonly call it Tenby y piſcoid, that is, Tenby plentiful of Fiſh. Weſtward is a Tract called Rowſe, peopled by Flemings in the Reign of Henry I. who being driven out of their Country by an Irruption of the Sea, were placed here to defend the Land given 'em againſt the troubleſome Welſh, wherein they did not fruſtrate that King's Expectation; for they ſo carried themſelves in his quarrel, and communicated ſo little with their Neighbours, that to this day their Poſterity do not ſpeak the Welſh Language. This part of the Country is otherwiſe called Little England beyond Wales. Here are a great many Coal-pits, and good Faulcons called Peregrines. In the South parts is Milford Haven, one of the fineſt Harbours in Europe. The County is noted, beſides, for being the birth-place of Henry the VII. St. Juſtinian, Girald. Cambrenſis. The Market-Towns are Pembroke, the Shire Town, St Davids, Fiſhgard, Haverford-weſt, Kilgarren, Narbarth, Newport and Tenby; beſides Pembroke there is only Haverford that ſends Members to Parliament beſides Knights of the Shire. *Camb. PENA (Francis) a Spaniard, born at Villaroya de Pinare, in the Dioceſs of Saragoſſa, was nominated by King Philip II. of Spain, for Auditor of the Rota; he was well enough skill'd in the Law, and acquir'd ſome Share of Reputation at Rome, where he died in 1612. This Man was, as Moreri obſerves, furiouſly fond of the Inquiſition, inſomuch that the Partiality of his Paſſion carry'd him ſometimes too far, as appears by two of his Tracts; the one written againſt the Abſolution, given by the French Clergy to Henry IV. and the ſecond againſt the famous Decree of the Parliament of Paris, againſt that lewd Aſſaſſin John Chaſtel. Janus Nicius Erythræus, Pinac. 1. Imag. Illuſt cap. 80. Nicholas Antonio Bibl. Script. Hiſp.

PENANCE, a puniſhment impoſed for ſins after Confeſſion. It was either ſecret or publick, as the Biſhop, or Prieſts with his leave judged proper for the Edification of Chriſtians. Several did publick penance without any bodies knowing for what ſins they did it; and others did penance privately for great offences, when the doing of it publickly might cauſe too much ſcandal. The time of Penance was longer or ſhorter, according to the different cuſtoms of the Churches, and we may yet ſee a vaſt difference among the Penitential Canons we have remaining; but the ancienteſt are uſually the ſevereſt. St Baſil Sets down two years for Theft, ſeven for Fornication, eleven for Perjury, fifteen for Adultery, twenty for Murther, and all the life for Apoſtacy. Thoſe who were ordered to publick penance addreſſed themſelves to the Arch-prieſt, or Prieſt-Penitentiary, who took their name in writing; afterwards, the firſt day of Lent, they preſented themſelves at the Door of the Church in poor and torn Apparel, for ſuch were the Mourning Habits of the Ancients; being entred into the Church, they receiv'd Aſhes upon their Heads by the Hands of the Prelate, and Hair-cloth upon their Bodies and then went out of the Church, the Doors being preſently ſhut after them. They uſually remain'd ſhut up weeping and groaning, unleſs on Feaſt-days that they preſented themſelves in the Church porch. Some time after they were admitted in to hear the Leſſons and Sermons with command to go out before Prayers. At the end of a certain term of time, they were allowed to pray with the Faithful, but lay all alone upon the Earth, and at length were ſuffered to pray ſtanding until the Offertory, when they went out; ſo that you ſee there were four ſorts of Penitents, The Weeping, the Hearers, thoſe that lay along, and thoſe that pray'd as the reſt did; but yet they were diſtinguiſh'd in another manner from the reſt of the Faithful, by placing of them on the left ſide of the Church. The time of Penance was divided into four parts, agreeable to the four conditions I have mentioned; for Example, he that committed wilful Murther was to be four years among the Weepers or Flentes; that is, to remain at the Church-door at the hours of Prayer, clad in Hair-cloth, with Aſhes upon his Head and unſhaven, and in that condition recommended himſelf to the prayers of the Faithful within; for the five following years he was to be among the number of Auditors, and came into the Church to hear the Sermons; he was afterwards placed among thoſe that lay all along the Earth at prayers for ſeven years; and at laſt paſs'd into the rank of Conſiſtants, or thoſe that pray'd ſtanding, till the term of twenty years was accompliſh'd, at which time he was admitted to partake of the Holy Sacrament; but this ſpace was often abridged by the Prelates, if they perceiv'd the Penitents deſerv'd ſome indulgence; but if they chanc'd to die before the courſe of their Penance was accompliſh'd they conceiv'd a good opinion of their Salvation, and ſaid Maſs for them. When they were re-admitted into Communion, they preſented themſelves at the Church-door, where the Prelate cauſed them to come in, and gave them ſolemn Abſolution, then allowed them to cut their Hair, lay aſide their Penitential Habit, and to live as the reſt of the Faithful did. Abbot of Fleury, Mæurs des Chriſtiens.

PENATES or LARES, were thoſe the Ancients conſider'd as their Houſhold-Gods, the name being given to the little Statues they had in their Houſes, to which they very often offered Sacrifices conſiſting of Wine and Incenſe. Dion d'Halicarnaſſ. lib. 1. Hiſt. Cicero, pro domo ſua. Cartari, in Imag. Deor. Vid. LARES.

PENDA, the third King of Mercia ſucceeded to Kearl An. 626, who had long withheld the Kingdom from him, being the Son of Wilba. His Reign prov'd fatal to no leſs than four Kings whom he ſlew in Battel; viz. Edwin and Oſwald two Kings of the Northumbers, and Sigebert and Acma, two Kings of the Eaſt Angles. At laſt, after a Reign of 30 Years he was ſlain himſelf in a Battle againſt Oſwy King of the Northumbers.

PENDA, the Fourth King of Mercia, and the firſt Chriſtian King of the Mercians, ſucceeded his Father Penda An. 656. His marrying Alfleda Daughter of Oſwy King of the Northumbers, occaſioned his Converſion, for Oſwy being a Chriſtian Prince refuſed to give him his Daughter, but upon condition he ſhould, with all his people, imbrace the Chriſtian Faith. Alfrid Son of Oſwy, who had Kyniburg, Penda's Siſter to Wife, did alſo incline him very much to his Converſion; ſo that, hearing willingly what was preached unto him concerning Reſurrection and Eternal Life, he was ſoon convinc'd of the truth of Chriſtianity, and upon his Conviction baptiz'd with all his Followers, whether he ſhould obtain the Virgin or no. All this while his Father Penda was alive, who for his princely Vertues had made him Prince of South Mercia; and 'tis obſervable, that tho a Heathen, he did not hinder any of his Kingdom to hear or believe the Goſpel, but rather reprov'd and diſcountenanc'd thoſe Profeſſors thereof whoſe Works did not anſwer to their Faith, condemning all Men that obey'd not that God in whom they choſe to believe. His Son Penda reign'd but three years, being ſlain on Eaſter-day by the Treachery of his Wife, whom he had married for a good Chriſtian; ſo that one would think they had exchang'd Religion, and that his Queen turn'd a Heathen when he turn'd Chriſtian.

PENDENNIS-CASTLE, ſtands upon a Hill of the ſame name in Cornwall, at the entrance of Falmouth Haven. It is one of the largeſt Caſtles now ſtanding in England.

PENDLE-HILL, in Lancaſhire, is very high, and on the top of it grows a Plant called Cloud'sberry, as if not very far from the Clouds; whenever its top is cover'd with a miſt, then it is a certain ſign of Rain.

PENELOPE, the Daughter of Icarus and Wife of Ulyſſes, to whom ſhe bore Telemachus. Her Husband being oblig'd to go to the Trojan War, was abſent for the ſpace of twenty years; in the mean time ſeveral great perſons, charmed with the Beauty of Penelope, would have made her believe, that Ulyſſes was dead, and entreated her to declare in their favour; which ſhe promiſed upon condition ſhe might have time allowed her to finiſh a piece of Work which ſhe had begun, and had it granted her; but ſhe, to delude them, was wont in the night time to undoe all ſhe had done by day, and by this ingenious Artifice wav'd the Importunity of her Lovers till her Husband returned. Homer in Odyſſes Ovid. Ep. 1. Bocace de Clar. Mulier.

PENEUS, now called Salampria, the moſt beautiful River of Theſſaly, which being encreaſed by the Ion, Pattiſus, and the Apidanus, runs between the Mountains of Oſſa and Olympus, and diſchargeth it ſelf into the Gulf of Theſſalonica. This River waters alſo the Valley of Tempe in Theſſaly, and is ſo famous in the Writings of the Poets, that they feign Daphne the Daughter of this River was transformed into a Lawrel-Tree. Doctor Brown, who ſaw it in 1669, ſays, The Stream is very clear, and that abundance of Bay-Trees grow on its Banks. Pliny ſaith, That it made the Sheep which drunk of its Waters Coal-black. Pliny. Strabo, &c. ſpeak of it, and Ovid l. 1. Met.

PENGAB or LAHOR, a Kingdom in India belonging to the Great Mogul. Its name imports five Waters, for that the Country is watered with five Rivers. Its Capital City is Lahor. Vid. LAHOR.

PENGICK, Lat. Penica, a City of Miſnia upon the River Muldaw, ſeven German miles Eaſt of Chemnitz, and ſeven South of Leipſick in Saxony.

PENIEL or PENUEL, an ancient City in the Tribe of Reuben, beyond the Brook of Jabbok, at the foot of Mount Lebanon, on the Frontiers of the Amorites. It took its name from Jacob's Viſion of an Angel who wreſtled with him, and that according to his own Interpretation, he had ſeen God face to face, Gen. 32. 30. Gideon broke down the Tower, and ſlew the Inhabitants of this City, becauſe they refuſed to give refreſhment to his Army, Judg. 8. 8. 17. but Jeroboam rebuilt it.

PENITENTIAL, a Collection of Canons that appointed the time and manner of Penance to be regularly impoſed for every ſin, and Forms of Prayer that ought to be uſed for the receiving of thoſe who entred into Penance, and reconciling Penitents by ſolemn Abſolution. The principal Works of this kind are the Penitentials of Theodore Archbiſhop of Canterbury, that of Bede, which ſome attribute to Egbert Archbiſhop of York, who lived at the ſame time; that of Rabanus Maurus Archbiſhop of Mayence, and the Roman Penitential. Doujat. Hiſtoire du droit Canon.

PENITENTS, the name of ſome devout perſons who formed ſeveral Fraternities, eſpecially in Italy, and make profeſſion of doing publick Penance at certain times in the Year. It's ſaid, This cuſtom was eſtabliſh'd in 1260 by an Hermit, who begun to preach in the City of Perugia in Italy, that the Inhabitants ſhould be buried under the ruines of their Houſes, which ſhould fall down upon them, if they appeaſed not the wrath of God by a ſudden Repentance. His Auditors, according to the Example of the Ninevites, cloathed themſelves in Sack cloth, and with Whips in their Hands went in proceſſion along the Streets, ſlaſhing their Shoulders in order to expiate their Sins. This kind of Penance was afterwards practis'd in ſome other Countries, and particularly in Hungary, during a raging peſtilence all over the Kingdom; but a little while after it gave place to a dangerous Sect called the Flagellans, who ran together in great companies, naked down to the Waſt, and laſh'd themſelves with Whips till the Blood guſh'd out, and declar'd, That this new Baptiſm of Blood (for ſo they called it) blotted out all their Sins, even thoſe that ſhould be committed afterwards. This Superſtition was aboliſhed, but at the ſame timeanother was approved, to wit the Fraternities of Penitents of different colours that are ſtill to be ſeen in Italy, in the Pope's Dominions, the Country of Avignon, Languedoc, and elſewhere, who make their proceſſions, but more eſpecially on Holy Thurſday, clad in Sackcloth with a Whip tied about their Waſt, which yet they make no uſe of, but for the Ceremonies ſake. Maimburg, Hiſtorie de la Ligue.

PENKRIDGE, a Market-Town of Cudleſton Hundred, about the middle of Staffordſhire, called Penkridge from the River Penk, upon which it is ſeated, with a Bridge over it, from whence it runs Northward into the Saw.

PENNA or CITTA DI PENNA, Lat. Penna S. Johannis, or Pinna in Veſtinis, a City of Italy in the Kingdom of Naples a Biſhop's See under Chieti or Theato; the Biſhoprick whereof hath been united to that of Atti. We have the Synodical Ordinances of Penna publiſh'd in 1585. Pliny ſpeaks of this City, and Silius Italicus, lib. 8.

PENNAFIEL or PENAFIEL, Lat. Penna fidelis, a City of Spain in Old-Caſtile, which ſtands near to the Duero within ſix Leagues of Valadolid, where a Council was held in 1302.

PENON DE VELEZ, a Fortreſs belonging to the King of Spain on the Coaſt of Barbary bewixt, Tetuan and Alcudia, 62 Engliſh miles from either. It ſtands between two Mountains on the edge of a fair Plain. The Inhabitants live by fiſhing and piracy, the Caſtle is built upon a Rock in the Sea.

PENRISE, a Market-Town of Swanſey Hundred in the S. W. of Glamorganſhire, 155 miles from London.

PENRITH, a Market-Town of note in Cumberland ſtands near the River Eden, which parts it from Weſtmorland. 'Tis large and well built, inhabited by a great many Tanners. This Town is 214 miles from London.

PENRYN, a Market and Borough Town of Kirrier Hundred in Cornwall. It lies upon a ſmall River which falls three miles off into the mouth of the Falc, and with it into the Channel. It's 219 miles from London.

PENSFORD, a Market Town of Chewe Hundred in the North of Somerſetſhire, 94 miles from London.

PENSYLVANIA, a Country lying upon the Continent of Northern America, from the 43d. to the 40th. Degree of the Northern Lat. The Propriety and Government of this Country was given by King Charles II. to William Pen, Eſq; in Conſideration of the Merit and Services of Sir William Pen his Father, as appears by his Majeſty's Grant, dated April the 2d. 1681. As to the Soil of the Country, though different, 'tis generally good: The Air is ſweet and clear, and the Waters wholeſome. The former part of the Winter is generally milder than in England; but from December to March, there are ſometimes ſharp Froſts, though for the moſt part accompany'd with a clear Sky. The Product of the Country in Vegetables, is the black Walnut, Cedar, Cypreſs, Cheſnut, Poplar, Gum-wood, Hickery, Saſſafras, Aſh, Beech, and Oak of divers ſorts. The Fruits growing in the Woods, are, the white and black Mulberry, Cheſnut, Wallnut, Plums, Strawberries, Cranberries, Hurtleberries, and Grapes of ſeveral Kinds, ſome of 'em little inferiour to the Frontiniack. The Artificial Product of the Country, is Wheat, Barley, Oats, Rye, Peaſe, and Beans, and almoſt all ſorts of Herbs and Roots that our Gardens in England uſually bring forth. The Living Creatures are, the Elk, as big as a ſmall Ox, Deer bigger than ours, Bever, Racoon, Rabbits, Squirrels, &c. The Land-Fowl, are Turkeys, of a very large ſize, Pheſants, Heath-Birds, Pidgeons, and Partridges in abundance. The Wild-Fowl is much of the ſame kind with ours, and as good. There is likewiſe ſtore of Fiſh in the Sea and Rivers. The Country affords ſeveral Plants conſiderable for Medicine, Beauty, and Scent. The Natives are generally Tall, and well Proportion'd, but of a ſwarthy Complexion. Their Temper is very Hoſpitable and Civil. They believe a God, and the Immortality of the Soul, affirming, that a Great King made 'em, who dwells in a Glorious Country to the Southward, and that the Souls of the Good ſhall go thither and live happily after Death. Their Government is Monarchical, and Hereditary, but the Succeſſion is govern'd by the Pedigree on the Mother's ſide; for Inſtance, The Children of the preſent Kings will not ſucceed, but their Brothers by the Mother, or the Male Children of their Siſters, for no Woman Inherits. The Engliſh, upon their ſettling there under Mr. Pen, purchas'd their Lands of the Indian Princes, who made a League with them. Thoſe that have a mind to be further inform'd concerning the Product and Cuſtoms of this Country, and the Improvement of the Plantation, may conſult the Account publiſh'd by Mr. Pen, in 1683. and inſerted in a Book, call'd, The Preſent State of his Majeſty's Iſles and Territories in America, Printed in the Year 1687. All that I ſhall add is, That the Planted Part of the Province is caſt into Six Counties, viz. Philadelphia, Buckingham, Cheſter, Newcaſtle, Kent, and Suſſex, containing, in 1683, about 4000 People. Philadelphia is the Metropolis of the Country.

PENTAPOLIS, that is to ſay, the Country of five Cities. This name was given to the Pentapolis of Syria, where were thoſe five infamous Cities Sodom, Gomorrah, Adma, Zeboim and Segor, burnt by fire from Heaven, for the Sins of the Inhabitants. Beſides this, there was alſo a Pentapolis in Libya, which comprehended Berenice, Arſinoe, Ptolemais, Cyrene and Apollonia ; and one in Italy, that took in Arimini. Piſauro, Ancona, Oſmo and Vocona.

PENTATEUCH, that is, five Volumes, being the name given by the Greeks to the five Books of Moſes.

PENTATHLON, an Exerciſe among the Greeks, which took in five ſorts of Plays or Combats, to wit, Running, Leaping, throwing of the Quoit, hurling of the Javelin, Boxing and Wreſtling. The Latins call it Quinquertium. There was a Reward propos'd for the Conquerors in each play, but he that won the Victory in the Pentathlon, receiv'd chiefly a Palm put into his Hand, and then the Herald publiſh'd his Name and Praiſes with a loud voice, and afterwards had a Crown beſtowed upon him of great value. Pauſanias, lib. 5. Pollux, l. 3. c. 30.

PENTECOST, a Feaſt celebrated by the Jews fifty days after the Paſſover, purſuant to God's command, as ſet down in the 23d Chapter of Leviticus ; this word comes from the Greek πεντεκοςὴ which ſignifies Fifty ; which day, among the Chriſtians, is that of the deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt upon the Apoſtles. It's believed the Houſe where the Holy Spirit deſcended upon them, was that of Mary, the Mother of Mark the Diſciple, and Companion of Paul and Barnabas. It was the place where Chriſt kept his laſt Paſſover, and inſtituted the Lord's Supper ; where he appear'd to his Diſciples on the day of his Reſurrection; and again eight days after, and where St. Peter came to find the Faithful aſſembled together after his going out of the Priſon, from which the Angel brought him. The Empreſs Helena built there the Church of S. Sion, which was the faireſt in Jeruſalem. And St. Jerom ſaith, The Pillar was ſet there to which our Lord was ty'd during his being ſcourg'd. The Moors ruin'd it in the Year 1460, and having been repair'd by the liberalities of Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, it was deſtroy'd a ſecond time by the ſame Infidels a few years after, inſomuch that there is nothing to be ſeen but ſome few Ruines of that ſtately Structure. Le Pere Giry, des Myſteres de l' Egliſe. The Jews call the Pentecoſt alſo the Feaſt of Weeks, becauſe it is kept at the ſeven Weeks end after Eaſter ; which, beſides in Scripture is called The day of Firſt-fruits, for that on that day they offered their Firſt-Fruits in the Temple. It's moreover term'd, The day of the Harveſt, for that they began then to cut down their Corn. The Jews celebrate this Feaſt for two days, as that of the Paſſover ; that is, they do no manner of Work or Buſineſs for that time. R. Leo de Modena reports, That it is a Tradition among the Jews, that the Law was given them on that day upon Mount Sinai, wherefore they uſe to adorn their Synagogues and Bedchambers, and alſo their Houſes with Roſes and Flowers made up into Crowns and Bundles. R. Leo de Modena. Cerem. Jud. p. 3. c. 4. Father Simon, in his Supplement to the Jewiſh Ceremonies, compares the Chriſtian Pentecoſt with the Jewiſh, and obſerves, that as God gave the Iſraelites the Law upon Mount Sinai, which appear'd all on Fire upon this Day ; ſo the Apoſtles receiv'd the New or Evangelical Law upon the ſame Day, being fill'd with the Holy Ghoſt, whoſe Deſcent upon 'em was accompany'd with a great Noiſe. He obſerves likewiſe, that the Solemnity of the Chriſtian Pentecoſt is kept in Honour of the Goſpel, as the Jewiſh was out of regard to the Law.

PENTECOSTARION, the Greeks give this name to one of their Eccleſiaſtical Books that contains the Office for the Church from Eaſter-Day till the eighth day after Pentecoſt, which is by them called the Sunday of all the Saints: And this Book has been thus called becauſe of the Pentecoſt. Leo Allat. Dans ſa. 1. diſſert. ſur les livres Eccleſiaſtiques des Grecs.

PENTHEUS, was a Prince of Thebes, who laugh'd at the Ceremonies uſed at the Feaſts conſecrated to Bacchus. This Deity willing to be reveng'd on him, tranſported Agave the Daughter of King Cadmus, and the Mother of this Pentheus with ſuch a fury, that being in company with the Menades, and taking him to be a Wild-Boar, ſhe ſlew him. Ovid.l. 3. Met.

PENTHESILEA, a Queen of the Amazons, ſucceeded Orithyia. She carried ſuccors to the Trojans, and after having given noble proofs of her Bravery, was kill'd by Achilles. Pliny ſaith, It was ſhe that invented the Battle-ax Pliny l. 7. c 56.

PENTLAND FIRTH, Lat. Mare pictícum, that part of the North-Sea which runs betwixt the County of Cathneſs in the North of Scotland, and the Iſlands of Orkney, being about 24 miles broad. The Tide here runs ſo ſtrong, that it carries over Skiffs or ſmall Ships in two hours time, tho there be no Wind. It's ſaid to take its name from the total Shipwrack of a Pictiſh Fleet, after they had been repulſed by the Inhabitants of Cathneſs on one ſide, and thoſe of Orkney on the other, the Veſſels being ſwallowed in Whirl-pools occaſioned here by the meeting of contrary Tides from the Deucalidon and German Sea, and the Rocks of the Iſlands which lie here thick, and repell this continually raging Sea with great force, whence the Orkney Men have a ſaying, That every Crag-Lugg makes a new Tide, which meet together with ſo much violence, even in the calmeſt Weather, as that the Water ſeems to reach the Clouds, and the whole Ocean looks as cover'd with Froth ; but in a ſtorm there is nothing ſo dreadful to behold, the very Fiſh and Sea-Calves being often daſh'd to pieces againſt the Rocks ; but there are two certain times when this tempeſtuous Firth may be ſafely paſs'd, viz at Ebb or high Tide, tho then alſo there are ſome ſmall Whirls dangerous for little Veſſels, but the Mariners are ſo well acquainted with them, that they either avoid them, or provide ſomething to throw into them, and while that is ſinking they paſs them without any hazard. Buch. Gordon. Theat. Scotiæ.

PENZANCE, a Market-Town and Haven of Penwith Hundred in the N. E. parts of Cornwall. It ſtands on the Weſt ſide of Mounts Bay over againſt Market Jew, on the other ſide, and near unto it you will find the Main Amber of which in its proper place It's 201 miles from London.

PEPIN, ſurnamed the Short or Little, King of France, the firſt of the ſecond Race of the French Monarchs, was the Son of Charles Martell, and Brother of Carloman. The two Brothers divided the Government between them after the death of their Father, but Carloman retiring afterwards into Italy, Pepin remain'd ſole manager, and carried his deſign farther ; and in ſhort, ſeeing that all people concurr'd to ſet the Crown upon his Head, and to dethrone Childerick III. who was a Prince without Wit or Courage, he called a Parliament that he might have their conſent, which was unanimouſly granted him, and in the mean time deputed Bouchard Biſhop of Virtzburg, and Fulrad Abbot of St. Denys, and Chaplain to the Prince, to go to Rome, in order to be inform'd of Pope Zachary, Who was the worthieſt to be on the Throne, he who took no care of the Affairs of the Kingdom, or he who by his Prudence and Valour govern'd it wiſely, and kept it from the Oppreſſions of the Enemy. Zachary, who ſtood in need of Pepin's Forces, fail'd not to declare in his favour. This anſwer being related in France, the Biſhops who where aſſembled at Soiſſons with Boniface Archbiſhop of Mayence, having the ſuffrage and univerſal conſent of the Grandees and People, Crown'd King Pepin on the firſt of May in 752. At the ſame time Childerick was depos'd, and afterwards put into a Monaſtery. After the performance of this Ceremony, the new King put a ſtop to the revolt of his Brother Griphon, and took Vannes, and ſubdued all that Country. Pope Stephen II. who ſucceeded Zachary, finding himſelf extreamly incommoded by the Lombards, had recourſe to Pepin, whom he came into France to ſee. The King receiv'd him at the Caſtle of Poictiers near Vitri in Parthois, and ſent him to the Abby of St. Denys ; and ſometime after this Pope anointed and crown'd him, with his two Sons Charles and Carloman, at Ferrieres, July 28. 754. Next year Pepin went into Italy, and having forc'd Aiſtulphus King of the Lombards, to give up all that he had taken from the Church of Rome, he returned into France, and ſent back Pope Stephen into Italy ; but the Lombards failing to keep their words, the King repaſs'd the Alps in 756, and conſtrained them to give all manner of ſatisfaction to the Pope of Rome ; being come back into France, he ſpent the reſt of his life in making War upon the Saxons, and upon Gaifre, or Waifer Duke of Aquitain; whom he defeated ſix or ſeven times, till the year 768, that this Prince being kill'd by his own Subjects, the King remain'd Maſter of all his Dominions. Some time after, having been aſſaulted with a Fever at Saintes, he was carried to Poictiers, to Tours and St. Denys, where he died of a kind of a Dropſie, the 24th of September, in the ſame Year, aged 54 ; having reigned after his Coronation by the Pope ſixteen Years, four Months, and twenty four days. Du Bouchet, orig. de la Maiſ. de France. S. Martha. l. 7. Hiſt. Geneal. de la Maiſon de Franc. &c.

PEPIN I. of that name King of Aquitain, was the ſecond Son of Lewis the Debonnaire, and of Ermengarda, made King of. Aquitain in 817, was afterwards head of the Conſpiracies againſt his Father in 830 and 33. He died December 13. or January, as ſome would have it, in the Year 838, and was buried in the Collegiate Church of St Radegonda in Poictiers.

PEPIN II. King of Aquitain, ſucceeded his Father in his Dominions ; he conducted ſome Troops to Lotharius I. his Uncle, and ſerv'd him at the Battle of Fontenay in Auxerrois June 25. in the Year 841, and was afterwards taken by Sanchus Count of Gaſcony, who ſent him to Charles the Bald his Uncle, who put him into a Monaſtery ; two years after which he found a way to eſcape, and join'd himſelf to the Normans, living according to their Faſhion, for he plunder'd Poictiers and ſeveral other places in 857, but the Aquitains fell upon him, and having made him Priſoner, deliver'd him to the French ; who condemn'd him as a Traytor to his Country, and to Chriſtianity, and ſo was put to death in 864. Les Annales de S. Bertin & de Fulde, Nitard. Reginon, &c.

PEPIN, King of Italy. was the Son of Charlemaign and Hildegarda his ſecond Wife, born in the Year 777. The King his Father carried him to Rome, where he was baptiz'd, and receiv'd the name of Carloman ; which Pope Adrian I. changed into that of Pepin, when crowning him King of the Lombards, April 15. on Eaſter-day, in the Year 781. He afterwards, on divers occaſions,gave proof of his Courage and Bravery. In 799 he beat the Huns or Avarois, and ſubdued Grimoald Duke of Beneventum, and died at Milan the 8th. of July, in the Year 810. Les Annales des S. Bertin, de Metz & de Fuldes.

PEPIN, ſurnamed the Fat, Mayor of the Palace in France, was the Son of Anchiſes, and Grandſon of S. Arnold, afterwards Biſhop of Metz. He began to govern in Auſtraſia, and was vanquiſh'd in the Year 681, by Ebroin ; but in 687 he defeated King Thierri, and acted his part ſo well, that he had all the Authority in the two Kingdoms, under Clovis III. Childebert and Dagobert III. and it muſt be confeſs'd, he was worthy of the Empire of the Franks. He gained ſeveral Battles againſt Berthairus in 691, Radbord Duke of Freezland in 707 ; Wiler Duke of Suabia, whom he defeated in 709, and in 712. He died December 16, in 714, in the Caſtle of Jopil upon the Meuſe, near unto Liege. He had had two Wives, Plectruda, by whom he had Drogon or Dreux of Champagne, Grimoald Mayor of the Palace, and Sylvinus a Monk ; and Alpaida the Mother of Charles Martell, and Childebrand the Head of the ſecond Race of the Kings of *France. PEPIN, ſurnamed De Landen, the place of his Birth, was the Son of Duke Carloman, and Grandſon of Charles Count of Hesbay, in the Country of Leige. He ſhared in the Sovereign Power with S. Arnold, Duke of Auſtraſia, under the Reign of Dagobert, and was afterwards Mayor of the Palace to King Sigebert. He married Itta, called in the Annals of Metz, Juberta, Daughter to Modoal, Biſhop of Metz, by whom he had Grimoald, who ſucceeded him in the Dignity of Mayor of the Palace, and who alſo would have his Son Childebert crowned, after the death of Sigebert King of Auſtraſia ; but Clovis II. put Grimoald and his Son to death. This ſame Pepin had alſo two Daughters, to wit, Begga, the Wife of Auſigiſus, the Father of Pepin the Fat, or de Herſtall, and Gertruda, Abbeſs and Foundreſs, together with her Mother Itta, of the Monaſtery of Nivelle. He died in the Year 647. Annales de Metz.

PEPUZIANS, Hereticks that came from the Montaniſts, whoſe Errors they followed, taking their name from a Town in Phrygia, called Pepuza, which they named Jeruſalem, whither they invited all Men to preſent themſelves. PEQUIN, PEKIN, or PECHELI, a Province of China, and one of the principal of that Kingdom, with a City of the ſame name, the Capital of the Kingdom. This Province hath that of Leaotum, and the Gulf of Nanquin to the E. Xenſi to the W. Homoan and Xantung to the S. and to the N. the Mountains and Wall that ſeparates it from Tartary. The City of Pequin is the Capital of all China, ſince the Year 1404; ſtands thirty Leagues from the great Wall, in a Country ill manur'd, very famous for the Palace of its Kings, its Grandeur, Buildings and number of Inhabitants; the Tartars waſted it very much during their Conqueſt of China, but is daily repair'd. The other Towns of this Province are Paoting, Hokien, Chinting, Xunta, Quanping, Taming, Junping, with 135 leſſer Cities, which contain 418989 Families. Martin Martini Athl. Sinac.

PERA, a Town ſituate upon an Hill near unto the City of Galata, and is ſeparated from it only by ſome Church-Yards, wherein live ſeveral Roman Catholicks and Greeks of Quality, and where the Chriſtian Embaſſadors lodge, except thoſe of the Emperor, King of Poland, and the Republick of Raguſa, who live at Conſtantinople. The French Embaſſador has here a great Palace, which is called the King's Houſe, and overlooks the Port, and the Grand Signior's Seraglio, that ſtands over againſt it on the other ſide of the Canal. Below Pera ſtands a little Town, called Tophana, which is the place where the Cannon and Artillery is caſt. Galata, Pera, and Tophana, form as it were an Amphiteatre, from whence may be ſeen all the Ships in the Road, and the ſtatelieſt Buildings of Conſtantinople. M. Thevenot Voyage de Levant.

PERALDUS (William) Archbiſhop of Lyons, or, as ſome ſay, Suffragan to that Archbiſhoprick, was much eſteem'd in the XIIIth. Century. He was a Monk of the Order of S. Dominick, and wrote that extraordinary fine Book, called Summa Virtutum & Vitiorum, which has been often reprinted, and is Abridg'd by Jacobus de Voragine. He is ſaid likewiſe to write the following Tracts, *viz. PERCHE, le PERCHE, Lat. Perticus, a Province of France, with the Title of an Earldom, lying between Chartrain, which is to the Eaſt of it; Vendomois and Dunois to the South ; Maine to the Weſt, and Normandy to the North. It's Inhabitants were called Aulerci Diablintes by Cæſar, and are not the ſame as thoſe named Unelli or Venelli, as ſome have believed, theſe laſt being in the Dioceſs of Coutance, which F. Briel and ſeveral other Geographers have very well obſerv'd. It's divided into the Lower and Higher Perche ; the Higher is properly the Earldom, the Lower called le Perche Gouet, from the name of the ancient Lords of it. Others divide again the Country into Terre Francoiſe, Grand Perche, Perche Gouet, and Terres Demembrees. The Grand Perche contains Nogent , le Retrou , Mortagne, Belleſme, la Pierriere ; the Baronies of la Loup, Illiers, Courviller and Pontgoin, which belongs to the Biſhop of Chartres, who, together with the Biſhop of Sees, have almoſt all this Country in their Dioceſſes. Le Perche Gouet hath five ancient Baronies, Autun, Monmirail, Alluye, Bazoche and Brou. La Terre Francoiſe takes in the Juriſdiction of la Tour Griſe upon the River of Aure, overagainſt Verneuil in Normandy. Les Terres Demembrees contain Timerais, with the City of Chaſteau-Neuf, and the Principality of Senonches. Le Perche is about eighteen or twenty Leagues in length, and almoſt as many broad. The Eure, the Loire, the Haiſne, and the Aure, have their riſe in it. The Land is fruitful for Corn, Meadow, and Paſturage, has divers Manufacturies, as Serges, Cloth, Leather, eſpecially at Nogent ; belongs to the Juriſdiction of the Parliament of Paris ; and as to the Finances depends upon the Generality of Orleans and Alenzon. La Perche had formerly Earls of its own, the moſt ancient that we know of being Angombert, or Albert, who lived in the Ninth Age, in the time of Lewis the Debonnaire ; but its Lands were afterwards reunited to the Crown in the Reign of Lewis VIII. and S. Lovis. They were beſtowed upon Charles of France, the Son of Philip the Hardy, and Father to King Philip de Valois, and Charles de Valois II. of that name, Count of Alenzon, du Perche, &c. He left Peter behind him, who had John I. the Father of John II. the Father of Renatus, whoſe Son was Charles Duke of Alenzon, Count of Perche, &c. This laſt died at Lyons, April 11, in the Year 1525, at his return from the Battle of Pavia, and ſo le Perche was again reunited to the Crown. *Giles Bry, Sieur de la Clergerie Hiſt. du Perche. PERCIVALE (Sir John,) Baronet, of Burton, in the County of Corke, in Ireland. This Family is ſaid to come in with the Conqueror, and to derive from a Place in Normandy, call'd Perchivale. It has ſpread into ſeveral Counties of England; and one Branch of it, for ſome Hundreds of Years, ſettled at North Weſton, in the County of Sommerſet, where it continued, till in the Year 1692, Thomas Percivale, Eſq; died, leaving only Anne, his Daughter and Heir. Thomas Percivale, Second Brother of Edmond, Lord of the Mannor of North Weſton, was, in the time of King Edward VI. ſeated at Sydenham, near Bridgewater, in the ſame County. This Eſtate coming to him by his Intermarriage with Alice, Daughter of William, and Siſter and Heir to John Cave, of Sydenham, Eſq; Richard Percivale, the Son of George, was this Thomas's Great Grandſon and Heir, and in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, was Secretary to Sir Robert Cecil, then Secretary of State. Afterwards, Sir Robert being made Earl of Salisbury, and Maſter of the Court of Wards, Richard Percivale was made a principal Officer under him, and for his Skill in the Affairs of that Court, was Recommended by King James I's Privy-Council, for the ſame Imployment in Ireland, when the Court of Wards was ſet up there. Upon this Occaſion, the Family was tranſplanted into Ireland, where they have ſince flouriſhed, Philip the Son of the ſaid Richard being Knighted, and John the Son of Sir Philip, made a Baronet of Ireland, in the 14th. of Charles II. As for their Abilities and Fortunes, they were both conſiderable: Sir John left Sir John, who died young, leaving the preſent Sir John his Heir, in his Minority ; who by the Progreſſes he has already made, gives a fair Expectation of coming up to the Credit of his Anceſtors. He bears (with the Arms of Ulſter) Argent, on a Chief, indented Gules, Three Croſſes Form of the Field.

PERCUNUS, a Deity of the ancient Inhabitants of Pruſſia, in honour of whom they always kept a Fire of Oak, which, if the Prieſt, whom in their Language they called Waidelotte, who had the care of that Fire, ſuffered through his negligence to go out, he was to be puniſhed with death. Theſe Idolatrous People believed, That when it thunder'd, it was their Grand Prieſt called Krive, entertaining himſelf with their God Percunus ; and in this Opinion they fell down to the Earth to adore that Deity, asking of him ſeaſonable Weather to make their Grounds fruitful. *Hartſnoch. PERCY, an Ancient and Noble Family which deriv'd its deſcent from Mainfred de Percie, who came out of Denmark into Normandy before the Adventure of the famous Rollo thither. William and Serlo de Percy, accompained the Conqueror into England; and William being one of his Barons, and much belov'd by him, obtain'd vaſt Poſſeſſions in this Realm, eſpecially in Lincolnſhire and Yorkſhire, in the firſt whereof he had 32, and in the other 86 Lordſhips. William his Grandſon dying without Iſſue Male, Agnes his Daughter married Joſceline de Lovaine, upon condition that he and his Poſterity would either aſſume the Sirname of Percy, or bear the Percy's Arms, relinquiſhing his own, and he aſſented to the former. This Family render'd it ſelf very famous for the great Services it did upon ſeveral occaſions againſt the Scots and French, in conſideration of which, Henry Percy was at the Coronation of Richard the IId. advanc'd to the dignity of Earl of Northumberland, with a ſpecial Grant, that the Lands of which he then ſtood ſeiz'd, or did afterward purchaſe, ſhould be held Sub honore comitiali, and as parcel of his Earldom. In 2 R. II. he entr'd Scotland with the Earl of Nottingham, and won the Town of Berwick. In 7 R. II. to be reveng'd of the frequent incurſions the Scots made into Northumberland, he enter'd and waſted their Borders, but had this misfortune, that they by corrupting the Deputy Governour made 'emſelves Maſters of Berwick, which the Duke of Lancaſter, upon a former grudge to the Earl, made ſuch advantage of, that he prevail'd with the Parliament to pronounce Sentence of death, and loſs of Eſtate againſt him; but the King remitted the Execution of this ſevere Sentence; whereupon the Earl laying Siege to Berwick, had it ſurrender'd to him in conſideration of 2000 Marks He was join'd in Commiſſion with the Biſhop of Durham, &c. to treat of Peace, and require ſatisfaction of the Scots for Injuries done to the Engliſh, and ſoon after made Commiſſioner for receiving twenty four thouſand Marks in full conſideration of a hundred thouſand Marks due for the Ranſome of their King David. But in 21 Richard II. upon information, that he and his Son Henry, commonly called Hot Spur, had ſpoke ſome Seditious Words, he was ſent for out of the North, and neglecting to appear, was baniſh'd; whereupon he fled into Scotland, where he ſtay'd till the Duke of Lancaſter landed at Ravenſpur in Yorkſhire, whither he came to join him. The Duke being declar'd King by the name of Henry the IVth. in conſideration of the Earl's Merits he made him Conſtable of England for life, gave him the Iſle of Man, and made him General Warden of the Weſt Marches towards Scotland, and the next Year conſtituted him one of the Commiſſioners to treat of a Marriage for Blanch, his eldeſt Daughter, with Lewis Duke of Bavaria, eldeſt Son to Rupert King of the Romans. In 3. H. IV. the Scots invading England, this Earl and his Valiant Son, having then the Earl of Dunbar with 'em, who had deſerted his Countrymen, fought 'em at Halidown Hill, and obtain'd a ſignal Victory, and took the Earl of Douglas, General of the Scotch Army Priſoner. But the next year, demanding money that was due to him for the Wardenſhip of the Marches, and being diſſatisfied at the Anſwer made him, his ſtout Son Henry took up Arms and was kill'd in Shrewsbury Battle ſoon after. The Earl hearing of his Death, diſavowed his Rebellion, and ſubmitted to the King, whereupon he was pardoned for Life, but committed to ſafe Cuſtody until reſtor'd, in the Sixth of Henry the IVth. to all his Poſſeſſions. But the Death of his Son, notwithſtanding this Favour, ſtuck ſo upon his ſtomach, that taking advantage of the Diſcontents of Thomas Mowbray, Earl Marſhal, and Richard Scrope, Archbiſhop of York, he joined with them in their Riſing; who failing in their Attempts, the King march'd againſt him, and forced him to flee into Scotland; whence he came into Wales; and returning thence into Yorkſhire, cauſed Proclamations to be iſſued out, That whoſoever deſired Liberty ſhould take up Arms, and follow him. Sir Thomas Rokesby, then Sheriff of Yorkſhire, met and fought him and his Adherents, at Bramham Moor, near Haſlwood, and the Earl being ſlain in the Battle, they cut off his Head, and ſent it to London, to be ſet on the Bridge, and quartered his Body, ſending one part to London, one to Lincoln, the third to be hung up at Berwick upon Twede, and the fourth at New-caſtle upon Tine; but were all afterwards taken down, and by the King's ſpecial Order delivered to his Friends, to be ſolemnly buried. This great Earl had by his Wife, Daughter to the Lord Nevil, Siſter to Ralph, firſt Earl of Weſtmorland, three Sons, Henry, Thomas, and Ralph; Henry, ſpoken of before, received the Order of Knighthood when his Father was made Earl, and in 8 Rich. IId. was conſtituted one of the Commiſſioners for guarding the Marches towards Scotland, wherein he was ſo active that he was call'd in deriſion Hot-ſpur. In 11 Rich. IId. he was ſent to Sea againſt the French, and returned with much Honour, and the ſame year encountred the Scots near Zalſtone, toward Newcaſtle upon Tine, ſlew the Earl Douglas with his own hand, and mortally wounded the Earl of Murray; but preſſing too forward, was at length taken Priſoner by the Earl of Dunbar, together with his Brother Ralph, and carried into Scotland, but was ſoon ſet at Liberty, and imploy'd in Places of great Truſt by Richard II. until the Duke of Lancaſter obtained the Town. In the third of this King's Reign, he was with his Father in that memorable Battle againſt the Scots at Halidown Hill, where the Engliſh obtain'd a ſignal Victory; but being Henry's implacable Enemy, for the Reaſons above-mention'd, and at the Sollicitation of his Uncle, Thomas Percy, Earl of Worceſter, he made uſe of ſeveral ſpecious Pretences to draw People to him, and raiſed Men in the Marches of Scotland, under colour of advancing into that Kingdom. The King having judiciouſly made anſwer by circular Letters to all the pretended Grievances, marched againſt him; when near Shrewsbury, Hot-ſpur hearing of his Approach, made a Stand, and encouraged his Soldiers thus; Stand to it valiantly, for this Day will either advance us all, if we conquer; or free us from the King's power, if we be overcome; it being more honourable to fall in Battle for the publick good, than after the Fight to die by the Sentence of an Enemy. Having thus heartned his Army, which conſiſted of 14000 choice Men, and taken the Advantage of the Ground, the King ſent him the Abbot of Shrewsbury, with an Offer of Pardon in caſe he would lay down his Arms. Whereupon he ſent his Uncle Percy, Earl of Worceſter, to acquaint him with the Cauſe of their hoſtile Appearance, and to require effectual Satisfaction. It's ſaid the King did aſſent to whatſoever was reaſonable, and ſtooped farther than became his royal Dignity; but that the Earl, when he returned, miſrepreſented his Expreſſions, and exaſperated his Nephew to fight. The Battle began upon the Eve of S. Mary Magdalen, An. 1403. and was fought with extraordinary Courage on both Sides; inſomuch that many of the Royaliſts forſook the Field, ſuppoſing the King had been ſlain. For Hot-ſpur and the Earl of Douglas, both whoſe Valours were beyond Expreſſion, bent all their Aim againſt the King's Perſon, and with their Swords and Lances made furiouſly towards him, which the Earl of Dunbar perceiving, withdrew him from his Station, and ſo ſaved his Life. For they ſlew his Standard-bearer, with all that were with him. And, enraged that they miſſed himſelf, deſperately charged into the midſt of the Enemy, where Hot-ſpur fell, and Dowglas with the Earl of Worceſter, were taken Priſoners, which occaſioned the total Rout of their Party. Henry, his Son, was reſtored to his Honour and Inheritance by King Henry V. and he and the ſucceeding Earls continued in great Favour with their Princes until the twelfth of Queen Elizabeth, that Thomas, the then Earl, accuſed of being privy to the intended Marriage of Mary Queen of Scots with the Duke of Norfolk, and exaſperated, that a Mine of Copper found in his Land, was adjudged Mine-royal, he joined the Earl of Weſtmorland, and publiſhed Proclamations, in the Queen's name, commanding the People to put themſelves in Arms, for the defence of her Majeſty's Perſon, pretending ſometimes that what they did was with the advice and conſent of the Nobility of the Realm, and ſometimes that they did it for Conſcience ſake, to reform Religion, leſt otherwiſe foreign Princes ſhould undertake it, to the great danger of the Kingdom. Having got a good Number together, they marched to Durham with Banners diſplayed, wherein were Croſſes with the five Wounds of Chriſt. After ſeveral Marches from Place to Place, they came to Clifford-moor, near Wetherby in Yorkſhire, and ſoon after beſieged Bernard-Caſtle with Two Thouſand Horſe and Five Thouſand Foot, and took it in eleven days time. But the Earl of Suſſex, Preſident of the North, with divers other Lords, having raiſed great Forces, and advancing towards them, they fled into Scotland; whereupon being proceeded againſt according to Law, they were convicted of Treaſon, and the Conviction confirmed in the following Parliament 13 Eliz. The Vice-roy of Scotland having found out the unfortunate Earl of Northumberland, lurking amongſt the Border-robbers, ſent him Priſoner to Lochlevin, after which, viz. 14 Eliz. he was by the Earl of Morton, then Regent of Scotland, delivered up to the Lord Hunſdon, Governour of Berwick, and on the 22d. of Auguſt, beheaded at York, leaving no Iſſue male. Sir Henry Percy, his younger Brother, was, by virtue of an Entail made by Queen Mary, ſummoned to Parliament as Earl of Northumberland, in the 18 Eliz. but being impriſoned in the Tower of London, upon Suſpicion of conſpiring with the Lords Paget, Throgmorton and the Guiſian Party, for an Invaſion of England, to reſcue the Queen of Scots, he was found dead in his Bed, being ſhot with Bullets into his left-ſide with a Piſtol, which Fact the Coroner's Inqueſt did lay upon himſelf, as deſparing of his Condition, having endeavoured to corrupt his Keeper, but without Succeſs. Henry, his eldeſt Son and Succeſſor, in 31 Eliz. when the Spaniſh Armado threatned an Invaſion, put himſelf in the Queen's Fleet, and was by her made Knight of the Garter, and afterwards became one of the Lords of the Privy-council to King James, and Captain of the Penſioners, until 1606, 3 Jacobi, being brought into the Star-chamber, and there convicted of Miſpriſon of Treaſon, for admitting Thomas Percy, his Kinſman, who afterwards became one of the Powder-Traitors, to be a Gentleman-penſioner, knowing him to be a Recuſant, and not adminiſtring to him the Oath of Supremacy, he was fined in the Sum of 30000 li. removed from the Truſt of a Privy-councellor, and ſent Priſoner to the Tower, there to remain during Life; but was ſet at Liberty in 1621, 19 Jac. After which, in 4 Car. I. he obtained a Confirmation to himſelf and heirs male of his Body, of the Title and Dignity of Baron of Percy, &c. His Son Algernon ſucceeding him, was made Knight of the Garter by King Charles I Lord high Admiral of England, and in the Fifteenth of that Reign, made Captain General of the Army then raiſed by the King, upon his Expedition into Scotland; but declined that Service for want of Health as it was ſaid. His Son Joſcelin ſucceeded him in his Lands and Honours, and took to Wife Elizabeth, the Third Daughter and Coheir of Thomas, Earl of Southampton, Lord Treaſurer of England; his ſecond Wife, was Daughter and Coheir to Francis Earl of Chicheſter, by whom he had a Son and two Daughters. He died at Turin, in Piedmont, 21 Maii, Anno 1670. None of his Children ſurviving him but Elizabeth. Dugdale's Baronage.

PERDICCAS, the firſt of that Name, King of Macedonia, was an enterprizing, and conſiderable Prince; ſucceeded in the year of the World 3341, to Thurmas, or Thurimas, and reigned 48 years. It's ſaid, that at his Death, he ordered his Son Argeus to cauſe him to be buried in a Tomb he had made choice of; adding, that as long as the Bones of his Succeſſors ſhould be laid there, the Crown ſhould continue in their Family, which was in the 3389 year of the World. Juſtin ſaith, They were perſuaded the Line of this Prince ended in Alexander the Great, becauſe that he would not be buried in the ſame place. Juſtin. lib. 7.

PFRDIGCAS II. the Son of Alexander I. ſucceeded him in the year of the World 3618. He had a great hand in the Affairs of Greece during the War of Peloponneſus, wherein he often took and forſook the part of the Athenians. His Reign was for twenty three years, and he was ſucceeded by Archelas, in the year of the World 3641, the 341 of Rome, and the 91 Olympiad. Thucydides, l. 3, 4, 6, &c. Diodorus, l. 12.

PERDICCAS III. the third Son of Amyntas, reigned ſix years after his Brothers Alexander and Ptolemy, in the year of the World 3668, and was ſlain in a Battle he fought againſt the Illyrians, and ſucceeded by his Brother Philip.

PERDICCAS, one of the Generals of Alexander the Great's Army, had a great Share in the Conqueſts of that Prince, and after his death married Cleopatra, his Siſter, and would have uſurped the Empire. Alexander at his death left him his Ring, and he for ſome time managed all his Affairs, being alſo choſen Tutor to young Arideus, whom Philip, the Father of Alexander, had by one of his Miſtreſſes named Philinna, a Native of Theſſaly; or of the Poſthumous Son of Alexander, in caſe that Roxana, who was with Child, ſhould have a Son. In the mean time the Deſigns he had formed to ſatiate his Ambition, did not ſucceed. PERDOITE, a falſe God of the ancient Inhabitants of Pruſſia, for whom the Mariners and Fiſhermen had a particular Veneration, becauſe they believed that he preſided over the Sea. He was repreſented by them as an Angel of a vaſt bigneſs, ſtanding upon the Waters, and turning the Winds which way he pleaſed. Before they went a Fiſhing they were wont to offer Sacrifices of Fiſh to him, covering their Tables with the ſame, and eating the Remains of what they had offered, drinking withal very freely; after which the Prieſt, whom they called Sigonotta, took Obſervation of the Winds, and predicted to them the day and place where they ſhould have good Fiſhing. Waiſſel in Chron. Hartſnoch, 10 *Diſſert. de Cultu Deor. PEREASLAW, Lat. Pereaſlavia, a populous, ſtrong and well-fortified Town of Poland, beyond the Boriſthenes, in the Palatinate of Kiovia, ſeated on the River Truhicz, about two miles from its Fall into the Boriſthenes. It ſtands 10 German m. N. E. of Kiovia.

PERECZAZ, or PERETZAZ, an Earldom in Upper Hungary, with a Town of the ſame Name, the Capital of the Country, called in Latin Perugia. It has been always under the Emperor and never conquered by the Turk.

PEREGRINI (Mark-Antony) a Lawyer, and Secretary to the Republick of Venice, was born at Vicenza, in the year 1530. It was he that bravely maintained the Cauſe of the Republick againſt Pope Paul Vth. for which he was rewarded with many Honours and noble Gifts. He died December 5th. 1616. aged eighty ſix years, three months, and four days. We have divers pieces of his Writing; as, De Jure Fiſci, l. 8. De Fidei Commiſſis, &c. Thomaſini, in Elog. illuſtr. vir. Patar. Laur. Craſſo, Elog. d' Huomini litterati T. 2. p. 105. &c.

PEREGRINUS, ſurnamed Proteus, a Cynick Philoſopher, burnt himſelf alive at Olympia, as the Brachmans were wont to do, in the time of Mark-Antony. He had been a Chriſtian, or at leaſt feigned himſelf ſo; though otherwiſe he had led before a ſcandalous Life, if what Lucian reports of him be true. Aulus Gellius, Athenagoras, Tertullian, and Ammianus Marcellinus, make mention of him. Some praiſe him. Others again condemn him. Lucian will have him to be an Impoſtor, who vainly promiſed that he would burn himſelf alive, and afterwards would willingly have recanted. See his Tract of the Death of Peregrinus, in the ſecond Tomb of his Works.

PERERIUS (Iſaac) a Native of Bourdeaux, a Man of much Wit and Learning, was the Author of a Book concerning the Pre-adamites. A ſingular Work, but very pernicious, where he endeavours to prove, There were Men in the World before Adam. He forſook the Proteſtant Religion for fear of Puniſhment, by a publick Recantation, printed at Rome in the year 1655.

PEREZ, de Saavedra (John) was born at Cordova, or Jaen, in Spain, who having got together above 30000 Ducats by counterfeiting the Apoſtolick Letters, made uſe of them to introduce the Inquiſition into Portugal, feigning himſelf for this purpoſe to be Cardinal Legate of the Holy See. And getting about an hundred and fifty Servants for his Retinue, was received in that Quality at Seville, and lodged with a great deal of Reſpect in the Archbiſhop's Palace. But going forwards after this as far as Badajos, upon the Frontiers of Portugal, he diſpatched a Secretary to the King, to inform him of his Arrival, and to deliver him the counterfeit Letters of the Pope, Emperor, King of Spain, and ſome other Secular and Eccleſiaſtical Princes, which earneſtly deſired that his Majeſty would favour the pious Deſign of this pretended Cardinal Legate. The King, who rejoiced at this Embaſſy, made him Anſwer as a Legate, and ſent to him a Lord of his Court, to Complement and Accompany him to his Palace, where he continued about three months, and in that time eſtabliſhed the Inquiſition in that Kingdom; whereupon he took his Leave of his Majeſty, and left Portugal, very glad that he had ſo well ſucceeded in his Deſign. But he was diſcovered upon the Frontiers of Caſtile, and known to have been an old Servant to the Marqueſs De Ville Neuf. Being put into Priſon, he was condemned for ten Years to the Gallies, and forbidden to write any more, upon pain of Death; which Judgment was executed upon him, and he remained ſeveral years in the Gallies, until that at laſt he was taken out, in the year 1556 by a Brief of Pope Paul IVth. who deſired to ſee him, to give him thanks without doubt for the Good Service he had done the Romiſh See, in introducing the Inquiſition into Portugal, where it has continued ever ſince. *Chron. del Card. PEREZ, or Perezius (Anthony) a Spaniard and Law Profeſſor in the Univerſity of Louvain. In the year 1620, he had a conſiderable Poſt in the Army which was ſent into the Lower Palatinate, but this Army proving unmanageable, Perez left it, and return'd to his Law Profeſſorſhip again at Louvain, where he held the Chair thirty years with Reputation. His Learning appears ſufficiently in his Works, *viz. Inſtitutiones Imperiales. Prælectiones, ſeu Commentarij in Libros Novem Codicis Juſtinianei. Prælectiones in Tres poſteriores Libros Codicis. PERGAMUS, a City of Troas, in Aſia, and according to others of Myſia, or Phrygia, upon the River Caicus, formerly a Biſhoprick under Epheſus, but afterwards became a Metropolitan See, being alſo the Capital of a little State, called the Kingdom of Pergamus, which began about the 470 year of Rome, under Phileterus, Lord Treaſurer to Lyſimachus, King of Thrace. But yet it is affirmed, that neither he nor his Nephew and Succeſſor, Eumenes, took the Title of King upon them; but that it was Attalus I. who reigned forty four Years. Eumenes II. reigned after him forty years. And then Attalus II. his Brother govern'd for one and twenty, as Guardian to Attalus III. his Nephew; who dying without Children in the 621 year of Rome, appointed the Romans to be his Heirs, an hundred and fifty two years after that Phileterus had laid the firſt Foundations of this State. Auguſtus treated this City Pergamus ſo kindly, That he gave it leave to dedicate a Temple to him and to the City of Rome. This is the Birth-place of Galen, and the Place were Parchment was firſt invented, whence it had its Latin Name Pergamena. It's alſo one of the ſeven Churches mentioned by S. John in the Revelations. Here are ſtill to be ſeen the Ruins of the Palace of the Atalick Kings, with an Aqueduct and Theatre. It is inhabited by three thouſand Turks, and about fifteen Families of Greek Chriſtians, who have a ſmall Church allowed them. Lon. 55. 30. PERGUBRIOS, the Name of a falſe God among the ancient Inhabitants of Pruſſia and Lithuania, who, as they believed, took Care of the Fruits of the Earth. Theſe Idolaters made a Feaſt in honour of him, on the 22th. of March, and met together in a Houſe, where they had prepared a Tun or two of Beer; there the Sacrificer having ſung Hymns in the praiſe of that God, and filled a Bowl full of this Liquor, took it in his Teeth, drunk it, and threw the Cup over his Head without touching it with his Hands, which he repeated ſeveral times in honour of other Deities whom he called upon by their Names, praying for a good Harveſt, and Fruit in abundance. All the Company did the ſame, ſigning the praiſes of their God Pergubrios, and ſpending the reſt of the day in Feaſting and Mirth. Hartſnoch. Diſſert. 11. de Feſtis vet. Pruſſ.

PERIANDER, one of the ſeven wiſe Men of Greece, was a King of Corinth, and ſucceeded his Father Cypſelus in the 38 Olympiad, and the hundred and twenty ſixth year of Rome. He uſually ſaid, that Pleaſures were tranſitory, but that Glory was immortal; that Kings ſhould get themſelves protected with the Affections of their Subjects, inſtead of Guards; and anſwered thoſe that asked him, why he kept the Power in his hand, that It was as dangerous to quit it voluntarily as to have it wreſted from him. Ariſt. l. 5. Polit. c. 12. PERICLES, an Athenian, a great General, and a good Orator, was the Son of Xantipus and Agariſta, who, to ſatisfie the Inclination he had for Learning, was put into the Care of Zeno and Anaxagoras, under whom he made a great Proficiency. He uſed all endeavours to gain the Affection of the Athenians; and becauſe that Cimon did not favour him, he got him baniſhed by way of the Oſtraciſm; but ſome time after cauſed him to be recalled. Having afterwards the Command of the Army in Peloponneſus, he committed great Ravages in the neighbouring Provinces, and won a famous Victory from the Sicyonians, near Nemæa. From thence he marched into Acarnania, which he plundered. At the Entreaty of Aſpatia, the famous Courtezan, he made War upon the Samians, in favour of the Mileſians, in the 313 year of Rome. He laid Siege to Samos, and took it after nine months; where Artemon, a Native of Clazomenium, invented firſt the Battering-ram and ſome other Warlike Engines. He perſuaded alſo the Athenians to continue the War againſt the Lacedæmonians; fearing leſt, if a Peace ſhould be made, he ſhould be oblig'd to give an Account of the Money he had expended during the time of his Command. He was afterwards blamed for giving this Advice, and the Athenians deprived him of his Imploy, but were very quickly forc'd to reſtore it to him again. He died of the Plague in the 88th. Olympiad, about 325 years after the building of Rome. It's ſaid that, as often as he took the Command upon him, he made this Reflection, That he commanded over a free People, who were both Greecians and Athenians. The Poet Sophocles his Collegue, diverting himſelf on a time with the Sight of a beautiful Woman, ſaid he, Sophocles, a Magiſtrate ſhould keep his Eyes and his Tongue in order as well as his Hands, &c. He was the firſt that wrote down his Harangues before he ſpoke 'em in the Senate; which care, made his Style very correct, and gave force and beauty to his Expreſſion. He join'd the Pireus to the Town with a good Wall, and did ſo many brave Actions, that he left nine Trophies for Monuments of his Victories. It was he that firſt uſed this Sentence, Uſque ad aras Amicus, intimating that Friendſhip ought not to proceed ſo far as to violate Religion and Sacred Things. Plutarch, Herodotus, &c.

PERICLES, the natural Son of the Great Pericles, ſurvived his two Legitimate Brothers. He was choſen by the Athenians in the room of Alcibiades, and fought againſt Callicratidas, General of the Lacedæmonians; did great things in this Expedition, and burnt the Enemies Fleet; however, becauſe he did not bury thoſe that had been ſlain in the Battle, he was condemned, together with ſeven Captains more of the Army, to loſe his Head, becauſe that Neglect was looked upon to be a heinous Crime. Plutarch.

PERICLYMENUS, the Son Neleus, King of Theſſaly, afterwards Founder of the City of Pylos in Peloponneſus, received of Neptune, his Grandfather, power to transform himſelf into all ſorts of Shapes. But he made uſe of that power in vain againſt Hercules, who killed Neleus and him, with all his Brethren, except Neſtor. Ovid ſaith, Periclymenus changed himſelf into an Eagle, and that Hercules ſhot him with an Arrow. Apollodorus, lib. 1.

PERICOPIA, a Town on the Frontiers of Boſnia, taken by General Picolomini, who was ſent with a Detachment by Prince Lewis of Baden, in 1689, after the two Battles of Niſſa, to reduce the reſt of Servia under the Germans, as he effectually did.

PERIEGETUS (Denys) a Poet and Geographer, lived in the time of Auguſtus, according to the moſt common Opinion. Plin. lib. 6. c. 17. affirms he was a Native of Alexandria, in Suſiana; and that he writ a Deſcription of all the Country round about, for which purpoſe he was ſent into the Eaſt, by Auguſtus, in order to finiſh his Work. Euſtathius puts him under the Reign of Nero. But Suetonius ſeems to agree with Pliny. The ſame Euſtathius ſaith, other Works were attributed to him; as, the Lithiacæ, the Ornithiacæ, and the Baſſaricæ; but perhaps they may be the Labours of Denys of Samos, or Denys of Philadelphia.

PERIER (Aimardu) Lord of Chameloc, &c. was a Member of the Parliament of Grenoble. He liv'd to the year 1600, and was a good Lawyer and Antiquary. In 1610 his Book was publiſh'd at Lyons, Intitled, Diſcours Hiſtorique touchant l'Etat general des Gauſes & Principalement des Provinces de Dauphiné & de Provence, tant ſous la Republique & l'Empire des Romains que ſous les François & Bourguignions. Enſemble quelques recherches particulieres de certaines Villes. M. Chorier, in his Hiſtory of Dauphine, gives a good Character of this Performance of Perier.

PERIGORD, a Province of France, with the Title of an Earldom, between Limoſin, Angoumois, Santonge, Quercy, and Agenois, being the Country of the ancient People called Petrocorii. Perigueux is its capital City; the other Towns are Sarlat, Bergerac, Marſac, Chaſtillon, Limeil, Montignac, Miremont, la Force, Duche, Hautefort, la Douze, Bourdeilles, Eidueil, which are Marquiſates; Riberac, an Earldom; Marevill, Bainac, and Biron, ancient Baronies. Perigord is watered with divers Rivers, mountainous, rough, and ſtony, but yet fertil, having a great many phyſical Springs, and Mines of Iron and Steel. Cæſar ſpeaks of the People of this Country, who had their own Counts to govern them. Some Authors divide it into the higher and lower Perigord, the laſt lying towards the Rivers of Dordogne and Verzere; and the other all along the River of Iſle, which ſometimes alſo is diſtinguiſhed by the Name of white or higher Perigord, becauſe it's full of Mountains, and the Name of Black aſcribed to the Lower, for that it is more Woody. The Inhabitants gather great quantity of Small-nuts and Cheſtnuts, have ſeveral ſorts of Simples, and ſome Wine; but, above all, they take care of their Forges, for the ordering of their Iron and Steel. Perigord, which is part of Aquitain, was ſubject to the Kings of France, till the Decay of that Monarchy, and then it had its own Counts. King Henry the Great united it to the Crown tho' the Deſcendents of Charles of Bretaigne pretended to it. It was the ſubject of a long Proceſs, determined at laſt in favour of John d'Albret, King of Navarre. The Princes of Orange laid alſo a Claim to it, and a third part thereof was adjudged to them by a Decree bearing Date the 14th. of Auguſt, 1498, but King Lewis XIIth. gave them other Lands in exchange for it, in favour of the Houſe of Albret. *Du Puy Droits du Roy. PERIGUEUX, upon the Iſle, a City of France, the Capital of Perigord, a Biſhop's-See under Bourdeaux, called by the Ancients variouſly; as, Petrocorium, Petrigorium, Veſuna Petrocoriorum, and Veſuna. It's very ancient, and it's likely the Name of Veſuna has been deduced from that of Venus worſhipped there. The Ruins of a Temple of that Goddeſs being yet to be ſeen. The Inſcriptions, Ruins of the Amphitheatre, and ſeveral other magnificent Remains, are illuſtrious Teſtimonies of the Antiquity of this City, which has been often waſted by the Barbarians, that made Inroads into Gaul. It was near unto this Place that Pepin, ſurnamed The Short, won a famous Victory over Gaifer, Duke of Aquitaine, in 768. Front was the ancienteſt Biſhop of it that we know of. Cæſar lib. 7. Comment. Pliny, lib. 4. cap. 19. La Boirie Antique de Perig.

PERILLUS of Athens, a famous Artificer, who being willing to flatter the Cruelty of Phalaris. Tyrant of Agrigentum, made a brazen Bull for to broil Criminals therein; but he was the firſt that ſuffered that Puniſhment by order of the ſame Tyrant. Pliny, l. 34. c. 8.

PERIOECIANS, are thoſe who dwell under the Parts of the ſame Meridian, and under the oppoſite points of the ſame parallel of Latitude; inſomuch that the difference of their Longitude is always 180 degrees, though they be in the ſame Zone, ſame Climate, and ſame Elevation of the Pole; they have the ſame Seaſons, and an equal length of Days; but when it is Noon with the one, it is Midnight with the other.

PERIPATETICKS, the Name given to Ariſtotles's Followers, who diſputed walking in the Lycæum; Ammonius affirms, That Plato was the firſt who bethought of teaching walking, and that his Diſciples were called Peripateticks, but they took upon them that of Academicks, becauſe they ſtudied in a Grove called the Academy. Diogenes Laertius in Ariſt. Ammonius in Categ. Cicero, l. 1. Quæſt. Acad.

PERISCIANS, are the People of the frozen Zones, who in the Seaſon that the Sun ſhines upon them, ſee it turn round about them in the ſpace of four and twenty hours; inſomuch that they have their ſhadow ſometimes on the one ſide, and ſometimes on the other. This word is Greek, compounded of περὶ, about, and σκιὰ, a ſhadow.

PERKIN. See WARBECK.

PERMAWELIKI, Lat. Parmia magna, a City of Moſcovy, in the Province of Permki, or Permski; this Province lies between the River Duna, or Dzuvina, and that of Oby and Candora.

PERMESSA, a River of Bœotia that riſes in Mount-Helicon. The Poets feigned that its Water's inſpired with a Poetical Fancy, and for that reaſon it was conſecrated to Apollo and the Muſes. Strabo, l. 8. Pauſanias in Bœot.

PERMIA or PERMSKI, a Principality in the Empire of Moſcovy, whoſe capital City is Perm, or Prems, that gives Title to an Archbiſhop, who reſides in the City of Vologda, of which he is Archbiſhop alſo. The People of Permia are almoſt all Savages and Idolaters, the greateſt part of them worſhipping the Sun, Moon, and Stars. But yet becauſe there was a ſmall number of Chriſtians amongſt them, they had a Biſhop aſſigned them in the Reign of Duke John Baſilovitz, about the year 1550; but he no ſooner began to exerciſe his Function, than the Idolaters flea'd him alive. Permia is ſo full of Marſhes that you cannot travel in it in Summer-time, but in the Winter only, when 'tis all frozen. There is no Corn grows there, for the Inhabitants do not apply themſelves to Tillage, but live upon the Fleſh of wild Beaſts which they hunt and kill; they uſe no other Drink than Water, and have no Money. Inſtead of Horſes they make uſe of Dogs to draw their Chariots. Dom Juan de Perſe, Olearius, Relation de Moſcovy.

PERNAMBUT, a Province of Braſil, in South America all along the Sea, above ſixty German miles in length, 'tis a Government called Capitania di Pernambuto, named by thoſe of the Low-Countries, Farnambone. The Hollanders made themſelves Maſters of it; but the Portugueſe expelled them, and are the preſent Poſſeſſors. There are in it eleven Cities, whereof the Capital is Olinda, Lon. 346. 00. Lat. 9 15. It was made a Biſhop's-See in 1676. after it was recovered from the Hollanders, who took it from the Portugueſe.

PERNAW, a City of Livonia, in the Province of Eſten, near unto the Gulf of Riga, part of the Baltick-ſea, reckoned among the Numbet of the Hanſ-towns, though it has almoſt no other Commerce, than that of Corn. Ericus, King of Sweden, took it from the Poles in the year 1562; but they re-took it by a Stratagem in 1565. The Moſcovites made themſelves Maſters of it in 1575, but it was re-united to the Crown of Poland, with the reſt of Livonia, by a Treaty of Peace made between the King of Poland and the Grand Duke of Moſcovy. The Swedes took it in 1617, and are in Poſſeſſion of it to this very day. Olearius, Voyage de Moſcovy.

PERONNE, a City of Picardy, upon the River Somme, in the Territory of Sansterre. It is very well fortified, and almoſt impregnable, becauſe of the Moraſs, with which it is environed. It has often been attempted by the Spaniards; but in vain. It's noted for the Sepulchre of Charles II. King of France, who was buried there in 826. It's reckoned one of the Keys of the Kingdom, and ſtands ſeven Leagues South from Cambray, and 25 N. from Paris.

PEROSES, or PEROZAS King of Perſia, ſucceeded his Father Iſdigerdes II. in the year 478. He made War upon the White Hunns, and marching raſhly into their Country, His Army was incloſ'd between the Mountains, and ſo lay at the Mercy of the Enemy. The King of the White Hunns or Euthalites ſent a Trumpet to him to reproach him with his Miſconduct, offering him his Life, and leave to march back his Troops, provided he would adore him, and promiſe not to diſturb him in the Field any more: Peroſes accepted the Conditions, and by the Advice of the Magi, turn'd himſelf towards the Riſing Sun, and under pretence of worſhipipng his Enemy, did in reality only adore that Planet; upon this, having given Hoſtages for Security, he return'd into his Country, but ſoon after broke his Oath and enter'd the Hunns Country with a formidable Army, where falling into an Ambuſcade, his Forces were defeated in the Year 482. He is ſuppos'd to reign about 24 Years, tho', according to Calviſius but 16. This Prince was one of the Allies of the Emperor Zeno. Procop. lib. 1. de Bell. Perſ. Agathias, &c.

PERPENNA (Hoſtilius Licimanus) was ſaluted Emperor in the time of Decius, but died of the Plague a little while after his Election, about the year 250. His Courage had advanced him to the higheſt Commands in the Army.

PERPENNA (Mark) a Roman, Conſul with Appius Claudius Lentulus, died in the 624 year of Rome, at Pergamus, after having defeated Ariſtonicus, the Baſtard Son of Eumenes, who uſurped the Kingdom that Attalus had given by his laſt Will to the Romans. Titus Livius, lib. 59. Velleius Paterculus, lib. 3. Strabo, lib. 13. &c.

PERPENNA, or PERPERNA, a Roman, who kill'd Sertorius, at an Entertainment, at Hueſca in Spain, in the 601 year of Rome. Paterculus ſays, he was one of thoſe that were Outlaw'd, and had more Quality than Courage in him.

PERPIGNAN, Lat. Perpinianum, & Paperianum, a City of France, the Capital of the Country of Rouſillon, with a very ſtrong Cittadel, ſtands upon the River Pet, three Leagues from the Sea, and is the See of the Biſhop of Elne ſince the year 1684. It's ſaid to have been built out of the Ruins of Rouſillon, that was a Roman Colony. The Arragoneſe took this City from the French about 1473; but they re-took it in 1642. PERRENOT (Antony) Cardinal of Granville, Biſhop of Arras, afterwards Archbiſhop of Malines and Beſançon, was born in the laſt of theſe Cities, being Son to Nicholas Perrenot, Lord of Granville, a Man of mean Extract, and, according to ſome Authors, the Son of a Lock-Smith; but his Parts rais'd him; for he was Chancellor to the Emperor Charles Vth. preſided at Worms in the Name of that Prince, who ſent him afterwards to Trent, and by a continued Courſe of good Fortune, uncommon to great Favourites, preſerv'd himſelf in the good Opinion of his Prince as long as he liv'd. The Cardinal, his Son, ſerved Charles Vth. firſt, who recommended him to Philip IId. into whoſe Favour Granville inſinuated himſelf ſo much, that that Prince did nothing without acquainting him with it. He made him firſt Chancellor to Margaret of Parma, Governeſs of the Low-Countries. Where as he did nothing but by the order of Philip, that Prince going to take Poſſeſſion of the Crown of Portugal, left the Adminiſtration of that of Spain to Granville, who died at Madrid, Sept. 21. in the year 1586, aged 70. Paul. Jovius, l. 45. Hiſt. de Thou. Hiſt. l. 84. &c. This Cardinal had ſome time before been Vice-Roy of Naples for Philip the IId. His Miniſtry, in the Low-Countries, is blam'd by ſeveral Authors for being over Rigorous, upon which account, they lay part of the Diſorders which happen'd in the ſeventeen Provinces, at his Door.

PERRIN (Amy) Captain General of the City of Geneva, dealt harſhly with the Roman Catholicks upon the change of Religion there, in 1535, and did himſelf cauſe the Stone of the great Altar of the Cathedral Church to be carried to the place where they were wont to puniſh Malefactors; to the end it might for the future ſerve for a Scaffold to execute Juſtice thereon. But it happened that in 1542 Perrin was the firſt that bloodied this Stone, having there his Head chopped off by Calvin's order, he having been accuſed of deſigning to maſſacre all the French Refugees in Geneva. Maimburg. Hiſt. de Calviniſm.

PERRION, or PERION, (Joachim) Doctor of Paris and a Benedictine Monk, was born at Cormery, in Tourain. He tranſlated into Latin ſome of the Works of Plato and Ariſtotle, wherein he made appear the Beauty of his Style. But as he took more care in that Work to ſhew himſelf Eloquent than a faithful Tranſlator, he drew upon him the ſharp Cenſures of Gruchy and ſome other Learned Men. He afterwards compoſed the Lives of the ancient Fathers, and rendred out of Greek into Latin ſeveral Treatiſes of theirs. The Univerſity of Paris ordered him, by an expreſs Decree, to write againſt Peter Ramus, in favour of Ariſtotle and Cicero. He writ alſo ſome Latin Dialogues concerning the Original of the French Tongue, and of the Affinity it hath with the Greek; and died very old, in his Monaſtery, a little before the unhappy death of Henry IId. about the year 1558, or 59. Paul. Jov. in Elog. Doct. S. Martha in Elog. Doct. Gall. D. Thou &c.

PERRON, (James Davy du) Cardinal of S. Agnes, Great Almoner of France, Biſhop of Evreux, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Sens, was deſcended of the Noble Houſe of Perron, Creteville, and of Languerville, in Lower Normandy, and born November 25, in 1556, of Proteſtant Parents, who, that they might not be diſturbed in their Religion, retired to Geneva, and after that ſettled in the Canton of Bearn upon the Confines of Savoy. His Father, Julian Davy, was Lord of Perron, and a Proteſtant Miniſter: He was likewiſe a Gentleman of a great deal of Senſe and Learning, and taught his Son Latin and Mathematicks; but after he was Ten years old, his Father had him inſtructed by other Maſters in Greek and Philoſophy: As for Hebrew, the Cardinal learn'd it without teaching, and now France being made eaſie for the Proteſtants, James Perron return'd thither with his Relations; and falling into an acquaintance with Philip Deſportes Abbot of Tyron. This Gentleman, who admir'd him extreamly, made him known to King Henry IIId. who very much valued him. Perron, as Moreri goes on, having ſtudied Thomas Aquinas, the Fathers, and particularly S. Auguſtin, quitted the Hugonots, and turn'd Roman Catholick: Some time after, he went into Holy Orders, and both in private Conferences, publick Diſputes, and printed Works, gave ſuch extraordinary Proof of his Abilities, that all People admir'd his Rhetorick, his Learning, and the Force of his Genius, which as our Author continues, found nothing too hard for it. The King made choice of him to make the Queen of Scots Funeral Sermon, as he did that alſo of Ronſard; and after the Death of the Duke of Joyeuſe, his good Friend, in 1587, he compoſed that Poem which we have yet among his Works. He held a Diſpute touching the Sentiments of the Fathers upon the Euchariſt; and each Party pretended to the Victory, as it uſually happens in ſuch Rencounters. Pope Clement VIIth. made him a Cardinal in the year 1604. After his Return into France he undertook, at the Sollicitations of King Henry the Great, to anſwer the King of Great Britain, and he nominated him to the Archbiſhoprick of Sens. In the mean time, the ſame Monarch ſent him to Rome, to accommodate the Differences between Pope Paul Vth. and the Venetians. Cardinal de Joyeuſe went along with him upon the ſame account. They accompliſhed what they went about; and the Pope had ſo great a Reſpect for the Sentiments of the Cardinal du Perron, that he uſually ſaid to thoſe that had acceſs to him, Let us pray God, that he inſpire the Cardinal du Perron, for he perſuades us to what he pleaſes. After the Death of Henry IVth. he aſſembled the Suffragan Biſhops at Paris, and there condemned the Book of Edmund Richer, touching the Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Power. After which he retired into the Country, and finiſhed the Works he has publiſhed, to wit, A Reply to the King of Great Britain. A Treatiſe of the Euchariſt againſt du Pleſſis Morney. Letters, Harangues, &c. He died at Paris, Wedneſday, the 5th. of September, 1618, aged 63 years. John Davy du Perron, Brother to this Cardinal, was Archbiſhop of Sens after him, and died in 1621. *D'Oſſat. l. 1. PERROT (Nicholas) Sieur of Ablancourt, acquired much Reputation in the XVIIth. Century for his Wit, and the Faculty he had of tranſlating ancient Greek and Latin Authors into French. He was born in Campagne, April 5th. 1606. At the Age of eighteen he was admitted to plead in the Parliament of Paris; and frequented the Bar till he was five and twenty, when he went into Holland; he ſtaid near a year a Leyden, where he learn'd the Hebrew Tongue, and contracted Friendſhip with Salmaſius. From Holland he went into England; then he returned to Paris, where he had the opportunity to ſee Men of Learning. In 1637 he was admitted into the French Academy with general Applauſe; and afterwards he retired to his Eſtate at Ablancourt in Campagne; where he died of the Stone, the 17th. of November, 1664, aged near fifty nine years. We have nothing that is purely his, and of his own Invention, but the Preface to the Book entituled, Le Honnetê femme of F. du Boſe, the Prefaces and Epiſtles Dedicatory before his Tranſlations, and a little Treatiſe of the Fighting of the Romans, which is in the end of the Tranſlation of Frontin. But his Verſions are many; as that of Minutius Fœlix, Four Orations of Cicero, Tacitus, Lucian, The Hiſtory of Africa by Marmol. He likewiſe tranſlated Zenophon's Retreat out of Aſia, Arrian's Hiſtory of the Wars of Alexander the Great, Cæſar's Commentaries, Thucidydes, &c. which laſt was a-doing when he died, but not thoroughly compleated, M. Patru and Richelet, having reviſed it before it was publiſhed, and ſeveral others. All his Tranſlations were approved of; and M. de Vaugelas found them ſo fine, that he has given this Teſtimony under his hand upon his Manuſcript of his Verſion of Quintus Curtius. That he had amended and corrected his Work according to the Arrian of M. de Ablancourt, who, for his Hiſtorical Style, in his opinion, was exceeded by none; it being ſo eaſie, elegant, and ſhort, &c. It's true, this Illuſtrious Tranſlator often takes ſome liberty, but it is in Places where he ought to do it, to the end the Sence of his Original may be underſtood without taking away of its Force and Elegancy. At firſt he had no other Advice, but that of M. Patru, but afterwards, coming to be acquainted with M. Courart and M. Chapelain, he took alſo their Opinions upon his Works. He underſtood Philoſophy, Theology, Hiſtory, and Philology; was skilled in the Hebrew, Greek, Latin, Italian, and Spaniſh Tongues; and had a great deal of Vivacity and Penetration; was naturally ready and warm; and when diſputing upon any point of Learning he did it always with Heat, but without any exceſs of Paſſion; at other times he was obliging and affable. M. Patru, vie de M. d'Ablancourt.

PERSECUTIONS of the Church, a Name given to Troubleſome Times, during which the Chriſtians have been haraſs'd and tormented by the Heathen Emperors, or Hereticks ſupported by the Civil Power. They uſually reckon up twenty four of them; but Riccioli adds two more, and thoſe added by him are the Firſt and the Sixteenth, in the following order; but ſome of them we ſhall omit.

The 1ſt. Perſecution was made at Jeruſalem againſt S. Stephen, and other young Chriſtians, at the Inſtigation of Saul, named afterwards Paul; and was continued by Herod Agrippa againſt S. James and S. Peter, and the reſt mentioned in the Acts of the Apoſtles, ch. 12.

2d. Under Nero, began the tenth year of his Reign, and the ſixty fourth after the Nativity of Chriſt, occaſioned by the burning of the City of Rome, which laſted for ſix days, from the nineteenth of July, till the twenty fourth, and whereof the Chriſtians were falſly accuſed. This Perſecution, which Nero ordered by an Edict, laſted till the Death of that Emperor, which happened in the Year 68.

3d. Under Domitian, began the ninth year of his Reign, and the ninetieth of our Lord, and was appointed by a very rigorous Edict in 95. It laſted till the Death of that Emperor, who was killed in September, 96.

4th. Under Trajan, began the firſt year of his Reign, and the ninty ſeventh of the Chriſtian Calculation. That Emperor put forth no Edict againſt the Chriſtians, but a general Ordinance, by which he forbad all ſorts of Aſſemblies and Societies, whence the Governours of the Provinces took occaſion to perſecute the Chriſtians who aſſembled in their Oratories. And at laſt Tiberius, Governour of Palæſtine, having writ to that Emperor, that he had not Executioners enough to put to Death all the Chriſtians that were there, Trajan, according to the Teſtimony of Suidas, ſtopped the Perſecution in the Year 116.

5th. Perſecution was under Adrian, and began in 118. This Emperor publiſhed no Edict againſt the Chriſtians; but he gave Orders, that all the Governours of the Provinces ſhould put the Laws in Execution, which prohibited New Religions. Eight years after, that is, in the Year 126, Quadratus, Biſhop of Athens, and Ariſtides, a Chriſtian Philoſopher, having preſented an Apology to the Emperor Adrian, he commanded them to ceaſe tormenting the Chriſtians; but the Perſecution was not effectually ſtop'd till 129; and when that Emperor was return'd to Rome, in 136, he cauſed ſome Martyrs to be put to Death there.

6th. Under Anthony the Debonnaire, began in the Year 138, although that Emperor made no Edict againſt the Chriſtian, yet his Officers put many to Death, eſpecially after that Antoninus forbad them to read the Sibylls Verſes and the Books of the Prophets, for that the Reading of them turned a great many Pagans from worſhipping of Falſe Gods. In the Year 153 the Emperor ſeeing all the Roman Empire afflicted with Famine, Fire, Inundations and Earthquakes, was deſirous to appeaſe the Gods, and amongſt the reſt the God of the Chriſtians, which obliged him to ceaſe the Perſecution. However in 156 Pope Hyginus was martyred.

7th. Under Marcus Aurelius, began in the Year 161, and ended in 174, after the Victory that Emperor gained over the Quadi and Marcomani, by the Valour and Prayers of the Chriſtian Legion, called afterwards the Thundering Legion; then he forbad by an Edict the puniſhing of any Chriſtians, for what concerned Religion, and ordered, That all their Accuſers ſhould be burnt. However Pope Soter was martyred in the Year 177, three years before the Death of Marcus Aurelius.

The Chriſtian Church enjoyed Peace under the Emperors Commodus, Pertinax, and Didius Julianus, that is, from 180 till 193, for Commodus had a Reſpect for Martia, who favoured the Chriſtians, and the other two Emperors would not revoke Marcus Aurelius's Edict.

8th. Perſecution began under the Emperor Severus, in the Year 199. He let the Chriſtians live in Peace during the firſt ſix years of his Reign; but the Crimes of the Jews and Gnoſticks, which were imputed to all the Chriſtians, cauſed a New Perſecution, which laſted till 211, at which time the Emperor died.

The Church enjoyed Peace under the Emperors Caracalla and Geta. Macrinus ſucceeded them in 217. And in his Reign, Aſclepiades, Biſhop of Antioch, was put to Death. Heliogabalus got the Empire next, in the year 218; and in his time ſome Infidels cauſed Pope Zephyrinus to be put to Death. Alexander Severus, who aſcended the Throne in 222, favoured the Chriſtians; but ſome, without his knowledge, were tormented, and patiently ſuffered Martyrdom.

9th. Under Maximinus, began in the Year 235. That Emperor ordered only by Edict, That the Prelates of the Church ſhould be ſeverely puniſhed as the Authors of the New Doctrine; but the Governours of the Provinces extended their Cruelty to others as well as to them.

The Church enjoyed Peace under the Emperors Gordian and Philip, that is, from the Year 238, till 249.

10th. Perſecution was appointed in 249, by the Emperor Decius; and ceaſed at his Death, in 251.

The Emperors Gallus and Voluſian did not perſecute the Chriſtians in the beginning of their Reigns; but in 253 they condemned them to ſuffer cruel Puniſhments, purſuant to the Edict of Decius their Predeceſſor.

11th. Under Valerian and Galienus, began but in 257; for theſe Emperors having ſucceeded Gallus and Voluſianus in the Year 254, immediately let the Chriſtians alone; and it was unknown to them that Lucius was martyred for the Faith in 255; but in the Year 257 they publiſhed an Edict for the taking off all ſuch as profeſſed Chriſtianity, or rather renewed that of Decius. This Perſecution laſted three years and a half, that is, till 260.

During the laſt eight Years of the Reign of the Emperor Galienus, under the Emperors Claudius and Quintilius, and for the three firſt Years of Aurelian, the Church was freed from Perſecution, which was for the ſpace of thirteen Years.

12th. Perſecution was under Aurelian, and began in the third Year of the Reign of that Emperor, which was in 273, and was continued till 275.

The Church had ſome reſt under the Emperors Tacitus, Probus and Carus, that is, from the Year 275, till 282. when Numerianus being taken into the Participation of the Government, made ſome Ordinances againſt the Chriſtians.

13th. Perſecution was ſet a foot by Diocleſian and Maximinian in the Year 303, which was the nineteenth of their Reign; having abdicated the Empire in 304, in favour of Galerius and Conſtantius Chlorus, that Perſecution continued under the name of Diocleſian, till 310, when Galerius put a ſtop to it; after his death Maximinus revived it in 312, and Licinius continued it with much cruelty from 316 till 325, that the Emperor Conſtantine reſtored Peace to the Church.

The Emperor Conſtance, Son to Conſtantine the Great favoured the Arians very much from the Year 337, that he ſucceeded his Father, in which was a kind of a Perſecution, which laſted till 361.

14th was ordered by Sapor II. King of Perſia, in the Year 343, which was the thirty fourth of his Reign. This Prince ſuffering himſelf to be impos'd upon by the Magi and Jews, who accuſed the Chriſtians of being diſaffected to his Government in favour of the Romans, commanded his Officers to put to death all the Chriſtians that were in his Kingdom, which Sozomen relates were about 16000 Men.

15th. Perſecution laſted one Year, in the Reign of Julian the Apoſtate. He publiſhed no Edict againſt the Chriſtians, but did what he could to ſupport the Hereſies, and forbad the Children of Chriſtians to be taught in Heathen Schools, expos'd Chriſtianity in his Letters to his Governours, caſhier'd the Chriſtians out of Poſts of Profit and Truſt; degraded them in their Quality, and publiſh'd ſeveral ſevere Edicts againſt them.

16th. was authoriz'd by the Emperor Valens, an Arian, from the Year 366, till 378.

17th. Perſecution was rais'd by Iſdegerdus King of Perſia in 420. That Prince had ſuffered the exerciſe of Chriſtianity in his Kingdom; but the Biſhop of Marutha having pull'd down a Temple dedicated to Fire, which the Perſians ador'd as a God, and refuſing to rebuild it, was condemn'd to death by the King's order, who endeavoured afterwards to root out all the Chriſtians. This Perſecution laſted from 420 till 450, which was the ninth Year of the Reign of Varanes V.

18th. Perſecution was rais'd againſt the Orthodox in the Reign of Genſeric King of the Vandals an Arian, and laſted from 437 till 476.

19th. in the Reign of Huneric, King of the Vandals, Genſeric's Succeſſor, began in 483, and laſted till the death of that King in 484.

20th. was under Gundabond, who ſucceeded Huneric in 484, and left them at Peace for ten Years, but in 494 he exerciſed great Cruelties upon them.

21ſt. under Thraſamond the Brother and Succeſſor of Gundabond, did not begin till the Year 504, for till then the King endeavoured only to ſeduce the Orthodox by Preſents, and was content to forbid the chuſing of new Biſhops in the room of thoſe deceaſed.

Hilderick, Son of Hunerick, and Grandſon by the Mother's ſide, to the Emperor Valentinian, recall'd the Biſhops, and ſet the Churches open in the Year 622. And thus end the Four Vandalick Perſecutions.

22. Perſecution was ſtirr'd up by the Arians in Spain, beginning under Leovigildus King of the Goths in 584, and ended under Rocaredus in 586.

23th. under Coſroes II. King of Perſia, began in 607, and loſted twenty Years; that is, till 627, when having been defeated by Heraclius, he was kill'd by his own Son Syroes.

The 24th. Perſecution began in Japan, in 1587, in the Reign of Taicoſama, at the Inſtigation of the Bonzi, and after ſome Intermiſſion, was reviv'd by King Xonguſama, in 1616, and carry'd on with greater Rigour and Cruelty, by Toxonguno, who ſucceeded him in 1631. Riccioli Chronol. Reform. Tom. III. Varenius, &c.

As for the Perſecutions before Conſtantine, the Reader may conſult Mr. Dodwell's Diſcourſe, De Paucitate Martyrum, where he'll find the Number of the Martyrs conſiderably leſſen'd. Dodwell Diſſert. Cyprian.

PERSEPOLIS, an ancient City of Perſia, which was the Capital of the King, ſituated on a River, called by Strabo and Quintus Curtius Araxes, and by Ptolemy, Rhogomanis, which made it difficult of acceſs. Alexander the Great took it, and at firſt ſpar'd it, but afterwards being drunk, and perſwaded thereto by Thais, he burnt it. This Thais, an infamous Strumpet, ſollicited him to revenge the Greeks, by deſtroying of this Place which he had before ſpared with his Arms in his Hand; and that Prince was the firſt that threw a burning Flambeau into the Palace, almoſt all built of Cedar; and ſo was this famous City ruin'd in the 3624 Year of the World, according to Salian. It's generally believ'd, That the Ruins of Perſepolis are at Chebil Minara, between Iſpahan and Shiras, but there is a great deal of diſtance between the one and the other, as I have learnt from a learned Man, who has been in thoſe very places. The Geographers that follow Ptolemy place Perſepolis in the 91ſt degree of Longitude, and Chebil Minara in the 96th. This name ſignifies as much as Forty Pillars, becauſe of the ruines of a Building, where may be ſeen ſome Marble Columns, the Inſcriptions of which cannot be underſtood by the modern Inhabitants, (the Letters are broad below, and form'd like an Obeliſk at top) and the magnificent remains of a Palace. Authors are put hard to it to know what this Edifice was: Some thinking it to be that deſcrib'd by Diodorus Siculus; others that ſpoken of by Ælian. Strabo lib. 15. Pliny lib. 6. chap. 26. Quintus Curtius, lib. 5. *Diod. PERSES, an Illuſtrious Lord in the Country of Elam, who for his merit obtain'd the Government of the People, and gave them the name of Perſiaus. He had a Son whoſe name was Achemenes, from whom Perſia was called Achemenia. Ælean. Hiſt. Animal. Lib. 12.

PERSEUS, the Son of the Sun and the Nymph Perſeis, and Brother of Eetes, Alceus and Circe, reigned in that Country that extends it ſelf all along Mount Taurus towards Colchos. He married the famous Hecate, and after the flight of Medea, cut the young Abſyrtus in pieces. He dethron'd his Brother Eetes, and made himſelf King of Colchos; but Medea returning to Colchos, reveng'd the death of her Father by that of his Uncle, whom ſhe deſtroy'd by her Poiſons. Apollodorus. Valerius Maximus, lib. 6.

PERSEUS, the Son of Jupiter and Danae, made his name famous by his Exploits; for even in his Cradle he bore the violence of the Waves of the Sea, to which, together with his Mother, he was expoſed by Acriſius her Father, whom the predictions of the Oracle had alarm'd. He was caſt upon the Iſle of Seriphus where he was very carefully brought up by Dictys the Brother of Polydecte Princeſs of that Iſland; and as he prov'd a prudent and generous perſon, the Poets feign'd Minerva had lent him her Buckler. He overcame Meduſa, and ſubdued the Inhabitants of Mount Atlas, and deliver'd Andromeda from a Sea Monſter and from the Perſecution of Phineus. After his return he killed his Grandfather Acriſius unawares: being griev'd at that fatal accident, he forſook Argos, and contented himſelf with Tirinthn, in whoſe Territories he built Myſſene, where his Poſterity Reign'd for near an hundred Years. Perſeus was a Lover of Learning, and erected a School for the promotion of it, and upon that account it was that the Poets have placed him among the Stars, having been one of the moſt Illuſtrious Heroes of the fabulous times. Perſeus was thought to be the Son of Jupiter becauſe he was wondrous ſucceſsful. He made War againſt the Gorgons, whoſe Queen was called Meduſa, then turned his Arms againſt Mauritania, afterwards againſt the Æthiopians, where he married Andromeda, Daughter of King Cepheius. Returning into Greece he overcame his Uncle Prætus and Polydectes King of the Iſland Seriphus. He compaſs'd all this in ſo ſhort a time, and with ſo much cunning, that he was ſaid to have Mercury's Wings and Sword, Orcus's Head-piece, with the Helmet of Pallas; the Wings denoting Celerity, the Sword Mercury's Craft, the Head-piece Orcus's cloſe and reſerv'd Council, Pallas's Target the ſtupendious ſucceſs of his undertaking. By Meduſa's Head wherewith he turned People into Stones is meant the great Wealth of the Gorgonides, by which, corrupting part of his Enemy, he did the more eaſily overcome the reſt. Ovid l. 4. & 5. *Met. PERSEUS, the laſt King of Macedonia ſucceded his Father Philip in the 575 Year of Rome, who not ſatisfy'd with his Conduct, had a deſign to diſinherit him, and beſtow the Kingdom upon Antigonus, Brothers Son to his Guardian, but Perſeus diverted this deſign, and cauſed his Competitor to be put to death. He made War upon the Romans but with ill ſucceſs, having been often beaten, and entirely defeated at the Battle of Pydna in 586. Upon this general overthrow of his Army he fled, and retir'd to the Iſle of Samothracia; but he was diſcovered by the Romans and led to Rome in triumph before Paulus Æmilius's Chariot. His Reign was for eleven Years. Titus Livius, lib. 40. Juſtin. lib. 33. Plutarch on the Life of Paulus Æmilius. Velleius Paterculus. Eutropius. Florus, &c.

PERSHORE, a Market Town of Perſhore Hundred in the South parts of Worceſterſhire, on the Weſt of the Avon, being a great through-fare betwixt London and Worceſter, but ſomewhat decay'd ſince the diſſolution of its ancient Abby.

PERSIA, a famous Kingdom in Aſia, called otherwiſe the Empire of the Sophy, but by the Inhabitants named Farſi and Farſiſtan, and by Greek and Latin Authors Perſis. This great Dominion extends it ſelf from Eaſt to Weſt, from the River Indus to the Tigris or Tigel; its former limits to the Eaſt were the Indus above-mention'd, the Kingdoms of Cambaya and Mogul; to the Weſt Dierbec and Armenia, Turkiſh Provinces, with the River Tigris; to the South the Perſian Gulf, Indian Sea, and Kingdom of Ormus; and to the North the Caſpian Sea, with the Tartars of Usbec or Zagatai. Perſia formerly comprehended Media, Hircania, Margiana, part of Aſſyria, Suſiana, Parthia, Aria, Paropaniſus, Chaldæa, Perſia it ſelf peculiarly ſo called, Caramania, Drangiana, Arachoſia and Gedroſia, which had been almoſt all potent Kingdoms. The Provinces of this Empire are about 15 or 16; others ſay, 18, to wit, Servan, Kilan, Dilemon, Ayrach, Agemi, which was the Ancient Media; Khoeme, which comprehends the ancient Margiana, and part of Parthia; Curdiſtan, part of the ancient Aſſyria, Choraſan, Yerack, Chuſiſtan formerly Suſiana, Perſis called Farſi, Kherman and Siſiſtan, the ancient Caramania, Macheran, Candahar and Sableſtan, which very near take in Gedroſia, Arachoſia and Drangiana, with Tabaroſtan and Gordian, where was the ancient Hyrcania. Hiſpahan is now the Capital City of Perſia, whereas Casbin was formerly; the others are Cherman, Com, Caſſian, Souſter, Tauris, Schamachia, Ormus, Ardeuil, Derbeut, Sciras, Siſiſtan, Gaudel, Lar, Herat, Darabegord, Mexat, &c. Perſia is ſituate in the temperate Zone. A ridge of Mountains divide it almoſt in the middle, as the Appennines do Italy. The Provinces to the North of theſe Mountains are very hot, but the others that lie Southward are of a temperate Air. The Kings of Perſia made formerly uſe of this conveniency, changing their abode according to the Seaſons, ſpending the Summer at Ecbatana, the Winter at Suſa, and the Spring and Autumn either at Perſepolis or Babylon. The late Kings have alſo made uſe of the ſame advantage, altering their Habitations almoſt in all the ſeaſons of the Year. And this different Situation is the cauſe that the Provinces of Perſia are not equally healthful. The Ground in the Plains is dry and ſandy, ſtrewed with ſmall red Stones, and with great Thiſtles which they burn in ſome places where there is no Wood. The Mountainous parts, and the Province of Kilan are very fruitful, where are to be ſeen a great many Villages, whoſe Inhabitants are very skilful and induſtrious to convey the Rivulets that run from the Mountains by Channels, to water their Lands and Gardens in thoſe places where it ſeldom rains. They uſually ſow their Rice, Wheat, Barley, Millet, Lentil, Peaſe and Beans, Oats being unknown to them, and Rye abhorr'd by them. There is almoſt no Province in Perſia that does not produce Cotton, which grows upon Buſhes two or three Foot high: Tame Beaſts among them are Sheep, Goats, Buffles, Oxen, Camels, Horſes, Mules and Aſſes. They value their Horſes very much, which they feed with Barley or Rice mix'd with chopp'd Straw. They have ſeveral ſorts of Camels. The Fruits of Perſia are excellent good, and eſpecially Melons, whereof there are divers ſorts, and ſome that weigh twenty or thirty pounds. The Climate of the Country is very agreeable for Vines and all ſorts of Fruit-trees; but the Perſians, in obedience to Mahomet's Command, drink no Wine, yet they love it dearly, and would almoſt never ſuffer the Armenians to live amongſt them, unleſs it was that they might buy Wine of them. They are ſuffered to make Syrup of ſweet Wine, which they boil off till they reduce it to the ſixth part, and which grows as thick as Oyl; and is called by them Duſchab; and when they would take thereof, they ſteep it in Water, and put a little Vinegar to it which makes very pleaſant Drink. Sometimes they reduce the Duſchab into Paſte, for the conveniency of Travellers. The Perſians have a great number of Mulberry-trees for Silk-Worms to feed upon, Silk being the principal Manufactury, not only of this Country but of all the Eaſt. They have ſeveral Springs of Naphta, and Salt and Iron Mines whereat they work, but meddle not with thoſe of Gold and Silver, for that the Profit will not anſwer the Expence of Wood and Timber to be uſed for the ſame, which is very ſcarce in this Country. Tavern. p. 65. ſaith, Whilſt he was at Balſara there flew ſuch a multitude of Locuſts by, that afar off they appear'd like a great Cloud and darkened the Air, the Wind carrying them into the Deſarts, where they light and certainly die; and ſhould they not be thus driven away by the Wind, nothing could live upon the Earth in Chaldæa, and about the Perſian Gulf where they ſwarm. The Nubian Geographer p. 121, ſaith, the Sea is 210 miles broad at Bahairan, a City of Arabia, 11 Stations or 70 German miles South of Balſara. As to the Stature, Cuſtoms and Manners of the Perſians, they are uſually of a middle ſize, well ſet and thick, and a Tawny or Olive-colour, ſhaving their Hair and Beards excepting the Muſtachio's, which are very large. Red Hair is abominated by them, and they uſe to paint their Hands, and Nails eſpecially; their Coats and Veſts are large, and like unto Womens. The Men wear on their Heads a thing called Mendil made of a Cotton Cloth, or ſome ſilken Stuff ſtreak'd with various colours, and turned ſeveral times about, eight or nine Ells long, having their Pleats or Folds lightly edg'd with a thread of Gold. Some Perſians, and they the greateſt in the Kingdom, wear furr'd Bonnets. The Mendils of their Monks are white, and thoſe of Mahomet's Kindred green. Several wear red Bonnets, which is the reaſon that the Turks call them, in deriſion, Red Heads. The Womens Cloaths are made of finer ſtuff than thoſe of the Men, being uſually of Red or Green Velvet, their Hair made up into Treſſes, hangs down careleſſly over their Shoulders; and all the Ornament of their Heads conſiſts only in two or three rows of Pearls, and are always veil'd going along the Streets. The Perſians are uſual neat, ingenious, of a good Judgment, civil to Strangers, tender-hearted, kind, agreeable, complaiſant and very free of their Complements; thus a Perſian that deſires his Friend to come to his Houſe or makes offers of his ſervice to him uſually ſpeaks; I intreat you to honour my Houſe with your Preſence; I ſo devote my ſelf to your deſires that the Apple of my Eye ſhall be a path to your Feet, &c. They had always the reputation of being not over-careful to ſay the truth, and even to this day, thoſe who do not lye at all are not eſteem'd to be very wiſe, but otherwiſe they are true friends, and ſo faithful in the particular friendſhips they contract together, as to preferr them before Birth and Conſanguinity. It's alſo ſaid of them in general, that they never prove ungrateful for kindneſſes done them, but that they are irreconcilable in their hatred. The People are Courageous and good Soldiers, going chearfully to engage, and even upon the moſt dangerous occaſions. Their Houſes are neat, eſpecially their Kitchins in very good order. They uſually eat Rice, Mutton, ſome Fowl, and have ſeveral ſorts of Bread. Their Drink is Water mixt ſometimes with Duſchab, but the leſs ſcrupulous drink Wine. The uſe of Opium is very common amongſt them, and that of Tabaco yet much more, which, that it may ſmoke pleaſantly, they uſe a Baſon of Water, which is ſometimes perfum'd, and into which they put an hollow Reed, at whoſe end is the Pipe's head; and with another of an Ell long which they hold in their Mouths, they ſuck the Smoke of the Tabaco, which leaves behind it in the Water all the thick and fulſome part. They drink Coffee when they ſmoke, and uſe Tea alſo. There is good Commerce, eſtabliſh'd in Perſia, where there is a great Manufactury for Silk and Tapeſtry, and their Merchants grow very rich, and it is obſerv'd, that this Country produces yearly no leſs than twenty thouſand Bales of Silk, each of two hundred and ſixteen pound weight. The Perſians take many Wives, or rather buy them, for that the Husbands give a Portion to the Maids Fathers, who are only oblig'd to deliver 'em their Daughters Virgins. Their Marriages are Solemniz'd with Ceremonies very Particular, but as they are a very Jealous People, Divorces are much in uſe with them. They waſh the Dead and never put the Corps in the Grave where another hath been buried before. As to the Language of this Country it is peculiar to it, has much of Arabick in it, but nothing at all of the Turkiſh Dialect; yet there is reaſon to believe, that it is very different from that of its ancient Inhabitants, if what Herodotus ſays be true, That all their words ended in S. The greateſt part of them underſtand the Turkiſh Language, eſpecially thoſe Provinces which have for a long time been ſubject to the Grand Signior. The Arabick is the Language of the Learned there, and their Characters are Arabick. They have Colleges and Univerſities, and among all the Sciences they have a more particular Fancy for Arithmetick, Geometry, Aſtronomy, Aſtrology, Ethicks, Phyſick, Law, Eloquence and Poetry. Olearius affirms, They have all Ariſtotle's Philoſophy in Arabick, and call it Danja piala, that is, The Goblet of the World. The greateſt part of their pieces of Eloquence, which they imbelliſh with a great deal of Hiſtory and Moral Sayings, are in Verſe; ſo that they paſſionately love Poetry, and among 'em all ſorts of Poets are to be found, ſome of which are very good ones. Their Poetry is always Rhime, tho' they are not over exact in obſerving the number of Syllables, and make no ſcruple to uſe the ſame words to make it rhime, as appears by theſe Perſick Lines related by Olearius;

Tziri, Tziri Triagh Ianitzæ?
Adamira demagh Ianitzæ?
Tziri, Tziri Tziragh es Eeri bud,
Adamira demag cheri bud.

The Perſians had their Magi formerly, who were the Learned amongſt them. Their Year conſiſts of 365 Days. In the Year 1079 the Sultan of Coraſan or Meſopotamia, named Gelal Edin Melixa cauſed the Vernal Equinox to be obſerved on Thurſday March 14th. nine Minutes after two in the Afternoon. And from this time begins the Gelalean Æra compoſed of Solar Years which the Perſians make uſe of. The ſame Sultan appointed an Intercalation of one Day every four Years, and ſometimes five, called by them Neurus Elſultan, that is, The Year of his Majeſty, or Year Royal. They follow a Period of 1460 Years, call'd Sal Chodai; that is, the Year of God, or of the Sun; and have beſides the Æra called Jezdegirdan, which commences from Tueſday 16th. of June in the Year 632, the 11th. of the Hegira, or Mahomet's Æra, for that in this Year Omar Prince of the Saracens, defeated and kill'd Hormiſdas IV. or Jezdegerdes King of Perſia. The Perſians had ſeveral Princes before Cyrus, and ſometimes more than one at a time, Media and Perſia; but Cyrus about the end of the firſt Year of the 55th. Olympiad which anſwers to the 195 of Rome, dethron'd his Grandfather by the Mother's ſide, Aſtyages, King of the Medes, and began the Kingdom of Perſia in the 19th. or 20th. Year of Servius Hoſtilius King of the Romans, and 559 or 60 before the Birth of our Saviour, which anſwers to the 3495 Year of the World, 4155 of the Julian Period, and the 217 of Iphitus: About two and twenty years after he took Babylon, and began the firſt Monarchy of the Perſians, which laſted 229 years under thirteen Kings, of whom Darius Codomanus was the laſt; after which the Perſians became ſubject to Alexander the Great, to his Succeſſors and to the Parthians untill the 227 or 228 Year of our Redemption, when Artaxerxes the Perſian revolted againſt Artaban King of the Parthians, and eſtabliſh'd the ſecond Monarchy of the Perſians, which continued till 632; at which time King Jezdegerdes, or Hormiſdas IV. was kill'd by Omar King of the Saracens, who remain'd Maſters of this Country for the ſpace of 4:8 years, till the time of Sultan Gelal Edin, who took it from them in 1051. His Succeſſors were Sovereigns of Perſia, from whence they were expell'd by the Tartars under the Conduct of Tamerlain in 1398. Four Princes of the Faction called the Black Ram, ſucceeded in the Kingdom of Perſia after Tamerlain. Uſſum-Caſſan or Ozun Aſembec, the Son of Alibec, of the Family of Aſembejes, and of the Faction of the White Ram, being Governour of Armenia, rebell'd againſt Jooncha King of Perſia, and put him, together with his Son Acen-Ali, to death; and reign'd from the Year 1469 till 1478, or 1485 as others would have it. After him Perſia became ſtrangely divided, but Iſmael, deſcended from a Daughter of Uſſum-Caſſan, ſettled it, aſcending the Throne by his Prudence and Bravery; and enlarg'd his Dominions, by recov.ring all the Country his Predeceſſors had poſſeſs'd. He reign'd in the beginning of the Sixteenth Age, and from him is computed the Empire of the Sophi's. Shaa Abas has much increaſed it in this Age. The Kingdom is Hereditary not only to Sons lawfully begot, but alſo to natural Sons, who are preferr'd before the other Relations; and the Government is ſo Monarchical, and Deſpotick, that the Prince rules there with an abſolute Power, making his Will a Law, and diſpoſing as he pleaſes both of the Lives and Eſtates of his Subjects, who are very obedient, and never ſpeak of their Sovereigns but with extraordinary Reſpect. They uſe to wipe the Places carefully where their Kings have ſat to adminiſter Juſtice, and alſo to go out of the City when the Prince comes to walk in the Streets with his Women. The Revenues of the Kings of Perſia conſiſts in their being poſſeſs'd of a good part of the Land of the Country, in Cuſtoms, the Trade they make of Silks, Tribute paid by the Armenians, and in farming out Fiſheries, Tolls, &c. but this Revenue is not ſo conſiderable as 'tis believ'd. He has ſeveral Officers whoſe places are not Hereditary; the Governours of the Provinces are oblig'd to entertain a certain number of Soldiers to be ready upon any occaſion, and their Militia conſiſts moſtly in Cavalry. As to their Religion, the ancient Perſians ador'd the Sun, Moon, Fire, and other falſe Heathen Gods, but the preſent Inhabitants follow the Doctrine of Mahomet, as the Turks do, but they vary ſomewhat in their Opinions; and herein is principally founded the Enmity that lies between them. They do not expound the Alcoran in the ſame manner, and have neither the ſame Saints nor the ſame Ceremonies. They ſay, that Mahomet having ordered that Ali ſhould ſucceed him, Abubeker, Omar, and Oſman uſurp'd the Sovereign Power, but that the firſt coming to it changed nothing in the Alcoran, which is the Book of the Law, altho' both the one and the other made different Explications upon it. About the end of the XIVth. Century, a certain religious Mahometan, who ſaid he was of the Family of Ali, preach'd a new Doctrine, teaching both by Speaking and Writing, That God ſent him to renew the Glory of the ſame Ali, who had been buried ſo many Ages before: This new Doctor, whoſe Name was Sofi, led an auſtere Life; and by the Inoffenſiveneſs and Regularity of his Carriage and Converſation acquir'd much Reputation, and the Quality of Schich, which is to ſay, The Son of a Prophet. He ſet forth a great many Miracles wrought by Ali, and did at laſt, by his Artifice, make the Perſians forſake the Doctrine of the Turks and comply with his, adding alſo to their Creed, That Ali was the Coadjutor or Lieutenant of God. The Perſians not content to have confirmed the Holineſs of the ſame Ali, have canoniz'd a douzen of his Succeſſors; viſiting the Tombs of theſe Saints, and celebrating their Feaſts. Their Purifications, Prayers, and Ceremonies are different from thoſe of the Turks: Friday is their Feaſt or Holy-day. They have a Lent obliging them to faſt in the Day-time, but they eat plentifully at Night. Circumciſion is in uſe among them, and that both by Men and Women. They have ſeveral Religious Orders, and ſo many ſuperſtitious Ceremonies, that it is very ſtrange how rational Creatures can be miſlead with ſuch Fopperies. The Perſian Sea or Gulf (Sinus Perſicus) commonly called Mer di Elcatif, or de Baſſora, is a Branch of the Indian or Æthiopick Ocean, which begins at Cape Raz, the moſt Eaſtern Cape of Arabia, Lon. 96. 45. and runs as far into the Lands as 81. It has Perſia to the N. and E. and Arabia and Perſia to the S. and W. In the moſt N. W. Point, the Euphrates and Tigris fall into it with a great Current.

PERSIUS (Aulus Flaccus) a Poet, and Satyriſt, living in the Reign of Nero. He was born at Volterra, in Tuſcany, of a Gentleman's Family, and Related to Perſons of the firſt Quality. He was Educated under the Grammarian Palemon, Verginius the Rhetorician, and Cornutus a Stoick Philoſpher, between whom and Perſius there was a very intimate and laſting Correſpondence. This Satyriſt had a great regard for Cornutus, and makes his Acknowledgments for his Learning very handſomely to him, in his Fifth Satyr: He likewiſe paid his Reſpects further to this Maſter of his, in his Will in which he left him a large Summ of Money, and all his Library; but Cornutus was ſo generous, as to receive nothing but the Books. After Perſius's Death, this Philoſopher adviſ'd his Mother to ſuppreſs ſeveral Poems which her Son had made in the greener Part of his Youth; amongſt thoſe that were Suppreſs'd, we may reckon thoſe made upon Arria, a Noble Roman Lady, who kill'd her ſelf to ſhow her Husband the way, and give him an Example of Fortitude. Perſius was Contemporary with Lucan, and ſtudy'd with him under Cornutus. His Acquaintance with Seneca was but a little before his Death, ſo that he ſcarce had any time to underſtand his Excellency, and Reliſh his Genius. Perſius was very Regular in his Life, and of a very mild, ſweet Diſpoſition. So that to judge of a Man's Temper by his Writings, will not always hold; for it muſt be ſaid, his Satyrs are very keen and bitter; 'tis believ'd he did not ſpare even Nero himſelf, but laſh'd him, in a Stroak or two ſo intelligibly, that Cornutus thought it convenient to make ſome Alteration; Perſius, in his firſt Satyr, having put it thus, which Cornutus imagining would be conſtru'd a Reflection upon Nero, altered it thus;

> Auriculas Aſini Mida Rex habet.

> Auriculas Aſini Quis non habet?

Perſius died at the Age of Twenty eight Years. His Way of Writing is very obſcure, for which he is much blam'd by Julius Scaliger. Iſaac Cauſabon appears in his Defence, and endeavours to take off the Imputation. M. Dryden, in his Preface to the Tranſlation of Juvenal, makes a Compariſon between the Satyr of Horace, Juvenal, and Perſius, and after a large and learned Enquiry, gives the Preference againſt him, to the Two former. *Bayle Diction. PERSONNE (Giles) Sieur of Roberval, Geometrician and Kings Profeſſor in the Mathematicks, was born Auguſt the 8th. in the Year 1602. He had a great ſhare in the Friendſhip of Learned Men, and particularly in that of M. Gaſſendi and John Morin, which laſt was King's Profeſſor, and who at his Death deſired the Chair for the Sieur de Roberval, who kept it to his Death, without quitting that of Ramus. He was of the Royal Academy of Sciences; publiſh'd in 1636 a Treatiſe of Mechanicks, and in 1647 and 48 made his Experiments about a Vacuum. Afterwards in 1670 he found out a New way of weighing, which is obſerved in the Journal of the Learned of the 10th. of February in the ſame Year. The Ariſtarchus Samius is of his writing, and another ſort of Weight fit to weigh Air, which is in the King's Library, together with the Inſtruments and Memoirs of the Sieur de Roberval, who died Sunday October 27th. in the Year 1675 in the College of Meſtre Gervais, and was buried at S. Severin his Pariſh Church. Baillet vie de Des Cartes

PERSONS (Robert) born in Nether Stoway, near to Bridgewater, in Somerſetſhire, in 1546, was bred a Roman Catholick, and turn'd Jeſuit in 1575. He was made Rector of the Engliſh College at Rome in 1587. He is ſaid to be a Man of a hot Temper, and rugged Behaviour, and extreamly Zealous for promoting the Intereſt of the Jeſuits. He wrote A Chriſtian Directory, or Exercise, guiding Men to Eternal Salvation, commonly call'd His Reſolutions. A Conference about the next Succeſſion of the Crown of England, In two Parts, Printed Anno 1593 and 94, in Octavo, under the Name of N. Doleman. The firſt Part is for Chaſtiſing of Kings, &c. The ſecond Part was to prove, That the Infanta of Spain was the Right Heir to the Crown of England; which Performance made him much in Favour with the King of Spain. This latter Conference was anſwer'd by Sir John Hayward, Kt. and Dr. in Laws, in 1603, in a Book, call'd, The Right of Succeſſion Aſſerted, &c. A Treatiſe of the three Converſions of the Engliſh from Paganiſm to Chriſtian Religion, publiſh'd under the Name of N. D. i. e. Nic. Doleman: In three Volumes, in Octavo, Printed at S. Omers, in 1603 and 1604. The ſecond Volume contains the third Part of the Treatiſe, wherein there is an Examen of the Kalendar or Catalogue of Proteſtant Saints, Martyrs, and Confeſſors, deviſ'd by John Fox, for the firſt ſix Months. And the third Volume, which contains alſo the third Part of the Treatiſe, and an Examen of the ſaid Kalendar of John Fox for the laſt ſix Months, was printed at the ſame Place, in the ſame Year, under the Initial Letters of N. D. A Relation of a Trial or Conference made before the King of France, in the Year 1600, between the Biſhop Eureux and the Lord Pleſſis Mornay, about certain Points of corrupting, and falſifying Authors, whereof the ſaid Pleſſis was openly convicted: Printed in Octavo, at S. Omers, in 1604. A Defence of the Precedent Relation of a Conference about Religion: Printed with The Relation of the Trial, &c. An Anſwer to the Fifth Part of Reports, lately ſet forth by Sir Edward Coke, Kt. Printed in Quarto, at S. Omers, in 1606. under the Name of a Catholick Divine. Perſons wrote ſeveral other Controverſial Tracts, of which the Reader may inform himſelf in Anthony Wood's Athenæ Oxonien. He died in the Engliſh College at Rome, in 1610. Athen. Oxon.

PERTAUH, Admiral of the Turkiſh Fleet together with Hali, in the Year 1571, who having taken the Town of Dulcigno in Dalmatia upon Articles, treacherouſly violated 'em, putting the Soldiers to the Gallies, ſelling the Citizens for Slaves, and cruelly cutting the Throat of John Buni, Archbiſhop of this City. He after this plunder'd the Iſle of Corfu; but ſeeing the Overthrow of the Turks at the Battle of Lepanto, he eſcap'd in a Skiff through the Chriſtian Gallies without being diſcovered, and arriving at Conſtantinople, was deprived of all his Goods and Imployments by the Grand Signior, who baniſhed him from the City, believing alſo he might ſave the Honour of his Army by caſting the Diſgrace of its Overthrow upon the ill Conduct of his Generals. Gratiani Hiſtoire de Cypre.

PERTH, a County in Scotland, ſo called from Perth or S. Johnſton the chief Town, which ſtands pleaſantly upon the River Tay. It has a pretty good Trade, and is one of the principal Cities in the North. It was totally ruin'd by an Inundation in 1029, and was rebuilt where it now ſtands by William King of Scotland; Lon. 16. 08. Lat. 58. 00. The County is bounded by Angus to the N. Strathern to the W. Fife to the S. and the German Ocean to the E. and divided into two Parts by the River Tay, the greateſt of all Scotland. This Country is very fruitful, and ornamented with the Seats of ſeveral Perſons of Quality, and gives the Title of Earl to the chief of the Drummonds; that part called Gowry which gives the Title of Earl to the Family of Ruthwen, is very famous for its fruitful Corn Fields.

PERTH (James Drummond, Earl of) chief of the Ancient and Noble Family of the Drummonds in Scotland. The firſt of this Family that took the Name of Drummond, was one Maurice, an Hungarian Gentleman, who quitted England with Edgar Atheline, the Right Heir to that Crown, being prevented in the Succeſſion by Harold firſt, and afterwards by William Duke of Normandy, who ſeiz'd the Kingdom in 1066. Maurice commanded the Ship, in which Edgar Atheline, his Mother Agatha, and his Siſters, Margaret and Chriſtina, were embark'd; they met with a violent Storm at Sea, which forc'd them to make for Scotland, where they put into the River Forthe, and landed at a Place ſtill call'd S. Margaret's Houp, from Margaret, Edgar's Siſter. This princeſs marry'd Malcolme III. King of Scotland, who Rewarded Maurice Drummond with a conſiderable Share of Wealth and Honour, and particularly with a large Eſtate, in the Sheriff-dom of Dunbarton, together with the Stewartry of Lenox, neither was the Queen forgetful in acknowledging his Services; for by her Recommendation he marry'd one of her Maids of Honour, by whom he had Iſſue, Malcolme, Father to Maurice II. who had Iſſue, John, Father of Malcolme II. whoſe Son, Malcolme III. call'd Begg, marry'd Ada, Daughter of Malduine, Earl of Lenox, which Lady had but one Brother, who marry'd the Siſter of John Monteith, who betray'd the Famous Sir William Wallace, Viceroy of Scotland, to the Engliſh. But the Earl of Lenox, having no Iſſue by this Siſter of Monteith, this Monteith foreſeeing that his Brother-in-Law the Earl of Lenox, would leave the Earldom to Malcolme, his Siſter's Husband, adviſ'd the King to demand it, hoping, that the King having gain'd it, would have given it to him; but herein he was miſtaken, for the King made a Grant of it to Robert Stewart, whoſe Poſterity continu'd afterwards Earls of Lenox. Malcolme Begg had, by his Wife Ada, Four Sons, John, Maurice, Thomas, and Walter, this laſt was the King's Secretary; Maurice marry'd the Daughter of the Steward of Strathern, and ſucceeded him in his Poſt and Eſtate; Thomas was Baron of Balfrou; the eldeſt, John Drummond, was the 7th. Steward of Lenox, and begun a Feud with John Monteith, there having been an old Miſunderſtanding betwixt the Two Families: This Animoſity came to an open Rupture, and was diſputed in the Field, where John Monteith loſt Three Sons. The King oblig'd both Parties to go no further in the Quarrel; and to compleat the Pacification, there was a Meeting of the great Men of the Kingdom. The Earl of Douglaſs, Angus, Arran, and the Lord Robert, Nephew to King Robert Bruce, being Guardians for the Performance of Articles, their Subſcriptions and Seals, are ſtill to be ſeen in the Inſtrument of the Treaty, in which the Lord Robert, the King's Nephew, owns himſelf Related to both the Families. Drummond having, by an Article of the Treaty, loſt the Lands which he held in the Sheriffdom of Lenox, retir'd into Perthſhire, where he poſſeſs'd the Lands of Stobhal and Cargil. He marry'd the eldeſt Daughter of William de Montefex, Lord Treaſurer of Scotland. His eldeſt Son, Malcolme IV. marry'd Iſabella Douglas, Hereditary Counteſs of Mar, and had a very intimate and friendly Correſpondence with the Earl of Douglas his Brother-in-Law, with whom he join'd his own Troops, to fight the Engliſh, and diſtinguiſh'd himſelf handſomely at the Skirmiſh at Otterbourn or Chevychace, where he took Ralph Percy, Earl of Northumberland, a General of great Reputation, Priſoner, and for this Service he had the Honour of a Penſion during Life. His Brother William married a Daughter of the Baron of Airth, who brought him the Barony of Carnock; from this Marriage, the Branch of Athornden is deſcended. And here it may not be improper to ſay ſomething of the Four Daughters of John Drummond; Annabella, the eldeſt, marry'd Robert III. King of Scotland. This Queen is very much commended, by the Scotiſh Hiſtorians, for her Probity and Prudence; ſhe was Mother to James I. King of Scotland. She had one Siſter marry'd to Archibald Earl of Argyle, another to Alexander Mac Donald, Lord of the Iſles, eldeſt Son to the Earl of Roſs, and a third to Stewart of Dually. Malcolme IV. dying without Iſſue, John Drummond his Brother ſucceeded to the Eſtate. He marry'd Elizabeth Sinclair, Daughter of the Earl of Orkney, Cathneſs, &c. a Perſon of great Eminency and Reputation, both in Denmark and Scotland; by this Earl's Daughter, Drummond had Three Sons and a Daughter, the laſt was marry'd to Lord Thomas, Baron of Kinnaird; Robert the 2d. Brother, marry'd the Heireſs of Barnbugal. John, the youngeſt, ſettled in the Madera Iſlands, where at preſent his Poſterity make a conſiderable Figure. Walter Drummond, the eldeſt Brother, marry'd Margaret, Daughter to the Lord Patrick Ruthven, chief of a Noble Family; by this Lady he had Iſſue Malcolme, John Biſhop of Dunblane, Walter, Baron of Leidcrief, from whom are deſcended the Family of Blair Drummond, which produc'd the Two other Branches of Newton and Gararum. To return to Malcolme V. who was eldeſt Brother, and marry'd Margaret Murray, Daughter of the Lord of Tullibardin, by whom he had Iſſue John Lord Drummond, made a Peer of the Realm, Walter, Laird of Deanſtone, James, Laird of Corrivecter, Thomas, Laird of Drumminerinock, from whom the Branches of Invermay, Cultmalindri, Comrie and Pitcairns are deſcended. John Drummond, eldeſt Son of Malcolme V. marry'd Elizabeth Lindſey, Daughter of the famous Earl of Crawford. This John was a Perſon of a great Genius and Capacity. He was made Juſtice-General of Scotland, which in thoſe Days was the beſt Poſt in the Kingdom. He purchas'd all the Eſtate which his Kinſman the Baron of Gencraig was poſſeſs'd of in the Sheriffdom of Strathern, and likewiſe with the King's Permiſſion, the Hereditary Stewartry of this Shire. He did great Service to James IV. King of Scotland, for he Routed the Earl of Lenox, and the Lord Liſle, as they were upon their March to join the Earl-Marſhal, and the Lord Gordon, in order to execute their Plot of ſeizing the Perſon of the King, and the Adminiſtration, under Pretence of revenging the Death of James III. After this John Drummond was ſent Embaſſador into England to conclude a Peace with Richard III. After the Death of the King of Scotland, he was outed of his Offices and Eſtate, for giving a Box o'th' Ear to Lion King at Arms, who was ſent to Summon him before the Parliament, to give an Account of the Queen's Marriage with the Earl of Lenox; but by the Queen's Intereſt, and the Interceſſion of the great Men of the Kingdom, and in Conſideration of his Quality and Merit, he was Two Days after reſtor'd to his Honour and Eſtate. This John had Four Daughters, of which One, call'd Margaret, was ſo well lik'd by King James IV. that he reſolv'd to marry her, but the Relation between 'em making the Pope's Diſpenſation neceſſary, the King being not willing to wait till it could be procur'd, was marry'd to her privately, and ſoon after had a Daughter, who was marry'd to the Earl of Huntley. When the Diſpenſation was come, the King intended to marry her publickly; but a Pique which ſome of the Great ones had againſt the Houſe of Drummond, put 'em upon Poiſoning this Margaret, to hinder her Family from having the Honour of giving Two Queens to Scotland. Her Siſter Elizabeth, was Counteſs of Angus. Euphemia, another Siſter of hers, was marry'd to the Lord Fleming, and Annabella, the youngeſt, was Counteſs of Montroſs. William Drummond, Son of John, marry'd the Lady Iſabella Campbel, Daughter to the Earl of Argyle, by whom he had Iſſue Two Sons, Walter and Andrew. He and his Family were in open Defiance with that of Murray, and amongſt other Rencounters between 'em, there was one time ſeveral Gentlemen of the Houſe of Murray barbarouſly burnt in a Church by ſome of Drummond's Party, of which Crime, notwithſtanding himſelf was very Innocent, yet being out of favour with the King, he was condemn'd to loſe his Head, and the Sentence executed accordingly. His Son Andrew was made Baron of Bellichlon, and made a diſtinct Branch, the laſt Heir Male of which was Maurice Drummond, who left Four Daughters, which were match'd to conſiderable Families in England. One of 'em being Wife to Caril, Secretary to King James. Walter Drummond, eldeſt Son of William, had Iſſue by Elizabeth Graham, Daughter of the Earl of Montroſs, only one Son, viz. David Drummond, who marry'd the Lady Margaret Stewart, Daughter of the Duke of Albani, Vice-Roy of Scotland, by whom he had only one Daughter, marry'd to the Laird of Poury-Ogilby. After the Death of Margaret, he marry'd Lilia Ruthven, by whom he had Five Daughters; Firſt, Jane, marry'd to John Earl of Montroſs, Chancellor and Commiſſioner of Scotland. Secondly, Anne, marry'd to John Earl of Marr, Lord-High-Treaſurer. Thirdly, Lilia, Counteſs of Crawford. Fourthly, Catharine, Lady Tullibardin. Fifthly, Margaret, Lady Keir; and Two Sons, Patrick, of whom more by and by, and James, Laird of Maderly, from whom the Viſcounts of Strathallan, and the Barons of Marchani are deſcended. The firſt of this Line, that were made Viſcounts of Strathallan, was William Drummond, he was Lieutenant-General of King James's Forces, and a Man of great Abilities both for the Camp and Council-Board. Patrick Drummond, above-mention'd, marry'd the Lady Margaret Lindſey, Daughter to the Earl of Crawford, and by her had Five Daughters: Firſt, Catharine, Counteſs of Rotheſs. Secondly, Lilia, Counteſs of Dunfermling, Mother of the Counteſſes of Lautherdale, Kelly, Belcarres, and Cathneſs. Thirdly, Jane, Counteſs of Roxborough, Governeſs to King Charles I's Children. Fourthly, Anne, Lady Tonay-Barclay; and Fifthly, Elizabeth, marry'd to the Lord Elphinſton; beſides theſe Five Daughters, Patrick Drummond had Two Sons, James and John. James Drummond, created Earl of Perth, marry'd the Lady Elizabeth Seaton, Daughter of the Earl of Winton. He died young, leaving Iſſue only One Daughter, who was afterwards Counteſs of Sunderland. He was ſucceeded in his Honour and Eſtate, by John, his Brother, who marry'd the Lady Jane Ker, Daughter of the Earl of Roxborough, by whom he had Four Sons and Two Daughters, One of which was Counteſs of Wigton, and the other Counteſs of Tullibardin. Of the Four Sons, the eldeſt was James, of whom preſently; Robert, who died in France; John, head of the Branch of Logy Almond, and William Earl of Roxborough, from whom the Houſes of Roxborough and Balantine are deſcended. James Drummond, ſecond Earl of Perth, marry'd Anne Gordon, Daughter of the Marquis of Huntley, by whom he had Two Sons and One Daughter, (viz.) James, of whom afterwards John and Anne. This laſt was a very worthy Lady, and marry'd the Earl of Errolle, Hereditary Conſtable of Scotland. John Drummond, Earl of Melford, and Secretary of State to James II. King of Great-Britain. His Lordſhip has been twice marry'd, firſt to the Heireſs of Lundie, by whom he had Iſſue, Three Sons, and Three Daughters; theſe laſt are the Lady Anne, marry'd to the Baron of Houſton; the Lady Elizabeth, to the Viſcount of Strathallan; and the Lady Mary. The Three Sons are, James, Baron of Lundie, Robert, and Charles. His Lordſhip's ſecond Lady, is Euphemia Wallace, Daughter of Thomas Wallace, Baron of Craig, the chief of a very Ancient Family. By this ſecond Venter, he has Six Sons, and Three Daughters, John, Laird of Torth, Thomas, William, Andrew, Reynald, and Philip; Catharine, Thereſa, and Mary. James Drummond, third Earl of Perth, was made Privy-Councellor in 1678. Lord-Juſtice-General in the Year 1682. and Lord-Chancellor of Scotland in 1684. His Lordſhip has been Thrice marry'd; firſt to the Lady Jane, Daughter to William, Marquis of Douglas; ſecondly, To the Lady Lilia, Counteſs of Tullibardin; thirdly, To the Lady Mary Gordon, Daughter of Lewis, Marquis of Huntley, and Siſter to the Duke of Gordon. By his firſt Lady he had Iſſue the Lady Mary, marry'd to William, Earl-Marſhal, and Hereditary Marſhal of Scotland. The Lady Anne, unmarry'd, and James, Lord Drummond. His Lordſhip, by each of his other Two Ladies, he has Iſſue Two Sons. This above-mention'd Account is ſufficiently ſupported by the Records of the Family, preſerv'd for ſeveral Ages in the Abby of Inchaſry, and by the Scotch Hiſtorians. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

PERTINAX (Ælius or Publius Helvicus) Emperor, was of a mean Extract, but from ſmall Commands in the Army was at laſt advanced to be Conſul, Prefect of Rome, and Governour of the moſt conſiderable Provinces. He was choſen Emperor in the Year 192, after the Death of Commodus, by the favour of the Pretorian Guard. The Senate gave their Conſent thereto, hoping, that by his Vertue and Prudence he would regulate all Things. He was then Sixty Years old: He had great Experience in things, made many good Laws, and ſhewed himſelf averſe to the Violence of his Predeceſſors; but Lætus, who had rais'd him to the Empire, together with his Pretorian Soldiers, and could not endure the Re-eſtabliſhment of Martial Diſcipline, and the laudable Carriage of Pertinax; murther'd him on the 27th. of March, in the Year 193, two Months and twenty five Days after his Election: Dion. in Pert. Aurelius Victor in Epit.Cæſ.Jul.Capitolin in Pert.Euſebius in Chron.

PERTOIS, Lat. Pertenſis Ager, a Tract of Champagne in France, having Champagne, properly ſo called, on the W. and the Dutchy of Bar on the E.

PERU, a Country of South America; formerly belonging to the Yncas, but now to the Spaniards, about ſix hundred Leagues in length, running all along the Pacifick Sea, and gives the Name of Peruvian to all South America, which comprehends Caſtille d'Or, Popajan, Peru, Chica, Chily, and Braſil. It lies almoſt all between the Equator and Tropick of Capricorn. The Kingdom of Chily, Paraguai and Tucuman are to the South, the Pacifick Sea to the Weſt, Popajan to the North; and Eaſtward ſtands the Mountains called Las Cordilleras and Terra Incognita. Some divide Peru into the Higher and Lower, or into the Mountainous and Maritime; but others confine themſelves to the Diviſion made by the Spaniards into three Prefectures or Governments, which are Audienca de los Reyes, Audienca de Quito, and Audienca de los Charchas, or de la Plata. Its Cities are Cuſco formerly the Capital, los Reyes, or Lima, that is now ſo, la Plata, Arequipa, Arica, Baez a Quito, Potoſi, Puerta Viejo, la Pax, S. Frances de Quito, S. Michael, Guamanga, S. Crux de la Sierra, Guancabilica, S. James de Guayaquil &c. This famous Country did belong to Kings called Yncas, who were the lawful Poſſeſſors of it for above ſix hundred Years. Frances Pizarro, a Spaniard, made a diſcovery of it in the Year 1525, and by the Diſagrement of the two Brothers made himſelf Maſter of it, cauſing the King Atabalipa to be ſtrangl'd contrary to his Faith given him. The unſatiable Deſire of Gold mov'd the Spaniards, tho' they pretended Religion, to murther the Indians in a moſt barbarous manner, but Pizarro was puniſhed for it. They were a civiliz'd People, and ador'd the Sun, believing there was another God above it, whom they called Pachacamac. The Spaniards are now Maſters of this rich Country, where they have a Vice-Roy, and ſeveral Epiſcopal Cities. In ſhort, Peru is very fertile in Fruits and Gold Mines, ſo that it was obſerv'd, that at the Arrival of Pizarro there, their very Pottage Pots and Utenſils were made of Gold, and their Houſes covered with the ſame Metal; which may be eaſily believ'd, if we conſider the ſingle Mine of Potoſi, from whence the King of Spain in leſs than Fifty Years, for his fifth Part, has got above an Hundred and eleven Millions in full Weight, each conſiſting of Thirteen Reals and a quarter. As to the Original and Succeſſions of the Kings of Peru, they have many fabulous Stories, that they were deſcended from the Sun, which may be ſeen in Garcilaſſ. de la Vega*. All Authors agree in the following Particulars.

1. That the firſt King of Peru was Ynca Manco Capac, who built the City of Cuſco, about Four hundred Years before the Spaniards came into Peru, that is, about the Year of the World 1125; for their Country was diſcover'd in 1525. Theſe People called their Kings Yncas, that is, Kings or Emperors, and for Excellencies ſake nam'd them Capac-Yncas, that is, the Only or Magnificent Kings: They went alſo by the name of Yntip-Chutim, which ſignifies the Son of the Sun, for they affected much to deduce their Original from the Sun, which they worſhipped as God. The Male Children of the Kings alſo, were called Yncas, and the Grandees of the Kingdom Curacas.

2. The ſecond King was Sinchi-Rocha, the Son of Manco-Capac, but how long he reigned is uncertain; but he enlarg'd his Dominions, poſſeſſing himſelf of Collao, as far as Chuncara.

3. Leoque-Ynpanqui ſucceeded his Father, made new Conqueſts, and built the City of Pucara.

4. Mayta-Capac, the Son of Koque-Ynpanqui conquer'd new Provinces.

5. Capac-Ynpanqui ſucceeded his Father, whoſe eldeſt Son he was, and extended alſo the bounds of his Empire, and left for Succeſſor his eldeſt Son,

6. Ynca-Rocha, who alſo got ſeveral Victories over his Neighbours whom he ſubdued.

7. Jahuac-Huacac reigned after his Father, but did no great Matters; and having been frighted by ſome evil Augury, made his Brother Mayta General of his Army, who ſubdued ſeveral People.

8. Vira-Cocha conſtrain'd his Father to quit his Crown, and aſcended his Throne. He ſubdued thoſe that roſe againſt him, and cauſed ſeveral ſtately Structures to be built.

9. Pachacutec-Ynca ſucceeded his Father, and enlarged the Conqueſts of his Predeceſſors.

10. Ynca-Ynpanqui reigned after his Father, united to his Empire ſome new Provinces, and was ſucceeded by his Son.

11. Ynpac-ynca-ynpanqui did brave Actions, and left his Crown to his Son.

12. Huayna-Capac ſubdued the People of Quito, and after having conquered other Provinces, divided his Empire, giving the Kingdom of Quito to his Son Atahualpa, otherwiſe Atabalipa, and the reſt to Huaſcar who was his eldeſt.

13. Atahualpa and Huaſcar reigned each in their Kingdom for four or five years very peaceably, but Envy raiſed a difference between theſe two Brothers; Huaſcar proving diſſatisfied that he had ſo eaſily yielded up to his Brother a great part of his Kingdom, ſent him an Embaſſador, to require him to acknowledge himſelf to be his Vaſſal; Atahualpa pretended to conſent to the motion, and declar'd, that when he went to do homage to his Brother he deſired alſo to perform the Funeral Obſequies of his Father at Cuſco, and to go thither in great pomp, which Huaſcar very readily granted him; but that diſſembling Prince gathered together all the beſt Soldiers of his Provinces and advanced towards Cuſco, where having ſurpriz'd Huaſcar, he eaſily won the Battle fought between them near unto that City: He uſed this Victory very cruelly, for he put to death, by ſeveral ſorts of Executions all the Princes of the Royal Family, and afterwards his Brother Huaſcar himſelf. This happened at the time that the Spaniards had enter'd into his Kingdom, who quickly puniſh'd his barbarous cruelty, depriving him both of his Kingdom and Life in Caxamalca. The other Yncas after him reigned for ſome years, but with little Authority. Behold a few particulars that happened about the end of the Empire of the Yncas. Huaſcar, having been taken by Atahualpa's Officers in the City of Cuſco was drown'd in the River of Andamarca. A little while after, that is, in May 1533 the Spaniards put Atahualpa to death; hereupon Pizarro, Governour of theſe conquer'd Countries, crown'd, whether in ſcorn or for ſome other Reaſon, Toparpa the Son of Atahualpa King of Peru, and had him proclaim'd by the Grandees of the Kingdom with the uſual Ceremonies, but the Year following he put into his place Mango the Son of Guaynacapa or Huaynay-Capac, as right Heir of the Kingdom. But Pizarro and Almagro, having afterwards formed two Parties, Mango favoured that of Almagro, but afterwards forſook him and retir'd into a Province twenty Leagues from Cuſco. The Spaniards had War amongſt themſelves for ſome years, Almagro was put publickly to death, and Francis Pizarro was kill'd by thoſe of the Party of Almagro in the City of Lima. Vaca de Caſtro was ſent thither by the King of Spain in the Year 1542, and having taken the Government upon him gave Battle to young Almagro, and put him to death in the year 1543. After him the King ſent Blaſco Nunez Vela, for Vice-Roy, but he was defeated by the Army of Gonſalo Pizarro, and kill'd by a Negro in 1546. Pedro de la Gaſca came to ſucceed Blaſco Nunez, and had the good fortune to vanquiſh Pizarro, who was put to death by him as a Criminal in Guaynanima. Thus the Pizarro's loſt, together with their Lives, the Government of all thoſe Countries they had gain'd for the King of Spain, and Pedro de la Gaſca remain'd Vice-Roy of them. As to the Royal Edifices of this Country, the ancient Kings of Peru cauſed very ſumptuous Structures to be built in ſeveral places of their Empire. The chief Temple of the Sun, and the Palace of the Yncas of Cuſco were admirable Structures; the Walls of the Palace being overlaid with Plates of Gold imbelliſhed with divers Figures of Men and other Animals. The Royal Throne which they call'd Tiana, was all of Maſſy Gold ſtanding in an Alcove of Gold. The Princes Eat and Drank in Gold, there being no other Metals made uſe of either in the Dining Room or Kitchen, or in any part of the Palace but Gold or Silver, and of theſe Metals did the Kings cauſe ſeveral ſorts of Animals, Plants, and Trees with their Branches, Flowers and Fruits, to be made. Hiſtorians affirm all this Treaſure or the greateſt part of it was hid by the Indians after their King Atahualpa or Atabalipa had been taken by Pizarro, and cannot be found to this day notwithſtanding all the ſearch made for it, or but a very little of it diſcovered. The walls of the Temple of the Sun at Cuſco were alſo overlaid with plates of Gold from the top to the bottom, and the Figure of the Sun, as it's uſually painted, was all of Gold with its Beams alſo. It's ſaid, That a Spaniard having found it, play'd at Dice for it and loſt it in one Night. This Temple is ſtanding to this day, and is part of the Monaſtery of S. Dominick. Near unto this principal Temple were four others, the firſt whereof was dedicated to the Moon as Siſter and Wife of the Sun, and call'ed by them Quilla, the Walls and Doors of which were covered with Silver. The ſecond was conſecrated to the Planet Venus, which they called Chaſca, and its Walls were alſo overlaid with Silver. The third was dedicated to Thunder and Lightning. which they called by a common name Yillapa. The fourth Temple was built in honour of Iris, or the Rainbow, which was named by them Cuychu, all the inſide overlaid with Gold. Near unto theſe Temples was the Houſe of the Prieſts that were all to be of the Royal Family. There were in divers Provinces ſeveral other Temples built almoſt in the ſame manner, and dedicated to the Sun, but ſuch as were not ſo magnificent as that of Cuſco, except a certain Temple built in an Iſle of the Lake of Titicaca, which was finer than any of 'em, and where the Yncas had hid an infinite deal of Treaſure: It was the ancienteſt of Peru, and for which the Indians had a particular eſteem, for that they believed their firſt Kings were born in this Iſland. As to the Religion of the Peruvians, they adored nothing but the Sun as God, the other Divinities abovemention'd, excepting Pachacamac, were inferior to it: They ſacrificed all ſorts of Animals, and eſpecially Sheep to it, as alſo all manner of Grain and Liquors. They conſecrated Virgins to the Sun, at eight years of age, whom they ſhut up in places appointed for their abode, and from whence they did not go abroad, no not ſo much as to the Temple: They preſerved a perpetual Virginity, imploying themſelves in their retirement to make Stuffs for the King and Queen's Cloaths, and to prepare Bread and Drink for their Solemn Sacrifices; they were almoſt all of the Blood Royal. There were alſo Monaſteries in the other Cities of the Kingdom, wherein were kept the faireſt Daughters of the Curacas or great Lords and other perſons of Quality; but theſe Maids were not conſecrated to the Sun, and preſerved not their Virginity; on the contrary, they uſually ſerv'd for the King's Concubines, who cauſed them to come out of the Cloiſter when he pleaſed, and then returned not thither again, but ſerved the Queen or were ſent back to their Relations. If any one of the Virgins appointed for the King ſuffered her ſelf to be debauch'd the Law commanded her to be buried alive, and him to be ſtrangled who had debauch'd her. As to what regards the Feaſt of the Sun; ſee RAYMI. As for the Philoſophy of the Peruvians, the principal Sciences cultivated amongſt them, were Aſtrology, Geography, Geometry and Phyſick. The Aſtrologers or Aſtronomers obſerved but three Planets, to wit, the Sun, Moon and Venus, called by them Ynti, Quilla and Chaſca. Inſtead of Dials, they uſed ſmall Turrets or Columns, whereon they drew lines to mark out the Solſtices and Equinoxes. They took notice alſo of the Eclipſes both of Sun and Moon, but knew not the true cauſe of them, and related very ridiculous things concerning the ſame; to wit, that the Sun hid its Face, for that it was angry with them: That the Moon was ſick, and that when it ſuffered an entire Eclipſe, they fear'd leaſt it ſhould fall and cruſh all Men to pieces. Their Months were Lunar, and divided into four parts: They began, at firſt, their Year in January, but their ninth King Pachacutec made it begin in December. Their way of practiſing Phyſick was eaſie, uſing almoſt nothing but letting of Blood, and purging by Herbs, whoſe Virtues were ſufficiently known to them. Before the coming of the Spaniards they uſed no Writing, but had ſome courſe Painting, ſuch as the Mexicans or Quipes. Theſe Quipes were a ſort of Regiſter-Books made of ſmall Cords, whoſe colours and knots produced almoſt the ſame effect as the four and twenty Letters of the Alphabet put in a different manner; the yellow noted Gold; the white, Silver; the red, Soldiers; and ſo of other things, and the knots or inter-lacements of the ſmall Cords repreſented as it were the Words and Expreſſions of the Language. There were Officers appointed for the keeping of theſe Memoirs, and to give the meaning of them when there was occaſion. As to Arithmetick, they made and ſtill make Rules with the grains of Maiz, which they adjuſt and tranſpoſe much the ſame as we do our Counters; And 'tis a ſurprizing thing, ſays Acoſta, to ſee them make a Diviſion in ſo little a time and ſo exact a manner, that they never miſtake. This Kingdom lies between the Line and the Tropick of Capricorn in the Torrid Zone, yet is of the ſtrangeſt Temperature of any in America. The Sea-Coaſt never has any Rain, nor any Wind but from the South, which is pleaſant, healthful and grateful to the Inhabitants. It has no Thunder, Hail, nor Snow. Next to it is the Mountainous Country, which is cooler than this, and is ſubject to various Weather. The Andes which is the third part are extream cold, ſubject to perpetual Rains and much Snow, yet they are all fruitful; and tho' they have very different Fruits, Grains and Cattle, yet they have plenty of what is needful for the life of Man. Before the Spaniards ſuddued it this Kingdom had been civiliz'd by the Yncas, who had brought them from their Barbarous Rites and Cuſtoms to a more regular form of Government. They had no Humane Sacrifices like the Mexicans, and they deteſted their Cuſtom of eating Man's Fleſh. They were all cloathed with Garments made of Cotton or Hair, and had the Art of Spinning or Weaving, which was manag'd for the moſt part by the Men within Doors, whilſt the Women took care of their Agriculture, and all their buſineſs abroad. The People on the Sea-coaſt lived moſtly in the open Air, under ſhady Trees or Houſes covered with a Mat and a little Earth, becauſe it never Rains. The Mountaineers lived in Houſes covered with Turfs, and were more Induſtrious, Ingenious, Valiant and Active; their Women were white, of better Education, and very uſeful to the Men in aſſiſting them in the tillage of the Earth. Their Worſhip was moſtly paid to the Sun, as to the Miniſter of the great God, and they thought the Moon was his Wife, but they did not Worſhip her. They had one Temple, dedicated to God, but many very magnificent Piles to the Sun; and they had an imperfect notion of Heaven and Hell, and the immortality of the Soul, and of the Rewards and Puniſhments in another Life. *De Laet Hiſt. de Nov. PERUGIA, PERUGE, Lat. Peruſia, a City of Italy in the Eccleſiaſtical State, a Biſhop's See, which has communicated its name to the Province, and to the famous Lake of Traſimenus, near unto which, Hannibal in the 537th year of Rome defeated the Romans conducted by the Conſul Flaminius. It's a very ancient place, built upon a Hill, paved with ſquare Brick, fortified with ſeveral Baſtions, and a Cittadel which was made by the order of Pope Paul III. It was burnt in the Wars between Auguſtus and Mark Anthony. It maintained a Siege of about ſeven years againſt Totila King of the Goths, who having at laſt ruin'd it, Narſes retook and repair'd it, and it was ſubject to the Lombards untill the Kings of France gave it in the ninth Age to the Holy See; ſince which time it has not changed its Maſter, though it has been often taken, but it ſuffered very much, and eſpecially during the Wars between the Guelphs and Gibelins. It's 40 miles S. from Urbino, and 61 N. E. from Rome. Strabo, Pliny Livy, Tacitus, Clemens Alexandrinus, &c. ſpeak of this City, whoſe Univerſity and Colleges are very famous in Italy, and which is the Reſidence of one of the Pope's Legates. It's alſo fam'd for the Siege which it maintained under Lucius Antonius againſt Auguſtus, until hunger conſtrain'd them to ſurrender, ſo that fames Peruſiana became a Proverb. Pope Paul III. built a Caſtle here, which added to the natural ſtrength of the place, ſo that for its pleaſant Situation, magnificent Buildings, and great plenty, it's one of the moſt conſiderable Cities in the Pope's Dominions. *Felice Ciatti. PERUZZI (Balthazar) a Painter and Architect born at Sienna. He wrought much at Rome in the time of Pope Leo X. and Clement VII. It's ſaid he was very well skill'd in the Mathematicks, and that he throughly underſtood Architecture and Fortification. Leo X. imploy'd him to draw a model of the Church of S. Peter; which he would have finiſhed. He renewed the ancient Decorations of the Theatre, the uſe whereof had been as it were loſt for a long time, when the Cardinal Bernard de Bibienne cauſed his Comedy entituled, Calandra, to be acted before Pope Leo X. which is indeed one of the beſt Italian Comedies that has appear'd on the Stage. Balthazar made the Scenes for it, and adorned them with ſo many Places, Streets, and various ſorts of Buildings, that the thing was admir'd by all people. He opened a way to Engineers and Machine-makers to imitate his Decorations It was he that ordered the Magnificent preparations made for Solemnizing the Coronation of Pope Clement. the VIIth. and afterwards did ſeveral curious things in S. Peter's Church and elſewhere; but he was at Rome when that City was taken in 1527, by the Army of the Emperor Charles V. where the Soldiers Robb'd him of all he had: He delivered himſelf out of their Hands by drawing the Picture of Charles de Bourbon, and immediately embarked for Porto Hercole, in order to go to Sienna, where he arriv'd in his Shirt, having been Robb'd of all to that: His Friends entertain'd him, and the People of Sienna entruſted him with the care of the Fortifications of their City. He wrought again after this at Rome, made a Draught of the Houſe of Maſſomi, and of the two Palaces built by the Urſins near unto Viterbo: He begun alſo his Book of the Antiquities of Rome; and a Commentary upon Vitruvius; but died before he had finiſhed this Work in the year 1536, being but 36 or 37 years of age; and it's thought was poiſoned by his Enemies. Sebaſtian Serlio inherited his Writings and Deſigns, which were very ſerviceable to him in the Books of Architecture he has publiſhed. *Vaſari, vit. de Pit. PESARO, Lat. Piſaurum, a City of Italy in the Dutchy of Urbin, formerly in Umbria, with a Biſhoprick under Urbin. It's very ancient, and we find by the Teſtimony of Hiſtorians, that it was a Roman Colony. Totila deſtroyed it, and it was repaired by Beliſarius: Since that it belonged to the Houſe of Malateſta, Sforza and Rovere, and afterwards was united to the Holy See It ſtands near the Sea in a Plain watered with the River Foglia, which comes up to this City, and makes it a Sea-port. It's ſtrongly fortified, and has a Caſtle which was the Duke's Reſidence, but it is now a Fortreſs. To the Weſt of this City may be ſeen a ſtately Palace, called Poggio Imperiale, built by Conſtance Lord of Peſaro, and adorned by others Titus Livius lib. 33 and 41. Procop. lib. 3. *Pliny. PESCARA, Lat. Aternum, a City of the Hither Abruzzo in the Kingdom of Naples, ſeated at the mouth of a River of the ſame Name it ſtands 45 miles N. W. from Termoli, and 100 S. from Ancona. The River hath its ſource in the Appennine, watereth ſeveral Cities, and then falls into the Adriatick Sea.

C. PESCENNIUS Juſtus (Niger) a Roman Captain who had gained great Reputation by Arms, and was ſaluted Emperor by the Legions of Syria, in the time of Didius Julianus, but after having enjoy'd the Command for about one year, he was killed in endeavouring to make his eſcape to Antioch by the River Euphrates, and his Head was carried to Rome in 194. *Aurelius Victor, in Epit. PESCHERIE, part of the Peninſula on this ſide Ganges, over againſt the Iſle of Ceylon, between Cape Comorin and Negapatan, famous for the Pearl Fiſhing there in the Months of April and September, for which there is a Fair kept at Tuticorin, from which Fiſhery this place has taken its name. The Country is dry and very hot, and has about thirty ſmall Towns belonging to the Naique of Madura.

PESCIA, a great and populous Town upon a River of the ſame Name in Hetruria, twelve miles E. of Luccæ.

PESE-COLA, a Name given about the end of the Fifteenth Age to a famous Diver of Sicily, who was called Nicholas. He was accuſtomed from his Youth to Fiſh for Oyſters and Coral in the bottom of the Sea; and it's ſaid, he would continue ſometimes four or five days under Water and live upon raw Fiſh. He could ſwim admirably well, and often paſs'd to the Iſle of Lipari, carrying Letters with him put up in a Leathern Purſe. Frederick King of Sicily, being made acquainted with the ſtrength and skill of Peſe-cola, commanded him to throw himſelf into the Gulf of Carybdis, near unto the Promontory called Il Capo di faro, in order to know the nature of that place; and as he obſerved Nicholas ſcrupled to make ſo dangerous an adventure, he threw in a great Golden Cup, promiſing to give it him if he could bring it up; this skilful Diver, egg'd on with ſuch a reward, threw himſelf into the bottom of the Gulf, where he ſtay'd almoſt three quarters of an Hour, and afterwards came up holding the Cup in his Hand, and gave the King an Account of the Rocks, Caverns, and Sea-Monſters he had ſeen, and proteſted it would be impoſſible for him to return thither a ſecond time; but Frederick preſented him with a Purſe full of Gold, and threw another Golden Cup beſides into the Sea, which put courage into Peſe-cola, ſo that he went down again but never appear'd more. F. Kercher. Mundi Subterranei Tom. 1.

PESSINUS an ancient City of Galatia, or according to others, of Phrygia, near unto Mount Ida, famous for the Statue and Temple of Cybele, which Statue Attalus King of Pergamus gave to the Romans in 649 who receiv'd it by the hands of Publius Scipio Naſica, and inſtituted in honour of the Goddeſs the Megaleſian Plays. Ptolemy, Livy, &c. ſpeak of Peſſinus, which is now but a little Town in the Region called Chiangara, according to Caſtalde.

PEST, Lat Peſtum, a Town of Upper Hungary, ſituate upon the Danube, over againſt Lower Buda, from whence it yields a delightful proſpect by reaſon of its Walls, Towers and Moſques. There was a fine Bridge of Boats of half a mile long betwixt 'em. In 1541, it was taken without reſiſtance by Solyman the Magnificent, and next year after the Marquis of Brandenburg with a potent Army attempted to reduce it, but the Germans deſerted the Siege in a cowardly manner after there was a breach made and an aſſault given by Vitellius an Italian In 1602 whilſt the Turks beſieged Alba Regalis the Germans took this Town and Lower Buda, after which, many Rencounters happen'd betwixt the Garriſons. When the River was Frozen in 1604, the cowardly Governour Jagen Ruiter deſerted it on a bare report that the Turks were marching to beſiege it; after which it continued in their Hands till 1684 that it was taken by the Duke of Lorrain, but deſerted again when he withdrew from Buda. In 1686 it was retaken by the ſame Duke and aſſur'd to the Imperialiſts by the Conqueſt of Buda.

PESTO, a City and Colony of Lucania in the hither Principality of the Kingdom of Naples. It ſtands upon a Bay of the ſame name 22 miles S. of Salerno, and three from Capaſchio. In 930 it was taken and entirely ruin'd by the Saracens, who ſlew and carried away all its Inhabitants, upon which the Biſhop's-See was removed to Capaſchio aforeſaid.

PETA, a Name given by the ancient Pagans to a Goddeſs which they believed took care of Petitions and Requeſts, ſeeming to be derived from the word Petere to ask.

PETAU, or PETAVIUS (Paul) a great Antiquary, and an Eminent Lawyer, was Councellor or Member of the Parliament of Paris. He had a fine Library of Manuſcripts, and wrote ſeveral curious Tracts, the moſt conſiderable of which are, Veterum Numiſmatum γνώρισμα. Antiquariæ Supellectilis Portiuncula. Syntagma de Nithardo Comite. Diſſertatio de Epocha Annorum Incarnationis Chriſti. This Petavius died in 1614, and is mention'd by ſeveral Authors with Advantage.

PETAU or PETAVIUS (Denys) a Jeſuit, was one of the learnedſt Men of his time, born in Orleans, who, beſides his great knowledge in the Languages which he writ and ſpoke with great fluency, was a great Divine, Hiſtorian, Orator, Critick and Poet, and admitted among the Jeſuits in the year 1605, being the two and twentieth of his age; firſt made Profeſſor of Rhetorick, and afterwards of Divinity. He died in the College of Clermont at Paris, December 11. 1652, aged ſixty nine. See his Life written by Henry de Valois or Valeſius his particular Friend. He tranſlated out of Greek into Latin the Works of Syneſius, which he publiſhed with Notes in 1612 and 1631. Sixteen Orations of Themiſtius he cauſed to be printed in Greek and Latin in 1613, with his Notes and Obſervations upon them; and in 1618, in thoſe two Languages the Breviarium Hiſtoricum of Nicephorus Patriarch of Conſtantinople with Chronological Notes. In 1622 he put out both in Greek and Latin the Works of S. Epiphanius with Notes alſo; and after that, in 1630. and in 1634 he publiſhed the Emperor Julian's Works, added an Appendix, ad Epiphanianas animadverſiones. The other chief Works of Petavius, are, Miſcellaneæ Exercitationes adverſus Claudium Salmaſium; Opus de Doctrina temporum; Uranologium, ſive Syſtema variorum Auctorum qui de Sphæra ac Syderibus, eorumque influentiis Græcè commentati ſunt, cum notis: Rationarium Temporum; Paraphraſis Pſalmorum omnium & canticorum quæ in Bibliis ſparſim occurrunt Græcis verſibus expreſſa cum latina interpretatione: Diatriba de poteſtate conſecrandi; Paraphraſis in Eccleſiaſten. De Theologicis Dogmatibus. Orationes & Opera Poetica, Latina, Græca, Hebraica. Tria Poemata Latina de Tribus Feſtis B. Virginis, &c.

S. PETER, was of Bethſaida, a City of Galilee. His Hiſtory, as far as 'tis related in the Scriptures, is ſufficiently known, but the latter part of his Life is involved with Uncertainties. Doctor Pearſon, Biſhop of Cheſter, in his firſt Diſſertation of the Succeſſion of the firſt Biſhops of Rome, proves from Antiquity, that S. Peter was at Rome, againſt Doctor Barrow, Salmaſius, &c. and others who are of the contrary opinion, &c. As to the time of S. Peter's Birth Authors vary. Some think him but ten years elder than Chriſt. Stengal ſays ſeventeen, which is confuted by Dr. Cave. It's alſo controverted whether he or his Brother S. Andrew, was eldeſt. The Authorities brought by ſome, to prove that he was immediately baptized by Chriſt, are inſufficient. Baronius and other Popiſh Writers ſay, That S. Peter preached at Byzantium, and the adjacent Country. And Oroſius ſays, That he came to Rome about the ſecond year of the Emperor Claudius, and brought Proſperity to the City along with; and beſides other extraordinary Advantages, takes notice of this, That Camillus Scribonianus, Governour of Dalmatia, ſolliciting the Army to rebell againſt the Emperor, the Eagles, their Military Standard, ſtuck ſo faſt in the Ground that no Strength was able to pull it up. At which the Soldiers being ſurpriz'd, turned their Swords againſt the Rebel, and continued firm in their Allegiance. That at his firſt coming to Rome he diſpoſed of himſelf amongſt the Jews, on the other ſide the Tyber; but when he began to preach to the Gentiles, he lodged with Pudens, a Senator, lately converted. Here it was he met with Philo the Jew, come on an Embaſſie in behalf of his Countrymen in Alexandria, and contracted an intimate Acquaintance with him. And here it was, ſays the ſame Author, that he wrote his firſt Epiſtle, and afterwards ſent his Diſciples into the Weſtern parts. Several Years after this, the Emperor Claudius baniſhed the Jews from Rome, upon the account of ſome Seditions; and at that time, they ſay, S. Peter returned to Jeruſalem, but it's uncertain how he diſpoſed of himſelf for many Years after. Some will have it that he travelled into Africa. And others, as Metaphraſtes, &c. that he preached in Britain. And they will have it, That towards the latter end of Nero's Reign he returned to Rome, where he found the People extreamly harden'd againſt Chriſtianity, by the Magical Arts of Simon Magus, who had obtain'd ſo great Veneration, not only from the Vulgar, but the Emperors themſelves, that Juſtin Martyr aſſures us, he was honoured as a Deity, and had a Statue erected to him in the Inſula Tiberina, with this Inſcription, Simoni deo ſancto; but this Inſcription is controverted by Dr. Hammond, and ſome other late Antiquaries. Yet it's probable this Author, being a Perſon of Gravity and Learning, and being at Rome, would be careful to inform himſelf of the Truth of the thing, and not to preſent ſuch a notorious Fable in his Apology to the Emperor and Senate. However that is, they aſſert that S. Peter, being fam'd for Raiſing the Dead, a Kinſman of the Emperor's being lately deceas'd, his Friends ſent for Peter, to raiſe him to Life; and Simon Magus his Friends did alſo prevail, that he ſhould be ſent for on the ſame account, who being come propounded to Peter, That if he raiſed the Gentleman to Life, then Peter, who had injuriouſly provoked the great Power of God, as he called himſelf, ſhould loſe his Life; and that if Peter prevailed, he himſelf ſhould ſubmit to the ſame Fate; which Terms they ſay Peter accepted; and Simon beginning his Charms, the Gentleman ſeemed to move his Hand, at which the People begun to fall upon Peter, who begging their Patience, told them it was but a Cheat; and if Simon was taken from the Bed-ſide, it would quickly appear to be ſo. Then calling upon God, commanded the Gentleman in the Name of Jeſus to ariſe, which he accordingly did; whereupon the People fell upon the Magician with an Intention to ſtone him, but Peter begg'd his Life. The Magician being vex'd at this Defeat, muſtered up his Confidence, ſummoned the People, and told them, he was offended at the Galileans, whoſe Protector he had been, and therefore ſet them a day when he promiſed they ſhould ſee him fly up into Heaven. At the time appointed he went up to the Mount of the Capitol, and throwing himſelf from the Rock, begun his Flight, which filled the People with Wonder and Veneration, affirming, that this muſt be the Power of God, and not of Man. S. Peter in the mean time prayed to God that the People might be undeceived, and immediately Simon Magus his Wings, which he had made himſelf, begun to fail; ſo that he fell to the Ground, and being miſerably bruiſed and wounded, was carried into a neighbouring Village, and died ſoon after. This is the Subſtance of the Story as related by Hegeſippus. But Authors vary as to the time of this Conteſt, ſome placing it in the Reign of Claudius, but moſt in that of Nero. The wretched End of this Magician, it's ſaid, haſtened the Apoſtle's Fate. For Nero, much troubled for the Loſs of his Favourite, reſolved his ruin. In the mean time, the Chriſtians at Rome are ſaid to have prevailed with S. Peter to attempt his Eſcape, which he effected; but, as Eccleſiaſtical Writers ſay, being reprehended by a Viſion of our Saviour, he returned and delivered himſelf into the Hands of his Keepers. They add alſo, that an Impreſſion of our Lord's Feet being left upon a Stone, on which he ſtood whilſt he talked with Peter, The ſaid Stone is kept to this day in S. Sebaſtian's Church. The day of Execution being come, S. Peter, as they ſay, having taken his leave of S Paul, and being led to the Top of the Vatican Mount, was crucified with his Head downwards, according to his own deſire, as thinking himſelf unworthy to be crucified in the ſame poſture wherein his Lord had ſuffered. His Body was embalmed after the Jewiſh manner, and was buried in the Vatican; a ſmall Church being ſoon after erected over his Grave, which being deſtroyed by Heliogabalus, his Corps are ſaid to have been removed to the Appian-way till the time of Pope Cornelius, who brought it back to the Vatican. Conſtantine the Great rebuilt and inlarged the Vatican in Honour of Saint Peter, and infinitely enrich'd the Church with Gifts and Ornaments, wherein ſucceeding Princes having followed his Example, it is become at this day one of the Wonders of the World. As to S. Peter's Perſon, Temper, and Writings, Authors give the following Account: That he was ſlender and of a middle Size, his Complexion very pale, and his Hair curled and thick, but ſhort; his Eyes black, but ſpeck'd with red; which Baronius ſays, Proceeded from his frequent Weeping. For his Temper, he was naturally fervent and eager, which was common to the Galileans; his Humility and Lowlineſs of mind was ſingular, and his Love and Zeal for his Maſter admirable, his Courage was undaunted, and his Diligence in his Apoſtleſhip very wonderful. As for his Writings, his firſt Epiſtle is ſaid to have been writ in the 44th. Year of Chriſt, but Dr. Cave is of a contrary Mind. Authors alſo differ as to the Place where Some will have it to be at Rome, and others at Babylon; but whether Babylon in Egypt, Babylon the Metropolis of Aſſyria, Jeruſalem, or Rome figuratively ſo called, is controverted. The Second Epiſtle, according to Euſebius, was not for ſome Ages received as Canonical, and at this day not accounted ſuch by the Syriack Church The great Objection is, the Difference of its Style from the firſt; but it is eaſily anſwered, That this might be occaſioned by the Difference of his Circumſtances or Temper at the Time of the Writing, as there is a vaſt Difference betwixt the Prophecy and Lamentations of Jeremy. There are others who will have it to be writ by Simeon, and that the word Peter was inſerted in the Title by another hand: To which is anſwered, That it bears both his Names in the Front, and that Paſſage, chap. 1. ver. 16, 17, 18. cannot well relate to any but himſelf. And Jude, verſe 17 and 18, does plainly quote the Words of the ſecond and third verſes of the third Chapter of this Epiſtle There were other ſuppoſititious Writings aſcribed to him; as the Book called His Acts, mentioned and rejected by Origen and Euſebius. His Goſpel, and the Book ſtyled, His Preaching, and Judgment, and Revelation, were alſo rejected as ſpurious. That he had a Wife is clear from Scripture, and that they cohabited after his being called to the Apoſtleſhip is evident from 1 Cor. 9. 5. though S. Jerom be of a contrary mind. Clemens Alexandrinus ſays, that his Wife was martyred, and encouraged by himſelf to ſuffer patiently, he being exceedingly rejoiced that ſhe was called to ſo great a Honour. That ſame Author ſays, He had a Son; and Baronius alledges, He had a Daughter called Petronilla. Cave's Lives of the Apoſtles; and his Hiſtoria Literaria pars prima.

PETER I. of that Name, Biſhop of Alexandria, ſucceeded Theonas, about the Year 300. He was conſidered as the moſt illuſtrious Prelate of his time, both for his Learning, Piety, and Conſtancy, which rendred him proof againſt the Perſecutions of Diocleſian and Maximian. He compoſed Penitential Canons for the regulating of Penances, and in a Synod depoſed Meletius, Biſhop of Nicopolis, that had been convicted of ſeveral Crimes. But this latter got ſo much in Favour with the Idolatrous Princes, that Peter was forced to fly; yet he encouraged by his Letters thoſe who were in Priſon. After his Return he was taken and beheaded about 310. He writ, beſide the aforeſaid Pieces, A Treatiſe of Divinity, ſome Fragments whereof are related in the Council of Chalcedon. Euſeb. lib. 8. & 7. Hiſt. Baronius in Annal.

PETER II. Prieſt of the Church of Alexandria, had been Companion to Athanaſius in his Travels, and ſucceeded him in the Government of the Church of Alexandria, in 372. He was choſen by the Orthodox; but ſome time after, the Pagans and Arians, who had made Lucius their Biſhop, drove him from the Church. Socrates and Sozomen ſay, he made his Eſcape out of Priſon, and came to Rome, where he ſtayed till 377; at which time, returning to Alexandria, he was re-ſettled in his See. Some time after this he teſtified by his Letters the Joy which he conceived at the Election which thoſe of Conſtantinople had made of Gregory Nazianzen for their Biſhop; but afterwards growing inconſtant changed his Sentiments in favour of Maximus; inſomuch, that tho' Peter was Orthodox in his Belief, he tarniſh'd the Honour he had gain'd by being a Confeſſor; not only by the Injury done to that Holy Biſhop, Gregory Nazianzen, but likewiſe by ſhowing himſelf too eaſie in receiving Hereticks to Communion, which unwarrantable Forwardneſs, made ſome ſuſpect that he took Bribes. He died in 380. Gregory de Nazianzen, Orat. 24. & de vita ſua. Socrates, lib. 4. Sozomen, lib. 6. Theodoret. lib. 4. Rufin. l. 2.

PETER IV. a Monothelite Heretick, intruded into the See of Alexandria, from whence Pope Martin I. cauſed him to be expelled, about 649. Baronius.

PETER, Biſhop of Jeruſalem ſucceeded John in 525. He was very zealous for the Good of the Church, and ſent Deputies to the Council which Menas aſſembled at Conſtantinople in 536; and at their Return celebrated one in Palæſtine, where all that had been done in the other was confirmed. He afterwards ſubſcribed, rather by Force than Good-will, the Edict which Juſtinian publiſhed againſt the three Chapters, and died in 546. Nicephorus, in Chron. Facundus, lib. 1. Evagrius, lib. 4. Vide, Peter Caſe, & La Palu.

PETER, Arch-prieſt of Rome, made a Schiſm in the Romiſh-Church after the Death of John Vth. Theodorus, a Prieſt, was his Competitor. The one having been choſen by the Clergy, and the other by the Soldiery. But this Diſorder was terminated by the Creating of Conon, which was done with the Conſent of both Parties. Anaſtaſius in Vit. Pontiff.

Emperors, Kings, and Princes of the Name of Peter.

PETER, Lord of Courtenay and Montargis, IId. of that Name, Count of Nevers, Auxerre, and Tonnerre, Marquis of Namur, and Emperor of Conſtantinople, was the eldeſt Son of Peter of France, Lord of Courtenay. He had great Quarrels with Hugh de Noyers, and William de Segnelay, Biſhops of Auxerre, who excommunicated him. But he afterwards gave them publick Satisfaction, in 1204. He expelled the Jews from his City of Auxerre; and afterwards fought againſt the Albigenſes. He was preſent at the Siege of the Caſtle of Lavaur, in 1211. And after that at the Battle of Bovines, in 1214. He ſignalized himſelf ſo much that the Fame of his Valour and Merit coming to be known in the Eaſt, he was choſen Emperor of Conſtantinople, after the Death of Henry of Hainault, his Brother-in-law. This Prince arriving at Rome, in the beginning of April, Anno 1217, was ſolemnly crowned there, together with his Wife, by Pope Honorius IIId. The Ceremony being performed in the Church of S. Laurence, on the ninth Day of the ſame Month, he afterwards ſent his Wife and Children to Conſtantinople, and march'd himſelf by the way of Theſſaly and Epirus, where he beſieged the City of Duras, in purſuance of a Treaty which he had concluded with the Venetians.

But that Siege proved unhappy to him, being forced to raiſe it, and himſelf with the principal Lords of his Court were made Priſoners by Theodorus Comnenus, Prince of Epirus, his Enemy, who put him to Death in January, 1218.

PETER I. of that Name, King of Arragon, ſucceeded his Father Sancho, in 1094, who was killed at the Siege of Hueſca. He immediately gathered the Remains of his Army, raiſed new Troops, and having encountred the Moors, defeated fourty thouſand of them, Novemb. 18. that ſame Year. At this Loſs the Infidels were ſurpriz'd, ſo that four of their Kings entred into a League againſt Peter, who defeated them at Alcoraz, in 1096, and took Hueſca a little time after. Peter was alſo King of Navarre after his Father Sancho, who had uſurped that Kingdom from his Couſin Sancho IVth. Son of Garcias IVth. He died in 1104, Sept. 28th. after he had reigned ten Years. He had one Son of his own Name, who died in his Infancy, and was ſucceeded by Alphonſo his Brother. Roderic, Mariana & Majerne Turquet Hiſt. d' Eſp.

PETER II. ſucceeded his Father Alphonſo IId. in 1196. He made War upon the King of Navarre, in favour of him of Caſtile, and was always ſucceſsful in his Undertakings. He made a Journey to Rome in 1204, where he was anointed King, November 21ſt. by Peter, Cardinal-Biſhop of Porto, and crowned by Pope Innocent IIId. He afterwards entred into a League with the Princes of Spain, againſt the Moors, and was preſent at the Battle the Chriſtians won from Mahomet, the Green King of Morocco, near unto Sierra Morena, July 16th. 1212. But he was not ſo ſucceſsful in the Succors he gave to the Albigenſes, whereof R*aymond*, Earl of Toulouſe, his Brother-in-law, was Head; he being killed in the Battle September 12th, 1213. after he had reigned ſeventeen Years. He had by Mary of Montpelier, his Wife, James I. who ſucceeded him. Surita, Ind. Reg. Arag. l. 1. Mariana, lib. 11.

PETER III. was King after James I. his Father, in 1276. He immediately carried his Arms into Navarre, to which he had ſome Pretenſions, but it was without effect. So that he ſaw himſelf quickly obliged to return to his own Dominions, where his fanciful and ſevere Humour drew upon him the Diſcontents of the great Lords, whereof his Brethren were the chief. Peter had married Conſtance, Daughter to the Baſtard Mainfroy, who ſtiled himſelf King of Sicily. He was deſirous to make himſelf Maſter of that Kingdom in Complaiſance to his Wife, and for the ſatisfying of his own Ambition; but it was not eaſie for him to take it away from Charles of Anjou, the firſt of that Name. He caballed therefore with ſome ſeditious Perſons, and in purſuance to his Advice, they killed all the French in Sicily, in the time of Veſpers, on Eaſter-day, in 1282; which Fact has ſince been called the Sicilian Veſpers. After which he arrived in the Country, and eaſily became Maſter of it. But an Action ſo barbarous was abhorred by all good Men. Pope Martin IVth. teſtified an extream Diſpleaſure at it, excommunicated Peter and the Sicilians, and ſuſpended him from his Dominions in Spain. This Affair was like to have had dangerous Conſequences, to avoid which the King of Arragon offered to decide this Controverſie by a Duel between Charles and himſelf, aſſiſted each of them with an hundred Knights; this laſt who was free and courageous, tho' ſixty years of Age, accepted of the Challenge againſt Peter, who was not above forty. The day appointed being come, Charles entred the Liſts, which had been pitched upon at Bourdeaux by the King of England; but the Arragoneſe appeared not till the day was over So that Charles had the better upon the Terms of Honour and Bravery; and Peter came off by Craft and Subtilty. In the mean time Charles de Valois took upon him to be King of Arragon, in purſuance of the Forfeiture made by the Pope. Philip the Hardy, his Father, conducted thither a potent Army to put him in Poſſeſſion of it. He took all Rouſillon, won Girone, and made himſelf Maſter of a great many Places. Peter died of a Wound he received in a Battle, Nov 8. 1285. His Children were Alfonſo IIId. ſurnamed the Bountiful, and James IId. called the Juſt. Rigord, Villani, Fazel, Paul. Æmilius, Surita, Mariana, &c.

PETER IVth. ſurnamed the Ceremonious, ſucceeded his Father Alphonſo IVth. in 1336. He had this Name given him, becauſe of his being very forward in the Obſervation of Ceremonies. He uſurped Majorca and Rouſillon from King James; put his own Brother Ferdinand to death; and afterwards waged ſeveral Wars, but they proved not to his Advantage. He was extreamly ambitious and bloody; yet loved Learned Men, and eſpecially Aſtrologers. It's ſaid alſo, that he laboured to find out the Philoſophers-ſtone. He died at Barcelona, January 5th. 1387, aged 75 years whereof he reigned above 50. He left by Eleonor of Sicily, his Wife, John I. and Martin, who ſucceeded him, and two Daughters, Conſtance and Eleonor. Surita, l. 3. Ind. Mariana, lib. 15, 16, 17, & 18.

PETER, ſurnamed The Cruel, King of Caſtile, ſucceeded his Father Alphonſo XIth. in 1350. He was then but ſixteen Years of Age, and yet manifeſted his bloody Inclination by the Death of ſeveral Gentlemen in his Kingdom, whom he cauſed to be beheaded preſently. Sometime after this, being crowned, he married Blanch, Daughter to Peter I Count of Bourbon. But three Days after his Marriage he forſook her for Mary of Padilla, whom he kept, and put the Queen into Priſon. He married alſo Jane de Caſtro, whom he forſook a little while after; which unreaſonable Procedure, and his extraordinary Cruelties, did ſo provoke the Grandees, that they entered into an Aſſociation againſt him. Henry and Frederick, his Brethren, were the chief of the Party. Peter finding himſelf in a deſperate Condition upon this account, and miſtruſting ſome of his Lords, put them to Death in cold Blood, ſparing neither his Brother Frederick, who was returned to his Duty, nor the two Infants of Arragon, and ſeveral other conſiderable Perſons. The Solicitations of the Pope, and the Intreaties of the Prelates of his Kingdom, could never make him relent, his furious Mind delighted ſo much in Blood. He poiſoned Queen Blanch in Priſon, and oppreſs'd his Subjects to that degree, that they broke out into Diſorder, and took up Arms againſt him. Henry, Count of Triſtemare, his natural Brother, put himſelf at the Head of the Malecontents; and with the help of Bertrand du Gueſclin took Toledo, and made himſelf Maſter almoſt of all Caſtile. Peter being driven to deſpair, reſolved to turn Mahometan, that he might procure the Aſſiſtance of the Moors; but he paſſed into Guienne, and the Engliſh taking his Part, re-ſettled him upon his Throne in 1367. He continued not long ſo, for Henry, aſſiſted by the French, won the Battle on the 14th. of March, in 1369; and another the 22d. of the ſame Month, and killed this bloody Prince. Marian. Hiſt. Hiſp. lib. 16, & 17. Surita, Ind. lib. 12. &c.

PETER I. King of Cyprus, of the Houſe of Luſignan, ſucceeded his Father Hugh, in 1360. He begun to make himſelf known by the taking of Salatia, and ſeveral other Places, from the Infidels, in 1362. After which he came into France, and having engaged the Kings of France and Denmark to come to Avignon, they undertook the Croiſade, in the preſence of Pope Urban Vth. Some time after, being aſſiſted with a conſiderable Relief both of Men and Money, he ſailed, and took, and plundered Alexandria, in 1365. Great things were expected from this Prince when he was aſſaſſinated by his own Brother's Servants in 1369. He left a Son called Peter II. who becauſe of his Youth, was called Petrin, or Pierrot, and died in 1382. Stephen. Hiſt. de Cypr. vid. LUSIGNAN.

PETER, ſurnamed the German, King of Hungary, was Siſter's Son to S. Stephen, whom he ſucceeded in 1038. His great proneneſs to favour the Germans and his own unhappy Temper, provok'd the Hungarians to expel him in 1042. But he was reſettled by the Emperor Henry IIId. two years after, yet he had not the art to make himſelf beloved by his Subjects. They ſurprized him a Hunting, and put out his Eyes in 1044. Bertius, l. 2. Rer. Ger. Bonfin. Hiſt. Hung. &c.

PETER, ſurnamed the Juſticiary, or the Cruel, King of Portugal, ſucceeded his Father Alphonſo IVth. ſurnamed the Fierce in 1357. Authors obſerve with ſome ſort of Aſtoniſhment, that at the ſame time Spain had three Princes named Peter, who had very bloody Inclinations, viz. Peter IVth. King of Arragon, Peter, King of Caſtile, and this now ſpoken of. Yet it is certain that this Peter loved Juſtice, and that rendred him ſevere. He governed his Subjects peaceably, and expreſſed not his Hatred againſt any but thoſe who had cauſed Agnes de Caſtro, his Miſtreſs, to be put to death by his Father's Orders. He died in 1367. He married the firſt time Blanch of Caſtile, whom he put away, and took to Wife, Conſtance Manuel, Daughter to John, Duke of Penafiel. This Princeſs died in 1344. Mariana, Hiſt. l. 17. c. 9. Duart, in Geneal. Reg. Port. Coneſtagio, &c.

PETER, King of Portugal, Son to John IVth. was declared Regent of the Kingdom Nov. 22. 1667. Alphonſo-Henry, his Brother, being uncapable to govern. During his Regency he married Mary-Elizabeth-Frances of Savoy, Daughter to Charles Amadeus of Savoy, Duke of Nemours, and of Elizabeth de Vendôme, by whom he had a Daughter, now Infanta of Portugal. This Prince made Peace during his Regency with the King of Spain, Feb. 12. 1668. He is the King now reigning.

PETER of Arragon, King of Part of Sicily, ſucceeded, in 1337, his Father Frederick, Son of Peter IIId. King of Arragon, and Succeſſor of his Brother James Iſt. Some Authors ſay, that this Prince was ſhort in his Underſtanding and Conduct, and ſo died in the Year 1342, without doing any thing conſiderable. Villani, lib. 11. &c.

PETER of France, the firſt of that Name, Lord of Courtenay, Montargis, Chateau-renard, Champinelles, Tanlay, &c. was the ſeventh and youngeſt Son of King Lewis the Fat, by Adelais of Savoy. At the Age of two and twenty he accompanied King Lewis the Young, his Brother, into the Holy-land, in 1147. He was afterwards one of the three Lords given by that ſame King, in 1178, to the Engliſh for Hoſtages upon the Treaty of Peace. The year following he made a ſecond Voyage into the Holy-land, with Henry I. of that Name, Count of Champagne, was preſent at the Siege of Acre, and died in 1182, aged 63. Alberic. in Chron. St. Martha, Hiſt. Geneal. de la Maiſ. de France. Du Bouchet, Hiſt. Geneal. de la Maiſ. de Courtenay.

PETER IId. of that Name, Count of Alenzon, La Perch, &c. ſurnamed the Noble, was Son to Charles de Valois IId. of that Name, called the Magnificent, and of Mary of Spain his ſecond Wife. King John gave him for an Hoſtage to the Engliſh in 1360. After his return he made War in Bretaigne, and was wounded at the Siege of Hannebon. He ſerved alſo in the Wars which the Dukes of Berry and Bourbon made in Guienne againſt the Engliſh, and was one of the Grandees of the Kingdom that aſſiſted at the Publication of the Ordinance made by King Charles V. for the full Age of the Kings. He followed alſo King Charles VI. in his Expedition into Flanders in 1388, and died at Argentan, Sept. 20. in 1404. Froiſſard, Monſtrelet, S. Martha, &c.

PETER, the firſt of that Name, Duke of Bourbon, Count of Clermont and Marche, was Son to Lewis I. and Grandſon to Robert, a Deſcendant of S. Lowis. He was Chamberlain of France, Governour of Languedoc and Gaſcony, and had ſeveral important Places in the Kingdom. He gave alſo Proofs of his Courage and Bravery on many Occaſions to King Philip de Valois, who made choice of him to aſſiſt and ſerve John of France, Duke of Normandy, in the War in Bretaigne and Guienne. He was alſo at the Battle of Creſſey, and afterwards at the Siege of Calais. He was deputed to go to Edward III. King of England, to ſolicit for a Treaty of Peace; and killed at the Battel of Poictiers, Sept. 19. 1356. Froiſſard, &c.

PETER, the Second of that Name, Duke of Bourbon, Auvergne, Earl of Clermont, Forez, and la Marche, &c. Peer and Chamberlain of France, and Governour of Languedoc, was youngeſt Son to Charles I. Duke of Bourbon and Agdes of Burgundy. He was born in November, 1439, bore the Title of Sieur de Beaujeu, in the time of his elder Brother, and acquired the favour of King Lewis XI. who married him to Anne of France, his eldeſt Daughter, and made him Preſident of his Council. And after the death of this King, he was Governour of the Kingdom conjunctly with the Princeſs his Wife, during the Minority of King Charles VIII. who made him Lieutenant General of his Dominions during his Expedition into Italy. He died at Moulins, the tenth of October, 1503. Philip de Commines, Peter Matthieu, Robert Gauin, &c.

PETER de Dreux, ſurnamed Mauclerk, Duke of Bretaigne, Earl of Richmond, &c. was ſecond Son to Robert II. of that Name, Count of Dreux, and of Joland de Coucie, his ſecond Wife. King Philip the Auguſt made him a Knight in 1209. He married in 1213. Alice, the eldeſt Daughter and Heireſs of Guy de Thouars, Count of Bretaigne, and the ſame Year valiantly defended the City of Nantes, beſieged by John King of England. He afterwards fought againſt the Albigenſes, and upon the death of the Dutcheſs his Wife, in 1221, had a great difference with the Nobles of Bretaigne, whom he entirely defeated in a Battle fought near to Chateau-briant. He was one of thoſe Lords that entred into a League, after the death of King Lewis VIII. againſt Queen Blanch, Regent of the Kingdom. He made an Alliance alſo with the Engliſh; but afterwards, through the Care of the Count de Dreux his Brother, matters were accommodated between him and the King S. Lovis, in 1234, which was made good uſe of againſt the Engliſh. He after this, in 1239, accompanied Thibaud, King of Navarre, on a Voyage beyond Sea, againſt the Infidels, and followed alſo the King S. Lovis in his Expedition againſt the Saracens. He fought valiantly at the Battle of Maſſovia; and died upon the Sea, on his return into France, the 22d. of June, 1250. Nicholas Vignier, and Argentre, Hiſt. de Bret.

PETER II. ſurnamed the Simple, Duke of Bretaigne, firſt bore the Title of Count of Guingamp. He ſucceeded his Brother, Francis I. in 1450, and died of a Palſie at Nantes, Sept. 22d. in 1457.

PETER, Prince of Portugal, Duke of Conimbria, was third Son to King John I. and the Brother of Edward. This laſt left Alphonſo V. his Son, under the Guardianſhip of his Mother, Eleonor of Arragon; but the Portugueſe diſapproving of this Choice, named the Duke of Conimbria Regent of the Kingdom. Peter found the Government ſweet, began to ſettle his Creatures, and to puſh his Fortune further. But King Alphonſo, who had married the Daughter of this Duke, killed him in Battle, May 20th. 1449.

PETER, ſurnamed the Little Charlemaign, Earl of Savoy, was the ſeventh Son of Thomas I. Earl of Savoy, born in 1203. He was deſigned for a Churchman, and ſo made Canon of the Church of Valence in Dauphinè, and afterwards Provoſt in that of Aoſt: But this Profeſſion was altogether contrary to his Inclination. In the Year 1234, he deſir'd of Amadeus IV. his eldeſt Brother, Earl of Savoy, to aſſign him a Fortune ſuitable to his Birth. He gave proof of his Courage and Religion, by Protecting the Churches and Prelates from ill Uſage and Oppreſſion. In 1241 he took a Journey into England, where King Henry III. received him very kindly, gave him ſeveral Lands, made him a Knight and Preſident of his Council, and imployed him to negotiate ſome Affairs in France and elſewhere. In the mean time, Boniface, Son to his Brother Amadeus, dying without Children, in 1263 he was called to ſucceed him, in Prejudice to his Nephews, the Sons of Thomas, third Son of Thomas I. He was courageous, prudent, and a Man of Parts, who united ſeveral Lands and Seigniories to Savoy. He died at Chilon, in the Country of Vaux, June 7th. 1268, aged 64, Guichenon, Hiſt. de Savoy.

Other great Men of this Name.

PETER d'Apamea, an Eutychian Heretick, in the Sixth Age he intruded himſelf into the Epiſcopal See of that City, and made uſe of his Authority for the receiving of his Errors. He ſtruck out of the Church Regiſter the Names of the Orthodox Prelates, to put in thoſe of the Hereticks; and joining himſelf with Severus of Antioch, they tormented the Catholick Monks of Syria in ſo cruel a manner, that ſeveral of them were killed, and others driven out of their Monaſteries. He was condemned in a Synod at Conſtantinople by Menas Biſhop of that City, in 536. Baronius, An. Ch. 18. n. 46, 47, 48, &c.

PETER Apon of Padua, ſurnamed alſo de Apono, or Abano, and Conciliator, was a Philoſopher and Phyſician, lived in the Thirteenth Age, and about the beginning of the Fourteenth. In theſe times of Ignorance he had the Fortune of other great Men to be charged with Magick, and that he had gain'd the Underſtanding of the Seven creditable Sciences, by the Aſſiſtance of Seven Spirits, which he kept up in a Cryſtal, and was put into the Inquiſition at the Age of Twenty four Years; but he died in 1316, before Judgment given againſt him, and was buried in the Church of S. Anthony; but the zealous Party were not ſatisfy'd, and determined to take up his Bones and have them burnt; but his Friends having hid them, they contented themſelves only to have him burnt in Effigie, and to prohibit the reading of three of his Books; viz. Heptameron, which we have in the end of the firſt Tome of the Works of Agrippa; the ſecond called by Trithemius, Elucidarium Necromanticum Petri de Abano; and the third entituled, Liber Experimentorum Mirabilium de annulis ſecundum 28 Manſiones Lunæ. He tranſlated alſo the Books of Rabbi Abraham, Aben-Ezra, and compos'd a Treatiſe of Critical Days; An Explanation of the Art of Aſtronomy; Conciliator differentiarum Philoſophicarum, &c. Frederick Duke of Urbin erected a Statue for this great Man amongſt thoſe of the Illuſtrious, and the Senate of the City of Padua, placed it at the Gate of their Palace, between that of Titus Livius, Albert and Julius Paulus *Bernard in Scard. PETER (Aretine) born at Arezzo, in the Duke of Tuſcany's Dominions, in the Sixteenth Century. He had great Natural Parts to make amends for his mean Extraction. He made it his Buſineſs to write Satyr, to Critick the Books of the Learned, and Cenſure the Actions of the greateſt Men. There was a great deal of Spirit and Delicacy in his Poetry, which made it much ſought after. Aretine having thus rais'd a Reputation, retir'd to Venice, and play'd his Satyr upon Crown'd Heads, inſomuch, that he was ſtil'd, The Scourge of Princes, upon which Account King Francis I. and the Emperor Charles V. the Princes of Italy, ſeveral Cardinals, and other great Lords, offer'd to buy his Friendſhip at conſiderable Rates; either for fear of his Invectives, or becauſe they had a real Value for his way of Writing. Theſe Applications made Aretine ſo Inſolent, that he got a Medal coin'd, with this Motto on one ſide, Il Divino Aretino; and on the Reverſe, he was repreſented ſitting on a Throne, and receiving Preſents from the Envoys of Kings and Princes, with theſe words, I Principi Tributati dâ Popoli, Tributano ill Servidor loro; but ſoon after, ſome Perſons of Quality in Italy, beſtowing a Beating upon him, together with the Reputation of his Adverſary, Nicholas Franco, took down his Conceit a little. His Works were cenſur'd by the Church, and forbidden to be read, on the Score of their Smut and Prophaneneſs. A little before he died, he wrote Paraphraſes upon the Penitential Pſalms, The Life of the Bleſſed Virgin, of Catharine of Siena, and Thomas Aquinas: Theſe laſt Pieces were wrote by him, under the Name of Partenio Etiro, which is an Anagram of his own. Aretin died at Venice, and lies buried in S. Luke's Church, where he had this Epitaph made him, by an unknown Hand.

The Italian thus,

Qui Giace l'Aretin Poeta Toſco,
Che d'ognun diſſe malo che di Dio
Scuſandoſi col dir io no'l conoſco.

The Latin thus:

Condit Aretini Cineres Lapis iſte Sepultos,
Mortales Atro qui ſale perfricuit.
Intactus Deus eſt illi, cauſamque rogatus
Hanc dedit, Ille inquit, non mihi notus erat.

PETER, of Blois, or Petrus Bleſenſis, Archdeacon of Bath, was one of the moſt Learned Men of the Twelfth Century, inſomuch that he was highly eſteem'd by the greateſt Princes and Prelates of his Time, and was made Preceptor to William II. King of Sicily. Afterwards Henry II. King of England, kept him almoſt always at his Court. The Biſhop of London, and Archbiſhop of Canterbury made him their Chancellor, and Pope Alexander III. though a Learned Perſon himſelf, made uſe of his Pen, when he wrote to the Souldan of Egypt. Petrus Bleſenſis died about the Year 1200. His Epiſtles are Remarkable for the Strain of Piety there is in them. We have ſeveral other Tracts of his Writing, which were firſt Printed by James Merlin, in 1519; but the laſt Edition of Peter Gouſſainville, printed in 1677, is the moſt valuable, upon the Account of the Learned Notes together with the Life of the Author. Math. Paris. Hiſt. Angl. Baronius in Annal. Bellarmin de Script. Eccl. &c.

PETER de Bruniquel, an Auguſtine Monk, and afterwards Biſhop of Newſtadt, liv'd in the beginning of the Fifteenth Century, and was one of the beſt Scripturiſts in his time. He wrote A Hiſtory of the Old and New Teſtament. Comments upon the Proverbs of Solomon, Eccleſiaſtes, Canticles, &c. Trithem. Script. Eccl.

PETER de Celles, a Frenchman, was an Eminent Benedictin, in the Twelfth Century. He was afterwards Abbot of S. Remigius of Rheims, and laſtly, Biſhop of Chartres, having Johannes Sariſburienſis for his Predeceſſor. Pope Alexander III. S. Bernard, and ſeveral other Eminent Men, who were his Contemporaries, give him a great Character. In the Year 1613. Sirmondus publiſh'd Nine Books of his Epiſtles, in Octavo, with curious Notes upon them, and Three other Treatiſes, which commonly go under his Name; viz. Liber de Panibus. Moſaici Tabernaculi Myſticæ Expoſitionis Lib. II. Liber de Conſcientia.

PETER Comeſtor was born at Troyes in Champaigne, lived in the Twelfth Century, and was much eſteem'd for his great Skill in the Learning of the Scriptures. He was Dean of Troyes, and afterwards Chancellor of Paris, but quitted theſe Preferments, to enter himſelf Canon Regular of S. Victor at Paris, where he died in the Year 1198. Comeſtor wrote a Scholaſtical Hiſtory, which he Dedicated to the Cardinal-Archbiſhop of Rheims, which Work has ſince been Epitomiz'd by Walter Hunter, an Engliſhman. The Story of Peter Comeſtor, Peter Lombard, and Gratian, being Brothers, is ſo Romantick, and without Colour, that it does not deſerve to be refuted. Trithem. & Bellarmin. De Script. Eccl. Sirmond. in Not. ad Peter. Callenſ. Lib. 7. Ep. 19. &c.

PETER, Corneille de, in Lat. Cornelius a Lapide, a Learned Jeſuit, born in the Dioceſs of Leige. He was a good Linguiſt, and particularly well skill'd in Greek and Hebrew. He was alſo a conſiderable Philologer and Divine, and apply'd himſelf chiefly to the Study of the Scriptures, upon which he has written Ten Volumes, in Folio. He died Seventy one Years old, in 1637. Alegamb. de Script. Soc. Jeſu. Valer. Andr. Bibl. Belg. &c.

PETER Chryſologus, Archbiſhop of Ravenna, lived in the Fifth Age, He was famous for his Learning and Eloquence, inſomuch, that he had the name of Chryſologus beſtowed upon him; that is, Golden Words. There are One hundred ſeventy ſix Homilies of his. The Monk Eutyches having writ to him in 449, and to ſeveral other Biſhops of the Eaſt, to complain of Flavian of Conſtantinople, he writ back to him a very grave Letter, which is extant in his Work, and begins thus, Triſtis legi triſtes literas tuas, &c. He died the ſecond of December, 450. Henry d'Auxerre, Lib. 6. Trithemius & Bellarmin de ſcript. Eccl.

PETER de Cluni, ſurnamed the Venerable, was of a noble Family of Auvergne, of the Counts of S. Maurice or Montboiſſier. He was Abbot and General of his Order in 1122, after the Death of Hugh II. and friend of S. Bernard, who ſpeaks much to his praiſe. He died December 24. 1157. There are ſix Books of his, conſiſting of Letters, a Treatiſe againſt the Jews, one againſt Peter Bruys, a Sermon of the Transfiguration, two Books of the Miracles that happened in his time, Verſes, Hymns, &c.

PETER de Corberia, Antipope againſt John XXII. His Name was Peter Rainalutio or Ramuche, born at Corberia, in the Dioceſs of Rieti in Italy. He became a Franciſcan Friar, and his Merit made him conſiderable. In his time it was that Lewis of Bavaria, and Frederick of Auſtria were choſen Emperors, which Election divided Mens Minds. It's believed that the firſt had more Right, but in the mean time, Pope John XXII. did not favour him. This proceeding netled that Prince, who being at the Head of an Army, made himſelf Maſter of Rome, and there declar'd Ramuche Pope, by the Name of Nicholas V. May 12. 1329. Michael of Cenſenna, General of the Cordeliers, and the principal of his Order, being diſſatisfied with the Pope, ſtuck to the Emperor, and approv'd of this Election; they clad F. Peter in the Pontifical Robes, and introduced him into the Church of S. Peter; and according to their Counſels he created Cardinals, made Officers, and excommunicated Pope John, who was at Avignon. In the mean time, this Pope was oblig'd to quit Rome the fourth of Auguſt that ſame Year, becauſe the Inhabitants admitted Pope John XXII's Legate, with the Troops of Robert King of Naples. He retired to Piſa, but continued not long there, the Piſans being unwilling to imbroil themſelves, ſubmitted to the Pope, and delivered up F. Peter to him. Others affirm, That he deſired himſelf to be brought before him, and that when he was in the Pope's Preſence he ingeniouſly confeſs'd his Crime, ask'd Pardon, and obtain'd it; yet they would not ſet him at Liberty, for fear leaſt ſome Malecontents might make uſe of him to diſturb the Repoſe of the Church; ſo he was plac'd in an Apartment of the Palace, without Liberty granted him to go abroad. It's true, he had Books allowed him, and, excepting his being kept in Priſon, had no reaſon to complain of his Uſage. He died two or three Years after. Villani. Nauclere, &c.

PETER the Deacon, a Greek by Nation, lived in the Sixth Age: He came to Rome in 519, with the Greeks ſent upon the Account of a Diſpute between Victor, the Defender of the Council of Chalcedon, and the Monks of Scythia. Peter writ a Treatiſe of the Incarnation and Grace of Jeſus Chriſt, which he ſent to Fulgentius and other Prelates of Africa. This Piece is in the Bibliotheca Patrum, and gave occaſion to the ſame Fulgentius to write the Treatiſe of the Incarnation of the Word. Baronius, A. C. 519.

PETER, a Deacon of Oſtia, continued the Chronicle of Leo of Oſtia, from 1086, to 1138: This addition is in the end of the Fourth Book of that Work. The Author ſays That the Emperor Lotharius II. ſent him to Mount Caſſin. He is perhaps the ſame with Peter the Deacon, the Son of Giles Romanus, and Monk of the ſame Congregation of Mount Caſſin, wherein he was put according to the Cuſtom of his time, at the Age of Five Years in 1115. He wrote a great Number of Hiſtorical Works, as, de Ortu & vita ſanctorum Monaſterii Caſſinienſis; De viris illuſtribus, &c. yet he is not the ſame as another that lived in the Ninth Age, and was Author of the Life of Athanaſius, Archbiſhop of Naples, that died in 872. Baronius in Annal. Geſner in Bibl. Poſſevin in Appar. Voſſius, &c.

PETER Lombard, called The Maſter of the Sentences, and Biſhop of Paris, flouriſhed in the Twelfth Age. He was of Novarra, a City of Italy in Lombardy, and from thence took the Name of Lombard; beſides his Works of the Sentences in Four Books, he has left ſome Comments upon the Pſalms, and the Epiſtles of S. Paul. Matthew Paris. Sixtus Senenſis, &c.

PETER de la Lune. Vide Bennet XIII. Antipope.

PETER of Navarre, a famous Captain, was meanly deſcended, but raiſed himſelf by his own Merit. He ſerved ſome time by Sea, and went afterwards into Italy, where he ſerved under a Florentine Captain during the War of Lunigiana. He diſtinguiſhed himſelf ſo well, that his Valour became the common Subject of Diſcourſe. Some time after, Gonſalvo, called the Grand Captain, drew him to his ſide, made uſe of him in the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Naples; and in 1503 had an Experience of the Worth of this great Man at the taking of the Caſtle of Oeuf in Naples: For it was he that firſt invented the way of Mining, tho' others affirm the Genoeſe had uſed it before. He was made Captain General at Sea, in the League between the Venetians and Spaniards, againſt the Turks. The Glory of taking Cephalonia was attributed to him; but he acquir'd yet greater Renown when the Cardinal Ximenes, Archbiſhop of Toledo, in 1509. put him at the Head of the Army deſign'd to go into Africa againſt the Moors, from whom he took Oran, Bugie, Tripoli, &c. and had the Title of Admiral of Spain conferr'd upon him. His Forces ſuffered much in the Iſle of Gerbes; returning afterwards into Italy he was made a Priſoner by the French at the Battle of Ravenna in 1512. The Spaniards took no great care to get him releaſed, ſo that he languiſhed under Confinement till the Reign of Francis I. This diſguſted him againſt a Nation whom he had ſo advantageouſly ſerv'd, which, together with the Civilities and Proffers of the King of France, engaged him in his Service; but he was taken in 1528 in the Kingdom of Naples, whither he accompanied the Sieur de Lautrec. Some Authors ſay, The Emperor Charles V. cauſed him to be ſtrangled in Priſon; others affirm, He died of grief; but Gonſalvo Ferdinand, Prince of Seſſe, a generous Enemy, cauſed his Body to be interr'd in S. Mary's Church at Naples, with this Inſcription upon his Tomb: Oſſibus & Memoriæ Petri Navarri Cantabri, ſolerti in expugnandis Urbibus arte clariſſimi, Gonſalvus Ferdi- nandus, Lodovici filius, Magni Gonſalvi Sueſſiæ Principis nepos, Ducem Gallorum partes ſecutum, pro Sepulcri munere honeſtavit. Hoc in ſe habet virtus ut vel in hoſte ſit admirabilis. Paul Jovius in Elog. Alvarez Gomez Hiſt. l. 4.

PETER Nolaſque, Founder of the Order for the Redemption of Captives, was a Frenchman, born in a place call'd the Mas des Saintes Pueles in Lauraguais, in the Dioceſs of S. Papoul in Languedoc, near Carcaſſonna. Theſe Monks make a fourth Vow to imploy themſelves for the deliverance of Chriſtians. Peter died on Chriſtmas Eve in 1256. Sylveſter Marule in Mar Ocean Relig. Surita lib. 1 Jud. &c.

PETER d'Oſma, a Spaniſh Profeſſor of Divinity in the Univerſity of Salamanca, maintained in the Fifteenth Age, That Confeſſion was an Humane Eſtabliſhment, and no Divine Inſtitution; which was condemned as Heretical by Pope Sixtus IV. Genebrard in Sixto IV.

PETER of Pavia, Biſhop of Florence in Italy, in the XIth. Century, was accuſed of Simony and Hereſie by the Monks of the Monaſtery of S. Sauveur near Florence, who publiſh'd, That all the Benedictions, and all the Sacraments he conferr'd, were ſo many Curſes and Sacrileges, and thereupon, not only the People, but a great part of the Clergy withdrew themſelves from the Biſhop. Pope Alexander the IId. ſent a Cardinal to appeaſe the Tumult, but to no purpoſe: Duke Godfrey's threats to hang all the Monks if they did not retire to their Monaſtery, prov'd more effectual; yet they did not deſiſt to perſecute their Biſhop, but deputed ſome of their Body to accuſe him before the Pope and Biſhops of the Lateran Council in 1063, which they did with that aſſurance, that to confirm their Depoſitions, they offered to go into a great Fire, which the Pope refus'd to ſuffer, and remanded 'em back to their Monaſtery. The People flock'd about 'em at their return, and preſſing 'em to do what they had propos'd to the Pope to clear the doubt they had rais'd; one Peter Igneus is ſaid to have croſs'd the flames without receiving the leaſt damage; whereupon the Biſhop becoming the reproach of all his Dioceſs, the Pope ſuſpended him from the exerciſe of his Function, untill this Buſineſs ſhould be fully examined; and upon a full hearing, no other Proofs appearing of the guilt but this of the Fire, he was clear'd, and is ſaid to have been afterwards a great Benefactor to this ſame Monaſtery that had perſecuted him ſo much. Maimbourg. Urſpergenſis.

PETER of Sicily lived in the Ninth Age: The Emperor Baſilius the Macedonian ſent him into Armenia, there to exchange ſome Priſoners, which was ſucceſsfully perform'd. He was nine Months upon his Journey, and during that time, he compos'd an Hiſtory of the Hereſie of the Manichæans in Greek. Father Sirmondus has tranſlated ſome of it, which Cardinal Baronius has inſerted in his Annals The ſame Father having afterwards found it entire in the Library of the Vatican, took a Copy of it, which he ſent to Mark Velſer at Ausburg, who gave that Hiſtory to Father Matthew Raderus, upon Condition he would put it into Latin; which he immediately performed, and which we have in the Jeſuits Library, by the Title of Hiſtoria de varia & ſtolida Manichæorum Hæreſi. Peter ſpeaks of it in the end of his Embaſſie. Le Mire in auct. &c.

PETER (Thomas) titular Patriarch of Conſtantinople, Archbiſhop of Candia, &c. was born in the Dioceſs of Salart, in Languedoc, in a Village called Sale. He was a Carmelite, and imployed upon divers important occaſions by the Popes, Clement VI. Innocent VI. and Urban V. He died of a Wound he received before Alexandria when it was beſieged by the Chriſtians in 1366.

PETERBOROUGH or PETERBURG, a City in Northamptonſhire, the Biſhop whereof is Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Canterbury. It is ſeated on the River Nine in the N. E. parts of the County, bordering upon Cambridge and Huntingtonſhires, there being a Bridge over the River which leads into this laſt, but it's of no great account for Trade, Health, or Delight. Its Cathedral was firſt an Abbey-Church, founded by the Mercian King Wolphere, and dedicated to S. Peter; which being ruin'd by the Danes, was reſtor'd and greatly improv'd by Ethelwold Biſhop of Wincheſter, with the help of King Edgar and Adulph his Chancellor, who became Abbot thereof. Thus it continued an Abby-Church till King Henry VIII. made the Town a Biſhop's See, and the Church a Cathedral, with a Chapter conſiſting of a Dean and ſix Prebendaries; and whereas it was formerly in the Dioceſs of Lincoln, it is become a Dioceſs of it ſelf, containing the Counties of Northampton and Rutland, and in both are 293 Pariſhes, whereof 91 are Impropriate. It has but one Archdeacon, which is intituled of Northampton; is valued in the King's Books at 414 l. 19 s. 11 d. the Clergy paying for their Tenth 520 l. 16 s. 8 d. Since this Town became a City, it was dignified with the Title of an Earldom in the Perſon of John Lord Mordant, created Earl of Peterborough by King Charles I. An 1627, from whom the Title is devolv'd upon his Son Henry Mordant, the late Earl of Peterborough, who is ſucceeded in his Honours by his Brother's Son, Charles Earl of Monmouth. This Town is 61 miles from London. The Weſtern front of the Cathedral excels all in England for Statelineſs and Columel Work.

PETERSFIELD, a Market and Borough Town of Finch-Dean Hundred in Hampſhire. It is 45 miles from London.

PETERSON (Lawrence) Secretary and Confident to Guſtavus Adolphus before he was King of the Swedes; afterwards his principal Secretary and Miniſter of State, who after he had frequented the Univerſities of Saxony, which were all Lutheran, returned into Swedeland with an Intention to quit the Romiſh Religion, whenever he ſhould find a favourable opportunity. In the mean time he acquired ſo much Reputation by his Wit, and the excellent Endowments Nature beſtowed upon him, and which he had perfected by his Studies, that Guſtavus made choice of him for his Secretary, and entruſted him with all his Deſigns; and when he got upon the Throne, he conferr'd upon him the Honour of principal Secretary, and Miniſter of State, and made uſe of him and his Brother Olaus Peterſon for the eſtabliſhment of Lutheraniſm.

PETERTON; there are two Towns of this Name in Somerſetſhire, the one called North, and the other Patherton, which laſt is a Market Town.

PETER-WARADIN. See PETRO-WARADIN.

PETILIAN, a Donatiſt Biſhop of Cirtha in Africa, about the beginning of the Fifth Age. He was accuſtomed to plead at the Bar, which gained him much Reputation. He was the chief of the Donatiſts in that famous Conference with the Orthodox, where S. Auguſtin was preſent in 411, and is charged with maintaining, That thoſe who kill themſelves for Sin are true Martyrs. Baronius.

PETIT (John) a famous Doctor of the Univerſity of Paris, much eſteemed in the beginning of the Fifteenth Age He had great Knowledge, and acquired much Reputation among the great Men of his time; but the complaiſance he had for the Houſe of Burgundy diſgrac'd him; for it engaged him to juſtifie, in expreſs Terms, the execrable Parricide committed upon the Perſon of Lewis of France, Duke of Orleans, only Brother to Charles VI. by the Duke of Burgundy's Order, which Book was entitled, The Juſtification of the Duke of Burgundy. Gerard de Montagne, Biſhop of Paris, condemn'd the Propoſitions contain'd therein, as Heretical, November 23. 1414, and cauſed it to be burnt on the 25th. of February following, the Author being already dead, and his Book run the ſame fate in the Council of Conſtance, in 1415, to which the Duke of Burgundy's Advocates had appealed from the ſaid Biſhop of Paris. Monſtrelet Hiſt. of the Univerſity of Paris, &c.

PETIT (Peter) a Pariſian, commenced Doctor of Phyſick at Montpelier, was famous for his Learning in the Seventeenth Century; and though he was a Phyſician, yet he applied himſelf very much to other Sciences, and was particularly excellent for Latin Poetry, and in the Knowledge of Hiſtory and Philoſophy, of which we have ſeveral Treatiſes of his compoſing, viz. the Firſt concerning the Motion of Animals: The Second concerning Tears: The Third concerning Light. He writ alſo two Pieces in Phyſick, one whereof is concerning The Nouriſhment to be had from Water, and the other, which has not yet been made publick, is a new Tranſlation of Areteus, with very large Remarks upon it. The Curioſity of his Poems was that which made him receiv'd in the Academy of Padua, and likewiſe in the Pleiades of Paris, for ſo the Learned call the Seven beſt Latin Poets of that City, in Alluſion to the Seven Stars. We have a curious Collection of his Poems, which he cauſed to be Printed in 1683, dedicated to the late M. Nicholai, firſt Preſident of the Chamber of Accompts, in the beginning whereof is a moſt curious Diſcourſe concerning Poetick Fury; ſince which, he has ſet forth ſome other ſmaller Poems, as upon Tea, Litigious Pleadings, &c. Beſides theſe, he has compoſed a Treatiſe of the Amazons, another of the Sibyls, and Miſcellaneous Obſervations, divided into four Books, wherein he hath reſtor'd ſeveral Paſſages that ſeemed to be loſt, and explained many others, which were never underſtood before. This Volume was printed at Utrecht, in 1682, and a ſecond Part of the ſame, fit for the Preſs, was found in his Cloſet after his Death, which happen'd December 12. 1687, aged about 71 Years. There are other curious things which his Heirs have in their Hands, concerning the Mind of Man, the Anthropophagi, the famous Nepentes in Homer, Bacide and the Nymphs, &c. Monſieur Monnoye made his Epitaph thus;

Par tribus unus eram, Medicus, Vateſque, Sophuſque,
Unus & ætatem dignus obire trium.
Par tribus at quamvis fuerim, mihi vix tamen, eheu!
Unius ætatem fata dedere viri.

PETOLIO (M. Antony) a Lawyer of Italy, was a Man of great Parts, who notwithſtanding was forc'd to be Corrector in a Printing-houſe to get his livelihood. Pope Urban VIII. who had known his Merit, ſince he was Cardinal, gave him ſome Relief, and beſtowed upon him ſome good Employment; but he had ſo great an Inclination for Learning, that he applied himſelf to Writing inſtead of laying hold on ſo proper an Occaſion to raiſe his Fortune, ſo that he gathered together no Wealth, but yet left behind him ſeveral Books of value, the principal whereof are De Exarchia Principis, that is, The Duty of a Prince towards his Subjects; Iſarchon Principis, i. e. the Duty of a Prince towards himſelf; Political Commentaries, and, An Abridgement of the Conſtitutions of Popes, in thirteen Books, beſides ſeveral other things; as ſome Obſervations on the Terreſtrial Paradiſe, &c.

PETRA, Lat. Petra deſerti, Cyriacopolis, Mons Regalis, a City of Arabia Petræa, Capital thereof, and an Archbiſhop's See under the Patriarch of Jeruſalem, but formerly under that of Alexandria. It's called Herac now, according to the moſt receiv'd Opinion, or Krach de Montreal. There are other Cities of this Name in Macedonia, Sicily, and elſewhere. Pliny, lib. 6. c. 28. Strabo, lib 16 Ptolemy, &c.

PETRARQUUS or PETRARCHUS (Francis) the fineſt Genius of his Age, was an Italian, born at Arezzo, July 20th 1304. whither his Parents withdrew after they were forc'd to quit Florence upon the Account of the Diſpute between the Guelphs and Gibelines. His Relations retir'd afterwards to Avignon, when the Popes reſided there, and Petrarquus was ſent to Carpentras, where, for the ſpace of four Years, he learnt Grammar, Rhetorick and Logick; went afterwards to Montpelier, where he ſpent four Years more in the ſtudy of the Law, and three at Cologne. At the Age of twenty two he came to Avignon. It's confeſs'd by him, That his youthful Fancy made him deſirous to ſee France, and Germany, and Rome alſo; but afterwards he tetir'd to Vaucluſe, a place near unto Avignon, where he came to know Laura, whom he loved, and whom he hath ſo much celebrated in his Writings. He affirms, This ſolitary place charm'd him ſo much that he reſolv'd to ſtay there, and ſent for his Books in order to it; and here he compoſed, or at leaſt wiſe begun and ſtudied all his Works: The Proſpect of the Place, ſaid he, made me write my Bucolicks, which is a Rural Piece, and two Books of a ſolitary Life, which I have dedicated to M. the Biſhop of Cavaillon, afterwards a Cardinal, who always lov'd me, not only as a Paſtor but Brother. Walking one day between the Mountains, I reſolv'd to make an Heroick Poem in honour of Scipio the Great, whoſe name ſeem'd to me leſs illuſtrious than his Imploys. I then compoſed my Africa, which is look'd upon as an accompliſhed Piece, how imperfect ſoever it may ſeem to be. Petrarch adds moreover, That having on the ſame day receiv'd Letters from the Senate of Rome, and the Chancellor of the Univerſity of Paris, wherein they deſired him to go and receive the Poetick Crown upon thoſe two Theatres of the World, he did by the advice of one of his Friends of the Houſe of Colonna, prefer Rome before Paris: He went by the wey of Naples, and was nobly receiv'd there by King Robert the Good, who deſired him to dedicate his Poem of Africa to him, and afterwards was crowned Poet Laureat at Rome. All the Princes and great Men of his time had an eſteem for him; as the Popes, Emperors, Kings of France, Republick of Venice, &c. and gave Demonſtrations of it to him on divers occaſions. He confeſs'd himſelf much oblig'd to the Lords Colonna and Corregio, theſe two got him made Archdeacon of Parma: He refuſed ſeveral Biſhopricks, and the Death of Laura rendering his return into France in a manner unſupportable to him, he withdrew into Italy, and after having ſojourned at Verona, Parma, Padua, Venice, and Milan, where the Viſcount Galeazzo made him Councellor of State, he ſtay'd at Padua and had a Prebendſhip conferr'd upon him; he bought an Houſe in a place call'd Arqua, and lived there five Years with Aſſerigno his good Friend. There it was he receiv'd a favour he had formerly much laboured for, without being able to obtain it; for the Florentines ſent to him Bocace with Authentick Letters, wherein were contain'd the Reſtitution of all his Father's Goods, and the Recalling of his Perſon, but it was no long time that they cou'd enjoy ſo great a Man. He died a few Years after he had finiſhed his Treatiſes of Philoſophy, and his Poems, in 1374. Pogg. Florence Hiſt. de Avar. Bocace Præf. Geneal. & alibi : Volaterran l. 21. *Antrop. PETRA-SANTA (Silveſter) a Jeſuit, born at Rome, where he was much eſteemed for his Learning and Elocution, and died in that City in 1637. He wrote ſeveral Tracts, as Teſſeræ Gentilitiæ ex Legibus Fecialium Deſcriptæ. De Symbolis Heroicis, lib. 9. Iter Fuldenſe. Itor Moguntinum. Roma Pia. Thaumaſia veræ Religionis contra perfidiam Sectarum, &c. Petra-Santa likewiſe wrote againſt Du Moulin and Rivetus; publiſh'd the Works of Edmund Campian, and tranſlated Bellarmin's Life into Latin, from the Italian written by Fuligatti. Alegamb. Bibl. Script. Soc. Je. Miræus de Script. Sæc 17. &c.

PETRE (William) Son of John Petre of Torbigan in Com. Devon. had his Education at Exeter College in Oxford, where having taken his Degree of Doctor of Law, he grew ſo eminent in that Profeſſion, that King Henry VIII. imploy'd him in divers important Affairs, eſpecially relating to the Diſſolution of the Religious Houſes, being with ſome others put in Commiſſion by Cromwell to repair unto all Monaſteries, and to make enquiry into the Government and Behaviour of the Votaries of both Sexes, and for his Service herein had ſeveral parcels of Church Lands given him, and in 35 H. VIII. was made one of the principal Secretaries of State. He was afterwards nam'd by that King to be one of the Council to young Edward his Son and Succeſſor. He was in no leſs eſteem with the young Prince, being in the 3d. Year of his Reign conſtituted Treaſurer of the Court of Firſt Fruits for Life. Queen Mary continued him one of her principal Secretaries of State, and made him Chancellor of the Garter, in whoſe Reign he got a ſpecial Diſpenſation from Pope Paul IVth. for keeping his Abbey Lands. Queen Elizabeth made choice of him for one of her Privy-Council, having thus rais'd to himſelf an ample Fortune, he became a good Benefactor to Exeter-College in Oxford; built an Alms-Houſe in the Pariſh of Ingerſtone for twenty poor People, with Allowance to every one of 'em two Pence a Day, a Winter-Gown, and two Load of Wood, and among 'em all, feeding for ſix Kine Winter and Summer; alſo a Chaplain to read Service daily. He died in 1572, 15 Eliz. His only Son John was Knighted in 18 Eliz. and by Letters Patent, bearing date 21 Julii, 1 Jac. I. advanced to the Dignity of Baron of this Realm, by the Name of Lord Petre of Writtle in Com. Eſſex. He left Iſſue, three Sons by Mary his Wife, Daughter of Sir Edward Knight. William the eldeſt ſucceeded him in his Honour, who, by Catharine, ſecond Daughter to Edward Earl of Worceſter, had Iſſue ſeven Sons, whereof Robert the eldeſt ſucceeded him, and married Mary, Daughter to Edward Viſcount Mountague, by whom he had three Sons, William, John, and Thomas; and two Daughters, Mary and Dorothy. William, now Lord Petre, firſt married Elizabeth, Daughter of John Earl Rivers, and ſecondly, Bridget, Daughter of John Pincheon of Writtle in Com. Eſſex. His Lordſhips Arms are, Ruby, a Bend Topaz, between two Eſcallops Pearl. Dugd. Baron.

PETRI (Suffridus) born at Lewarden, a City of Friezland, was an Hiſtorian, Poet, and Orator, and learned in the Latin and Greek Tongues. He taught firſt at Erford in Thuringia, after the deceaſe of Eobanus Heſſus, whom he ſucceeded. He was Library-Keeper and Secretary to Cardinal Granville, but being weary of a Court-life, he retir'd to Louvain, where for ſome time he explained the Greek Authors: He was afterwards invited to Cologne, and honoured with the charge of Law-profeſſor, and with that of Hiſtoriographer to the States of Friezland. He died in the year 1597, aged about 70: His principal Works are, De Origine Friſiorum; Continuatio Chronici Epiſcoporum Ultrajectenſium, & Comitum Hollandiæ; Notæ in Euſebium, Sozomenum. &c. Athenagoræ Apologia pro Chriſtianis Latine reddita cum Scholiis, &c. Thuan. Hiſt. Aubert le Mire. Valerius Andr. Bibl. Belg.

PETRILOW, PEOTROW, PATERKAW, PIETERKOW, Lat. Petricovia, a City of Lower Poland in the Palatinate of Sirad, where is held a Parliament, that for the ſpace of ſix Months in the Winter, determines and judges of the Affairs of the Nobles. It ſtands within ſeven Leagues of Sirad, and was almoſt all burnt in 1640. The Kings of Poland had a Palace near Petrikow called Bugai, which is now ruin'd. The Prelates of Poland celebrated a Council here in 1412, where it was ordered, That the Ordinances of the ancient Synods of Gneſna ſhould be reduced into one Volume, which was executed and confirmed by Pope Martin V. in 1417. There were ſeveral other Councils held there, particularly, thoſe of 1539, 1540, and 1542, conven'd to ſecure the Liberties of the Church of Poland: For the Reformation of the Clergy, and to oppoſe the Spreading of Lutheraniſm.

PETRINA, a ſtrong Caſtle in Croatia, ſeated upon a River of the ſame Name, which falls into the River Kulp, eight miles from Zagarab or Agram, a Town in Sclavonia. It was once in the Hands of the Turks, but retaken by the Germans, and is now in the Emperor's Poſſeſſion.

PETRONIUS (C. or F. Arbiter) liv'd in the time of Nero, and had a great ſhare in the favour of that Prince. Several think him to be the ſame mentioned by Tacitus in the ſixteenth Book of his Annals, of whom he ſpeaks thus; He was a Voluptuary, who gave himſelf up to ſleep all the Day, and ſpent the Night in Pleaſures and Buſineſs; and as other Men have made themſelves famous by their Induſtry, he gained his Repute from his Idleneſs; however, he did not paſs for a Prodigal, but for a Man who knew how to ſpend his Eſtate, and had a delicate Palate.

All his Words and Actions were ſo much the more agreeable, becauſe they manifeſted a ſort of unaffected Freedom, and appear'd to be ſpoken with a kind of pleaſing neglect; however, as he had been Proconſul of Bithynia, and afterwards Conſul, he ſhewed himſelf capable of greater Imploys, and grew Voluptuous, either through his own Inclinations, or deſignedly, becauſe that his Prince lov'd Debauchery: He was made one of his chief Confidents, and as it were, the Intendant of his Pleaſures; for Nero found nothing agreeable or delicious but what Petronius approv'd of. He adds, That hence aroſe the Envy of Tigellinus, another Favourite of Nero, againſt his Rival, who ſurpaſſed him in the Science of Voluptuouſneſs, which made him accuſe him of having a hand in a Conſpiracy againſt the Emperor; for which he was ſeiz'd, and being adjudged to die, he cauſed his Veins from time to time to be opened and ſhut again, entertaining himſelf the while with his Friends, with Poems, and pleaſant Verſes. He ſet forth the Debauches of the Prince under borrowed Names, and after having ſealed up the Book with his own hand, ſent it to Nero. We have a Satyr of his, and ſome Verſes, both the one and the other being full of fulſome ſtuff, but the Latin is ſo pure, that Petronius has thence been called, Autor puriſſimæ impuritatis. It's added by Pliny, That at his death he broke a Veſſel that had coſt three hundred Seſterees, for fear leaſt Nero ſhou'd make uſe of it to adorn his Cup-board. He died about the year 66. The Family of the Petronii was very illuſtrious at Rome, and the Turpilians, Mamertins, Septimians, Voluſians, &c. Roman Conſuls deſcended from this Family. We have alſo among the Works of Petronius ſome Pieces of P. Petronius the Rhetorican, of a Grammarian, of another ſurnamed the Indian, of Petronius Antigenidus, of Peſaro, of C. Petronius Hilarius of the ſame City; of Petronius Apollodorus grand Prieſt of the Pagans at Rome, &c. but theſe Authors are not well known. It's to be obſerved, That this is not the ſame with Petronius Governour of Syria, whom Caligula ſent to put his Statue in the Temple of Jeruſalem. Joſeph. l. 18. Antiq. Judaic. Tacitus l. 16. Annal. Pliny Hiſt. Nat. l. 37. c. 2. Fulgentius lib. 1. Mith. &c. A little while ago there was found ſome fragments of Petronius Arbiter at Trapu a City of Dalmatia in the Archbiſhoprick of Spalatro, in a Manuſcript in Folio, two Fingers thick, containing ſeveral Treatiſes written upon very ſubſtantial Paper. The Poets, Catullus, Tibullus, and Propertius are in the beginning of it, and not Horace, as an Author has ſaid in the Preface printed at Padua. Petronius's Work follows written with the ſame hand, and manner as we have it in the Editions; after which may be ſeen a Piece entitled, Fragmentum Petronii Arbitri ex libro decimo-quinto & ſexto decimo, wherein is contained the Supper of Trimalcio as it hath been ſince printed according to the Original. De Salas the Spainard, who hath commented upon this Author, makes mention of a Fifteenth and Sixteenth Book, but does not ſay where he has ſeen them. This Original is every where very legible, and the beginning of the Chapters and Poems are in blue and red Characters: Thoſe who know it make no doubt of its Antiquity, being dated thus (1423, 20 November.) This Manuſcript has made a great noiſe among the Learned. It was as firſt ſuppoſed to be a ſpurious Piece, and the Product of the Fancy of ſome Ingenious Man, who had imitated the Style of Petronius. M. Valois, or Valeſius, was one of thoſe that ſuſpected it, but M. Lucius, and the Abbot Gradi of Rome believe it to be true. Reineſius commented upon this Manuſcript, not daring to ſay any thing concerning its Antiquity. Dr. Statilius keeps it in his Library at Traou, where you may eaſily diſcover, by the Eye, that it is no ſpurious Piece. J. Spon. Journey into Italy, &c. 1675. This Satyr has lately been publiſh'd intire, from a Manuſcript, ſaid to be found at Belgrade, and was printed at Rotterdam and London in 1692. See the Preface of M. Nodot.

PETRO-WARADIN, Lat. Acuminium, Petro-Varodinum, a Town in Sclavonia, called by the Inhabitants Petrower, by the Germans Peter-Wardein, ſituate on the Danube, between the Save and Drave, ſix Hungarian miles from Belgrade to the N. W. and about twelve from Eſſeck to the S. This place has been very famous during the preſent War: The Turks made it their common Paſſage into Upper Hungary, after the Emperor's Forces had made themſelves Maſters of Buda, and for that purpoſe kept a Bridge of Boats over the Danube here; the Revolt and Mutiny againſt the Prime Viſier, after the Battle of Mohatz, happened here whereby that General, in 1687, was forc'd to fly for his Life to Belgrade, and thence to Conſtantinople. It has been ſince taken and retaken by both Parties. Its Fortifications blown up by the Imperialiſts in 1688, and the Town quite burnt down by the Turks a little after: But the Emperor fortifies it now, and intends to make it a place of great Strength.

PETUS (Cæſennius) a Roman General whom Nero ſent into Armenia inſtead of Corbulo; he took ſuch ill Meaſures, that he was hem'd in in the Enemies Country, and for fear, concluded a very diſhonourable Peace with them. Nero receiv'd him in a way of deriſion, and ſaid, That he might aſſure himſelf immediately of his Pardon, becauſe he was ſo ſubject to fear, that he was concern'd leaſt the dread of puniſhment ſhould make him ſick. Some Authors think, that this Cæſennius Petus is the ſame, which Veſpaſian ſent Governour into Syria. Tacitus l. 15. Annal. Joſeph. de Bel. Jud. l. 7. c. 21.

PETUS (Thraſea) a Senator and Stoical Philoſopher, was a native of Padua, and writ the Life of Cato of Utica. The Ancients ſpeak very often of his Learning and Honeſty. Nero ſentenc'd him to die, and in his Perſon deſtroy'd Vertue it ſelf, as Tacitus ſays. He was ſo courageous, that he durſt oppoſe the Conſul Marcellus, who paſs'd ſentence of Death upon a Pretor unjuſtly accuſed of High-Treaſon; and this Boldneſs of Thraſea broke the Silence and Patience of ſeveral others who durſt not contradict the Conſul; which was a means to ſave the Pretor, whom Nero deſign'd to die. Tacitus l, 14. Annal. Dion l. 60. Pliny, l. 8. Ep. 22. &c.

PETWORTH, a Market-Town of Arundel Rape, in the Weſt of Suſſex, graced with a ſtately Houſe formerly belonging to the Earls of Northumberland, and now, by Marriage, to the Duke of Somerſet.

PETZORCKE, Lat. Petzora, a Province in the North of Muſcovy towards the Frozen Ocean, having its principal Town and a River of the ſame Name. The River falls into the White Sea by Six great Mouths, between Paſtejezero, a Town and Caſtle, and Ziemmipoea a ridge of Mountains.

PEUCER (Gaſpar) a German, Phyſician and Mathematician, born in Luſatia, in 1525; was very Learned, and a great Friend of Melanchton's, who gave him one of his Daughters nam'd Magdalene in Marriage, in 1550. He printed in 1565, at Wittemberg, a Fifth Book of the Chronicle of Carion. He writ ſeveral other things, as, Elementa Doctrinæ de circulis cæleſtibus; De dimenſione terræ, &c. The Elector of Saxony held him a long time in Priſon. He departed this Life September 25th. 1602, aged 78. Melchior Adam in vit. Ger. Medic. Camerarius in vit. Melancht. &c.

PEVENSEY, a Town which gives Name to one of the ſix Rapes or Diviſions of Suſſex, and to its adjoyning Haven, hence called Pevenſey-Haven. The Town ſtands upon a ſmall River within a mile of its fall into the Sea; of chief note for being the Place where William the Conqueror landed from Normandy with a Fleet of about nine hundred Ships.

PEUTINGER (Conrad) a Lawyer of Augsburg much eſteem'd for his Learning. He died December 28th. 1547, aged 82. He writ Sermones Convivales; De Gentium Quarundam emigratione Epitome; De Fortuna, &c. He recovered the ancient Maps of the Roman Empire, which were publiſh'd by Velſerus, under the Name of Peutinger's Tables. Eraſ. in Epiſt. Cruſius in Annal. Sueviæ. Geſner, &c.

PFEULLENDORFT, an Imperial City of Germany in the little Country of Hegow in Swabia, ſituated upon the River Cell, between Conſtance and Tubingen.

PFORTZEIM, a ſmall City of Germany in the Circle of Swabia and Marquiſate of Baden. It was taken by the French in 1691, and ſtands on the River Entz and Nagold, 17 miles S. of Philipsburgh, and 27 N. E. of Baden.

PHÆDRUS: See PHEDRUS, where this Author is placed by Miſtake.

PHAETON, was a Prince of the Ligurians, a great Aſtrologer, who principally apply'd himſelf to ſtudy the Courſe of the Sun. In his time Italy was ſo much incommoded on the ſide of the Po with extraordinary Heats, that the Earth became dry and barren for many Years, from which Event Ovid drew that famous Fable in his Second Book of Metamorphoſis. Torniel, Salian, Sponde, and others who adhere to the Calculation of Euſebius, ſay, this happened An. Mund. 2530. The Mythological Account runs thus: Phaeton was Son to Phœbus, and being of an ambitious Temper, he importuned his Father to give him leave to drive the Chariot of the Sun for one Day, his Requeſt was at laſt granted, but upon Trial, being ignorant of the Road, and not ſtrong enough to manage the Horſes, he ſet both the Skie and the Earth on Fire, which incens'd Jupiter to that degree, that he ſtruck him through with a Thunder Bolt, and tumbl'd him from the Box into the Po, where his Siſters, the Heliades were metamorphos'd into Poplars, and their Tears into Amber. Euſebius in Chron Ovid. l. 2 Metam. Fab. 1.

PHAETUSA, one of the Heliades, and Siſter of Phaeton. The Poets ſay, That while ſhe was lamenting the Deſtiny of her Brother ſhe was changed into a Poplar-tree. Ovid l. 2. Metam. Fab. 2.

PHAINUS, an ancient Aſtronomer, very famous, born at Elis in Greece, was the firſt that obſerved the time of the Solſtice from the top of Mount Lycabete, near unto Athens, where he took his Obſervations on the Courſe of the Stars. Meto, another famous Aſtronomer was his Scholar. *Theophraſtus lib. de Significat. PHALANTUS of Lacedæmon, the Son of Aracus, who being at the Siege of Meſſina a City of Peloponneſus; and ſeeing the Lacedæmonian Army that had ſworn to take Meſſina, or periſh before it, diminiſh extreamly, and that in the mean time the Lacedæmonian Women brought forth no more Children, adviſed, That the Youth that were come into the Camp after this Oath, ſhould return to Sparta, and have leave to lie with the Wives of thoſe who remained in the Camp. This Council was followed; and the Children that were born were called Parthenians, who afterwards, in the nineteenth Olympiad, came under the Conduct of the ſame Phalantus into Italy, and made themſelves Maſters of Tarentum. Pauſanias in Meſſin. Juſtin. l. 13. Euſ. in Chron.

PHALANX, an Athenian who learn'd the Art of War of Pallas, at the ſame time when ſhe taught his Siſter Arachne to ſow and weave. Phalanx having committed Inceſt with his Siſter, Pallas was ſo enrag'd, that ſhe turned both into Vipers; and for further Puniſhment, ordered that the young ones ſhould eat their way through their Dams Bowels.

PHALARIS, a Tyrant of Agrigentum, or Gergenti, in Sicily, made himſelf Maſter of that City in the ſecond year of the 52d. Olympiad, or the 30th according to others, and maintained it for ſixteen years. He was very Cruel. We have ſtill remaining ſome Letters of Abaris to this Tyrant, and his Anſwers. Lilio Giraldi thinks theſe Pieces were counterfeited by Lucian. Amongſt the ſeveral Inſtruments of Torment that he cauſed to be contrived, there was a Bull of Braſs, in which People being caſt, and a Fire plac'd under they bellowed like Oxen. The Artiſt demanding a great Reward for his Invention was put in it himſelf to try the firſt Experiment. The Reaſons for and againſt the Genuineneſs of Phalaris's Epiſtles have lately been diſputed at large by Dr. Bently and Mr. Boyle; to whom the Reader is referr'd. Lucian. Dial 3. *de Poet. PHALTZBOURG, or Phealtsbourg, a City of Lorrain, formerly very conſiderable, with the Title of a Principality, ſituated at the Foot of the Mountains, upon the Frontiers of Alſatia, ſeven or eight Leagues from Strasbourg.

PHAON of Mitylene, in the Iſle of Lesbos, was a Handſome Man, and very much fanſied by the Women; and the Poeteſs Sapho, among the reſt, had the Misfortune to be ſmitten with him; but he making no returns of Inclination ſhe fell into deſpair, as will farther appear, under her Article. The Poets feign, That theſe extraordinary Charms of his Perſon, were given him by Venus, in Requital of ſome Services receiv'd when he was Maſter of a Veſſel; for one day he took her abroad without enquiring who ſhe was, and carried her with Great Expedition to the Port ſhe deſir'd him, and when he had ſet her aſhoar, he was ſo generous as not to ask her a Penny for her Paſſage: However, he was extreamly well gratifi'd for his Pains; for Venus preſented him with an Alabaſter Box of very rich Ointment, with which, as ſoon as he had rubb'd himſelf over, he grew the handſomeſt Fellow that ever was ſeen, and his Youth, which was ſomewhat ſpent, return'd again; This ſurprize of good Fortune made the Women of Mitylene ſtark mad about him, but this Advantage of his Perſon, being miſmanag'd, coſt him his Life; for being taken with another Man's Wife, he was knock'd on the Head for his Debauchery. *Ælian. PHARAOH, a Name common to all the Kings of Egypt ſince Amaſis, whom others call Amoſis or Themoſis, and ſignifies a King in the ancient Language of the Egyptians, according to Joſephus. Some ſay this word imports as much as a Crocodile, which was one of the Gods of thoſe People. In the Coptick Language Phi-ouro ſtill ſignifies King. And this Name might have been corrupted from Pharaoh. There are ten Pharaohs mentioned in Scripture. The firſt was in the time of Abraham, Gen. 12. The ſecond in the time of Joſeph, who interpreted the Dreams of Pharaoh, Gen. 41. The third, who ill requited the Services of Joſeph, and evil entreated the Iſraelites, Exod. 1. The fourth to whom Moſes and Aaron were ſent, and who was drowned in the Red-ſea, Exod. 14. The fifth, Pharaoh mentioned in Holy-writ, reigned in the time of David. The ſixth was Father-in-Law to Solomon, or, according to ſome, the ſame with the former. The ſeventh was Pharaoh-Shiſhach, 2 Chron. 11. and 14. The eighth, Pharaoh Sua, or So, 2 Kings 17. The ninth, Necao, or Necho, 2 Kings 27. The tenth, Hophzah, or Vaphres, Jerem. 37. It's very hard to know the true Names of theſe Pharaohs, becauſe the Egyptian Hiſtory is very much confuſed. And to ſay nothing but of the Pharaoh that was drowned in the Red-ſea, Calviſius ſaith it was Orus; others, the Amoſis of Clemens Alexandrinus, or the Bechoris of Manethon. This Pharaoh is called Cenchres by Euſebius, Secmoſis by Philo, Amenophis by Uſher, Rameſſes by ſome others and Acerres by Scaliger. Chevreau, Hiſtoire du Monde.

PHARE, or Fare, is an high Tower, built upon ſome Point of Land that jets out into the Sea, and where in the night time a Light is kept for a Signal to Ships that draw near it. There have been ſome of theſe Phares that have been eſteemed wondrous Works, as was that of Alexandria in Egypt, and that now called the Fare of Meſſina in Sicily, the Mole of Genoa, the Tower of Cordovan, at the mouth of the Garonne in Guienne; and the Phanarion, at the mouth of the Streight of Conſtantinople.

PHARES, a City of Little Achaia, a Province of Peloponneſus, in Greece, famous for the Oracles delivered there by a Statue of Mercury, in the Market-place, before that of the Goddeſs Veſta. Thoſe who went to conſult the Oracle, firſt burnt Incenſe in Honour of Veſta, afterwards went to put Oil in the little Lamps of Braſs that were at the Foot of Mercury's Statue; and having lighted them, they made their Offering of a Piece of the Country Money, which they threw upon the Altar. After which, when they had declared their Requeſts, and applied their Ears to the Statue, they withdrew, ſtopping them with their Hands till they got out of the Place, and then put off their Hands, and took the firſt Words which they heard for the Oracle's Anſwer. It's ſaid the Egyptians uſed the ſame Ceremony towards their God Serapis. Pauſanias in Achaicis.

PHARISEES, as the Name imports, was a Sect that roſe in Judæa, a long time before the Birth of Chriſt. S. Jerom, who ſpeaks hereof in his Relation of the Nazarenes, ſaith, That the Authors of it were Sammai and Hillel. Thoſe of this Sect faſted the ſecond and fifth Day of the Week; they put Thorns at the bottom of their Robes, that they might prick their Legs as they went along; they lay upon Boards covered with Flint-ſtones, and tied thick Cords about their Waſte: but theſe Mortifications were neither kept by all, nor always. They paid Tithes as the Law preſcribed, and gave the thirtieth and fiftieth part of their Fruits; adding voluntary Sacrifices to thoſe that were commanded, and ſhewing themſelves very exact in performing their Vows. But Pride ſpoiled all their Actions, becauſe they had no other care nor end than to gain the Affections of the People, and the Reputation of being Saints. And in this manner they grew ſo potent, that the laſt Kings of the Jews were afraid to ſuppreſs them; and were often forced to make uſe of them for their own ſupport. They coveted the chief Seats in Feaſts and Aſſemblies, that they might paſs for infallible Maſters, and the ſincereſt Doctors of the Law, which they had baſely corrupted by their Traditions. As to their Doctrine, they attributed the Event of all things to Deſtiny, although they endeavoured to make the Liberty of the Actions of Man's Will accord therewith. They believed with Pythagoras the Tranſmigration of Souls; eſpecially thoſe of People of Vertue, eſteeming the reſt to be always in Torments. In Judicial Aſtrology they followed all the Opinions of the Gentiles. And S. Epiphanius adds, that they had tranſlated the Greek Names of this Art, which ſignified the Stars and Signs of the Zodiack, into Hebrew Names. Joſephus, l. 18. Ant. c. 1. l. 2. De Bello, c. 12. *S. PHARMACUSA, a little Iſland in the Egæan-ſea, towards Ionia, a Province of Aſia Minor. Cæſar was taken by Pirates, and King Attalus was killed there. It's called at this day Fermaco. Pliny, Suetonius, Baudrand.

PHARNABAZUS, Governour in Aſia, and General of the Armies of Darius and Artaxerxes, Kings of Perſia, made War upon the Athenians, and ſuccoured thoſe of Lacedæmonia in the 341 of Rome. But he fell out with them in 354, and beſieged the City of Cumæ in vain. In 380 of Rome he entred into Egypt, at the mouths of the River Nile; but this Deſign ſucceeded not, ſo that he was obliged to return without doing any thing. Thucydides, Xenophon, Diodorus Siculus, &c.

PHARNACES, the Son of Mithridates, King of Pontus, cauſed the Army to revolt againſt his Father, who killed himſelf out of Deſpair, in the 691 year of Rome. He ſtood Neuter in the War between Pompey and Cæſar, but that Plea would not ſerve his turn; for Cæſar having pacified Egypt, ſubdued him in 707, with ſo much celerity, that he wrote to his Friends, Veni, vidi, vici. This Prince ought not to be confounded with Pharnaces, King of Cappadocia. Appian. de Bell. Mith. Vel. Paterc. l. 2. Florus, l. 3. *Dion. Suetonius, Riccioli Chron. PHAROS, a little Iſland at the mouth of the Port of Alexandria in Egypt, which is now joined to that City by a long Dike. Ammianus Marcellinus, l. 22. ſaith, That this Pharos was ſeven Furlongs from Alexandria. Alexander the Great eſſayed to build a City there, but could not, the place being too ſtreight; and ſo he built Alexandria over againſt it, on the main Land. After this, there was erected in this Iſland an high and ſtately Tower, which anciently paſſed for one of the Wonders of the World. It was Ptolemy Philadelphus that cauſed it to be built at his coming to the Crown, in the 124th. Olympiad, and the 470th. of Rome. He ſpent 800 Talents upon it, and made uſe of Soſtrates, the Gnidian, a famous Architect, for this Work. This Tower, which was called Pharos, according to the Name of the Iſland, ſerved for a Signal by Night to them that ſailed upon thoſe Coaſts which are full of Rocks and Banks of Sand. Hence it is that the Name of Pharos was given to all ſuch Towers where a Light is kept in the Night-time on dangerous Coaſts. A Comment upon Lucian, printed at Amſterdam, in 1687, teſtifies that that Tower was built ſquare, and had the ſame Circumference as the Pyramids. And the Geography of Al-Edrias makes it to he three hundred Cubits high. And it's added, that the Light put on the top of this Tower in the Night-time, might be ſeen at Sea an hundred Miles diſtance. Some Travellers report, that this prodigious Work was ſupported by four Pillars of Glaſs, reſembling Crab-Fiſh, placed at the four Corners, which they could not ſee in the Ruins of this Edifice, for that the Turks have buried the baſe of the Pharos under Ground. But they have taken this Report from an ancient Author, who ſpeaking of the ſeven Wonders of the World, ſays, It is matter of Aſtoniſhment, how they could make pieces of Glaſs ſo great and ſtrong as to ſupport ſo heavy a Maſs. It may be Soſtrates put theſe four Pillars for Ornament to the four Corners, ſo as if the Tower was ſupported by them. But inſtead of their being made of Glaſs, as reported, they were doubtleſs of ſome hard and tranſparent Stone, ſuch as is a ſort of Marble of Memphis, and another Stone brought out of Æthiopia. The Fires lighted in theſe Pharos's appear ſometimes at a diſtance, like a Star, which deceives the Mariners, who by that Miſtake take the wrong Courſe, and unfortunately run upon the Sands of Marmarica. Vide SOSTRATES. *Chevreou Hiſt. du Monde. PHAROS, an Iſland of Illyricum, with a Town of the ſame Name, and with a Biſhoprick, under the Archbiſhop of Spalatro. The Italians call it Leſina, and the Sclavonians Huar. 'Tis mention'd by Strabo and Pliny.

PHARSALIA, a City of Theſſaly, famous for the Battle won by Julius Cæſar againſt Pompey the Great in the neighbouring Plains, in the 607th. Year of Rome. It hath ſince been called Farſa, being a Biſhop's See under Lariſſa, and afterwards an Archbiſhoprick, under the Patriarch of Conſtantinople.

PHASEL, Fianda, a City of Pamphylia, or Lycia, with a Biſhoprick under the Archbiſhop of Mira; acknowledging Mopſus King of the Argives for its Founder. It was a Retreat for Pirates, and the Inhabitants were ſo poor, that they could offer nothing but ſalt Fiſh in Sacrifice, whence the Proverb, Sacrificium Phaſelitarum, & Sacrum ſine fumo. Pliny, Ptolemy, &c.

PHASIS, a River of Mingrelia, or Colchis, which takes its Courſe towards part of Mount Caucaſus, which lies to the Eaſt of this Country. The Turks call it Fachs, and the Natives Rione. It runneth through the City of Cotatis, the Capital of the Kingdom of Imiretta; and from thence paſſing on, diſchargeth it ſelf into the Black Sea, where its Mouth is above half a League broad, and ſixty Fathoms deep. In this River, towards the Mouth of it, are ſeveral ſmall Iſlands, which are very delightful, all covered with Trees. In the biggeſt of which may be ſeen towards the Weſt Part, the Ruins of a Cittadel which the Turks built there in 1578. Amurath III. having undertaken to conquer the Northern and Eaſtern Parts of the Black Sea, did in order to it get upon the Phaſis with his Gallies; but the King of Imiretta laid Ambuſcades for him in Places where the River was narroweſt; and ſo defeated the Sultan's Fleet. This Fortreſs of Phaſis was taken in 1640, by the King of Imiretta, in Conjunction with the Princes of Mingrelia and Guriel, and razed by him, carrying away five and twenty pieces of Cannon that were there, and putting them into Cotatis. This River, near the beginning of its Courſe, is very rapid; but having got into the Plain, runs very gently, ſo as that one can ſcarce diſcern which way the Water moves. Its Waters do not mix with thoſe of the Sea, and the reaſon is, that being lighter, they ſwim thereon. They are very good to drink, though they be muddy and of a leaden Colour. Arrian ſaith, that formerly Ships took in Water at Phaſis, as being of Opinion, that that River was Sacred, or that they believed it was the beſt Water in the World. The ſame Arrian, and other Hiſtorians, ſay moreover, that there was a Temple dedicated to the Goddeſs Rhea, in the Iſle of Phaſis; but there are now no Remains of it. Some affirm it was ſtanding in the time of the Emperor Zeno, and that it was then conſecrated to the Worſhip of the true God. Geographers place a City, named Sebaſte, at the Mouth of the Phaſis, but neither it nor the Ruins of any City are now to be ſeen there. Here are, conformable to the Relation of the Ancients, a great number of Pheaſants, who take their Name from this River, the Neighbourhood of which they much frequent and delight in; the Banks of the Phaſis are covered with curious Trees, and frequented with Men, who fiſh for Sturgeons. Sir John Chardin ſaith, that the Chanal of this River is at its Fall into the Sea, a Mile and a half broad, and ſixty Fathom deep. There is likewiſe a Town of the ſame Name upon it, with a Biſhop's See, Suffragan to the Archbiſhop of Trebizond. F. *Lambert. Relation de la Mingrelia, dans le Recuel de M. Thevenot. vol. 1. PHAZAEL, was the Eldeſt Son of Antipater, and Brother of Herod the Great, King of Judæa. Antipater having rais'd himſelf upon the Weakneſs of Hircanus, made Phazael, who was a prudent and moderate Perſon, Governor of Jeruſalem in the 707th of Rome; but being beſieged in the Palace of that City by Antigonus and the Parthians whom he headed, they kept him Priſoner till the 715th. of Rome. In the mean time, as he feared not the death ſo much whereunto he was condemned, as the ſhame of receiving it at the hands of his Enemy; and as he could not kill himſelf, becauſe he was held in Chains, he knocked his Head againſt the Walls. It's ſaid Antigonus ſent Phyſicians to him, who inſtead of uſing Medicines to cure, poiſoned his Wounds. Herod, his Brother, erected ſeveral Edifices to honour his Memory, as a Tower in Jeruſalem, named Phazael, and a City of the ſame Name in the Valley of Jericho. *Joſeph. l. 14. PHEBADIUS, or Febadius, which thoſe of that Country call S. Fiari, Biſhop of Agen, lived in the fourth Age. He writ A Confutation of the Arian Confeſſion of Faith, publiſh'd at Syrmich, or Syrmium, which we have ſtill in the Bibliotheca Patrum. He preſented himſelf afterwards, in 359, in the Council of Rimini, where, together with Jervais of Tongres, he maintained the Catholick Faith. But the Arians ſurprized him, and the Love of Peace and Amity made him ſign a Confeſſion of Faith, which was Orthodox in Appearance, but naught at the bottom. Afterwards he acknowledged his Error; diſapproved of what he had done; and teſtified by his Retractation, that his Deſign was to ſuppreſs Hereſie, and far from ſubſcribing to Errors. He was alive in 392, and very old, when S. Jerom reckons his Work among the other Treatiſes of the illuſtrious Men of the Church. So that hereby it appears, that he muſt have been at leaſt forty Years a Biſhop. He writ alſo ſome other Pieces which S. Jerom had not read, and are now loſt. It's thought he preſided at the Council of Valence, in 374. He appeared in the ſame Quality at that of Saragoſa, about the end of 380, and is there called Fitadus. We may moreover judge, that it was he to whom S. Ambroſe writ the 70th. Letter. His Holy Day is celebrated at Agen. S. Jerom. de Script. Eccl. 108. *Sulp. Sev. l. 2. Hiſt. Sacr.. S. Martha. PHEDIMA, the Daughter of Otanes, a Perſian Lord, was Wife of the true, and afterwards of the counterfeit, Smerdis Spandabates, who ſaid he was her Husband after he had murthered that King. But that Queen, inſtructed by her Father, obſerved him one Night in his Sleep, and having found that he had no Ears, declared it to the Perſian Princes, who diſcovering the Cheat by that Mark, killed him in his Palace. Herodotus, l. 3.

PHEDO, a Philoſopher of Elis, was at firſt a Slave; but having obtained his Freedom, he applied himſelf to the Study of Philoſophy, and was the chief of the Eliack Sect. He wrote ſome Dialogues, and had Pliſtanes of Elis for his Succeſſor. Diogenes Laertius, l. 2. vitæ Phil. Aul. Gel. l. 2. c. 18. Macrobius, l. 1. Saturn. C. 11. Heſychius, Suidas, &c.

PHEDO, a Citizen of Athens, whom the thirty Tyrants of that City put to death in a Feaſt, and his Daughters whom they would have compelled to dance naked in the Hall where the Feaſt was kept, threw themſelves headlong into a Pit, to preſerve their Chaſtity.

PHEDRUS, a Latin Poet, Auguſtus's Freeman, was born in Thrace; it was he that turned the Fables of Æſop into Iambick Verſe, as he ſays himſelf in the Preface to his Work, which contains five Books.

Æſopus Auctor quam materiam reperit

PHEMIUS, a Schoolmaſter of Smyrna, in Ionia, marry'd Chritheis when ſhe was big with Child, of which ſhe was afterwards deliver'd upon the Bank of the River Meles, which was the reaſon of the Boy's being call'd Meleſigenes. This Meleſigenes is the Poet, who is better known under the Name of Homer. Herod in vit. Hom. Plutarch, &c.

PHEMONOE, the firſt Propheteſs in the Temple of Delphos; ſhe invented Heroick Verſes, in which ſhe gave the Reſponſes of the Oracle. The Firſt of which ſtands thus in the Latin Tranſlation, Et Pennis Volucres, & Apes date Mella favoſque. Euſeb. in Chron.

PHENEUS, a City of Arcadia, at the Foot of Mount Cyllene, famous for having formerly diſputed for Precedency with the City of Tegeum, the Capital of this Country; but Critolaus the Tegean confirms the Honour to his own City after that famous Combat wherein he vanquiſhed Damoſtrates; near unto this City of Pheneus there is a Lake, whoſe Waters are wholeſome in the day time, but very pernicious in the night. Ovid Metam. Lib. 15.

PHEODOR-OY, one of the Iſlands of Shetland, belonging to Scotland, 7 Miles in length, lying 8 Miles from Yell, and about 7 from Vuiſt.

PHERAULIS, a certain poor Perſian, who being enriched by Cyrus, was ſo uneaſie under the Troubles which attended his Riches, that being deſirous to enjoy his former Repoſe, he beſtowed all his Riches upon one Saca, on condition that he ſhould entertain him moderately, as an ordinary Gueſt. Xenophon.

PHERECYDES, a Philoſopher, born in the Iſland of Sciros, the Diſciple of Pittacus, and Maſter of Pythagoras, lived in the 55th. Olympiad, and the 195th. of Rome. Theopompus, alledged by Diogenes Laertius, affirms he was the firſt that writ of the Nature of the Gods. It's obſerved alſo, that he was well skilled in the Art of Divination, that ſeeing a Ship upon the Sea, he foretold it ſhould be caſt away, and predicted an Earth-quake. He is ſaid to have been the firſt who diſcovered Eclipſes, and the Periods of the Moon, &c.

PHERENICE, the Daughter of Diagoras, King of Rhodes, came in Man's habit to the Olympick Games, though there was a poſitive Law that threatned great Penalties upon either Maids or Wives who ſhould dare to diſguiſe themſelves at ſuch Solemnities. She won the Prize in running, and her Son, whom ſhe brought along with her, carried away alſo a Crown. Then ſhe diſcovered both her Sex and Quality, and was exempted from the Rigor of the Law, becauſe ſhe was a Princeſs; and that both ſhe and her Son had been Victorious. Pauſan. in Eliac.

PHERON, or Amenophis Pharaoh, King of Egypt, ſucceeded his Father, Seſoſtris. It's ſaid, that having out of Vanity ſhot an Arrow into the Nile, during its overflowing, he became blind thereupon, and continued ſo for ten years; but the Oracle in the City of Buta informed him he ſhould recover his ſight, if he waſhed his Eyes in a Woman's Water, who had never known any other Man but her own Husband. He made a Trial of it upon his Wife and ſeveral others, but to no purpoſe. But having found one whoſe Water cured him; he cauſed all the reſt to be burnt; and then made very magnificent Oblations throughout all the Temples. Her. Euterpe, l. 2.

PHIDIAS, an excellent Greek Statuary in the 88th. Olympiad. He made the Statue of Minerva of Ivory, ſo much boaſted of by the Ancients, and conſidered as the Maſter-piece of his Art. He put it in the Cittadel at Athens. Being afterwards expelled from that City, he retired into the Province of Elis, where he was killed, after having finiſhed Jupiter's Statue, which he put in the Temple of Olympia, where it paſſed for one of the Wonders of the World. Pauſanias in Eliac.

PHIDOLAS, of Corinth, famous in Hiſtory for the Adventure which befel him in the Olympick Games, for having fallen from his Horſe, the Horſe ceaſed not to purſue his Carreer; turned about at the End of the Race, and, as if he had known he had won the Victory, went and preſented himſelf before the Maſters of the Games, as it were to demand the Prize. Whereupon the Eleans adjudged the Prize to Phidolas, notwithſtanding his Misfortune, and gave him leave to erect a Statue for his Horſe. Pauſanias, l. 6.

PHIDON, King of Argos, Brother of Caranus, firſt King of Macedonia, an Author cited by Euſebius upon the Year 1217, from Abraham, attributes to this Phidon the Invention of Weights and Meaſures. He joined himſelf with thoſe of Piſa for the Celebration of the 8th. Olympiad, excluding thoſe of Elis. Pauſanias in Eliac.

PHILADELPHIA, an ancient City of Lydia, in Aſia minor, now in the Province of Caraſia, in Natolia, called by the Turks, Allach-Scheyr, that is, The City of God. When they came to ſet upon this Country, the Inhabitants defended themſelves moſt vigorouſly. And the Turks, to ſtrike a Terror into them, bethought of making there an Intrenchment of a Wall of dead Mens Bones, mixt with Lime, which frightned them; whereupon they ſurrendred, but made much better Conditions than their Neighbours. They granted them four Churches, which they ſtill have. There are ſeven or eight thouſand Inhabitants in this City, of whom about two thouſand are Chriſtians. Spon. Voyage d'Italy, &c. in 1675.

PHILADELPHIA, the chief City of Penſilvania, ſtands upon a Neck of Land between the Two Navigable Rivers of De la Ware and Skulkill; it's Two Miles in length, and near a Mile in breadth. It has ſeveral fair Streets, and the Rivers are of ſuch a convenient Depth, that Ships may Ride in ſix or eight fathom Water cloſe to the City. This Town has a fair Key of about Three hundred Foot Square, to which a Ship of Five hundred Tuns may lay her Broadſide. The High Street, that runs from River to River, and is a hundred Foot Broad, has eight Streets more which run the ſame Courſe, the leaſt of which is Fifty Foot in breadth; and beſides, Broad-ſtreet, which croſſes the Town in the middle, and is alſo a hundred Foot wide, there are Twenty Streets paralel to it, Fifty Foot in breadth. The Preſent State of his Majeſty's Iſles and Territories in America, printed at London, 1687.

PHILADELPHIA, a City in Cæloſyria, formerly call'd Rabbath by the Jews, as S. Jerome obſerves, with a Biſhoprick, under the Archbiſhop of Bolſra.

PHILANDER (William) born at Chatillon, upon the Seine, was much admir'd at Rome for his Learning, in the Sixteenth Century. He wrote curious Remarks upon Vitruvius, in the Preface of which, he promis'd to publiſh another Piece, ſtill more extraordinary, but being of a lazy Humour, broke his Word, and loſt his Reputation. S. Marthe, Lib. 2. Elog.

PHILASTRIUS, Biſhop of Breſcia in Italy, liv'd to the latter end of the Fourth Century, and was at the Council of Aquileia with S. Ambroſe, and ſeveral other Eminent Prelates in 381; S. Auguſtin aſſures us, that he knew him at Milan. In ſhort, he was a Perſon remarkable for his Learning and Piety, and wrote a Book of Hereſies, extant in the Bibliotheca Patrum, and elſewhere. 'Tis obſerved, that he is ſometimes miſtaken, and makes more Hereſies than there really were. Philaſtrius died in 387, and had a Speech made in Commendation of him, before S. Ambroſe, by Gaudentius his Succeſſor. *Trithemius & Bellarmin de Script. PHILEAS, Biſhop of Thmuis, in Egypt, ſuffered Martyrdom during the Perſecution of Diocleſian or Maximinian, about 302. He writ an excellent Letter, as Euſebius reports, wherein he gives an account of the ſeveral ſorts of Torments uſed againſt Chriſtians. The Cruelty of which muſt needs excite horror in thoſe that read them. S. Jerom ſpeaks of him as an Eccleſiaſtical Writer, who had writ a Book of the Praiſes of the Martyrs, and an Account of a Diſpute which he had with a certain Judge who would have perſuaded him to ſacrifice to Idols. Euſeb. l. 8. *Hiſt. PHILEBERT I. of that Name, ſurnamed the Hunter, Duke of Savoy, ſucceeded at the Age of Six years, to his Father Amadeus the Fortunate. Joland of France, his Mother, declared her ſelf Regent, according to the Orders of the late Duke, but the Regency was diſputed with her by Lewis XI. her Brother, by the Duke of Burgundy, and ſeveral other Lords, which created much trouble in Savoy. The Duke having been over eager in hunting, and diſtempering himſelf thereby, dyed at Lyons the 22d. of April, 1482. aged ſeventeen, leaving no Iſſue of Blanche-Maria Sforza, Daughter to the Duke of Milan. He was ſucceeded by his Brother Charles. Guichenon. Hiſt. de Savoy.

PHILEBERT II. ſurnamed the Handſome, born April 10. 1480. was Son to Philip, Count of Breſſe, afterwards Duke of Savoy, whom he ſucceeded in 1497, aged ſeventeen. Philebert accompanied the Count his Father in the Expedition of King Charles VIIIth. into Italy, for the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Naples. After he himſelf became Duke, he treated with Lewis XIIth. about the March of his Troops through his Country, to conquer the Dutchy of Milan, and accompanied that Prince in his Undertaking. In the mean time, by his prudent Management he maintained his own Dominions in Peace, during the greateſt Troubles of Italy. And Hiſtorians praiſe him as well for his Conduct, Liberality and Complaiſance, as for his Vertue. This Prince, going to Pont d'Ains, for the Conveniency of Hunting, fell ſick by drinking too much Iced Wine, and died in the ſame room wherein he was born, Sept. 10. in 1504. aged 24. leaving no Children. Guichenon, Hiſt. de Savoy.

PHILELPHUS (Francis) a Native of Tolentin, or according to others of Ancona, was a Philoſopher, Poet and Orator, and lived in the Fifteenth Age. He ſtudied at Venice, and afterwards his Love to the Greek Tongue made him go to Conſtantinople, where he married Theodora Chryſolora, the Daughter of the Learned Emanuel Chryſolorus. The Emperor John Paleologus ſent him to Pope Eugenius IV. to implore his Aſſiſtance againſt the Turks. He died at Bolonia, about 1471. The Works which we have of this great Man are, Euthyphron de Pietate, de Morali Diſciplina, l. 8. Vita Nicholai Papæ Quinti. L. 2. de Diverſitate Legum. Sphorciadarum verſu heroico, l. 9. Satyrarum Li. 10. De Jocis & Seriis Lib. 6. Lyricorum Lib. 6. Orationes LX. Epiſtolarum Latinarum, Lib. XVI. Epiſtolarum Græcarum Lib. XXXIX. De Exilio Lib. III. Conviviorum Lib. II. &c. and ſeveral others, beſides divers Tranſlations. He was very rigid as to the Laws of Grammar, of which he made a great Account. One Day, diſputing with a Grecian called Timothy, they differed about one Syllable, and agreed, that he who had the better, ſhould have power to diſpoſe of the others Beard, which Philelphus won, and Timothy offered him a Summ of Money to redeem his Beard, which Philelphus, though poor, would not take, but cut off his Beard. Trithemius de Script. Eccl. Paulus Jovius.

PHILEMON, a Perſon of Note, of the City of Coloſſe, converted to the Faith by S. Paul, who wrote a Canonical Epiſtle to him, to reconcile him to Oneſimus, who was his Servant, and had run away from him.

PHILEMON, a Comick Greek Poet, the Son of Damon, lived in the 480 of Rome; he was contemporary with Alexander, whom he often overcame. There was another Philemon, or Philomedes, who is ſaid to have laugh'd himſelf to Death at ſeeing an Ape eat Figs. We have pretty large Fragments of Philemon's, among the Tragick and Comick Poets, Tranſlated into Latin by Grotius.

PHILENI, two Brothers, Citizens of Carthage in Africa, ſacrificed their Lives for the good of their Country. A great Conteſt happening to ariſe between the Carthaginians, and the Inhabitants of Cyrene, about the Limits of their Country, they agreed to make Choice of two Men for each of the two Cities, who ſhould depart at the ſame time, in order to a meeting on the Road, and that the Place where they met ſhould be made the Bounds of the two Countries. It happened that the Phileni had advanced very far into the Territories of the Cyreneans, before they were met; whereupon the others, who were the ſtronger, became ſo enraged, that they reſolved to bury the two Brothers alive in the ſame Place, if they retreated not back. The Phileni, unable to reſiſt the Violence of the Cyrenians, choſe rather to ſuffer that cruel Death, than betray the intereſt of their Country; and the Carthaginians, that they might immortalize the Glory of theſe two Brothers, cauſed two Altars to be raiſed over their Graves, with an Inſcription thereupon, ſetting forth their Praiſe. Salluſt. Bell. Jug. Strabo.

PHILETERUS, an Eunuch, Treaſurer to Lyſimachus, was ſo diſcontented at this Prince's putting his Son Agathocles to Death, that he retir'd to the Town of Pergamus, where he ſet up a little Principality, and held it about three and twenty Years. He died in the 129th. Olympiad, the 490th. of Rome, and was ſucceeded by his Brother Eumenes. Strabo Lib. 13. Juſtin. Lib. 17. &c.

PHILETUS, a Magician, whom 'tis ſaid S. James the Greater converted to the Faith; but he afterwards fell off; denying the Reſurrection of the Dead at the laſt Day; ſaying it was already come, and perverted many Perſons by his falſe Doctrine.

PHILETUS, a Heretick and Magician, converted, as 'tis ſaid, by S. James the Great; afterwards he fell off from his Orthodoxy, and held the Reſurrection was paſt, as we may learn from the ſecond Epiſtle to Timothy cap. 2d.

PHILICUS, a Tragick Greek Poet, reckoned among the Pleiades, that is to ſay, thoſe ſeven Tragick Poets who appeared greater than others in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus. It's ſaid he gave name to the Phaleucick Verſes, either becauſe invented by him, or that he writ a Poem conſiſting of ſuch. Voſſius de Poet. Græc. Suidas ſpeaks of ſome others of his Name.

PHILINUS, of Agrigentum in Sicily, writ the Hiſtory of the Roman War againſt the Carthaginians, but is accuſed of having been too partial in favour of the Carthaginians. Polybius, l. 1. Diodorus Siculus, &c.

PHILIP, Phyſician to Alexander the Great, was a Native of Acarnania, a Province of Greece. Quintus Curtius ſaith, That Alexander falling ſick of a dangerous Diſtemper, wherein he was given over by all the Phyſicians, excepting Philip, who did all he could to cure him, received in the mean time Letters importing that that Phyſician had formed a Deſign to poiſon him by a Potion. That Prince was in a great ſtrait what to do in ſo critical a Conjuncture. However, ſuſpecting thoſe Letters might have been a Trick of his Enemies, and relying beſides on the Fidelity of Philip, he reſolved to give him the Letters to read, whilſt he pretended to take the Potion, that he might know if there appeared any Change in the Phyſician's Countenance. But the Compoſedneſs of mind which Philip manifeſted at the reading of the Letters, ſatisfied him as to the innocence of his Phyſician. So that he made no Scruple to take that Phyſick which cured him. Quintus Curtius l. 3. Diodorus l. 17.

PHILIP, the Apoſtle, was a Native of Bethſaida, and called by Chriſt after S. Peter, who was of the ſame City. Clem. Alexan. thinks that it was he to whom Chriſt ſaid, Leave the dead to bury their dead. After our Saviour's Aſcenſion he converted ſome Provinces of Scythia, and afterwards having glorioſly laboured in the Higher Aſia, was crucified and ſtoned in Hierapolis, aged 87, as ſome ſay, and about the tenth Year of the Reign of the Emperor Claudius The Roman Martyrology ſays, it was on May 1. and the Greek Menology, Novemb. 14 S. John, ch. 1. Clemens Alexandrinus l. 3. Strom. Euſebius, S. Jerom, &c. cited by Baronius.

PHILIP, one of the ſeven Deacons choſen by the Apoſtles. He preached the Goſpel in Samaria with ſo much Zeal and Succeſs, that Simon the Magician not being able to contradict him, came and was baptized by him, as was alſo the Eunuch of Queen Candace afterward. The Greek Menology mentions one of his four Daughters called Hermione, who died for the Faith in the Reign of Trajanus, Acts of the Apoſtles, c. 8. & 21. S. Jerom, l. 1. *conv. Jovin. Emperors of this Name.

PHILIP (Marcus Julius) ſurnamed the Arabian, born at Boſtra in Arabia, advanced himſelf in the Army and became Captain of the Guards to the Emperor Gordian III. whom he aſſaſſinated in his Horſe-litter, as he returned from his Expedition againſt the Perſians. After this Parricide he was proclaimed Emperor An. 244. In the mean time he endeavoured to efface this Ignominy by many good Laws, and of a Peace which he concluded with Sapor King of Perſia, and then returning to Rome, he celebrated the Secular Games in 248, with great Magnificence, which was one thouſand Years from the building of Rome, Euſebius Relates that it was Reported, this Emperor was a Chriſtian, but this Story, was, in all probability, a miſtake Euſeb lib. 6. Eccl. Hiſt. But Decius, who was potent, and had Pretenſions to the Empire did aſſaſſinate him in 249, at Verona, and one of his Sons called by his own Name, whom he had proclaimed Cæſar was killed alſo in the Arms of his Mother Otacilia Severa. Jul. Caſſ. in the Life of the Gordians. Aurelius Victor.

PHILIP Duke of Swabia, Emperor, was the Son of Frederick Barbaroſſa, and Brother to Henry VIth. whom he ſucceded, but at the ſame time ſome of the Electors gave their Votes for Otho, Duke of Saxony, in 1198, which cauſed much Trouble in the Empire. Philip was excommunicated by the Pope, but was reconciled to him again, and alſo to Otho, to whom he gave his Daughter in Marriage. He laboured to live in repoſe; but one day being at Bamberg, and having let blood in both Arms, Otho de Witilſpatch obſerving that they let but a few Perſons into his Chamber, ſlipped in, and killed him, June 23. 1201. Philip was a Valiant, Wiſe, Pious and Liberal Prince, and reigned nine years, three months, and fifteen days.

PHILIP of Courtenay, titular Emperor of Conſtantinople, and King of Theſſalonica, was Son to the Emperor Baldwin II. whom the Greeks expelled from his Throne. He married in 1273 Beatrix of Sicily, the Daughter of Charles I. King of Naples and Sicily, and Count of Provence. This Philip of Courtenay treated with Charles I. King of Naples and the Venetians, to make War upon Michael Paleologus; but died before the Treaty was perfected in 1285, leaving Catharine of Courtenay, married in 1299 to Charles of France, Count of Valois, youngeſt Son to Philip the Hardy.

Kings of France of this Name.

PHILIP I. King of France, born in 1053, was the Son of Henry I. who cauſed him to be crowned at Rheims, by the Archbiſhop Gervais de Belleſme, May 23. 1059. Henry died in 1060, and left Philip under the Regency and Guardianſhip of Baldwin the Vth. ſurnamed de l'Iſle, Count of Flanders, who had married his Siſter Adela or Alix, the Daughter of King Robert, and Widow of Richard IId. Duke of Normandy. Baldwin governed the Kingdom wiſely during his Regency, which was for ſix years, and took great Care of the Education of the young Prince, who firſt took Arms againſt the Gaſcons, whom he ſubdued in 1062; but was not ſo ſucceſsfull in his Wars againſt Robert of Friezland, Count of Flanders; for he was defeated near S. Omer, in February, 1070, or 71. His Jealouſie againſt William the Conqueror, who made himſelf Maſter of England, created him alſo ſome Inconveniences, and laid the Foundations of the Wars between England and France. This King parted with his Queen, and Entertain'd Bertrade de Montfort, Wife to the Earl of Anjou, in her Place: This Criminal Engagement created a Miſunderſtanding between the King, the Prelates, and other Great Men of the Realm; and Philip was Excommunicated by Pope Urban IId. at the Council of Clermont in 1095; but afterwards, recollecting himſelf, and being contented to quit Bertrade, he was Abſolv'd at Paris in 1102. He died at Milan, July 29. 1108. having reigned forty nine Years, two Months, and ſix Days.

PHILIP II. ſurnamed the Conqueror, Auguſtus, and the Gift of God, was born Aug. 22. 1165. He began in 1180 to reign, under the Protectorſhip of Philip of Alſatia, Count of Flanders. He made War upon the Lords of Beaujeu, and Charenton, and upon the Earl of Châlons, who incroached upon the Eſtates of the Church, and broke a Powerful Aſſociation, which the Great Men of the Kingdom had enter'd into againſt him. He baniſhed the Jews out of his Country, and confiſcated their Eſtates. He afterwards had a great Quarrel with the Count of Flanders; but it was happily accommodated in 1184. He made War upon the Engliſh; but ſome time after coming to know of the Loſs of Jeruſalem, he undertook the Cruſade in 1190. and begun his Journey after Midſummer. He took Acre, defeated ſeventeen thouſand Saracens, and returned about Chriſtmas, 1191. The year following he obliged Baldwin VIIIth. Count of Flanders, to give up to him the Earldoms of Artois, with the Homages of the Earldoms of Bologne, Guienne, and S. Paul. He afterwards made War againſt Richard, King of England, and in 1192 took Vexin and Evreux; but in 1193 beſieged Roan, in vain. This War proved very diſadvantageous to him. In 1199 he loſt Aire, and S. Omer, and made a Peace with John, King of England in 1200; but in 1204 he fell into Normandy, and poſſeſs'd himſelf of Anjou, Main, Tourrain, Berry, and Poictou. But before this he had divorced Ingerburga of Denmark, to marry Agnes de Merante, and thereby drew the Cenſures of the Church upon him; which obliged him to take her again. In 1207 he made a Truce with the ſame John. He diſpoſſeſs'd of their Countries, Guy the IId. Count of Auvergne, in 1210. and Renard de Damartin, Count of Bologne in 1212. and next year carried his Arms into Flanders; taking Ypres, Tournay, Caſſel, Douway, and Liſle. But his moſt glorious Action was his Journey to Bovines. The Emperor Otho IVth. the Count of Flanders, and ſeveral Confederate Princes raiſed an Army of an hundred and fifty thouſand Men againſt him. The King gave them Battle and won it in 1214. Ferrande, Count of Flanders, Renaud, Count of Bologne, and three Counts more were made Priſoners there, beſides two and twenty Lords carrying Banners. Louis his Son fought the ſame day a Battle againſt the Engliſh at Anjou, and had the better. The King fought very valiantly at that of Bovines, had his Horſe killed under him, and in Memory of the Action founded the Abbey of Notredamê de la Victoire, near Senlis. He afterwards ſent his Son Lewis into England to be King, at the deſire of ſome of the Nobles; and in the time of Peace made it his Buſineſs to adorn his Capital City, and died at Mante upon the Seine, July 14th. 1223. having reigned forty two years, nine months, and twenty nine days. Rigord on his Life, &c.

PHILIP III. ſurnamed the Hardy, was the Son of S. Louis, whom he followed in his Expedition beyond Sea, and after his Death was ſaluted King in Africa, in 1270. After which having beat the Saracens, he returned into France, where he was crowned, and at the ſame time became the Succeſſor of his Uncle Alphonſo, Count of Poictiers and Toulouſe, and reduced Roger Bernard IIId. Count of Foix, maintained the Rights of Joan, the Heireſs of Navarre, whom his Son married, and endeavoured to do the ſame in Caſtile by Alphonſo de la Cerda, Son to his Siſter Blanche; but that Enterprize ſucceeded not. He married Iſabel of Arragon, by whom he had Lewis, who was poiſoned, Philip the Fair, his Succeſſor, Charles, Count of Valois, and Robert that died in his Infancy. His Queen died in 1271. And in 1274. the King married Mary, the Daughter of the Duke of Brabant, whoſe Merit charmed him; but an Inſolent Favourite, riſen out of the Duſt, called la Broſſe, endeavoured a Rupture, by charging her with an horrid Crime, which he himſelf had committed, viz. as having poiſoned Lewis, the eldeſt Son of Philip, but being convicted of it himſelf, he was condignly puniſhed. The Cruelty of King Peter of Arragon, wrought in the mean time a ſtrange effect in Sicily, for he ſo incenſed the Inhabitants of that Iſland againſt the French, that they maſſacred them all on Eaſter day 1282, at the time of the Veſpers, whence aroſe the Proverb of the Sicilian Veſpers. Philip went in Perſon againſt the Arragoneſe, and took Gironne, and in his Return died of a malignant Fever at Perpignan in the 16th. year of his Reign, aged forty one. Mezeray Hiſt. de Franc.

PHILIP IV. ſurnamed the Fair, as alſo le Grand, born at Fontain-bleau, in 1268, ſucceeded his Father Philip III. in 1285, being King of Navarre before by his Marriage of Jane, the Daughter and Heireſs of Henry I. In the mean time he was anointed at Rheims, by Peter Barbet, Archbiſhop of that City, January 6th. The year following, and afterwards, he applied himſelf to adminiſter Juſtice to his Subjects, having for that purpoſe ordered that the Parliament ſhould be fixt at Paris, unto which Edward I. King of England, was cited, but upon his Refuſal, Guienne, for which he was to do homage, was ſeized in 1293. The Engliſh in Revenge leagued themſelves with the Emperor, Duke of Bar, and Count of Flanders; but it proved very much to the Diſadvantage of the Flemmings; for beſides the Loſs of ſeveral Towns, Guy II. Earl of Flanders, who together with his Wife had been Priſoner at Paris before, was taken a ſecond time, in 1299. But in the mean time, the ill Conduct of James of Caſtillon, Earl of S. Paul, cauſed a Sedition at Bruges, which rais'd all the Country upon him. The King ſent an Army to ſuppreſs this Inſurrection, under the Command of Robert, Earl of Artois, and the Conſtable; but the Jealouſie of the Generals loſt that Army at the Battle of Courtray, in 1302, the greateſt Nobles in the Kingdom being ſlain there. But Philip recovered himſelf in ſome meaſure again, eſpecially on the 18th. of Auguſt, 1304. in that memorable Battle at Mons in Puelle, where above five and twenty thouſand Flemmings were ſlain upon the Place. At laſt a Peace was made at Atheis, in 1305, and in 1310 he entred into a Treaty of Peace with the Emperor Henry VIIth. and having made his Will at Maubuiſſon the 19th of May, 1311. died at laſt at Fontain-bleau, November 29th. 1314. after having reigned twenty nine years, one month, and twenty three days. He was a Lover of Learning and Learned Men, and engaged ſeveral to write. Paul Æmilius, Robert Gaguen, Mezeray, &c.

PHILIP V. ſurnamed the Long, was youngeſt Son to Philip the Fair, and was but Earl of Poictou till the death of his Brother Lewis Hutin, at which time he was declared Regent of France and Navarre, during Queen Clemenca, his Siſter-in-laws's being with Child; but her Son, named John, which ſhe brought forth, having lived only eight days, Philip ſucceeded to the Crown by virtue of the Salick Law, although Charles of Valois and Eudus IVth. Duke of Burgundy, uſed all their endeavours to deprive him of it, and beſtowed it on Jane, Daughter to Lewis Hutin; but ſhe contented her ſelf with the Kingdom of Navarre which deſcended to the Female. Robert de Courtenay, Archbiſhop of Rheims, anointed him King, January 6th. 1317. He begun the Wars with the Flemmings three times, and renewed his Alliance with the Scots, in 1318, expelled the Jews out of his Dominions, and was like to be a fortunate Prince, but was ſeiz'd by Death at Long-Champ, having been ſick five months before of a Quartan-Ague; aged 28 years, whereof he had reigned five, one month, and fourteen days. S. Martha Hiſt. Geneal. &c. Mezeray Hiſt. de France, &c.

PHILIP VI. ſurnamed de Valois, the Fortunate, and the Catholick, was Son to Charles of France, Count of Valois, Alenzon, &c. and of Margaret of Sicily, his firſt Wife, Grandſon to Philip the Hardy, Nephew to Philip the Fair, and Couſin germain to the three Brothers, Lewis Hutin, Philip the Long, and Charles the Fair; and ſucceeded this laſt, after having been Regent of the Kingdom, during Queen Jane's being with Child of a Daughter, who was born after the King's death. Edward the IIId. King of England, diſputed the Title with him, as being Son of Iſabel, the Daughter of Philip the Fair; but the Eſtates of the Kingdom excluded the Engliſh King by virtue of the Salick Law, and maintained the Rights of Philip, who was crowned May 27th. 1328. He undertook at his firſt coming to the Crown, the Protection of Lewis, Earl of Flanders, againſt his Rebellious Subjects, whom he defeated at the famous Battle of Montcaſſel, where he run a great Riſque, in his own Perſon: In the year after, viz. 1329, he maintain'd the Privileges of the Gallican Church, againſt the Encroachments of the Court of Rome. Edward, King of England, was required to do him Homage for the Lands he held in France, which nettled the Engliſh mightily; inſomuch that at laſt it produced a terrible War; ſo that Philip, who had undertaken a Voyage beyond-Sea, was conſtrained to return from Marſeilles, where he was to embarque. The Storm began in 1338. Next year Cambray was beſieged by the Engliſh. He had ſome Advantage over them in a Sea-fight, on the 23d. of June, 1340. Things continued quiet till about 1346. The King had taken the part of Charles de Blois, his Nephew, and had received Homage from Britany, which John de Montfort pretended to; but this ſame Perſon had recourſe to King Edward, who made a Deſcent into Normandy, took Caen, and won that never-to be-forgotten Victory at Creſſy, where Philip was beaten in a ſet Battle, and in which the Kings of Bohemia and Majorca, Charles Duke of Alenzon, Brother to the King of France, the Duke of Lorrain, Lewis Earl of Flanders, and in all eleven Princes, eighty Barons, a thouſand two hundred Knights, and thirty thouſand common Soldiers were ſlain. The Engliſh, fluſhed with this Victory, took Calis, which continued in their hands 210 years, till 1558. He endeavoured to repair theſe Loſſes by the taking of Rouſſillon and Montpelier from James, King of Majorca, and uniting the Earldoms of Champagne and Brie to the Crown; having alſo Dauphiné beſtowed upon him by Humbert, the laſt Dauphin of Viennois, upon Condition that the King's Eldeſt Sons ſhould be called Dauphins, and to wear the Arms of France quartered with thoſe of Dauphiné. This King died at Nogent le Roy, Auguſt 22d. 1350, aged 57. the 23d. of his Reign. He had great Courage and Reſolution; but was blamed for introducing the Impoſition upon Salt. The Engliſh called him King of the Salick Law.

Kings of Spain and Navarre.

PHILIP I. ſurnamed the Fair, Archduke of Auſtria, Duke of Brabant and Lothier, was Son to the Emperor Maximilian I. and Mary of Burgundy, born at Bruges, June 22d. 1478, and married October 21ſt. 1496. Jane, Queen of Spain, Second Daughter and Heireſs to Ferdinand Vth King of Arragon, and of Iſabel, Queen of Caſtile. He was a ſweet-natured and peaceable Prince, died at the Age of 27, at Burgos, September the 25th. 1506. It's ſaid he fell ſick upon drinking ſome cold Water when he was playing at Tennis. He was Father to Charles Vth. Ferdinand the Emperor, and four Daughters. Mariana.

PHILIP II. born in 1527. was Son to the Emperor Charles V. and Iſabel of Portugal. While he was Prince of Spain, he married Mary, the Daughter of John IIId. King of Portugal, and had Don Carlos by her. This Princeſs dying in 1545, he married Mary, the Daughter of Henry VIIIth. Queen of England ſome time after. The Emperor Charles Vth. did voluntarily reſign his Hereditary Dominions to him at Bruſſels, in 1555; and after having created him great Maſter of the Order of the Golden-Fleece, put the Crown upon his Head. There was then a Truce made for five years with Henry IId. of France, but Philip broke it, being angry with Henry IId. becauſe he took part with Pope Paul IVth. againſt him. This was the true Cauſe, or at leaſt the Pretence, of the War. Philip made a League with the Engliſh, and ſent forty thouſand Men into Picardy, who coming to fight with eighteen thouſand French, beat them at S. Quintin, in 1557. This Misfortune was repaired by the taking of Calis, Thionville, and Dunkirk; and was afterwards followed by a Peace made at Chateau Cambreſis, in 1559. Iſabel of France, Daughter to Henry IId. having been promiſed in Marriage to Don Carlos. Philip who had loſt his Wife, deſired to marry that young and beautiful Princeſs himſelf. His Son teſtified his Reſentment for this foul Dealing, and the Love he always had for that fair Queen, contributed very much to his death; for Philip having cauſed him to be ſeized, put him to death in Priſon; and it's added, that ſome time after he got the Queen to be poiſoned, who had made him Father to the Archdutcheſs Elizabeth Clara Eugenia, Princeſs of the Low-Countries, and Wife to Archduke Albert, and to Catharine, married, in 1585, to Charles Emanuel, Duke of Savoy. This King was obliged to maintain a potent Army in the Low-Countries againſt the United-Provinces, who formed themſelves into a Republick. Philip made himſelf Maſter, in 1580, of the Kingdom of Portugal; and his Troops contributed very much to the Defeat of the Turks at the Battle of Lepanto. The Moors who revolted againſt him in 1561, were alſo reduced. He ſubdued Pignon or Peunon de Velez in Africa, and the Iſles which from him are called, the Philippine Iſlands. After which Philip ſet out a Fleet of above fourſcore Ships, which was called, The Invincible Armado, againſt Queen Elizabeth of England. They ſailed from Lisbon, May 29th. 1588. and were deſtroyed partly by Storms, and partly by the Conduct and Valour of the Engliſh. This Loſs is variouſly related by Hiſtorians, amounting to no leſs than ten thouſand Men, and ſixty Ships; but Philip is ſaid to have entertained the News of it without the leaſt Diſcompoſure. He was a writing ſome Letters when the Courier entred his Chamber, to acquaint him with this ſorrowful News. He anſwered calmly that, He thanked God, that he was able to rig out ſuch another. And taking his Pen in his Hand, writ on with the ſame Compoſedneſs as before. Philip was very buſie, and forward to favour the Party of the League in France. When King Henry IVth. came to the Crown he declared War againſt him in 1595, which ended in 1598, by the Peace of Vervins. And Philip died at the Eſcurial, Sept. 13th. that ſame year, aged 71 and 4 months. After the Death of Elizabeth of France, he married a fourth time, Anne the Daughter of Maximilian IId. and had by her Philip IIId. who ſucceeded him, Ferdinand, Charles, Laurence, Diego; and Mary who died young. D. Thou, & d'Avila. Hiſt. Gabrera, Mariana, Turquet Hiſt. d'Eſp. Strada de Bello Belg. &c.

PHILIP III. born at Madrid, April 14th. 1578. ſucceeded his Father Philip IId. He had been promiſed to Margaret of Auſtria, Daughter of Charles, Archduke of Grats, and of Mary of Bavaria; and this Marriage was accompliſhed in 1599, Pope Clement VIIIth. performing the Ceremonies thereof himſelf at Ferrara, through which that Princeſs paſſed in her Journey into Spain. Philip made himſelf Maſter of ſome Places in Africa, as Larach, &c. reformed the Courts of Judicature, expelled the Moors out of Spain, and made a Peace in the Low-Countries, which his Siſter Elizabeth Clara Eugenia had for her Dowry. After which he lived in Repoſe. He had four Sons, and four Daughters by Queen Margaret; and died on the 31ſt. of March, 1621. in the 43d. year of his Age, and 23d. of his Reign.

PHILIP IV. born in 1605, was King after his Father. His Aunt Elizabeth Clara Eugenia dying without Iſſue, in 1633. he re-entred upon the Poſſeſſion of the Netherlands; the Truce with the United-Provinces ſtill laſting. But it was broken by Acts of Hoſtility; and in 1634, the Hollanders, who had ſent two Armies into the Indies, got two very conſiderable Advantages; for the one defeated the Spaniſh Fleet near Lima, and the other took the City of S. Saviour in Peru. Don Frederick de Toledo did afterwards expel the Hollanders; in the mean time, altho' Philip had confirmed a Peace with France by a double Alliance with Lewis XIIIth. he failed not however to ſupply the Duke of Rhoan with Money, whereupon the good Underſtanding between the two Crowns began to abate; the Affairs of Italy contributed to it, and that ſoon after was followed by an entire Rupture in 1635. The Elector of Trier, whom the Spaniards treated ill, becauſe he had put himſelf under the Protection of France, was the Cauſe thereof; the Battle of Aveins in the Dutchy of Luxemburg, where the Mareſchals de Chatillon and de Brezè defeated Prince Thomas, General of the Spaniſh Army, who left ſix thouſand ſlain upon the Place, began that tedious War ſo fatal afterwards to the Repoſe of Chriſtendom. Philip, otherwiſe eſteemed for his Wiſdom and Prudence, was not always ſucceſsful in his Projects. In 1640 the People of Catalonia killed their Governour at Barcelona, and after the death of the Duke of Cardona, ſhook off the Spaniſh Yoke, and gave themſelves up to the French. In the very ſame Year all the Cities of Portugal expelled the Spaniards in one day; and the People being zealous for the Progeny of their Kings, put John IVth. Duke of Braganza, upon the Throne. The City of Naples revolted ſome time after, and the King of Spain found it very difficult to quiet all theſe Diſorders, and maintain the War in ſo many different Places; but this Prince had the good Fortune to put an end to it. He died September 17th. 1665.

PHILIP, ſurnamed the Good and the Wiſe, King of Navarre, was Son to Lewis of France, Count of Euvreux, &c. and of Margaret of Artois, and Grandſon to Philip the Hardy. He was firſt Count of Euvreux, Angoulême, and Longueville, and afterwards King of Navarre by his marrying of Jane of France, the only Daughter of Lewis X. and Heireſs to the Kingdom of Navarre. He was crowned, together with his Wife, at Pampelona, in 1329. He was at the Battel of Mont-Caſſel in 1328, and gave many Proofs of his Bravery and Generoſity. Alphonſo de la Cerda having no Children, and not loving the King of Caſtile, beſtowed ſome Provinces upon Philip, who yet advanc'd his Eſtate more by the Alliances of his Neighbours than by all theſe Advantages; uniting himſelf with them, and giving them ſome times Succours againſt the Moors. He was in Perſon at the Siege of Algezira in Granada, where having receiv'd ſeveral Wounds, he died at Heres, September 16th. 1343, aged 42. Favin. Hiſt. de Nav.

Kings of Macedonia and Syria.

PHILIP I. of the Name, and ſixth King of Macedonia, was Son of Argeus, whom he ſucceeded An. Mund. 3421, and reigned about thirty five Years. Janſſon. Atlas Maj. p. 93. Ficin. in. Chron.

PHILIP II. was the fourth Son of Amyntas, and ſucceeded his Brother Perdiccas IIId. in the 105th. Olympiad, about the 394th. year of Rome. He had been a long time an Hoſtage among the Illyrians and Thebans, which contributed very much to the cultivating of his Youth, eſpecially having been brought up in the Houſe of Epaminondas. Perdiccas his Brother had left a Son, who was to ſucceed him in courſe, under the Regency of Philip; but as the State ſtood in need of a Man who could manage it prudently, the People oblig'd him to take the Title of King upon him; he put the Kingdom preſently in order, and afterwards made War upon the Athenians, whom he overcame near Methonæ, An. Rom. 394: But as he had formed other Deſigns he made a peace with them, and turning his Arms elſewhere, ſubdued the Pæonians and Illyrians, from whom he took the City of Lariſſa. His deſire to make himſelf Maſter of the Theſſalian Horſe, obliged him to War againſt that People, whom he ſubdued, and at the Siege of Methonæ loſt an Eye by an Arrow ſhot from the Ramparts. In the mean time he married Olympias the Daughter of Neoptolemus King of the Moloſſians, and had by her Alexander the Great, whom he very carefully educated. He laid Siege to Byzantium in 413, but was conſtrain'd to withdraw in order to go againſt the Scythians, whom he ſubdued by a Stratagem, and carried off a great Booty. In his return, as he paſs'd by the Triballians, they revolted againſt him; ſome Greek Soldiers mutiny'd alſo at the ſame time, and that was the Reaſon of the Engagement, which was very bloody; Philip had his Horſe kill'd under him, and was himſelf wounded in the Thigh, and muſt have died there had not his Son Alexander, who already bore Arms, covered him with his Buckler, and kill'd or put to flight thoſe who came to attaque him. This King pretended to the Empire of all Greece, having almoſt ſubdued it totally, either in Perſon or by his Generals. The Power of the Athenians did only obſtruct his Undertakings. He was at peace with them, but he managed his Affairs ſo well, that having prevailed to be made General of the Greeks by a Decree in the Aſſembly of their States, to ſuppreſs the Inſolence of the Locrians, he declared War againſt them; afterwards paſſing over the Streights of the Thermopilæ, he ſurprized two of their Cities, and advancing with his Troops he defeated them and the Thebans their Allies, near the City of Cheronea in Bœotia, in 416, and after that granted a Peace to the Athenians, but yet ſhew'd himſelf more ſevere againſt the reſt, that he might puniſh them for having ſo often broken his Meaſures by their revolting. Some time after he was divorced from Olympias his Wife, which made a Difference between him and his Son Alexander, who withdrew from the Court, being incenſed at the ill Treatment of his Mother: In the mean time, Philip not being ſatisfied with his Conqueſts in Europe, was declared General of all Greece againſt the Perſians. He made great Preparations for this Expedition, when he was kill'd by Pauſanias, one of his Guards, in the City of Ægæ in Macedonia, in the 111th. Olympiad, 418th. year of Rome, 24th. of his Reign, and 47th. of his Age. Diodorus Siculus, l. 16 and 17. Hiſt. Bibl. Juſtin. l. 7, 8, 9. Plutarch, &c.

PHILIP III. called Arideus. Vid. ARIDEUS.

PHILIP IV. was the Son of Caſſander, whom he ſucceeded in 456 of Rome, but he reigned but one year.

PHILIP V. was ſo young when his Father Demetrius III. died, that he was left under the Protectorſhip of his Couſin Antigonus II. ſurnamed Δώσων: He took the Title of King upon him for the ſpace of twelve years, and Philip, aged fifteen, ſucceeded him in the 139th. Olympiad. He preſently entred into a League with the Achaians, againſt the Ætolians, and that War was called Bellum ſociale. Afterwards, in 439, he confederated with Hannibal againſt the Romans, but they having diſcovered his Practices, by ſurprizing his Ambaſſadors, were aware of him, and began to oppoſe his Deſigns. In the mean time, Philip conquer'd the Iſle of Creet, and was ſucceſsful in all his Undertakings, ſo far as he followed the Counſels of Aratus; but having debauched the Daughter-in-Law of that great General, and cauſed him and his Son to be poiſoned, the evil Advices of Heracleus of Tarentum, and his vain Flatterers, cauſed all the good Hopes conceived of this Prince to vaniſh, who ſeem'd to have the beſt Inclinations in the World; and in ſhort, the Ætolians being ſtrengthned by the Alliance of the Æleans and Romans, beat him, and conquer'd Zacinthus and Naupactum: In the mean time he continued the War againſt Attalus, King of Pergamus, and cauſed Athens to be beſieged. He fell himſelf ſo violently upon Abydos on the Helleſpont, that the Inhabitants, who refuſed Conditions, after having put to death their Wives and Children, threw themſelves deſperately into the Enemies Camp, there to die with their Swords in their Hands. The Romans, in order to relieve their Allies, declared War againſt Philip, and T. Quintus Flaminius beat him at Octolophus, near the River Aous in Epirus, in the 145th. Olympiad, and 556th. year of Rome. Next year the ſame Proconſul defeated him again in Theſſaly in a place called Cynocephalos, and was brought to ſue for a Peace through the general Conſternation that all his Subjects and Soldiers were put to. The Romans left him Macedonia, but he was obliged to give up all the Cities he held in Greece, and to ſend his ſecond Son Demetrius to Rome for Hoſtage. He was afterwards ſorry for the Loſs of this ſame Son, having none but Perſeus left, whom he deſigned, becauſe of his ill Deportment, to diſ-inherit. Philip died in the 150th. Olympiad, after he had reigned 42 years. Titus Livius lib. 31. 40. & ſeq. Polyb. Juſtin, &c.

PHILIP, the Son of Herod the Great and Cleopatra. After the Death of his Father he came to Rome, where he had been brought up, and obtained of Auguſtus, Bathanea, Trachonitis, Auritana, with part of that which belong'd to Zenodorus, the Revenue whereof amounted to a hundred Talents. He was a wiſe and moderate Prince, and died without Children, An. Chr. 34. after he had reigned thirty three years, and Tiberius united his Dominions to Syria. Joſephus, &c.

Dukes of Burgundy, Earls of Artois and Flanders, and Earls and Dukes of Savoy and Nemours.

PHILIP of Burgundy Earl of Artois and Bullen, &c. of the firſt Branch of the Dukes of Burgundy, deſcended from Robert of France, Son of King Robert, the Son of Eudus IV. and Jane the Daughter of King Philip, ſurnamed the Long was Earl of Artois in right of his Mother. This Prince died before his Father, in 1346, of a Wound he receiv'd by a fall from his Horſe at the Siege of Aiguillon in Guienne.

PHILIP I. ſurnamed de Rouvre, Duke of Burgundy. Earl of Artois, Bologne, Auvergne, &c. ſucceeded his Uncle in 1349, and died very young, November 22d. 1361, having no Children by Margaret Counteſs of Flanders, his Wife, the only Daughter of Lewis IIId. Earl of Flanders: But ſome others ſay, Their Marriage was not conſummated, Burgundy was hereby reunited to the Crown, not by the Proximity of the Line, as the Lawyers ſay, but by the right of Reverſion.

PHILIP of France, ſecond of the Name, Duke of Burgundy, and Peer of France, Earl of Flanders, Artois, &c. Governour of Normandy and Picardy, was the fourth Son of King John and Bonne of Luxemburg, and born at Pontoiſe in 1341. He acquired the Name of Bold at the Battle of Poictiers, where, being but ſixteen years old, he did great things, and never abandoned his Father in his Diſgrace; inſomuch, that the King beſtowed upon him the Dutchy of Burgundy; and he was the firſt of the Name of the laſt Branch of thoſe Dukes. He married Margaret the only Daughter of Lewis IIId. Earl of Flanders, Widow of Philip de Rouvre. He aſſiſted at the Coronation of King Charles V. ſurnamed the Wiſe, who left him to be one of the Guardians of Charles VI. his Son, and he made uſe of the Forces of the Kingdom to uphold Lewis his Father-in-law, againſt thoſe of Ghent, who, under the Conduct of Philip d'Artaville, attempted to make War upon him: The Revolters were beaten at the Battle of Roſebec, in 1382, two years after the Earl died, and Philip his Heir appeaſed the Tumult in the Country, and ſettled Peace there. Coming afterwards to be Regent of the Kingdom in the Abſence of the Duke of Anjou his Brother; and during the King's Sickneſs, that Imploy, and his Union with Queen Iſabel of Bavaria, gave great Jealouſies to Lewis Duke of Orleans, his Nephew, and Brother to Charles VI. Hence ſprung the Hatred between the Houſes of Burgundy and Orleans, ſo fatal to the Kingdom. Margaret of Flanders contributed much thereto by the influence ſhe had over her Husband: But in the mean time he died at Hall in Hainault April 27th. 1404, and the 63d. year of his Age. Froiſſard. Monſtrelet, &c.

PHILIP of France, Duke of Orleans, Chartres, Valois, &c. Peer of France, Son of Lewis XIIIth. and Anne of Auſtria, and only Brother of Lewis XIVth. was born at the Old Caſtle at S. Germain en Laye, September 21ſt. 1640. He was firſt, Duke of Anjou, till 1661, when he was created Duke of Orleans: This Prince was always preſent at the moſt conſiderable Actions of the Kings Life, as, at his Entry into Paris, at his Conqueſt of Flanders in 1667; at his Deſcent upon Holland, and his Victories there in 1672: He beſieg'd S. Omer, in 1677, when the King, who had juſt made himſelf Maſter of Valenciennes, was ſet down before Cambray. The Prince of Orange, who commanded the Spaniſh and Dutch Forces, march'd againſt the Duke with a Body of good Troops, with an Intention to raiſe the Siege; upon which the Duke of Orleans drew out of his Lines, and gave the Enemy Battle, in which the Spaniards and Dutch had the Diſadvantage: This Battle was fought upon the 11th. of April at Montcaſſel, where King Philip d'Valois had formerly defeated the Flemings, in 1328. After the Fight was over, the Duke of Orleans return'd to the Siege of S. Omar, and carried the Place in a few days. This Prince was firſt married, in 1661, to Henrietta-Anne, Daughter of Charles I. King of Great Britain, and Henrietta-Maria of France, who died in June 1670: The Duke, in December 1671, married again with Charlotte-Elizabeth of Bavaria, Daughter of Charles-Lewis, Count Palatine of the Rhine, and Elector of the Empire: By the firſt Marriage, he had Mary-Lewiſa, born in 1662, and married at Fontainbleau, Auguſt 1679, to Charles IId. King of Spain, where ſhe died in 1687: By this Princeſs likewiſe, the Duke had Anne of Valois, born at S. Cloud, Auguſt 1669, and married to the Duke of Savoy. The Iſſue which the Monſieur had by the ſecond Venter, are Philip, Duke de Chartres, born in 1675, and Elizabeth-Charlotte, born in 1676.

PHILIP III. ſurnamed the Good, Duke of Burgundy, Brabant, Lothier, Luxemburg, and Limburg, Earl of Flanders, Hainault, Holland, Zealand, Namur, and Charolois, Palatine of Burgundy, Marqueſs of the H. Empire, Lord of Friezland, Salins, and Malines, was Son to John ſurnamed Sans-Peur, or, the Fearleſs, who was kill'd at the Battle of Montereau-faut-yonne 1419, and of Margaret of Bavaria, born at Dijon the 29th. or 30th. of June 1396. He afterwards, to revenge the death of his Father, took part with the Engliſh, who carried Deſolation every where about the end of the Reign of Charles VI. and the beginning of that of Charles the VIIth. He beat the Dauphine in a Battle fought at Mons in Vimieu, in 1421. He made War alſo upon Jaquelina of Bavaria, Counteſs of Hainault, Holland, and Zealand, in 1425, and obliged her by a Treaty in 1428 to declare him her Heir. In 1435 he entred into a Treaty at Arras with the King, forſook the part of the Engliſh, and was reconciled with Charles Duke of Orleans, Lewis's Son; however, he had always a ſecret Antipathy againſt King Charles VII. which he manifeſted by giving Reception to the Dauphin in his Dominions, who was afterwards Lewis XI. It was he that inſtituted the Order of the Golden Fleece, Jan. 19th 1431, who reunited almoſt the ſeveenteen Provinces of the Netherlands. He died at Bruges, July 15th, 1468, aged 72, 11 months, and 16 days. Paradin. Ann. de Bourg. And. du Cheſne Hiſt. de Bourg. &c.

PHILIP of Artois, Count of Eu, Conſtable of France, was Son to John of Artois and Iſabel de Melun: He ſignalized himſelf in 1383, at the taking of Bourbourg, and afterwards accompanied Lewis II. of that Name, Duke of Bourbon, into Africa, where he aſſiſted at the Siege of Tunis in 1392. After this he followed the Count of Nevers into Hungary to fight againſt the Turks; and in 1396 was at the Siege of Nicopolis; his Imprudence and Preſumption proved fatal to the Chriſtians, by the loſs of the Battle wherein the Conſtable himſelf was made Priſoner by the Infidels. He died at Macalizo in Natolia, juſt as he was to be ſet at liberty, June 25th. 1397.

PHILIP, Earl of Flanders, was the Son of Thierry of Alſatia, the Son of Thierry, Duke of Lorrain. He ſucceded his Father in 1166, had a conteſt with Philip Auguſtus, but afterwards allyed with him, and followed him in his Expedition to the Holy-Land, where he was kill'd at the Siege of Acre in 1191, leaving no Children, ſo that his Siſter Margaret ſucceded him, and was Wife to Baldwin VIII. March. in Com. Flan.

PHILIP I. Earl of Savoy, was Son to Thomas I. who deſigned him for the Church; and indeed having had ſeveral Benefices, he was made Biſhop of Valence, after Boniface his Brother, who was advanced to the Archbiſhoprick of Canterbury: Philip accompanied Pope Innocent IV. to Lyons, where was celebrated a general Council; as he had a particular Affection for all his Family, he made him Archbiſhop of that City in 1245. but Amadeus IV. Boniface, ſurnamed Rouland, and Peter, ſurnamed the Little Charlemaign, being dead, he was declared Earl of Savoy, in prejudice of his Nephews, the Sons of Thomas. He quitted the Eccleſiaſtical Habit, and married Alix the Daughter of Otho II. Count of Burgundy. He died of the Dropſie, and without Children, November 17. in 1283, or 84. Matthew Paris Hiſt. Aug. Paradin. &c.

PHILIP, Duke of Savoy, was the fifth Son of Lewis I. who ſeeing him belov'd by all his Court, by reaſon of his excellent Qualities, and fearing leaſt that ſhould cauſe him to deſpiſe his elder Brothers, he ſent him into France to King Charles VII. During his Youth, he was called nothing elſe but Philip Monſieur, and that alſo introduced his being called Philip ſans Terre, becauſe he had then no Inheritance; but the Duke, his Father, being at Quiers, gave him, by Patents, bearing date February 26. 1460, the Signories of Beaugé, &c. by the Title of an Earldom, and thereupon he took the Title of Count of Breſſe: he afterwards ſtood in oppoſition to the Favourites advanced by his Mother Anne of Cyprus, and was put into Priſon at Loches, by order of King Lewis XI. who after this, beſtowed upon him the Government of Guienne, and made him Knight of the Order of S. Michael. Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy, who uſed his Intereſt for the enlargement of the Count; gave him alſo the Collar of the Order of the Golden Fleece, and the Government of the two Burgundies. He accompanied Charles VIII. to the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Naples, and after his return was made Governour of Dauphiny, where coming to hear of the Death of Charles-John-Amadeus his Nephew, Duke of Savoy, he took poſſeſſion of that Dukedom in 1496, aged 58. He pardoned thoſe who had offended, made his Court one of the fineſt in that time, took particular care of his people, and died in 1497. Guichenon Hiſt. de Savoy.

PHILIP of Savoy, Duke of Nemours, Marquis of S. Sorlin, Earl of Genevois, and Baron of Foucigni, was Son to Philip Duke of Savoy and Claudina de Breſſe of Bretany; born in 1490. He was when young, deſign'd for the Church, and made Biſhop of Geneva; but his Inclination being for Arms, he accompanied King Lewis XII. into Italy; and in 1509 was at the Battle of Agnadel. The Emperor Charles V. drew him to his Court at Spire; but Francis I. his Nephew, willing to diſengage him from that Party, made him come into France, beſtowed upon him the Dutchy of Nemours, and married him September 17. 1528, with Charlotta of Orleans, Daughter to Lewis I. of that name of Orleans, Duke of Longueville. Philip died at Marſeilles, November 25. 1633.

Other great Men of this Name.

PHILIP, Antipope, was intruded into the Pontifical See after the death of Paul I. in 767, and at the ſame time Conſtantine, a Layman, Brother to Toton Duke of Nepi, cauſed himſelf alſo to be conſecrated; but they were expell'd in 768, and Stephen III. or IV. was elected. Anaſtaſ. in Vit. Pontif.

PHILIP DE DREUX, Biſhop and Earl of Beauvais, Peer of France in the Twelfth Age, was Son to Robert of France, Earl of Dreux, and of Agnes de Baudemont his third Wife. He accompanied Philip the Auguſt to the Holy Land, and was at the Siege of Acre in 1192. He was too much inclin'd to War. He aſſiſted King Philip againſt the Engliſh, and was taken by Marqundus an Engliſh Captain, when he was about to ſurprize a certain place; and King Richard detain'd him in Priſon till 1202. Pope Innocent III. writ in favour of him to Richard, and called him his Son; but that King letting him know upon what occaſion he was taken, ſent him alſo his Coat of Armor all bloody; and he that preſented it to the Pope, ſaid, See, Holy Father, if this be your Son's Coat? Whereupon the Pope reply'd, He was juſtly treated, for quitting his profeſſion. He was again at the famous Battle of Bovines where he knock'd down the Earl of Salisbury, and fought againſt the Albigenſes in Languedoc. He died at Beauvais, November 2. 1217. Du Cheſne Hiſt. de Dreux, &c.

PHILIP Emanuel de Lorrain, Duke of Mercœur, Peer of France, Governour of Bretany, &c. was Son to Nicholas of Lorrain, and born September 9. 1558. He entred into the fatigues of War when very young, and ſignaliz'd himſelf on ſeveral important occaſions. This Prince married at Paris July 12. 1579, Mary of Luxemburg, Dutcheſs of Eſtampes, and Ponthievre, Viſcounteſs of Martignes, the Daughter of Sebaſtian of Luxemburg, Duke of Ponthievre, &c. called the Fearleſs Knight. He had the Government of Bretany conferr'd upon him, and after the death of the Duke of Guiſe, King Henry III. gave orders to the Eſtates of Blois in 1588, to ſeize him; but Queen Louiſa of Lorrain, his Siſter, gave him notice of the deſign, and ſo prevented it. After this the King flattered him with the Title of Duke of Burgundy, the hope of which hinder'd him for ſome time from declaring openly for the League, but at laſt he avowedly own'd that Party, ſtrengthened himſelf in his Government, and receiv'd the Spaniards into it, to whom he gave le Port de Blavet in 1591, and became very formidable. He was brought in 1596 to a truce till March next year; but there being reaſon to fear that he would afterwards uſe his utmoſt endeavours to ſubdue the remaining part of Bretany, Henry the IVth's. Agents influenc'd him ſo far, as to prolong the truce till the Month of July, upon which his Friends reproached him with what he had ſeveral times upbraided the Duke of Mayenne; viz. That opportunities had not been wanting to him, but that he had often been wanting to opportunities; and in the mean time all the other Chiefs of the League having made their peace with the King he was obliged to bethink himſelf of it alſo, notwithſtanding all the averſion he had thereto; but the King's Progreſs into Bretany in the beginning of 1598 did abſolutely determine him. He had by his Wife one Son named Philip, and a Daughter called Frances; but the Son dying young, the Daughter, a rich Heireſs, was the price of the Reconciliation; for ſhe was betrothed to Cæſar the King's natural Son, afterwards Duke of Vendôme. Madam Gabrielle, a little after Dutcheſs of Beaufort, Mother to that young Prince, undertook that Accommodation, which was as honourable for the Duke as he could have wiſhed; and he made great advantages thereof, for the King gave him two hundred and thirty ſix thouſand Crowns to re-imburſe him, ſeventeen thouſand Crowns Penſion, with the Government of the Caſtles of Guingam, Montemort and Lamballe; after which the Duke came to ſalute the King at Angers, and there was the marriage of the Duke de Vendôme with the Princeſs de Mercœur ſolemnized with extraordinary magnificence. In the mean time this Duke's Merit came to be known throughout Europe. In 1601 the Emperor Rodolphus II. offered him the command of his Army in Hungary againſt the Turks; he conceiv'd great hopes from his Conduct and Valor, and flattered himſelf alſo, that he might bring a great many French Lords along with him, as being weary to find themſelves without buſineſs; which was accepted by him, with the King's leave; and ſo he was attended by Henry of Lorrain, his Brother, Count of Chaligni, and ſome Companies of Soldiers. All the Hiſtorians of that time delighted much to deſcribe the Exploits of this Prince; they relate the great Efforts which he made with fifteen hundred Men to raiſe the Siege of Caniſa inveſted by Ibrahim Baſha with ſixty thouſand Men; and to oblige him to give Battle: Afterwards wanting Proviſions he made an excellent Retreat. He took alſo Alba Regalis, and defeated the Turks that came to the relief of it. His name became terrible to the Infidels, after ſo many brave actions; but as he returned into France about ſome private concerns, he was taken with a Fever in the City of Nuremburg, where he died February 19. 1602.

PHILIP ſurnamed Sidetes becauſe he was Native of Sida, a City in Pamphylia, lived under the Reign of Theodoſius, and had a great ſhare in the friendſhip of S. Chryſoſtom. He writ a Book by the name of the Chriſtian Hiſtory, digeſted into twenty four Books. Socrates lib. 7. Hiſt. c. 17.

PHILIPPA Catenoiſa, or of Catena, was a Laundreſs, who became Nurſe to one of the Children of Robert the Wiſe, King of Naples, and was raiſed afterwards to be Governeſs to the Princeſſes. Jane I. Grand-daughter to Robert, coming to the Crown, was wholly governed by the advices of this Catenoiſa, who always hightened the averſion which the Queen had for King Andrew of Hungary her Husband; and at laſt this wicked Woman, with her Accomplices, ſtrangled him in the City of Averſa in 1345, in the ſtrangeſt and baſeſt manner in the World, and hung him out at a Window; but ſhe ſuffered very ſoon after, the puniſhment due to her for ſo horrid a fact, by extraordinary torments and a very cruel death. Hornius Orb. Polit.

PHILIPPEVILLE, a City of the Low-Countries in Hainault. Queen Mary of Hungary built it in 1555, and called it by the Name of King Phillp: Beſides its ſituation that is naturally ſtrong, it was excellently well fortified to oppoſe the French, who are Maſters of it now, according to the Pyrenæan Treaty in 1660. It ſtands 11 miles W. of Charlemont, 13 S. of Charleroy, 20 S.W. of Namur, and 24. S. E. of Mons.

PHILIPPI, a City of Macedonia built or enlarged by Philip, who called it by his own name. S. Paul converted the Inhabitants of this City, who adhered very firmly to him; and when he was at Theſſalonica, and afterwards at Rome, ſent conſiderable ſupplies for his ſubſiſtence by Epaphroditus, and the Apoſtle wrote to them from Priſon, that Epiſtle directed to the Philippians. It was alſo near unto this City, that Pompey was defeated by Cæſar in the 706th of Rome, and that Brutus and Caſſius were overcome by Auguſtus, and Marcus Antonius in 712.

PHILIPPI or PHILIPPOPOLI, a City of Thracia; the Arians met there in 347. While the Orthodox were ſitting at Sardica, the Hereticks publiſh'd a new Confeſſion of Faith, wherein they appeared Semiarians, for notwithſtanding they own'd the Word to be the Son of God, yet they Deny'd his Conſubſtantiality with the Father, and to make that Confeſſion paſs for Catholick, they gave the name of the Council of Sardica to their Conventicle, by which many of the Orthodox were deceiv'd. Hilar. in Fragm. Socrat. Lib. 2. & 3.

PHILIPPI, or Ciutad del Re PHELIPPE, a City which the Spaniards built in 1585 in South America, to hinder the Engliſh and Dutch from entring the Streights of Magellan; but this City being ruined by the Barbarians, hath ſince been called Porto Famine, or the Port of Famine.

PHILIPPI, a Town of Phœnicia, where there was a Statue of our Saviour, at the Feet of which the Woman was repreſented, who was cured by touching our Saviour's Cloaths. Euſebius and Sozomen Relate, That there grew a Plant cloſe by it which was unknown to Phyſicians, but cur'd all Sorts of Diſeaſes. In the year 361, Julian the Apoſtate Order'd this Statue to be thrown down, and his own plac'd upon the Pedeſtal; which was no ſooner done, but it was Struck down with Lightening. Euſebius Hiſt. Eccl. Sozomen, Lib. 5. Baron. A. C. 362. &c.

PHILIPPI (Henry) a Jeſuit, was of S. Hubert in Ardennes; he Taught Philoſophy and Divinity at Gratz in Stiria, at Vienna, Prague, and elſewhere, and was Preceptor and Confeſſor to Ferdinand III. King of Hungary. He died November 30. 1636. Several Pieces of his compoſing we have, as, Introductio ad Chronologica, ſeu de Computo Eccleſiaſtico ad Chronologiam accommodato; Generalis Synopſis ſacrorum canonum; Quæſtiones Chronologicæ de annis domini Juliani, Nabonaſſari & Æra Juliana componendis; De annis nati & paſſi ſalvatoris, &c. Alegamb. Bibl. Sacr. &c.

PHILIPPICUS Bardanes, Emperor of the Eaſt in the Eighth Age, was deſcended of an Illuſtrious Family, but very inconſiderable in himſelf. Tiberius Abſimerus cauſed him to be baniſhed, becauſe he was told that he muſt be his Succeſſor, and that he was a ſeditious fellow; but finding a way to get himſelf recall'd by Juſtinian ſurnamed the Young, that Prince gave him the command of an Army againſt the City of Cherſone: Some time after Bardanes did barbarouſly make away with the ſame Juſtinian and his Son Tiberius, and cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed Emperor in 711. Authors confeſs, there was never a Prince of greater Impiety nor leſs Wit than this; at laſt ſome of the Nobles diſdaining his proceedings, put out his Eyes, and baniſhed him June 13. 713. Zonaras and Theophanes in Annal. Paul. Diaconus l. 6. c. 34.

PHILIPPIDAS, one of thoſe who intruded themſelves into the Government of the Republick of Athens in the time of Hyperides, who had made an harangue againſt him. He was ſo lean, that Alexis the Comick Poet made it a Proverb to ſay, He is become like Phillipidas, inſtead of, He is become lean.

PHILIPPIDES, a famous Athenian Courier, who in a Day and a Night's time run a thouſand five hundred Furlongs on foot, that is above fourſcore and ten miles to give the Lacedæmonians notice of the arrival of Perſeus. Suidas.

PHILIPPIDES of Athens, a famous Comick Poet, who lived in the time of Alexander the Great, in the 111 Olympiad. He was the Son of Philocles, Brother to Morſimus, a Poet alſo; and Suidas makes mention of 45 of his Pieces, ſome whereof are cited by Athenæus and Julius Pollux. He had a great ſhare in the eſteem of Lyſimachus, who having asked him what he would have of him, anſwered, What you pleaſe, provided it be not your Secret. He died for Joy of having won the Crown of Poetry, when he expected it not. Aulus Gellius lib. 3. c. 15. Athenæus l. 15.

PHILIPPINE Iſlands, are certain Iſles in Aſia, in the Indian Sea, between China, and the Molucca's; they were ſo called, becauſe they were firſt inhabited by the Spaniards in the Reign of Philip II. but the Portugueſe name them Manhilles, which is the name of the chief of them, and the Indians call them Luzones. Authors affirm, there are above 1200 of theſe Iſlands. They were diſcovered in 1520, by Ferdinand Magellan, a Portugueſe, who was kill'd there in the Iſle of Cebu; but they were not inhabited by the Spaniards till 1564: The principal of them is Manhilla or Lucon, with a City of the ſame name; the others are Mindanao, Paragoia or Calamianes, Mindora, Tandaia, or Philippine, Cebu, or los Pintados, Paraia, Masbat, Sabunta, Matan, Luban, Capul, Abuyo, Banton, Rohol, Verde, des Negoas, ſan Juan, &c. the reſt are leſs conſiderable. Some Authors are of Opinion, that theſe Iſlands are the Baruſſæ of Ptolemy. The principal Cities are Mindanao or Tabouc, Caures de Camarinha, Nueva Segovia, or Cagaion, Villa Jeſu, Cebu, &c. The Spaniards were Maſters of all theſe Iſlands, but for ſome time paſt Mindanao, Paragoia, and ſome others have been taken from them. They are fruitful, and beſides Corn and Wine, they have Pepper, Cinnamon, Sugar, Honey, and Mines, &c. There is found in the Sea encompaſſing theſe Iſlands, a ſort of Fiſh, reſembling Sirens, which thoſe of the Iſle of Lucon call the Women Fiſh, becauſe their Head, Face, Neck and Breaſts are ſomewhat like thoſe of a Woman, and they couple alſo with the Male; it's about as big as a Calf, and its Fleſh taſts like Beef; they fiſh for them with Nets made of Cords, as thick as one's Finger, and when they are taken they kill them with Darts. Their Bones and Teeth have a ſpecial Virtue for the curing of the Dyſentery or Bloody-Flux. The Air of theſe Iſlands is very hot, and but a very little difference of Seaſons to be perceiv'd: Rains begin to fall there in the end of May, and laſt without Intermiſſion for three or four Months; but it ſcarcely Rains at any other time. The Country is very ſubject to Hurricanes, which blow down the greateſt Trees; here are alſo Springs of hot Water, and a great many Snakes, whereof ſome are two Fathoms, others above thirty Foot long. The Inhabitants are well ſhap'd, having handſome Faces, and very white: Some wear a dreſs that comes as low as the Ancle; others have a little White, Yellow, or Red Coat, that hangs down as far as the Knee, which they tye with a Girdle: The Women, as well as the Men, are continually in the Water, wherein they ſwim like Fiſh: They bath themſelves all Hours of the Day, as well for their Pleaſure as Cleanlineſs: When they are ſick they uſe no bleeding, nor any other Remedies but ſome Herbs, of which they make a kind of Ptiſan. They uſe Rice inſtead of Bread, and make Drink of the ſame, as intoxicating as the Wine of Europe. In theſe Iſlands there is neither Corn nor Wine, nor Oil of Olives, nor any Fruits which grow in Europe, except Oranges. There are no Mines of Silver, and but little of this Metal to be ſeen there; what there is being brought from Mexico. There are ſome Gold Mines found in the Iſle of Manhilla, and in the River of Butuan, in the Iſle of Mindanao. In the Mountains are found a great deal of Wax and Honey, and many Palm-trees, which are the greateſt Riches of the Country. Since the Spaniards came to inhabit there, they have built ſeveral Sugar-Mills, which hath render'd that Commodity ſo very cheap, that one may have five and twenty Pounds, ſixteen ounces each, for twenty pence. Their Arms are a Lance, Arrows, the Campilan or great Cutlas, the Cris or Poiniard, the Zompites or Shooting-Trunks, out of which they blow little poiſoned Arrows. The Spaniards have taught them the uſe of Fire-Arms, which they handle very well, eſpecially ſuch of them as are liſted in the Spaniſh Troops; but theſe Iſlanders are naturally Cowards, and fitter to lie in Ambuſcade than to fight an Enemy in the Field. The Spaniards who dwell in theſe Iſlands, have an Archbiſhop, who reſides at Manhilla, and has three thouſand Ducats Revenue. Theſe Iſlands depend upon the Crown of Caſtile; the Governour reſides at Manhilla; he is alſo Preſident, and as Captain General diſpoſes of all places both Military and Civil. Several of theſe Iſlanders have embraced the Chriſtian Religion, the reſt are ſtill Idolaters. The Dutch E. Endia Company have much ruin'd the Trade of the Spaniards, in theſe parts, and occaſion'd the defection of a great many of theſe Iſlands from 'em. M. Thevenot's Relation de Phil.

PHILIP's NORTON, a Market Town of Wellow Hundred in the N. E. of Somerſetſhire, 84 miles from London.

PHILIPSTADT, Lat. Philippopolis, a new City in Swedeland, in the Province of Vermeland, ſtanding among ponds of Water.

PHILIPSBURG, an Important Fortreſs in Germany upon the Rhine called formerly Udenheim; it took its modern name from Philip Chriſtopher de Saterin, Biſhop of Spire and Archbiſhop of Trier. This Prelate cauſed it to be built and fortified with ſeven Baſtions, where the Biſhop's Caſtle, and the Village of Udenheim, ſtood, almoſt upon the brink of the Rhine, in a Plain ſurrounded with Mariſh Ground. Philipsburg in 1633 fell into the hands of the Imperialiſts through the Cowardlineſs of the Governour. The Swedes drove them thence January 15. 1634, and gave it to Lewis XIIIth. but as the Fortifications of it could not be finiſhed, becauſe of the rigor of the Winter, the Imperialiſts ſurpriz'd it by Night January 23. 1635. Afterwards the Duke of Anguien, having defeated the Bavarians at Friburg, retook Spire and Philipsburg, September 1644. The French King cauſed it to be regularly fortified, and made it a very important place. The Germans and their Allies, who had blocked it up for a long time beſieged it May 16. 1676, and it was ſurrender'd to them upon Articles, September the 17th following; but it was retaken by Lewis de Bourbon, the Dauphin of France in 1688. It ſtands three German miles from Heydelburg to the S. three from Durlach to the N. and about two S. from Spires. It was conſign'd to the Biſhop of Spire. But under the perpetual Protection of the Emperor, the Biſhop has ever had his Reſidence in the Caſtle, which is a noble Pile. This place lies a quarter of a mile from the Rhine in a Moraſs, and is but ſma'l; the Baſtions are little, and there is a Ravelline before almoſt all the Cortines, but the Moraſs is its beſt defence. The French had begun a Crown-Work on the ſide towards the Rhine; and it's thought they deſign'd to carry that Crown-Work quite round the Town, and to make a ſecond Wall and Ditch all round it, which would have endangered the Palatinate by enlarging it; which made that Elector engage the Emperor to retake it, and he alſo ſupplied the Duke of Lorrain's Camp ſo well, during the Siege, that it wanted nothing. In 1688 it was again beſieged by the French, who thus deſcribed its Situation and Fortifications. It is ſituate (ſay they) near the Rhine, on the German ſide, and is almoſt ſurrounded with a Moraſs, and is beſides regularly fortified with ſeven Baſtions and half Moons in the places by which it is acceſſible: The Ground between the place and the Rhine is covered with a Crown-work and a Horn-work, which ſtands about twenty yards from the Rhine. All theſe Fortifications are Fac'd with Stone, as likewiſe the covered way, and the other Works that inviron it. It was inveſted by the French the 27th of September 1688. The ſixth of October the Dauphin of France came thither, who here made his firſt Campaign: The firſt of November it was ſurrender'd when it might have holden out much longer. By the Peace of Reſwick it was reſtored to the Emperor, with the Fortifications adjoining thereto on the right Hand of the Rhine, but the Fort that was built on the left Side of the Rhine, and the Bridge made there after the taking of it, by the French King's Order were utterly demoliſh'd.

PHILISTINES, a people of Palæſtine towards the Borders of Egypt, along the Sea-coaſts. They were Enemies to the Iſraelites, whom they brought afterwards into ſervitude, defeated them, and took away their Ark; but the Iſraelites reveng'd themſelves frequently afterwards.

PHILISTION of Magneſia, a Comick Poet, who lived at Rome a little after Horace. Caſſiodorus makes him to be the Inventor of Farce. He died with too much Laughing, as Acting the Buffoon upon the Stage.

PHILISTION of Sardes, or Nice, another Comick Poet, who liv'd in the time of Socrates. Nicholas Rigaltius publiſh'd a Collection of Verſes from a Manuſcript of the Louvre, intitl'd, A Compariſon between Menander and Philiſtion. Theſe Verſes were writ upon the ſame Subject, and are ſuppos'd to be a Tryal of Skill between theſe two Poets, but Janus Rutgerſius, who has publiſh'd 'em ſince more correctly, and with Additions, is of Opinion, That Philemon, not Philiſtion, is the true Reading, becauſe Stobæus cites ſome of theſe Verſes, under the Name of Philemon; between whom and Menander there was a Conteſt for Fame and Preference. See PHILEMON. Suidas.

PHILISTUS of Syracuſe, had a great ſhare in the favour of Dionyſius the Tyrant, who afterwards baniſh'd him, becauſe he had married his Niece without his knowledge. During his Exile Philiſtus writ ſeveral Hiſtorical Treatiſes, which the Ancients quote often with commendation. He was recalled after this by Dionyſius the Young, and fitted out a Fleet to defend himſelf againſt thoſe who had expell'd him from Syracuſe; but Philiſtus having loſt the Battle in the 398th of Rome, he kill'd himſelf: Others ſay, That falling into his Enemies hands they put him to death. Diodorus l. 16.

PHILO, a famous Architect, lived about 300 years before Chriſt; he wrought at ſeveral Temples, and at the Arſenal of the Haven of Piræus, while Demetrius of Phaleris governed Athens. He writ a deſcription of all thoſe different Works, and deſerves a conſiderable place among thoſe Greek Authors who have writ of Arts, but his Writings are loſt. Some pretend that he is the ſame with Philo of Byzantium, who writ a Treatiſe of Warlike Engines that was printed in 1687 at the Louvre from a Manuſcript taken out of the King's Library. Vitruvius lib. 3. & 7. Felib. vies des Architects.

PHILO, a famous Grammarian ſurnamed Byblius or Byblienſis, was much eſteem'd in the Firſt and Second Ages; hath writ ſeveral Treatiſes, mentioned by Suidas, Sixtus Senenſis, Voſſius, le Mire, &c. It was he who tranſlated the Phœnician Hiſtory of Sanchoniathon: But others believe, That either Philo feigned this Hiſtory, or that Porphyrius attributes it to Philo, although the Verſion was counterfeit as well as the Original. See H. Dodwell upon his Sanchoniathon, or an Abſtract of it in the firſt Volume of the Works of the Learned.

PHILO of Alexandria, called Philo the Jew, whoſe Writings are ſo much eſteemed, liv'd in the Firſt Age; he was a Platonick Philoſopher. The Jews of Alexandria ſent him about the Year 40 to the Emperor Caligula at Rome, who treated him very ill: He hath himſelf written an account of this Embaſſy, under the Title of a Diſcourſe againſt Flaccus. He took another Voyage to Rome in the Reign of Claudius. We have ſeveral Editions of his Works the laſt is that of Paris in 1640, with Sigiſmond Galenius's Tranſlation, and ſome others. It's divided into three parts; the firſt contains Coſmopoetica, the ſecond Hiſtorica, and the third Juridica ſeu Legalia. Joſeph. l. 18. Ant. c. 10. Clem. Alexan. l. 1. Strom. &c.

PHILOCTETES, the Son of Pæan, was Hercules's faithful Companion, who at his death obliged him to ſwear that he would never diſcover the place he was buried in, and preſented him with his Arms dipp'd in Hydra's Blood. When the Greeks were about to beſiege Troy, they were told by the Oracle, That they ſhould never take that City without thoſe fatal Arrows; whereupon they ſought out for Hercules; and Philoctetes, that he might not be guilty of Perjury, diſcover'd his Tomb by ſtamping upon it only with his feet: but as a puniſhment for the violation of his Oath, he receiv'd a Wound in the Foot by the fall of one of the Arrows upon it, which Machaon cured. Ovid Metam. Virg. Æneid. Natalis Comes, &c.

PHILOGONUS, biſhop of Antioch, was bred a Lawyer, and preferr'd to the Office of a Judge; but afterwards, going into Holy Orders, ſucceeded Vitalis in the Year 318. S. Chryſoſtome has given him a great Character. He imploy'd his Intereſt to extinguiſh the Remainders of the Diocleſian Perſecution, and to bear up againſt that of Licinius, in which latter he had the Honour to be a Confeſſor. He had the Diſſatisfaction to ſee the Arian Hereſie ſpring up in his time; to which notwithſtanding he gave ſome Check. Philogonus died in 324, and was ſucceeded by Euſtathi. Theodor. Lib. 1. cap. 2. & 6. Baronius in Annal.

PHILOLAUS of Crotona, a Pythagorean Philoſopher, lived in the 360th year of Rome. He believ'd that all things were made by Harmony and Neceſſity, and that the Earth had a circular motion. Demetrius ſaith he was the firſt of the Pythagoreans who wrote Phyſicks. It's affirmed, That Philolaus, deſirous to get a Scholar of his out of Priſon, preſented one of his Books to Dionyſius the Tyrant of Syracuſe, who gave it to Plato; and he kept it for his Timæus: Others add, That Plato bought it from the Relations of Philolaus, who died of grief becauſe he was accuſed of deſigning to uſurp the Soveraignty, and tyrannize over his Country. He muſt not be confounded with Philolaus, who preſcribed Laws to the Thebans. Ariſt. l. 2. Polit. c. ult. Diogenes Laertius.

PHILOMELA, Daughter of Pandion King of Athens. Tereus, King of Thrace, who had married her Siſter Progne, abus'd her, and afterwards cut out her Tongue, and put her in Priſon; but Philomela gave her Siſter notice of it, who reſcu'd her at the Solemnity of Bacchus. After which Philomel was turn'd into a Nightingale. Ovid. Metam. Lib. 6.

PHILOMELUS, chief of thoſe Sacrilegious Perſons of Phocis, who robb'd the Temple of Apollo at Delphos; and afterwards ſeeing his Companions vanquiſhed by the Locrians and Thebans he threw himſelf down headlong from a Rock in deſpair, where he died. Diodorus l. 16.

PHILONIDES, a Meſſenger of Alexander the Great, who went from Sicyon to Elis in nine hours, though an hundred and fifty miles diſtant; but at his return he was a running of it fifteen hours, tho' he had more down-hill; becauſe in running from Sicyon to Elis he had the Sun on his Back, but in his return he had it on his Face. Pliny, &c.

PHILOPOEMEN of Megalopolis, Pretor of the Achæans, was a Brave and Learned Man; his Maſters were Ecdemus and Demophanes the Philoſopher. The firſt proof which he gave of his Courage was when his Country was ſurpriz'd by Cleomenes King of Sparta: he afterwards followed Antigonus, who took the part of the Achæans; but having the conduct of ſome Troops, his Courage appear'd yet more in the Battle which is Men won from the Ætolians, lians, near Meſſena in Peloponneſus, in the 546th year of Rome. In 548 he kill'd Mechanidas the Tyrant of Lacedæmon in Battle, near the City of Mantinea in Arcadia: Nabis who ſucceded him defeated Philopæmen by Sea, but he reveng'd himſelf upon him by Land; for having beaten him in the Field, he afterwards took Sparta, raſed its Walls to the ground, abrogated Lycurgus's Laws, and made the Lacedæmonians ſubject to the Achæans in the 148th Olympiad, and 556 of Rome. Democrates, Tyrant of Meſſena, made War upon the Achæans, wherein Philopæmen was taken and put to death, being then 70 years old; but this was ſufficiently reveng'd by Licortas, Pretor of the Achæans. Plutarch in his Life. Liv. Polybius.

PHILOPONUS (John) was a Learned Grammarian of Alexandria, who lived at Conſtantinople about 535 and wrote againſt Severus and Proclus, who had oppoſed the truth of Chriſtianity. He compoſed alſo a Treatiſe, wherein he pretends to prove, That the ſame Bodies ſhall not ariſe at the laſt day. Photius Cod. 21, 42, 55, 75, 215. Suidas.

PHILOSOPHER's-STONE, is a Powder ſo called, becauſe they ſay there are none but true Philoſophers that have it: By virtue of this Stone imperfect Metals are changed by Projection (that is by caſting this powder upon them) into Gold or Silver. Imperfect Metals they call all thoſe that are not Gold or Silver; as Lead, called by them Saturn; Tin, Jupiter; Iron, Mars; Copper, Venus; Quickſilver, Mercury. Gold they call the Sun; and Silver, the Moon. This Powder is alſo called by theſe Philoſophers or Wiſemen, An Univerſal Medicine; becauſe, as they pretend, it acts upon all the Empire of Nature, which they divide into three parts, to wit, the Animal, the Vegetative, and Mineral Reign; hereby they pretend, that they can preſerve the health of Animals, keep it from alteration, and reſtore it when it is altered; which they can alſo do upon all Plants, and (that I may uſe their own terms) take away the Leproſie from Metals, and ennoble them, by advancing them to the higheſt degree of perfection that Nature is capable to bring them to in the entrals of the Earth. This Powder is called alſo a Stone, becauſe, after it is wrought, the Philoſopher vitrifies it; for being at firſt made up of ſeveral ſmall parts, he forms it into a Maſs by a gentle Liquefaction; and becauſe of its great purity it becomes glittering, and reſembles a lump of that which is called Enamell in Glaſs-Houſes; and when he has a mind to make uſe of it; he ſcrapes this Maſs with a Knife, and eaſily reduces it into Powder. This Powder, beſides the abundant Tincture it carries, muſt contain in it two qualities, which are not to be found together in any Bodies that Nature preſents us with; for it muſt needs be meltable like Wax, and fix'd and Proof againſt Fire to the hardneſs of Gold; the firſt quality being neceſſary for penetrating to the Center of the imperfect Metal upon which it is caſt when melted; and the ſecond, to communicate the fixedneſs requiſite for Gold or Silver. The way of ſucceeding in the operation of this Stone is very hard to diſcover. Above four or five thouſand Authors have writ of it at divers times, and in different parts of the World; but never one hath writ on any other account than that it might be talked of, but not in order to inform how it ought to be made; or if they had this intention, they have ſpoken ſo enigmatically, that they themſelves advertiſe the Reader, That they have writ for none but their Brethren, and that if God diſcovered not thoſe Myſteries by Revelation, or that they happened to be unfolded by ſome Perſon who hath the Stone, and the Art of making it, it is impoſſible to underſtand them; but yet it muſt not be believed, that all thoſe that have written obſcurely upon this Subject were Poſſeſſors. There are but very few (as they call them) that were Authores bonæ notæ; thoſe who are approved and reputed the true Adepti (for this is alſo one of the terms whereby they expreſs true Philoſophers who have acquir'd that which others ſearch for) are Hermes their venerable Father, Calid, Artephius, who boaſted that he had lived above a thouſand Years, Morienus Romanus, the Coſmopolite, the Count Treviſan, Zachary, Philalethus, and ſeveral others, both ancient and modern. That this ſo difficult and conceal'd a Work may be accompliſhed, theſe wiſe Men tell us, There are two ways, whereof the one is called The Univerſal, and the other the Particular-way; the Univerſal conſiſts in the Preparation of a certain matter, which is to be found every where throughout the World, and in all Places, which coſts nothing, and is common to poor and rich, which we have all before our Eyes, and which very few know how to chooſe. This matter, by due Preparation, without the Addition of any other thing, produceth an Univerſal Medicine which is agreeable, as has been already ſaid, to the three Reigns of Nature, inſomuch, that the Philoſopher determines it by Art to what kind he pleaſes, and after this Determination this Medicine becomes peculiar either to Animals, Plants, or Metals. The other way is called Particular, when the Philoſopher begins his Work by the Metallick kind, and, that by Art he finds out the means to corrupt the perfect Metal by radically introducing thereinto one of the Three Subſtances that compoſe it, to wit, either Salt, Sulphur, or Mercury, which are the Principles of all Subſtances, and theſe Principles are the Productions of the four Elements, which are the Principles of all things we ſee in the Univerſe. This particular way is alſo ſubdivided into two ways, called the dry and moiſt; the firſt is when they go upon the Corruption of a perfect Metal, by the Radical Introduction of Metallick Sulphur, the ſecond is (which the Philoſophers call alſo The way of Reincrudation) when they proceed to it by the Introduction of Mercury; and this way they call The Reincrudation of Metals, and the Humid way; for that Mercury being of a watery Subſtance, it is alſo the moſt crude Part, and 'tis in this Mercury (which yet is not the common Mercury) that they pretend to put ſome Gold or Silver, and to make it putrefie within, in ſuch a manner, that after having paſt through the Putrefaction by artificial Ways, it thereby becomes a Subſtance called Philoſophick Mercury, which is neither Gold nor Silver, but a Metallick Compoſition, of a ſoft Conſiſtence, which hath a penetrating and fermentative Virtue, by Means of which, they can multiply it ad infinitum, by putting common Mercury thereto, which is of all Metals the moſt fit for Penetration and receiving of a metallick Form. Vid. ALCHIMY.

PHILOSTORGIUS of Cappadocia, the Son of Carterius and Eulampia, was born about 367, in the Reign of Valentinian and Valens. He writ an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, which he publiſhed in the time of Theodoſius the Younger. This Work was divided into twelve Books, which began with the Letters of his name in the form of an Acroſtick. He was an Arian, of the party of the Aetians and Eunomians; ſo that he highly extolls thoſe Hereticks, runs down the Orthodox, and eſpecially Athanaſius. He otherwiſe teſtified much zeal for the Chriſtian Religion, and many uſeful things may be learnt by his Eccleſiaſtical Antiquities. Photius, accuſeth him, that beſides his Impiety and Infidelity, he uſed an affected Stile, more becoming a Poet than an Hiſtorian. Nicephorus Calliſtus has taken out of Philoſtorgius, whom he calls, Deo Inviſus, ſeveral things, which he inſerts in his Hiſtory without citing him.

PHILOSTRATUS of Lemnos, or, according to others, of Tyre or Athens, a Sophiſt, who lived at Rome in the time of the Emperor Severus, and at the deſire of the Empreſs Julia writ the Life of Apollonius Tyanæus in eight Books: He hath alſo wrote, De Vitis Heroum, &c. This Author was the Son, or according to others, the Grandſon of Philoſtratus, a Sophiſt, who lived in the time of Veſpaſian and Titus, and writ Orations, Tragedies, &c. They muſt not be miſtaken for two other Authors of the ſame Name, the firſt whereof lived in the time of Macrinus, and Heliogabulus, and was Grandſon, or rather Nephew to him that writ the Life of Apollonius Tyanæus, and married his Daughter. Suidas attributes ſeveral Works to him, but others are not of the ſame Opinion. The other Philoſtratus was an Egyptian, a Philoſopher and Sophiſt. Suidas. Photius l. 44. 150, & 241. Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc. &c.

PHILOXENUS of Cythera, a Greek Poet, lived in the 388th year of Rome, at the Court of Dionyſius the Younger, Tyrant of Syracuſe, and could never be brought to give any approbation to the Verſes made by that ſame Dionyſius; which contempt angred Dionyſius ſo much, that he put Philoxenus into the Priſon which the Sicilians called the Quarries. Some time after the Tyrant ſet him at liberty, and believing he ſhould gain his Approbation eaſier than formerly, he read to him one of his Poems; Philoxenus gave ear from one end to the other to the Piece he recited, and then ſtarting up, briſkly ſaid, He muſt be carried to the Quarries again. Some time after he writ a Poem of the Amours of Polyphemus and Galathea, wherein he jeers Dionyſius's Miſtreſs, who was ſo called; which obſtinacy incenſed the Tyrant ſo extreamly, that he put him to death. Athenæus l. 1, 4, & 14 Ælian. l. 12. Var. Hiſt. l. 47. Cauſabon. Animad. in Athe. l. 4. c. 11.

PHILOXENUS, a Macedonian Captain that took Harpalus Steward in Candia, who was Treaſurer to Alexander the Great, and had imbezelled the Treaſure of that Prince during his abſence. He diſcovered all thoſe to whom Harpalus had entruſted that Treaſure in Athens, and ſent a liſt of them to the Magiſtrates, that they might ſeize the Money and get them puniſhed; but he would not put Demoſthenes, among the number, tho he had had ſome difference with that famous Orator, preferring upon that occaſion, the eſteem he had for his Eloquence, before his own reſentment. Pauſ.

PHINEHAS the Son of Eleazer, perceiving Zimri of a principal Family of the Tribe of Simeon, was reſolv'd to keep Cozbi, the Daughter of Midian a Prince, contrary to the Law of Moſes, enter'd Cozbi's Tent and kill'd 'em both; this Severity being exercis'd out of a Zeal to puniſh the Violation of the Divine Law, was ſo acceptable to God Almighty, that he promis'd to continue the Honour of the Prieſthood in Eleazer's Family. This Phinehas was afterwards High Prieſt, Numb. 25. &c.

PHINEUS, the Son of Agenor, reigned in Paphlagonia, and married Cleopatra, the Daughter of Boreas, by whom he had two Sons, Parthenius and Cranbis; but having divorced this firſt Wife he married a Daughter of the King of Scythia, called Idea. Some time after, theſe two Princes were accuſed of having committed Inceſt with their Mother-in-law, and condemned by their own Father to loſe their Lives; but Boreas reveng'd the Innocence of his Grand-children, for having given Battle to Phineus he took him Priſoner, and gave him his choice, Whether to be put to death, or have his Eyes put out: Phineus choſe the laſt, and 'tis ſaid, That then the Gods inſpir'd him with the Art of foretelling things to come; but Neptune growing Jealous hereat, ſent Harpyes that ſhould foul his Victuals when he was at Table, and ſo he was tormented with theſe Monſters until that Zethes and Calais, the Sons of Boreas, drove them into the Iſlands of Strophades. Apollodorus. Vid. HARPYES.

PHINEUS, the Brother of Cephus, King of Æthiopia, was Uncle to Andromeda, who was promiſed him in Marriage; but he durſt not deliver that Princeſs from the Sea-monſter to which ſhe was expos'd (according to the Poets:) Phineus, nevertheleſs, would take away Andromeda on the Wedding-day from Perſeus, her Deliverer, under pretence of the King's Promiſe, but Perſeus changed him into a Stone by Meduſa's Head which he had faſtened to his Buckler. Ovid.

PHLEGON Trallian, the Emperor Adrian's Freeman, had a great Share in that Prince's Favour, who publiſhed an Hiſtory of his Life under his own Name. 'Tis he who relates in his Fourteenth Book, That the fourth year of the 202d. Olympiad, which was the year of our Saviour's Paſſion, was very remarkable for the greateſt Eclipſe of the Sun that ever was ſeen, the Face of the Heavens being covered with dark and obſcure Night for ſix Hours; that is to ſay, untill Noon, ſo as the Stars appear'd. Dionyſius the Areopagite in his 7th. Epiſtle to S. Polycarp, ſays, That being at Heliopolis in Egypt with Apollo, he obſerv'd, that the Moon, by an extraordinary Motion, work'd up to a Conjunction with the Sun, and continued ſo till the Ninth Hour, after which ſhe returned towards the Eaſt, and ſettl'd in her former Oppoſition, which diſcovers, that the ſaid Eclipſe of the Sun was not natural, ſeeing it did not follow upon the New Moon, which is the time that ſhe might have interpoſed betwixt the Sun and the Earth, but at full Moon, at which time the Jews did celebrate the Paſſover. Over and above this Miracle there was another, viz. That the Eclipſe laſted three hours, becauſe the Moon, according to her proper Motion, moves with more Swiftneſs than the Sun, and being leſs than the Sun and the Earth, could not entirely darken him, but for a very ſmall time. This Eclipſe occaſioned Dionyſius to ſay, Aut Deus Naturæ patitur, aut Mundi machina diſſolvitur; or according to Syncellus and Suidas, Deus Ignotus in Carne patitur, ideoque Univerſum hiſce tenebris obſcuratur: But moſt Learned Men are ſatisfy'd that this Dionyſius is a Counterfeit, and tho' the matter of Fact is true, yet the Authority of this Relation is queſtionable. P. Fagi on the 32d. year of Chriſt, in his Criticks on Baronius.

PHLEGYAS, the Son of Mars, was King of the Lapithæ in Theſſaly, and Father of Ixion and the Nymph Coronis, whom Apollo raviſhed: Phlegyas coming to know of it, was tranſported with anger, and in order to be revenged upon that God, went and ſet Fire to his Temple at Delphos; but Apollo, ſaith the Fable, that he might puniſh Phlegyas for this Sacrilege, ſhot him to death with Arrows, and hurled him headlong into Hell, where he was condemned to remain for ever under a great Rock, which ſeeming ready to fall, kept him in continual fear.

PHLUGIUS (Julius) Biſhop of Naumburg, a Town of Miſnia, in Upper Saxony, was very much eſteem'd for his Learned Writings, and particularly for his Book, De Inſtitutione Hominis Chriſtiani, which he wrote againſt Luther: He was one of the three Learned Divines which the Emperor Charles V. pitch'd upon to draw up the Interim in 1548. Maimbourg Hiſt. du Lutheran.

PHOBUS, the Son of Erix, laſt Archon or Decennial Prince of Athens, complied with the Decree of the Senate for chooſing of Annual Magiſtrates, and having raiſed ſome Troops amongſt the Phoceans and other Greeks, put to Sea in order to go for Aſia Minor, where being arrived, he was received by Mandron King of Bebrycia, who made him his Aſſociate in the Government of his Country; and the Phocians dwelt with the Bebrycians in the City of Pythia; but in proceſs of time they entertain'd a Jealouſie of the Greeks, and laid a Deſign to murther them all in one Day; but Lampſaca, the Daughter of Mandron, gave Phobus Information of it, who, to prevent his Enemies, made a Pretence of ſolemnizing a Feaſt, whereunto he invited the Pytheans, and cut to pieces all that came thither; ſo that King Mandron found himſelf to be at the Mercy of Phobus, who preſerv'd his Life and Crown, and married the Princeſs Lampſaca; after which the City of Pythia was called Lampſacum. Plutarch de virt. Mulierum.

PHOCÆA, a City of Ionia in Aſia Minor: It was a Colony of the Athenians, whoſe Inhabitants built it after Marſeilles; where there is ſtill a Town, and an Haven to it, called Fochia Vecchia, near unto another leſs conſiderable, called Fochia Nova. Strabo, lib. 4. Ammian. Marcellinus, lib. 14. Juſtin, lib. 43. &c.

PHOCAS, Emperor or rather Tyrant of the Eaſt in the Seventh Age. He advanced himſelf in the War from a meer Captain, and was declared Auguſtus by the Army in 602. He was crowned November 23d. by the Patriarch Cyriacus, in the Church of S. John, near unto Conſtantinople; after which he made his Entry into the City, and put to death the Emperor Maurice, whom he had dethroned, together with his Sons. The Empreſs and her Daughters were ſaved by the People; but afterwards Phocus put them to death with divers Perſons of Quality, upon a Report, that Maurice had left a Son named Theodoſius, who would very ſpeedily appear in a Condition to expel the Tyrant; this happened in 607. Phocas carried it very fairly in the beginning of his Reign, writ very reſpectfully to Pope Gregory the Great, propoſed an Orthodox Confeſſion of Faith, was liberal towards the Churches, favoured Learned Men, and ſhewed himſelf to be very good natured. This is the Character which Nicephorus gives of him. But that of Cedrenus is much blacker; he repreſents him as an Heretick who had nothing of Humanity; but was Cruel, Bloody; and his fiery Looks poſſeſs'd Men with Fear and Terror. And, in ſhort, ſome time after his Coronation, he abandoned himſelf to all ſorts of Abominations and Debaucheries, taking away Mens Wives at his pleaſure, and putting their Husbands to death who durſt diſapprove of his Violences. After this, in 603, Choſroes, King of Perſia, willing to revenge the Death of Maurice, who was his Friend, entred into the Territories of the Empire in 608, took Syria, Palæſtine, Phænicia, Armenia, Cappadocia; and his Troops made Inroads as far as Chalcedonia. At the ſame time the Avares, Sclavonians, and ſeveral other Nations ravaged the Empire, inſomuch that all was in Deſolation. And Phocas, to increaſe it, ſuffering himſelf to be acted by his bloody Inclination, exerciſed unheard of Cruelties, and ſeemed to take ſingular pleaſure to cut off the Heads of the moſt illuſtrious Perſons in the Empire. He baniſhed ſeveral who joined themſelves with Heraclius, who defeated his Troops. In this Juncture one Photinus, whoſe Wife he had taken away, ſurprized him in his Palace; and having taken off his Imperial Robe, put on a filthy one, and ſent him to Heraclius, who having reproached him with his Crimes, cut off his Feet, Hands, and Privy-parts, and at laſt cauſed his Head to be ſtruck off, on Monday, October 5th. 610. after he had reigned 7 years, 10 months, and 18 days. Nicephorus, lib. 18. cap. 38. & ſeq. Cedrenus in Annal. &c.

PHOCION, General of the Athenian Army, was a great Orator, valiant General, and a wiſe Citizen. Demoſthenes was afraid of his Eloquence; and when he ſaw him ſtand up at the Bar to anſwer him, was wont to ſay, Here is the Ax or Sword that cuts me to pieces, that is, Here is the only Perſon capable to unrivet my Diſcourſes, to anſwer their Difficulties, and to weaken my Reaſons. In ſhort, the great Moderation of Phocion carried him far above the Vehemency of Demoſthenes. One day this laſt ſuffered himſelf in the preſence of the People, to utter very opprobrious things againſt Alexander. Phocion ſtopped him, by informing of him, he ought not to provoke a fierce Enemy; and exhorted the People rather to ſtand upon their Guard, and defend themſelves well when there ſhould be occaſion. Philip of Macedon had ſo great an Eſteem of his Courage and Military Conduct, that he dreaded him. At the Death of that King, the Athenians deſirous to make publick Rejoicings, Phocion prevented them, by putting them in mind that they had loſt but one Man againſt Philip in the Battle of Cheronea. It was he alſo who by his prudent and moderate Counſels, diverted Alexander from the War he would have undertaken, not only againſt the Athenians, but all Greece, by repreſenting to him, That it was his own Country, and that if it was Diſhonourable to him to languiſh in Repoſe, it would be much more Glorious for him to go and ſubdue the Barbarians, who acknowledged not his Empire, than to diſturb the Peace of his Country. Alexander finding this Counſel very reaſonable, by the great Succeſſes that attended his Enterprizes in Aſia, ſent him a Preſent of an hundred Talents, after the laſt Victory which he won from Darius, and the entire Conqueſt of Perſia. Phocian asked thoſe that brought him the Preſent, what reaſon Alexander had to diſtinguiſh him in that manner, by ſo great a Liberality? It was anſwered, That he was the only Perſon in Athens whom Alexander acknowledged to be an honeſt Man. If he had acknowledged me to be ſuch, ſaith Phocion, in my mean Condition, He ſhould have left me in the ſame Circumſtances. And while he was a-ſpeaking thus, he drew Water out of the Well himſelf, and his Wife was making of Bread. Thoſe who talked to him, being ſurpriſed at the Poverty of his Family, and charmed with his Vertues, preſſed him very much to accept of their Maſter's Preſent, but they could not prevail with him; he putting it off with this wiſe Anſwer. If I ſhould receive the Wealth you offer me, and not make uſe of it, it would do me no good, and if I ſhould make uſe of it, I ſhould give my Citizens occaſion to ſpeak with Indignation againſt Alexander, and with Envy againſt me. Alexander ſeeing him ſend back his Preſent, was not content with this Refuſal, and writ to him, That thoſe who would take nothing of him, were none of his Friends. Whereupon Phocian petitioned him very earneſtly to ſet at liberty ſome Rhodians kept in Priſon at Sardis, which Alexander immediately granted; and believing he ſhould find him eaſier to receive of him, after having once obliged him to ask ſomething, he ſent Craterus to him, with the Priſoners he had enlarged, to preſs him a-new to accept the hundred Talents from him; but Phocion continued ſtill to refuſe them. And Alexander ſoon after died. Antipater, one of Alexander's Succeſſors, offered alſo great Sums of Money to Phocion by Menillus; but he would never take any. And on Minillus his repreſenting to him, That if he would take none for himſelf, he ought at leaſt-wiſe to accept of it for his Children; he plainly anſwered, That if his Children did imitate him, they ſhould have enough as well as he; and if they muſt be debauched, he would leave them nothing wherewith to entertain their Debaucheries. He was Scholar to Plato and Xenocrates, and afterwards retired to a ſmall Inheritance where he had lived contentedly without concerning himſelf with the Affairs of the Publick. It's obſerved, that he was never ſeen to laugh or cry. His Innocence and Vertue rendred his Poverty honourable. He was obliged to take up Arms for the Defence of his Country; and his Conduct was ſucceſsful againſt Philip of Macedon, and upon ſeveral other Occaſions. The Haven of Piræum having been ſurprized by the Enemy about the 436 of Rome, Phocion, being then Archon and Governour of Athens, was accuſed of having connived at them, and at laſt condemned to Death being about eighty years of Age. The Athenians became ſenſible of their Error quickly after his death; whereupon they erected him a Statue, and cut off his Accuſer. And at the Inſtance of Phocus, his Son, treated Epicurus and Demophilus in like manner. Cornelius Nepos, Plutarch, &c.

PHOCIS, a Province of Greece between Bœotia and Ætolia, having Anticyra, Cirrha, Delphos, and the Hill Parnaſſus, with Helicon at the end of it. Its Inhabitants, at the Perſuaſion of Philomelus, robbed the Temple of Apollo at Delphos, and defeated the Locrians in the 106th. Olympiad, and 399th. of Rome. The Greeks, to revenge this Sacrilege, began that which they called the Holy-War. The Phocians made an Alliance with the Athenians and thoſe of Lacedæmon; but that prevented not their being vanquiſhed by thoſe of Thebes and Locris. And Philomelus threw himſelf headlong over a Rock. Onomarcus, who after him took upon him the Command of the Army, courageouſly withſtood the Thebans. But at laſt, his Soldiers growing weary of him, threw him into the Sea, where he died one of thoſe ſorts of Death appointed for thoſe that committed Sacrilege. Phalacus his Son defeated the Enemy afterwards. But coming to be killed, and the Holy-War terminated in the 108th. Olympiad, and 408th. of Rome, the Cities of Phocis were razed to the Ground, and the People condemned to live in the Villages. The Phocenſes had to the Weſt the Locri, to the South the Weſtern Bay of Corinth, now called Lepanto, to the Eaſt Bœotia, and to the N. E. the Doreans. The Tribunal of the Amphyctiones, whoſe Juriſdiction extended over all Greece, and the Oracle of Delphos, do both ſhew the Antiquity and Greatneſs of thoſe People, becauſe they were long before the Trojan War. There was another Branch of the Greeks of the ſame Name, called ſo from Phocea, a City of Ionia in the Leſſer Aſia, who built Marſeilles in France. Phocis was fruitful as to Corn and Cattle, and the People were a crafty, valiant Race of Men, and for a long time exerciſed Piracy. They were enriched alſo by the Delphick Oracle, which was much frequented by diſtant Nations. Strabo, lib. 5. Pliny.

PHOCUS, an Athenian, the Son of Phocion, was a very debauched young man, eſpecially given much to Wine; but otherwiſe generous and reſpectful towards his Father. Phocion, willing to draw him off from his Extravagancies, ſent him to Sparta, that he might learn to imitate the great Frugality of the Lacedæmonians; ſaying, It was lawfull, and alſo commendable, to profit by the Vertues of ones Enemies. Upon his Return from his Travels, he found his Father unjuſtly condemn'd as a Betrayer of his Country. And although that great Man was asked before he died, if he had any thing to leave in Command to his Son, he made anſwer, That he had nothing to recommend to him, but to forget the injuries of the Athenians. Yet Phocus failed not to ſhew his Reſentments againſt his Enemies and thoſe who had accuſed his Father. Plutarch in Apophthegm.

PHOCYLIDES, of Miletum, a City of Ionia, a Greek Poet, flouriſhed in the 60th. Olympiad, and 216th. of Rome. His Style was pure, and his way of Writing moral and inoffenſive, ſo that by reading of his Works, People might learn both to ſpeak and to live well. We have ſtill a Poet called Phocylides; but he is ſuppoſed to be ſpurious. Some believe he was a Chriſtian who lived in the firſt Ages of the Church, of which there is ſome likelihood, if you reflect upon what is found in that Book of The Truth of the Reſurrection of the Dead, which was never known by the ancient Heathens. Suidas in Lex. Voſſius de Poet. Græc. &c.

PHOENICIA, a Province of Syria, which was formerly divided into two parts. Phœnicia properly ſo called took in Berytus, Tyre, Sidon, &c. That called Phœnicia of Damaſcus or of Sabanus, had in it the Cities of Heliopolis, Damaſcus, &c. they called alſo by this Name all that Tract of Land which runs along the Mediterranean-ſea from the River Eleutherus as far as Peluſium in Egypt, but theſe bounds have ſince been retrenched. The Phœnicians were very apt for all ſorts of Exerciſes, and Men of Reſolution. It's added, they were the firſt that invented the Art of Navigation, taught the way of Sea-fights, uſed the right of Royalty, and ſubdued their Nighbours, &c. Strabo, lib. 6. Pliny, l. 5. c. 12.

PHOENIX, the Son of Agenor, ſecond King of Sidon, from whom that Country was call'd Phœnicia. He invented, as it's ſaid, Letters, or Writing Characters, and found a way to make uſe of a little Worm for to dye things of Purple-colour. Bochartus, in his Canaan, lib. 1. cap, 1. conjectures, and that very likely, that the Phœnicians have been ſo named from Bene-Anak, Sons of Anak.

PHOENIX, the Son of Amyntor, King of the Dolopes, a People of Epirus, was falſely accuſed by Clytia his Father's Concubine, that he would have forced her, and though he was innocent, Amyntor cauſed his Eyes to be put out. But it's ſaid Chiron, the Centaur, and a Learned Phyſician, cured him of his Blindneſs; and gave him the Government of young Achilles, whom he carried to the Siege of Troy. After the taking of that City, Peleus, the Father of Achilles, re-eſtabliſhed Phœnix upon the Throne, and cauſed him to be proclaimed King of the Dolopes. Apollodorus, Hygin. &c.

PHOENIX, an Arabian Bird which lives ſolitary. It is about the bigneſs of an Eagle, the Feathers about its Neck ſhining like Gold, the Body of a Purple Colour, and its Tail Blue, with Feathers reſembling Roſes. It's ſaid by ſome to live 340 years, by others 600, and by a third ſort, 1460. But the moſt common Opinion is, that it lives but 500 years. When its Death approaches, it builds its ſelf a Neſt, in which having ſpent its Strength, a young one ariſes; which as ſoon as grown up, takes care to bury the old one in a certain Place called The Altar of the Sun, making an Experiment of its Strength before by trying whether it can carry a bundle of Myrrhe of equal Weight with the old one. The Ancients write wonderful things of this Bird And Tertullian and others of the primitive Fathers draw Arguments thence to prove the Reſurrection. However, the Hiſtory of the Phœnix is very much queſtioned by ſome People. Solinus, Marcellus, Donatus.

PHORBAS, the Sixth King of Argos, ſucceeded Criaſis, Anno Mundi, 2466, and reigned 35 years. He delivered the Iſland of Rhodes from a great multitude of Serpents. Euſebius in Chron.

PHORCYS, King of Sardinia, was beaten in a Sea-fight by Atlas, and being caſt away, his Corpſe could not be found; from whence the Poets took occaſion to Romance, that he was preferr'd to the Condition of a Sea-God, and was afterwards Father of the Gorgons. Ovid. Varro, &c.

PHORMION, an Athenian General, ſucceeding in that Command to Callias, in the LXXXVIIth. Olympiad, and the 322d. of Rome. He diſtinguiſh'd himſelf handſomely upon ſeveral Occaſions in the Peloponneſian War, and particularly in the Victory which he gained over the Lacedæmonian Fleet, in the 325th. Year of Rome. Diodor. Sic. lib. 12. Thucid. lib. 2.

PHORMIS, or Phormus, of Syracuſe, a Greek Poet, was Director of the Studies of Gelo, Tyrant of Sicily. He compoſed ſeveral Comedies, and introduced a ſort of new Dreſs upon the Theatre. Phormis lived in the 72d. Olympiad, and 264th. of Rome. Ariſt. de Arte Poet. Lilio Giraldi & Voſſius de Poet.

PHORONEUS, Second King of Argos, ſucceeded his Father Inachus about the year of the World 2247, and reigned Sixty years, until 2307, when Apis ſucceeded him. Spartus, the Son of Phoroneus, built the City of Sparta. Euſeb. in Chron. Salian. in Ann.

PHOSPHORUS, a Mineral, or other artificial Matter which caſts an extraordinary Light in the Night, or in any dark place, coming from φῶς, Light, and φέρω, to carry. There are ſome which ſhine of themſelves, and others that being expoſed to the Sun or Fire imbibe and attract the Light to them, which they throw out in the Night. The Inventor of the moſt admirable Phoſphorus, was Fernelius, Phyſician to K. Henry II. of France. He ſhewed to his Majeſty and all the Court, then at Boulogne, an artificial Stone that caſt a great Light in the dark. He pretended it came from the Indies, that it might be the more eſteemed; becauſe, as he ſaid himſelf, Rarity makes things more valuable. Farnel died in his Journey from Calis, and had not time to make publick the Compoſition of that Stone. But Artiſts found out ſome years after ſeveral ſorts of Phoſphorus's, the principal whereof are theſe; The Phoſphorus made of Nitrous Plaiſter at Bolonia in Italy, was invented by Poterius, an excellent Chymiſt; the Smaragdine Phoſphorus is made of a Mineral, of the Colour of an Emerald; this Mineral being reduced into powder, and ſteeped in common Water, becomes very luminous. And if one dip in a Pencil, and make Characters upon a Copper-plate, and ſet it upon a Chafing-diſh full of Fire, in a dark room, the Characters will glitter like Stars. The Hermetick Phoſphorus of Baldwin, which ſome call, The Loadſtone of the Light, being put up in a Bottle of Water, and expoſed to the Sun or Fire, or at leaſt to very clear Air, attracts the Light, which it ſends forth in the dark afterwards. The Phoſphorus of Benjamin Mooler, of Hamburg, is a porous Body, made of the Chalk of Briancon, and watered with the Spirit of Nitre; it drinks in the Light, of the Sun, and ſends it forth afterwards in dark places; but this Phoſphorus laſts not above three weeks. The ſhining Phoſphorus of Daniel Kraff is extracted from Urine; this able Chymiſt, having obſerv'd, that in the dark ſome Perſons made luminous, or ſhining Water, extracted matter from it whereof he made his Phoſphorus; they put it in a Glaſs-bottle filled with ordinary Water, and well corked; where this dry Phoſphorus caſts its Light preſently upon the ſhaking of the Vial; if it be not full of Water, in jogging of it, the Phoſphorus which ſticks to the bottom, appears all ſhining and tranſparent in that Vacuum. Being taken out of the Vial, it is ſeen to ſmoak; and if you write Letters upon Paper or your Hand therewith, they will ſhine very bright. The Writing is not to be ſeen in the day-time; but glitters extremely in the dark. But if this Phoſphorus be handled roughly, or rubbed upon any Stuff, it ſpends it ſelf in Flame, and flies in Pieces, being a Fire as ſubtil and piercing as that of Thunder. If it be put in a Vial full of corroſive Waters, and ſhaken in the Sun, it ſhines like Lightning. And not long ſince, a famous Apothecary, and a great Mathematician, was hurt therewith. There are alſo liquid Phoſphorus's, as that of Brandius of Hamburg, which is made of black Salt, appearing in the day time like a whitiſh Cloud, and in the night and dark very ſhining. When the Vial is opened it evaporates, and throws out Flame with a little Smoak. If this liquor be rubbed on the Face, Hands or Cloaths, they will appear all of a Fire, and yet receive no hurt. Reyhier affirms, That keeping ſome drops of it in his Hand cloſe ſhut for the ſpace of half an hour, and then opening it, it appeared all on Fire. Chymiſts ſay, That Gold diſſolved according to Art, loſes nothing of its Colour and becomes ſo admirable a Phoſphorus, that one may eaſily read and write in the night-time by the Light of it. Fernel. de Abditis rerum cauſis, Schroderi Pharmacopæia Medico-Chymica, Reyhier Matheſis Moſaica. Comiers Traitè des Phoſphorus.

PHOTINUS, a Grand Heretick, chief of the Photinians, or Scotinians, was Biſhop of Sirmich; he had both Wit, Learning and Eloquence; writ well, ſpoke with Force and a good Grace; and acquired the eſteen of Men of Worth; ſo that he was Preferr'd to the See of Sirmich with extraordinary Applauſe. The firſt years of his Adminiſtration were very regular; but all on a ſudden he changed; and after having taught his People to know the true God, ſaith Vincentius Lirinenſis, he propoſed to them ſtrange Gods, that is, attempted to corrupt them by his deteſtable Doctrine. For not contenting himſelf to renew the Errors of Sabellius, Paulus Samoſatenus, Cerinthus, and Ebion, he added to their Impieties, That Jeſus Chriſt was not only mere Man, but begun to be the Chriſt when the Holy Ghoſt deſcended upon him in Jordan. Theſe Erroneous Doctrines were condemned in ſeveral Aſſemblies. And the Arians themſelves, in a Synod held at Sirmich in 357, condemned them a-new. Photinus, who was ſummoned thither, offer'd to defend them in oppoſition to Baſil of Ancyra. This Obſtinacy was the occaſion of his being put out of his See. St. Jerom ſaith, he had writ a Book againſt the Gentiles, and ſeveral other Treatiſes. St. Jorom de Script. Eccl. Epiph. Hær. 73. Theodoret, &c.

PHOTIUS, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, was Nobly Deſcended, rich, a good Stateſman, and ſo able and knowing, that he paſs'd for one of the fineſt genius's of his time. His Merit had raiſed him to the Dignity of Principal Secretary of State, but his Ambition carried him yet higher; and as he was Siſters-ſon to Taraſius, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, he believed himſelf not unworthy of that Dignity. And, in ſhort, Bardas having driven Ignatius from the See of the Imperial City, Photius was made and conſecrated by Gregory Asbeſtus, Biſhop of Syracuſe Decemb. 25. 858. or, according to others, at the beginning of 859. And that he might maintain himſelf in this Dignity, in 861 he cauſed Ignatius to be Condemned in an Aſſembly of three hundred and Twenty Biſhops; where were Zachary and Rodoaldus, Legates to Pope Nicholas I. This Pope excommunicated Photius and his Adherents, not ſparing his own Legates, being mightily irritated at their proceedings, wherewith the Patriarch was ſo netled that in a ſecond Council he Anathematized that Pope. But Baſilius of Macedon coming to the Empire upon the Death of Michael the Third, expelled Photius, and re-eſtabliſhed Ignatius. A Council celebrated in 869 depoſed him again, and thundred an Anathema againſt him. Ignatius afterwards dying in 878, Photius acted his part ſo well that he re-eſtabliſhed himſelf in the favour of Baſilius, and in the See of Conſtantinople. Nicetas ſaith, he bethought of a Stratagem which had the Succeſs he deſired. He compoſed a falſe Genealogy of that Prince, deriving him from Tiridates, King of Armenia, and brought it down from that King to Baſilius whom he deſcribed, much as he was, giving him the Name of Beclas, compoſed of the firſt Letter of his own Name, of that of Eudoxia, and his four Sons, Conſtantine, Leo, Alexander, and Stephen. He writ that Genealogy in Alexandrian Characters, upon old Paper, and got it placed among the choiceſt Books by the means of Theophanes, who was Library-keeper and his Friend, and who ſhewed it to Baſilius, as the rareſt thing in his Library; telling him withal, That Photius was the onely Perſon that could explain it. Whereupon he ſent for him, and he pleaſed the Emperor ſo well with that Genealogy, that he found no great difficulty to be reſtored to the Patriarchal Chair of Conſtantinople. He aſſembled a Synod, where all that was done againſt him was revoked. But Leo the Philoſopher, Son and Succeſſor to the ſame Baſilius, expelled him in 886. It's not known what year he died in. Photius contributed much to the Advancement of Learning. We have his Bibliotheca, which F. Andrew Schottus, hath rendered into very ill Latin. This Work contains an Examen of two hundred and eighty Authors, whereof he relates the moſt conſiderable parts. He undertook it at the deſire of his Brother Taraſus, during a Journey he made for the Emperor into Aſſyria, where he was conſtrained to ſtay for ſome time. We have alſo 248 Epiſtles of his, the Nomo-canon, under Fourteen Titles. An Abridgment of the Acts of ſeveral General Councils, &c. The Life of Photius is differently repreſented by good Authors, of which the Reader may take this following Account. He was, as 'tis ſaid already, of Noble Extraction, and General Accompliſhments, and put in the higheſt Poſts of Government, as ſoon as his Age was capable of 'em, being Captain of the Emperor's Guards, firſt Secretary of State, and Princeps Senatus, or firſt Senator, being likewiſe the Emperor's Embaſſador in Aſſyria. In the Year 858, Ignatius having, either out of Choice or Fear, Abdicated his See, by a Formal Inſtrument of Reſignation, Photius, upon the ſcore of his Merit, was, by the Approbation both of the Court and Clergy, preferr'd to that Patriarchate, though much againſt his own Inclination, as appears, not only from his Epiſtles, but likewiſe from the Account of Michael the Monk, who was otherwiſe no Friend to this Patriarch. Notwithſtanding, after his Promotion, the Biſhops of Ignatius's Party, meeting in a Body in the Church of S. Irene, condemn'd Photius and his Adherents, who ſoon after return'd the Cenſure upon them; and in the Year 861, Ignatius was ſolemnly depos'd by a Council of 318 Biſhops, held at Conſtantinople, which Depoſition was ſign'd by the Pope's Two Legates, though the Pope afterwards, refus'd to ratifie the Sentence, and gave Photius a hard Character. 'Tis thought that Nicholas, who then held the Chair at Rome, fell into a Miſunderſtanding with Photius, upon the Account of the Bulgarians, who upon their Converſion, having ſubmitted themſelves to the See of Conſtantinople, diſguſted the Pope, who endeavour'd to draw that Nation under the Roman Patriarchate. In the Year 867, Baſilius Macedo was made Emperor, who being much diſſatisfy'd with Photius, becauſe that Patriarch had both Reprov'd and Excommunicated him for the Murther of Michael the late Emperor. Theſe Cenſures ſticking in the New Emperor's Stomach, puſh'd him to a Revenge, which he executed, in diſpoſſeſſing Photius; and in the Year 869, Photius was Cenſur'd and Depos'd, by a Synod of one hundred and two Biſhops, which goes in the Church of Rome for the Eighth General Council; and to make the Sentence more remarkable and ſolemn, they mix'd the conſecrated Wine of the Euchariſt with the Ink with which they ſign'd the Depoſition; upon this Photius was immediately Baniſh'd, and had neither Friends nor Fortune, nor ſo much as his Library left him to entertain and ſupport him: At laſt, the Emperor Baſilius, remembring the Friendſhip which had been formerly between 'em, began to be reconcil'd; and the Death of Ignatius happening ſoon after, Reſtor'd him to his See in the Year 878; and moreover made up the Difference between Pope John VIII. and Photius, inſomuch that the Pope communicated with Photius, and revers'd all the Decrees publiſh'd againſt him and his Party; and to perfect the Correſpondence, he diſpatched two Legates to Conſtantinople, who in the Year 879, aſſiſted in a Council there, of 373 Biſhops. In this Synod, every thing paſs'd in favour of Photius. Here he was Univerſally acknowledg'd Lawful Patriarch; all Canons and Cenſures to the contrary being declar'd void; a Canon being alſo made, that all Perſons Cenſur'd by Pope John, ſhould lie under the ſame Diſadvantage with Photius, and that thoſe whom Photius had excluded from Church Communion, ſhould be reciprocally Excommunicated by the Pope. This Synod only is, by the Greek Church, own'd for the eighth General Council. Afterwards, in the Year 886, Photius being wrongfully accus'd of a Conſpiracy againſt the Perſon of Leo, Son to the Emperor Baſilius, was Baniſh'd to the Monaſtery of the Harmoniani, where he died ſoon after. As to his Character, he was a Perſon of prodigious Reading, and the greateſt Scholar, not only of his own, but almoſt of any other Age; and whoever looks into his Bibliotheca, will ſoon perceive, that he underſtood Hiſtory, Philology, and Critical Learning in Perfection. It appears likewiſe from his other Writings, that he was an Able Lawyer, and a profound Stateſman, and from his Epiſtles (to ſpeak ſomewhat particularly) we may learn, that he had made himſelf a Maſter of Philoſophy, Phyſick, Mathematicks, and Divinity. *Phot. PHRAATES, King of Parthia. Francis Sanſovin following Trogus Pompeius and Juſtin, will have four of this Name. And Jerom Bardius, of Florence, remarks but two; the laſt, being the Son of Orodes, was killed by his Son Phraatacus, whom he had by his Concubine. It's he that detained Demetrius IId. called Nicanor, King of Syria, in Cuſtody; and made him marry his Daughter Rhodoguna. He alſo reſtored to the Romans the Slaves and Enſigns taken from Craſſus. Joſeph. l. 8. Antig. l. 3. Juſtin. l. 42. Sanſovin l. 2. Chron. &c.

PHRANZA (George) a Greek Hiſtorian, was Maſter of the Wardrobe to the Emperors of Conſtantinople, and lived in the time that the Turks took that City, in 1453. At the deſire of ſome Perſons of Corfu he compoſed a Chronicle of all that paſs'd moſt remarkable in his time; ſo that he relates almoſt nothing but what he himſelf could teſtifie. This Piece ended in 1461, as he obſerves in the latter Part thereof. Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc. l. 2. c. 30. Leo Allatius, &c

PHRAORTES, King of the Medes, ſucceeded to Dejoces, call'd Arſaces, he Reign'd 22 Years, and was kill'd in the 119th. Year of Rome, at the Seige of Nineve, leaving the Crown to his Son Cyaxares. Herodot. Lib. 1. Diod. Sic.

PHRITIGERNUS, King of the Weſtern Goths, in the fourth Age. He made War with the Eaſtern Goths, who had Athalaricus's Son for their King; and not being able to reſiſt them, had recourſe to the Protection of Valens, by the means of Ulphilus, Biſhop of that Nation, who was an Arian, but a Man of Underſtanding, having invented their Characters, and tranſlated the Bible into their Language. Phritigernus, that he might the more eaſily obtain what he deſired, embraced Arianiſm, wherein he was followed by the greateſt part of his Subjects Ammian. Marcellinus lib. 18. S. Jerom in Chron

PHRYGIA, a Province of Aſia Minor, divided into the Greater and Leſſer. The Greater called at this day Germian, and heretofore Pacatiana, lies between Bithynia, Galatia, Pamphylia, Lydia and Myſia. Its Cities were Synnada, Laodicea and Hierapolis. Little Phrygia, now called Sarcum, and formerly Troas, hath the Rivers Scamander, Xanthus and Simois, and the City of Troy, famous in the Writings of the Ancients. Others ſeparate Troas from Little Phrygia, and call it Helleſpontiaca, becauſe it lay towards the Helleſpont, and the Ægæan-ſea. Pliny, Strabo, Ptolemy, &c.

PHRYGION (Paul Conſtantine) a Proteſtant Miniſter, was Native of Schleſtat, and Miniſter at Bale, and afterwards at Tubinga, were he died Aug. 1. in the Year 1543. He writ a Chronology, and Commented upon Exodus, Leviticus, and Micah. Pantaleon l. 3. Proſopogr. Sleidan in Comment. Geſner, &c.

PHRYNE, a Courteſan, who offered at her own Charges to rebuild the Walls of Thebes, provided this Inſcription were put on them, Alexander diruit, ſed Amica Phryne refecit. There was another of this Name ſurnamed the Sifter, becauſe ſhe robbed her Lovers. Quinctilian ſpeaks of another of Athens, who was accuſed of Impiety; but her Advocate got her cleared by making her ſhew her Face to the Judges. Athenæus l. 13.

PHRYNICUS, an Arabian, was an Orator, lived in the Reign of the Emperors Antoninus and Commodus, and writ Apparatus Oratoris, in 36 Books, according to PhotiusBib. Cod. 158, in 47, according to the opinion of Suidas in Lex. and in 74, as others would have it.

PHRYXUS, Son of Athamas, and Nephele, went from Greece to Colchos by Sea, upon a Sheep which had a Golden-Fleece, the which he left at Colchos, and the Argonauts afterward conquered it. This is what the Poets ſay. But the truth is, Phryxus, not being able to agree with his Mother-in-law Ino, took his Father's Treaſure, and put himſelf a board a Veſſel called The Sheep, and being arrived at Colchos, he left his Wealth there. The Mythology to dilate upon it, ſtands thus; Phryxus, Son to Athamas, King of Thebes, above-mention'd, liv'd ſome time at Cretheus, his Uncle's Court, who was King of Iolchos in Theſſaly, where Demodice, Cretheus's Queen, ſolicited him to commit Inceſt with her, and upon his Refuſal, accus'd him of an Attempt upon her Honour. Cretheus, giving Credit to this Slander, reſolv'd to put his Nephew to Death, but before the Execution, the Oracle was conſulted about an Expedient to remove a Famine with which the Realm of Iolchos was much diſtreſs'd. The Anſwer of the Oracle was, That there was no way of Pacifying the Gods, but by the Death of two Princes. Now there being none of this Quality at Court but Phryxus and his Siſter Helle, they were both immediately mark'd out for Sacrifice, and being juſt ready to have their Throats cut, 'tis ſaid, a Cloud riſe up in the middle of the Temple, from which there ſtarted out a Ram, who took 'em both up into the Air, and carry'd 'em by Sea to Colchos; but the Princeſs, being frighted with the Noiſe of the Waves, ſlipt her hold, and tumbl'd into the Sea, call'd from her Name, the Helleſpont; but Phryxus arriv'd ſafe at Colchos, where he ſacrificed this Ram to Jupiter, and hung up his Golden Fleece, in a Grove conſecrated to Mars. Ovid. l. 7. Metam. Apollodorus, Hygin. &c.

PHUL, King of Nineveh, or, according to others, Governour of Aſſyria, began to reign in the Year of the World 3238. Mahanem, King of Iſrael, made a League with him, and purchaſed his Friendſhip by many conſiderable Preſents. He died in 3285. and was ſucceeded by Tiglath-Pileſer. Genebrard. in Chron. Torniel. in Annal.

PHUT, one of the Sons of Cham, peopled Libya, and called thoſe People Phutians. Joſephus ſaith, there was in his time a River in Mauritania of this Name, being that which the Moderns call Tenſiſt, Gen. 10. Joſeph. l. 1. c. 6.

PHYLACTERIES, is a Greek word, and ſignifies, that which preſerves or keeps. In the Goſpel of S. Matthew, the Phylacteries, according to the Expoſition of S. Chryſoſtome Jerom, and ſeveral other Interpreters, were taken for Pieces of Parchment, whereon were written the Commandments of the Law, and that the Scribes and Phariſees carried them about their Heads and Arms, to the end they might have the Law of God before their Eyes and in continual remembrance. But by Phylacteries is more commonly meant Preſervatives, or ſuperſtitious Remedies, faſtned to the Neck, Arms, Hands, or ſome other part of the Body, for the driving away of certain Diſeaſes, or diverting certain Accidents. Among this number may be plac'd the Taliſmans, Characters, enchanted Rings, and ſeveral other ſorts of Amulets. Thoſe that would be throughly informed of theſe ſuperſtitious Practices, may read the Learned Treatiſe of Superſtition written by M. Theirs Dr. of the Sorbonne. Some Eccleſiaſtical Authors give the Name of Phylacteries to thoſe Shrines in which the Reliques of Saints were preſerved. A certain Chaldæan Philoſopher named Julian, one of the moſt famous Magicians of his time, wrote four Books concerning Dæmons, wherein he ſpeaks of Phylacteries. The Emperor Caracalla, according to Spartian, ordered, that all thoſe ſhould be puniſhed who made uſe of ſuch Remedies. And the Councils and Fathers of the Church have condemned thoſe things under the Names of Phylacteries and Ligatures, becauſe they were tied to the Neck, Arm, or ſome other part of the Body. Amongſt Phylacteries are reckoned Taliſmans, Characters, and Enchanted Rings, and many other Superſtitious Practices. The Taliſmans are ſpoke of under their proper Head, Characters are certain Letters Engraven or Written in Hebrew, Samaritan, Arabian, Greek or Latin Characters, or ſome other unknown Figures, whereof the Superſtitious make uſe, for diſpatching great Journies in a little time, to charm and prevent the effects of Fire-Arms. There are Rings to which they aſcribe a Power to preſerve from Sickneſs and Dangers, to give Succeſs in Affairs, procure Love, and diſcover Secrets. Of this ſort was Gyges's Ring, which rendred him inviſible; thoſe given by the Kings of England deſcended of the Houſe of Anjou, againſt the Falling-ſickneſs; thoſe uſed by Eleazer the Jew, to chaſe away the Devil; that made uſe of by the Magician Thebith; that made of the firſt Piece of Gold offered on Holy-Friday at Adoration of the Sacrament, to cure Trembling and the Dead-palſie, &c. according to Cardinal Cajetan. Tatian, Diſciple of St. Juſtin Martyr, ſpeaks of Bones, Herbs and Roots, ſowed up in Leather, for Preſervatives; but declares that their operation was by the Power of the Devil. The Medal of Alexander the Great was highly eſteemed for this reaſon by the Family of the Macrini, who uſurped the Empire in the time of Valerian and Galienus, as alſo by the People of Antioch, the Women being accuſtomed to wear them in their Head-dreſſes, for which they are reproved by S. Chryſoſtom. There are alſo little Briefs, Pieces of Paper, &c. containing certain Words, much uſed by thoſe of Japan, and ſold to People at the Point of Death, to prevent their being tormented by Evil Spirits; of this nature are Charms in Proſe or Verſe to produce wonderful or ſupernatural Effects, curing Diſtempers, &c. But all theſe things are condemned by Councils and Fathers of the Church, as Inventions of the Devil, to obtain a ſort of Worſhip from Men, either by an expreſs or tacit Compact. Thiers Traite des Superſtitions.

PHYLLIS, Daughter to Lycurgus King of Thrace in Greece, who having entertained Demophoon, the Son of Theſeus, in his return from the Trojan War, granted him the moſt intimate Favours, upon condition he would return to marry her as ſoon as he ſhould ſet ſome Affairs in order he had to do in his own Country; but ſeeing that her Lover returned not to her at the time agreed upon, inſtead of attributing his Delay to Affairs that might come unexpectedly upon him, ſhe believed it was an Effect of his Slighting of her. And that ſhe might put an end to the Troubles her Love cauſed her, ſhe went to Hang her ſelf in Deſpair. The Fable ſays, That the Gods having Compaſſion upon this Princeſs, changed her into an Almond-tree that had no Leaves upon it; but that Demophoon having returned, and coming to underſtand what was befallen to his Miſtreſs, could not forbear going to embrace the Tree into which ſhe had been metamorphoſed; which this Lover being ſenſible of, put forth Leaves, which the Greeks have ſince called φύλλα, according to her Name, inſtead of πέταλα, the Name whereby they were formerly called. Ovid. Epiſt. 2.

PHYNTAS, King of Meſſene, was aſſaſſinated by Ariſtomenus, the Lacedæmonian, upon account of an Enmity that aroſe between the Meſſenians and the Lacedæmonians; theſe latter, deſirous to make themſelves Maſters of the fertile Country of the Meſſenians, reſolved to ſend a great Number of young Men, clad in Womens Cloaths, with Poniards hid under their Garments, to kill the moſt conſiderable of that People in their Temple. The Meſſenians being informed of this evil Deſign, prevented their ſecret Enemies; and being one day aſſembled together with them in the Temple of Diana, there to offer Sacrifice, they fell upon them, and made great ſlaughter of them, killing alſo the King of Sparta himſelf, called Telephus, and raviſhed all the Lacedæmonian Maids; for which the Lacedæmonians were afterwards revenged, by cauſing their King Phyntas to be aſſaſſinated. Pauſ. in Meſſene.

PIALI, Baſha, had a very extraordinary Fortune. Solyman II. returning glorioully from the Siege of Belgrade in 1521, found him in ſwadling Clouts expoſed upon a Plough-ſhare, where his Mother, frightned with the March of the Army, had left him. That Prince, who in his way diverted himſelf with hunting, cauſed this Infant to be taken up, as ready to be devoured by his Dogs, and ordered he ſhould be carried to Conſtantinople, where he was bred up carefully in the Seraglio. His good Qualities put him ſo much in the Grand Signior's Favour, that he gave him the Daughter of his Son Selim to Wife. And Piali, after having commanded Solyman's Armies by Land, was made Baſha of the Seas, and commanded the Ottoman Fleet. He ſailed before Famaguſta, after the taking of Nicoſia in the Iſle of Cyprus, believing he might haſten the Surrender of the City, as being terrified to ſee it ſelf attacked both by Sea and Land. But Information was given while he ſailed, That the Chriſtians came with full Sails to relieve Famaguſta. This ſurprizing News obliged him to put his Slaves and Booty with all haſt aſhore; and that debarking put all his Soldiers into a diſorder; but as ſoon as they were ſettled again, he prepared for a Battle, while Muſtapha on his part kept all the Land-Forces in a readineſs to engage, in caſe the Fleets fell to it. But in a little time after he came to underſtand, that the Chriſtians were withdrawn into Candia; whereupon Piali preparing to purſue the Chriſtian Army with an hundred choice Gallies, was ſtopped by contrary Winds, which drove him back to the Port. He afterwards ſailed for Conſtantinople, where the Grand Signior highly blamed his Conduct, as if he had failed through his Negligence to defeat all the Chriſtians, and ſubſtituted the Baſha Pertu in his Place. Gratiani Hiſt. de Cypr.

PIC, an Iſland in the Atlanick-ſea, being one of the Terceres, near unto that of S. George, belonging to the Portugueſe, and which they call Ilha de Pico. There are but a few Villages in it, and a Mountain of the ſame Name, and another in the Iſland of Teneriffe, one of the Canaries.

PIC, or Picus, firſt King of the Aborigines of Italy, ſucceeded his Father Saturn, about Ann. Mun 2757. They allow him to have reigned thirty ſix years, and he had Faunus for his Succeſſor. Others ſpeak of another Picus, King of the Latins, long before this ſame. And 'tis pretended it was he that married, according to Ovid, Canens, the Daughter of Janus and Venilia, and that he reigned fifty ſeven Years. Dion Halicarnaſſus, lib. 1. Hiſt. Rom. Aurelius Victor de Orig. Gent. Rom

PICARDS, the Name of a Sect, who improv'd the Miſtakes of the Adamites to the Extravagance of going Naked. This Sect ſprung up in the beginning of the Fifteenth Century, and took its Name from one Picard, who ſet it a foot. This Man travell'd from Flanders into Germany, where 'tis ſaid, he deceiv'd a great many People by his Impoſtures. He ordered all his Proſelites to go Naked, which was puſhing the Frenzy farther than was Practis'd by the Adamites mention'd by Epiphanius, who only laid aſide the uſe of their Cloaths in their Meetings. Picard call'd himſelf the Son of God, and pretended, He was ſent into the World, as a new Adam, by his Father, to refreſh the Notion, and reſtore the Practice of the Law of Nature, which he ſaid conſiſted principally in two things; viz. The Community of Women, and going ſtark Naked. He quartered in an Iſland on the River Luſmick, ſeven Leagues from Thabor, where the famous Ziſca was poſted, and forty of Picard's Followers, having outrag'd the Neighbourhood, drew the Forces of this General upon them; for, as I ſaid before, forty of theſe Adamites going out in a Party, Plunder'd ſeveral Houſes in the Country, and kill'd about Two hundred Perſons; whereupon Ziſca attack'd their Iſland, and having made himſelf Maſter of it, cut all the Picards to Pieces, excepting two Perſons, whom he ſpar'd on purpoſe to be fully inform'd in their Religion. One of their principal Tenents was, That their Party were the only Free People in Nature, all other Men being Slaves, and eſpecially thoſe who wore any Cloaths upon the ſcore of Modeſty. 'Tis ſaid, That ſome of the Anabaptiſts were trying to revive the Picards Extravagance of going Naked. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor. &c.

PICARDY, a Province of France, part of the ancient Belgium. It's certain its Name is New, and yet we have no true knowledge of its Original. This Province is now one of the twelve Governments of the Kingdom, having Champaign to the Eaſt of it, the Iſle of France to the South, that part of the Ocean which is called the Manch or the Chanel and Normandy to the Weſt; and to the North Flanders, Hainault and Cambreſis. All Picardy may be divided into the higher, middle, and lower. The higher lies upon the Oyſe, the middle upon the Somme, and the lower all along the Sea ſide. But now it's divided into ſeven parts, as the Boulonois, Ponthieu, Santerre, Vermandois, Tierache, Amienois, and the conquered Countries. To it alſo belonged Beauvoiſis, Noyonois, Laonois, and Valois, which now appertain to the Government of the Iſle of France. Amiens is its Capital City; the others are Abbeville, Ardres, Bullen, Calais, La Cadelle, Le Catelet, Corbie, Dourlens, St. Quintin, La Fere, Guiſe, Ham, Montreville, Peronne, Roye, Mondidier, Rue, &c. Picardy is very fertil in Corn and Fruits, but has no Wine. It's watered with ſeveral Rivers, the chief of which are the Somme, the Oyſe, the Authie, the Canche, &c. In it live a great many ancient Noble Families, good Soldiers, and ſeveral Learned Men. Its Courts of Juſtice are in the nature of Bailiwicks and Preſidentſhips which are in the Juriſdiction of the Parliament of Paris. Its Cities are governed by Mayors and Aldermen. The Biſhopricks have the Arch-biſhop of Rheims for their Metropolitan. And as for the Finances, there are the Generalities of Amiens and Soiſſons. Beſides the general Government of the Province, there are reckoned in it eighteen particular Governments. Picardy has never been alienated from the Crown; but Bullen and Ponthieu have had their particular Counts. Giles de Brie Hiſt. des Comt. du Perche & de Ponthieu.

PICCOLOMINI, a Family originally of Rome, ſettled in the Thirteenth Age at Sienna, where it had a ſhare in the Government of the Republick. Sylvio Piccolomini left a Poſthumous Son of his own name, who married Victoria Fortiguerra, by whom he had eighteen Children, whereof there ſurvived but one Son and two Daughters; the Son called Æneas Sylvio Bartholomew Piccolomini, was Pope under the name of Pius II. Laodamia Piccolomini, one of the Daughters, married Nannes Podeſchini, and was Mother to Francis, a Cardinal, Archbiſhop of Sienna, and afterwards Pope by the Name of Pius III. From this Family came other great Men, as Antony Piccolomini firſt Archbiſhop of Sienna that died about the year 1459 or 60. Alexander Piccolomini, a Philoſopher, Mathematician, Orator and Poet, who lived in the Sixteenth Century. He writ ſeveral things, as Moral Philoſophy; la Teorica de Pianetti. L'Inſtitutione dell Huomo, &c.

PICENI, an ancient People of Italy, where is now the Marquiſate of Ancona, with the Cities of Aſcoli, Ancona, Oſimo, &c. but the Picenians near the Lucanians were in the Kingdom of Naples. Ancient Authors ſpeak very often both of the one and the other: Theſe laſt comprehended part of the Hither Principality, now ſo called; the Cities are Amalfi, Capri, Maſſa di Sorrento, Salerno, Nocera de Pagani, Sano, Sorrento Minori, Ravello, &c. All theſe People were ſubdued by the Romans about the 480th year after the building of their City.

PICHARDO, ſurnamed Vinueſa (Antony) a Native of Segovia and Judge in Spain, died in 1631, ag'd 63. He had Read at Salamanca and elſewhere, and writ divers things, as Commen. 4°, Inſtitutionum Juſtiniani, Lib. Pract. Inſtitutiones; De Moræ Commiſſione & Emendatione; De Stipulationibus Judicialibus; De Nobilitatis inter virum & uxorem communicatione, &c. Nicholas Antonio Bibl. Script. Hiſp.

PICIGHITOMA, Piceleo, a City of Italy in the Milaneſe upon the River Adda. It is a very ſtrong place between Cremona and Lodi; the Cittadel was built by Philip-Maria Viſconti, Duke of Milan. It was in this place that Francis I, King of France, was detained Priſoner, after having been taken at the Battle of Pavia by the Army of the Emperor Charles V. Fel. Oſius Hiſt. rer. Laudenſ.

PICKERING, a Market-Town of Pickering Wapentake in the Eaſt Riding of Yorkſhire, ſituate upon a ſmall River falling into the Derwent, not far from the Sea: 170 miles from London.

PICKFORD, a place in Shropſhire, noted for a Well in a Private Man's Yard, upon which floats a thick ſcum of liquid Bitumen, which being taken off one day, the like will come again upon it the next day.

PICPUSSA, a little Village near unto Paris, joined now to the Suburbs of S. Antony. The reformed Monks of the third Order of S. Francis ſett'ed there in 1600, and that Convent is the firſt of that Inſtitution, wherefore they are called Picpuſſians throughout all France, tho' their name is that of the Fathers or Brethren of Penitence of the third Order of S. Francis. Le Maire Paris ancien & Noveau.

PICTOR (George) a German Phyſician, liv'd in the XVIth. Century, to the Year 1569. He was much in Vogue for his Learning, and wrote, De Herbarum Naturis. De variis Morborum Remediis. De Thermarum virtutibus. De Rebus non Naturalibus, &c. Vander Linden de Script. med. Melchior Adam, &c.

PICTS, a Scythian or German Colony, who landed in Scotland much about the time that the Scots begun to ſeize upon the Abudæ or Weſtern Iſles for want of room in Ireland. Upon their arrival, they ſent Embaſſadors to the Scots, deſiring ſome Land to inhabit; alledging, that they were originally the ſame people, as might appear both by their Language and Cuſtoms; the Scots, anſwered, That they had no room to ſpare, but they would aſſiſt them to poſſeſs themſelves of Albion, the neighbouring Iſland, which was large and thinly inhabited by people at variance among themſelves, and having performed it accordingly, they deſired Wives from the Scots, becauſe they had no Women with them, which was alſo granted, and ſo they became one people. The Scots, in the mean time, got footing with them, and the Picts being afraid that they would overtop them, begun to oppoſe their coming in any greater numbers into Britain, ſo that it broke out into a War, which the Britains fomented, but the Scottiſh Women, married to the Picts, got the matter taken up, ſo that they thenceforth liv'd as two diſtinct Nations; the Scots, in the Highlands and the Iſles, and the Picts in that now called the Lawlands: The latter were ſo intent upon having the Scots expell'd, that they united with the Britains and Romans againſt them, and drove them from Britain; ſo that the Iriſh Scots having alſo ſubmitted to the Romans, the Albion Scots were confin'd to the Iſles, and moſt of the remaining Nobility went to ſeek their Fortune in Scandinavia, now Sweden, Denmark and Norway. The Picts at length ſmarting under the Roman Yoak, and being depriv'd of the Aſſiſtance of the Scots, bethought themſelves of intreating them to return that they might ſtrengthen them againſt the common Enemy: Whereupon the Scots Iſlanders, and the choice of their Nobility, under the Conduct of Fergus II. from Scandinavia, ſet foot again upon the Iſland, and recovered their ancient Poſſeſſions by degrees, which occaſions a miſtake amongſt ſome Hiſtorians, eſpecially the Engliſh, as if this were the firſt time that the Scots came into Britain about the 404 year of Chriſt, whereas this Fergus was their 40th King. After this the Picts and they liv'd in Amity for ſome time, but falling to War again, after many Battles with various ſucceſs, by which the Scots had well nigh been expell'd Albion a ſecond time, the Picts were at laſt totally broke, and their Kingdom ſeiz'd by the Scots in Kenneth II's. Reign, about 854, who extended his limits as far as Newcaſtle upon Tine; and thus the Picts were exterminated by a War which had its riſe from ſome of their Nobilities having ſtollen a Dog which belong'd to the King of Scots. There are yet divers places in Scotland which preſerve the Memory of the Picts, as Pictland-hills, and Pictland-firth commonly called Pentland-hills and Pentland-firth, but the reaſon of their being called Picts is generally thought to have been their painting themſelves to appear terrible in Battle. Buchan.

PICTS WALL, Lat. Vallum Hadriani, Murus Picticus, a famous Wall in Northumberland, which reach'd from New-Caſtle upon Tine to Carliſle in Cumberland, the ſpace of 80 miles, ſo that it extended almoſt from Sea to Sea, that is, from the German Sea on the Eaſt to the Iriſh Sea on the Weſt. It was eight Foot thick and twelve high, aſcending and deſcending over ſeveral craggy Hills, with Battlements all along, and Towers at a convenient diſtance from each other, in which Soldiers were kept for its defence. This Wall was built by the Romans, when poſſeſſed of this part of Britain, to defend it from the incurſions of the Scots and Picts, from whom it took the denomination of Picts Wall; ſome Tracts whereof, with Roman Inſcriptions are to be ſeen to this day in ſeveral places; and there is a Town on the very Ruines of it, called Wall-Town, towards Cumberland, particularly memorable, for that Segbert, King of the Eaſt Saxons was there baptized into the Chriſtian Faith by the hands of Paulinus. This Wall was firſt made only of Turf, ſupported by Stakes, and ſtrengthened by Paliſado's. Severus the Emperor repair'd it, and made it much ſtronger in 207. It was again repaired by Carauſius under Diocleſian the Emperor about 286, having been ruin'd by the Picts in ſeveral places about 388; the Britains ras'd it after their Victory over the Picts, by the aſſiſtance of the Romans about 404, but it was beaten down again in 406; Ætius a Roman General rebuiſt it the laſt time of Brick about 430, ſo left the Britains to defend it. The Scots ruin'd it again the next year, after which it was never more regarded, but only as a Boundary between the two Nations by conſent.

PICUS. The Houſe of the Pics, Dukes of Mirandola, and Counts of Concordia, Princes of the Empire, is ancient. So that without granting it the fabulous beginning which is attributed to it, as coming from Conſtantius, the Son of Conſtantine the Great, it's affirmed that the Pics were the firſt in the City of Modena, who ſince 1110 made themſelves conſiderable amongſt their Citizens for a great many illuſtrious Actions. About 200 Years after Francis Pic was honoured with the Title of Vicar of the Empire, by Lewis IV. Emperor; but afterwards Paſſarino Bonacorſi, who had obtained the Freedom of a Citizen in Modena, killed him and two of his Sons, Prendipartus and Thomaſino, and cauſed Mirandola to be razed to the Ground in 1331. But this Bonacorſi, having been reduced to Obedience by the Gonzagui, Lords of Mantua, the reſt of the Family of the Pics re-eſtabliſhed themſelves, and built Mirandola again Thuan. Leand. Alb.

PICUS (John) Prince of Mirandola, and Concordia, the Son of John Francis, was born in 1463. He attained to a vaſt knowledge in the ſublimeſt Sciences, and was called by Scaliger, Monſtrum ſine vitio. At the Age of 24 he maintained ſome Theſes at Rome which conſiſted of 900 Propoſitions in Logick, Theology, the Mathematicks, Magick, Cabbaliſtick Learning and Phyſicks; all of them not onely taken from Greek and Latin Authors, but alſo founded upon the Sentiments of the Hebrews and Chaldæans. This Deſign he executed with much Applauſe; however he did not pleaſe all; for ſeveral meanly Learned Perſons, envying the Glory of this young Prince, or edged on with an indiſcreet Zeal, cenſured theſe Theſes, and made a great Noiſe about them. To appeaſe which Pope Innocent cauſed the Propoſitions of John Picus to be examined, and found thirteen of them untenible; but Picus defended them in an Apology which is in the beginning of his Works, with a Brief of Alexander VI. But I muſt not forget one very remarkable thing mentioned in this Apology, and which teſtifies how Ignorance often times cauſes Overſights and Miſtakes in the Examination of Books. It was thus, A Divine who buſied himſelf to cenſure the Theſes, and being asked what was the meaning of the Word Cabbale; anſwered, it was a wicked Man and an Heretick, who had writ againſt Jeſus Chriſt, and whoſe Followers from him took the Name of Cabbaliſts upon them. Thoſe who where no more clear ſighted than this Divine, accuſed John Picus of being a Magician, for otherwiſe they could not imagine how a young Man of thoſe Years could be ſo Learned. It's ſaid Lucius Bellantius of Sienna told him he ſhould not ſurvive 33 years of Age, which came to paſs, for he died at Florence, November 17. 1494. being the ſame day that King Charles VIIIth. entred into that City. John Francis Picus, his Nephew, writ his Life, which we have in the begining of his Works printed at Bale in 1573 & 1601. They conſiſt of an Heptaplas, that is, A Treatiſe in ſeven Books, upon the firſt Chapter of Geneſis. Concluſiones nongentæ. Apologia de Ente & Uno, de Hominis dignitate. Regulæ 12. Comment. in Pſal. 15. De Chriſti Regno, & Vanitate Mundi. Expoſitio in Orat. Domin. Epiſtolarum Lib. 1. In Platonis Convivium lib. 3. &c. Trithemius & Bellar. de Script. Eccl. Sponde, &c.

PICUS (John Francis) Prince alſo of Mirandola, was the Son of Galeas or Galeot, Brother to John Picus of whom before. He applied himſelf to Study; but his Latin was not very pure. He and his Son Albert were aſſaſſinated in the Night by Galeoti, his Brother Lewis's Son, in Oct. 1533. He writ De ſtudio divinæ & humanæ Philoſophiæ, Lib. 2. De morte Chriſti & propria cogitanda, Lib. 3. Defenſio de Uno & Ente, &c. Paulus Jovius in Elog. doct. l. 17. Bellarm. &c.

PIEDMONT, a Principality of Italy belonging to the Duke of Savoy, called, by the Natives Piemonte, in Latin Pedemontium. It was comprehended in Gallia Subalpina, and afterwards in Lombardy. Under the name of Piedmont is underſtood that Principality in particular, the Dutchy of Aoſt, the Marquiſates of Ivrea, Suſa, Seva, Saluzzo, the Earldom of Aſt, and the Seigniory of Verceil, whereunto is added Canaveſa, and that part of Piedmont which now belongs to France, wherein are Pignerol, Peruſa, Lucerne and Briguerás. All this Country, conſiderable for its fertility, good Air, and the Wealth of its Inhabitants, lies between the Milaneſe and Montferrat to the Eaſt, the Republick of Genoa and the County of Nice to the South, Savoy and Dauphiny to the Weſt, and Velais to the North. The Principality of Piedmont in particular, has Turin for its Capital City, and comprehends Mondovis, Foſſan, Chivas, Rivoli, Javen, Cariguan, Poncalier, Vigon, Cavors, Villa franca, Raconis, Savillan, Coni, Penda, Seve, Cortemilla, Bene, Queras, Quiers, Moncalier, Cocoras, and the Principality of Maſſeran which holds of the Church. The Taurins, Salaſſians, Seguſians, Libicians, and ſeveral other People did formerly inhabit this Country, which now belongs to the Duke of Savoy; but yet it's not well agreed upon how he came to the poſſeſſion of them. The Duke's eldeſt Sons bear the Title of Princes of Piedmont. Ranchini Deſc. Mund. du Val. & Sanſon Geogr. &c.

PIENZA, a City of Tuſcany near unto Siena, which from a Borough-Town, came to be an Epiſcopal City, by the favour of Pope Pius II. who was born there, and gave it the name of Pienza. It is little, but well peopled; 6 miles from Monte Pulicano to the W. 10 from the Pope's Dominions, and 25 from Siena to the N. E. under the Duke of Florence.

PIERIA, was a part of Syria near unto Cilicia. There was alſo in Caſſiotidis a Mountain named Pieria; This name likewiſe was given to a Province in Macedonia, towards the Gulf of Therma; and the Frontiers of Theſſaly, bore the ſame name, the Inhabitants thereof being called Pieri. Pierius was a Mountain in Theſſaly, for its pleaſantneſs conſecrated to the Muſes: It was alſo the name of a River in Achaia in Peloponneſus, and of a Fountain of Elis. Baudrand.

PIERIDES, the Daughters of Pierus, a Macedonian Prince, who are ſaid to be ſo hardy as to challenge the Muſes, upon the Subject of Poetry; but the Muſes getting the better of 'em in this Diſpute corrected their Confidence by turning them into Magpies. The name of Pierides has been alſo given to the Muſes, becauſe of Mount Pierus in Theſſaly that was conſecrated to them. Serv. the Gram. Ovid in Met.

PIERIUS, a Prieſt of Alexandria, was in eſteem in the Reign of Diocleſian, in the time that Theonas govern'd the Church of that City. Authors ſpeak of him as having been a very Eloquent Man, very good at Diſputes, and a great Preacher, inſomuch that he was called The little Origen. He compoſed a Volume in twelve Books, wherein he relates ſeveral ancient Cuſtoms of the Church. But Photius accuſes him of ſpeaking too meanly of the Holy Ghoſt, as making him inferior to the Father and the Son. He commented alſo upon Hoſea, &c. He managed the School of Alexandria, and was Maſter to the Martyr Pamphilus. Euſ. l. 7. Hiſt. S. Jerom in lat. de Script. Eccl. l. 76. Photius Bibl. Cod. 119.

PIERIUS, Valerianus Belzani, of Bellano in the State of Venice, lived in the Sixteenth Century, and was reckoned one of the learnedſt Men of his time. His Hieroglyphicks and Comments upon Virgil are more eſpecially in eſteem. He writ alſo ſome Poems, and a Treatiſe De Infelicitate Literatorum, &c. He died at Padua, aged 82 years, in 1550. Geſner in Bibl. Sponde A. C. 1550. N. 12. Imperialis in Muſ. Hiſt. &c.

PIERPONT. The Anceſtor of this Ancient and Eminent Family Robert de Pierpont, came into England at the time of the Norman Conqueſt; and tho' none of his deſcendants did arrive to the dignity of Peerage till of late years, yet were they perſons of great note for their Valour and Loyalty throughout all ſucceeding times. Henry Pierpont, Eſquire, in recompence of his frequent and faithful Services to King Edward the IVth. againſt the Lancaſtrians, obtain'd a grant of the third part of the Mannor of Stavely. George, his Grandſon, purchaſed many Mannors upon the diſſolution of Monaſteries in 32 H. VIII. and was Knighted 1 Ed. VI. whoſe Grandſon Robert, in his Youth, a Gentleman-Commoner in Oriel College Oxon. and a perſon of excellent Parts, and great Fortune, was by Letters Patent bearing date 29 Junii 3 Car. I. advanced to the dignity of Baron of this Realm by the Title of Lord Pierpont of Holme Pierpont in Com. Not. and Viſcount Newark; and upon the 25th of July the next year was created Earl of Kingſton upon Hull. In the beginning of the Civil Wars he had a Commiſſion to raiſe a Regiment of 1200 Foot for the Kings ſervice, and was conſtituted Lieutenant General of all his Forces within the Counties of Lincoln, Rutland, Huntington, Cambridge and Norfolk; but upon the aſſault of Ganesborough, in Com. Linc. by the Parliament Forces happned to be taken Priſoner, and the King's Party then near at hand, endeavouring to reſcue him, he was kill'd by a ſhot made againſt thoſe that were carrying him by Water towards Hull. By Gertrude his Wife, Daughter and Coheir to Henry Talbot, third Son to George Earl of Shrewsbury, he left five Sons. Henry the eldeſt attending King Charles I. in his Garriſon at Oxford, was, in reſpect of that and his other Services, by Letters Patent bearing date 25 Martii in the 12th year of his Reign, rais'd to an higher Degree of Honour, by the Title of Marqueſs of Dorcheſter in Com Dorſ. He firſt married Cecilie, Daughter to Paul Viſcount Banning, and by her had Iſſue, two Daughters, the Lady Anne and Lady Grace; and afterwards the Lady Katharine, Daughter to James Earl of Derby. Dudg. Baronage.

PIETY, a Goddeſs of the Pagans, who was adored, and preſided over the worſhip that was paid other Godheads: She preſided alſo over the reſpectful cares and tenderneſs Children owed to their Parents, and over that affection Parents ought reciprocally to have for their Children. In ſhort, the word Pietas ſignified at the ſame time the duties both towards the Gods and Men, for thus Cicero ſpeaks of it in his Treatiſe De Natura Deorum; Pietas Juſtitia adverſus deos eſt, & cultus erga majores & ſanguine conjunctos. Piety had a Temple at Rome in Foro Olitorio, according to Cicero. M. Attilius Glabrio, Duumvir, conſecrated this Temple under the Conſulſhip of Quintus and Attilius; and therein ſet up the Picture of that Woman ſo famous for her Piety; who ſeeing her Mother, condemn'd to die by Famine in her old age, demanded very earneſtly leave of the Jaylor to ſee her daily in the Priſon till ſhe died; which the Jaylor out of pity granted her, taking always particular care to prevent her carrying in any thing wherewith to relieve her; in the mean time, as this laſted more days than a perſon could naturally paſs without eating, the Jaylor watch'd what this Daughter was a-doing with her Mother, and ſaw, with aſtoniſhment, that poor Woman ſucking of her Daughter, who being then a Nurſe ſuckled her as an Infant to hinder her dying of hunger. This Action being related to the Judges, they gave the Mother her liberty, and allowed both her and her Daughter a Penſion; and the place where the Priſon was they conſecrated for a Temple to the Goddeſs Piety. Feſtus ſaith, It was the Father of this Woman that was condemned to die, but all other Authors, as Cicero, Livy, Valerius Maximus and Pliny ſpeak of the Mother. Roſin Antiq. Rom. l. 2. c. 18.

PIGHIUS (Albert) a famous Antagoniſt of Luther. In the year 1520 he compoſed a Treatiſe of the way of reforming the Eccleſiaſtical Calendar, and of the Celebration of the Feaſt of Eaſter, which he dedicated to Pope Leo X. He publiſhed alſo an Apology for Aſtrology, and another Apology againſt Mark de Benevento Cæleſtin, who had corrupted the Sentiments of King Alphonſo, and the Aſtrologers of his time touching the ſituation of the eighth Circle. He compoſed alſo a Treatiſe of the Invention of the Solſtices and Equinoxes. He was born at Campen in the Province of Over-yſſel, and died at Utrecht in 1543. Beſides the Works I have mentioned, we have alſo of his, De Miſſæ officio; De libero hominis arbitrio & divina gratia; Diatriba de actis 6 & 7 Synodi; Explicatio Controverſiarum; Aſſertio Hierarchiæ Eccleſiaſticæ; Apologia Concilli Tridentini, &c. It muſt not be forgot that this Doctor has ſome Sentiments concerning Original Sin, Free-Will, and Grace, that even ſome Romiſh Divines have diſapproved of, as being contrary to thoſe of St. Auguſtin. Paulus Jovius in Elog. le Mire in Elog. Belg. & de ſcript. Sæc. 16. &c.

PIGHIUS (Stephen) a Learned Antiquary, born at Campen, a Town of Over-yſſel, in the Low-Countries. He liv'd eight Years at Rome, where he made a nice Enquiry into the Antiquities of that City. Upon his return into Germany, he was made Secretary and Library-Keeper to Cardinal Granville, and afterwards Preceptor to Charles Prince of Juliers. He died in 1604, and was much eſteem'd for his Annals of Rome, which he wrote in Three Tomes. Martin. Hank. De Rerum Rom. Script.

PIGNA (John Baptiſta) born at Ferrara, and living to 1570, was much eſteem'd for his Learning. He wrote The Hiſtory of the Houſe of Eſte. Quæstionum Poeticarum Lib. 12. De Conſolatione Lib. 3. De Otio. Carminum Lib. 5. Glitteroici. Il Principe, &c. Riccioli, Ghilini, &c.

PIGNEROL, Lat Pinarolo, Pinarolium, a City of Italy in Piedmont; with a ſtrong Cittadel; it belonged to the Duke of Savoy, and ſerv'd as an Appennage to the youngeſt Sons of that Houſe; but the French have been Maſters of it ſince the year 1631, by a Secret treaty held at Queraſca, which was concluded on the 31ſt of March. Duke Victor Amadeus put it into the French King and his Succeſſors hands, with all its Appurtenances and Sovereignty, being the Town and Caſtle of Pignerol, Riva, Baudenaſco, Bunaſco, the Higher, &c. and the King, beſides Alba and the Albeſan which he gave up to him, paid alſo a Sum of Money in purſuance to the Treaty. The City of Pignerol is ſituated between the Mountains upon the River of Cluſon or Chiſon, there are in it ſeveral Churches and Religious Houſes. The Cittadel is fortified both by Nature and Art, being built upon a Rock. The other Works alſo are admirable. It's 12 miles from Turin to the N. W. 19 from Suſa to the S. and 10 from Saluzes. This Town was Reſtor'd in 1696, to the Duke of Savoy, but firſt Diſmantl'd.

PIGNORIUS (Lawrence) Prebend of Trevigi or Treviſe, was of Padua, where he was born in 1571. He collected a curious Library, with a Cabinet of Medals and other Curioſities. All the great Men of his time were his Friends, as Cardinal Baronius, the Preſident de Thou, Voſſius, Heinſius, and many others. Dominico Molino Procurator of S. Mark, had alſo a particular reſpect for Pignorius, for whom he erected a Tomb with an Epitaph upon it in S. Lawrence Church. We have ſeveral Works of his, as, De ſervis & eorum apud veteres miniſteriis; Menſæ Iſaicæ, ſeu vetuſtiſſimæ Tabulæ æneæ ſacris Ægyptiorum ſimulacris cælatæ explicatio, cum auctario de variis veterum hæreticorum amuletis, ex antiquis gemmis & ſigillis; Magnæ deûm Matris & Attidis initia, ex vetuſtis monumentis Tornaci eruta & explicata. Symbolarum Epiſtolicarum liber. Miſcella Elogiorum, Acclamationum, Allocutionum, Epitaphiorum & Inſcriptionum. Le Origine di Padoüa. L'Antenore. Commentaria in Alciatum, &c. Thomaſini in Vit. Pignor. &c.

PII the Name of the Knights inſtituted by Pope Pius IV. in 1560: he made a matter of five hundred and thirty five of them while he held the See, and would have them both at Rome and elſewhere, take place of the Knights of the Empire and Malta. Their buſineſs was to carry the Pope when he went abroad, they were called as well as all others, The gilded Knights; for that they wore gilded Swords and Spurs. The Pope conferr'd this Honour indifferently on Soldiers and Gownmen. They had the Title of Count Palatines with a Penſion from the Pope, and the privilege to make Doctors in all Faculties, Publick Notaries, and to Legitimate Baſtards. Andrew Favin Theatre of Honour and Chivalry.

PILATE (Pontius) Governour or Preſident of Judæa, under the Emperor Tiberius, was he that condemned Chriſt. He afterwards exerciſed very great Severities upon the Samaritans, putting moſt of them to the Sword; but thoſe that ſurvived made their Complaints to Vitellius Governour of Syria, who accuſed Pilate before Tiberius. He arrived in the Year 37 at Rome, in the beginning of the Reign of Caligula, who ſent him into Baniſhment. It's believed he killed himſelf near Vienne in Dauphiny, two Years after, out of deſpair. Euſ. in Chron. Caſſiodorus in Chron. Nicephorus lib. 2. Baronius in Annal. &c.

PILAW, Lat. Pilava, a ſtrong Fort in the Ducal Pruſſia at the Mouth of the Bay of Koninſperg, three German miles from that City to the W. taken by the Swedes in 1626, but now under the Duke of Brandenburg. It has a very good Harbour belonging to it, and is 24 miles W. of Koningsberg.

PILSEN, Lat. Pilſenum, a City of Germany, in Bohemia, is ſituate upon the River Mieſs, eight or nine Leagues from Prague, and a little more from the Frontiers of the Upper Palatinate. It's a ſtrong Place, was beſieged by the Huſſites in vain, but Count Mansfelt took it in 11.8. It has a great Square, at which meet four or five fair Streets, and is Ornamented beſides with two fine Churches. The Mieſs receives into it there below Pilſen, another ſmall River, which makes the City ſeem to be in a kind of Peninſula. This Town was the laſt that yielded to the Imperialiſts in the Palatinate War, and was then betray'd for Money too by ſome of the Soldiers belonging to Count Mansfelt. Pilſen is 42 miles W. of Prague, and 48 E. of Egra.

PILSNO, a City of the Higher Poland, in the Palatinate of Sandomiria. It's the Capital of a ſmall Country, and ſtands near unto the River Viſtula. There is in it a fair Church, which has a ſet of Organs, famous throughout all Poland.

PIMBLE MERE, in the N. E. Parts of Merionethſhire, is a great Pool of Water, that covers, at leaſt, eightſcore Acres of Ground; and ſuch is the nature of it by common Fame, That no Land Flood can make it ſwell, but a high Wind raiſes its Water mightily. 'Tis obſerv'd alſo, That the River Dee, which enters it on the South ſide, and comes out again on the North, does not mix its Waters with it; for Proof whereof its alledged, That the Pool has no Salmons, which are very frequent in the River Dee; and that the Fiſh, call'd Guniad, bred in the Pool, is never ſeen in the River.

PIN (Joſeph le) a famous Painter, Native of Arpino; his Father put him to thoſe that Pope Gregory XIII. imployed to paint the Appartments of the Vatican. His Buſineſs was only to make clean their Pallets, and to mix their Colours. In the mean time, he had a great Deſire to paint; but as he was fearful, being but 13 Years of Age, he durſt not attempt it; however, one Day, taking Opportunity when he was alone, he painted ſome little Satyrs and other Figures upon a ſquare Pillar; which, although they were but trials of Skill, they were found ſo well done, and with ſo much Spirit, that of all thoſe that painted in the Vatican then, there were but few that could do better. Hereupon the Painters hid themſelves one Day, to ſee who was the Author of theſe Pieces, and found it was Joſeph le Pin, whereat they were much ſurpriz'd. The Pope coming to know him, granted to him and his Family, that which at Rome is called The Part, with a Penſion of ten Crowns per Month, and ordered, That as long as he wrought in the Vatican, he ſhould be paid a Crown in Gold every Day beſides. He finiſhed a great many Pictures, among which, the Battle fought between the Romans and the Sabines, is one of the fineſt pieces extant, becauſe of the great many Figures a-foot and on Horſeback, which are placed in different Poſtures, and in a manner that diſcovers a great deal of Genius and Exactneſs. When the Cardinal Allobrandin was ſent Legate to France in 1600. Joſeph Pin, who was one of his Retinue, preſented the King with two Pictures. He drew ſeveral excellent Pieces for Pope Paul V. and Urban VIII. and died at Rome, July 3. in 1640. King Lewis XIII. honoured him with the Order of S. Michael.

PINDAR, a Greek Poet, who was called the Prince of Lyricks, was native of Thebes, and lived in the 76 Olympiad in the 280th year of Rome 3580 of the World, and about 474 before the Chriſtian Æra. He had learnt the art of Poetry of Laſus Hermiones, and of a Greek Lady called Myrtis, who was well skill'd therein, and was the Miſtreſs of Corinna. Pindar writ a great many Books, but we have none but the Odes he made for thoſe that in his time won the Prize at the four Solemn Games of the Greeks, which were the Olympick, the Iſthmick, the Pythian, and the Nemean Games. Authors do not agree as to the time of his death. Greece had ſo great a reſpect for this Poet, that thoſe of his Family were always conſidered for his ſake This appear'd at the taking of Thebes, when Alexander the Great, who liv'd above 100 years after the death of this Poet, razing this City ſpared the Houſe wherein he had formerly lived. Euſeb. in Chron. Thomas Magiſter in vit. Pin. Suidas. Pliny, &c.

PINDUS, a Mountain of Epirus or Theſſaly. It ſtretcheth from E. to W. from the Acroceraunian Hills, now called Capo della Chimera, in Albania to the Thermopylæ, now Bocca di Lupo. In the midſt of this courſe it brancheth out to the South, the Parnaſſus and Helicon; and for this reaſon it is, that the three Names are ſo often confounded by the Poets, who ſpeak of that Mountain conſecrated to the Muſes, and of a River of that name.

PINEDA (John) a Jeſuit, born of a Noble Family at Seville in Spain; He was a good Linguiſt, and made the Explaining of the Scriptures his chief Study; hath compoſed ſome Comments upon Job in two Volumes, upon Eccleſiaſtes alſo in two Volumes; De Rebus Salomonis lib. 8. Prælectio ſacra in Cantica Canticorum; Index expurgatorius Librorum, &c. He died January 27 in the year 1637, aged 80. Alegamb. Bibl. ſacr. ſoc. Jeſ.

PINGIAM, a City of China in the Province of Xanſi; it's rich and large, and affirm'd to be the Capital of thirty others that are in the ſame Province.

PINGLO, a great Town in the Province of Quangſi, upon the River Li, in the Kingdom of China, 'tis the Capital of ſeveral other Towns. Martin Martini.

PINGON (Philibert) Baron of Cuſi, Sieur de Primiſcelle Hiſtoriographer and Grand Referendary of Savoy, and Maſter of Requeſts under Emanuel Philibert and Carlo Emanuel Dukes of Savoy, lived in the Sixteenth Age. He had a great deal of Learning, which he made uſe of in writing the Hiſtory of Savoy. Charles Emanuel gave him the uſe of his Records and Library, and made him acquainted with the Titles of the Principal Monaſteries in his Country. By order of this Duke he took a Journey into Saxony to find out the original of the Houſe of Savoy. After his return he publiſhed his Genealogical Tree, entitled, Arbor gentilitia Saxoniæ, Sabaudiæque Principum, with ſhort Elogies upon each Prince, wherein 'tis pretended he is much miſtaken. His Hiſtory of Turin by the Title of Auguſta Taurinorum, contains ſeveral extraordinary things; and that which is the more conſiderable, is, That they are well atteſted and related with Circumſtance and Particularity. He has alſo writ other things, and attempted to write in Latin the Antiquities of the Allobroges or the General Hiſtory of Savoy, divided into 30 Books; and it is in Manuſcript among the Archives of Turin. He died in that City, April 18, in the Year 1482, aged 57 Years, and 4 Months. Guichenon, la Croix du Maine, &c.

PINYTUS, Biſhop of Gnoſſus, a City of Creet, was in eſteem in the Second Age, about the Year 175. He writ to S. Denys of Corinth, a Treatiſe, which S. Jerom mentions.

PIO, the Houſe of Pio, Princes of Carpi, has been illuſtrious in Italy, deſcending from the two Manfredes Pii, in the time of the Counteſs Mathilda. They were great Captains, and ſignaliz'd themſelves notably upon ſeveral Occaſions, having at firſt ſerved the Emperor Frederick I. and afterwards put themſelves into the Service of the Church. Their Deſcendants were Princes of Carpi till Albert Pio, who was in eſteem in the laſt Age; although he had been Embaſſador for Maximilian I. and Charles V. yet this laſt diſpoſeſs'd him of all his Eſtate, and beſtowed it upon the Colonni. Lionel Pio, Brother to Albert, making uſe afterwards of a favourable Conjuncture, recover'd part of it. This Lionel was Father to Rodolphus, whom Pope Paul III. made a Cardinal in 1536; in the mean time, Albert, laden with grief that he had loſt all his Eſtate, with his Son, led a languiſhing Life at Paris, where he died of the Plague in 1536. He has left divers Works behind him; among the reſt, one againſt Luther, and another againſt Eraſmus; this laſt divided into twenty three Books, was printed at Venice, and at Paris, in the Year 1531. John Genis Sepulveda writ an Apology for him againſt the ſame Eraſmus, by the Title of Autopologia pro Alberto Pio Comite Carpenſi in Eraſmum. Guichardin Hiſt. Le Mire in Auct. de Script. Eccl. Leander Alberti Deſcr. Ital. &c.

PIOMBINO, Lat. Plumbinum, a City and Principality of Italy, upon the Coaſt of Tuſcany, between Orbitella and Leghorn. It's built upon the Ruins of the ancient Populonia, which is three miles from it, and hath its own Prince, who is of the Houſe of Ludoviſi. It ſtands forty four miles S. E. of Leghorn, and ſeventy two S. of Florence.

PIRCKIMER, (Bilibaud) born at Newenburgh in 1470. He ſtudied the Law in the Univerſities of Padua and Pavia, and upon his Return into Germany, run thro' the moſt conſiderable Offices in the City of Nuremburg: He was afterwards Counſeller and Embaſſador to the Emperor Maximilian Iſt and was much eſteem'd, and employ'd by Charles Vth. his Succeſſor; notwithſtanding theſe State Avocations, his Inclination lay for Learning and Study. His Works are publiſh'd by Melchior Goldaſtus, in Folio, at Franckford, in 1610. rang'd under the three Heads of, Politica, Hiſtorica & Poetica. He died in 1530. *Eraſmus in Epiſt. The PIRENEAN Mountains are thoſe which divide France from Spain, and which reach for a matter of 85 Leagues from Port Vendres in Languedoc as far as S. Sebaſtian. They have ſeveral Names, according to the Places they are adjacent to; as thus, They are called Col de Pertuis between Catalonia and the County of Rouſillon; in the ſame Quarter are alſo Mont Lanigo, Col de la Prexa, Col de l' Argentiere & Port de Viella. Thoſe that are to be ſeen between Gaſcony and Arragon are Montes Jacca & de Sainte Chriſtine: In Navarre, Mons d' Aldula between Pampelona and S. John Pied de Porc. Some Authors have thought theſe Mountains extended as far as the Weſtern Ocean. Strabo, lib. 3. Dion. lib. 53. Ortelius, Briet, Merula, Sanſon, Du Val, &c.

PIREUS or PIRÆUS, a Port of Athens called now Port de Setine or Porto Leone, becauſe of a Marble Lion that ſtands upon the Sea-Shoar. Ancient Authors often mention this famous Port, which Themiſtocles cauſed to be joined to the City by great Walls built by him in the 276 year of Rome, and which was afterwards ruin'd in 350, upon the taking of Athens.

PIRITHOUS, whom they make to be Son of Ixion, King of Lapethæ, having heard of the Valour of Theſeus, was deſirous to know it by his own Experience; and to that purpoſe robbed him of ſome Oxen, that he might thereby oblige him to come after him; Theſeus followed; but they conceiv'd ſo great an Eſteem the one for the other, that they remained very good Friends. Pirithous aſſiſted Theſeus when he took away Helena, and Theſeus ſerved him in taking away the Daughter of Aidoneus, King of the Moloſſians; but he could not compaſs his Ends, for that the King made him be torn by his Dog called Cerberus. Plutarch in Theſeo, Ovid. &c.

PIRN, a little a City of Miſnia, in higher Saxony in Germany, ſituated upon the Elbe near Dreſden, and within three Leagues of the Frontiers of Bohemia, famous for the Treaty of Peace concluded there in the year 1635, between the Emperor Ferdinand IId. and the Elector of Saxony, to whom it belonged. It was there alſo that this laſt gave Refuge to the Proteſtants that were chaſed from Bohemia and Auſtria in 1628. This City was taken in 1640, by the Swediſh Army. Apol. Fratr. contra Samuel Martin.

PIROT, a Town in Servia taken by General Piccolomini, in 1689, after the two Battles of Niſſa, in which the Turks were beaten. It ſtands two days march from Sophia to the North. And was then fortified and garriſon'd by the Germans.

PISA, a City of Tuſcany, in Italy, being an Archbiſhop's-See, and having an Univerſity, is very ancient, and a conſiderable Place. Authors do not agree in reſpect of thoſe that built this City; but it's probable it might be ſome Colony come from Piſa in Greece, upon the River Alpheus. But however it be, this City is ſituated in a large Plain, fruitful in Corn, and in excellent Wines, where it is divided by the River Arno, which is paſſed there by three Bridges, with a very commodious Haven. Piſa has been ſubject to ſeveral Maſters. It was once a powerful Republick that made head againſt the Infidels, ſubdued the Iſlands of Corſica and Sardinia, together with Carthage; and made it ſelf terrible over all the Mediterranean; but afterwards it came to loſe its Liberty. King Charles VIIIth. reſtored the ſame to it in the Expedition he made into Italy in 1594. But it was loſt again in 1609. The Grand Dukes of Tuſcany are become Maſters of it; and 'tis the Place where reſide the Knights of the Order of S. Stephen founded by Coſmo de Medici in 1561. They meet in the Church dedicated to the ſame Saint, which hath in it a great number of Spoils taken from the Enemies of the Chriſtian Faith. To ſay nothing of its Stair-caſe, Columns, and Statues, that are all of Marble, the Metropolitan Church, called the Dome, has ſeventy ſix Marble Pillars, its Gates of Caſt-metal, are reckoned to have been uſed in the Temple of Solomon. Its Steeple has ſeven Stories which look as if they would fall. Its Font and the Church-yard, called Campo Santo, are things worthy to be ſeen as well as the Palace, City-Hall, Univerſity, and Phyſick-Garden. This Univerſity was founded by Laurence de Medici in 1472. yet notwithſtanding theſe Advantages, it's but thinly peopled. The Territories of this City, called the Piſan or Piſantine, comprehends Piſa, Leghorn, and Volterra. Pope Innocent IId. aſſembled in 1134 the Prelates of France, Germany, and Italy, at Piſa, where the Anti-pope Anacletus was excommunicated. The ſecond Council held at Piſa was of greater Importance, ſo that ſome Authors place it among the number of the General ones. The Church of Rome was rent by a very long and dangerous Schiſm. The Cares of Princes and Prelates had been ineffectual to terminate it; ſo that they reſolved to make uſe of the more efficacious means, to the end they might unite them. An Aſſembly therefore was appointed to meet at Savonna, where Gregory XIIth. who held his See at Rome, and Bennet XIIIth. who reſided at Avignon, were to preſent themſelves; this laſt came there indeed, but as neither the one nor the other had good Deſigns, all their Intentions had no better Succeſs than the reſt; ſome Cardinals who obeyed both, and who met at Leghorn in 1408, propoſed ſeveral Expedients for the terminating of the Schiſm, and believed a General Council was the ſureſt and moſt reaſonable. They got leave of the Florentines to meet at Piſa; and the Council was ſummoned to meet there March 25th. 1409. In the mean time, the Princes and Parties concern'd were advertiſed thereof, and the Council began the day appointed; where appeared twenty two Cardinals, and four Patriarchs, to wit, thoſe of Alexandria, Antioch, Jeruſalem, and Grade, in the States of Venice, twelve Archbiſhops, fourteen by Proxy, fourſcore Biſhops, and the Repreſentatives of an hundred and two more, fourſcore and ſeven Abbots; among whom were thoſe of Citeaux, Clairvaux, Grammond, Camaldoli, Volombruſa, the Procurers of two hundred and two other Abbots, forty and one Priors, the Generals of the Jacobins, Franciſcans, Carmelites, and Auguſtines; that of the Carthuſian Order went to Bennet XIIIth. to bring him to an Accommodation; the Grand Maſter of Rhodes aſſiſted there alſo, with the General Prior of the Knights of the Holy Sepulchre, and the Repreſentative of the Grand Maſter of the Teutonick Order. Here came beſides the Deputies of the moſt famous Univerſities, thoſe of the Chapters of above an hundred Cathedral Churches and Metropolitans, above three hundred Doctors in Divinity and of the Civil-law; and laſtly, Embaſſadors from the Kings of France, England, Portugal, Bohemia, Sicily, Poland, and Cyprus; from the Dukes of Burgundy, Brabant, Lorrain, Bavaria, Pomerania; from the Marquis of Brandenburg, Landgrave of Thuringia, and almoſt all the Princes of Germany. The Kings of Hungary, Swedeland, Denmark, and Norway, were for Gregory XIIth. but they ſoon after forſook him, and adhered to this Council. The day of Meeting came, and after Diſcuſſions made in thirteen Seſſions, the Council gave their definitive Judgment, in the fourteenth held June 5th. declaring Peter le Lune (Bennet XIIIth.) and Ange Coratio (Gregory XIIth.) to be Shiſmaticks and Hereticks, and convicted of foul Play, for keeping up the Schiſm, and as ſuch, deprived them of their Pontificate, forbidding all Chriſtians to acknowledge them. On the 15th. of the ſame Month the Cardinals entered into the Conclave, which had been prepared in the Archbiſhop's Palace, and the keeping whereof was committed to Philibert de Naillac, Grand Maſter of Rhodes. There were then at Piſa four and twenty Cardinals; for that Cardinal Frias, a Spaniard, and Cardinal Challant, a Savoyard, having forſaken Peter le Lune, were a little before come to join the reſt. They choſe on the 29th. Peter Philargi of Candia, Cardinal of Milan, who took the Name of Alexander V. upon him; and preſided at the Council the following Seſſion held July 1ſt. 1409. While theſe things were done, the King of Sicily, Lewis of Anjou, arriving at the Council, was there receiv'd in the Seſſion held July 27th. where the Pope confirmed the Right that Prince had to the Kingdom of Sicily, and created him grand Standard-bearer of the Church, againſt Ladiſlaus, King of Naples. Some Cardinals diſſatisfied with Pope Julius IId. and favouring King Lewis XIIth. and the Emperor Maximilian I. aſſembled alſo a Council here in 1511. and transferred it to Milan, and afterwards to Lyons; but this Aſſembly came to nothing. The Emperor cauſed them to ſeparate, and the King diſapproved alſo of them, making known by his Embaſſadors ſent to Rome, that he had not taken the part of thoſe that were at Piſa, otherwiſe than to act againſt the Perſon of Julius IId. And that preſently after the Election of Leo Xth. he had adhered to the Lateran Council. Piſa ſtands upon the River Arno, 4 miles from the Sea, 14 N. of Leghorn, 80 S. W. of Lucca, 53 W. of Florence, and 170 N. W. of Rome. It will not be improper to give an Account here of the Treaty concluded at Piſa, in 1664, between Pope Alexander VIIth. and Lewis XIVth. King of France, by the Miniſtry of Monſieur Raſponi, the Pope's Plenipotentiary, and Monſieur Bourlemont, Plenipotentiary for the French King. This Treaty is couch'd in fifteen Articles, by the Iſt. of which, the Difference betwixt the Pope and Duke of Parma, concerning the Territories of Caſtro and Ronſiglione, is adjuſted. The IId. relates to the Exceptions which the Duke of Modena, and the Houſe of Eſte, had againſt the Practice of the Apoſtolique Chamber. By the IIId. it was agreed, That Cardinal Chigi ſhould be ſent Legate into France, to make an Acknowledgment to the King in the Words following. Sir, His Holineſs has been very much troubled at the Unfortunate Accidents which happen'd, and the Grounds of Diſcontent which have thence ariſen to your Majeſty, have given him the moſt ſenſible Diſſatisfaction he could poſſibly receive; aſſuring you, at the ſame time, that it was never his Holineſs's Intention to diſoblige either your Majeſty, or your Ambaſſador the Duke de Crequi; it being his Holineſſes deſire, that, for the future, there may be a mutual, friendly, and good Correſpondence between the Courts of Rome and France, &c. This Article, and the moſt part of thoſe that follow, were drawn to make Satisfaction for an Affront put upon the Duke de Crequi, at Rome, in Auguſt 1662, by the Corſican's of the Pope's Guard, when that Duke was Embaſſador Extraordinary for the French King. By the IVth. Article, The Imperial Cardinal was oblig'd, in Perſon, to lay his Juſtification before the King, in a very humble manner. The Vth. imports, That Cardinal Maldachini, who had quitted Rome at the King's Inſtance, ſhould be recall'd by the Pope. The VIth. Article, oblig'd Signior Dom Mario to declare in Writing upon the Honour of a Gentleman, that he was not concern'd in that which happen'd at Rome on the 20th. of Auguſt, 1662. By the VIIth. and VIIIth. it was agreed, That when the French Embaſſador and Embaſſadreſs ſhould return to Rome, the Pope ſhould diſpatch ſome Perſon to meet their Excellencies, and inform 'em, How ſorry his Holineſs was, for that which happen'd Auguſt 20th. By the IXth. The Pope was to give particular and effectual Inſtructions to his Miniſters to regulate their Behaviour, in converſing with the French Embaſſador, and to give him the Reſpect due to the Repreſentative of ſo great a Prince, and the Eldeſt Son of the Church. The Xth. oblig'd his Holineſs to make void and annul all Proceſſes which had been made againſt the Duke de Ceſarini, and to make him Reparation for the Damages he had ſuſtain'd By the XIth. All the Orders and Sentences iſſued out, and given upon the Occaſion of the Accident abovemention'd, againſt any Barons of Rome, ſhould be revers'd and declar'd void. The XIIth. was, That the whole Nation of the Corſicans, ſhould be ever uncapable of ſerving as Soldiers, not only at Rome, but alſo in any part of the Eccleſiaſtical State. By the XIIIth. A Piramid was to be erected at Rome over againſt the Old Corſican Corps de Gard, with an Inſcription, containing the Subſtance of the Decree, made againſt the Nation of the Corſicans. The XIVth. was, That the King of France ſhould put the Pope and Apoſtolick See in Poſſeſſion of Avignon, and the County of Venaiſſin, and that his Holineſs ſhould, on his part, iſſue out all neceſſary Orders and Declarations to ſecure and indemnifie the Inhabitants of Avignon, and all the County from receiving any Trouble or Moleſtation upon the Score of the Accident which happen'd in Auguſt, 1662. By the XVth. it was concluded, That the Iſt. and XIVth. Articles ſhould be executed immediately after the Pope's Legate had had his Audience at the French Court. This Treaty was Sign'd upon February 12th. at Piſa, by the Plenipotentiaries above-mention'd, in 1664. Memoirs Hiſtoriques.

PISASIRUS, the 26th. Caliph or Succeſſor, of Mahomet, got upon the Throne after the Death of his Father Coſdar, who died in 958. Mahomet reigned then in Perſia, Daber, in Egypt, and Abdalla at Carvan in Barbary, and ſeveral other Caliphs elſewhere. The Empire of the Arabs declining becauſe of its Diviſions. It was in this time that the Turks came out of Scythia, or Sarmatia, towards Mount Caucaſus, and ſettled a new Empire, which extended it ſelf into Aſia, Europe, and Africa, by the Ruin of the Empire of the Arabs and that of Conſtantinople; they entred preſently into Perſia, whither Mahomet had invited them to his Relief againſt Piſaſirus, whom they vanquiſhed under the Command of the brave Tangrolipix, their General. After this Victory, Mahomet endeavoured to detain them in his Service, and ſeized upon the Paſs of Araxes, for to hinder them to return into their own Country, inſomuch that being not ſtrong enough to reſiſt him; they were conſtrained to retire into a Deſart, thence to make Inroads upon the Arabs to have wherewith to ſubſiſt. Mahomet, deſirous to reduce them, ſent an Army of thirty thouſand Men againſt them; but raſhly engaging of them they were in one night defeated by the Turks, who were not above three thouſand. Tangrolipix having hereby got a great Booty of Horſes and Arms, lead the Turks into the open Country, and compleated an Army of forty thouſand Men of all ſorts, that joined with him, to live by Plunder and Rapine. Finding himſelf thus ſtrong, he marched againſt Mahomet, who came to meet him near unto Albacan with an Army of above fifty thouſand Men, and an hundred Elephants with Towers upon their Backs. The Battle was bloody; but at laſt Mahomet falling from his Horſe as he rode up and down to animate his Men, and being killed with the Fall, his Army ſurrendred themſelves to Tangrolipix, who took Poſſeſſion of that Empire. In the mean time, Piſaſirus Caliph of Syria endeavoured in vain to ſurprize the Town of Edeſſa. He pretended to ſend Preſents to the Emperor of Conſtantinople, and under that Pretence ſtuff'd a thouſand Men in Panniers, carried by five hundred Camels, who went directly to that City. But the Governour underſtood the Stratagem, and ſo cut all their Throats. Tangrolipix having made himſelf entirely Maſter of Perſia, turned his Arms againſt the Caliph of Syria; and having vanquiſhed him in ſeveral Battles, killed him at laſt, and conquered alſo that Empire. 'Tis true, there were other Caliphs of Babylon, but their Authority reached only Matters of Religion. The Turks, who uſurped the Sovereign Power, embraced the Religion of Mahomet, and granted to the Caliphs the Quality of High-Prieſts of the Law. When the Caliph died, a Cherif ſucceeded him, that is, one of thoſe of the Race of Mahomet. Piſaſirus left a Son named Elvir, who fled into Egypt, where he reigned for ſome time. Marmol. de l' Africa liv. 2.

PISCATOR (John) a Proteſtant German Divine. He commented upon the New Teſtament, and died at Strasburg in 1546. Another of this Name was Profeſſor in Divinity, writ much upon the Bible, and died at Herborn, in the Earldom of Naſſau, in 1625.

PISISTRATUS, an Athenian, made himſelf Tyrant of his Country. He had been very ſerviceable in the taking of the Iſland of Salamis, which good Fortune raiſed his Courage ſo much, that he reſolved to mount higher, although he was of no Illuſtrious Extract. This Deſign took effect. He pretended he had been abuſed, and required a Guard of the Athenians, which was granted him. With this Succour he made himſelf Maſter of the Cittadel of Athens in the 194th. year of Rome. Some time after he was driven out; but he found a way to poſſeſs himſelf of it again in 197, by the Aſſiduities of a Woman named Phya, whom he had dreſſed like Minerva. But he was expelled a ſecond time, and continued in Baniſhment for eleven years. But having been re-inſtated the third time, he maintained himſelf in the Sovereign Power for eighteen years, and died in the 63d. Olympiad, about the 228th. year of Rome, leaving two Sons behind him, Hippias and Hipparchus, who ſucceeded him. Aulus Gellius informs us, that Piſiſtratus had erected a Publick Library, which Xerxes afterwards carried into Perſia. Aulus Gellius, lib. 6. & 17. *Plutarch in Salone. PISO (L. Calpurnius) ſurnamed Trugi, Tribune of the People, a Roman Conſul, and afterwards Cenſor, was in eſteem from about the 600 year of Rome until 640. during the time he was Tribune of the People under the Conſulſhip of Cenſorinus and Manlius. In the 605th. year of Rome he publiſhed a Law againſt Extortion, entitled, Lex Calpurnia de pecuniis repetundis. He was Conſul with Poſthumius Albinus in 606, during the ſecond Punick War; in 615 with Popilius Lenas; in 619 with Fulvius Flaccus; and in 621 with Minutius Scævola. He was afterwards Cenſor with Metellus Balearicus. His Merits raiſed him to theſe Imployments. He was a Lawyer, Orator, and Hiſtorian. Cicero in Bruto, lib. 2. de Offic. &c.

PISO (C. Calpurnius) a Roman, was Conſul with M. Atilius Glabrio, in the 687 of Rome. He was the Author of that Law entitled, Lex Calpurnia de ambitu. Another L Calpurnius Piſo was Conſul with Cornelius Lentulus in 753 of Rome, which was that of our Saviour's Nativity.

PISO (Caius) Author of the Conſpiracy againſt Nero, was of the Family of the Calpurnians ſo famous at Rome, who furniſhed the Republick with great Men. Having gained the Favour of the People by his Eloquence and Bounty, he attempted to put the Emperor Nero to Death, and to uſurp the Throne; but the number of the Conſpirators, among whom there were Senators, Knights, Soldiers, and Women alſo, ruined his Deſigns, for Milicus, the Freeman of Scevinus, that was one of the Conſpiracy, diſcovered it to the Emperor, who made a ſtrange butchery of all thoſe convicted of it. Piſo waited for Death in his own Houſe, when there came in a Company of young Soldiers, ſome of which opened the Veins in his Arms. At his Death he evidenced the Love he had for his Wife in a Diſcourſe full of Flattery which he ſent to Nero. Tacitus Annal. 15.

PISTOIA, upon the little River Stella, a City of Italy, in Tuſcany, a Biſhop's See, Suffragan of Florence. It belongs to the Great Duke of Tuſcany; and is famous for the Defeat of Catiline; for the Factions of the Blacks and PITTACUS, one of the ſeven Wiſe Men of Greece, was Native of Mitylene, a City in the Iſle of Lesbos. On ſeveral Occaſions he gave Proofs of his Wiſdom and Knowledge. When the Inhabitants of Mitylene had War with the Athenians, Pittacus had the Command of the Army, who, that he might not hazard the Blood of his Fellow-Citizens, offered to fight ſingly with Phrynon, who was the General of his Enemies, and who had often won the Victory at the Olympick Games. PIVRI, or PLEVRA, a City of the Griſons, which was deſtroy'd in the beginning of 1618, by the Fall of a Mountain. There were in it eight Religious Houſes for Men and Women. It's ſaid there was but one Man that eſcaped this Misfortune. He was very far from the City, and yet he had his Legs bruiſed by the Violence of an impetuous Wind which daſhed him againſt the Rocks. It's obſerved alſo that this Mountain bellowed like a Bull the day before it fell; the Wind or ſome ſubterraneous Fires cauſing that extraordinary Noiſe. Now it's become a little Lake, which the Waters of the River of Atera form in the Rubbiſh of that fallen Mountain. In this City they made ſome Earthen Kettles or Pots which were much valued in Italy, becauſe they threw out any Poiſon which was put into them. Dan. Hemerit. Helv. Deſcript.

PIUS I. of that Name, born at Aquileia, ſucceeded Pope Hyginus, on the 15th. of January in 156. Ancient Authors do not agree as to this immediate Succeſſion, becauſe S. Auguſtin and Optatus ſay, That Anicetus was choſen after Hyginus; and that Pius ſucceeded the former. But Irenæus, who lived in that time, Tertullian, Euſebius, Epiphanius, and all the Greeks of the ſucceeding Ages, put Pius before Anicetus. However it be, he ordered the Celebration of Eaſter, the Sunday after the 14th. day of March, according to the Lunar Month. This Pope had the Honour to die a Martyr for Chriſt, July 11th. 165. after he had governed the Church nine years, five months, and twenty ſix days. Platina adds, That he ordained, that every Convert from the Cerinthian Hereſie ſhould, at his Reception into the Church, be baptiz'd, and appointed a Puniſhment upon thoſe who were negligent in handling the Body and Blood of Chriſt. If thro' the Prieſts Careleſneſs any of the Cup had fallen upon the Ground, he was to undergo a Penance of forty days; if upon the Altar, three; if on the Altar-cloth, of four days; and ſo proportionably. He wrote againſt the Montaniſts, who with their two fanatick Propheteſſes, Priſcilla and Maximilla, pretended that the Holy Ghoſt inſpir'd them with a Supplemental Revelation of which the Apoſtles knew nothing. Genebrard lib. 3. *Chron. PIUS II. called before Æneas Sylvius Bartholomew Piccolomini, was born at Corſignano, a Town in the Territories of Sienna, on the 18th. Day of October, 1405. and that he might render the Place illuſtrious, he afterwards erected it into an Epiſcopal City, calling it Pienza, according to the Name of Pius. Victoria de Fortiguera, his Mother being big of him, dreamed ſhe ſhould be brought to Bed of a Mitred Child; as it was then the Cuſtom to degrade the Clerks by placing a Mitre of Paper upon their Heads; ſhe believed Æneas would be the Shame and Diſhonour of his Family; but the Conſequence manifeſted the contrary; he was at the Age of ſix and twenty at the Council of Bale, Secretary to Dominico Capranico, called the Cardinal of Fermo, becauſe he was Adminiſtrator of that Church, and afterwards ſerved ſome other Prelates in like manner, and alſo the Cardinal Albergati, who ſent him into Scotland. After his Return the Council of Bale honoured him with the Charges of Referendary, Abbreviator, Chancellor, General Agent, and ſent him ſeveral times to Strasburg, Francfort, Conſtance, Savoy, among the Griſons, and conferred upon him the Provoſtſhip of the Collegiate Church of S. Laurence in Milan. In the mean time he publiſhed ſome Work or other; and 'twas then that he compoſed thoſe Pieces which, being too favourable to the Council of Bale, and very Diſadvantageous to Eugenius IVth. were retracted by himſelf. Afterwards by a Bull, which is in the beginning of the Collection of his Works, he became after this Secretary to the Antipope Fælix Vth. and then to the Emperor Frederick IIId. who honoured him with the Poetical Crown, and imployed him in divers Embaſſies to Rome, Milan, Naples, Bohemia, and elſewhere. Pope Eugenius IVth. whom he had treated ill in his Writings, took Notice of his Parts, and had an Eſteem for him. And Nicholas Vth. conferred upon him the Biſhoprick of Trieſta, which he quitted ſome time after for that of Sienna. The ſame Pope made uſe of him in the Quality of his Nuncio in Auſtria, Hungary, Moravia, Bohemia, and Sileſia. He had good Succeſs in theſe various Imploys, eſpecially in the Diet which he cauſed to be called for the forming of a League againſt the Turks at Ratisbonne and Francfort, where he delivered himſelf with wonderful Eloquence. It's true, That Project had not Effect; but it was not through the Fault of the Nuncio. The Death of Nicholas Vth. broke all the Meaſures that might have been taken in theſe Diets and that of Neuſtadt. Calixtus III. who was choſen after Nicholas, ſtopped the Biſhop of Sienna at Rome, who was deſirous to return again to the Empire, and made him Cardinal in 1456. That Pope dying the 6th. of Auguſt 1458. the Cardinal of Sienna was thirteen days after advanced to his Place, and took upon him the Name of Pius IId. Preſently after his Election, which he made known to King Charles VIIth. and the Univerſity of Paris, he applied himſelf to unite the Chriſtian Princes againſt the Turks. He ſummoned for that purpoſe an Aſſembly to meet at Mantua, which began June upon the River Arno, 4 miles from the Sea, 14 N. of Leghorn, 80 S. W. of Lucca, 53 W. of Florence, and 170 N. W. of Rome. It will not be improper to give an Account here of the Treaty concluded at Piſa, in 1664, between Pope Alexander VIIth. and Lewis XIVth. King of France, by the Miniſtry of Monſieur Raſponi, the Pope's Plenipotentiary, and Monſieur Bourlemont, Plenipotentiary for the French King. This Treaty is couch'd in fifteen Articles, by the Iſt. of which, the Difference betwixt the Pope and Duke of Parma, concerning the Territories of Caſtro and Ronſiglione, is adjuſted. The IId. relates to the Exceptions which the Duke of Modena, and the Houſe of Eſte, had againſt the Practice of the Apoſtolique Chamber. By the IIId. it was agreed, That Cardinal Chigi ſhould be ſent Legate into France, to make an Acknowledgment to the King in the Words following. Sir, His Holineſs has been very much troubled at the Unfortunate Accidents which happen'd, and the Grounds of Diſcontent which have thence ariſen to your Majeſty, have given him the moſt ſenſible Diſſatisfaction he could poſſibly receive; aſſuring you, at the ſame time, that it was never his Holineſs's Intention to diſoblige either your Majeſty, or your Ambaſſador the Duke de Crequi; it being his Holineſſes deſire, that, for the future, there may be a mutual, friendly, and good Correſpondence between the Courts of Rome and France, &c. This Article, and the moſt part of thoſe that follow, were drawn to make Satisfaction for an Affront put upon the Duke de Crequi, at Rome, in Auguſt 1662, by the Corſican's of the Pope's Guard, when that Duke was Embaſſador Extraordinary for the French King. By the IVth. Article, The Imperial Cardinal was oblig'd, in Perſon, to lay his Juſtification before the King, in a very humble manner. The Vth. imports, That Cardinal Maldachini, who had quitted Rome at the King's Inſtance, ſhould be recall'd by the Pope. The VIth. Article, oblig'd Signior Dom Mario to declare in Writing upon the Honour of a Gentleman, that he was not concern'd in that which happen'd at Rome on the 20th. of Auguſt, 1662. By the VIIth. and VIIIth. it was agreed, That when the French Embaſſador and Embaſſadreſs ſhould return to Rome, the Pope ſhould diſpatch ſome Perſon to meet their Excellencies, and inform 'em, How ſorry his Holineſs was, for that which happen'd Auguſt 20th. By the IXth. The Pope was to give particular and effectual Inſtructions to his Miniſters to regulate their Behaviour, in converſing with the French Embaſſador, and to give him the Reſpect due to the Repreſentative of ſo great a Prince, and the Eldeſt Son of the Church. The Xth. oblig'd his Holineſs to make void and annul all Proceſſes which had been made againſt the Duke de Ceſarini, and to make him Reparation for the Damages he had ſuſtain'd By the XIth. All the Orders and Sentences iſſued out, and given upon the Occaſion of the Accident abovemention'd, againſt any Barons of Rome, ſhould be revers'd and declar'd void. The XIIth. was, That the whole Nation of the Corſicans, ſhould be ever uncapable of ſerving as Soldiers, not only at Rome, but alſo in any part of the Eccleſiaſtical State. By the XIIIth. A Piramid was to be erected at Rome over againſt the Old Corſican Corps de Gard, with an Inſcription, containing the Subſtance of the Decree, made againſt the Nation of the Corſicans. The XIVth. was, That the King of France ſhould put the Pope and Apoſtolick See in Poſſeſſion of Avignon, and the County of Venaiſſin, and that his Holineſs ſhould, on his part, iſſue out all neceſſary Orders and Declarations to ſecure and indemnifie the Inhabitants of Avignon, and all the County from receiving any Trouble or Moleſtation upon the Score of the Accident which happen'd in Auguſt, 1662. By the XVth. it was concluded, That the Iſt. and XIVth. Articles ſhould be executed immediately after the Pope's Legate had had his Audience at the French Court. This Treaty was Sign'd upon February 12th. at Piſa, by the Plenipotentiaries above-mention'd, in 1664. Memoirs Hiſtoriques.

PISASIRUS, the 26th. Caliph or Succeſſor, of Mahomet, got upon the Throne after the Death of his Father Coſdar, who died in 958. Mahomet reigned then in Perſia, Daber, in Egypt, and Abdalla at Carvan in Barbary, and ſeveral other Caliphs elſewhere. The Empire of the Arabs declining becauſe of its Diviſions. It was in this time that the Turks came out of Scythia, or Sarmatia, towards Mount Caucaſus, and ſettled a new Empire, which extended it ſelf into Aſia, Europe, and Africa, by the Ruin of the Empire of the Arabs and that of Conſtantinople; they entred preſently into Perſia, whither Mahomet had invited them to his Relief againſt Piſaſirus, whom they vanquiſhed under the Command of the brave Tangrolipix, their General. After this Victory, Mahomet endeavoured to detain them in his Service, and ſeized upon the Paſs of Araxes, for to hinder them to return into their own Country, inſomuch that being not ſtrong enough to reſiſt him; they were conſtrained to retire into a Deſart, thence to make Inroads upon the Arabs to have wherewith to ſubſiſt. Mahomet, deſirous to reduce them, ſent an Army of thirty thouſand Men againſt them; but raſhly engaging of them they were in one night defeated by the Turks, who were not above three thouſand. Tangrolipix having hereby got a great Booty of Horſes and Arms, lead the Turks into the open Country, and compleated an Army of forty thouſand Men of all ſorts, that joined with him, to live by Plunder and Rapine. Finding himſelf thus ſtrong, he marched againſt Mahomet, who came to meet him near unto Albacan with an Army of above fifty thouſand Men, and an hundred Elephants with Towers upon their Backs. The Battle was bloody; but at laſt Mahomet falling from his Horſe as he rode up and down to animate his Men, and being killed with the Fall, his Army ſurrendred themſelves to Tangrolipix, who took Poſſeſſion of that Empire. In the mean time, Piſaſirus Caliph of Syria endeavoured in vain to ſurprize the Town of Edeſſa. He pretended to ſend Preſents to the Emperor of Conſtantinople, and under that Pretence ſtuff'd a thouſand Men in Panniers, carried by five hundred Camels, who went directly to that City. But the Governour underſtood the Stratagem, and ſo cut all their Throats. Tangrolipix having made himſelf entirely Maſter of Perſia, turned his Arms againſt the Caliph of Syria; and having vanquiſhed him in ſeveral Battles, killed him at laſt, and conquered alſo that Empire. 'Tis true, there were other Caliphs of Babylon, but their Authority reached only Matters of Religion. The Turks, who uſurped the Sovereign Power, embraced the Religion of Mahomet, and granted to the Caliphs the Quality of High-Prieſts of the Law. When the Caliph died, a Cherif ſucceeded him, that is, one of thoſe of the Race of Mahomet. Piſaſirus left a Son named Elvir, who fled into Egypt, where he reigned for ſome time. Marmol. de l' Africa liv. 2.

PISCATOR (John) a Proteſtant German Divine. He commented upon the New Teſtament, and died at Strasburg in 1546. Another of this Name was Profeſſor in Divinity, writ much upon the Bible, and died at Herborn, in the Earldom of Naſſau, in 1625.

PISISTRATUS, an Athenian, made himſelf Tyrant of his Country. He had been very ſerviceable in the taking of the Iſland of Salamis, which good Fortune raiſed his Courage ſo much, that he reſolved to mount higher, although he was of no Illuſtrious Extract. This Deſign took effect. He pretended he had been abuſed, and required a Guard of the Athenians, which was granted him. With this Succour he made himſelf Maſter of the Cittadel of Athens in the 194th. year of Rome. Some time after he was driven out; but he found a way to poſſeſs himſelf of it again in 197. by the Aſſiduities of a Woman named Phya, whom he had dreſſed like Minerva. But he was expelled a ſecond time, and continued in Baniſhment for eleven years. But having been re-inſtated the third time, he maintained himſelf in the Sovereign Power for eighteen years, and died in the 63d. Olympiad, about the 228th. year of Rome, leaving two Sons behind him, Hippias and Hipparchus, who ſucceeded him. Aulus Gellius informs us, that Piſiſtratus had erected a Publick Library, which Xerxes afterwards carried into Perſia. Aulus Gellius, lib. 6. & 17. *Plutarch in Salone. PISO (L. Calpurnius) ſurnamed Trugi, Tribune of the People, a Roman Conſul, and afterwards Cenſor, was in eſteem from about the 600 year of Rome until 640. during the time he was Tribune of the People under the Conſulſhip of Cenſorinus and Manlius. In the 605th. year of Rome he publiſhed a Law againſt Extortion, entitled, Lex Calpurnia de pecuniis repetundis. He was Conſul with Poſthumius Albinus in 606, during the ſecond Punick War; in 615 with Popilius Lenas; in 619 with Fulvius Flaccus; and in 621 with Minutius Scævola. He was afterwards Cenſor with Metellus Balearicus. His Merits raiſed him to theſe Imployments. He was a Lawyer, Orator, and Hiſtorian. Cicero in Bruto, lib. 2. de Offic. &c.

PISO (C. Calpurnius) a Roman, was Conſul with M. Atilius Glabrio, in the 687 of Rome. He was the Author of that Law entitled, Lex Calpurnia de ambitu. Another L. Calpurnius Piſo was Conſul with Cornelius Lentulus in 753 of Rome, which was that of our Saviour's Nativity.

PISO (Caius) Author of the Conſpiracy againſt Nero, was of the Family of the Calpurnians ſo famous at Rome, who furniſhed the Republick with great Men. Having gained the Favour of the People by his Eloquence and Bounty, he attempted to put the Emperor Nero to Death, and to uſurp the Throne; but the number of the Conſpirators, among whom there were Senators, Knights, Soldiers, and Women alſo, ruined his Deſigns, for Milicus, the Freeman of Scevinus, that was one of the Conſpiracy, diſcovered it to the Emperor, who made a ſtrange butchery of all thoſe convicted of it. Piſo waited for Death in his own Houſe, when there came in a Company of young Soldiers, ſome of which opened the Veins in his Arms. At his Death he evidenced the Love he had for his Wife in a Diſcourſe full of Flattery which he ſent to Nero. Tacitus Annal. 15.

It's ſaid there was but one Man that eſcaped this Misfortune. He was very far from the City, and yet he had his Legs bruiſed by the Violence of an impetuous Wind which daſhed him againſt the Rocks. It's obſerved alſo that this Mountain bellowed like a Bull the day before it fell; the Wind or ſome ſubterraneous Fires cauſing that extraordinary Noiſe. Now it's become a little Lake, which the Waters of the River of Atera form in the Rubbiſh of that fallen Mountain. In this City they made ſome Earthen Kettles or Pots which were much valued in Italy, becauſe they threw out any Poiſon which was put into them. Dan. Hemerit. Helv. Deſcript.

PIUS I. of that Name, born at Aquileia, ſucceeded Pope Hyginus, on the 15th. of January in 156. Ancient Authors do not agree as to this immediate Succeſſion, becauſe S. Auguſtin and Optatus ſay, That Anicetus was choſen after Hyginus; and that Pius ſucceeded the former. But Irenæus, who lived in that time, Tertullian, Euſebius, Epiphanius, and all the Greeks of the ſucceeding Ages, put Pius before Anicetus. However it be, he ordered the Celebration of Eaſter, the Sunday after the 14th. day of March, according to the Lunar Month. This Pope had the Honour to die a Martyr for Chriſt, July 11th. 165. after he had governed the Church nine years, five months, and twenty ſix days. Platina adds, That he ordained, that every Convert from the Cerinthian Hereſie ſhould, at his Reception into the Church, be baptiz'd, and appointed a Puniſhment upon thoſe who were negligent in handling the Body and Blood of Chriſt. If thro' the Prieſts Careleſneſs any of the Cup had fallen upon the Ground, he was to undergo a Penance of forty days; if upon the Altar, three; if on the Altar-cloth, of four days; and ſo proportionably. He wrote againſt the Montaniſts, who with their two fanatick Propheteſſes, Priſcilla and Maximilla, pretended that the Holy Ghoſt inſpir'd them with a Supplemental Revelation of which the Apoſtles knew nothing. Genebrard lib. 3. Chron. Baronius in Annal. Ciaconius, &c.

PIUS II. called before Æneas Sylvius Bartholomew Piccolomini, was born at Corſignano, a Town in the Territories of Sienna, on the 18th. Day of October, 1405. and that he might render the Place illuſtrious, he afterwards erected it into an Epiſcopal City, calling it Pienza, according to the Name of Pius. Victoria de Fortiguera, his Mother being big of him, dreamed ſhe ſhould be brought to Bed of a Mitred Child; as it was then the Cuſtom to degrade the Clerks by placing a Mitre of Paper upon their Heads; ſhe believed Æneas would be the Shame and Diſhonour of his Family; but the Conſequence manifeſted the contrary; he was at the Age of ſix and twenty at the Council of Bale, Secretary to Dominico Capranico, called the Cardinal of Fermo, becauſe he was Adminiſtrator of that Church, and afterwards ſerved ſome other Prelates in like manner, and alſo the Cardinal Albergati, who ſent him into Scotland. After his Return the Council of Bale honoured him with the Charges of Referendary, Abbreviator, Chancellor, General Agent, and ſent him ſeveral times to Strasburg, Francfort, Conſtance, Savoy, among the Griſons, and conferred upon him the Provoſtſhip of the Collegiate Church of S. Laurence in Milan. In the mean time he publiſhed ſome Work or other; and 'twas then that he compoſed thoſe Pieces which, being too favourable to the Council of Bale, and very Diſadvantageous to Eugenius IVth. were retracted by himſelf. Afterwards by a Bull, which is in the beginning of the Collection of his Works, he became after this Secretary to the Antipope Fælix Vth. and then to the Emperor Frederick IIId. who honoured him with the Poetical Crown, and imployed him in divers Embaſſies to Rome, Milan, Naples, Bohemia, and elſewhere. Pope Eugenius IVth. whom he had treated ill in his Writings, took Notice of his Parts, and had an Eſteem for him. And Nicholas Vth. conferred upon him the Biſhoprick of Trieſta, which he quitted ſome time after for that of Sienna. The ſame Pope made uſe of him in the Quality of his Nuncio in Auſtria, Hungary, Moravia, Bohemia, and Sileſia. He had good Succeſs in theſe various Imploys, eſpecially in the Diet which he cauſed to be called for the forming of a League againſt the Turks at Ratisbonne and Francfort, where he delivered himſelf with wonderful Eloquence. It's true, That Project had not Effect; but it was not through the Fault of the Nuncio. The Death of Nicholas Vth. broke all the Meaſures that might have been taken in theſe Diets and that of Neuſtadt. Calixtus III. who was choſen after Nicholas, ſtopped the Biſhop of Sienna at Rome, who was deſirous to return again to the Empire, and made him Cardinal in 1456. That Pope dying the 6th. of Auguſt 1458. the Cardinal of Sienna was thirteen days after advanced to his Place, and took upon him the Name of Pius IId. Preſently after his Election, which he made known to King Charles VIIth. and the Univerſity of Paris, he applied himſelf to unite the Chriſtian Princes againſt the Turks. He ſummoned for that purpoſe an Aſſembly to meet at Mantua, which began June the Iſt. 1459. He had ſome Troops in his State, which he would have led himſelf; but he died at Ancona, whither he was come in order to embark, Auguſt 14th. 1464. aged 58 years, after he had reigned five years, eleven months, and twenty ſeven days. We have the Works of this Pope in one Volume, printed at Bale, in 1571. and his Life in the beginning of it. Platina adds, That he was a Perſonage of true Courage, ſingular Prudence, able to manage the moſt important Affairs; that he bore in his aſpect, Severity tempered with Good nature. In a word, he was one of the beſt, as well as the learnedſt Popes that wore the Tiara for many Ages before him. He left many Works and witty Sayings behind him. Here follow ſome of the latter, viz. That there were three Perſons in the Godhead, not proved to be ſo by Reaſon, but by conſidering who ſaid ſo. That to find out the Motion of the Stars, had more Pleaſure than Profit in it. That God's Friends enjoyed both this Life and that to come. That without Vertue, there was no true Joy. That as a covetous Man is never ſatisfied with Money, ſo a learned Man ſhould not be with Knowledge. That common Men ſhould eſteem Learning as Silver, Noblemen as Gold, and Princes as Jewels. That good Phyſicians did not ſeek the Money, but the Health of the Party diſeaſed. That thoſe Laws are Sacred which reſtrain Licentiouſneſs. That the Laws had-power over the Commonalty, but were feeble to the Greater Ones. That great Controverſies are decided by the Sword, not by Laws. A Citizen ſhould look upon his Family as ſubject to the City, the City to his Country, his Country to the World, and the World to God. That the chief place with Kings was ſlippery. That as all Rivers run into the Sea, ſo do all Vices into the Court. That the Tongue of a Sycophant was a King's greateſt Plague. That a Prince who would truſt no body was good for nothing; and he that believed every body was no better. That it's neceſſary that he who governs many, ſhould himſelf be rul'd by many. He ſaid thoſe that went to Law were the Birds, the Court the Field, the Judge the Net, and the Lawyers the Fowlers. That Men ought to be preſented to Dignities, not Dignities to Men. That ill Phyſicians kill'd the Body, and ignorant Prieſts the Soul. That a wandring Monk was the Devil's Bond-ſlave. That there was great reaſon for prohibiting Prieſts to marry, but greater for allowing it again. That no Treaſure was preferrable to a faithful Friend. That he cheriſhes an Enemy who pardons his Son too often. That a covetous Man never pleaſes any body, but by his Death. That Mens faults are concealed by Liberality, and diſcovered by Avarice. That it was a ſlaviſh Vice to tell Lyes. That a Man ought to take as much Wine as would raiſe, and not overwhelm his Soul. That Luſt did ſully and ſtain every Age of Man, but quite extinguiſh Old Age. That a Noble Death was to be preferred to a diſhonourable Life in the Opinion of all Philoſophers. John Anthony Campenus, John Aretin, Trithemius, Bellarmin, Genebrard, &c.

PIUS III. called before Francis Todeſchini, was Siſter's-Son to Pius II. who permitted him to take upon him the Name of Piccolomini. He made him Archbiſhop of Sienna and a Cardinal. He had ſeveral Imploys till the Death of Alexander VIth. when he was choſen Pope on the 22d. of September, in 1503. But he enjoyed not long the Papal Chair, dying of a Wound he had in his Leg, and with ſuſpicion of being poiſoned, the 18th of October, in the ſame Year, 26 Days after his Election, and ten after his being Crowned. It being generally imagin'd, that by Suggeſtion and Contrivance of Pandolfo Petuvi, the Tyrant of Sienna, ſome Poiſon was injected into the Wound. Ciaconius Victorel & Du Cheſne in his Life.

PIUS IV. a Milaneſe, called before John Angelo Medicis, or Mediquin, was born on Eaſter-day, 1499. It's not doubted but the Preferment of the Marquis de Marignan, his Brother, contributed much to his, but it was not done ſuddenly. He had the Place of Prothonotary in the time of Clement VIIth. and at the ſame time he inſinuated himſelf into the favour of the Cardinal Farneſe, who having been raiſed to the Popedom by the Name of Paul III. made uſe of him in divers Embaſſies, conferred upon him ſeveral Benefices, and created him at laſt Cardinal on the 8th. of April, 1549. Julius III. named him Legate of the Army againſt the Duke of Parma. Paul IV. did not treat him ſo kindly; but that hindered him not to be called The Father of the Poor, and Protector of the Muſes. So that at laſt his Merit raiſed him to the Papal Chair after the ſame Paul IV. It was obſerved that a Pigeon that came into the Hall of the Conclave, alighted upon the Chamber of the Cardinal de Medicis, which was looked upon as a Preſage of his future Promotion, and he was choſen the Night after Chriſtmas-day, 1559. It was noted by ſome as obſervable, that being born on Eaſter-day, he ſhould be choſen on Chriſtmas-day, and crowned on the Feaſt of Epiphany, which are the greateſt Feaſts in the Year. He pardoned the Romans who had committed many Diſorders in prejudice to the Memory of his Predeceſſor, and againſt the Inquiſition. But he was not ſo kind and obliging to the Nephews of Pope Paul IV. for he cauſed the Cardinal Caraffa to be ſtrangled in the Caſtle of S. Angelo, by the hands of the common Executioner, and cut off the Head of the Prince de Palliano, his Brother, in the Priſon of the New Tower. He afterwards continued the Council of Trent, which was concluded in 1563, by the means of Charles, Nephew to that Pope. He died December 9. 1565. in the 67th. of his Age, having reigned as Pope five Years, eleven Months, and fifteen Days. It's affirmed, That the Fear which he had of loſing Malta, then beſieged by the Turks, contributed to his Death. The Continuator of Platina adds, That this Pope's Thoughts were not ſo much taken up with the Council, but being tranſported with a Spirit of Munificence, and Building, he could attend to raiſe and continue his Name by ſumptuous Structures, figuring to himſelf a Model of the ancient Rome, as if he intended to have it reſtor'd to its former Glory, he commanded the ancient Monuments to be conſerved, the Streets reſtored, and at his great Expence, the Aqueducts, which brought the Waters from far diſtant Places to the City, to be again repaired. It was he rebuilt the Baths of Diocleſian, upon Mount Quirin, converting them into a Church and Monaſtery which he perſonally conſecrated, and called them Sancta Maria Angelorum. He fortified the Caſtle of S. Angelo, and repaired the Ruins of the Caſtle of Civita Vecchia, and made many other Structures for Convenience and Ornament of the City. Whilſt he was intent upon theſe Affairs, a certain Number of Villains deſigned to have murthered him, and for that purpoſe delivered him a Writing, the Contents whereof was a Perſuaſion to reſign up his Papal Authority into the Hands of ſuch a Perſon whom they ſhould deſcribe to him, for they pretended to have received a Revelation, and ſeen a Viſion, that the Succeſſor to the Pope ſhould be of an Angelical Spirit, elected by the common Conſent of all Chriſtendom, that he ſhould become the Univerſal Monarch, reform the Manners of Mankind, teach them to live up to the Perfection of human Life, and in ſhort, convert all Nations to the Chriſtian Faith. Acolti, one of the Gang, having delivered him this Paper, and being about to ſtrike the fatal Blow, his Heart failed him, upon which one of the Aſſaſſinates diſcovering the Conſpiracy, they were all ſeized and executed. Onuphrius, Ciaconius, Du Cheſne in his Life, Sponde in Annal. Eccl. de Thou, &c.

PIUS V. whoſe Name before was Michael Chiſteri, ſucceeded Pius IV. and was choſen on the 7th. of January, 1566. He was born at Boſchi, or Boſquu, a little Town in the Dioceſs of Tortone, and in the Dutchy of Milan, two or three Leagues from Alexandria de la Paille, on the 17th. of January, 1504. He was Profeſſor, Preacher, and Superior of the Jacobin Monks, afterwards Biſhop of Sutri, under Paul IV. who created him Cardinal, March 15. 1557. and Inquiſitor General of the Faith. He took upon him the Title of Cardinal Alexandrino, becauſe he was born in the Territories of Alexandria. Pope Pius IV. gave him the Biſhoprick of Mondovi, and was at laſt ſucceeded by him. Preſently after his Election to the Papacy, he applied himſelf to regulate his Houſe, to adorn the City of Rome, to expel lewd Livers out of it, to reform the Clergy, and make the Council of Trent to be obſerved. He did all he could againſt the Proteſtants, and the Turks. He ſent his Nuncio's, and acted by them againſt the firſt, and made uſe of his Arms againſt the latter; ſo that having joined them with thoſe of the King of Spain and the Venetians, they won the famous Battle of Lepanto, October 7, 1571, the Year before he had created Coſmo de Medicis Grand Duke of Tuſcany, reſettled the Caraffa's in their Eſtates, and aboliſhed the Order of the Humiliati. He died May 1, 1572, having been Pope 6 Years, 3 Months, and 24 Days. The Continuator of Platina adds, That he deſign'd to baniſh all the Courtezans from Rome, but being perſwaded by ſome Cardinals to Licenſe ſome to remain, he aſſign'd 'em a corner of the City, forbidding them to paſs through the great Streets, or to frequent any of the Churches except two or three appointed them. Out of his great Zeal againſt Proteſtants, he aſſiſted Charles IX. of France with an Army of 4400 Foot, and 900 Horſe, and licenſed him to ſell and alienate to the value of 150000 Crowns of yearly Revenue of the Church-Lands of his Kingdom, to carry on the War againſt his Proteſtant Subjects. He conferr'd on Coſmo de Medicis, Duke of Florence, the Title of Great Duke of Tuſcany, aſſiſted the Emperor with Money, and the Venetians with his Gallies againſt the Turks. He Excommunicated Queen Elizabeth, abſolving her Subjects from their Allegiance, forbidding them all to obey her or own her as their Sovereign, under the Penalty of the ſame Cenſure. Cambden obſerves, that the greateſt part of the moderate ſort of Roman Catholicks diſlik'd this Bull, both becauſe it had omitted the uſual Forms of Law, in not being preceded by any Admonition; and likewiſe, becauſe they dreaded the Conſequences of it, as to their own Eaſe and Liberty, being perfectly undiſturb'd before; ſome of them enjoying the private Exerciſe of their Religion within their own Houſes, and others Communicating with the Church of England without any Scruple of Conſcience: And many of theſe Roman Catholicks continu'd firm in their Obedience to the Queen, after the Publication of the Bull, having the Practice of Neighbouring Princes of their own Communion, (who took no Notice of the Cenſure, but kept on their uſual Correſpondence with the Queen) for their Example. Sir Paul Ricaut obſerves, That when this Pope Excommunicated Queen Elizabeth, he gave away her Crown to Mary Queen of Scots; and perſuaded Philip King of Spain to ſeize on the Effects of the Engliſh Merchants at Antwerp, and other Parts of the Low-Countries, and to aſſiſt the Roman Catholicks of England in any Attempts they ſhould be concern'd in againſt the Queen Thus we ſee, ſays the Author above-mention'd, how far a miſtaken Zeal may Tranſport good Men; which, tho' at the laſt Great Day it may plead for a Mitigation of the Crime, yet it can never come up to a full Juſtification. Cambd. Eliz. Sir Paul Ricaut's continuat. of Platin. Du Cheſne Papirius Maſſon.Thomas Monrit, &c.

PIZARRO (Francis) a Spaniard; who diſcovered and conquer'd Peru. Its affirm'd, that he was a Baſtard-child, left by his Mother at a Church-door, and, that afterwards having been acknowledged by Captain Gonzalo Pizarro for his Son, he kept his Swine in the Village of Truxilla; but happening to loſe one, and not daring to return to his Father, he fled to Seville, and from thence into the Indies; Diego Almagro, who join'd with him, bore the name of the Village he was born in, and was of ſo mean an Extract, that it could never be known who was his Father. Sandoval ſays pleaſantly, That he was own'd for a Prieſt, tho' he could neither write nor read; however it was, they entred into Peru in 1525, and having exerciſed upon the King Atabalipa and his Subjects, thoſe Cruelties that became Barbarians more than Chriſtians, they could not agree about the ſharing of the Booty. Ferdinand, Pizarro's Brother, killed Almagro, and a Son of Almagro's killed Francis Pizarro. Gonzalo, who was third Brother to this ſame, reveng'd his death, and became very inſolent in the Country, whither the Emperor Charles V. ſent the Lawyer Peter Gaſca about 1546. Mariana l. 26. Thuanus l. 1. Sandoval, the Life of Charles V. &c.

PLACENTIA, Piacenza, a City of Lombardy in Italy belonging to the Duke of Parma, with the Title of a Dutchy and Biſhoprick under Bolonia. It's ſituated in a fruitful Plain within an hundred paces of the Po, and the Beauty of its Squares, Streets, Fountains, Edifices, Sacred and Secular, have perhaps cauſed it to merit the name it bears. This City is near five miles in circumference, and has above twenty thouſand Inhabitants. It's very Ancient, and was formerly a Roman Colony. Amilcar took it and burnt it; Celius afterwards, who maintain'd there the Siege againſt Cinna and Marius, not being able to prevent its being taken, and unwilling to fall into his Enemies hands, deſired Petronius, his Friend, to thruſt him through with his ſword, which he did, and executed afterwards the ſame thing upon him himſelf. The Princes of Parma of the Houſe of Farneſe are Maſters of it now, and have made it one of the ſtrongeſt places in Italy. It hath given Birth to ſome great Men, and was the Country of Pope Gregory X. Its Territories called Ill ducato de Piacenza, or il Piacentino, is conſiderable for its Towns, Pits of Salt-Water, and for ſome Copper and Iron Mines. Ptolemy, Pliny, Livy, &c. cited by Leander Alberti in deſc. Ital. Pope Urban II. aſſembled in 1094 or 95 a Council at Plaiſance on the 4th of March, which happen'd to be the Sunday after Mid-lent. Praxedus, whom the Emperor Henry III. had rejected, made his complaints there; where was alſo debated the matter between Philip I. King of France, and Bertrade; methods to be taken to ſend Succors to Alexis Comnenus Emperor of Conſtantinople, diſtreſs'd by the Saracens, and things relating to Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline. Bertol ſpeaks alſo of ſeveral Canons made there. Innocent, at his return into France, celebrated a Council there in 1132, wherein the Antipope Anacletus was excommunicated.

PLACENTIA, a City of Spain in old Caſtile, a Biſhop's See under Toledo. It's ſituated a mong the Mountains on a riſing Ground with a ſtrong Caſtle.

PLACENTIA, Plaiſance, a City of France in Armagnac; there is another of the ſame name in Rovergne; as alſo a Fortreſs in New France in North America.

PLACENTIA, a City of Portugal, in Eſtrema-Dura, built upon the Ruins of the ancient Deobriga, in a very fruitful Plain.

PLACENTIUS (Johanes Leo) a Dominican Monk born at S. Trudon, liv'd in the Sixteenth Age in 1536. He compoſed an Hiſtory of the Biſhops of Tongres, Maeſtricht and Liege, taken out of fabulous Memoirs, and ſeveral Poems; among the reſt, one called De Porcorum pugna, all the words whereof begin with the Letter P, the firſt Verſe thus;

Plaudite porcelli porcorum pigra propago.

He imitated herein one called Hucbaldus a Benedictine Monk, who lived in the time of Charles the Bald, and who preſented that Prince with a Poem beginning every word with the Letter C. Jerom Willaus printed theſe two Poems at Louvain.

PLACIADES (Fulgentius) liv'd in the Sixth Century. 'Tis ſaid, He was Biſhop of Carthage. He wrote Three Books of Mythology, Dedicated to a Prieſt, call'd Catus. They were Printed by Comelin, in 1599, together with Hyginus, Julius Firmicus, Maternus, and Albericus Philoſophus, and other Mythologiſts. They were likewiſe Printed at Augsburg, with Locherius's Notes.

PLACIDIA, was Daughter to the Emperor Valentinian III. and Eudoxia, who, that ſhe might be reveng'd on Maximus, invited Genſerick King of the Vandals to Rome, and that barbarous Prince carried her away in the year 455, together with the young Eudoxia, whom he married to his Son Hunerick, but Placidia was ſent back to Conſtantinople, and married there to the Senator Anicius Olibrius.

PLACIDIA (Galla) Daughter to Theodoſius the Great and Siſter to Arcadius and Honorius. She lived with the latter, Emperor of the Weſt, and when Rome was taken by Alaricus in 409, ſhe became that Prince's Captive according to Oroſius: Others affirm that ſhe was taken by Athaulfus his Succeſſor, who married her ſoon after. She knew ſo well, by the ſweetneſs of her Temper, how to manage her Husband's Mind, that ſhe diverted him from his purpoſe to deſtroy Rome; and, in ſhort, Athaulfus quitted Italy, and having been kill'd in 415, Placidia was ſent back to Honorius, who remarried her to Conſtantius, a Conſul and Patrician in 417. She quickly loſt this ſecond Husband whom her Brother had made his Aſſociate in the Empire in 421. She afterwards concern'd her ſelf for nothing more than to Educate her Son Valentinian III. She was a Princeſs of great Wit and Piety whoſe life was ſpent in various Misfortunes, and eſpecially during the minority of her Son. She died about 449, and was buried at Ravenna. A Medal of hers which remains, repreſents her bearing the name of Jeſus Chriſt upon her right Arm, with a Crown which is reached to him from Heaven. Oroſius. Iſidorus in Chron. Olympiodorus apud Phot.

PLANCUS (Lucius Munatius) of a very Ancient Family in Rome. It's believ'd that he built, or at leaſt repair'd the City of Lyons, being Proconſul in Gaul in the 711 of Rome. He was the year following Conſul with M. Æmilius Lepidus. Plutarch in vita Annib. &c.

PLANETS, are wandring Stars which have their proper motion from Weſt to Eaſt, and do not keep the ſame diſtance between one another as the fixed Stars do in the Firmament. Theſe Planets have each of them their Orb, that is, a Circle wherein they make their revolution. They are ſeven in number, to wit, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, the Sun, Venus, Mercury, and the Moon. Later Aſtronomers have diſcovered nine other ſmall Celeſtial Bodies, which they reckon among the number of Planets, and call their Guards, becauſe they reſemble Officers that accompany and follow them. There are five of them that move about Saturn and four about Jupiter. Jupiter's neareſt Satelles is of great uſe in the fixing of Longitudes, by obſerving when 'tis Eclips'd by the Shadow of Jupiter. It is likewiſe obſerv'd that Saturn has a large Ring about it, which does not touch the Star, but ſurrounds it in a manner, like the Horizon of a Globe. Of the ſeven Planets there is none but the Sun that is light of it ſelf, the other ſix borrow their light from it. The Sun is alſo the only one of the Planets that glitters like the fixed Stars; its colour appears yellow; Saturn is pale, and of a leaden colour; Jupiter inclining to azure; Mars, red; Venus, ſhining; Mercury ſparkling; and the Moon, white. The Sun, according to the Calculation of Aſtronomers is an hundred ſixty ſix times as big as the Earth; Saturn fourſcore and eleven times; Jupiter fourſcore and fifteen; Mars a little leſs, or, according to others, a little bigger than the Earth: Venus is about the bigneſs of the thirty eighth part of the Earth; Mercury is about two thouſand times leſs than the Earth; and the Moon forty times. Some of our Moderns relying upon Obſervations made with Teleſcopes, have repreſented the Sun as having a great many Mountains which ſeem'd to vomit out Fire; but theſe Appearances are the effect of the Refractions which make it appear to us ſo, when 'tis near the Horizon; for when 'tis higher and free from Vapours it appears round, having almoſt no inequality. Jupiter is accompanied with four Guards or little Stars, whereof the greateſt makes its circuit in about ſeventeen days. The curious have alſo obſerved in Jupiter three Bands or Girdles, and two Spots or Blemiſhes. Mars appears ſometimes Creſcent-wiſe, as if it imitated the different Phaſes of the Moon, according to the various ſituation of it in reſpect of the Sun and our Eye-ſight, wherein are alſo obſerved two Spots. Venus has the ſame appearance as Mars, according to its various ſituation. Mercury is hard to be obſerv'd, for that it is much leſs than the Earth, and is not far diſtant from the Sun: In the mean time it is obſerv'd by Teleſcopes, That it appears oftentimes in the form of a Creſcent. The Moon ſeems to have an Humane Face, but this form does not hold when it is obſerv'd with the Teleſcope, which repreſents its Body only with two inequalities, and the appearances of Mountains and Vallies, and alſo a great many fantaſtical and irregular Figures. Late obſervers diſcovered in it ſome perpendicular Concavity in the form of Pits. The Moon has no light of its own, but that is communicated to it by the Sun, which enlightens always one half of it, except when 'tis eclipſed and darkened by the ſhadow of the Earth, that interpoſes between it and the Sun. Several Aſtronomers ſay, That the Sun is diſtant from the Earth eleven hundred thouſand Leagues; Mercury an hundred and ſixty ſeven thouſand; the Moon thirty five thouſand Leagues; Venus ſixty four thouſand; Mars twelve hundred thouſand; Jupiter eight Millions of Leagues; Saturn fourteen millions. Others make another Calculation, and ſay, That from the Center of the Earth to the Orb of the Moon is forty ſeven thouſand two hundred and four Leagues; from the Earth to the Sun, one million ſix hundred and four thouſand ſeven hundred and eleven Leagues. As to their Courſes, the Sun finiſhes his in one year, or 365 days and 6 hours; the Moon in a Month, conſiſting of 29 or 30 days; Mercury in ſix Months, or thereabouts; Venus in a year and an half; Mars in two years; Jupiter in twelve years; and Saturn in thirty. Boulanger of the Sphere. Bernier, Gaſcendus &c.

PLANTAGENET, a Surname of the Royal Family of England, beginning with Jeffery Plantagenet, Earl of Anjou, Father of Henry II. and Extinct (in the Male Branch) in Edward Plantagenet, Earl of Warwick, who was beheaded by King Henry VII. upon Pretence of being in a Conſpiracy with Perkin Warbeck. Speed. Hiſt. Great Brit.

PLANTAVIT DE LA PAUSE (John) Biſhop of Lodeve, and Abbot of S. Martin de Rurecourt, in the Dioceſs of Beauvais. He was of a Noble Family, and Educated a Calviniſt, but afterwards turn'd Roman Catholick. He had made a conſiderable Progreſs in Philoſophy, and the Belles Lettres, and afterwards applied himſelf to Divinity, and kept an intimate Correſpondence with Monſieur de Marca. He died in 1651, and wrote the Hiſtory of the Biſhops of Lodeve Planta vitis, ſeu Theſaurus Synonymicus, Hebraico-Chaldaico-Rabbinicus Florilegium Rabbinicum & Biblicum, &c.

PLANTIN (Chriſtopher) a famous Printer, was a Native of Tours, a Scholar and a Linguiſt, and made good uſe of his Acquirements, in ſeveral Prefaces which he himſelf compoſed for thoſe excellent Works he printed. He retir'd to Antwerp, and was the firſt that brought Printing into it's true Luſtre. He had an excellent Library, which he left to his Nephew Balthazar Moret, and died in 1589. Several Authors ſpeak well of him.

PLANUDES (Maximus) a Monk of Conſtantinople, liv'd to the Year 1370. He made a Collection of Epigrams, in Seven Books, publiſh'd Æſop's Fables, and turn'd Ovid's Metamorphoſis into Greek. He ſeem'd very inclinable to ſubmit to the Authority of the Latin Church; at which, the Emperor being diſpleas'd, put him into Priſon, to oblige him, by Dureſs, to write againſt the Weſtern Communion. Planudes undertook the Argument, but reaſon'd ſo faintly upon't, that Cardinal Beſſarion was ſurpriz'd at the ſlender Performance, which made him believe, that Planudes's Heart and his Hand did not go together. *Raphael. PLAON, or PLAOUT (Peter de) a Doctor of Paris, was in much eſteem in the Fifteenth Age. In 1409 he aſſiſted on behalf of that Univerſity, at the Council of Piſa; and in the Thirteenth Seſſion he proved, by very ſolid Reaſons, that the Church was above the Pope. and that Peter de la Luna, the Antipope, by the Name of Bennet XIII. ought to be deprived of his Popedom; adding, That it was the Sentiments of the Univerſities of Paris, Tholouſe, Angers, and Orleans. Peter de Plaon was imploy'd in other important Affairs in the time of the Schiſm. Spond. A. C. 1049. N. 11. du Puy, Hiſt. du Schiſme.

La PLATA, a City and Province of South America, lies in 19 of S. Lat. 180 Leagues from Cuſco, or as others ſay, 175, 150. The Country about it yields Wheat, Barly, Grapes, and Fruits in plenty. The Air is temperate, but enclining to cold. Potoſi lies in the ſame Latitude 18 Leagues from it to the W. and is yet much colder and barren alſo. It is very populous, and has beſides the Cathedral, ſeveral Monaſteries. The Biſhop's Revenue is 80000 Ducats. The old Kings of Peru imploy'd many People in this Dioceſs in digging and refining Silver in a Mountain called Parco or Porco, from which was fetched that vaſt Treaſure the Spaniards found in Peru when they conquer'd it: And Piſaro began to work theſe Mines again, but the diſcovery of the richer Veins of Potoſi put a ſtop to theſe. The Spaniards are eſtimated at 800, the Indians at 60000; but this is to be underſtood of the Dioceſs, and not of the City. Laet. p. 461.

La PLATA Fluvius, it was firſt diſcovered by Sebaſtian Cabot, ſent for that end by Ferdinand King of Arragon; and he it was that gave it the name of Rio de la Plata, in which he ſailed more than ſix ſcore Leagues. Hackl. T. 3. p. 9. c. 7. This River gives name to a vaſt Government or Province bounded to the E. by the Atlantick Ocean, to the S. by Magellanica, to the W. by Tucumana and Peru, and to the N. by Braſilia, 24 Degrees beyond the Line; Cape Blank, the moſt Southern Boundary lies in 32. This includes many great and fruitful Provinces, abounding with Corn, Wine, Sugar-Canes, Cattle encreaſed by its Fertility to a wonder, thirty Mares and ſeven Stone-Horſes having multiplied in forty Years to that degree, that many of them had no Owners. The Governour of this Province is ſubject to the Vice-Roy of Peru. They have in it but one Biſhop ſettled at Buenos Ayres. The River was firſt diſcovered in the Year 1515. The Finder of it periſhing by the Treachery of the Inhabitants in 1526. John Cabot entred it next. In 1527 Didacus Garcias, a Portugeſe, arriv'd in this River, and found Cabot there, for he had ſettled ſome Colonies. In 1535 Petro Mendoza was ſent to make a further Diſcovery of this vaſt River, and with him 800 Men, in eleven Ships he built at Buenos Ayres, and loſt at firſt many of his Men by Famine. After this there was not much done, till the Year 1540, when Alvarez Nunnez fully diſcovered the River, and ſettled many Spaniſh Colonies here. Garcias and Cabot brought from hence the firſt Silver that came from America to Spain, and for that reaſon it was called La Plata. The Mouth is 32 Leagues over, and full of Iſlands. It is ſuppoſed to run 300 Leagues, and receives many Rivers from the Andes, and out of Peru.

PLATÆÆ, a City of Bæotia, famous for the Temple of Jupiter liberator. 'Twas near unto this City that Pauſanias and Ariſtides, Generals of the Athenians and Lacedæmonians, defeated Mardonius General of the Perſians in the 75th. Olympiad, and 275 Years after the building of Rome. The Thebans in the beginning of the War in the Morea, in the 323d. Year of Rome, ſurpriz'd Plataæ, which was their Ally, and had their Throats cut by the Inhabitants; but they reveng'd themſelves afterwards, and ruin'd it in 381, three Years before the Battle of Leuctræ, as Pauſanias ſays in his Bæoticks. It had formerly ſuffered the ſame Misfortune, having been taken by the Lacedæmonians. Thucydides l. 2. Diodorus l. 2. Pauſanias in Bæot. &c.

PLATER (Fælix) a Phyſician, born at Baſil in 1536. He was in repute in the Univerſity of Balê, where he taught a long time, and died there in 1614, aged 78 Years. He left ſeveral Works behind him; as, De corporis humani fabrica & uſu; Obſervationum lib 3. de Febribus; de Alimentis; de Medicamentorum Compoſitione, &c. Melchior Adam in vit. Med. Germ.

PLATINA, of Cremona, an Hiſtorian, was born of mean Parents, and came to be raiſed by his merit. He came to Rome in the time of the Popedom of Calixtus II. and was in requeſt there. The Cardinal Beſſarion beſtowed ſome Benefices upon him; but Pope Paul II. was not kind to him; for giving too eaſie a credit to the Accuſations made againſt Platina, he kept him four Months in Priſon; and that was the reaſon he did not love this Pope. Sixtus IV. ſhewed him favour, and entruſted him alſo with the care of the Library in the Vatican. He writ the lives of the Popes till Paul II. and dedicated the Book to Sixtus his Benefactor. He died of the Plague at Rome, in 1481, aged 60 Years. Trithemius, in his Hiſtory of Eccleſiaſtical Writers, gives him this Character. He was (ſays he) a Man Learned in all Sciences, an excellent Philoſopher, a celebrated Orator, and very remarkable for his Reſolution and Conſtancy to his Principles. James de Bergamo in Suppl. Chron. Volaterran Antr. l. 21. Paul. Jovius in Elog. l. 19. &c.

PLATO, a Philoſopher, chief of the Academciks, was Native of Athens, the Son of Ariſto, born about the 325 year of Rome in the 87th. Olympiad. It's ſaid, That he applied himſelf at firſt to Painting, and afterwards became a Poet; but he was tranſported with the love of Philoſophy, and applyed himſelf entirely to it. He was at firſt the Diſciple of Cratylus and Hermogenes, Cratylus follow'd the Opinion of Hiraclitus, and Hermogenes that of Parmenides: Afterwards he apply'd himſelf to Socrates; and as he deſired to profit by all the Learned Men of his time, he went to be Inſtructed by Euclides at Megara, by Theodorus the Mathematician at Cyrene, and laſtly, by Philolaus and Euritus both Pythagoreans in Magna Græcia or Campagnia. The ſame deſire of being inſtructed in all good Literature made him take a Voyage to Egypt, there to conferr with the Egyptian Prieſts, and deſign'd to paſs as far as the Indies to ſee the Gymnoſophiſts, if the Wars in Aſia had not broke his meaſures. I'ts plain, that in Egypt he came to attain to the knowledge of the Jewiſh Religion; ſo that Clemens Alexandrinus in his firſt Book of Stromata, approves of the words of Numenius the Pythagorean, who called Plato, the Athenian Moſes; and ſeveral of the Fathers have upon this occaſion admir'd the conformity there was in many things between the Doctrine of Plato and the Old Teſtament

After his return to Athens, he taught there in the place called the Academy or Academus, from which his Diſciples were called Academicks, and his Doctrine Academick Learning. His Syſtem was compoſed of what was beſt and fineſt out of three moſt excellent Wits of Greece; for as for Natural Philoſophy and things that fell under the Senſes he was for following Heraclitus. He had reſpect in his Logick, and all that depends upon pure reaſoning, to Pythagoras; and for Moral Philoſophy he confin'd himſelf to his Maſter Socrates. All his Philoſophy was compris'd in ten Dialogues which he compos'd, where he expreſs'd his own Sentiments in the perſon of Socrates and Timæus; and thoſe of others in that of Gorgias and Protagoras. He believed there was but one God, Sovereign Creator of all things; but he allowed of other Deities, as Demons and Heroes. The firſt Fathers of the Church were almoſt all Platonicks, and made greater account of the Doctrine of the Academy, than of that of all other Philoſophers. Francis Patricius, a famous Profeſſor at Rome preſented to Pope Gregory XIV. a Book of Univerſal Philoſophy, whoſe Preface conſiſted of the praiſes of the Books of Plato, and the Characters given him by the firſt Fathers of the Church; as, S. Juſtin, Clem-Alexandrinus, Origen, Cyril, Baſil, Euſebius, Theodoret, Arnobius, Lactantius, S. Auguſtin, S. Ambroſe, and many others. This learned Profeſſor proceeded further upon this Subject in his Peripatetical Diſcuſſions, and in a Book intitled, Ariſtotles Exotericus, wherein he makes a compariſon between the Opinions of Plato and thoſe of Ariſtotle; the Parallel whereof ſhews clearly, That Plato had Sentiments more conform to Chriſtianity, and that Ariſtotle had ſuch Errors as might favour Hereticks. The Parallel he made was thus.

1. Plato affirms in ſeveral places, That there was but one God; Ariſtotle acknowledges a Firſt Mover, but joined to him 56 other Gods, which gave motion to Celeſtial Bodies; ſo that he made a kind of an Anarchy or Polyarchy, that is, a World without Sovereigns, or governed by many Sovereigns.

2. Plato ſays, That God is a moſt ſimple Being; Ariſtotle gave him the name of Animal ζῶον.

3. Plato calls God the Sovereign Wiſdom, who knows all things; Ariſtotle ſaith, He is ignorant of particular things.

4. According to Plato, God created the World, but according to Ariſtotle, the World is Eternal, and out of nothing nothing can be made.

5. According to Plato, God is above all Being, and all Eſſence; according to Ariſtotle, God is a Subſtance.

6. Plato ſaith, That God is above all that is Corporeal; Ariſtotle would have him confined to the Primum Mobile.

7. Plato affirms, That God governs the World and all its parts; but Ariſtotle maintains, That the World is govern'd by Nature and Chance.

8. Plato believed, there were Demons or pure Spirits; Ariſtotle ſays nothing of it.

9. According to the Opinion of Plato, God created the Soul of Man; according to Ariſtotle, The Soul is an Act of the Body; that is to ſay, drawn from Matter.

10. Plato ſaith, The Soul is immortal; Ariſtotle makes it die with the Body.

11. According to Plato Men riſe again after their Death; according to Ariſtotle, it's impoſſible, A privatione ad habitum non fit regreſſus. You may ſee the reſt in the Works of Francis Patricia, quoted before. S. Auguſtin in the Seventh Book of his Confeſſions profeſſeth the Books of the Philoſophers were uſefull to him, for to facilitate the underſtanding of ſome Orthodox Truths; and that he had found in ſome of them almoſt all the Beginning of the Goſpel of S. John. Juſtin Martyr, Clem. Alexandrinus, Euſebius, and many others, have alſo confeſs'd, That Plato had penetrated into the Myſteries of the Trinity. This great Philoſopher died on the 7th day of the Month called by the Greeks, Thargelion, which anſwers to our November, aged 81 years compleat, being the day whereon he was born, in the 108th Olympiad, 406 of Rome, and about 347 or 48 years before the birth of Jeſus Chriſt. Diogenes Laertius in his Life, l. 3. Cicero. Seneca. Plutarch. Juſtin. Euſeb. Aug. &c. Zonaras ſays, That in 796 in the Reign of Conſtantine VI. and his Mother Irene an Ancient Sepulchre being opened, a Corps was found ſuppoſed to be Plato's, having a Golden Plate at its Neck, importing, That Chriſt ſhould be born of a Virgin, and that he believed in him; and foretelling the diſcovery of the Corps at that time, which afforded matter of Reflection to S. Thomas 2. qu. art. 2. *Paul. PLAUTIAN, Governour of Rome, of a mean Extract, rais'd himſelf to a great Fortune under the Reign of the Emperor Severus, ſo that he married his Daughter to Antoninus the Emperor's Son. Herodian ſaith, He was a Man that was cruel and proud, and that 'twas a crime to look him in the Face. He perſecuted the Chriſtians with great fury about the year 203, and in 204. Severus cauſed him to be killed in his Palace; whether it was that Plautian had conſpired againſt the Princes, or to be rid of a proud and inſolent Man; he took the pretence of that evil deſign for it. He baniſhed his Son and Daughter into the Iſle of Lipara, where, after having endured a great deal of miſery, they were put to death by the order of Caracalla their Brother-in-law. Dion, Herodian. Spartian in Sever.

PLAUTUS (Marcus Accius) an excellent Comick Latin Poet, was of Sarſina a City of Umbria; he was in great eſteem at Rome, where he compoſed the greateſt part of his Plays. It's ſaid of him, That he fell to the way of Merchandizing, and having thereby loſt all he had, he was oblig'd, in order to get a livelihood, to ſerve a Baker and grind in his Mill: but while he was imploy'd in this laborious work, he endeavoured to ſpare ſome hours wherein he applied himſelf to the writing of his Comedies, whereof we have but twenty left, though ſeveral others are attributed to him, which are loſt. S. Jerom ſaith, he died in the 146th Olympiad, but it's more likely it might be in the 149 and the 570 of Rome, under the Conſulſhip of Publius Claudius Pulcher and Lucius Portius Licinius, as we are informed by Cicero, in Bruto lib.

PLAWE, a Town in Germany, in the Circle of Lower-Saxony, and Dutchy of Magdeburg, ſubject to the Duke of Brandenburg. It ſtands by a Lake of the ſame Name, 28 m. S. of Guſtrow.

PLAWEN, a City of Germany, in the Circle of Upper-Saxony, ſituate on the River Eiſler, 30 m. N. of Egra, 54 S. E. of Erfurt, and 68 S. W. of Dreſden.

PLAYS, Dedicated to Apollo, or Ludi Apollinares, of the Riſe of which, Livy gives the following Account. There was found among the Writings of a certain Southſayer, call'd Marcus, Advice given to the Romans, to inſtitute Solemn Plays, in Honour of Apollo, and upon their doing ſo, they were likely to have always the better of their Enemies. This Admonition made an Impreſſion upon the Senate, who order'd the Decem viri to inſpect the Sibyls Books, and upon their Report, order'd the Plays in Honour of Apollo ſhould be managed according to the Sibyls Directions. At this Solemnity, there was an Ox and two Goats ſacrific'd, the latter of which had their Horns gilt, and the People appear'd at the Ceremony, with a Crown upon their Heads. Macrobius relates, that the firſt time theſe Plays were Celebrated, the Romans receiv'd Advice that the Enemy was marching againſt them, upon which they immediately quitted the Theatre, drew up to the Enemy, and routed them by the Aſſiſtance of Apollo, who ſhot from the Sky a Cloud of Arrows upon the Aggreſſors; and this Victory was ſo quickly gain'd, that the Romans had time to return to Rome the ſame Day, and finiſh the Remainder of the Solemnity. This happen'd in the 542d. Year of Rome. At firſt there was no ſtated time appointed for theſe Plays, but afterwards 'twas fix'd upon the 6th of July. Roſin. Ant. Rom. Lib. 5. Cap. 715. As to the manner of Celebrating theſe Roman Plays in General. The Ceremony began, by a Pompous Proceſſion of the Images of the Gods, and the Statues of Eminent and Illuſtrious Perſons. The Roman Ladies making the Tour of the Circus in their Coaches, which were ſometimes drawn by Elephants. Theſe Plays or Shews were many of them firſt inſtituted by the Kings of Rome, which the Conſuls afterwards continu'd for the Diverſion of the People, and to keep up a warlike Temper in 'em. At firſt, it was the Buſineſs of the Ædiles to furniſh out and govern theſe Solemnities; but afterwards the Emperors took care of 'em, and defray'd the Charge. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. Lib. 5. Cap. 5.

PLAYS Scenick, or Stage Plays repreſented upon the Theatre, whoſe forepart they called Scene. There were four ſorts of them, Tragedy, Comedy, Satyr and Farce. Theſe Sports were ſeen firſt at Rome An. 389, after its building, where appear'd certain Morice-Dancers or Buffoons, who mounted the Stage to divert the people. In courſe of time Poets made it their ſtudy to render their Plays more taking with Men of Senſe. Roſin. Antiq. Rom.

PLAYS Secular, celebrated at Rome at the end of every Century of years, or thereabouts. Valerius Publicola, Conſul, inſtituted them at firſt in the year of Rome 245; the ſecond were Acted An. 305, the 3d 505, the 4th An. 608, and the 5th 737, in the time of the Emperor Auguſtus; the 6th. An. 800, under the Conſulſhip of Claudius the Emperor; the 7th An. 841, under Domitian; the 8th. An. 957, under the Emperor Septimius Severus and Antoninus Caracalla, which was An. 204 of the Chriſtian account. We may obſerve, That the Emperor Claudius cauſed theſe Sports to be celebrated An. Rom. 800, without any regard to the number of years ſpent ſince the Sports celebrated by Auguſtus: But only with reſpect to the year of the Foundation of Rome, which was the laſt of the Eighth Century of this City. So Philip the Emperor cauſed magnificent Sports to be made An. 1000. of this Foundation, which was the 247th year of Jeſus Chriſt. They celebrated theſe

Plays in Summer, in Harveſt time, and in the ſame Month almoſt that the Greeks celebrated their great Olympick Games. The Chriſtian Emperors hinder'd their continuation. Zoſimus l. 2. M. Raiſſant deſcrib'd them in French which deſcription, he took from Meddailes and from Zoſimus, printed at Paris in 1684.

PLAYS Trojan, Horſe-Racings and Exerciſes which the Youth of Rome uſed in the Cirque, under the conduct of a Captain whom they called the Prince of young Men. Aſcanius the Son of Æneas inſtituted theſe Games in Italy. Some believed that it was a kind of Tilting and that they fought in Chariots: But the greateſt part of our Authors aſſure us, That this was only an Exerciſe of young Gentlemen, who diſcover'd their Activity in the turnings and Counter marches of the Play. Virgil Æneid. 5. Lazius de Rep. Rom. l. 10.

PLAYS of the Capitol, or Ludi Capitolini, inſtituted in honour of Jupiter, becauſe he ſaved the Capitol when beſieged by the Galli Senones An. 364, after the foundation of Rome, Camillus having given the Gauls Battle, and defeated them, told the Senate how neceſſary a thing it was to offer ſome Thankſgiving to Jupiter, and for that end that it was fit to inſtitute ſome Sports, and to call them Capitoline Sports. The Senate conſented, and Publiſhed an Order for the Celebration of theſe Sports, eſtabliſhing a College of Men, that ſhould regulate all the Ceremonies belonging to it. Titus Livius l. 5. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 5. c. 18.

PLAYS, or Capitoline Combats, another ſort of Solemn Sports of Horſe-Racing, Wreſtling, and ſuch like Exerciſes, inſtituted by Domitian the Emperor in the Year after Rome's Foundation 839, and of Jeſus Chriſt's Birth 86; in the honour of Jupiter Capitolinus. Here were Conſorts of Muſick manag'd by excellent Maſters, Rehearſals of Poems, and other Tryals of Wit, by the beſt Poets and Orators of the times, who vied with each other, and ſtrove for the Preference. Thoſe that were at the head of the Victory, had Branches of Palm, and Crowns dreſs'd up with Ribbons; but ſuch as came of only tolerably well, had nothing but Crowns and Palm branches, without any other Ornaments. Tho. Godwin Antiq. Rom. l. 2.

PLAYS of Ceres: Sports uſed by the Romans, in Honour to this Deity, the 12th. of April, within the Circus Maximus, after having celebrated the Circenſian Sports. They held eight Days, during which time, the Roman Ladies clad in white, repreſented Ceres, in ſearch of her Daughter Proſerpina with a Torch. The Romans were alſo clad in their white Robes, and attended theſe Ceremonies. There was alſo Horſe-Fighting, in lieu whereof the Ædiles afterwards ordered Fencing. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 5. c. 14.

PLAYS of the Cirque, or Ludi Circenſes, ſo called, as being Exerciſes and Combats performed within the Cirque, or great Ring at Rome. They were formerly called Roman Sports, becauſe inſtituted by Romulus, firſt King of Rome. They were alſo called, The Grand Sports, becauſe celebrated at vaſt Charges and with magnificent Pomp. The firſt Exerciſe was by Boxing, or with Ceſtis, which were Gantlets Plated with Iron, or with Swords, Clubs, Launces, or Javelins. To which were added, Fencing, and fighting with wild Beaſts; but none but Slaves uſed the two laſt Sports. Wreſtling likewiſe was part of this firſt Exerciſe. The ſecond was Racing, which was perform'd in the Race-Ground, call'd Stadium, in Chariots. The third was Leaping, either upon level Ground, or from an Aſcent to a Deſcent, or the contrary. The fourth was playing with Quoits, Bows and Javelins, and all other ſorts of fighting at a diſtance. The fifth, Horſe-Racing. The ſixth Chariot-Fighting (See FACTIONS.) The ſeventh was Sea-Fighting, wherein was repreſented a Sea-fight upon a great Pool, or River.

PLAYS of Flora, inſtituted by the Romans in favour of the Goddeſs Flora in the 580th year after Rome was built. They were celebrated firſt of all on the 28th of April; but afterwards the firſt of May was made choice of for this Feaſt. Debauched Women appeared here by day ſtark naked upon the Theatre, and ran at night round-about all the City with Links, dancing to the Trumpet, and Acting laſcivious Geſtures, accompanied by immodeſt Songs. Cato being one day at the Celebration of theſe Sports, the people durſt not aſk, that the Women ſhould appear naked, which Cato perceiving, quitted the Theatre, to leave the people to the liberty of ſeeing them dance according to Cuſtom, and to prevent his ſeeing ſo infamous a Spectacle; which touched the people ſo much, that after great applauſes to teſtifie their eſteem of this action of Cato's, they deſired that nothing ſhould be Acted for the future upon the Stage, but what was honeſt and decent. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 5. c. 15.

PLAYS or Funeral Sports obſerved by the Romans in honour of the Dead, and to ſatisfy their Ghoſts. Theſe were Prizes fought by ſeveral Fencers who fought at the Funeral-Piles during the Funerals; and were introduced in lieu of Sacrifices, which were formerly made of the Slaves offered to the Ghoſts. It being thought fitter to condemn them to theſe Combats, the one againſt the other, than to murther them; mollifying the cruelty of this Shew, by the liberty thereby given of defence, and the hope of life given to the Vanquiſhers. It was Junius Brutus, firſt Conſul of Rome, who firſt invented theſe ſorts of Sports, to honour his Father's Funeral. They uſed Comedies too, with ſuch exceſſive Expences, that Tiberius did forbid private perſons to undertake theſe Sports, or any who had not to the value of four hundred thouſand Seſterces. The Emperor Claudius order'd, that theſe Funeral Sports ſhould be celebrated yearly, within the Circus, and committed to the care of the Ædiles; but afterwards abhorr'd the Inhumanity of the thing: But private perſons held the Cuſtom down to the time of Theodoric King of the Oſtrogoths in Italy, who totally aboliſhed it about the year of Chriſt 500. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 5. c. 24.

PLAYS of Mars, Sports which the Romans celebrated within the Cirque in honour of Mars, the 13th of May. They were alſo celebrated on the firſt of Auguſt, becauſe that was the day on which they dedicated the Temple of Mars. In theſe Solemnities they uſed Horſe-Racing, fighting with Beaſts, &c. The Hiſtorians obſerve, That Germanicus had kill'd 200 Lions in theſe Sports in the time of Tiberius the Emperor. Roſin. l. 5. c. 16.

PLAYS Megaleſian, Sports repreſented upon the Theatre at Rome in honour of Cybele, Mother to the Gods. The Roman Ladies danced before the Altar of this Goddeſs, and there they feaſted too, but frugally, and with modeſty. The Magiſtrates celebrated this Feaſt clad in their Robes of Purple, and the Slaves were not ſuffered to appear during theſe Ceremonies. The Galli being Phrygian Prieſts, went about the City leaping and dancing, and carried the Image of this Goddeſs. They call'd theſe Plays Megaleſian, from the Greek word μεγάλος, which ſignifies Great, becauſe they made them in honour of Cybele whom the Pagans called The great Mother of the Gods, or only the great Mother. Roſin l. 2. c. 13.

PLAYS Neronian, Common Combats and Solemn Plays which Nero the Emperor inſtituted An. 813, after Rome was built, which was An. Chriſt. 60, to be celebrated every five years; but this Emperor not being able to wait the expiration of five years, renewed theſe Sports in 816 of Rome, and the 63d of Chriſt. Tacit. l. 14 & 17.

PLAYS Plebeian, celebrated by the Romans in memory of the Peace which they made with the Senators, after having re-enter'd the City upon their return from the Mountain Aventin, whither they retir'd thence. Others ſay, That this was upon the firſt Reconciliation after their return from the holy Mount An. 261, after the Foundation of Rome. Others would have it, That theſe Sports were inſtituted in teſtimony of Publick Rejoycings, That the Kings were driven out of Rome An. 245, and that the people from thence dated their liberty; They made 'em within the Cirque three days together, and began the ſixteenth of October. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 5. c. 20.

PLAYS Pyrrique, Military Exerciſes, invented by Pyrrhus, Son of Achilles, or by one Pyrritus, of the City of Cydon, within the Iſle of Creet. The young Soldiers armed with nothing but Swords and Bucklers made of Box-tree, took ſeveral Turns in dancing, and made divers Motions, which repreſented the different Charges of Battalions. They likewiſe ſhewed by their Geſtures all the full Duties of Soldiers in War, how an Enemy ought to be attack'd, a Sword managed in Combat, a Dart thrown, and an Arrow ſhot. In the mean while, the Muſick animated the Soldiers, and cheer'd the Spectators by their Flutes. He, who preſided at theſe Sports, was a Perſon of Authority, who had power to chaſtiſe thoſe who failed in their Duty. Sometimes the Pyrriques were in two Parties, the one of Men, and the other of Women, as is to be ſeen by this ancient Epigram;

In ſpatio Veneris ſimulantur prælia Martis,
Cum ſeſe adverſum ſexus uterque venit.
Fæmineam manibus nam confert Pyrrhica Claſſem,
Et velut in morem Militis arma movet:
Quæ tamen haud ullo Chalybis ſunt tecta rigore,
Sed ſolum reddunt buxea tela ſonum.

The young Lords and Children of Noblemen alſo did often divert themſelves at theſe Sports, which were called Caſtrenſes, becauſe often celebrated in the Camp or Fields, for the Exerciſe and Divertiſement of Soldiers. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 5. c. 25. Dempſter in Chron. Salmaſius.

PLAYS Pythian, Publick Sports, inſtituted in Honour of Apollo, ſirnamed Pythius, becauſe he killed the Serpent Python. The Exerciſes were Running and Flinging the Quoit, Boxing and fighting at Sharps. Such as won the Prize, were crowned with Lawrels, and had ſome Fruit given them, which had been ſacrific'd before in the Temple to Apollo. Ovid ſays, That Oaken Branches were the firſt Crowns preſented to the Vanquiſhers; and Pindar tells ius, That after Lawrel Crowns, they came to give thoſe of Gold. Theſe Sports were celebrated in ſeveral Places; but thoſe of Delphos were the moſt ſolemn. It is ſaid, That Apollo himſelf inſtituted theſe Games ſeven Days after he killed the Serpent Python. Peter Faber in Agoniſtic.

PLAYS Roman, Ancient Sports celebrated by the Romans in honour of Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva. They alſo called them the Great Sports, by reaſon of the great Pomp wherewith they were celebrated; or elſe becauſe they were in honour of the greateſt Gods. They were firſt celebrated in the Cirque, and afterwards on the Theatre, and therefore called Ludi Circenſes, and ſometimes Scenick Plays. They held three Days, and ſometimes longer. Vid. CIRCENSES. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 5. c. 19.

PLECTRUDA, the Wife of Pepin, ſirnamed the Fat, or Heriſtel, Mayor of the Palace: She was a Woman of great Wit and Courage; after the death of her Husband, which happened in 714, ſhe govern'd the Kingdom in the Name of Thibaut her Grandſon; and fearing the Valour and Reſolution of Charles Martel, whom Pepin had by another Wife named Alpaida, ſhe cauſed him to be ſeized at Cologne; but the French, being uneaſie under the Government of a Woman, oppoſed her Party, choſe Ragenfroy Mayor of the Palace, and enter'd into an Alliance with Radbod Duke of Friezland. In the mean time, Charles Martel happily eſcaped out of Priſon, which nettled Plectruda moſt of any thing. It's not known in what Year ſhe died in, but ſhe was buried in the Church of Notredame, at Cologne. Some Authors will have her to be the Daughter of Grimauld, Duke of Bavaria. Gregory de Tours in app. c. 104 & 105. Adovien. in Chron. Haymo du Tillet, &c.

PLEIADES, a name which the Poets have given to ſeven Stars upon the Breaſt of the Sign Taurus, whom they have feigned to be the Daughters of Atlas and Pleione. They ſay that Jupiter placed them in the Heavens; their Names were Alcione, Celeno, Electra, Maia, Aſterope, Merope, and Taigeta. The Name of Pleiades was alſo given to ſeven Illuſtrious Greek Poets in the time of Ptolemy Philadelphus, King of Egypt, who were Theocritus, Callimachus, Lycophron, Nicander, Apollonius of Rhodes or Rhodius, Aratus and Homer the Younger. Others put in this number Æantides and Philicus in the place of Nicander and Callimachus; but ſome have made the Pleiades to conſiſt of theſe following, to wit, Homer the Younger, Soſitheus, Lycophron, Alexander, Philiſcus, Dionyſiades, and Æantides; there are thoſe alſo that put Soſiphanes inſtead of Dionyſiades. As there is among the Stars of the Celeſtial Pleiades, one that is more obſcure than the reſt, Lycophron, according to the Opinion of ſome Criticks was of that rank amongſt the Poetick Pleiades. There were moreover a famous Pleiades of French Poets named by Ronſard, in the Reign of Henry IId. and Charles IXth. Kings of France, in imitation of the Greek Pleiades; thoſe that compoſed it were Joachim du Bellay, Jodelle, Belleau, Ronſard, Dorat, Baif, and Pontus de Thiard: They made afterwards a Pleiades of Latin Poets alſo, who render'd themſelves famous, eſpecially at Paris, in the XVIIth. Century; of this number were F. Rapin, F. Commire, and F. de la Rue, Jeſuits; M. de Santeville, Prebend of S. Victor, M. Menage an Abbot, M. du Perier, a Gentleman, and M. Petit a Doctor of Phyſick. Beſides theſe in France, there appear'd at Rome, under the Papacy of Urban VIIIth. and Alexander VIIth. in this ſame Age, a Pleiades of ſeven Latin Poets, whoſe Names are theſe, Auguſtin Favoriti, Apollonius Florens, Natale Rondinini, Virginio Cæſarini, Italians; Ferdinand de Furſtemburg, Biſhop of Munſter; John Rotger Torck, Germans; Stephen Gradi, a Raguſian; their Works were printed all together at Rome and Antwerp by order of Pope Alexander VIIth. and the care of M. Furſtemberg. This Pleiades has been called the Roman or Alexandrian Pleiades, becauſe of this Pope; not that they all lived in his Reign, for they did not all appear at the ſame time. Thoſe who would have it compos'd of Illuſtrious Poets, that were Contemporaries, take Cæſarini and Apollonius out of this Pleiades, and put in their room Sidronius Hoſſchius and James Vallius, both Jeſuits. Borrichius diſſertat. ad Poet. &c.

PLESKOW, a Province in Muſcovy, giving Title to a Duke, towards Swedeland and Poland. It had formerly its particular Sovereigns till the year 1509, when John Baſilovitz, great Czar of Muſcovy, united it to his Dominions. Its Capital City is Pleskow, but called by the Ruſſians Pleskowa, and ſtands upon the River Veliski. It's divided into four quarters, all ſurrounded with Walls. Stephen King of Poland beſieged it in 1581. Guagninus ſaith, That in 1500, Walterus à Plettenburg, the great Maſter of Livonia invaded Ruſſia with an Army of 12000 Men, and near this City fought the Ruſſe, who had about 130000 Men in his Army, and beat him, about 100000 falling in the Battle and Flight, the reſt enter'd Pleskow for their Safety. The Ruſs had only Bows and Arrows, and the great Maſter had Fire-Arms, and to this the great ſlaughter is to be chiefly attributed. In 1569, John Baſilovitz, the moſt perfidious Tyrant that ever reign'd, deſigned the intire ruin of this City, but was in part prevented by the Submiſſion of the Citizens and a vaſt Sum of Money. In 1664 the Town was not of any great Circumference, but very convenient and pleaſant as being ſeated upon a fair River which riſes from a Lake about half a League from Pleskow. The Ruſs had here then a Governour, who commanded the Province, and ſhewed great Civility to the Engliſh Embaſſador. Carliſle Amb. p. 331.

PLESSIS MORNAY. Vid. MORNAY.

PLESSIS RICHELIEU, a Houſe that has deduced its Name and Original from the Land of Pleſſis in Poictou.

PLESSIS RICHELIEU (Armand John du) Cardinal of Richelieu and Fronſac, Biſhop of Lucon, &c. was third Son to Francis du Pleſſis, and born at Paris, September 5th. 1585. being of excellent Parts; he made ſuch progreſs in the Univerſity, that he acquired much Reputation. In his very Youth his Inclination carried him to great Things. At the Age of 22 he had the Addreſs to obtain a Diſpenſation to enjoy the Biſhoprick of Lucon: Pope Paul V. beſtowed it upon him, and he was conſecrated at Rome by the Cardinal de Givri, April 17th. 1607; returning afterwards into France he got Preferment at Court through the Favour of the Marchioneſs de Guercheville, firſt Lady of Honour to Queen Mary de Medicis, then Regent of the Kingdom; for he was made Grand Almoner to this Queen, and in a little time after had the charge of Secretary of State, with a Patent from the King which granted him the Precedency before the other Secretaries of State. In the mean time the death of Mareſchal d' Ancre having wrought a Change at Court, Armand John du Pleſſis retired to Avignon in 1618, and employed his time there in compoſing the Books of Controverſie we have of his, but the King recalled him to Court, and ſent him to Angoulême, whither the Duke of Eſpernon had brought the Queen, whom he inclined to an Accommodation, which was concluded in 1620. Theſe Services rendered him very acceptable to the King, ſo that he got for him a Cardinal's Cap of Pope Gregory XV. in 1622. He afterwards, in 1624 declared him chief Miniſter of State, and Preſident of his Councils, and confirmed him Grand-Maſter, Chief and Superintendant of the Navigation and Commerce of France. The Office of Admiral being ſuppreſs'd October 1626, the Iſle of Rhée was preſerved by his care, and Rochel alſo taken in 1628, ſtopping up the Haven by that famous Dike he ordered to be made there, which, as it were, bridled the Ocean in the very midſt of its Empire; after which, the King marching in Perſon to the Relief of the Duke of Mantua his Ally, the Cardinal accompanied him in the Expedition, and contributed not a little to the raiſing of the Siege of Cazal in 1629. The King's Return was of bad Conſequence to the Hugonots, for the Cardinal brought things to that paſs, that he obliged them to accept of the Treaty of Peace that had been concluded at Alets, June 27th. which contributed to the Ruin of that Party. Six months after, the Cardinal being conſtituted General of the Army in Piemont, took Pignerol, and ſuccoured a ſecond time the City of Cazal, beſieged by Spinola. The Court was then at Lyons, and the King ſick, to whom the Queen Mother, and other great Perſonages continually blamed the Cardinal's Conduct; ſo that they obliged him to promiſe that he would diſcard him. And, in ſhort, it was believed the thing was done when the Court returned to Paris; for the Cardinal was to go to Pontoiſe, and thence to Havre-de-Grace, which he made choice of for his Retreat. He was already looked upon as undone, and his Palace become forſaken and empty. And the King was to depart for Verſailles. But the Cardinal was not at all diſturbed in ſo nice a Conjuncture; but inſtead of going to the Place appointed for his Retirement, went directly to Verſailles. And being the beſt of any in the World acquainted with all the Windings of the King's Mind; he overthrew by his charming Expreſſions and powerful Reaſonings, what was thought to have been determined againſt him by the moſt effectual means imaginable. And this Journey called, Le Journee des Dupes, produced fatal Effects. The Cardinal mediated a Truce between the Poles and Swedes, in January, 1631. The King made him a Duke and Peer of France in Auguſt following; and conferred upon him the Government of Bretany. He contributed much to the reducing of ſeveral Places, as Nancy, Arras, Perpignan, Sedan; check'd the Progreſs of the Houſe of Auſtria, and made the Duke of Lorrain repent his Breaking with France. He ſtirred up the Catalonians and Portugueſe to ſhake off the Spaniſh Yoke; and fomented the Civil-war in England. But falling at laſt ſick, he died in his Palace at Paris, Tueſday, 4th. of December, 1642. He was undoubtedly a Man of very great Abilities, but as ſome think, took too much Liberty in his Expedients. He built the College of the Sorbonne as it is at this day; and his Body was buried in the Church of the ſame. Sponde. Dupleix.

PLIMOUTH, Lat. Plimuthum, one of the beſt Ports in England. It lies in the moſt Weſtern parts of Devonſhire, upon the Borders of Cornwal, betwixt the Tamer and the Plime, the firſt of which ſevers the two Counties. But the laſt, as inconſiderable as it is, gives its Name to Plimouth, as being ſeated on the Mouth thereof. This Town, which was formerly inhabited by none but Fiſhermen, is now improved to that degree, that it's become equal to ſome of the beſt Cities in England, for which it's indebted to the Conveniency and Goodneſs of its Haven, which is now ſtrongly fortified Seaward by a Fort built on S. Nicholas Iſle, Landward by two Forts on the Haven, a Caſtle upon a Hill, and a Cittadel lately built on another Hill, by King Charles II. Beſides all which, it has a Chain, for the Security of the Harbour in time of War. In ſhort, It is one of the moſt principal Magazines in the Kingdom, and a Place of great Importance, not only for the Crown; but alſo for Merchants Ships, outward or homeward bound, to anchor in upon any Caſualty. A Dock has been lately made here by his Majeſty's Order, for the Building of Ships. And as for Honorary Titles, the firſt beſtowed from this Place was that of an Earldom in King Charles IId. his Reign, who created Charles Fitz Charles, commonly called Don Carlos, one of his Natural Sons, Baron of Dartmouth, Viſcount Totneſs, and Earl of Plimouth, in the Year 1675, who dying ſoon after at Tangier, the Title was by the ſaid King conferred on Thomas, Lord Windſor, Grandfather of the Preſent Earl of Plimouth. Laſtly, 'Twas from Plimouth that the famous Sir Francis Drake ſet ſail, Anno 1577, for that Voyage in which he ſailed round the World, in a Ship called The Pelican, in three years wanting three days. Out of this Port alſo Charles Lord Howard, Admiral of England, went to fight the Spaniſh Armado. It's 250 miles from London.

New-PLIMOUTH, a Town of New-England, in America, was the firſt Colony that ſettled in that Plantation in the year 1620, to the Weſt of Cape Cod. It conſiſted at firſt but of nineteen Families, and was made up only of Puritans, who went thither for Liberty of Conſcience.

PLIMTON, a Market and Borough Town of Plimton Hundred, in the South-weſt parts of Devonſhire. It lies about four miles from Plimouth N. Eaſtward, one hundred and eighty from London.

PLINILLION, a vaſt high Hill, bordering upon Cardigan and Montgomeryſhires, in Wales, out of which the Severn, Wye and Rydal, have their Riſe.

PLINY (C. Secundus) ſurnamed the Elder, born at Verona, lived in the firſt Age, in the time of Veſpaſian and Titus; his Merit gained him the Favour of thoſe Princes, who employed him on ſeveral Occaſions; but he found time to compoſe his Natural Hiſtory which we have in thirty ſeven Books. They contain many falſe things, affirmed for Truth upon the Relations of others. He writ beſides, The Hiſtory of Nero, The Life of Pomponius Secundus, The Wars of Germany, and other things which are loſt. But the Irruption of Mount Veſuvius was fatal to him; for its affirmed, that the Fire was ſo great in the year 79, that after having ruined ſeveral Cities, and a vaſt Tract of Land, the Cinders thereof flew as far as Africa, Syria, and Egypt, and that Pliny approaching too near to obſerve it was ſuffocated with the Smoke and Flames. The beſt Edition of Pliny was publiſh'd by F. Hardouin, at Paris, in five Volumes in Quarto, 1685. Pliny the Young, lib. 6. ep. 16. Tacitus in Annal. S. Jerom in Chron. Onuphrius Com. in Faſt. &c.

PLINY (C. Cæcilius Secundus) ſurnamed The Young, was of Como, a Nephew to Pliny of Verona, and adopted by him for his Son, as himſelf witneſſeth. He lived in the time of Trajan, in 106. and was Diſciple to Quintilian. The Emperor had an Eſteem for him, and raiſed him to the higheſt Charges, and indeed he juſtly merited it, as being one of the fineſt Wits of his Time. It was while he was Conſul he pronounced in the Senate the Panegyrick of Trajan, which we look upon as his Maſter-piece. His Epiſtles alſo are full of Wit and Politeneſs, contained in ten Books; in one whereof we may ſee, that being Governor of Bithynia, he was aſhamed to put the Chriſtians to Death; and writ to Trajan, that after an exact Inquiry, he had found that thoſe that bore that Name, were in their Sentiments more Religious than others, in their Words more Modeſt, and more Vertuous in their Lives; that they made profeſſion of great Charity; that they abhorred Theft and Cheating; and that their Crime was but a ſtrange Opinionativeneſs in their Superſtition. The Lives of Illuſtrious Men is moreover attributed to Pliny; but it's affirmed, they are of Aurelius Victor's compoſing. Euſebius in Chron.

PLISTANES, a Greek Philoſopher, born at Elis, ſucceeded in the School of Phedo, and left the Care of it to Menedemus. Diogenes Laertius in Phed. lib. 2.

PLOCZKO or PLOSCO, Lat. Plaucum, a Palatinate of Poland, that takes its Name from that of a conſiderable City ſituated upon the Viſtula, with a Cittadel, and is a Biſhop's-See under Gneſna.

PLOTINA, Wife to the Emperor Trajanus, illuſtrious for her Modeſty and Goodneſs, underſtanding that the Provinces were overcharged with Impoſts and Taxes, acquainted Trajan, that it would be diſadvantageous to the glory of his Empire. She alſo contributed much to Adrian's Adoption, and he was not wanting in his Acknowment of it; having learnt at Niſmes, in the year 122, in a time that he viſited the Empire, that Plotina was dead, he erected a Temple, Palace, and Amphitheatre in honour of her, ſome Remains whereof may ſtill be ſeen in that City. Dion & Spartian in Adrian. Angelois Hiſt. Aug.

PLOTINUS, a Platonick Philoſopher, was born at Lycopolis, a City of Egypt, and lived in the third Age. He ſtudied for twelve years under Ammonius a Chriſtian Philoſopher, and afterwards came to Rome, in the time of the Emperor Philip, in 245, where he taught, and his Scholars conſiſted of Chriſtians as well as Heathens. He was of a fantaſtical Humour, would have built a City and call'd it Plato's Town, where he deſign'd to oblige the Inhabitants to live up to the Rules of Plato's Commonwealth, which the Emperor Galienus intended to incourage, but was diſſuaded from it by his Council, as a thing ridiculous and impoſſible. Plotinus compoſed a Work in 54 Books, divided in Enneads. Porphyrius adds alſo, that he writ againſt the Gnoſticks. He died in 270, aged 66 years. Porphyrius in his Life. Julius Firmicus lib. 1. Aſtron. lib. 3. q. 8.

PLURS, an Italian Prefecture belonging to the Griſons, by the Gift of Maximilian Sforza, Duke of Milan, in 1513. It takes its Name from the chief Town, once ſeated at the foot of the Alps, near Chiavenne, upon the River Maira, the chief of ſeveral Villages that lay in the ſame bottom, now nothing but a deep and bottomleſs Gulf, for on April 26th. 1617. a huge Rock falling from the Top of the Mountains overwhelmed it, and deſtroyed 1500 People, left no ſign or ruin of a Town, but in place of it a great Lake, of about two miles in length. Dr. Burnet ſaith it had 2200 Inhabitants, and was nobly built by the rich Factors of Milan, who came hither to enjoy the Air and Freedom of the Place. He ſaith alſo, that they had Warning of the Earthquake before it happened by one who ſaw the Mountain cleaving, but they laughed at him, and would not believe him, ſo that he only eſcaped, his Daugher periſhing with the reſt.

PLUTARCH, of Cheronea a City of Bæotia, was a Philoſopher, Hiſtorian and Orator, in great Eſteem in the time of Nerva and Trajan. He ſtudied under Ammonius, afterwards travelled into Greece and Egypt, there to conſult with the Learned, and in thoſe ſeveral Journeys was very careful to take Particular Memoirs of whatever he met with that was curious. Then he came to Rome, and was eſteemed by Trajanus, who honoured him with the Conſular Dignity, according to Suidas; ſent him into Illyricum, in the Quality of Intendant of the Province, and imployed him in divers Negotiations After which he returned into his own Country, where it's like he died; but what year it was we know not. S. Jerom ſaith, He lived till the Third of Adrian, which was the year 119. But if what Plutarch himſelf affirms in his Table Diſcourſe be true, that he had been Prætor or Archon of Cheronea, he muſt have lived long after, perhaps till the Reign of Antoninus Pius. He writ The Lives of the Illuſtrious Men of Greece and Rome, and ſeveral other things, wherein he manifeſts the general Knowledge he had in all things; but 'tis obſerved that ſome of theſe Treatiſes are of the compoſing of another Plutarch called the Younger. Beſides which, there has been alſo another that was Secretary to, and afterwards Author of the Life of the Emperor Juſtinian. John Rualdus in vita Plutar. Photius Cod. 245, 259, & 269. Voſſius lib. 2. de Hiſt. Græc. c. 10.

PLUTO, the Son of Saturn, and Brother to Jupiter and Neptune, had Hell for his Share, as his Brothers had Heaven and the Sea. He is repreſented in a Chariot drawn by four Black Horſes, and having a Bunch of Keys in his Hand, intimating that the Key of Death was in his Cuſtody, and that the Horſes ran through the four Ages of Men. The Poets have alſo feigned that he raviſhed Proſerpina, the Daughter of Ceres. 'Tis thought that Pluto was the firſt that invented Funeral Solemnities, which gave occaſion to ſay, he was the God of Hell. Others confound him with Plutus, the God of Riches. He has been otherwiſe called Hades, that is, Death: Vid. AIDONEUS. He was believed to be the God of Riches; from whence he took his Name of Pluto, becauſe he had Mines in Epirus whereat he wrought; and hence the Poets place Hell under the Earth.

PLUTUS, The God of Riches, coming from the Greek word Πλοῦτος. The Poets ſay he comes towards one Lame, but at his Departure has Wings; intimating thereby the difficulty that is found in gathering of Wealth, and how ſoon many times it's loſt again. They repreſented him alſo Blind; becauſe, ſay they, he confers upon the baſeſt his Treaſure, and leaves the moſt meritorious deſtitute. Roſs Myſtagog. Poetic.

PLUVINEL (Antony) a Gentleman of Dauphine. He it was who in France firſt open'd for the Nobility thoſe Schools of Civility and Exerciſe called by the Name of Academies, which he fetched from Italy. They were founded by him in the Reign of Henry IVth. And he taught Lewis XIIIth to ride. He has writ a Book of the Inſtructions he gave, and died Auguſt 24th. in the year 1620. Charier Hiſt. Abbreg. di Dauphiné.

PO, Lat. Padus, Eridanus, a River in Italy, famous for the Fall of Phaeton, that runs from Weſt to Eaſt, ariſing from the Alps, in Mount Viſa, that lies between Dauphiné and the Marquiſate of Saluces. It paſſeth near to the ſaid City of Saluces; thence to Carmagnole, Turin, and the Territories of the Duke of Savoy, where it receives into it ſeveral ſmall Rivers; from thence it runs and watereth Montferrat, the Milaneſe; and paſſing by Cazal towards Valence and Pavia, thence goes to Placenza, Cremona, to the Countries of the Dukes of Parma and Mantua; and afterwards through the Lands of the Church, into the Dutchy of Ferrara; where it's divided into two Branches, which are again ſub-divided into ſeveral other Branches, and diſcharge themſelves almoſt all into the Gulph of Venice. This River receiveth into it the Adda, the Teſin, &c. and is very dangerous in reſpect of its Inundations, notwithſtanding the Dikes made to keep it in. It receives about thirty other Rivers from the Alps and Appennine, and being much the greateſt River in Italy, and highly magnified by the Latin Poets, who compare it with the Nile and Danube, call it the King of Rivers, and the greateſt in the World. It is indeed a very noble River, and the Conſtellation Eridanus takes it's Name from it; but there are a great many greater Streams in Europe. Its principal Branches are, Il Po grando, Il Po di Ariano, Il Po di Valana, & Il Po d' Argenta. Strabo, lib. 5. Pliny, lib. 3. c. 16. Solin. Polyb. &c. quoted by Leander Alberti Deſc Ital.

POCKLINGTON, a Market Town of Harthill Wapentake, in the Eaſt-riding of Yorkſhire.

POCUTIA, a little Province in Poland, in Black-Ruſſia, towards Moldavia, and Tranſilvania, having no Towns of Conſequence in it.

PODIEBRACK or POGGEBRACH (George) was Governour of Bohemia, for young King Uladiſlaus, Poſthumous Son to Albert of Auſtria, and made himſelf to be declared King in 1458. He won a Battle from the Moravians, and got himſelf to be crowned in 1461. But his Inclination to the Huſſites loſt him the Kingdom. The Popes were his Enemies, and his Subjects took Arms againſt him, and invited Matthias Corvinus to take Poſſeſſion of the Crown, whom he was too weak to reſiſt. He died afterwards of a Dropſie, the 22d. of March, in the Year 1461. Cochleus Hiſt. de Huſſit. lib. 12. Michovius lib. 4. Dubrav. lib. 30, 31. Hiſt. Bohem. &c.

PODLASSIA, a Province of Poland, called by them Podlaske, is bounded on the Eaſt by Volhinia, on the North by Lithuania, on the Weſt by Maſſovia, and on the South by Ruſſia Nigra It was united to the Kingdom of Poland in 1569. It belonged formerly to Lithuania, and was diſmembred from it. The principal Place in it is Bielsko. It is called Podelaſſia. Next Bielks are Tycokzyn and Auguſtow, two ſtrong Places. The other Towns are Bransko; Suras, Knyſſyn, Narew, Waſilkow and Auguſtow.

PODOLIA, a great Province of Poland, in Lithuania, between Moldavia, Black-Ruſſia, and Volhinia. It's uſually divided into the Higher-Podolia, that lies to the Weſt, wherein are the Cities of Bar and Kaminieck; and into the Lower, which lies to the Eaſt; and has in it the City of Bracklaw. This Province is very fertile, hath been often waſted by the Inroads of the Tartars and Coſſacks, and was lately the Theatre of the War between the Poles and the Turks, who made themſelves Maſters of Caminieck. By the Peace of Carlowitz it was entirely reſtored to the Poles by the Turks.

POECILE, a Gallery in Athens, enriched with curious Paintings, where Zeno read his Philoſophick Lectures, and where his Followers diſputed, for which Reaſon they were called Stoicks; from the Greek word Στοὰ which ſignifies a Gallery. The word Pœcile comes from ποίκιλος, deverſified, becauſe of the variety of Pictures there.

POGGE or Poggius, Braciolin or Brandolin, or Florentin, lived in the XVth. Age, and was Secretary to the Popes Eugenius IVth. and Nicholas Vth. and to ſix more, as himſelf witneſſeth. He continued at Rome till he was ſeventy two years old, when he was recalled to Florence, to be Secretary to the Republick. He was a Man of Learning, but Satyrical, as appears by his Invectives againſt Laurentius Valla. He writ ſeveral things as, De varietate fortunæ, two Books of Epiſtles, one of Stories, in which he fails both in Point of Modeſty and Religion; and an Hiſtory of Florence looked upon not to be very candid and exact. He was at Conſtance in the time the Council was celebrated there, where he found the Works of Quinctilian and Aſconius, and in his Travels in Germany he tranſcrib'd the Books of Tully de Finibus, & de Legibus, which before that time had not been ſeen in Italy. He died in 1459. aged eighty years. Paulus Jovius in Elog. lib. 10. Raphael de Volterra lib. 21. &c.

POICTIERS, upon the Clain, called anciently Auguſtoritum, Pictavium, Limonium, Pictava, Pictavorum Urbs. A City of France, which has an Univerſity, and is a Biſhop's-See. It's one of the greateſt and ancienteſt in the Kingdom, ſituate upon a Platform raiſed between the River of Clain and another ſmall one, which there form a great Pond or Lake. Theſe Rivers meet at one end of the City near unto a Gate called S. Lazarus, where is an old Caſtle, believed to be built by the Romans, who continued there a great while, and built an Amphitheatre, and ſeveral other Edifices, whereof there are yet ſome curious Remains. In this City they have a Preſidial and Seneſchalſhip that appeal to the Parliament of Paris, with a Generality, Exchequer-Office and Mint, which marks with the Letter G. The Parliament of Paris ſat here for ſome years, while the Engliſh were Maſters of the Capital of the Kingdom in the Reign of Charles VIIth. who erected an Univerſity here in 1431. Poictiers is governed by a Mayor, twelve Alderman, and twelve ſworn Councellors. Its Church is very famous. It has five Abbies, twenty four Pariſhes, and ſeveral Monaſteries. The Dioceſs in general contains 722 Pariſhes, under 24 Arch-prieſts, with 30 Abbies, 25 Chapters, and a great many Priories. Within half a League of Poictiers may be ſeen a famous Stone upon the Way that leads to Bourgos. It's great and ſquare, five and twenty foot long, and about ſeventeen broad, ſupported by four other Stones, concerning which the People have many fabulous Stories, and whereon is engraven this Dyſtich.

Hic Lapis ingentem ſuperat gravitate Coloſſum,
Ponderis & grandi ſydera mole petit.

There have been ſeveral Councils held in this City, as one in 589. whereunto were ſummoned the Monks of that Place, to appear for ſome Diſorder they had committed, but refuſed, whereupon enſued much Trouble: And another in 1002, or 1010. *&c. POICTIERS (Diana) Dutcheſs of Valentinois, famous in the Reign of Henry IId. was the Daughter of Lewis de Poictiers, Count of S. Valier, and married to Lewis de Breze, Count of Malevrier, &c. Governour of Normandy, by whom ſhe had two Daughters, Frances, Wife to the Duke of Bouillon, and Loviſa, married to the Duke of Aumaul, Diana's Father was accuſed of favouring the Deſigns of Charles, Conſtable de Bourbon, and ſo ſiezed at Lyons, where Francis Iſt. was, and condemned to die; the Fear whereof changed his Hair in one Night to perfect Gray; ſo that the Gaoler, when he ſaw him in the Morning, could hardly be perſuaded that he was his Priſoner; the Fear did alſo put him into a violent Fever, which gave occaſion to the Proverb, The Fever of St. Valier. For his Daughter, notwithſtanding ſhe had got his Pardon, could not with all her Endeavours recover his Health. After this Henry IId. fell paſſionately in Love with her. For though ſhe was 47 years of Age, ſhe was ſtill very beautiful. She degraded whom ſhe pleaſed, and advanced her own Creatures. But after King Henry's Death, Queen Catharine de Medicis contented herſelf, for ſome particular Reaſons, to baniſh this Rivaleſs the Court only, and to take from her the richeſt Jewels ſhe had in her Poſſeſſion that belonged to the King. She died April 26th. in the year 1566. De Thou Hiſt. lib. 2. & 23. Charier Hiſt. de Dauph. Mezeray, &c.

POICTOU, a Province of France, formerly part of Aquitain, being about ſixty Leagues from Eaſt to Weſt, having Berry, Limoſin, and Tourain to the Eaſt, Angoumois and Santonge to the South, Anjou and Britany to the North, and to the Weſt, the Britiſh Sea. It's divided uſually into the higher and lower Poictou. The higher, which is to the Eaſt, is much greater than the other, whoſe capital City is Poictiers, the other are Maillezais, formerly a Biſhop's-See, but transferred ſince to Rochel, Fontenay le Comte, the Capital of the Lower-Poictou, Chatelleraud, Richelieu, Thouars, S. Maixant, Loudun, Partenay, la Ganache, Monmorillon, Mirebeau, &c. The Country is watered with Rivers, fruitful and abounding with Corn, Wine, Cattle, &c. its Inhabitants Courageous, and Lovers of Learning. The Romans were Maſters of this Province, by the Name of Aquitain. The Vandals, Huns, or Germans, under the Conduct of their King Crocus, ruined it in the fifth Age, and plundered Poictiers. The Romans quitted it in the Reign of Honorius to the Wiſigoths, who were driven thence by Clovis the Great, about the year 510, after the Battle of Civeaux. Poictou was under Sovereign Counts of its own from Charlemaign's times till 1271, when upon the failure of the Line it was united to the Crown of France. It was much haraſſed during the Civil-Wars, about Religion, in the XVIth. Age. The Proteſtants poſſeſs'd themſelves of Poictiers, but the Mareſchal de St. Andrew took and plundred it in 1562. The Battle of Poictiers was very fatal to France, in 1356. King John being made a Priſoner there by the Engliſh. Peter Roger. Picton. Deſcrip.

POISSI, Lat. Piſciacum, a little Town of France upon the Seine in the Iſle of France. It's famous for the Birth of

S. Lovis. ſtands within ſix Leagues of Paris, wherein are ſeveral Religious Houſes and a fine Monaſtery of Dominicans founded by Philip the Fair. Here was that famous Conference held between four Cardinals, almoſt forty Biſhops, and the ableſt Divines of France of the Roman Catholick Perſuaſion, and twelve or thirteen Proteſtant Miniſters, in 1561. But the Bope, fearing they might come to diſcuſs Matters cloſely, diſſolved the Aſſembly, of which Morery, as partial as he is, ſpeaks thus: In the mean time, the Cardinal of Ferrara, Legate of the Holy See, arrived at Poiſſi accompanied with F. James Laynes, a Spaniard, General of the Jeſuits, who refuſed to confer with the Miniſters whom he called Wolves, Apes, and Serpents, and confidently remonſtrated to the Queen, that it belonged not to her to hold Aſſemblies in Matters of Religion, eſpecially when the Pope had called a General Council. There were Endeavours us'd to reduce the Controverſie to two Heads, the one relating to the True Church, and the other to the Euchariſt. The Cardinal of Lorrain, who harangued in the Conference, declar'd in the cloſe of his Diſcourſe, that an Agreement with the Hugonots was Impracticable, unleſs they would own the Reality of our Saviour's Body in the Lord's Supper, which Opinion of the Cardinal, was approv'd by the reſt of the French Biſhops. In ſhort, the Diſputes continued till their over-heated Spirits were capable to do nothing but jangle, ſo that the Conference broke up November 25th. Sponde An. Chr. 1561. *& ſeq. POLA, Lat. Julia Pietas, an ancient City of Iſtria, belonging to the Venetians, ſituate upon the Adriatick Sea, with a good Haven, between Parenzo, and the Gulf il Quarnero. It's pretended to have been a Colony of the People of Colchos, who purſued the Argonauts, which has been deſcrib'd very wittily by the Poet Callimachus, but with little appearance of Truth. This City has been without doubt a Roman Colony. There are divers Inſtances of its Antiquity, as an Amphitheatre, called l'Orlandino, or Rouland's-Houſe, a Triumphal-Arch, called the Gilded Gate, which ſerves for the Gate of the City, ſeveral Inſcriptions, &c. The Venetians ſend a Governour to Pola, that takes the Title of Count upon him. The Place is well peopled, and has a ſmall Cittadel. In the year 1606, or thereabouts, Juriſſa, a baniſhed Corſaire, or Buccaneer, of Segna, with 150 Uſcochi (Pirates) entered this City by night at one of the Poſterns, and plundered it of Money and Goods to a very great Value. The Inhabitants the next day took Arms, and drove out theſe Villains, recovering a good part of the Booty, but yet they carried off about 4000 Ducats. Hiſt. de gli Uſcochi, p. 216. Pliny, Strabo, Pomponius Mela, mention it, &c.

POLAND (Amand) a Proteſtant Divine, was of Oppaw, in Sileſia, where he was born, December 16th. 1561. He ſtudied at Breſlaw, and elſewhere, and afterwards read Lectures in Divinity, at the Univerſity of Bale, where he died, July 18th. 1610. aged 49 years. He commented upon Daniel, writ de quatuor Monarchiis, Analyſis Hoſeæ cum Orationibus Hiſtoricis. De Anno Jubelæi, De Morte Chriſti, &c. Mel. Adam. in Vita Theol. Germ.

POLAND, called by the Inhabitants Polska, from the word Pole or Pola, which in the Sclavonian Tongue ſignifies a Plain, is an Elective Kingdom of Europe, that comprehends the ancient German Sarmatia, and the Eaſtern part of Germany, towards the Viſtula. It's now much greater than formerly, becauſe Lithuania, and ſeveral other Provinces are united to it. For before it was but barely what we call'd the Great and Little Poland. It has Muſcovy and Tartary to the Eaſt, Tranſilvania and Moldavia to the South, Germany to the Weſt, and to the North the Baltick-ſea, Livonia, part of White-Ruſſia or Muſcovy. This Country may be divided into Lithuania and the Kingdom of Poland, which again is ſubdivided into the Greater and Leſſer Poland, in which laſt ſtands Cracovia, the Capital of all the Kingdom. In Great Poland are the Cities of Poſnan, Kaliſch, Gneſna, &c. Beſides which it comprehends the Provinces of Mazovia, wherein are Warſaw and Ploczko, Cujavia wherein is Uladiſlaw, Royal Pruſſia that takes in Dantzick, Elbing, &c. and Ruſſia Nigra, with the Cities of Leopold, and Prezmyſi. Lithuania, wherein are the Cities of Wilna, Novogrodeck, Minks, &c. is divided into Volhinia, which takes in the Cities of Lucko, Kiow, &c. Podolia, where is Kaminick, &c. Poleſia, in which ſtands Breſſici and Samogitia, whoſe Capital is Medniki. This Kingdom may moreover be divided into thirty four Palatinates, each Palatinate having Caſtellans under them, that in the whole Country amount to the number of eighty ſeven. There are in it two Archbiſhopricks, which are thoſe of Gneſna and Leopold, and fifteen Biſhopricks, ſeveral Abbies and Univerſities as Cracovia, Royaumont, Konigsberg, Zamoski, &c. The Air of Poland is very good but piercing, the Soil very fertile but woody, eſpecially in Great Poland. It has Silver and Iron Mines, Wine, and excellent Fruits; abounds in Honey, Wax, Veniſon, Fowl, Wood for Building, Bevers, Otters, Elks, Sables, and ſuch other wild Beaſts; Copper, Lead, Iron, and eſpecially fine Steel. The Gentry are Tall and Strong, manage their Fauchions with much Addreſs and Dexterity, and are both Learned and Liberal; but yet Fierce, Proud, Obſtinate, and Jealous of their Liberties. This Obſtinacy and Jealouſie of their Liberty has often given the Tartars and Muſcovites an opportunity to over-run and deſtroy a great part of their Country, and was the Reaſon why the King of Swedeland, with an Army of forty thouſand, reduced to the laſt Extremity, a Country whoſe leaſt Armies generally exceeded 200000 Fighting Men. For their Miſunderſtanding is ſuch, and the Authority of their Prince ſo little, that before the Dyet is aſſembled and the Gentry come to a Reſolution, the Enemy have time to do what they pleaſe, there being no Place of Strength to put a Stop to them until they come to Warſaw. The Polanders are good Soldiers, eſpecially the Cavalry, being armed with a Carbine, a pair of Piſtols, an Hatchet at one ſide, and Fauchion at the other, with a Quiver full of Arrows, and a Bow behind their Backs, which they make uſe of after they have diſcharged their Fire-Arms, when the Enemy runs. They are great Travellers, faithful, obliging, and civil to Strangers, magnificent in their Cloaths and Entertainments, which are frequent among them. In their Meat, they uſe a great quantity of Saffron, Spice and Sugar. They pretend to a great deal of Devotion, faſt Fridays and Saturdays, but will be drunk, and fight luſtily on thoſe days. The Peaſants are the pooreſt Wretches in the World, having not the leaſt thing which they call their own, and being Subject to Lords that treat them worſe than Gally-ſlaves. The Gentry have Power of Life and Death over their Domeſticks and Peaſants, and if a Neighbour kills a Boor, it's but paying the Price he is rated at, and the Buſineſs is made up. And whereas in other Countries a Nobleman is ſaid to be worth ſo much a year, here he is ſaid to be Maſter of ſo many Slaves, who work hard, live on little, and dwell in pitiful Cabins, daubed with Mud and covered with Straw. Their Children play, eat, and ſleep with the Pigs, whilſt the Father makes uſe of the Hog-Trough and Cow-Rack for Table and Bed. 'Tis true, ſome times they have a little Room in their Cottages, which is their Stove, where the chief of the Family lie upon Skins. There are no Inns in the Country. The Gentlemen, when they travel, lodging with their Friends, or being treated by the Boors, who are obliged to entertain them upon ſuch Occaſions. If any of the Gentry happens to be taken Priſoner, the King is obliged to ranſome him. Their Drink is Beer and Metheglin. They drink no Water becauſe it ſtinks in Poland, where it is ſtagnant in the Plains. Their Women are of ſhort Stature, very ſimple, yet are not wanting in decent Behaviour and Civility. The Men are ſomewhat Jealous, and entruſt them only with their neareſt Kindred when they are in the Wars or abſent from Home. They ſpeak there the Sclavonian Tongue. Beſides which they all ſpeak Latin. The firſt Duke of this Kingdom was Lechus, who began his Reign about 550. His Poſterity continued in fourteen Deſcents, to Miciſlaus, or Miesko, who began to reign in 964, and who was the firſt Chriſtian Duke. Boleſlaus, the Son of Miciſlaus, received the Title of King from Otho, Emperor of Germany, when that Prince viſited the Tomb of S. Adelbert, who was killed by the Pruſſians. This King left Miciſlaus IId. the Father of Caſimir Iſt. to whom his Son Boleſlaus IId. ſucceeded. This laſt, ſurnamed The Cruel, put to Death Staniſlaus, Biſhop of Cracovia, whereupon Poland was deprived of the Title of Kingdom until Primiſlaus was choſen King in 1295. Lewis, King of Hungary, choſen after Caſimir the IId. left two Daughters, the youngeſt of which, called Hedwige, being declared Queen, married Jagellon, Duke of Lithuania, who thereupon became Chriſtian, and took the Name of Ladiſlaus IVth. and united his Territories to Poland in 1386. He had for Succeſſors Ladiſlaus Vth. Caſimir, John, Albert, Alexander, Sigiſmond I. and Sigiſmond II. which laſt dying without Iſſue in 1572. the Polanders choſe Henry Duke of Anjou, Son to King Henry II. of France, who was crowned there in 1574. but coming to France, to ſucceed his Father Charles IXth. in 1576. ſome of the Electors named Stephen Bathori Prince of Tranſilvania, and another part Maximilian Archduke of Auſtria, which occaſioned a War, wherein the firſt got the better; but dying without Children in 1586, Sigiſmond IIId. Son to John, King of Swedeland, was put upon the Throne in 1587, and after his Father's death took Poſſeſſion of the Crown of Swedeland; but the Sweeds revolted, and choſe Charles Prince of Sudermania, Sigiſmond's Uncle, made War againſt Poland, and poſſeſſed themſelves of Riga in 1625. Sigiſmond died in 1632. His Son Ladiſlaus ſucceeded, who dying in 1648, John Caſimir was choſen to ſucceed him. He voluntarily abdicated the Crown, and was ſucceeded by Michael Koribut Wieſnoviski, who died in 1672. and had for his Succeſſor John Sobieski, renowned upon many Accounts, but more particularly for his Relief of Vienna, June 17th. 1686. and is ſucceeded by Frederick Auguſtus, Elector of Saxony, who carried the Election againſt all the Competitors, and now reigns King of Poland. As to Government, Poland is Monarchical and Ariſtocratical; Monarchical, becauſe they have a King; but Ariſtocratical, becauſe this Prince's Power is ſo limited that he cannot, without the Conſent of the Senators, undertake any conſiderable Matters. Others add to the two former, a Democracy or Popular Government, which is that of the Gentry. The Archbiſhop of Gueſna, Primate of the Kingdom, has the Adminiſtration during the Interregnum. He aſſembles the States for the Election of a new King, appoints the time and place for it. The King being choſen by the Plurality of Voices, this Prelate calls him into the middle of the Aſſembly, and then leads him to the Church, where he ſwears he will preſerve the Privileges of the Kingdom, and obſerve the eſtabliſhed Laws, which oblige him to do nothing without the Approbation of the States. In Buſineſs of Importance the King ſends by his Chancellor Letters, which he calls Inſtructionis Literæ, to the Palatines, to acquaint them with what he deſigns to propoſe to them, and the time that he would have them come to Court. Upon the Receipt of theſe Letters, each Senator examines in particular the Nature, Quality and Conſequences of the Propoſitions, to which he has full Liberty to make what Anſwer he thinks ſuits beſt with the publick, and his own private Intereſt. The King ſends his Letters alſo into the Palatinates, to aſſemble the Gentry, who chuſe a Nuncio, that is, a Man of Parts and Capacity to appear for the Province; but they muſt all agree unanimouſly in their Choice; for if but a private Gentleman refuſes his Suffrage, it hinders the Election, and the Province from having either Vote or Privilege in the States. When theſe Provincial Aſſemblies are ended, the Senators and Nuncio's come to Court, where the King, attended by his Chancellor, propoſes the thing a-new, and hears their Advices. If they all agree, nemine reclamante, nemine diſſentiente, as they ſpeak, things go well. If they differ, then the Diet breaks up, and each returns to his Home. Among the Cities, none but Cracovia, Dantzick, and Vilna have the Privilege to ſend Deputies to the Diet that ſit among the Nobles. Their Provincial Aſſemblies being open to the meaneſt Peaſant, the Enemies of the State never fail to know what is debated in them, to the great Diſappointment of their Undertakings. The King's principal Revenue conſiſts in the Salt-pits near Cracovia, in the Copper, Lead, and Silver Mines, and Tribute from the Jews. Beſides that, he has the Nomination to Biſhopricks, and to other Places of Honour and Truſt, as the Commands in the Army, the Officers of State, of the Exchequer, and the Courts of Juſtice. The Crown-General has great Incomes, and by virtue of his Office, is Grand-Maſter of the King's-Houſhold, Grand-Maſter of the Ceremonies, Introductor of Embaſſadors, Lord High Steward, Sovereign Judge, &c. The Generals of the Kingdom and Lithuania, have a Sovereign and unlimited Power in the Field. Beſides Palatines and Chatelains, the Towns have their Burgraves, Judges, and Magiſtrates. But there goes an Appeal from their Sentence to Cracovia for Great Poland; and to Lublin for Little Poland and Pruſſia. As to their Religion, they were formerly Idolaters, and adored the ſame Divinities that the Greeks, Romans, and Germans did. Tertullian affirms in his Treatiſe againſt the Jews, That the Goſpel was preached in Sarmatia, but we know it was not received in that of Europe, which is Poland, till the tenth Age. The Reformation, about 1535, begun in theſe Countries, but was never generally embraced. The Greek Church has ſome footing here too. But the moſt general is the Roman Catholick. Gregory Pauli, Miniſter of Cracovia, preached Arianiſm there about the Year 1566, but Sigiſmund Auguſtus expelled him, together with George Blandrata, Lelio Socini, Valentin Gentilis, and ſome others. Fauſtus Socinus, who gave Name to the Socinians, came afterwards, and left his Diſciples there; who continued till 1660, when they were baniſh'd by King John Caſimire. To underſtand the State of the Socinians in Poland, and the manner of their Expulſion in 1660; the Reader may conſult a Book, call'd Hiſtoria Reformationis Polonicæ. Munſter, Mercator, Ortelius, Merula, Bertius, Cluverius, *Cromer Hiſt. POLEMARKE, that is, Chief of the War, from the Greek πόλεμος, war, and ἀρχεῖν, to command; he commanded in the Athenian Army, and aſſiſted the Kings with his Council. In the time of Peace he adminiſtred Juſtice to the Citizens and Strangers, Jul. Paul. Amongſt the Ætolians, he was called by this Name, who had the Care of the Gates of the City. Alex. de Alex. lib. 3. ch. 16.

POLEMIUS, a Grand Heretick, about 373. He drew his Errors from the Books of Apollinarius, the principal whereof was the mixture which he ſaid there had been between the word and the fleſh. His Diſciples were called Polemians, and confounded with the Apollinarians. Theodoret. lib. 4. Hær. Fab. Epiphan. Hær. 77, & 78.

POLEMON, King of part of Pontus, in the time of the Emperor Claudius, and mentioned by Joſephus, lib. 19. c. 7. His Kingdom was reduced into a Province. In the time of Nero it was called Pontus Polemoniacus, to diſtinguiſh it from another part of Pontus, called Pontus Pelagonius. Suet. in Nerone, c. 18.

POLEMON, an Academick Philoſopher, born at Oete, in the Territories of Athens, was very debauched in his Youth. It's ſaid alſo, that being half drunk, he came into the School of Xenocrates, and was ſo charmed with a Diſcourſe of Temperance, which that Philoſopher made, that he quite reformed his Life, and became the moſt temperate and reſerved Man in the World, and applied himſelf forthwith to the Study of Philoſophy, wherein he made ſo wonderful a Progreſs, that he merited to ſucceed in the Chair of the ſame Xenocrates. He was much eſteem'd by the Athenians for his Probity, Affableneſs and Conſtancy. He died very aged, after having compoſed ſeveral Works, in the 127th. Olympiad, and the 4 4th year of Rome. Diogenes Laertius l. 4. in Polemon, Euſebius in Chron.

POLEMON, a Sophiſt and Orator, lived in the time of Trajan. It's ſaid he was a very talkative Perſon. And that at his Death he prayed his Friends to bury him with all ſpeed, for fear leaſt the Sun ſhould boaſt to ſee him have his Mouth ſhut. He writ ſome Treatiſes. Philoſtratus in vita Soph. & Suidas.

POLICASTRO, a City in the Kingdom of Naples, in the hither Principality, a Biſhop's-See under Salerno, called in Latin Policaſtrum, or Polæocaſtrum, but not very conſiderable, ſtanding upon the Gulf Lai, or the Gulf of Policaſtro.

POLIGNANO, Lat. Polinianum and Pulinianum, a little Town in the Kingdom of Naples, in the Province of Bara, a Biſhop's-See under Bari.

POLITICKS. A Party which appear'd in France, in 1574, in the time of the Holy League. This Faction was made up of diſcontented Roman Catholicks, who without concerning themſelves with Religion, proteſted, That they took up Arms for no other Reaſon but the Publick Good, for the Eaſe of the People, and to Reform thoſe Diſorders in the Adminiſtration, occaſion'd by the too great Power of thoſe, who cover'd their own Miſmanagement and private Deſigns, with the Pretence of the Royal Authority. Theſe Politicks join'd the Hugonots, in Conſequence of a Vote carry'd at Montpelier in 1574. Henry de Montmorency, Marſhal de Damville, and Governour of Languedoc, form'd this Party of the Politicks, to keep himſelf in his Government, which he was then in danger of loſing, and drew in the famous Henry de la Tour d'Auvergne his Nephew, and Viſcount d'Turenne, who was afterwards Marſhal of France, Duke de Bouillon, Sovereign Prince of Sedan. Maimbourg. Hiſt. League.

POLLA (Argentaria) the Wife of Lucan the Poet, was famous for her Learning, Birth and Beauty. She writ good Verſe, and after her Husband's Death reviſed & corrected his Pharſalia.

POLLENTIA, the Goddeſs of Power worſhipped by the Romans, as alſo a Town by the Alps, famous for white Wool.

POLLOCZKI, Lat. Polocska, and Polotium, a City of Poland, in Lithuania, formerly the Capital of a Dutchy of that Name; but now is no more than a Palatinate. It's large and well fortified with two Caſtles upon two Rivers. It was taken in 1563 by the Muſcovites, who uſed ſo many Machins againſt it, that they imployed 40000 Peaſants to draw them, King Stephen beat them out in 1579; but they retook it again in the XVIIth. Century, but could never keep it.

POLLUX (Julius) liv'd in the Second Century, in the time of the Emperor Commodus, whoſe Epithalamium he compos'd, to whom likewiſe he dedicated his Onomaſticon; ſeveral other Treatiſes are ſaid to be written by him, and amongſt others, an Oration De Arcadicis.

POLTROT (John) Sieur de Merey, was a Gentleman of Angoumois, who in 1563 being in the Service of Soubize, Chief of the Proteſtants, attempted to kill the Duke of Guiſe, who was then at the Siege of Orleans, and accompliſhed his Deſign; but having been taken and brought to Paris, he was drawn to Pieces by four Horſes, had his Head afterwards cut off, and the reſt of his Body burnt and reduced to Aſhes. John le Frere Hiſtoire des Troubles.

POLYÆNUS, a Macedonian, wrote a Book of Stratagems, which he dedicated to the Emperors Antoninus and Commodus; the beſt Edition is that of Leyden, in 1690.

POLYARCHUS, of Cyrene, in Africa, had ſo extraordinary a Love for Animals, that he cauſed the Dogs and Birds he loved to be publickly buried, and made them Funeral Solemnities; erecting alſo Pyramids in honour of them, with Epitaphs graven thereon. Polyæn. lib. 8.

POLYBIUS, a Greek Hiſtorian, born at Megalopolis, a City of Arcadia, Son to Lycortas, Chief of the Republick of the Achaians, who ſent them both Embaſſadors to Ptolemy Epiphanes, about the 556th. of Rome. The Son afterwards had the ſame Honour, as having been deputed to attend the Roman Conſul that made War in Theſſaly. He, after this, came to Rome, contracted a ſtrict Friendſhip with Scipio and Lelius. He writ his Hiſtory in that City, having before made ſeveral Voyages in order to know the Places he was to treat of. This Hiſtory took in all that had paſs'd conſiderable from the beginning of the Punick War till the end of the Macedonian, for about fifty three years, divided into forty Books, but of all of them we have but the five firſt left entire. Brutus highly eſteemed the Book, read it often, and made an Abridgement thereof for his own uſe, when he made War againſt Anthony and Auguſtus. Lucian ſays, he died aged 82 years. Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc. l. 1. c. 19. Caſaub. in not. in Polyb.

POLYBUS, King of Corinth, who preſerv'd Oedipus when he was expos'd, Educated him at his Court, and own'd him for his Son. Sophoc. Oedip. Tyran.

POLYCARP, is a Collection of Canons, Conſtitutions and Ordinances referring to Church-Affairs, compoſed by Gregory, a Spaniſh Prieſt, about 1120. Doujat. Hiſt. du droit. Canon.

POLYCARPUS, Biſhop of Smyrna, Diſciple of S. John, the Evangeliſt; he took a Journey to Rome in order to conferr with Anicetus, about the celebration of the Feaſt of Eaſter, concerning which there was a difference between the Eaſtern and Weſtern Churches. In this Journey he converted ſeveral Perſons who had ſuffered themſelves to be deluded with the Errors of Valentinus and Marcion, who meeting him at Rome, and asking if he did not know him. He anſwered, Yes, I know you to be the eldeſt Child of the Devil. At his Return into Aſia, he ſuffered Martyrdom, January 26th. 167, or 169. Euſebius relates the manner of his being Martyred, as taken out of a Letter written by the Church of Smyrna. We have an Epiſtle of this holy Man which he writ to the Philippians. S. Irenæus relates that he had ſeen S. Polycarp, and that he remember'd the Features of his Face, his Gate, his way of Living, and ſeveral things which S. Polycarp related from thoſe who had Convers'd with our Bleſſed Saviour. Irenæus l. 3. adv. Hær. c. 2. Tertullian. de Præſcr. l. 32. Euſebius lib. 4. Hiſt. & in Chron. An. Chr. 157, & 167, &c.

POLYCLETUS, a famous Statuary, lived in the 87th. Olympiad, and was Native of Sicyon, in Peloponneſus, had Agelades for his Maſter, and ſeveral famous Statuaries for his Scholars, as Aſopodorus, Alexis, Ariſtides, Myron the Lycian, &c. He made ſeveral Statues of Braſs, that were highly eſteemed, and one repreſenting a beautful Youth crowned, which he ſold for an hundred Talents; Which amounts to Sixty thouſand Crowns of French Money. He alſo made another Figure, of a little Child, holding a Lance in his Hand, which was no leſs valued than the former; but that which gain'd him the greateſt Reputation, was a Figure, in which he repreſented all the Proportions of a Humane Body, ſo exactly, that 'twas call'd the Rule, and look'd upon as a Performance of that Excellency, that Statuaries, from all Parts, came to view it, and make it their Original to Copy by. The Picture of the three naked Children playing together, which the Emperor Titus had in his Palace, and which paſs'd for a Maſter-piece of Art, was of his doing, as was alſo the Hercules of Rome, repreſented lifting Anteus from the Earth. Pliny lib. 34.

POLYCRATES, a Tyrant of Samos lived in the 72d. Olympiad. It's ſaid he was ſo fortunate, that all things ſucceded according to his deſires; and that having thrown a Ring of great Price into the Sea, he found it ſome time after in a Fiſh which his Cook dreſſed. But he was not ſo ſucceſsful at laſt, for Orontes, Governour of Sardis, having cunningly ſurpriz'd him, put him to Death upon a Croſs in the 74th. Olympiad.

POLYCRATES, Biſhop of Epheſus, lived about the end of the ſecond Age. He got it determined in an Aſſembly of Aſiatick Biſhops, that Eaſter ſhould be kept on the fourteenth day of the Moon, wherewith he acquainted Pope Victor by a Letter which he writ to him. Euſebius l. 5. Hiſt. cap. 23.

POLYCRETA or POLYCRITA, a Damſel of Naxos taken by Diognetus, General of the Erythræans; who uſed her as his Wife. The Mileſians on a time being overtaken with Sleep and Wine, ſhe gave notice thereof to her Brethren, upon Leaden Tables ſent in a Tart, who ſurpriz'd them, but ſpared Diognetus at her requeſt. Polyæn.

POLYDAMAS, a famous Champion of Theſſaly, who killed a Lyon upon Mount Olympus, lifted up a moſt furious Bull, and ſtopped a Chariot in its full career. He was cruſhed to pieces under a Rock, whither he had retired to ſhelter himſelf from a Tempeſt, and that misfortune befell him through his own Indiſcretion, flattering himſelf that he could ſuſtain that Rock, which began to fall when his Companions fled and ſo eſcaped. Pliny l. 7. c. 49.

POLYDORE (Virgil) of Urbin in Italy, lived in the Fifteenth and Sixteenth Ages. He publiſhed in 1499 a piece De Inventoribus Rerum, in eight Books. Going afterwards into England, in order to receive the Peter-pence, he acquired the Prince's favour and was made Archdeacon of Wells. In 1526 he printed at London his Treatiſe of Prodigies, and afterwards compleated the Engliſh Hiſtory in 26 Books, which is not very exact. He died about 1555. Paulus Jovius in Elog. cap. 135. Henry Savil. in Edit. Script. Aug.

POLYDORE de Caravaggio, a famous Painter in the Sixteenth Age. He wrought in the Vatican and had the glory to have contributed much to the finiſhing of that Work. When Rome, in 1627, was beſieged by the Spaniards, he went to Naples and thence to Sicily; and as he was well skill'd in Architecture, he was employ'd to prepare the Triumphal Arches erected againſt the Emperor Charles V's. arrival at Meſſina in his return from Tunis; afterwards intending to return to Rome he was killed by his Man and his Aſſociates, who had an intention to rob him and his Body being carried by them and laid near unto the Door of a Woman whom he loved, in order to make Men believe that her Friends had made away with him; but the fact was diſcovered, and his Servant puniſhed. Vaſari Vit. de Pit. Felibien entr. des Peint.

POLYDORUS, Son to Priam and Hecuba; during the Siege of Troy he was ſent for his Security, to the Court of Polymneſtor, King of Thrace, who after the Town was taken, murder'd him for his Money. Eurip. Hecub.

POLYDORUS a King of Lacedæmon, who, to put an end to the 20 years War betwixt his Countrymen, and thoſe of Meſſena feign'd a quarrel with Theopompus King of the other Family, and made as if he retired from the Battle, whereupon the Meſſenians advanced, and were encompaſſed and defeated by the Enemies. Hoffman.

POLYGAMISTS, Hereticks who ſaid that it was lawful for a Man to have as many Wives as he pleaſed. Their Patron was Bernardinus Ochinus, at firſt General of the Capuchins, and afterwards profeſſed himſelf to be a Proteſtant, but at laſt fell into this and divers other Errors. He lived in the Sixteenth Century. Hoffman.

POLYGLOTT, the Bible in ſeveral Languages. Francis Ximenes de Sineros Cardinal and Archbiſhop of Toledo was the firſt that publiſh'd a Work of this nature, called the Bible of Complutum, where may be found the Hebrew Text as the Jews read it; the Greek Verſion of the Septuagint, the Latin Verſion of S. Jerom, which we call the Vulgar; and laſtly, the Chaldee Paraphraſe of Onkelos upon the Five Books of Moſes only; to which is added, a Dictionary of the Hebrew and Chaldee words in the Bible. It was printed in 1515, and what is moſt remarkable therein, is, that the Cardinal printed the Greek Text of the New Teſtament without Accents or Aſpirats; for that the moſt Ancient Manuſcripts had none. The Jews have alſo Polyglotts; thoſe of Conſtantinople have printed two Copies of the Pentateuch in the form of Tetrapla's, which are in four Languages; one of which contains the Hebrew Text of Moſes; the Chaldee Paraphraſe of Onkelos; the Arabick Tranſlation of R. Saadias, and the Perſian Verſion of another Jew: The other comprehends the Hebrew Text, and Paraphraſe of Onkelos, as well as the firſt; and beſides that, takes in the Verſion of the Vulgar Greek, and another Spaniſh Tranſlation; but all of them writ in Hebrew Characters. The Polyglott of England, is the ſame with that of Paris (of which by and by) excepting ſome Additions thereto. The Engliſh have judiciouſly preſerr'd the Vatican Edition of the Septuagint before others, having alſo put in their Work the Vulgar, according to the laſt Edition of Rome; beſides the Syriack and Arabick upon ſome Books of the Bible, which were not printed in the Bible of M. le Jay. They take in moreover, the Jeruſalem Targum, that of the falſe Jonathan, with a Perſian Verſion of the Pentateuch, another Perſian one of the New Teſtament, and added what had been before printed in the Ethiopian Tongues of the Pſalms, Canticles, and the New Teſtament. The Prolegomena, and the Sixth Volume of this Polyglott, are a great Addition to this Work. The Polyglott of Antwerp, or the Royal Bible of Philip II. was printed at Antwerp, in 1572, by Arius Montanus, which contains, beſides what is in the Complutenſian, the Chaldee Paraphraſe upon the other Books of the Old Teſtament, a Syriack Tranſlation of the New Teſtament, with the Latin Interpretation of the Syriack, and the Latin Verſion of Pagninus, which he corrected in ſeveral Places, being of Opinion that the Vulgar Tranſlation was not litteral enough. There are ſeveral Dictionaries added to this Polyglott, for the better Underſtanding of the Languages. The Polyglott of Paris, which far exceeds that of Complutum, and of Philip II. was got printed ſome Years ago, at a vaſt Expence, by M. le Jay; who, not content with what had appear'd before, ſent for ſome Maronites from Rome, for the Management of the Syriack and Arabick, which are not in the two forementioned Polyglotts, and printed the Samaritan Pentateuch beſides, with a Samaritan Verſion never ſeen till then; but ſome Learned Men ſay, He ſhould have taken in the Vulgar inſtead of the Greek Verſion of the Septuagint, printed in the Complutenſian

Bible, and that of Montanus; for, that that Greek Edition is very imperfect; but this great Bible has no Preface nor Dictionary. R. Simon Diſquiſ. de Bibl. Edition.

POLYGNOTUS, a Thaſian, and famous Painter, was the Diſciple of his Father Aglaophon, and particularly Eminent for repreſenting Women, whom he painted in Lightſome and Shining Draperies, adorning their Heads with Dreſſes of ſundry Colours, and giving a greater Freedom to his Figures, than had been us'd by any of his Predeceſſors. His principal Works were thoſe which he made gratis, in the Temple at Delphi, and the Grand Portico at Athens, call'd the Various, in Honour of which it was Decreed in a great Council of the Amphyctions, or General Diet of Greece, That where-ever he travel'd in Greece, his Charges ſhould be born by the Publick. He died about the 90th. Olympiad, which was 418 Years before Chriſt. Felibien Entretiens ſur les vies des Peintres.

POLYHISTOR (Alexander) a Greek Hiſtorian and Philologiſt, was in eſteem in Sylla's time, ſaid by Suidas to be of Miletum, but by Stephanus, to be of Gotyæum, which we call now Cataye, or Caitage, which is the Reſidence of the Beglerbeg of Natolia; he was ſurnamed Cornelius, becauſe, that having been made a Priſoner, he was ſold to Cornelius Lentulus, who coming to know his Merit, would be his Diſciple. He was by that means made free, married at Rome, and periſhed in the Fire of Laurentium, his Wife hanging her ſelf in deſpair about the 173d. Olympiad, 86 Years before the Birth of Chriſt. He compoſed ſeveral Pieces relating to Hiſtory, Grammar, and Philology, which Authors ſpeak of with Commendation. Joſephus l. 1. Ant. Jud. c. 15. Clem. Alexand. l. Strom. Cyril. &c.

POLYHYMNIA, one of the nine Muſes. They feign'd ſhe took care of Hiſtory; others ſay, ſhe preſided over Rhetorick; and for that reaſon it is that ſhe has been pictured with a Crown of Pearls, a white Robe, and her right Hand moving, as if ſhe harangued, and holding in her left, a Scrowl of Paper, where was written the Word Suadere. Plutarch in Sympoſ.

POLYNICUS. Vid. ETEOCLES.

POLYPHEMUS, feigned by the Poets to be the Son of Neptune, was a Cyclops that devoured four of Ulyſſes's Companions, but Ulyſſes having made him Drunk, overcame him. He was the greateſt of all the Cyclops, and ſome ſay he had but one, others two, and a third ſort, that he had three Eyes; the whole is fabulous; and by the one Eye, which they fanſie he had near his Brain, is meant his extraordinary Prudence; but however he was outwitted by Ulyſſes, who is therefore ſaid to have made him blind. Hygin. Homer, Ovid, &c.

POLYSPERCHON, a Captain to Alexander the Great, who gave frequent Proofs of his Conduct and Valour. After that King's death Antipater made him Tutor to the Princes. He made the Greek Cities free, and himſelf potent in Macedonia, whither he brought in 444 a Son of Alexander's, named Hercules, and then put him to death. He was ſome time after kill'd in Battle, having loſt one of his Sons named Alexander before. Quintus Curtius lib. 4, & 5. & ſeq. Diod. Siculus lib. 10 & 20, &c.

POLYSIRATES, a Macedonian Soldier, who when Beſſus, Governour of Bactriana had Aſſaſſinated Darius, after the Battle of Arbela, finding the King mortally wounded, and ready to expire, gave him a Glaſs of Water at his Requeſt, upon which, Darius had juſt Strength to tell him, That he had given him the laſt Pleaſure he was capable of receiving, and though he was in no Condition to reward his Civility, yet he did not doubt but Alexander would; ſoon after Alexnnder himſelf came up to the Place, and finding that great Monarch juſt dead, cover'd the Corps with his own Cloak, and ſent it back with a Solemn and Pompous Equipage, to his Mother. Quintus Curt. Plutarch. in vit. Alexand.

POLYXENA, the Daughter of Priamus and Hecuba; ſhe was to be married to Achilles, whom Paris ſlew in the Temple of Apollo, where they were aſſembled to conſummate that Marriage. After the taking of Troy, Pyrrhus the Son of Achilles ſacrificed Polyxena upon his Father's Tomb, willing thereby to appeaſe his injured Ghoſt. Ovid lib. 13. Met.

POMERANIA, a Country in Germany, with the Title of a Dutchy, called by the Inhabitants Pommern. It hath on the N. the Baltick Sea, along which it is extended for near 80 Leagues, with ſeveral Havens belonging to it; Pruſſia to the E. the Marquiſate of Brandenburg and Lower Poland to the S. and the Dutchy of Meckleburg to the W. It hath had formerly very potent Dukes of its own, whereof Bogiſlaus was the laſt. Thoſe of that Houſe had made an Agreement with the Princes of Brandenburg, that if they died without Iſſue, Pomerania ſhould be united to that Marquiſate; in the mean time, after the death of Bogiſlaus, this Dutchy became the ſubject of the War between the Swedes and Houſe of Brandenburg, but by the Peace of Oſnabrug and Munſter, in 1648, it was divided between both. But in the Year 1676, 77, and 78, the Elector of Brandenburg attack'd the Swediſh Diviſion there, but reſtor'd what he had taken from that Crown, at the Treaty concluded in 1679, the River Oder being made the Boundary. Pomerania is uſually divided into two Parts, whereof that to the Weſt of the Oder is called the Higher, and the other to the Eaſt, the Lower Pomerania. It's ſubdivided by others into ten Parts, to wit, the Dutchy of Stetin, Principality of Rugen, Earldom of Gurskon, and the Seigniories of Bardi and Wolgaſt, which belong to the Swedes; the other five belong to Brandenburg; to wit, the Dutchies of Pomerania, Caſſubia, and Wenden or Wandalia; with the Lordſhips of Butow and Lawenborch, which have been granted him by the King of Poland. Stetin upon the Oder is the Capital City of the Country, which is fruitful and pleaſant. The others are Gartz, Auklam, Guskoo, Wolgaſt, Stralſund, Cammin, which is a Biſhoprick, ſecularized by the Peace of Munſter, Stargard, Colberg, &c. The Iſles of Rugen, Wolin and Uſedom depend alſo upon Pomerania. It's a cold Country, but the Sea and Rivers make it a place for Traffick. It was firſt inhabited by the Swedes, and afterwards by the Vandals. Some Geographers call it the Farther Pomerania, to diſtinguiſh it from Pruſſia, which they name the Hither Pomerania. The Proteſtant Religion prevails there ſince 1573. Before this Country embraced Chriſtianity, they uſed the Language of the Vandals, but ſince 1120, that they were brought to embrace the Chriſtian Religion by Boliſlaus of Poland, they have uſed the Saxon Tongue. The Country is very fertil, well watered, abounding with Lakes and Havens. It is excellent for Arable Land, Paſtures, Fruit, Wood, Hunting and Fiſhing; abounds with Cattle, Corn, Butter, Honey, Wax, and other ſuch Commodities. It hath alſo great Numbers of Cities, Towns, Caſtles, and Villages. Culverius. Bertius de rebus German. Cramen, &c.

POMERUS (Julian) a Native of Mauritania in Africa, lived in the Fifth Age, and paſſing into France, was there ordain'd a Prieſt. It's ſaid he lived a long time at Arles; 'tis he whom Gennadius and Iſidorus of Sevil acknowledge to be the Author of the Contemplative Life, or of Vertues and Vices, which was ſo excellent, as to be thought worthy to be attributed to S. Proſper. He was living ſtill about 496, when Gennadius writ his Book. Iſidorus c. 12. Bellarmin, &c. Julian of Toledo had alſo the Name of Pomerus, which gave occaſion to Trithemius and ſome other Writers, to confound theſe two Authors, but there is this Diſtinction, that the firſt lived in the Fifth Age, and the other flouriſhed about 200 Years after, about the end of the Seventh Age. Gennad. de Script. Illuſt.

POMONA, feigned by the Ancients to be the Goddeſs of Gardens and Fruits, was beloved by Vertumnus, who after ſeveral ſorts of Transformations, had the good Fortune to pleaſe her; for one while he turned himſelf into a Reaper, another while into a Fiſherman, then into an Artificer, Soldier, and laſt of all to an Old Woman; under which Form he obliged her to love him, by what he ſaid unto her. Ovid ſaith, Pomona lived in the time of Procas King of the Latins. The Mythologiſts pretend, that Vertumnus ſignifies the Year, and that his frequent Metamorphoſis ſignifies the different Seaſons, and the various Productions of the Earth, and that Vertumnus's laſt Diſguiſe of an Old Woman, denotes the old Age of the Year, that is, the Winter; and his gaining of Pomona under that Appearance, is to let us underſtand, that during this Seaſon, People make uſe of the Fruits of the Earth, which were gather'd in Autumn. Ovid. Lib. 14. Metam. Natalis Comes Mythol. See VERTUMNUS.

POMONA, the greateſt of the Orkney Iſlands, commonly called the Mainland, being, according Buchanan, 30 Miles in length, contains the Town of Kirkwall, and many Villages and Gentlemens Houſes, there being in all 12 Pariſh Churches in the Iſland, which is about 24 Miles from Caithneſſe. This Iſland runs out into abundance of Promontories, which afford convenient Harbours for Ships. There are alſo Mines of as good white and black Lead here, as are to be found any where in Britain. This Iſland is more fruitful than any of the reſt, and abounds with Proviſions and other Neceſſaries. Buchan. Gordon. Theat. Scotiæ.

Q. POMPEIA, the third Wife of Julius Cæſar, was Daughter to Q. Pompeius. Cæſar married her after Cornelia, but quickly divorced her, upon ſuſpicion that ſhe had committed Adultery with Clodius, the Report being that he came to meet her in Woman's Apparel, during the Ceremonies of the Feaſt of Bona Dea. They would have obliged Cæſar to come in Evidence againſt her, but he refuſed, ſaying, That he did not believe her faulty, but that Cæſar's Wife ought not only to be void of fault, but ſuſpicion. Suetonius & Plutarch in Julio.

POMPEIOPOLIS, a City of Cilicia, called Soli, until it took this name from Pompey upon the defeat of the Pirates, and afterwards that of Trajanopolis, from the Emperor Trajanus; ſince which it has been a Biſhoprick under Seleucia, but is now a miſerable Town, called Paleſali, according to ſome modern Authors. There was in Paphla- gonia another City, called Eupatoria, to which Pompey gave his Name alſo, after he had vanquiſh'd Mithridates, which was afterwards a Metropolitan City in the Patriarchſhip of Conſtantinople, but is now entirely ruin'd. Pliny, Ptolemy, Solinus. Pomponius Mela, &c.

Cn. POMPEIUS STRABO, Conſul of Rome and General, was Father to Pompey the Great. He ſerved the Republick very faithfully in the Social War of the Marſians, was Conſul in 665, with Portius Cato; and being diſſatisfied that he was not continued in the ſame Charge, he declar'd againſt Cinna. It's ſaid, that he regulated all his Actions according to his Intereſt, and that being at the head of an Army, he did nought but ſeek opportunities to make himſelf ſtrong; at laſt he fought a great and bloody Battle againſt Cinna before the Walls of Rome; after which the Plague infeſted both Armies, and Pompey died at the ſame time; others ſay, he was killed with a Thunderbolt in 667. The joy for his death in Rome ſeem'd, ſaith Velleius Paterculus, to have been balanced by the Loſs of their Citizens by Sword and Sickneſs. The Romans exerciſed upon his Body after his death, the Reſentments they had againſt him when alive. Plutarch in Vit. Pomp. Velleius Paterculus, lib. 2. Cicero in Piſon. & Phil. 1. &c.

Q. POMPEIUS, ſurnamed the Great, was Son to the foreſaid Pompey and Lucilia deſcended from a Noble Family, of conſiderable Rank among the Senators, and born September 30th. in the 648th. of Rome, being the ſame year that Cicero was born. Paterculus ſaith, He was free from moſt ſorts of Vices, were it not that in a free City, and Miſtreſs of the Univerſe, where the Right of Citizens ought to be equal, he was concerned to ſee any in the ſame degree of Reputation and Power. He applied himſelf to the Wars when but very young, with his Father, who was a good and experienced Commander. At the Age of 23 he rais'd of his own accord, and without any publick Authority, for the defence and re-eſtabliſhing the Honour of his Country, three Legions, which he carried to Sylla; and three years after merited the honours of Triumph, which could not be refuſed to his Valour, whereof he had given ſufficient Proofs in retaking Sicily and Africa from thoſe who were outlaw'd for Treaſon. Some time after Sylla dying, he drove Lepidus out of Rome, becauſe he would abrogate all that Sylla had done, and in 677 overcame him in Battle, whereupon he got a Commiſſion to carry the War againſt Sertorius into Spain, which he happily terminated in 681, and triumphed a ſecond time, ſome days before he enter'd upon the Office of Conſul, being no more than a Roman Gentleman, which never happened to any Perſon before him. During his Conſulſhip he re-eſtabliſhed the Power of the Tribunes of the People; and after this overcame the Pirates in a Sea-fight, and cleared the Seas; to which Advantages were added thoſe which he obtained againſt Tigranes and Mithridates. He purſued his Victories into Media, Albania, and Hiberia, and then turned his Arms againſt the People that lay to the right of the Euxine Sea, the Colchians, Achæans, Jews, Parthians, &c. and having done all this he returned into Italy, being now greater than the Romans, or himſelf ever expected. He was received with great joy, becauſe that having disbanded his Troops, he came to the City like a private Citizen. His Triumph laſted two days, and was very magnificent by the great number of vanquiſh'd Princes which were led in it. He brought a greater quantity of Money into the publick Treaſury than any General that ever was before him. It was at this time, ſays Velleius Paterculus, That Fortune rais'd his Glory by degrees to the very height, having made him triumph over Africa, Europe and Aſia. But in the mean time, Cæſar's Glory ſeem'd to obſcure his; the one could not endure an Equal, nor the other a Superior; but Julia, Cæſar's Daughter, whom Pompey had married, kept up Friendſhip betwixt them for ſome time, and together with Craſſus, they made a Triumvirate, but this Correſpondence was ſoon broken after the death of Julia and Craſſus. Pompey had the Government of Spain conferr'd on him, and Cæſar was ordered to quit the Command of the Armies he had for ten years in Gaul, and come to Rome as a private Perſon, to demand the Conſulate that he deſired, but he refuſed; and ſo the War was declared, Cæſar came to Rome in 705, which Pompey with the Conſuls and Senate had quitted, as they did alſo Italy, and went to Epirus; whither Cæſar went alſo after having defeated Pompey's Lieutenants in Spain; and in the year 706 overthrew him in the Battle of Pharſalia. Pompey fled into Egypt, where, by the Advice of Theodatus and Achillas, Ptolemy ordered Photinus, a Slave, to kill him the Eve of his Birth-day, after he had been three times Conſul, triumphed thrice, and had ſubdued a great part of the World, at the Age of 58. The Romans had before this erected him a Statue with this Inſcription, P. urb. R. S. P. Q. R. Pompeius Magnus imp. Bello XXX Ann. confecto, fuſ[illegible] fugatis, occiſis, in deditionem acceptis hominum centies vicies, ſemel lxxxiii M. depreſſis aut captis navibus, Dcccxlvi oppidis, Caſtellis M.D. xxxviii in fidem acceptis, terris à Mæoti ad Rubrum mare ſubactis; quum oram Maritimam prædonibus liberaſſet & Imperium Maris Pop. Rom. reſtituiſſet, ex Aſia, Ponto, Armenia, Paphlagonia, Cappadocia, Cilicia, Syria, Scythis, Judæis, Albanis, Iberis, Inſula Creta, Baſternis, & ſuper hæc de Regibus, Mithridate & Tigrane, triumphaſſet. The Emperor Adrian when in Egypt Anno 132, honoured his Memory with this Line upon his Tomb.

Oſſa viri magni tenui quam clauſa Sepulchro.

Tully gives him this Character, That he was a Perſon born for great things, and capable of attaining the height of Eloquence, but he choſe rather to follow his Military Inclinations. He could expreſs himſelf with great Variety, weighed Affairs with great Judgment, his Deportment was fine, his Voice ſtrong and muſical, and his Motions grave. He left two Sons, the eldeſt Cn. Pompeius, got a potent Army together, and became formidable, but Cæſar defeated him at the Battle of Munda in Spain, which was fought with great Reſolution, the Victory hanging doubtful a long time; and Pompey being unable to make his eſcape, becauſe of his Wounds, as his Brother did, he was kill'd there. The younger Pompey got an Army of Slaves together, and made himſelf Maſter of Sicily. Paterculus ſaith, He made a Peace with Auguſtus and Antony, and had Sicily and Greece aſſigned him, but he quickly renewed the War, was beaten at Sea by Auguſtus; and endeavouring to make his eſcape to Antony was killed by the way; ſo that it may be truly ſaid, Theſe two young Men were Heirs both of the Valour and Misfortune of their Father. Authors add, concerning Cn. Pompeius, the elder of the Great Pompey's Sons, That having feaſted Auguſtus and M. Anthony aboard his Ship, he told them jeſtingly, That he entertain'd them in Carinis, which was the Name of his Father's Houſe then poſſeſſed by M. Antony at Rome; and being adviſed by one of his Friends, To cut them both off, and render himſelf Maſter of the World, now when he had them in his power, he gallantly rejected the Propoſition, as being contrary to his Faith which he had given them. Florus. Dion. Plutarch.

POMPONATIUS (Peter) of Mantua, lived in the beginning of the XVIth. Age. He was a great follower of the Doctrine of Ariſtotle; was Profeſſor at Bolonia and elſewhere, and had Paulus Jovius for his Diſciple. He was ſo bold as to maintain the Opinion of Ariſtotle, That the Soul died with the Body, and when he was reproved, ſaid, He followed this Opinion as a Philoſopher, but condemned it as a Chriſtian; in the mean time he was neither the one nor the other, and his Doctrine was pernicious to many young People. He died of a ſtoppage of Urine in 1512, aged 63 years. Paul. Jovius in Elog. Doct. lib. 7. Sponde, A. C. 1513. n. 20.

POMPONIUS Lætus (Julius) born in the Kingdom of Naples, is ſaid to have been the natural Son of a Prince of Salerno, and was in eſteem at Rome in the XVth. Age, in the time of Pius II. with Platina and Callimachus; but was not ſo in the time of Paul II. againſt whom it's not doubted, but he was one of them that conſpired, and perhaps to avoid Puniſhment, retired to Venice; but came afterwards to Rome, publiſhed an Abridgement of the Lives of the Cæſars from the death of Gordian to Juſtin III. a Book of Mahomet, and one concerning the Roman Magiſtrates. He died aged 70 years, in the time of Alexander VI. as it's ſaid, in a very poor Condition. Sabellicus, who was his Diſciple writ his Life. Paulus Jovius in Elog. Doct. lib. 40. Eraſmus in Cicer. Lilio Giraldi in Hiſt. Poet.

POMPONIUS Mela, a Spaniard, born at Mellaria, a ruined City in the Kingdom of Granada, where Begar de Melena ſtands now, according to the Teſtimony of Moralis and others of that Country. He lived in the Iſt. Age, writ a piece of Geography, entitled, De ſitu Orbis, in three Books, which has the Notes of ſeveral Learned Men upon it. The beſt Editions are thoſe of Holland with Voſſius, and Gronovius's Notes. Alphonſo Garcias. Motamore de Doct. Hiſp. viris, &c.

POMPONIUS Sextus, a very eminent Roman Lawyer, living in the IIId. Century. He was, together with Ulpian and Julius Paulus, one of the Diſciples of Papinian. The Emperor Alexander Severus made him one of his Council, and gave him a great ſhare of the Government under him. He wrote divers Works, which are frequently cited in the Code & Digeſt. Lampridius in Alex. Sev.

PONCE de Leon (Baſilius) an Auguſtinian, born at Granada in Spain, and extracted from a Family of the firſt Quality. He died in 1629. His Works are, *De Sacramento Confirmationis. PONCES de Santa Cruz (Antony) firſt Phyſician to Philip IV. King of Spain, who died about the year 1650, aged above 80 years. He writ ſeveral things, as, Opuſcula Medica ac Philoſophica; In Avicennæ primam Fen. 1. lib. Hippocratica Philoſophia de Pulſibus; De impedimentis magnorum auxiliorum liorum in morborum Curatione, in lib. Galen. de morbo & ſymptomate, &c. Nicholas Antonio Bibl. Script. Hiſp.

PONIATOVIA (Chriſtina) was Daughter to Julian Poniatovius, a Noble Polander, who of a Monk turned Miniſter; coming to Bohemia when a Widower, he placed his Daughter Chriſtina, at the Age of ſixteen, with the Baronneſs of Engelburg of Zelking, of the Houſe of Auſtria. She fell, in November 1627, into ſeveral ecſtaſies or fits, during which, ſhe declared wonderful things in reference to the State of the Church, and future Re-eſtabliſhment, by the Deſtruction of her Enemies and Perſecutors. She continued thus from time to time, during the years 1628 and 1629, and on January 27th. in the laſt year, appearing as if ſhe were dead, ſhe ſuddenly ſtarts up, and afterwards had no more Revelations. She was married in 1632 to Daniel Vetter of Moravia, who had been Tutor to Frederick Henry, Son to Frederick V. King of Bohemia, then driven out of his Kingdom and lived with him till 1644, when ſhe died of an Hectick Fever. Lux è tenebris.

PONS, a City of France, in Xaintonge in the Dioceſs of Xaintes, ſtands upon the River Seugne that diſchargeth it ſelf into the Charant above Xaintes. The City is Ancient, it gives Name to the noble Houſe of Pons, famous for its Antiquity, Alliances, and the great number of Illuſtrious Perſons it has produced.

DU PONT (Perrin) forty fourth Grand-Maſter of the Order of S. John of Jeruſalem, ſucceeded in Auguſt 1534, Philip de Villiers C. Iſle-Adam; he was choſen when abſent, being Bailiff of S. Euphemia of the Italian Language. Muly Aſſem, King of Tunis, unable to withſtand the Forces of Barbaroſſa, ſent an Embaſſador to the Grand-Maſter, to deſire him to intercede with the Emperor Charles V. to take him under his Protection; which the Emperor granted, upon Condition the Knights would join their Gallies with his Fleet to go to Barbary. The Knights had the Honour of making themſelves Maſters of the Tower of Goletta, where they ſet up their Flag, and ſignaliz'd themſelves no leſs at the taking of Tunis, which the Emperor delivered to Muly Aſſem. The Grand-Maſter du Pont died a little time after, in November 1535, having reigned but about fourteen Months, and was ſucceded by Didier de Saint Jalle. Boſio, The Hiſt. of the Order of S. John of Jeruſalem. Naberat, &c.

PONT St. Ange, formerly call'd Pons Adriani, or Adrian's Bridge, being built by that Emperor. It ſtands under the Caſtle of S. Angelo, and is the fineſt Stone Bridge in Rome, Pope Clement IXth. Ornamented this Bridge with a great many Marble Figures. Marlian.

PONT de l'Arche, Lat. Pons Arcus, Pons Arcuenſis, a ſtrong place in Normandy upon the Seine, above which, this River receives into it the Eure and the Andela, and forms there an Iſland, to which there is a Paſſage by two Bridges. This Town ſtands three Leagues above Rhoan and is an important Paſs, being the firſt place that ſurrender'd to King Henry IV. upon his coming to the Crown in 1589.

PONT Audemer, Lat. Pons Audemari, a ſmall City in Normandy upon the River Rille, between Rhoan and Caen.

PONT Beauvoiſin, Lat Pons Bellovicinus, a Town in Dauphiny, which divides France from Savoy, and ſtands upon the River Guger.

PONT-DE-CE, Pons or Pontes Cæſaris, a Town and Caſtle of France in Anjou, upon the Loire, within a League of Angers, and conſiderable for the Paſs; for which reaſon there is a Garriſon in it. Here it was that the Troops of Lewis XIII. defeated in 1620, under the Command of the Mareſchal de Crequi, thoſe of the Queen Mother, Mary de Medicis, who removed from the Court.

PONT l'Eveque, Lat. Pons Epiſcopi, a City of France in Normandy, upon the little River Leſon, three Leagues below Liſieux, and two from the Sea. It's a place famous for Cheeſe

PONT du Guard, Lat. Pons Vardonis or Gardonis, three Bridges built one over the other over the River Gardon, for the continuing an Aqueduct to Niſmes, the loweſt having ſix Arches, the ſecond twelve, and the higheſt thirty four; a thing of great Antiquity. It ſtands in the middle between Avignon to the E. and Niſmes to the W. four Leagues from the latter. The Learned Dr. Brown, in his Travels, gives the Figure of this wonderful Work, and aſſures us, That the top of it is 186 foot above the Water of the River.

PONT de Lima, or Puenta de Lima, a City of Portugal, in the Province between Douro and Minho, upon the River Lima. It's not doubted but that it is the Limia or Forum Limicorum of Antoninus, tho' others take it for S. Eſtevaon de Geras de Lima, within two Leagues of the ſame.

PONT au Mouſon, upon the Moſelle, Lat. Muſſipons, a City of Lorrain, with an Univerſity. It gives Title to a Marqueſs, ſtands upon the brink of two Rivers, to which you muſt paſs over a Bridge, from whence it has its Name in part, that of Mouſon being the Name of a Caſtle ſtanding upon a Hill there, and was formerly conſiderable. It's a pretty Town, has two Abbies in it, ſeveral Churches, and curious Places, but no Walls.

PONT S. Eſprit, Lat. Pons Sti Spiritus, a City of France in the Lower Languedoc, which has a Caſtle, and a curious Stone Bridge over the Rhoſne; the Bridge is a thouſand ordinary Paces long, and fifteen broad, ſupported by nineteen great Arches, and four leſſer ones. The City is large enough, but ill built; the Streets being ſhort and narrow, but there are ſome pretty Squares in it, ſeveral Churches and Monaſteries, &c.

PONT S. Maixance, Lat. Pons S. Maxentiæ, a Town of France in Valois, belonging to the Government of the Iſle of France, ſtanding upon the River Oiſe, to which you paſs over a Bridge three Leagues from Senlis.

PONTANUS (James) a Jeſuit, born in Bohemia, a Perſon of Note for his Skill in the Languages, and the Polite part of Learning. He died at Augsburg in 1626. He wrote ſeveral Tracts both in Proſe and Verſe, as, Commentaries upon Ovid. Attica Bellaria, Part III. Colloquia Sa[illegible]a. φιλοκαλία ſeu Excerpta è Sacris & Prophanis Auctoribus, lib. 10. &c. Alegamb. De Script Soc. Jeſ.

PONTANUS (Lewis) an eminent Lawyer, living in the XVth. Century, born at Spoleto in Italy; he liv'd for the moſt part, at Rome, where he had the Office of Proto-Notary; Æneas Sylvius, who was afterwards Pope Pius IId. and moſt Authors, at that time, ſpeak of Pontanus as a meer Prodigy for Learning and Memory, for he never forgot any thing which he once heard or read. He did not only Cite the beginning of a Law, like the reſt of his Profeſſion, but run through the whole Text. He wrote Remarks upon the Law, Conſilia Singularia, Repetitiones. He died at Baſil in 1439, during the Seſſion of the Council, being but 30 years of Age, and had he liv'd longer, had undoubtedly been made a Cardinal. Marcus Mantica de vir. Illuſt. Æneas Sylvius Hiſt. Concil. Baſil. &c.

PONTANUS (John Iſaac) originally of Haerlem, was born in Denmark, where his Parents then reſided. He taught Phyſick and the Mathematicks at Harderwick in Guelderland, and died there in 1640. He was Hiſtoriographer to the King of Denmark and Province of Guelderland, and writ, Hiſt. Urbis & rerum Amſtelodamenſium; Itinerarium Gallicæ Narbonenſis; Rerum Danicarum Hiſt. lib. 10; Diſceptationes Chronologicæ, de Rheni divortiis & accolis populis, adverſus Philippum Cluverium; Diſcuſſionum Hiſtoricarum, lib. 2. Hiſtoriæ Geldricæ, lib. 14, &c. Valerius Andreas Bibl. Belg. le Mire, &c.

PONTANUS (John Jovius and Jovianus) a Philoſopher, Poet, Orator, and Hiſtorian, was born at Cerreto, a little Town in Umbria, having loſt his Father in a popular Sedition. He retired to Naples, where he was choſen to be Tutor to the young Alphonſo King of Naples, and after that made his Secretary and Councellor of State. He writ the Hiſtory of the Wars of Ferdinand I. and John of Anjou, and ſeveral other things both in Proſe and Verſe, which we have in three Volumes, printed at Strasburg in 1515. He died in 1505, aged 78 years. He ordered this Epitaph for himſelf, Sum Joannes Jovianus Pontanus, quem amaverunt bonæ Muſæ, ſuſpexerunt viri probi, honeſtaverunt Reges, Domini, ſcis jam quis ſim, aut quis potius fuerim. Ego vero te, hoſpes, noſcere in tenebris nequeo; ſed, te ipſum ut noſcas, rogo. Folib. Sandr. Felinus Sanderus Epit. de Reg. Sicil. Eraſmus in Cicer. Lilio Giraldi Dial. 1. *de Poet. ſui temp. PONTE MOLE, Lat. Pons Milvius, is a Bridge upon the Tiber near Rome, very famous for the Victory got there by Conſtantine the Great in 312, over the Tyrant Maxentius, who falling over that Bridge was drowned in the Tiber. Baudrand.

PONTEFRACT, a Market and Borough Town of Oſgodcroſs Wapentake, in the Weſt Riding of Yorkſhire, ſeated in a dry ſpot of Ground, watered by a little Stream that runs into the Are, and of chief Note for its ſtrong and ſtately Caſtle, commonly called Pomfret Caſtle, ruin'd by the Civil Wars. 'Twas in this Caſtle that Richard II. was murthered after his Reſignation of the Crown. This Borough has two Parliament Men. In this Neighbourhood groweth plentyof Liquorice and Skiriwort.

PONTHIEU, Lat. Ponticum and Pontinia, a little Country of France in Picardy, that lies all along the River Somme, which makes it very Marſhy. Abbeville is the Capital City, the others are Crotoy, S. Valery a Sea-Port, Crecy, S. Riquier, Pont de Remi an important Paſs upon the Somme, near unto which may be ſeen ſome Remains of Cæſar's Camp; Rue, Monſtrevil, &c. The Counts of Ponthieu are very ancient: William lived in the Tenth Age; he took the Town of Guines from Artold the Old, Earl of Flanders, which Sifrid, a Daniſh Lord, took from him afterwards. Charles VIIth. after the Expulſion of the Engliſh from France, united Ponthieu to the Crown; yielded it afterwards by the Treaty of Arras, in the year 1435, to the Duke of Burgundy; which Lewis XI. alſo did by the Treaty of Conflans, in 1465. The Right which the Emperor Charles Vth. pretended to have to the Earldom of Ponthieu, as Heir to the Houſe of Burgundy, was founded upon theſe Conceſſions; ceſſions: but he renounced it by the Treaty of Madrid, in 1526; by that of Cambray, in 1529; and by that of Creſpy, in 1544. Ariuſphus Chron. de S. Riquier: Oldric Vitalis, lib. 13. Hiſt. des Comtes Ponthieu.

PONTIA, a Roman Lady, with whom Octavius Sagitta, Tribune of the People, fell deſperately in Love, corrupted her with great Preſents, and afterwards got her divorced from her Husband, promiſing to marry her himſelf; but however it came about, when ſhe became free, he delayed, and put it off from one time to another; excuſing himſelf, that his Father was unwilling; and when ſhe had a Proſpect of a greater Fortune, ſhe in her turn abſolutely refuſed him; whereat he was ſo enraged, that he aſſaſſinated her; for which he was accuſed before the Conſuls by her Father, and condemned for an Aſſaſſin. Tacitus, lib. 13. cap. 15.

PONTIANUS, a Roman by Birth, was choſen Pope inſtead of Urban, about the end of June, in 231; but the Emperor Alexander Severus baniſhed him to the Iſland of Sardinia; and his Succeſſor, who had raiſed a Perſecution againſt the Chriſtians, cauſed him to be ſo ſeverely beaten with a Stick, that the poor Man died with the Pain and Agony of it, November 19th. in the year 235. Euſebius in Chron. & lib. 6. Hiſt. Anaſtaſius in vit. Pontif. Baronius in Annal.

PONTICUS (Virunius, or Virumnius) of Treviſo, a City in the States of Venice, lived about 1490; writ An Abridgement of the Engliſh Hiſtory, in favour of the Family of Badori of Venice, which came originally out of Great Britain, and commented upon Statius, Claudian, &c. beſides ſeveral other things in Proſe and Verſe. Trithemius in Catal.

PONTIFICES Romani, Roman Pontiffs, were thoſe who had the Care of all things, that regarded the Worſhip of the Gods, and the Ceremonies of Sacrifices. Varro ſaith, They were ſo called à Ponte faciendo; for that the firſt of them built the Wooden Bridge, called Pons ſublicius; but it's likely this Name came from Potis and facere; ſo that Pontifex might be ſaid for Potifex, and ſignified him that could ſacrifice. Numa inſtituted four at firſt who were of the Patrician Order; but in 454 of Rome, there were eight created, four out of Patrician, and the reſt out of Plebeian Families. This Number, in 673, was increaſed by L. Sylla, the Dictator, who made ſeven more. But the firſt eight retained the Name of Great Pontiffs, and the ſeven new ones of The Leſſer; who nevertheleſs made but one College. After Numa's time this College made choice of Members to fill up the vacant Places. But about the year 654 it was ordered, That the People ſhould chuſe them in their Aſſemblies. When Sylla became Dictator, he abrogated that Law. But Cicero, during his Conſulſhip, reſtored it. At laſt the Emperor Auguſtus, having for ſome time permitted the College of Pontiffs to admit ſuch as they judged capable, aſſumed afterwards that Power to himſelf, as alſo to create Pontiffs, and all ſorts of Prieſts. The Dignity of the Pontiffs was ſo great, that they were not obliged to give any manner of account of their Actions; and were Judges of all Matters that related to the Worſhip of the Gods and Sacrifices; making new Laws if they ſaw it convenient. To them belonged the Examination of the Magiſtrates, who had the Care of Sacred Things, of the Prieſts, and all the Officers that belonged to the Sacrifices. He that preſided in the College was called Pontifex Maximus, and was choſen by the People in the Comitia Tributa, being a Dignity that at firſt was beſtowed on none but ſuch as were Patricians. But in proceſs of time, the People, being admitted to the Offices and Honours of the Republick, did often raiſe to this Dignity Perſons that were not of a Noble Extract; till the time of Julius Cæſar, who having been created Pontifex Maximus, had Lepidus for his Succeſſor, and then Auguſtus; and afterwards, all the Emperors took this Title upon them. Even Conſtantine, and ſome of his Succeſſors, continued it, tho' they were Chriſtians, and hated Paganiſm; till Theodoſius the Emperor entirely aboliſhed this College. Zoſimus obſerves, It was the Emperor Gratian that firſt by an Edict forbad this Title of Pontifex Maximus ſhould be given him, and that Theodoſius, his Succeſſor, confiſcated all the Revenues belonging to them and the Pagan Prieſts. The Name of Pontifex and Pontifex Maximus was given to Biſhops afterwards; but the Popes have ſince uſurped it. Roſin Roman Antiquities lib. 3. cap. 22.

PONTINUS, a Valiant Roman, and Sharer with Cicero in all his Fortunes, ſubdued the Allobroges.

PONTIS (Lewis de) a Gentleman of Provence, born about 1578, was bred up to Arms in the Reign of Henry IVth. and Lewis XIIIth. who beſtowed upon him a Command in his Guards, and the Charge of Commiſſary-General of the Swiſſers. And after he had ſerv'd 56 years under three Princes, and receiv'd ſeventeen Wounds, being convinc'd of the Vanity of the World, he retir'd to a ſolitary Place where he ſpent almoſt twenty years in the Exerciſes of Piety, and the Preparations for another Life. He died in 1670. the ninety ſecond of his Age. We have under his Name very curious Memoirs, that contain all things of moment which happened in his time, with all the remarkable Circumſtances of War, Court, and the Government of the Princes under whom he ſerved. But Monſieur Le Clark is of Opinion, that he is ſometimes miſtaken both in his Matters of Fact, and in his Chronology.

PONTOISE, Lat. Pontiſara, Ponteſium, Oetiæ Pons, and Pons ad Oetiam; a Town in the Iſle of France, ſituated upon the Oyſe, between Iſle-Adam and the Confluence of that River with the Seine, within ſix Leagues of Paris, being a very important Paſs upon the Oyſe. It was taken by the Engliſh in 1417; and recovered by the French in 1442. It ſtands upon the ſide of an Hill, and reaches down to the Banks of the River; has a Caſtle on the top of that Hill, which commands the Town; ſeveral Churches, whereof that of S. Melon is the principal; and diverſe Monaſteries. This Town has a Bailiwick, Provoſtſhip, &c. has had formerly its own Counts; and ſince 1240 belonged to the French Kings; the Revenue whereof S. Lovis beſtowed upon Queen Blanch, his Mother. *Du Cheſn, Rech. des Ant. des Villes de Franc. PONT-POOL, a Market-Town in Monmouthſhire, betwixt the Hills, of chief Note for Iron Mills.

PONTUS, a Province in Aſia Minor, between Bithynia and Paphlagonia; thus called, becauſe it lies all along the Euxine Sea, whoſe capital City was Heraclea. It muſt not be confounded with Pontus in Scythia in Europe, whither Ovid was baniſhed. This Country had its particular King's, whoſe Succeſſion has been much interrupted, and very uncertain. It's pretended that Artabaxes was the firſt, who had five Succeſſors of the Name of Mithridates, and three afterwards called Pharnaces. After which at laſt is reckoned Mithridates the Great, who killed himſelf in the 691ſt. of Rome, after he had reigned 57 years, for grief his Son Pharnaces had revolted againſt him, and taken the Name of King upon him. Pharnaces had Darius for his Succeſſor; and after him came two of the Name of Polemon, and another Mithridates, Darius's Nephew. The Romans having before this reduced Pontus into a Province. Ptolemy lib. 5. Geogr. Strabo, Pliny, Appian & Riccioli Chron. Reform.

PONTUS (Euxinus) called by the Italians, Mare Maggiore; by the Greeks, Mauro Thalaſſon; by the Turks, Caradeniſi; and by the Ruſſians and Muſcovites, Zornemore; has Colchis to the Eaſt, Moldavia and Thracia to the Weſt, Aſia Minor to the South, and Sarmatia of Europe and Aſia to the North. Propontis, or the Sea of Marmora, is joined to it by the Thracian Boſphorus on the South-part. The Sea of Zabbachy, or the Palus Mæotis is alſo united to it by the Cimmerian Boſphorus, on the North-ſide. The Danube diſchargeth it ſelf into the Black Sea. Pliny, lib. 4. Strabo, lib. 12. Sanſon Geogr.

PONZA, is a very ſmall Iſland on the Coaſt of Italy, belonging to the Duke of Parma, and taken from him by the Spaniards in the late War; but reſtored him again by the Peace of Reſwick.

POOL (Reginald) or Cardinal Pool, was ſecond Son unto Richard Pool, Knight of the Garter, a near Kinſman to King Henry VIIth. by Margaret, Counteſs of Salisbury, Niece to King Edmard IVth. and Daughter to George Duke of Clarence. This Reginald was bred in Corpus Chriſti College in Oxford, preferred afterward Dean of Exeter, and highly favoured by King Henry VIIIth. who ſent him beyond the Seas, allowing him a large Penſion to live in an Equipage ſuitable to his Birth. He ſtudied at Padua; and upon the breaking of King Henry VIIIth. with the Pope, he wrote his Book, De Unione Eccleſiaſtica, in which he condemn'd the King's Proceedings, and preſs'd him to return to the Obedience of the See of Rome: This Book was writ with a great deal of Spirit and Elocution, but as Dr. Burnet obſerves, had ſome Satyrical Reflections in it, which loſt him the King's Favour; whereupon his Penſions were withdrawn, which made him to apply his Studies the more privately in a Venetian Monaſtery, where he attained great Credit for his Eloquence, Learning, and good Life: Such Eſteem foreign Grandees had of his great Judgment, that Cardinal Sadolet, having written a large Book in the Praiſe of Philoſophy, ſubmitted it wholly to his Cenſure. Some time after this, he was made Deacon-Cardinal by the Title of S. Mary, in Coſmedin, by Pope Paul the IIId. who ſent him on many dangerous Embaſſies to the Emperor and French King, to incite them to war againſt King Henry the VIIIth. Afterwards he retired to Viterbo in Italy, where his Houſe was obſerved to be the Sanctuary of Lutherans. Being appointed one of the three Preſidents of the Council of Trent, he endeavoured (but in vain) to have Juſtification determined by Faith alone. After the Death of Paul the IIId. he was at midnight in the Conclave choſen to ſucceed him. Pool refuſed it, becauſe he would not have his Choice a Work of Weakneſs, which being miſinterpreted, the next Morning, he found Julius IIId. choſen in his place. But afterwards was made Archbiſhop of Canterbury by Queen Mary, after whom he died in few Hours, 1558. He was a learned, modeſt, and good natur'd Man, and was always againſt rigorous Expedients in Matters of Religion: In a word, he was a Perſon of as great Probity and Vertue, as moſt of the Age in which he liv'd. Beſides the Treatiſe above-mention'd, he wrote, De ſummo Pontifice; De ejuſdem poteſtate; De concilio Tridentino; A Volume of Letters, &c. Fuller's Worthies. Burnet's Hiſt. Reform. Becatel. Du Cheſne Hiſt. d'Angl. &c.

POOL, a Market and Borough Town, with a Harbour in the S. E. of Dorſetſhire. It ſtands upon the Inlet of the Sea, incloſed on all ſides with it, but on the North, where it admits Entrance only by one Gate. This Town, from a mean Hamlet, conſiſting of a few Fiſhermens Houſes, in the Reign of King Edward the IIId. grew to be a Town of good Trade, and throve to that degree, that Henry VIth. granted it the Privilege of an Haven, and licenſed the Mayor to wall it in. Then began the Inhabitants to abound in Wealth, and purchaſed the Privilege of a Country corporate. But it has loſt much of its former Glory. Diſtant 110 miles from London.

POPAYAN, Lat. Popaiama, a great Province in South America, in the firm Land, towards the Mountains; is bounded on the Weſt by the South Sea, on the South by Peru, on the Eaſt by New Granada, and on the North by New Carthagena. Its greateſt extent is from North to South. Its capital City is Popayan, ſituate near the Riſe of the River S. Martha, 140 miles Eaſt of the South Sea. This City and Province took its Name from a King that reigned here when the Spaniards, about the year 1537, conquered this Province. The City ſtands 2 deg. 30 min. from the Line to the North, 72. 30 from Toledo Weſt, on both Sides of a fine River, which by the Acceſſion of others, before it falls into the Altantick Ocean, becomes one of the biggeſt Rivers in America. The Air is temperate and healthful; but too much ſubject to Rain, Thunder and Lightnings. It has plenty of Corn, Cattle, Fruits and Herbs, and a double Harveſt every Year. Theſe Indians are more Civil, Induſtrious and Ingenious than moſt of the other Indians.

POPE, the word in Greek ſignifies Father. It's a Name that was given formerly to all Biſhops, as appears by the Epiſtles of S. Auguſtin and S. Jerom, and by the Works of the ancient Eccleſiaſtical Writers. But about the end of the XIth. Age, Gregory VIIth. in a Council held at Rome, ordered that the Name of Pope ſhould peculiarly belong to the Biſhop of Rome. When one of the Cardinals is choſen Pope, the Maſters of the Ceremonies come to his Cell, to acquaint him with the News of his Promotion. Whereupon he is conducted to the Chapel, and clad in the Pontifical Habit, then receives the Adoration, that is, the Reſpects paid by the Cardinals to the Popes. After which he is carried to S. Peter's Church, and placed upon the Altar of the Holy Apoſtles, where the Cardinals come a ſecond time to the Adoration; from thence he is conducted to his Apartment, and ſome days after is performed the Ceremony of his Coronation, before the Door of S. Peter's Church, where is erected a Throne, upon which the New Pope aſcends, has his Mitre put off, and a Crown put on his Head in preſence of all the People. Afterwards is the Cavalcade, from S. Peter's Church to S. John de Lateran, whereat all the Embaſſadors, Princes, and Lords aſſiſt, mounted on Horſeback and richly Habited. Next before the Pope goes the two Cardinal-Deans with their red Caps, and the other Cardinals come after, two and two, followed by the Patriarchs, Archbiſhops, Biſhops, and Prothonotaries. When the Pope is come to S. John de Lateran, the Archbiſhop of that Church preſents him with two Keys, one of Gold, and the other of Silver; then all the Canons, paying their Obeyſance, and kiſſing his Feet, he gives the general Benediction. Maimburg, in his Hiſtory of the Grand Schiſm of the Weſt, ſays, That for the firſt five Centuries the People and Clergy together, and ſometimes the Clergy alone, with Conſent of the People, choſe the Pope by Plurality of Voices; until after the Death of Pope Simplicius, in 483. Odoacer, King of the Heruli and Italy, made a Law, That none ſhould be choſen without firſt acquainting the Prince whom they had a mind to chuſe. This Law was aboliſhed about twenty years after, in the IVth. Council of Rome, under Pope Symmachus, by the Conſent of King Theodorick, in 502. But that Prince turning Arian, grew Tyrannical in the latter end of his Reign, and ſeiz'd the Privilege of making the Pope himſelf, and in conſequence of it plac'd Pope Fælix IV. in the Chair. The Gothick Princes followed his Example, only allowing the Clergy to chuſe; but he was not to aſcend the Chair till confirmed by them. Juſtinian, who overturned the Empire of the Goths, and alſo his Succeſſors, retained the ſame Privilege, and demanded Money of the Pope elect to confirm his Election. But Conſtantinus Pogonatus freed them from this Impoſition in 681. Nevertheleſs the Emperors did ſtill keep a ſhare in the Election; ſo that the Popes were not conſecrated without their Conſent. Until the French Emperor Louis le Debonnaire in 824, and his Succeſſors Lotharius I. and Louis II. in 864, reſtored the Popes to their former Liberty. In the Xth. Age, the Marqueſs of Hetruria and Count de Tuſcanella, with the Grandees of Rome, choſe and depoſed Popes as they pleaſed, as did the Emperor Otho the Great, and his Son and Grand-ſon in that ſame Age. S. Henry, Duke of Bavaria, their Succeſſor, reſtored the Popes to their privileges again in 1014, leaving the Election to the Clergy and People of Rome; but his Son and Grand-ſon, Henry IIId. and IVth. reaſſumed the power of chuſing or depoſing the Popes, which occaſioned Wars between them and the Emperors about the Inveſtitures, the Emperors ſetting up Anti-popes, which occaſioned a Schiſm in the Church of Rome. But after the time of Innocent II. and that the Controverſie between Peter de Leon called Anaclete, and Victor IV. was extinguiſhed, the Cardinals and principal of the Clergy of Rome, choſe Pope Cæleſtine II. by their own Authority in 1143. and the reſt of the Clergy having parted with their Pretenſions, Honorius III. in 1216, or according to others, Gregory Xth. in 1274, ordered that the Election ſhould be made in the Conclave, ſince which time the Cardinals have ſtill kept poſſeſſion. The manner of the Election is thus: Nine or ten days after the Funerals of the deceaſed Pope, the Cardinals enter the Conclave, which is generally held in the Vatican, in a long Gallery, where Cells of Boards are erected, covered with purple Cloth, one for each Cardinal, who is during this time allowed only two Servants except in caſe of Sickneſs. They are guarded by the Militia of Rome, who hinder all Intercourſe of Letters from without, and the Diſhes alſo are inſpected by a Maſter of the Ceremonies, leſt any Letters ſhould be concealed in the Meat. Of late it hath obtained among them to premiſe certain Articles, which they think neceſſary for the better Government of the Church, and every one ſwears to obſerve them if he ſhould be choſen. The Election is made by Scrutiny, Acceſs or Adoration. The firſt is, when the Cardinal writes the Name of him whom he votes for in a Scroll of five pages, on the firſt whereof he writes, Ego eligo in Summum Pontificem Reverendiſſimum Dominum meum Cardinalem— But this is writ by one of his Servants, that the Cardinal may not be diſcovered by his Hand. On this fold two others are doubled down and ſealed with a private Seal. On the fourth the Cardinal writes his own Name, and covers it with the fifth folding. Then ſitting in order on Benches in the Chapel, with their Scrolls in their hands, they aſcend to the Altar by turns; and after a ſhort Prayer on their Knees, throw the Scroll into a Chalice upon the Table, by it the firſt Cardinal Biſhop ſitting on the right, and the firſt Cardinal-Deacon on the left ſide, and the Cardinals being returned to their places, the Cardinal Biſhop turns out the Scrolls into a Plate, which he holds in his Left-hand, and gives them as they come to the Cardinal-Deacon, who reads them with an audible Voice, while the Cardinals note down how many Voices every perſon hath; and then the Maſter of the Ceremonies burns the Scrolls in a Pan of Coals, that it may not be known for whom any one gives his Voice; and if two thirds of the number preſent agree, the Election is good; and he on whom the two thirds falls is declared Pope. When the Choice is made by Acceſs, the Cardinals riſe from their places, and going towards him whom they would have elected, each ſays, Ego accedo ad Reverendiſſimum Dominum— And the Adoration is much in the ſame manner, only the Cardinal approaches him whom he would have choſen with a profound Reverence, but both the one and the other muſt be confirmed by the Scrutiny. There was another way of chuſing by Compromiſe, when the Differences roſe ſo high that they could not be adjuſted in the Conclave, they referred the Choice to three or five, giving them leave to elect any, whom all, or the majority, ſhould chuſe, provided it were determined within the time that a Candle lighted by common conſent ſhould laſt. There is yet a fifth way of Election called, By Inſpiration, viz. When the firſt Cardinal ariſes in the Chapel, and after an Exhortation to chuſe a capable Perſon, names ſuch an one, to which if two thirds agree, he is reckoned legally choſen. Which being performed by any of theſe Methods, he is led into the Veſtry cloathed in his Pontificalibus; then carried into the Chapel, ſeated on the Altar, and the Cardinals performing the Ceremony of Adoration kiſs his Feet, Hands, and Mouth; after which all the Doors and Gates of the Conclave are opened, and the Pope, ſhewing himſelf to the People, bleſſes them; the firſt Cardinal Deacon proclaiming with a loud Voice to them in theſe words, Annuncio vobis Gaudium magnum, Papam habemus. Reverendiſſimus Dominus Cardinalis— electus eſt in Summum Pontificem, & elegit ſibi Nomen -- This being done, he deſcends into S. Peter's Church, the Cardinals with a Croſs going before him: and then coming to the high Altar, takes off his Mitre, kneels and prays a while, and returns thanks to God and the bleſſed Apoſtles, &c. Sir Paul Rycaut's Introduction to Platina. Here it is fit to be noted, That the Ancient Church did not allow any ſuch diſtinguiſhing Primacy in the Pope, as is now challeng'd, as appears plainly by ſeveral of S. Cyprian's Epiſtles, in which, That Father calls the Pope Brother, treats him upon a Level, and declares himſelf, by virtue of his Epiſcopal Authority, accountable to none but God, for the Government of his Dioceſs. Firmilian likewiſe, Biſhop of Cappadocia, writing to Pope Stephen, uſes him with great freedom, and reproves him ſharply, without giving him the leſt Mark of any Superiority. The Council of Carthage likewiſe, held under S. Cyprian, about the Caſe of Rebaptization, condemns the Stile of Epiſcopus Epiſcoporum, as an Incroachment upon the reſt of Church; to this we may add the third Canon of the ſecond General Council, at Conſtantinople, by which the See of Conſtantinople had a Grant of Privilege and Precedency next to the See of Rome: The Reaſon aſſign'd by the Council for this Privilege, is taken from the Grandeur of the City, eo quod ſit Nova Roma, becauſe it was the Seat of the Empire, and a ſort of New Rome; from whence we may infer, That in the Opinion of the Council, the Pope's Prerogative was founded more upon Rome's being the Capital of the Empire, than upon any Claim deriv'd from S. Peter. To proceed; The Fourth General Council of Chalcedon, held in the Fifth Century, aſſign'd the Biſhop or Patriarch of Conſtantinople, the Limits of his Juriſdiction, Decreeing withal, in the Twenty eighth Canon, That he ſhould have τὰ ἴσα πρεσβεῖα, Equal Privileges with the Biſhop of Rome: Their Reaſon being the ſame with that of the Council of Conſtantinople, (viz.) Becauſe Conſtantinople was a kind of New Rome, Dignify'd with a Senate, and the Reſidence of the Emperor. 'Tis true, the Pope's Legates complain'd againſt this Canon, and refus'd to be preſent at the paſſing of it, but notwithſtanding their Oppoſition, 'twas read a ſecond time in the laſt Seſſion of the Council, and unanimouſly carry'd by the Fathers and afterwards confirm'd by the Emperor: Some time before this, in the Year 402, there was a Provincial Council held at Milevis in Numidia in Africa, in which, the Caſe of one Apiarius, a Prieſt, was examin'd: This Apiarius, being cenſur'd by his own Biſhop, Appeal'd from his Sentence to the Pope. now the Council, after a full hearing of the Matter, condemn'd the Proceedings of Apiarius, and made a Canon againſt Ultra-Marine, and Foreign Appeals. The Reader that has a mind to ſee more of this Argument, may Conſult Mr. Dodwell's Diſſertationes Cyprianicæ, upon S. Cyprian. De Unitate Eccleſiæ. Dr. Cave Hiſt. Liter. p. 1. p. 32, 33. 50. 63. 79. 103. 106. 110. 130. 135. 146. 154. 191. not to mention many other Authors. The Pope's Juriſdiction extends to all the Provinces called the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate, which takes in Campagna di Roma, the Patrimony of S. Peter, Terra Sabina, Umbria, or Dutchy of Spoleto, the Marquiſate of Ancona, the Dutchy of Urbin, Romagnia, Boulonois, the Dutchy of Ferrara, the Territory of Peruſa, le Contado de Citta Caſtello. In the Patrimony of S. Peter are, the Dutchy of Caſtro, the Cities of Caprarola, Ronciglione, &c. which belong to the Duke of Parma, and the Dutchy of Bracciano, which has its particular Duke. Between Romagna and the Dutchy of Urbin, is the little Republick of S. Marin. But to return to the Dominion of the Pope, la Campagna di Roma hath for principal Cities, Rome, Oſtia, Paleſtrina, Freſcati, Albano, Tivoli, Terracina, &c. The Patrimony of S. Peter, the Cities of Porto, Civita-vecchia, Viterbo, &c. The principal Cities of Terra Sabina are, Magliano, Veſcovio, &c. Umbria, in the Dutchy of Spoleto, has Spoleto, Apiſa, Todi, &c. The Marquiſate of Ancona contains the Cities of Ancona, Fermo, our Lady of Loretto, Aſcoli, Jeſi, &c. The Dutchy of Urbin hath four conſiderable Cities, Urbin, Senigaglia, S. Leo, &c. La Romagnia hath Ravenna, Cervia, Faenza, &c. The principal City of the Boulonois is Bolonia la Graſſe. The Dutchy of Ferrara comprehends Ferrara, Comachio, &c. The Territory of Orvietta hath Aquapendente, Orvietta, &c. and that of Perugia takes in Perugia, Citta de Pieve, &c. and in Contado ſtands Citta di Caſtello. The Pope has a Vicar who is always a Cardinal. He that manageth that Charge has Juriſdiction over the Prieſts and Regulars, over the Lay-Communities, Hoſpitals, Places of Piety and Jews. His Place may be worth to him one hundred Ducats per Month. He has two Lieutenants, one for civil, and the other for criminal Affairs, and a Vice-gerent, who is a Biſhop, for the exerciſe of Epiſcopal Functions. The Penitentiary has Juriſdiction in Caſes reſerved to the Pope; and gives to approved Confeſſors Power to abſolve. At ſolemn Feaſts he goes into one of the Churches of Rome, where ſitting in an high Chair, he has a Switch in his hand, and hears the Confeſſions of particular Caſes. This place is worth eight thouſand Crowns a Year. The Chancellor was properly Secretary to the Pope ab intimis. This Charge is beſtowed now upon none but a Cardinal; and it may be worth to him fifteen or ſixteen thouſand Crowns a Year. His Buſineſs is, to diſpatch the Apoſtolick Letters, whoſe Petitions are ſign'd by the Pope, except thoſe which are diſpatched by a Brief ſub annulo piſcatoris. He has under him a Regent, and twelve Abbreviators di Parco maggiore, which are all Prelates. The Regent has Power to commit all Cauſes of Appeal to the Rota and Referendaries. The Abbreviators di Parco maggiore draw the Minutes of the Bulls, and ſend them when they are written. Beſides which, there are Abbreviators di Parco minore, which are Scriveners, and other Officers of the Chancery, appointed to receive and ſign Bulls. The Vice-Chancellor keeps a Regiſter of the Collation of Titles given to Cardinals, and of Promotion to Biſhopricks and Conſiſtorial Abbies. The Chamberlain is always a Cardinal, and hath for Subſtitutes the Clerks of the Apoſtolick Chamber, a Treaſurer, and a Preſident. This Office is worth to him fourteen thouſand Crowns a Year. He takes Cognizance of all Cauſes within the verge of the Apoſtolick Chamber; and beſides, judgeth of Appeals from the Maſters of the Streets, Bridges, and Edifices. When the See is vacant, the Chamberlain remains in the Palace, in the Pope's Apartment, goes through the Streets with the Swiſs Guards attending him, coins Money with his own Arms thereon, and holds a Conſiſtory. He has one of the three Keys of the Treaſure of the Caſtle of S. Angelo, whereof the Dean is another, and the Pope the third. The Prefect of the Signature of Juſtice is alſo one of the Cardinals, and has two hundred Ducats in Gold per Month. His Buſineſs is to make Reſcripts of all the Petitions and the Commiſſions of Cauſes which are delegated by the Court. Every Thurſday the Signature of Juſtice is held in the Palace of the Cardinal Prefect, where aſſiſt twelve Prelates Referendaries, that have Vote, and all the other Referendaries, with Power to propoſe each two Cauſes; as alſo an Auditor of the Rota, and the civil Auditor of the Cardinal Vicar, having no Vote, but only to maintain their Juriſdiction in what relates to them. The Prefect of the Signature of Grace ſigns all the Petitions and Grants which the Pope beſtows in the Congregations held in his own Preſence once a Week. The Prefect of the Briefs is always a Cardinal; he reviſeth and ſigns the Copies of the Briefs. The General of the Holy Church is created by a Brief or Patent of the Pope, who gives him the Staff himſelf in his Chamber, and takes his Oath. In time of Peace he has allowed him a thouſand Crowns per Month; and three thouſand in time of War. He commands all the Troops and all the Governours in the Places and Fortreſſes of the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate. His Lieutenant has three thouſand Crowns a Year, and is made alſo by a Brief from the Pope; as is the General of the Artillery, who has twelve hundred Crowns per Annum. The General of the Gallies has three hundred Crowns a Month. The Governour of the Caſtle of S. Angelo has ſix thouſand Crowns per Annum, an hundred Soldiers for the Guard of it, with their Captain, Lieutenant, and other Officers. The Chamberlain of the Sacred College is changed every Year; which College conſiſts of the Pope and Cardinals, who hold a Conſiſtory upon important Affairs. The Pope has four Maſters of Ceremonies, who are always clad in Purple, and have great Authority in publick Affairs. Beſides which there are other Maſters of the Ceremonies, which are in the Congregations of Privileges, whereof one diſcharges the Office of Secretary, and the other diſpatches Orders. The Maſter of the Sacred Palace is always a Dominican. He reviews and approves all the Books that are printed, being aſſiſted by two Prieſts of the ſame Order. The Palace, beſides a Table, allows him a Coach. The Veſtry-keeper is an Auguſtin Monk, who hath the ſame allowance as the Maſter of the Palace. He takes care of all the Riches in the Pope's Veſtry. He goes like a Prelate. And if he be a Titular Biſhop, takes place among the aſſiſtant Biſhops. The Pope's Secretary is always a Cardinal, and very often his Nephew. This Place is united to that of Super-intendant of the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate. He writes and ſubſcribes all the Letters ſent to the Princes and Nuncios. All Embaſſadors and all Miniſters at Rome, after having negotiated with the Pope, are obliged to give him an Account of their Negotiations. The Secretaries of State are ſubject to the Secretary Super-intendant, or Cardinal-Patron, whoſe Orders they receive, and to whom they ſend their Letters to be ſubſcribed. They live in the Palace, and are Prelates clad in Purple. There are twenty four Secretaries of Briefs; the chief whereof lives in the Palace. Their Buſineſs is to ſubſcribe and diſpatch all the Briefs that are received by the Cardinal-Prefect of the Briefs. The Secretary of the ſecret Briefs takes care to prepare them when the Cardinal-Patron, or ſome one of the Secretaries of State commands him. Theſe Briefs are ſhewed to no Body, nor ſigned by the Prefect of the Briefs, and after they are ſealed ſub annulo Piſcatoris, and accompanied, they are ſent away with a Letter from the Cardinal-Patron. The Copies of theſe Briefs are carefully kept; and when the Pope is dead they are carried to the Caſtle of S. Angelo. The Major-domo, or Steward of the Houſhold to the Pope, is always a Prelate. The Chamberlains of Honour are Perſons of Quality, who come not to the Palace but when they pleaſe. The Maſter of the Stables is a Gentleman, who has the Office of Maſter of the Horſe, without the Title of it, for the Pope beſtows no ſuch upon any Perſon. He is Sword-bearer, and ſometimes one of the greateſt Lords in Rome, as was Pompey Frangipani under Leo XI. The General of the Pope's Guards has under him two Troops of Horſe, and a Company of three hundred Swiſſers, with their Officers. As to the Officers of the Datary, Prothonotaries, Participants, and Auditors of the Rota, vide DATARY, PROTHONOTARY, ROTA. The Pope has eſtabliſhed an Apoſtolical Chamber, which conſiſts of the Cardinal-Chamberlain, the Governours of Rome, as Vice-Chamberlain, the Treaſurer-General, the Auditor and Preſident of the Chamber, the Attorney General of Rome, and ſeveral other Officers, for to judge of Matters that concern the Revenues of the Provinces of the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate; the Moneys, Impoſitions, Gabels, &c. The Governour of Rome takes cognizance in a ſpecial manner of civil and criminal Matters, and hath power to ſtop the Proceedings of other Courts of the City in caſe of default. The Treaſurer-General looks over the Accounts of the Revenues of the Chamber. This place is worth ſeventy thouſand Crowns, and brings in yearly twelve thouſand. The Auditor of the Chamber has as great a Revenue. He is the ordinary Judge of the Court of Rome, of the Courtiers, Barons, Princes, Biſhops, and other Prelates, and of all the Appeals in the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate. He has two Lieutenants, one for civil, and one for criminal Matters. The Preſident of the Chamber inſpects the Accounts of the Moneys of the Chamber and Apoſtolick See. The Attorney-General takes care of the Rights and Revenues of the Exchequer in all Courts of Judicature, and the Sollicitor-General maintains 'em by Argument in Writing. The Mareſchal of Rome has under him two civil Judges, one whereof is called the firſt collateral Judge, and the other the ſecond collateral, with a Judge for criminal Cauſes. He, together with theſe Judges, takes cognizance of Matters between the Citizens and Inhabitants of Rome. He is always a Foreigner, and lives in the Capitol; while at the diſcharge of his Office, he appears clad like an old Senator, having a Robe of Cloth of Gold that hangs down to the Ground, with large Sleeves to it, lined with Crimſon Taffety. He has a Seat in the Pope's Chapel, near unto the Emperor's Embaſſador. As to the Government of the Pope's Dominion. He governs the Province of Rome himſelf; but all the other Provinces are governed by Legates or Vice-Legates. Beſides which every Province has a General, which commands the Forces; and each City a Governour, choſen by the Pope. But the Podeſta's and other Officers are choſen by the Inhabitants; except the Forts, Caſtles, and Ports, whoſe Officers as well as Governours depend upon the Pope's Choice. Onuphr. Panvin.

POPIEL, King of Poland, was Son to Leſchus IV. and ſucceeded him about 816. He died five Years after, and left a Son of the ſame Name with himſelf. Authors ſay, he and his Family were devoured by Rats. Piaſt was put upon the Throne after him, about 242. Chron. Hiſt. Polon.

POPILIUS, called Lænas, Conſul of Rome, was choſen from among the People, exerciſed that Charge four times, and in 404 routed the Gauls ſeveral times. This was an illuſtrious Family in Rome, whereof there were ſeveral great Men, and among the reſt, that Popilius who was ſent to Antiochus, King of Syria, to hinder him from attacking Ptolemy, King of Egypt, the Romans Ally. Antiochus would have evaded his Propoſals, but Popilius underſtanding his Intentions, made a Circle round about the King, and prayed him not to go out of it till he gave poſitive Anſwer of Peace or War. I know not whether that Popilius Lænas that killed Cicero, was of this Family. If he was, he diſhonoured it by his Wickedneſs and Ingratitude, in depriving that Man of his Life, who had preſerved his by his Eloquence. Livy, Valerius Maximus, Velleius Paterculus, &c.

POPMEN, or A Popma, (Auſonius de) a Native of Ilſt, a little Town in Friezſland, lived about 1610, was famous for his Learning, and had three Brothers, who were all Writers. He himſelf was a Learned Grammarian, and a Famous Lawyer; and writ ſeveral Things, publiſhed Notes upon *Varro, Paterculus, &c. De differentia verborum, De ordine & more Judiciorum, &c. Valer. POPPEA Sabina, Nero's ſecond Wife, was the Daughter of Titus Ollius, but ſhe took the Name of her Uncle by the Mother's ſide, Poppeus Sabinus, as being more renowned, becauſe a Conſul, and honoured with a Triumph. She had been married to a Roman Knight, named Rufus Criſpinus, and had a Son by him, when Otho, who was afterwards Emperor, debauched her, but he afterwards married her; and whether it were through exceſs of Love, or to preſerve thereby his Credit, never ceaſed praiſing her to Nero, who, when he ſaw her, was immediately ſmitten with her Beauty; and ſhe by her cunning Management wrought ſo, that he divorced Octavia, who was barren, and afterwards made her away, removed Otho far from Rome, under the ſpecious Pretence of giving him the Government of Portugal, and married her. Some time after ſhe bore him a Daughter, whereat Nero was ſo tranſported with Joy, that he gave her the name of Auguſta, as well as the Mother. Authors ſpeak much of the Beauty and Magnificence of Poppea, who to preſerve her Beauty, waſhed her ſelf every Day in Aſſes Milk. She died of a kick Nero gave her in his Paſſion, when ſhe was big with Child. This happen'd A. C. 65, Tacitus lib. 13, 14, 15 & 16 *Annal. Suetonius in Nerone & Othone. PORC ESPIC, Porcupine, an Order of the Knights of Orleans, inſtituted by Lewis, ſecond Son to Charles V. Duke of Orleans, as 'tis ſaid, upon the birth of his Son Charles in 1394. It conſiſted of twenty five Knights, whereof the Duke was chief: They were to be of Noble Extraction, and to wear a Mantle of Ermine, over which was a Gold Chain, at the end whereof hung upon the Breaſt a Golden Porcupine, with this Deviſe, Cominus & Eminus, which King Lewis XI. took afterwards for himſelf. It appears alſo, that this Order has been called by the name of The Order of the Agate, becauſe the Duke of Orleans gave, together with the Collars, a Gold Ring, adorned with an Agate, whereon was engraven a Porcupine; but King Lewis XII. aboliſhed this Order upon his coming to the Crown, *S. PORCIA, Daughter of Cato Uticenſis, and Wife to Brutus, attained to a great knowledge of Philoſophy, was a lover of Learning, and her Wit as well as Courage made her appear to be above her Sex. When Brutus was about to execute the Conſpiracy againſt Cæſar, ſhe gave her ſelf a very large Wound, and ſeeing her Husband concern'd at it; I have wounded my ſelf, ſaid ſhe, to give you a proof of my love, and to let you know, with what Conſtancy I could die, if the Buſineſs you undertake coming to miſcarry, ſhould cauſe your ruine. Coming afterwards to underſtand the defeat and death of Brutus, which happened in 712 of Rome, ſhe reſolved to die: Her Friends oppoſed that fatal Deſign, and deprived her of all the Weapons ſhe could uſe for her Deſtruction; but ſhe had the Courage to ſwallow red hot Coals. *Plutarch in Bruto. PORCIUS LICINIUS, a Latin Poet, lived in the beginning of the ſecond Punick War, in the time that Poetry was not come to any conſiderable Perfection, being the 536 Year of Rome. The Family of the Porcii, Gens Porcia, was illuſtrious at Rome among the Plebeians, whereof there was Porcius Cato, whoſe Sons were Cato the Cenſor, and Porcius Licinius, Conſul in 570. The firſt of theſe two Brothers had two Sons alſo, to wit, M. Porcius, and Porcius Cato Salonianus, who died when Pretor. Some Authors ſpeak of him as Father to M. Porcius, who was Conſul in 640, and baniſhed from Rome for his Miſgovernment in Macedonia, and retired to Tarragon in Spain. He had a Son of the ſame Name, who was Father to Cato of Utica; and this ſame was the Father of Porcius Cato, who was kill'd at the Battle of Philippi, in 712. Porcius Cato, the Cenſor's eldeſt Son, died before his Father. He had married Fertia, Daughter to Paulus Æmilius, and left ſome excellent Books concerning Law, according to Pomponius. This famous Lawyer had a Son that died in Africa, the Father of *L. PORLOCK, a Market and Sea Town of Carhampton, Hundred in the Weſt of Somerſetſhire. It has a good Harbour on the Weſtern Point of the Country, 136 Miles from London.

PORPHYRIUS, Biſhop of Antioch, was notorious for his Vices. He ſucceeded Flavian in 404, but was put upon the See irregularly, by the order of Severian and Antiochus, the Church Doors being ſhut, and the People not called together. He corrupted the Soldiers, and uſed all ſorts of Violences to conſtrain the People to communicate with him, He died in 408, and was ſucceeded by Alexander. Theodoret lib. 5. Baronius in Annal.

PORPHYRIUS, a Platonick Philoſoper, lived about the end of the Third Age, in the Reign of Diocleſian. S. Jerom makes him to be a Jew, but Eunapius affirms he was of Tyre, that his firſt Name was Malchus, which in the Syrian Tongue ſignifies a King, and that the Sophiſt Longinus, his Rhetorick Maſter, called him Porphyrius, in Alluſion to the Purple which Kings wear. His Maſters in Philoſophy were Plotinus and Amelius. He writ a piece of the Lives of Philoſophers, of Abſtinence from Fleſh; an Explication of the Categories of Ariſtotle, &c. He died, it's likely, towards the end of Diocleſian's Reign. He writ alſo a piece in fifteen Books, againſt the Chriſtian Religion, which he once profeſſed, according to S. Auguſtin, Socrates, and ſome others, and was anſwered by Methodius Biſhop of Tyre, and Euſebius afterwards, and had his Books burnt in 388. S. Jerom in Præf. Catal. Script. Eccl. S. Aug. de Civitat. Dei. Cyril. l. 1. Cont. Julian. Eunapius in Vit. Phil.

PORPHYROGENETI, or PORPHYROGENITES, a Name given to the Emperors of Conſtantinople's Children, becauſe that the Empreſſes were wont to lie-inn in an Appartment, called the Porphyrie, or Purple Room, that ſtood at the entry into the Palace towards the Propontis, which place was built by Conſtantine the Great, and deſign'd for the Birth and Education of the Princes deſcended from him; but Nicetas ſays, This Place was ſo called from the Princes, who were named Porphyrogenites, becauſe they were received into the World in a purple Cloth, whereof he gives a particular Inſtance in the Birth of Emanuel Comnenus. Nicetas l. 5. Luitprand l. 2. &c.

PORRETA (Margaret) a certain Woman of Hainault, that lived in the Thirtenth Age, and writ a very erroneous Book at Paris, whither ſhe went, ſaying, That a Man wholly devoted to the love of his Creator, can freely ſatisfie all the Deſires of Nature, without fear of offending God; which Doctrine ſhe maintained. She was burnt for this falſe Doctrine in 1210. Guiard de Creſſonneſart publiſhed his Errors at the ſame time, calling himſelf The Angel of Philadelphia; but he recanted, and came off with a perpetual Impriſonment. Spond. A. C. 1210. n. 6.

PORSENNA, a King of Hetruria, whoſe Capital was Cluſium, now Chiuſi in Tuſcany. He beſieged Rome in 247, in order to reſtore Tarquinius Superbus to the Throne, which Siege laſted a long while, and reduced the Romans to great Extremity; but the Courage of Clelia, Horatius Cocles, and Mutius Scævola chiefly contributed to the ſaving of the City, ſo that Porſenna was forc'd to raiſe his Siege, and depart Home. Livy l. 2. Dionyſ. Halicar. l. 5. Florus l. 1. c. 10.

PORT, or PORTO, Lat. Portus Auguſti and Portus Romanus, a City in Italy, at the Mouth of the Tyber, in the Eccleſiaſtical State, a Biſhop's See, whoſe Haven was built by Claudius, repair'd by Trajan, and was very conſiderable, but now there are ſcarce any remains of it. The Town is alſo ruinated and thin of People, becauſe of the badneſs of the Air, but it gives Title to one of the ſix ancient Cardinals.

PORT ALEGRE, Lat. Portus Alacris, formerly Amæa, a City of Portugal, a Biſhop's See under Bragua, is in the Province of Alentejo, towards the Frontiers of Eſtremadura, and ſtands upon a River, being very well fortified. It's an Earldom belonging to the Houſe of Silva.

PORT AU PRINCE, a City in the Southern part of the Iſland of Cuba, one of the Antilles in America, whoſe Haven is called Port S. Mary. This City ſtands in a great Plain, where the Spaniards have many Hato's or Parks for the breeding of Cattle to get Tallow and Leather. Thence comes that Leather called Havana Leather, ſo much eſteemed throughout Europe. They carry it from this City to that of Havana, which is the Capital of the Iſle, in order to imbark it for Spain, whence 'tis tranſmitted to all the other Kingdoms of Europe. Oexmelin Hiſt. of the Weſt Ind.

PORT AUX PRUNES, a Country in the Northern part of the Iſland of Madagaſcar, extends it ſelf from the Port of Tametavi to the Bay of Antongil, and is boundded on the Weſt with the Mountains of Vohits-Anghombes, and Anſianach. It's a good Country, abounding in Rice and excellent Forage, and its Inhabitants are laborious, who will rather die of Hunger than eat of any Beaſt that has been killed by a Chriſtian. They pretend they are deſcended from Abraham, know nothing of Mahomet, and call thoſe of that Sect Cafres. They honour the Patriarchs, Noah, Abraham, Iſaac, Jacob, Joſeph, Moſes and David, but know nothing of the other Prophets, nor of Chriſt. They Circumciſe, and do not work upon the Sabbath no more than the Jews. They neither faſt nor pray publickly, but only ſacrifice Bulls, Cows, Kids and Cocks, &c. In every Village they have a Philoubei, who adminiſters Juſtice; all which Philoubei's obey an Elder, who is Judge of all Controverſies. Their Women plant the Rice, making a hole in the Earth with a ſharp pointed Staff, and throw in two Grains of Rice, which they cover with their Feet, dancing and ſinging over it; which is performed in one Day by all the Women and Maids of each Village, who meet together for that purpoſe. The River of Manaugouron, which diſchargeth it ſelf into the Sea about the Iſle of S. Mary, is very large, but ſo rapid, that it's ſcarcely Navigable. There are to be ſeen, all along this River, Chryſtal Stones, ſome whereof are four foot thick. It's ſaid alſo, that there are found in the Iſle of Amboulnoſis, which is in this River, many precious Stones. Flacourt Hiſt. de Madagaſcar.

PORT CONQUET, a Town in the Point of Bretaigne in France, five French Leagues from Breſt to the Weſt. It was taken and burnt by the Engliſh in 1558, in revenge for the taking Calais, but the Country coming down upon them, they were driven to their Ships with the loſs of 600 Men.

PORT DESIRE, a Port in South America, upon the Eaſt of Mare Magellanicum, called formerly Baya de los Trabajos, the Mouth whereof is about half a League broad, with two little Iſlands, and two Rocks adjoining, that cannot be ſeen when the Tide is in. The neigbouring Country is covered with white Sand, and has no Trees yet there is ſweet Water, which the Ships that come towards the Streight uſually take in.

PORT HERCOLE, Lat. Portus Herculis, a City and Sea-port of Italy in Tuſcany, belonging to the Spaniards, lying to the Eaſt of Orbitello, towards the Mountain Argentara.

PORT LEWIS, a new built Town in the Lower Languedoc on the Mediterranean Sea near Mount de Seſe. This Haven and Port was made by a vaſt Artificial Mount, rais'd out of the Sea with mighty expence. It ſtands two Leagues from Frontignan to the South, and 5. E. from Agde.

PORT LOVIS, or Blavet, a ſtrong Town of Bretaigne in France, at the Mouth of the River Blane, which has a large Haven. It ſtands twelve Leagues W. of Vannes, and fifteen E. from Quimper.

PORT ROYAL, a famous Nunnery near unto Chevreuſe, within ſix Leagues of Paris. Note, that ſome have erroneouſly confounded this place with the Abby of Gif, whence the famous Janſeniſts have taken their name. Le Maire, &c.

PORT ROYAL, a Town and Sea-port in North America in Acadia, a Province of New France, being one of the ſafeſt and moſt conſiderable in the Country. It was taken by the Engliſh and reſtored to the French by the Treaty of Breda in 1667. The PORT in the Turkiſh Language ſignifies the Court of the Grand Signior.

PORT ROYAL, a Port on the South of Jamaica in the hands of the Engliſh, by whom the Town was built, which, before the late dreadful Earthquake in 1692 ruin'd the greateſt part of it, had above 1500 Houſes, and extended twelve miles in length, extreamly populous, as being the ſcale of Trade in that Iſland. It is ſeated at the end of a long point of Land, which makes the Harbour on the N. The Harbour is about three Leagues broad, and in moſt places ſo deep, that a Ship of 1000 Tuns may lay her ſides to the Shoar of the Point, load and unload at pleaſure; and it affords good Ancorage all over. For its ſecurity there is a very ſtrong Caſtle, always well garriſon'd, and having ſixty pieces of Canon well mounted. The Town ſtands upon a looſe Sand, which affords neither Graſs, Stone, Freſh-water, Trees, nor any thing elſe that could encourage the building of a Town beſides the goodneſs and conveniency of the Harbour.

PORT (Baptiſta de la) known by the name of Giovan Baptiſta de la Port of Naples, lived about the end of the ſixteenth Age and the beginning of the Seventeenth. He underſtood Philoſophy, Phyſick, Mathematicks, Judicial Aſtrology, and Natural Magick, upon which he writ much. He had a great hand in eſtabliſhing the Academy of Gli Oxioſi, and had another in his Houſe called di Secreti whereunto none was admitted but ſuch as had made ſome new deſcovery in Nature. He died in 1615. We have of his compoſing, Magia Naturalis, Elementa Curvilinea; de Diſtillatione; de Ziferis; de Occultis literarum notis; de refractione Optices; de Aeris tranſmutationibus; de Munitione; Della Fiſonomia; ſome Plays, &c. Imperialis in Muſæo Hiſt. Lorenzo Craſſo Elog. d' Huom. Letter. Ghilini. Theat. d' Huom. Letter.

PORT (Simon) a Neapolitan who had been the Scholar of Pomponatius of Mantua, and ſuſpected to be of his Opinion; who held, That the Soul died with the Body. He taught Philoſophy a long time at Piſa, and afterwards began to writ the Hiſtory of Fiſhes, when upon ſight of William Rondelet's Book he gave it over. He died at Naples in 1553 aged 57 years. He writ ſeveral things, as, De Mente humana Dictionarium Latinum Græco-barbarum & literale; De dolore liber; De coloribus oculorum; De Rerum Naturalium principiis; De fato, &c. Thuan. Hiſt. Geſner in Bibl.

PORTLAND Caſtle, ſtands on the North-ſide of the Iſle of Portland belonging to Dorſetſhire.

PORTLAND, Lat. Vindelis, a noted Iſland, or rather, a Peninſula belonging to Dorſetſhire. It lies three miles from Weymouth South Eaſtward, and is about ſeven Miles in compaſs, all ſurrounded with Rocks, except at Portland Caſtle, which is the only Landing-place. Here the Soil is very good for Corn, and indifferent for Paſture, but ſo deſtitute of Wood and other Fewel, that the Inhabitants are fain to dry their Cow-dung and burn it. For Building we have no Stone like that of this Iſland, which has great Quarries of it. By Portland Race, is meant the meeting of the two Tides there. This Peninſula has been dignified with the Title of an Earldom; firſt in the Perſon of Richard Weſton, created Earl of Portland by King Charles I. An. 1632, in whoſe Family the Title being extinct at the Death of his Son Thomas, it was revived again ſince the late Revolution, upon the Right Honourable Myn Heer Bentink, the preſent Earl of Portland, and Groom of the Stole to King William. This Iſland belongs to the Church of Wincheſter, by the Gift of Edward the Confeſſor, and hath one Church on the South-ſide, near the Sea; to preſerve it from the fury of the Waves, they have walled the Church-Yard Banks to an incredible height.

PORTO, Lat. Portus Calenſis, or Cividad de Puerto, a great City, and conſiderable Mart in the Kingdom of Portugal, at the Mouth of the Douro, a Biſhop's See, under Braga, and gave Name to the Kingdom of Portugal. Thoſe of the Low-Countries call it Port-a-Port. It ſtands within a League of the Ocean, and is one of the chief and moſt frequented Ports in that Kingdom. Roſendius in Antiq. Luſitaniæ.

PORTO BELO, a new City in South America, on the North ſide of the Iſthmus of Panama, within eighteen Leagues of the City of Panama, ſituate upon a Bay, at the Mouth of which are two very ſtrong Caſtles, called S. James and S. Philip, beſides a Fort upon a riſing Ground that commands the Town. The Galleons of the King of Spain come thither every Year to take in the Gold and Silver brought from Peru to Panama, which are carried by Land upon two thouſand Mules from Panama to Porto Belo, in order to imbark it for Spain. All the Merchandizes that come from Peru, are alſo unladen at Porto Belo, and carried in the ſame manner on Mules to Panama, to be put on board the Galleons in the South-Sea. Porto Belo is an unhealthy Place, becauſe of the Mountains round it that exclude the Sun, and hinder it to purifie the Air, ſo that 'tis thinly peopled, having no more than about four hundred Men able to bear Arms in it, beſides the Garriſon, which conſiſts of as many Soldiers. There is a Governour of the City, and two Caſtellans, that is, Governours of Caſtles. This City was taken and plundered by the Buccaniers in 1668. Oexmelin Hiſt. des Ind. Occid.

PORTO FINO, Lat. Portus Delphini, a City in Italy, to the Eaſt of Genoa, with a ſmall Haven belonging to it, about twenty Miles from Genoa, towards the Gulf of Ripallo.

PORTO LONGONE, Lat. Portus Longus, a Fortreſs and Sea-Port in the Iſland of Elea, in the Tuſcan Sea, with a Spaniſh Garriſon in it. The French took it in 1646, under the command of the Marſhal de Meilleray, but was retaken by the Spaniards in 1650. It ſtands 12 Miles to the S. of Piombino, 54 from Legorne, 37 from the Iſle of Corſica to the E.

PORTO RICO, or S. John de Porto Rico, an Iſland ſituated in the North Sea, towards America, at the entrance into the Gulf of Mexico, and to the Eaſt of the Iſle of San Domingo, or Hiſpaniola, called anciently Boriquen, diſcovered firſt by Columbus in 1493. This Iſland is about 16 Spaniſh Leagues diſtant from S. Domingo, and 136 from the Continent of America. It is thirty Leagues in length from Eaſt to Weſt, and twenty broad. Its Air very temperate, ſave in December and January, when it is very cold; and from the end of May till September, when 'tis extraordinary hot. In the Months of Auguſt and September, it is frequently incommoded with Hurricans. The Soil is fertile, and affords good Graſs, but the Abundance of Trees, called Guajabes, which cover the Earth with their ſhadow, make part of it unfruitful. The Cows alſo, and other Domeſtick Animals grow ſo wild here, that there is no taming of them, which is a great Inconveniency. There are ſeveral Rivers in this Iſland, ſome whereof have commodious Havens for Ships of Burthen; beſides which, they have Brooks wherein Gold is found. Amongſt the Trees there, the moſt remarkable are the Tabernacuio, or Taborucu, from whence proceeds whitiſh Bitumen very good for Painters, and likewiſe proper for the calking of Ships, and has an excellent virtue for the curing of Wounds, and Pains cauſed by cold. In this Iſland, moreover, grows a Tree, call'd Sant-Bois, very different from the Gajac, but has the ſame Properties; beſides ſeveral other Shrubs, upon the Sea ſide whoſe Apples kill Fiſhes when they fall into the Water, and whoſe ſhadow has the ſame effect upon Men in the Night-time, that ſleep under their Branches. The Tree, which the Iſlanders call Guao, and the Mexicans, Thetlatian, has Leaves which reſemble Crimſon Velvet, which never fall off; the Fruit of it is green, and is like an Arbute or Crab, the Wood of it is likewiſe of a beautiful Green, and which is imported into Europe to make Bed-Poſts, becauſe they ſay, it drives away Buggs, but 'tis ſaid, that the Joiners, who ſet 'em up, have their Hands and Face ſwell'd ſeveral Days after they have handled it. The Salvages prepare a Poiſon of the Fruit of it, that kills without Remedy. The principal Commodities of the Iſland of Porto Rico, are Sugar-Canes, Ginger, Caſſia, &c. The Spaniards began to dwell here in 1510, and in 1514, began to lay the Foundations of their chief Town, called by them now Porto Rico. In a little Town joined to the great one by a Cauſey made croſs the Haven, reſides the Governour; where they have a Cathedral Church, with a Biſhop, under the Archbiſhop of San-Domingo. The Haven is large, and ſafe from Winds, and the Incurſions of Enemies, being guarded by a well-fortify'd Caſtle. Sir Francis Drake attacked this Town in 1595, but could not ſucceed, only burnt ſome Ships that rode at Anchor there; but in 1598, the Earl of Cumberland made himſelf Maſter of it, but ſoon quitted it to ſave his Men, who died there apace. Baldwin Henry, Commander of the Dutch Weſt-India Fleet, being ſent into Braſil, entred in 1615 into Porto Rico, but deſpairing to take the Fortreſs, retir'd with a conſiderable Booty. In this Iſland there are about 1500 Men fit to bear Arms, beſides a conſiderable Number of other Inhabitants. The Iſland of Mona, which lies between Porto Rico, and S. Domingo, affords very good Water. It has likewiſe excellent Fruit, and particularly Oranges, much valued for their Largeneſs and Taſte. De Laet.

PORTO DE PRIMARO, a Port in Italy, in the Dutchy of Ferrara, where one Branch of the River Po, called Po di Primaro, diſchargeth it ſelf into the Adriatick Sea, or Gulf of Venice. This Haven is guarded by Gregory's Tower, and the Town that ſtands there is very good.

PORTO SANTO, Ilha de Puerta Santo, an Iſland in the Atlantick Sea, belonging to Portugal, to the Weſt of Barbary, diſcovered by the Portugueſe in 1428, not far from the Madera's, and about eight Leagues in Circumference.

PORTO SEGURO, a City and Country of Braſil, in South America. The Prefecture or Government, which is as it were a Province, lies between that of S. Eſprit, which is to the South of it; and that of the Iſlands to the North, upon the Sea of Braſil, and is poſſeſſed by the Portugueſe.

PORTO VENDRES, Lat. Portus Veneris, a Haven in Rouſſillon, upon the Mediterranean, near unto Collioure, and toward Cape de Creuz. It's a famous Port, and has adjoining to it the City of Vendres, near unto Caſtel S. Elme, which the French took in 1641. See de Marca in his Book entituled Marca Hiſpanica.

PORTO PENERE, Lat. Portus Veneris, a Town in the States of Genoa, which has an Haven and Caſtle, ſeated over-againſt the Iſland of Palmaria, ſixty miles from Genoa, and three from the Gulf del Spezza to the Eaſt.

PORTSEY, an Iſland on the Coaſt of Hampſhire, ſo called from Portſey, a Town therein, and of chief note, for Portſmouth, the ſtrongeſt place of England, ſeated here.

PORTSMOUTH, Lat. Portus Magnus, a famous Sea-Town upon the Channel, in the South parts of Hampſhire, almoſt on the South Point of Portſey Iſland, which has a Communication Northward with the main Land by a Bridge. This place is both a good Harbour for Ships, and by its ſtrong Fortifications, a ſhelter to Hampſhire. Here are Docks and Store-Houſes for the King to build and equip Men of War; and for its Defence ſuch Fortifications as make it almoſt impregnable, the beſt part whereof were chiefly raiſed by the late King Charles, who beſtowed great Summs upon it; but when all is done it's but an unhealthy Place. About this Town is bred a Race of ſmall Dogs, like Beagles, which hunt Moles as their natural Game. Portſmouth is 73 Miles from London.

PORTUGAL, an Hereditary Kingdom of Europe, in the Weſtern part of Spain, comprehending part of the ancient Luſitania, and part of the ancient Gallicians, Gallaici Braccarii that dwelt in the Province called now Tra los Montes. It's one of the leaſt Kingdoms in Europe, but conſiderable for its Wealth and Fertility; being about an hundred and ten French Leagues in length, and about fifty over where 'tis broadeſt; has Gallicia to the North, from which 'tis ſeparated by the River Minho, to the South and Weſt, the Sea, Caſtile, Leo, Eſtremadura, and Andaluzia to the Eaſt. It's divided into five Parts or Provinces, which are, Entre-Doura and Minho, beyond the Mountains; Beira, Eſtremadura, or Eſtremadura Portugheſa, and Alentejo or Entre Tejo and Guadiana; to which appertains alſo the little Kingdom of Algarva that gives Title to the eldeſt Sons of the Kings of Portugal. Tho' this Kingdom do's not contain above the ſixth Part of Spain, yet the Advantage of its Situation makes it exceed all the reſt of this great Country, it is watered with a great many curious Rivers, whereof there are four very conſiderable ones, to wit, the Minho, the Douro, the Tagus, and the Guadiana. The Portugueſe are ſtrong in the Eaſt Indies, where they have a great many Towns, of which Goa is the Capital, &c. are poſſeſt alſo of Braſil in America, the Molucca's, ſeveral places in the Gulf of Bengala; the Azores, Madera's, the Iſlands of Cape Verd, Ceuta; and Mazagan in Africa, the Fortreſſes of Mina and Arquin upon the Coaſts of Guinea, with ſome others along the Coaſts of Congo and Angola, Sofala and Mozambequet beyond the Cape of good Hope. The Kingdom of Portugal has very good Ports, abounds with excellent Wine, Fruit, Fiſh, Game, Salt, Horſes, &c. There are alſo ſome Mines, for it's certain, that the Romans came formerly for Gold to Portugal, as the Portugueſe now ſeek it in the Indies. It's very well peopled, eſpecially towards the Coaſts, there being above Six hundred Towns and privileged Boroughs which contain Four thouſand Pariſhes; Lisbonne is the chief Town; the other which are moſt conſiderable, are Evora, Braga, Coimbra, Elvas, Beja, Porto, Bragança, Portalegre, Viſieu, Guarda, Miranda de Douro, with a great many other. Of theſe Lisbonne, Braga, and Evora, are Archbiſhops-Sees which have ten Biſhopricks under 'em. It's a very populous Kingdom, eſpecially towards the Sea-ſide, the Capital City whereof is Lisbonne. The Moors were Maſters of it a long time; but Henry of Burgundy took it from them, and by his Marriage with Tereſa, the natural Daughter of Alphonſo VI. King of Caſtile, became peaceable Poſſeſſor of it. There is a Law in this Country that excludes all Foreign Princes from the Crown, which Law they would have once diſpenſed with in behalf of a Marriage to be conſummated between the Infanta Elizabeth Maria Loviſa with Victor Amadeus Francis, Duke of Savoy; but Baſtard Sons are capable of ſucceeding: At leſt, there is one Inſtance of it, in John Iſt. called the Father of his Country, who was natural Son to King Peter, the Juſticer, to whom he ſucceeded. Sebaſtian, who ſucceeded John IIId. in 1557. made two Expeditions into Africk, in the ſecond of which he was kill'd by the Moors, at the Battle of Alcacer, on the 4th. of Auguſt, 1578. After the Death of this Prince, ſo fatal to Portugal, Cardinal Henry, fifth Son of Emanuel the Great, was proclaim'd King, and died a year after, in 1580. Philip II. King of Spain in this year 1580, finding the Portugueſe uneaſie under the Government of Don Antonio, who had taken the Quality of King upon him, becauſe of his mean deſcent by his Mother's ſide, was unwilling to neglect ſo favourable an Opportunity of uſurping Portugal, and ſo ſent thither the Duke of Alva with a powerful Army, who defeated Antonio at the Battle of Alcantara; but the Portugueſe ſhook off the Spaniſh Yoke in 1640, and choſe John, Duke of Bragança, for their King, which Revolution was ſo well managed, and with ſo much ſecrecy, that all the Places which the Portugueſe had in all the four Quarters of the Earth, ſhook off the Dominion of Spain in one Day, except the little Town of Ceuta in Africa alone. The chief Motives of the great Revolution were, That the King of Spain allowed other People to trade to the Eaſt Indies, as well as the Portugueſe; his Exactions and the Tax of five per Cent. which he impoſed upon all the Merchandices of the Kingdom. The Portugueſe are proud, haughty, good Soldiers, great lovers of their King: None but the Roman Catholick Religion is allow'd in their Dominion. They have Inquiſitions at Lisbonne, Coimbra, and Evora, Parliaments at Lisbonne and Porto, Generalities called Comarques, and Almoxarifats in 27 other places. Beſides the Royal Council the Portugueſe have other Tribunals, as that of the Finances, La Meſada Conſcientia or Council of Conſcience, Council of War, le Reſidor, la Camera, la Caſa de Supplication, from which there lies no Appeal, &c. King John IV. eſtabliſhed a Tribunal againſt thoſe that ſhould be accuſed of diſcovering the Secrets of the State to Enemies, or that in any other way ſhould aſſiſt their Undertakings. The Kings of Portugal are great Maſters of the Order of Chriſt that reſide at Tomar, of that of Avis and S. James, which have their Reſidence at Palmella near Setuval. They take theſe Titles, King of Portugal, of the Algarves, of both ſides of the Sea of Africa, Lord of Guinea, Maſter of the Navigation and Commerce of Æthiopia, Arabia, Perſia, and the Indies. When the Portugueſe diſcovered the Paſſage into the Eaſt-Indies by the Cape of good Hope, tho' the Venetians ſent their Ship-Carpenters to the Sultan of Egypt with all things that were neceſſary to build a Fleet of Ships on the Red Sea, to out 'em of the Trade of the Indies, yet they engroſſed it, that the Spices, Jewels, Gold, Callico's, Silks, and Druggs of that Country paſs'd by Portugal into Europe, which made it the richeſt traded Kingdom in that part of the World: Being beat out of this by the Engliſh and Hollanders, they ſupported themſelves by the Sugar and Tabaco trade of Braſil, but the Dutch having ruin'd the Sugar Plantations in the tedious War that begun in 1640, and the Engliſh raiſed theirs in Barbados and Jamaica to perfection, and the Tabaco Trade in Virginia, Portugal loſt all hers, and is become the weakeſt and pooreſt Kingdom in all Europe. *Reſend. PORUS, King of the Indies, was great in Stature and Courage, and valiantly withſtood Alexander the Great, but Alexander defeated him in Battle in the 427th. year of Rome. It's ſaid, That when this victorious Prince had bid Porus ask of him what-ever he deſired, that Porus made anſwer, I deſire only to be treated like a King; which ſo charm'd Alexander, that he gave him all his Country again. Quintus Curtius, lib. 8. Arian, lib. 5. Plutarch in the Life of Alexander.

POSEGA, the Capital City of Sclavonia, is a place of great Commerce, and has depending upon it, almoſt four hundred Villages. It ſtands 8 miles N. of the Save, 30 E. from Gradiſca, conſiſts of about 1000 Houſes. The Country about is very fruitful, producing Fruits of all ſorts of a more than ordinary ſize. It fell into the Hands of the Turks under Solyman the Magnificent about 1544, together with Walpo, and Quinque Eccleſiæ. It's 7 miles from Gneſna to the W. and 20 E. from Franckfort upon the Oder. It was taken from the Turks by the Imperialiſts October 12th. 1687. The Bey made at firſt ſome reſiſtance, but after having fired ſome Canon, he abandoned the place; part of the Garriſon retired to the Mountains, and the reſt into different places upon the Save. The Germans found in it a great quantity of Ammunition and Proviſion, with five pieces of Canon.

POSNA or POSNAM, Lat. Poſnania, the Capital City of the Lower Poland, gives its name to a Palatinate, is a Biſhop's See under Gneſna, and ſtands upon the Wart, with a Cittadel belonging to it. It's 7 miles from Gneſna to the W. 20 E. from Franckfort upon the Oder. The Palatinate of Poſnanskie is bounded on the W. by the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh, on the N. by the Further Pomerania, on the E. by the Palatinate of Kaliski, and on the S. by Miſnia. It's environed with two Walls and a deep Ditch, and defended beſides by a ſtrong Caſtle. It has three great Fairs evey year.

POSSIDIUS, called by Honorius, d' Autun, and by ſome others erroneouſly Poſſidonius, Biſhop of Calama in Africa, was in eſteem in the Fifth Age in 430, having been the Diſciple of S. Auguſtin, whoſe Life he writ, and gave us a Catalogue of the genuine Works of that great Man, which he had ſeen himſelf, and ſo could not be ſuſpected. Iſidorus & Sigibert de illuſt. Script. Honorius d' Autun de Lumin. Eccl.

POSSIDONIUS of Alexandria, a famous Mathematician, who meaſured the Circumference of the Earth, and found it to be thirty thouſand Furlongs. Eratoſthenes, who lived 500 years after the building of Rome had before made an Obſervation upon the ſame ſubject, and found it to be two hundred and fifty thouſand Furlongs; and Ptolemy after Poſſidonius found it no more than twenty two thouſand and five hundred; but this great Difference proceeds from the different Meaſure. About 150 years ago People applied themſelves to make new Obſervations; Fernelius, chief Phyſician to King Henry II. has aſſign'd 68096 Geometrical paces for every Degree, which make 56746 Fathom, and four Foot of Paris Meaſure. P. Riccioli makes each 64363 Paces of Bolonia, which make 62900 Fathom, but the Mathematicians of the Royal Academy of Sciences allow a Degree 57060 Braces or Fathoms, allowing for each Degree 2000 Fathoms, which amounts to 2400 Geometrical Paces, that is, 28 Leagues and a half, and 60 Braces, and according to this Computation 10270 Leagues 1600 Toiſes for the 360 Degrees. Perrault Sur Vitruve, lib. 1. cap. 6.

POSSIDONIUS, a famous Architect and Engineer that lived in the year of Rome 433. Biton, a skilful Mathematician, and his Contemporary, attributes to him the building of Heliopolis, on a kind of a rowling Tower, to approach near unto the Walls of a beſieged Town, and ſaith, That Alexander the Great put him upon it. It's not known whether he be the ſame Poſſidonius of Rhodes, who writ a Treatiſe concerning the Art of War, which is ſtill extant. Voſſius, lib. de Univ. Matheſ.

POSSIDONIUS of Apamea, who called himſelf Native of Rhodes, a Stoical Philoſopher, lived in the time of Pompey the Great, whoſe Life he writ: He is thought alſo to have writ an Hiſtory which was but a Continuation of that of Polybius; tho' others would have it to be Poſſidonius of Alexandria. *Voſſius de Phil. POST, is uſually taken for one that rides with full ſpeed from one place to another. Herodotus informs us, That this way of riding upon the publick Account, was firſt invented in Perſia; and ſaith, That there were from the Egean Sea, and the Propontis to the City Suza, the then

Capital of the Kingdom of Perſia, an hundred and eleven Stages upon the Road, a Day's Journey diſtant from each other. Xenophon adds, That it was King Cyrus that firſt ſettled the Poſts, cauſing places to be built upon the great Roads, on purpoſe, where both Men and Horſes might be always ready; and this about five hundred years before Chriſt, when the ſaid Cyrus undertook his Expedition againſt the Scythians. As to the Romans, ſome think they had Couriers in the time of the Republick, and before Julius Cæſar's time; that they called the places they ſtop'd at Stationes, and thoſe that carried the Packets Statores; but others think that it was Auguſtus that inſtituted 'em: And Suetonius adds, That he built upon the Highway Stations at convenient diſtances, and made choice of young nimble Men, who ran and handed the Packets from one to the other, and afterwards ſet Horſes and Chariots for greater Expedition. There was ſomething like this in France, Germany, and Italy, about 807 in Charlemaign's Reign; but People believe the Cuſtom was diſcontinued under his Succeſſors, until Lewis XI. renewed it in 1477. Bergier Hiſt. des grand Chemins de l'Empire.

POSTEL (William) was born in 1477 in the Pariſh of Barenſon in the Dioceſs of Auranches in Normandy. Francis I. ſent him into the Eaſt, from whence he brought ſeveral Manuſcripts. He was a Man of great Accompliſhments, very well skill'd in the Oriental Languages, a skilful Mathematician, and acquainted with the Secrets of the Rabbins and Cabbaliſts. Being at Venice, he fell in love with an old Maiden; which cauſed him to fall into that fantaſtical Error concerning the Redemption of Women-kind, and to aſſert it was not finiſhed; and that that Venetian Woman called Mother Mary by him in his Book entituled Virgo Veneta, was to accompliſh that great Work. He died on the 6th. or 7th. of September 1581, ag'd near 100 Years, having never been ſick in all his Life-time. Florimond de Raimond holds, That his ſole deſign was to praiſe this Woman, who had been very kind to him in his Travels; but this was not the only Error that was imputed to him, for it was ſaid, That he pretended that the Angel Raziel declared ſeveral Myſteries to him. He writ, De orbis Concordia; Clavis reconditorum; De Conſtitutione mundi; De Magiſtratibus Athenienſibus; De Hetruriæ Origine; De Candelabro Moſis, &c. *Prateolus V. Poſt. POSTHUMIUS (M. Caſſius Latienus) a valiant Man of the Gauls, who roſe up againſt Salonius the Son of Galienus, about the year 260, put him and his Govenour Albinus to death, and cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed Emperor, and maintained himſelf in the Poſt for the ſpace of ten years, building ſeveral Forts upon the Rhine, and keeping good Order and Diſcipline; inſomuch, that he was ſtiled The Reſtorer of the Gauls; but he was at laſt kill'd by his own Soldiers, becauſe he would not ſuffer them to plunder Mayence that held out for Lollianus who rebell'd againſt him. His Son Cajus Junius Caſſius Latienus Poſthumius, who had been declared Auguſtus, died with him; or according to ſome, before him. Trebellius Pollio vie des 30 Tyr. Aurelius Victor. Oroſius. Eutropius, &c.

POSTHUMIUS, ſurnamed Tubertus, was Conſul in the 251ſt. year of Rome, with Agrippa Menenius Lanatus; he made his Entry into that City crowned with Myrtle when he returned victorious over the Sabines; and hence came the Cuſtom of Ovations, or little Triumphs. In 258 he defeated the Latins that favoured Tarquin at the Lake of Regillus, who loſt one of his Sons there, and deſpairing of ever being able to mount the Throne, retired to Cumæ, where he ſpent the remainder of his days. Livie l. 2. POSTVORTA, a Goddeſs adored by the Pagans, and ſaid to foreſee what was to come to paſs, and prevent the Evil that might happen. Antevorta was another Goddeſs, which had, according to their Sentiments, power over what was paſt, and which they invoked, to be rid of the Evils they had already felt. Theſe two Goddeſſes being regarded by them as the Councellors of Providence. The Women in their lying-in joined theſe two alſo to the reſt of their Deities. Antevorta made the Child come forth aright, that is, with his Head foremoſt, and the other put him out when his Feet appeared firſt. Poſtvorta allayed the Pains of Child-bearing, and Antevorta quickly cured Women after lying-in. *Macrob. POTAMIUS, an Arian Biſhop of Lisbon, lived in the IVth. Age, and at firſt defended the Catholick Faith, but the Emperor Conſtantius made him forſake it for Temporal Intereſt. He writ a Letter full of Blaſphemies, which he diſperſed every where, but Oſius of Corduba having diſcovered his Prevarication, writ to all the Churches of Spain, and treated him as a wicked Man and an Heretick, Potamius, to be reveng'd on him, prevail'd with the Emperor to make him come to Sirmich in 357, and it's believ'd, Potamius was the Author of the Confeſſion of Faith made there. Marcel. in libell. S. Hilarius adverſ. Arian.

POTAMON, an Orator of Lesbos and Mitylene, flouriſhed in the time of Tiberius, was the Son of Lesbonacte a Philoſopher, famous for his Writings, as Suidas ſays. This Emperor, who highly eſteemed Potamon, gave him his Letters of Recommendation in theſe terms; Potamonem Lesbonactis filium ſi quis offendere eiq; incommodare auſus fuerit, conſideret ſecum an mecum bellum gerere valeat. He taught at Rome, and publiſhed an Elogy upon the ſame Tiberius, with an Hiſtory of Alexander the Great, the Limits of the Samians, a Panegyrick on Brutus, and a Treatiſe of a compleat Orator. Strabo, lib. 13. *Heſychius. POTENZA, a City in the Kingdom of Naples in the Baſilicate, and a Biſhop's See under Matera.

POTHEREUS, a River in the Iſle of Creet, upon the Banks of which were formerly ſeen ſeveral ſorts of Animals; but it is obſerved, That thoſe that fed near to Gnoſſus had a Spleen, but that thoſe that were on the other ſide, near unto Gortyna, had none; the Reaſon whereof being enquired into by the Ancients, they found the Herb Aſplenon, that had the Virtue to leſſen the Spleen grew there in abundance, and indeed it was the occaſion thereof. Le Clarke obſerves from Vitruvius, that Aſplenon was a Medicine made of the Herb, and not the Herb it ſelf.

POTIPHAR, Captain of the Guard to Pharaoh, bought Joſeph An. Mund. 2306, and being ſatisfy'd with his Prudence and Modeſty, entruſted him with all the concerns of his Houſe; but Potiphar's Wife, in 2316, proved troubleſome to Joſeph by her deteſtable Paſſion, and the credulity of that Man made him ſo unjuſt and cruel towards Joſeph, that he put him into Priſon. Some Authors are of Opinion, That this Potiphar was that Prieſt of Heliopolis whoſe Daughter Aſeneth Joſeph married in 2329. Gen. 37, & 39. St. Jerom in Gen. c. 41. 37. *de tradit. Hebr. POTITIANS and PINARIANS, the Names of two Families in Rome, who were employ'd in Sacrifices, the chief whereof, called Potitius and Pinarius, were choſen by Evander King of Italy to order the Sacrifices to be offered to Hercules. It's ſaid, That at firſt the Potitians drunk only the Liquors which they preſented to the Gods, their Name coming from ποτίζειν, to Drink; and did beſides eat all the Victims that were ſacrificed, leaving no ſhare to the Pinarians, which word ſeems to come from πεινᾶν, to be hungry, or not to eat. Titus Livius.

POTNIADES, Goddeſſes that inſpired with Rage and Fury, and to whom were ſacrificed Pigs for the appeaſing of them, as believing that theſe Goddeſſes came to eat thoſe Victims left upon the Altar when ſacrificed. The Name comes from Potnia a City of Bœotia, where Glaucus the Son of Siſyphus fed his Mares with Man's Fleſh, to the end, they might in Battle fall with the more eagerneſs upon the Enemy. The Greeks expreſs'd Drunkards and Furies alſo by this Name. Le Clarke obſerves, 1ſt, That theſe Goddeſſes were call'd ποτνίαι: 2dly, 'Tis true, that they did ſacrifice Pigs to them, but the reſt of the Story is a miſtake: 3dly, 'Twas a Fountain, which made People mad that drank of it, and from thence it comes that Potniades ſignifies Bacchantes. *Hygin. POTOSI, a City of Peru, in the Province of Charcas towards the Tropick of Capricorn, ſituate at the foot of the Mountain Arazaſſou, and divided by a little River that comes from a Lake incloſed with Walls, about a quarter of a League above the Town. It's one of the richeſt and moſt populous Cities in America, being peopled by Spaniards, Strangers, original Natives, whom the Spaniards call Indio's, Negroes, Metis, and Moulates; the Metis are born of a Spaniard and a Salvage, the Moulates of a Spaniard and a Negro. This City is governed by twenty four Magiſtrates, beſides the Corregidor and Preſident of Charcas, who manage Affairs as in Spain. The beſt Silver in all the Indies is that of Potoſi; for beſides the Mines of the Mountain of Arazaſſou very near Potoſi, there are ſeveral others thereabouts that are very rich, but thoſe of Ouroures, which have been diſcovered ſome years ago, are yet much better. The King of Spain gives all the Mines to particular Perſons that have diſcovered them, who remain Maſters and Proprietors, he only reſerving the fifth part to himſelf, and the general Direction of the Mines which he commits to Officers, who oblige all the Couracas, or Heads of the Salvages to furniſh a certain number of Labourers for to work there. The Monaſteries are numerous and very rich; the Fields about it are cold, barren, and bear nothing but Oats, which ſcarce ever ripen, but are cut up and given for Forage in the Blade. The City is two Leagues in compaſs, and is by far the greateſt City in Peru. The Inhabitants are very rich, and moſt of 'em eat in Plate, and the Wives of Gentlemen, and the better ſort of Burghers, are oblig'd to keep at home, and uſed with as much Strictneſs as in Spain: There is in this Town about four thouſand Spaniards capable of bearing Arms, beſide Dutch, Iriſh, Genueſe, &c. Voyage du Peron in 1655 *dans le Recueil de M. POTTON, a Market-Town of Bigleſworth-Hundred in the E. parts of Bedfordſhire, three miles N. of Bigleſworth, 37 from London.

POVERTY, a Goddeſs adored by the Pagans, but ſuch Adoration as manifeſtly diſcovered more Fear than Love; and tho' ſhe was believed to be the Mother of Induſtry and good Arts; yet they repreſented her like unto a Fury, pale, fierce, famiſhed, and ready to deſpair. Plautus and Claudian make her to be the Daughter of Luxury and Idleneſs, as well as Riches; is uſually made the Daughter of Labour and Thriftineſs. But it muſt be obſerved, that as there is one ſort of Riches that is the Daughter of Good-fortune only, ſo there is alſo a Poverty that is purely the Daughter of Misfortune.

POUGUES, a Village in Nivernois, between Nevers and la Charite, famous for two Fountains called S. Legier and S. Marceau, whoſe Waters have been in eſteem a long time for their Virtue to cure the Dropſie. Though they are not diſtant from one another above one foot, yet there is a remarkable Difference in the Taſte of their Waters.

POUHATAN, a Kingdom in Virginia in North America, with a River of the ſame Name. The City of Pomeſok, ſtanding upon the Sea-ſide, was the moſt conſiderable place in this Country. Upon the firſt Diſcovery of it; when Captain Smith came to the King of Pouhatan, that Prince had no other Palace but a little Hut, made of the Branches of Trees, and plaiſtered over. Biart of America.

La POUILLA, La Puglia, Appulia, a Province of Italy in the Kingdom of Naples, and a very delightful place, that comprehends the Cities of Luceria, Gravina, Manfredonia, Andria, Pari, Aſcoli, Venoſa, &c. Collenucio & Summontus Hiſt. Napol.

POULTON, a Market-Town of Amounderneſs, in the Country of Lancaſhire, from London 168 miles.

POUZOL, or Pozzuolo, Lat. Puteoli, a City of Italy, within 8 miles of Naples, and a Biſhop's-ſee, famous for the Baths there, and a Bridge of 3900 paces in length built by Caligula, and carry'd on from thence to Baiæ. It ſtands upon a Hill near the Tyrrhenian Sea, upon which it has a large Haven; wherein may be ſeen, beſides, a Temple dedicated by the Ancients to Auguſtus, and by the Chriſtians to S. Proclus, the Remains of a Theatre, and a Fort, wherein is a Spaniſh Garriſon.

POWISLAND, or Powyſland, a part of Wales, given by Roderick, the laſt King of Wales, to Mervin his youngeſt Son. It contained the whole Counties of Montgomery and Radnor, all Shropſhire beyond the Severn, with the Town of Shrewsbury, and part of Denbighſhire, and Flintſhire; which Eſtate continued entire in the Race of Mervin, till Meredith-ap-Blethyn, following the ill Example of Roderick, divided it between Madoc and Gryffith his two Sons. Madoc dying at Wincheſter, Anno 1160, Gryffith was by King Henry II. made Lord of Powis, the Title of Prince being laid aſide. In the Reign of King Edward I. Owen ap Gryffith, the fifth from the ſaid Gryffith, ſurrendred both his Place and Title to the King at a Parliament held at Shrewsbury, and received them of him again, to be holden in free Baronage according to the Cuſtom of England. Owen left but one Daughter, who being married to one John Charleton, a Gentleman of the Privy-Chamber to King Edward II. he was, in right of his Wife, made Lord Powis. From the Houſe of Charleton, the Eſtate and Title went to the Family of the Greys, upon the Marriage of Jane, Daughter and Heir of Edward, the laſt of the Charletons. It continued in the Houſe of Grey through five Generations, and Edward Grey was the laſt Lord of the Line or Race of Mervin. After whoſe Death the Title lay extinct till revived again in the Perſon of Sir William Herbert of Red-Caſtle, deſcended from the Herberts, Earls of Pembroke, who was created Lord Powis, by K. Charles I. in 1629.

POYNINGS (Sir Edward) of Kent, a great Soldier and good Stateſman, having feretted Perken Warbeck out of Ireland, ſeriouſly ſet himſelf to reclaim that Nation to Civility. In order whereunto he paſs'd an Act in Parliament, whereby all the Statutes made in England before that time were enacted, eſtabliſhed and made of force in Ireland. And cauſed another Law to be made, That no Act ſhould be propounded in any Parliament in Ireland till it had been firſt tranſmitted into England, approved there by the King, and returned thence under his Broad-ſeal; which though it ſeemed at firſt ſight prejudicial to the Liberty of the Iriſh Subjects, yet it was made at the Requeſt of the Commons, who choſe rather to refer themſelves to the King's Mercy, than continue under the Oppreſſion of their private Laws. And to conform Ireland ſtill the more to England, he procured the paſſing of an Act, That the Iriſh Barons ſhould appear in Parliament in their Robes, which put a face of Grandeur and State on their Convention. Having ordered things thus, he was recalled into England, and created Baron, but died without legitimate Iſſue. Fuller's Worthies.

PRAGMATICK SANCTION. The word Sanction comes from the Latin Sanctio, which ſignifies an Ordinance; and Pragmatick, from Pragmaticus, or rather from the Greek Πραγματικὴς derived from πρᾶγμα which ſignifies a Buſineſs or Affair. But Cuſtom has appropriated this Name to the Ordinances that relate to the Affairs of Church or State, and more particularly them made or authorized by the Kings of France. The King S. Lovis made a Pragmatick Sanction in 1268, which ordained, 1. That the Eccleſiaſtical Prelates, Collators of Benefices and Patrons, ſhould peaceably enjoy all their Rights. 2. That the Cathedral Churches and others ſhould be maintained in the Liberty of chuſing their Prelates. 3. That Simony, and ſelling of Benefices, ſhould be aboliſhed entirely. 4. That all Promotions and Collating of Dignities and other Benefices or Eccleſiaſtical Offices ſhould be done according to the common Law, Councils, and Cuſtoms, eſtabliſhed by the ancient Fathers of the Church. 5. That there ſhould be no Exaction or Levying of Money by the Court of Rome in any parts of the Kingdom, but upon ſome urgent Occaſion; and then too with the King's Conſent and Approbation of the Gallican Church. 6. That all the Churches and Eccleſiaſticks of the Kingdom ſhould be maintain'd in their Liberties, Franchiſes, and Privileges, granted them by the Kings of France his Predeceſſors. But the moſt famous Pragmatick Sanction was that of Charles VII. King of France in 1438. The better to underſtand this, We muſt obſerve that Prelates were formerly choſen by the Suffrages of the Clergy and People. In proceſs of time the People were excluded from the Election in the Eaſtern Church but the ancient Cuſtom continued in the Weſtern, even in the choice of Popes. Whilſt the Gauls were ſubject to the Roman Emperors, the Clergy and People choſe Biſhops, but ſome time after the Kings of France would have a hand in the Promotion, which Cuſtom continued not only during the firſt Race of the Kings of France, but alſo under the firſt Monarchs of the ſecond Race, as appears from Gregorius Turonenſis, and the Formulæ of Marculſus, Pepin, and Charlemaign, as P. Sirmond obſerves, who adds, That it was Lewis the Meek that reſtored the power of chuſing Prelates to the Clergy, in the third year of his Reign. But ſtill that power was limited by ſome Reſtriction; for no Biſhop was to be conſecrated until the King had approved the Election. Things ſtood thus until about 1431, that there being a difference between Eugenius IVth. and the Council of Bale. King Charles VII. of France aſſembled his Council and the Clergy of his Kingdom at Bourges, and the Schiſm continuing to 1438, they made a Pragmatick Sanction which was verified by the Parliament of Paris in 1439. The Iſt. Article of which, was drawn from the 1ſt. Seſſion of the Counſel of Baſil, and relates to the Authority of General Councils. The IId. Article was copied from the 2d. Seſſion, and treats of the Power and Authority of the Council of Baſil. The IIId. Article taken from the 12th. and 23d. Seſſions, ſets down the Form of Elections. The IVth. Contains an Abolition of Reſervations, and is extracted from the 23d. Seſſion. The Vth. Article mentions the Collation of Benefices, and admits of no expective Graces, nor Reſervations for the Pope and his Legates; this Article is drawn out of the 31ſt. Seſſion of the Council of Baſil. The VIth. Article, which relates to Cauſes and giving of Judgment, is part of the Contents of the ſame 31ſt. Seſſion. The VIIth. is againſt unreaſonable and ill-grounded Appeals, and is agreeable to the Decree of the 20th. Seſſion. The VIIIth. regulates the Matter of Quiet Poſſeſſion, and is drawn from the 21ſt. Seſſion. The IXth. Article limits the number of the Cardinals, in purſuance of the Decree in the 23d. Seſſion. The Xth. mentions the Annates, and is drawn from the 21ſt. Seſſion of the year 1435. The XIth. regulates the Performance of Divine Service, in Conformity to the Decree of the 31ſt. Seſſion, adding withal, that the laudable Cuſtoms of particular Churches in France ſhould be obſerv'd. The XIIth. XIIIth. XIVth. XVth. XVIth. XVIIth. XVIIIth. and XIXth. Articles, concern the Government and Ordering of Cathedral Churches, according to what had been decreed in the 21ſt. Seſſion of the Council. The XXth. Article mentions Concubinaries, and follows the Regulation of the 20th. Seſſion. The XXIſt. ſtates the Caſe and Uſage of thoſe who are excommunicated, and is drawn from the 20th. Seſſion. The XXIId. treats the Affair of Interdicts, conformable to the Decree of the 20th. Seſſion. The XXIIId. Article dilates upon the Proof which may be drawn concerning Matters publiſh'd in the Pope's Letters or Bulls, according to the Decree of the 23d. Seſſion of the Council of Baſil. This is the Summ of what was concluded in the Aſſembly held at Bourges, and this Pragmatick Sanction was verify'd in the Parliament of Paris, on the 13th. of July, 1439. The principal Deſign of which Proviſion, was to make all the Biſhops of the Realm acknowledg'd as ſuch, before their going or ſending to the Court of Rome; that the Primitive Cuſtoms of Elections ſhould be reviv'd; that the Authority of a General Council ſhould be prepreferr'd to the ſingle one of the Pope, and that Expectative Graces ſhould be aboliſh'd. Æneas Sylvius, who had been Secretary to the Council of Bale, being choſen Pope in 1458, under the Name of Pius II. manag'd the Matter ſo artificially, that he perſuaded King Lewis XIth. to let things ſtand as before the Pragmatick Sanction; and thereupon ordered that Ordinance to be dragged through the Streets of Rome, as a ſign of its being aboliſhed; and ſent the King a bleſſed Sword enriched with Pearls, with ſome Verſes to his Praiſe. In the mean time, this Condeſcenſion was not approved by the Parliament, and complaint was made of it in the States at Tours, in the beginning of King Charles the VIIIth's Reign, and John de S. Romain, Attorney-General, hindred the regiſtring of the Letters, ſaying, That in aboliſhing the Pragmatick Sanction, Chapters were deprived of their Elections, Ordinaries of their Collations, &c. That the King's Subjects would go to Rome to wait and ſue for Benefices; and obſerved, That during the three years that this Sanction was not obſerved, 340000 Crowns were ſent from France to Rome, for Biſhopricks, &c. and two Millions of Crowns for other Benefices. The Univerſity of Paris beſtirred it ſelf alſo, and the Rector declared to the Pope's Legate, That he appealed to the next General Council. Thus during the Reigns of Charles the VIIIth. and Lewis XIIth. it was neither aboliſhed, nor yet ſtrictly obſerved; but Pope Leo Xth. and King Francis I. came to an Agreement, by which it was revoked in 1516. See CONCORDAT.

PRAGUE, Lat. Marobudum, Bubiemum, Luſurgis & Praga, the capital City of the Kingdom of Bohemia, with an Univerſity in it, is an Archbiſhop's-See. It ſtands upon the River Molda, in a very pleaſant and fertile Country, ſurrounded with Palaces and pleaſant Seats, where it appears as in the midſt of a great Amphitheatre, which may be diſtinguiſhed into three Parts, to wit, the old City, which is the greateſt, the new, and the little City, which all together make without Contradiction the greateſt City in Germany. Here the Dukes, Princes, and Emperors have a long time had their Court. The Caſtle which is in the little Town has very fine Apartments, being called alſo the Caſtle-Royal. The new and old Town ſtand to the Eaſt of the Molda. The greater Town is joined to the leſſer by a Bridge of twenty four Arches. It's a very populous Place, Leo counting forty four thouſand Scholars there under John Huſs, beſides forty thouſand Strangers, who left the Town, becauſe their Privileges were retrenched. There are in it very curious Churches, and other Buildings, and eſpecially the Metropolitan Church dedicated to S. Vaite, with curious Tombs, and the Jeſuits College. Its ſaid, that Wenceſlaus built it about the year 698. Its Univerſity was founded by the Emperor Charles IVth. The Bridge of Prague is 1700 foot long and 35 broad, the Univerſity was founded by the Emperor Charles IV. about 1370. The new Town is large, ſeparated from the old by a large Ditch. The Klein Seitten, or Leſſer Prague, for Pleaſantneſs, beauty of Buildings, and fair Palaces far exceeds the other two. The Circuit of the whole is very conſiderable, but there are many Hills and void Places within the Walls. Dr. Brown in his Travels gives an exact Account of it. John, King of Bohemia, took it from Henry, Duke of Carinthia, in 1311. The Inhabitants impriſoned Wenceſlaus, their King in 1392. George Podebrach took it in 1441. This Place is very famous for the Defeat of the Proteſtant Forces near it, Novemb. 8th. 1620. which was afterwards ſeverely revenged in the Swediſh Wars; and here, May 26th. 1635. a Peace was made between the Emperor and his Proteſtant Subjects. *Cluvier. deſcr. PRASUGUS, a Britiſh King of the Iceni, who being very rich, and having no Male Iſſue, thought it expedient to ſecure both his Kingdom and Houſe from all Wrongs, by making the Roman Emperor Co-heir with his Daughters. But it proved quite contrary. For under colour of overſeeing, and taking Poſſeſſion of this Inheritance, his Kingdom became a Prey to Centurions, his Houſe to Ravenous Officers, his Wife Boadicia was abuſed with Stripes. his Daughters with Rape, his Kindred uſed little better than Slaves, and his Wealthieſt Subjects turned out of their Eſtates. In ſhort, Such were the Oppreſſions of the Romans, that the Britains could no longer brook it, but choſe rather to periſh, than live in ſuch Bondage.

PRAT (Antony du) Sieur de Nantovillet, Baron of Thiern and Thouri, firſt Preſident in the Parliament of Paris, afterwards Chancellor of France, Cardinal, and Archbiſhop of Sens, was Native of Iſovia in Auvergne. Hiſtorians ſpeak very diſadvantageouſly of his Conduct; viz. That to confirm himſelf in the King's Favour, who ſought for Money to wage War, he ſuggeſted to him to ſell Juſtice, by erecting a New Chamber of twenty Councellors, whereof the Tournelle was added to the Parliament of Paris, and ſo proportionably to all others. After which, he perſuaded him that it was in his Power to raiſe Taxes, and to lay New Impoſts, without the Conſent of the States, according to the ancient way of Government. He after this followed Francis I. into Italy, and was with him Decemb. 19th. 1514 at the Conference he had with Pope Leo Xth. at Bolognia, where he perſuaded that young Prince to aboliſh the Pragmatick Sanction, and to make the Concordat, whereby the Pope remitted to the King the Right of naming perſons to the Benefices of France and Dauphine; and the King granted to the Pope the firſt Fruits of thoſe great Benefices as the Revenue was at the preſent; which changes rendred the Chancellor very odious to the Rich. He died July 9th. 1535. aged 71. Le Ferron, & Godfrey Offic. de la Cour. d'Athon Hiſt. Capelloni, lib. 3. Frizon. Gall. Purp. &c.

PRATE (Pile de) Cardinal and Archbiſhop of Ravenna, was of an Illuſtrious Houſe in Dalmatia, and made a Cardinal in 1378, by Pope Urban VIth. who ſent him Legate to Wenceſlaus, King of the Romans, whom he brought to approve of the Election of Urban. After his Return to Rome he was made Governor of the City of Corneto, and undertook to make a Peace between the Pope and Charles, King of Naples; but failing in his Deſign, he retired to the Anti-pope Clement VIIth. and burnt his Cardinal's-cap in the Sight of the Citizens of Pavia. But Clement VII. created him a Cardinal a-new, and gave him the Command of an Army with which he beat the Urbaniſts, and made himſelf Maſter of the City of Orvietto, the Government whereof he left to Conrade and Luke Monaldi, with charge to pay yearly to the Pope a Sparrow-Hawk upon S. Peter and S. Paul's Day. He afterwards forſook the Schiſm, and gave up to Boniface IXth. all the places he had conquered from the Princes that were the Protectors of Urban, who made him a Cardinal again, which gave his Enemies occaſion to call him the Cardinal with three Caps Boniface gave him the Government of ſeveral Provinces, and at laſt made him his Vicar-General at Rome. He died about the year 1400, at Padua, where he founded a curious College. Ciaco, Onuphrius, Ughellus, Aubery, Hiſtoire des Cardinaux.

PRATEOLUS (Gabriel) Curate of S. Saviour de Peronne, born at Marcouſſi, near Montleheri, and Dr. of the Sorbonne, liv'd near the end of the XVIth. Century. He wrote ſeveral Tracts againſt Hereticks. A Hiſtory of the Church, in two Volumes, beginning at the Birth of our Lord, and carry'd on to the year 1580. A Treatiſe of the Authority of Councils. He died at Perronne in 1588. Spondan in Annal. Poſſevin in Appar. Sac. Miræus de Script. Sac. 16. &c.

PRAXAGORAS, of Athens, lived in the fourth Age, in the Reigns of Conſtantius, Conſtans, and perhaps Julian the Apoſtate. He was a Man of excellent Parts, and at the Age of nineteen writ the Hiſtory of the Kings of Athens in two Books. When two and twenty he compoſed two Books of The Life of Conſtantine the Great. And though a Pagan, yet he preferred that Prince to all the Emperors his Predeceſſors, which Photius has not forgot in giving us ſome Extracts of this Work. He writ moreover, in ſix Books, The Life of Alexander the Great. Photius cod. 62. Poſſevin. in Appar. Voſſius de Hiſt. Græc. lib. 2.

PRAXEAS, a grand Heretick in the ſecond Age, was at firſt the Diſciple of Montanus, whom he forſook, but afterwards fell himſelf into the ſame Hereſie, acknowledging but one Perſon in the Trinity; and ſaying alſo, that the Father had been crucified. *Tertullian de Præſc. adverſ. PRAXIDICA, a Goddeſs of the Heathens, whoſe care was, according to their Sentiments, to ſet the juſt bounds and meaſures within which Men ought to contain themſelves in their Actions or Diſcourſes. They never made a whole Statue to this Goddeſs, but only repreſented her by an Head, to ſhew perhaps that 'tis the Head and a good Underſtanding that determines the Limits of every thing. And they ſacrificed alſo to her nothing but the Heads of the Victims. Some Authors make this Goddeſs to be the Mother of Homonoca and Arete, that is, of Concord and Vertue. Mniaſeas, as Suidas reports, makes her to be Wife of Soter, which is the God-preſerver, the Siſter of Concord, and Mother of Vertue. Heſychius ſaith, That Menelaus, after his Return from Troy, conſecrated a Temple to this Goddeſs, and to her two Daughters, Concord and Vertue, under the ſingle Name of Praxidica. It's obſerved this Goddeſs had all her Temples uncovered, to ſignifie, ſhe drew her original from Heaven, as the only Spring of Wiſdom. Suidas, Heſychius.

PRAXITELES, an excellent Greek Statuary, who lived in Rome in the time of Pompey the Great, and who made himſelf famous by a great number of excellent Pieces he left. Pliny, lib. 33, 34, &c.

PRE-ADAMITES, ſignifies either Men whom ſome feign to have lived before the Creation of Adam, or thoſe who follow the Opinion of an Anonymous Author, who adventured to publiſh in 1655 a Book entitl'd, Præ-Adamitæ, ſive, Exercitatio ſuper verſibus 12, 13, & 14. capitis 5. Epiſtolæ D. Pauli ad Romanos; with another which has for its Title, Syſtema Theologicum ex Præ-Adamitarum hypotheſi; the Heads whereof are theſe; 1. He ſaith, That on the 6th.

Day of the Creation of the World, God created Man male and female, that is, as he expounds it, God created Men and Women on the ſame Day in all the parts of the Earth: So that as the Earth produced immediately Trees, Fruits, and Animals, it had alſo every-where at the ſame time Men and Women placed in it. 2. That long after, God made Adam to be the firſt Man of his own peculiar People, who were afterward called Jews. 3. That this Creation of Adam out of the Earth, which is deſcribed in the ſecond Chapter of Geneſis is different from the Creation of the Men whom Moſes ſpeaks of in the firſt Chapter. 4. That the Gentiles, that is, People differing from the Jews, were the Men of the firſt Creation; and that Adam, from whom the Jews deduced their original, was a new Production of God, who formed him to be chief of his own People. 5. That Moſes's Intention was not to write the Hiſtory of the World; but only that of the Jews: Wherefore he ſays but little of the firſt Creation of Men. 6. That Noah's Deluge was not univerſal throughout the Earth; but that it drowned Judæa only. 7. That thus all the People of the World did not deſcend from Noah, nor from his three Sons. 8. That the Gentiles gave themſelves over to all ſorts of Vices; but that theſe Sins were not imputed to them, becauſe God had not given them a Law; and that they were not properly Sins, but evil Actions; as thoſe of Beaſts, who do wrong, but ſin not. 9. That the Gentiles died not becauſe they had ſinned, but becauſe they were compoſed of a Body ſubject to Corruption. 10. That as to the ſecond Creation, to wit, that of Adam, he had been created to be the firſt Patriarch of the Jewiſh People, to whom God was to manifeſt himſelf in due time, and afterwards to the Gentiles, for to make at laſt but one Church of both. The Author of theſe deteſtable Opinions makes uſe eſpecially of theſe Words in the fifth Chapter of S. Paul's Epiſtle to the Romans, There were ſins in the World before the Law, but they were not imputed, there being no Law, whence he argues thus, we muſt underſtand here the Law preſcribed to Moſes, or that given to Adam; if the firſt, it follows, That there were ſins before, and until Moſes, but that God did not impute them; which latter is manifeſtly falſe, as appears by the Puniſhment of Cain and the Sodomites mention'd in Scripture, &c. If we underſtand by it the Law of Adam, we muſt conclude there were Men before him. This Paſſage is anſwered, in ſaying, that the Apoſtle ſpeaks of the Law preſcribed to Moſes, which is called Law ſimply in Scripture, and by the Apoſtle himſelf when he ſays, I had not known Sin but by the Law; for I ſhould not know what Concupiſcence was, if the Law had not ſaid, You ſhall not covet. Now 'tis certain, 'tis the Law of Moſes which gives this Prohibition. Nor does the Apoſtle ſay, that there were Sins before Moſes his Law that were not imputed; but that there were Sins in the World before that Law; that no Sins were imputed when there is no Law; whence it follows, that before Moſes his time, there was a Law preſcribed to Adam. I ſhall only here ſay ſomething concerning the Antiquity of the Chaldæans, Egyptians, and Chineſes; for that 'tis chiefly upon the Hiſtories of theſe Nations, that the Author of the Præ-Adamites has grounded his Theological Syſtem; after having ſaid in his Preface, That thoſe that could ſee any thing might diſcern, that the Epocha of the World ought not to be taken from the Creation of Adam. He adds, That he muſt go back as far as the original of the Chaldæans, Egyptians, Æthiopians, and Scythians. But in his third Book, where he treats of theſe Matters, he ſays nothing of the Chaldæans and Egyptians; but after Diodorus, that theſe People believed that the World was Eternal; and that they boaſted to have applied themſelves for above four hundred and ſeventy thouſand years to obſerve the Stars. But to overthrow their vain Aſſertions, when Alexander the Great took the City of Babylon, he had with him there Calliſthenes, a famous Philoſopher of the City of Olinthus. This Relation we have from Simplicius, in his Comment upon Ariſtotle, who took it from the Writings of Porphyry. Ariſtotle deſired Calliſthenes to ſhew him what Monuments of Antiquity were amongſt the Chaldeans; and this Friend ſent him the ancienteſt Aſtronomical Obſervations he could find in Babylon, which were not of above a thouſand nine hundred and three years ſtanding before that Expedition of Alexander. And now according to thoſe that follow the Verſion of the Septuagint, theſe Obſervations riſe no higher than the time of Semiramis, who began to reign after the Death of Abraham. Beroſus in his Hiſtory of the Chaldæans reckons ten Generations from Alorus (who is the Adam of Moſes) to Xiſuthrus (who is no other than Noah) and reckons ten more from Xiſuthrus to Abraham, whence it may be ſeen that the Chaldæans would make their Nation as ancient as the World, and equal by their twenty Generations the number of the twenty Patriarchs that were from the firſt Man to Abraham. But it's known that the Babylonians and Chaldæans had their beginning but a little before the Birth of Heber. For Holy-writ informs us, that the Poſterity of Noah having quitted the Mountains where they dwelt a long time after the Deluge, ſpread themſelves in the Plains, and gave the Name of Shinaar to the firſt Land where they fixed, and afterwards built there the Tower and City of Babylon. It's true, as to the Egyptians, they believed that they were the firſt People of the World, but it's eaſie to ſee their original is fabulous. Their Hiſtorians ſay, That they have had Kings for the ſpace of 36825 years, to Nectanebes, who was driven from his Throne by Ochus, King of Perſia, ninteen years before the Monarchy of Alexander the Great. They ſay that the Gods and the Hero's or Demi-gods reigned in this Empire for 34201 years, and that from that time they were ſucceeded by the Kings, the firſt whereof was Menes. The famous Manetho, who was Prieſt in the City of Heliopolis, and writ The Hiſtory of Egypt by the order of Ptolemy Philadelphus, imitating this ancient Chronicle, made the Gods and Hero's to reign upon the Borders of the Nile; but he does not reckon up ſo great a number, and aſſigns them not ſo many years to reign. But it is manifeſt that theſe things are but Fables invented by the Egyptians to make their Antiquity equal with that of the Chaldeans, theſe two Nations having always been jealous of one another in this particular. Wherefore Diodorus ſaith, that the Egyptians had abandoned Truth, and given themſelves over to the belief of incredible and monſtrous Falſhoods. And for the Chineſes, one may ſee by their Hiſtories, that to the year of our Lord 1688, their Empire has laſted four thouſand ſix hundred and forty years, which muſt aſcend up about ſix hundred years before the Deluge, according to the ordinary Calculation; but according to the Computation of the Septuagint, this muſt begin 665 years after the Deluge. So that upon the whole it appears that the Author of the Pre-Adamites hath ſearched to no purpoſe in the Antiquity of theſe Nations for Proofs to the ſupporting of ſo impious and extravagant Opinions. But after the writing of this Book, he acknowledg'd his Error, and died a good Chriſtian at Aubervillers near Paris. *John. Bap. Morin Refutatio deteſtandi libri de Præ-Adamitis. A. PRECARY, it's a word well known in the French Civil and Canon Law. Paolo ſaith, That the Contract called the Precary, brought great Riches to the Churches. That it was uſed firſt in France, and thence paſſed into Italy. M. Simon obſerves in his Hiſtory of the Church-Revenues, that the old Records were full of theſe ſorts of Acts, which conſiſted in a Donation that private Perſons made of their Goods to the Churches; they afterwards obtained of the ſame Churches by Letters which they called precarious or precatorious Letters, the ſame Eſtates again, to enjoy them by a kind of Emphyteotick Tenure, i. e. by Leaſe, for a certain Term of Years upon a reſerv'd Rent; for the greateſt part gave Security for five or ſix Generations, to give to the Church or Monaſtery a certain Revenue every year; he makes Proof hereof by the Copies of the Precaries, wherein private Perſons ſold their Eſtates to the Monaſteries, and afterwards obtained Letters for that for five Generations. So that after the fifth Generation the Monaſtery might diſpoſe of the Eſtate as it thought convenient. La P. Paul. Traittè des Matieres Benefic.

PRECOPS, a City of Crimea, or little Tartary, called Tartaria Præcopenſis. It was called formerly Taphræ, and ſtands between the Mariſh of Buges called Luka-Morzi, and the Gulf of Nigropolis. Vid. TARTARIA.

PREDESTINARIANS, were Hereticks that appeared in the Vth. Age. The Learned do not agree about them ſome believing there were ſuch Hereticks, as the Dominican Piccinardi obſerves upon Prædeſtinatus; others think that this Name was given by the Semi-Pelagians to thoſe that followed S. Auguſtin's Opinions, which is the Opinion of a Sorbonniſt Doctor, as may be ſeen in his Book printed in Holland in 1645. See The Univerſal Bibl. Tom. 3. & F. Noris in his Pelagian Hiſtory, lib. 2. cap. 15.

PREFECTUS PRETORII, or Prætorian Præfect, a Roman Magiſtrate, who was as it were Colonel of the Regiment of Guards to the Emperor. Auguſtus was the firſt who created this Officer, who was choſen from among the Roman Knights. But ſince Macrinus, who was poſſeſs'd of this Charge, was choſen Emperor in 214. not only the Senators, but alſo thoſe who had been Conſuls, were proud to execute this Office. But it was aboliſhed by the Emperor Conſtantine, who disbanded the Prætorian Guards, becauſe they had taken part with Maxentius. He afrerwards divided the Empire into Dioceſſes, to wit, into Italy, Gaull, Illyrium, and the Eaſt, and created a Prætorian Præfect to govern and adminiſter Juſtice in theſe Dioceſſes. When the Emperor made any ſuch Officer, he beſtowed upon him a Sword and a Belt, and 'tis obſerved as a thing very remarkable in the performing of this Ceremony, that Trajan ſaid to the Officer that received it, *Take this Sword to defend me, if I maintain the Intereſt of the Republick; or, Uſe it againſt me, if I reign unjuſtly. PREMISLAW, Lat. Premiſlia, and called by the Natives Prezmyſl. A City in the Kingdom of Poland, in Black-Ruſſia, a Biſhop's See under Leopold, ſtands upon the River San, is great, large, and ſtrong, and lies towards the Frontiers of Hungary.

PREMONTRE, an Order of Regular Canons, founded by Norbert, afterwards Archbiſhop of Magdeburg. The Houſe of Premontrè, which is chief of the Order, gave it its Name. It's in the Dioceſs of Laon. Bartholomew, who was Biſhop of it, aſſigned to Norbert the Deſart called Voſage, where, about 1129, he eſtabliſhed his Inſtitution, which the Holy See afterwards approved of. *Aubert le Mire in Chron. PRESANCTIFIED, a Word us'd by the Greek Church, who have a Liturgy or Maſs, call'd, the Præ-ſanctify'd, becauſe on thoſe Days, they do not conſecrate the Bread or Wine, but receive the Bread which was conſecrated the Day before. This Maſs is ſaid all Lent long, excepting Saturdays and Sundays, and the Annunciation of the Bleſſed Virgin, which being Feſtivals, are exempt from Faſting. The Greeks being of Opinion, That the whole Maſs is not to be celebrated upon Faſting Days, and upon this Account charge the Latin Church with breach of the Canons, becauſe they ſay Maſs in Lent time, as they do the reſt of the Year, Good Friday excepted, for on that Day this Maſs of the Præ-ſanctify'd, is obſerv'd in the Latin Church. The Prieſt then conſecrating neither Bread nor Wine, but making uſe of an Hoſt, which was conſecrated the Day before, and Communicating only under one Species, for the Wine he receives, is only for Ablution, being Unconſecrated. The Greeks do the ſame thing; from whence we may conclude, That they communicate only in one kind, during Lent, the Wine which they then receive, being not conſecrated. Fath. Simon.

PRESBURG, upon the Danube, the capital City of Upper-Hungary, that gives Name to a County, which is a Province of Hungary, between Moravia, Auſtria, and the Danube. It's called in Latin Poſonium, Piſonium, and Flexium, and by thoſe of that Country Poſon. It ſtands within eight Leagues of Vienna, in Auſtria, and as many from Newhauſel and Comora, to the N. W. 70 from Raab. Dr. Brown in his Travels ſays, it was the chief City of Hungary in the Emperor's Poſſeſſion, before he retook Buda. That it's the place of Convention for the Eſtates, and ſince the Loſs of Strigonium, the Metropolitan City; that it's pleaſant, the Caſtle ſtately, beautiful, and well ſituate on the top of a Hill, and all built of white Stone. Herein is kept the ſo highly eſteemed Crown of Hungary, comonly ſaid to have been brought by an Angel from Heaven unto S. Stephen, their King, and of a different Figure from other Crowns. The Garden of the Archbiſhop is very fair, the Walks, the Grotto's, the Figure of Jeronymo, the Labyrinth, Fiſh-Ponds and Fountains are noble. In the Dome, or Cathedral Church lieth the Body of S. Joannes Eleemoſynarius, Biſhop of Alexandria. The Jeſuits have a part of the ſame Church, and a Noble Apothecary's Shop full of Rarities. The Lutherans have alſo a Noble Church here. Raynaldi in Annal. Fumeus Hiſt. Hung.

PRESBYTERIANS, ſo called, becauſe they maintain, That the Government of the Church appointed in the New Teſtament, is by Presbyteries, that is Miniſters and Ruling Elders, aſſociated for Government and Diſcipline. They ſay, That there is no Order in the Church ſuperiour to that of a Presbyter, by Divine Inſtitution. That all Miniſters, being Embaſſadors of Chriſt, are equal by their Commiſſion; and that Elder and Biſhop are the ſame in Name and Office, according to the Scriptures, Titus 1. 5, 7. Acts 20. 28. The loweſt of their Courts is the Miniſter of the Pariſh or Congregation, with his Elders, who govern that ſingle Pariſh or Congregation. Having power to call before them any Member of the Congregation, to inſtruct, examine, admoniſh, rebuke and ſuſpend them from the Lord's-Table, as there ſhall be occaſion, which they ground on Hebr. 13. 17. 1 Theſſ 5. 12, 13. Matt. 7. 6. 2 Theſſ. 3. 6, 14, 15. They have alſo a Deacon to take care of the Poor, and for all thoſe Officers cite 1 Tim. 5. 17. Heb. 13, 7. 1 Cor. 12. 28. Acts 6. 2, 3. The next Court is, A Presbytery, compoſed of a greater Number of Miniſters and Elders aſſociated for governing the Churches in their Bounds, Acts 11. 30. Acts 15. 4, 6, 22. Acts 21. 17, 18. Their higheſt Court is a Synod, which they hold may be provincial, national, or œcumenical; and allow of Appeals from the leſſer to the greater, as in Acts 15. 2, 6, 22, 23. The Ordination of their Miniſters is by Prayer, Faſting, and Impoſition of the Hands of the Presbytery, 1 Tim. 4. 14. after he is examined as to his Converſation, Religion, and Learning, by the preaching Presbyters, who only lay Hands upon him. Thoſe who have a mind to read what they ſay for thoſe things more at large, may ſee it in the Appendix to the Weſtminſter Confeſſion, concerning Church-Government. This is a Summary Account of their Diſcipline, wherein all foreign Proteſtants, except ſome of the Lutherans, agree with them. And for their Doctrine, it is contained in the above-cited Weſtminſter-Confeſſion.

PRESLAIN, in Radnorſhire, a fair, large, well-built Town, ſituate in a pleaſant and rich Place, with pav'd and well-ordered Streets; here the Aſſizes are held, and the County Gaol kept, 148 m. from London.

PRESTER-JOHN, an old King of the Indies or Tartary. Du Cange ſaith, A great Indian King had this Name given him, becauſe he drew his original from Johannes Presbyter, the Neſtorian, who in 1145 killed Coiremcham, and uſurped the Crown. Godingus, on the other hand, affirms, that Preſter-John was a potent Neſtorian King in Tartary, towards China; and that the Natives called all the Princes of that Empire Juhanna, by one common Name, and adds, that the laſt of theſe Kings was defeated by Zinges, Emperor of the Tartars. The Name of Preſter-John, according to Scaliger, comes from the Perſian words Preſte Cham, which ſignifie Apoſtolick or Chriſtian King. Others ſay, Preſter ſignifies a Slave, and that Preſter-John is as much as to ſay, King of Slaves. Some again would have this Name to be deduced from the Perſian Preſchteh-Jehan, which ſignifies the Angel of the World; and they obſerve, that the Moguls, who poſſeſs a great part of the Indies, have often taken the Title upon them of Schah-Jehan, which ſignifies, King of the World. And it may be ſaid that the word Jehan added to their Name is not unlike that of Preſter-John. Finally, there are ſome who ſay, that upon the Confines of India, China, and Tartary, there have been Neſtorian Princes, who were called Uncha, and their People Jouan; and that the name of Preſter-John has been given to theſe Princes; for that they had a Croſs, as Biſhops have, carried before them. This Croſs ſay they was made of Gold and enriched with precious Stones. But when they went to War, they cauſed two to be carried, whereof one was a golden one and the other of precious Stones which intimated they were Defenders of the Faith. Thoſe who have imagined that Preſter-John was the Emperor of the Abyſſines, ſay, that theſe People call their King Belul-gian, and that Belul ſignifies precious, whence the modern Latin renders it Precioſus Johannes, and the Engliſh Preſter-John. But as to the Hiſtory of Preſter-John of India; it's ſaid, He had ſeventy Kings for his Vaſſals; but that it came to paſs that David, who reigned in 1180, loſt his Dominions and Life in a Battle againſt the Tartars who revolted againſt him; and that according to ſome Singi or Chingi who ſucceeded him, after he had married his Daughter quitted the title or ſurname of Preſter-John, and took that of Cham of Catay, which is the Northern part of China, or South Tartary. Others who follow the Chronicles of the Tartarian Kings written in the Perſian Language, ſay, that in 1240 there was ſtill one of theſe Princes that bore the Name of Uncha or Preſter-John; and that being troubled by the Arabs, he had recourſe in 1246 to Pope Innocent IVth. who ſent ſome Dominicans to this Idolatrous Tartarian Prince, to deſire him not to imbrue his hands in Chriſtian blood, and to perſuade him to receive the Faith; ſo that the Name of Preſter-John was then very famous in the Latin Church. In proceſs of time, and before that the Portugueſe had made a Diſcovery of the Indies by Sea, John II. King of Portugal, who reigned in 1490. made diligent ſearch in order to find out a Chriſtian Prince that reigned in Æthiopia, and of which ſome Abyſſines had ſpoken. And becauſe they ſaid they were the Subjects of a King that carried a Croſs, as defender of the Faith, it was believed to be the famous Preſter-John; which thing increaſed the Curioſity of Emanuel, John IId's. Succeſſor. But it's acknowledged that the true Preſter-John was in Tartary. And this Truth was made yet more manifeſt when that Eſtevan de Gama, Governour of the Indies, paſs'd the Streight of the Red-ſea, in 1541, and left to David, Emperor of Æthiopia, four hundred Portugueſe under the Command of his Brother Paul de Gama, to aſſiſt him in the Recovery of his Country which the Mahometans poſſeſs'd for thirteen years. For they ran through all the Country, and learn'd by thoſe that return'd that that Prince of the Abyſſines was a Jacobite Chriſtian, Marmol. de l'Africa, l. 10. *Ricaut. of the Ottoman Empire. PRESTON, a handſome, large and populus Borough in Lancaſhire, in the Hundred of Amounderneſs, repreſented in the Houſe of Commons by two Burgeſſes, and honoured with the Court of Chancery and the Offices of Juſtice, for Lancaſter, as a County Palatine. It's ſituate upon the River Rible, over which it hath a fair Stone-bridge. This Town is governed by a Mayor and 24 Common-council-men, and is diſtant from London 162 miles.

PRETOR a Roman Magiſtrate that adminiſtred Juſtice, whereof there was at firſt but one in Rome; but when there came many Foreigners to live there, they choſe another to be Judge of the Differences that might ariſe between them. The firſt was called Prætor Urbanus, and the other Prætor peregrinus. But about the 605th. Year of Rome, there were conſtituted ſix Prætors, whereof the firſt two took Cognizance of the Caſes of private Perſons, and the other four of publick Crimes, ſuch as Extortions, unreaſonable

Fees, Breaches of the Laws. Treaſons, that is, things done againſt the People of Rome, and their Liberty, or the Privileges of the Citizens; and laſtly, of robbing or imbezeling the publick Treaſure. Cornelius Sylla, the Dictator, added two more to theſe, and in proceſs of time they increaſed in the City of Rome to the Number of Fifteen. They exerciſed their Charge for the Space of one Year. The Provincial Prætors had the Care of Adminiſtring Juſtice in the Roman Provinces, and in time of War commanded the Forces there, during the Year of their Office: The Word, Prætor, properly ſignifying a General, or Captain, from Præire, as our Author will have it, thoſe who were Commanders in Chief, being likewiſe Judges in civil Cauſes, from whence Prætorium ſignifies, both a General's Tent, and a Court of Juſtice; but if the War was dangerous, and the Enemy formidable, there was a Conſul ſent into the Province to manage Affairs, and give neceſſary Orders. Perizonius de Prætorio. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 7. c. 43.

PREVESA, a Fortreſs ſtanding at the Mouth of the Gulf of Larta, in Epirus, built upon the Ruins of the antient Nicopolis, by the Emperor Auguſtus, to preſerve the Memory of the famous Battle of Actium, won by him from Marcus Antonius. Marco Grimani, Patriarch of Aquileia, General of the Pope's Gallies, accompanied with Andrew Doria, General of the League, in 1539, endeavoured to ſurprize this Place, which was in the Poſſeſſion of the Turks; but they were conſtrained to retire. But Captain-General Moroſini made himſelf Maſter of it in September 1684. Coronelli deſcript. of the Morea.

PREXASPES, a Magician, whom Cambyſes, King of Perſia, entruſted with his greateſt Secrets, and to whom he gave Orders to kill Smerdis, which he executed in conducting of this Prince out a hunting. But after Cambyſes's Death, ſeeing the Magician Smerdis got upon the Throne, he ſtrenuouſly denied his having killed the King's Brother, that he might ſhelter himſelf from the Rage of the People, who loved that Prince, and from the Violence of the Magi, who maintained, That Smerdis, the Brother of Cambyſes, was yet living. He promiſed theſe Magi to get up to the top of the Tower that was in the Market-place, and to declare with a loud Voice to the Perſians, when met together, that Smerdis, the King's Brother, and Cyrus's Son was alive, and poſſeſs'd the Kingdom. But he did the contrary, and proteſted publickly, That he had executed Cambyſes's Command, in killing his Brother Smerdis, and that he who now reigned was a Magician that uſurped the Crown; which when he had ſaid, he threw himſelf down head-long over the Tower. Hiſtorians obſerve he ſpoke very boldly to his Prince, and that one day he adventured to demonſtrate to him, That his Intemperance in reſpect of Wine obſcured the Glory of all his noble Actions. But this faithful Admonition was fatal to him; for ſome Days after, Cambyſes being drunk, ſhot an Arrow into Prexaſpes's Son's Heart, and then asked this unfortunate Father, If ever he knew any one more dextrous, even before he were drunk, But Prexaſpes, that he might not exaſperate the King the more, made anſwer, That a God could not have ſhot better. Juſtin. Herodotus.

PRIAMUS, King of Troy, was the Son of Laomedon. He married Hecuba, and had a great many Children by her, and amongſt the reſt Paris, who having ſtolen away Helena. was the occaſion of the ruin of his Country; the City of Troy having been taken by the Grecians, in the Year of the World 2870, and Priamus killed there by Pyrrhus, the Son of Achilles, after he had reigned forty Years. Virgil. lib. 2. Æneid. Euſebius, Ovid, &c.

PRIAPENDAR, Emperor or King of Ceylan, which is a great Iſland towards the point of the Peninſula of Indus, on this ſide the Gulf of Bengale, reigned there about ſixty Years, and turned Chriſtian, taking at his Baptiſm the Name of John. But as ſoon as he embraced the Chriſtian Faith, the Princes and Prieſts of the Country ſet up a King in his place. But yet he did all that lay in him to bring his People to imitate him. Some Years after this King became a Chriſtian, there was a Philoſopher of Ceylan, called Alagamma Motiar, that is, The Maſter of Philoſophers, who received Baptiſm alſo, and laboured for the Converſion of the Pagans of the Iſland but the Idolatrous King hindred the Succeſs of this good Deſign, and he who reigns there alone now, continues the worſhipping of falſe Gods. Tavernier Voyage des Ind.

PRIAPUS, a God of the Ancients, whom they made to be the Son of Bacchus and Venus, and who had the care of Gardens. He was worſhipped at Lampſacus. Adonis or Oſiris having conſecrated a Phallus of Gold in memory of a Wound he had received in the Groin, it happened that the reaſon of the Phallus came to be forgotten, and that the Prieſts of that God introduced a great many Impurities and Vileneſſes upon this occaſion. Priapus was called Ityphallus, that is, the Phallus of Adonis, who was named Iyaüs. Adonis was the God of Gardens as well as Priapus, inſomuch that there is reaſon to believe they were both the ſame Deity. Tom. 3. of the Univerſal Bibliotheque.

PRICE (William) a Glaſier in Holborn, London, and an eminent Glaſs-Painter, from whom the Reader may receive the following Account concerning ſome Curioſities in this Art. Glaſs-Painting conſiſts of two Parts; Firſt of Staining, that is, to Stain the whole Body of the Metal of any Colour in the Glaſs-Houſe Furnace, and then blow it into broad Glaſs or Sheets, which was the old Way, and the ſame which I now uſe. The common Opinion, of the old red Glaſs being Stain'd through, is a Miſtake, for notwithſtanding that Method is practicable, it is by no Means convenient; and that it was not ſo formerly in Fact, may be prov'd thus: Suppoſe therefore I have a Coat of Arms, Gules, or with a Red Field, and charg'd with a Lion of any other Colour. In this caſe, I can grind off the red, and make the Glaſs white in the Place ground, and then Paint the Lion, or Charge, Sable, or any other Colour, which had the Glaſs been quite Stain'd through, could not have been perform'd, unleſs join'd together with Leads: From whence 'tis plain, 'tis better to be Stain'd on one ſide, than that the Colour ſhould paſs through the Body of the Glaſs. Secondly, Painting, that is to lay ſeveral Colours on one Piece of Glaſs, which the Ancients could not; for they, when they made any Figure, or Coat of Arms, faſhion'd Pieces of ſeveral Colours, and ſo ſhaded thoſe colour'd Pieces with black Shading to form the Foldage, and join'd them together with Leads: For if you obſerve the old Paintings, you will always find, between every Colour, Leads to join them together, except in ſome particular Places, where the yellow may be apply'd, which was Stain'd as I do now.

The HIGH-PRIEST was he who was the chief Sacrificer under the ancient Law. Aaron, Moſes's Brother, was the firſt, and this Dignity was poſſeſs'd by thoſe of his Family, and others of the Jews, for 1578 Years, from the Year of the World 2545, till 4123, which was the ſeventieth after the Nativity of Chriſt, when the City of Jeruſalem was taken by the Emperor Titus. There was none but the High-Prieſt to enter into the Sanctuary of the Tabernacle. His Habit and Ornaments were myſterious. He wore, beſides the ordinary Veſt of Prieſts, one of a Jacinth colour, that came down to his Heels, and whoſe Border was ornamented with divers Flowers, and embroider'd with Gold. The lower part of this Robe was fringed and adorned with Pomegranates and Bells of Gold intermixed, over which was another Veſt, called an Ephod, like that the Greeks call Epomis. This Ephod was a kind of ſhort Coat, but of a Cubit's length, interwoven with various Colours with a mixture of Gold. And towards the middle of the Breaſt was a piece of Stuff like to that of the Ephod, which the Hebrews call Eſſen, the Greeks Logion, and vulgarly The Oracle. Upon this Oracle were fixed twelve precious Stones of an ineſtimable value, placed in four Rows, three in each. The firſt Row was made up of a Sardonyx, Topaz and Emerauld. The ſecond of a Ruby, Jaſper, and Sapphire. The third of a Ligure, Agate, and Amethyſt. The fourth of a Beryl, Onyx, and Jaſper. Upon each of theſe Stones was graven the Names of the twelve Sons of Jacob. The High-Prieſt had moreover upon his Shoulders two Sardonyx's enchaſed in Gold, whereunto was faſtned the Ephod. The Names of the twelve Sons of Jacob were alſo engraven upon theſe two Stones. He wore beſides, a Mitre made of fine twined Linen, and a Plate of pure Gold, with a blue Lace put to it, and ſo ſet upon the fore-front of the Mitre, with the Name of GOD engraven thereon. Joſephus Hiſt. of the Jews, l. 3. c, 8.

PRIEST comes from the Greek Word Πρεσβύτερος, that ſignifies Old, and indeed Prieſts ought to be ſo in reſpect of Age or Prudence. As to the old Teſtament, there the Age of the Prieſthood was fixed to thirty Years; and we ſee our Saviour did not begin his Miniſtry before that time. But under the New there are no certain term of Years prefix'd; and the Practice of Churches hath been various herein. As to the Heathen Prieſts, they were Perſons appointed to offer Sacrifices, and firſt inſtituted at Rome by Numa Pompilius, and called Sacerdotes. Whereof there were two Sorts; one for all the Gods in general, called Pontifices; the other for the Gods in particular; as the Luperci, for the God Pan; the Sodales Titii, for the Gods of the Sabines; the Salii, for Mars; the Veſtals, for the Goddeſs Veſta; the Flamens, for Jupiter, Mars, or Quirinus; the Galli, for Cybele, the Mother of the Gods. Beſides which there were certain Magiſtrates or Officers, called Epulones, who were as the Intendants or Stewards that preſided over thoſe Feaſts that were made after the Sacrifices. The King of the Sacrifice, who was as it were the Maſter of the Ceremonies. The Fratres Arvales, who took care of the Sacrifices offered for the Increaſe of the Fruits of the Earth. And the Fratres Curiones, that were over the Sacrifices of each Curia. Apuleius, Titus Livius.

PRIMASIUS, Biſhop of Adrumetum, in Africa, and not of Utica, as ſome Authors have affirmed, lived in the ſixth Age, and was in 553, at the fifth General Synod held at Conſtantinople; where he with his Fellow-brethren, oppos'd the Condemnation of the three Chapters. He was extreamly zealous for the Doctrine of S. Auguſtin, whoſe Diſciple he declared himſelf to be. He commented upon the Epiſtles of S. Paul, or rather collected out of the Works of S. Auguſtin, ſome Paſſages that might ſerve for an Expoſition of them, which John Gagneus publiſh'd in 1543, which Work is in the Bibliotheca Patrum, together with ſome Comments of the ſame Primaſius upon the Revelations. He writ alſo three Books of Hereſies to ſupply what was wanting in that of S. Auguſtin, left unfiniſhed. Caſſiodor. de div. Lect. c. 9. Iſidor. in Cat. Baron. Bellar.

PRIMISLAS, or Premiſſus, whom others call Leſchus, was a Goldſmith, but created Prince or Duke of Poland about 760, after that Country had been governed for ſome time, by twelve Palatines. He reigned 44 Years.

PRIMISLAS II. was choſen King in 1295, in the time that Poland was extreamly divided, after the death of Leſchus the VIth. ſurnamed the Black; his Election was not generally approved of, and ſo he was aſſaſſinated about ſeven or eight months after he was Crowned. Cromer Hiſt. Polon. Guagnini Deſc. Sarm.

PRIMISLAS, Premiſlas, or Przemyſk I. Duke of Bohemia after Crocus, who left three Daughters, Bela, Techa and Libuſſa, which laſt, though the youngeſt, was choſen to govern the Country at the age of 25 Years, which ſhe did very ſucceſsfully for thirteen Years, and afterwards married Primiſlas, who was a mean Perſon, but he made good Laws, reigned 44 Years, lived above ninety, and died not in 745, as ſome have imagined, but more probably about 676, when Nezamiſlas his Son ſucceeded him.

PRIMISLAS, or Przemyſlas II. the Son of Ladiſlaus III. was ſurnamed the Victorious, or the Golden Prince, and crowned King with a Crown made all of Gold in 1199, with the conſent of the Emperor Philip, and after the death of that Prince ſtruck in with Otho IV. for whom he did good Service upon ſome important Occaſions; in Conſideration whereof the Emperor, ſurnamed him Ottocarus, that is, the Favourer of Otho. He died in 1231, after he had reigned 32 Years.

PRIMISLAS III. ſurnamed Ottocarus II. ſucceeded Wenceſlas the Son of Primiſlas II. in 1253, and was famous for his Hoſpitality and Courage, whereof he gave proofs in the Conqueſt of Carinthia, Stiria, Carniola, Auſtria, &c. The Emperor Rodolphus I. diſpoſſeſs'd him of theſe Provinces, and beſtowed them upon his Son Albert, the Anceſtor of the Princes of the Houſe of Auſtria, whereupon Primiſlas marched his Army into the Field, but loſt his Life in a Battle fought Auguſt 28. 1278. being the 25th. PRINCEPS JUVENTUTIS, a Title which the ancient Roman Emperors gave their Sons, or thoſe they adopted to ſucceed them; but after the Imperial Line fail'd in the Julian Family, thoſe who were deſign'd to ſucceed in the Empire, were call'd Cæſars, which is much the ſame with that of King of the Romans at preſent Roſin. Antiq. Rom. Lib. 7. c. 13.

PRINCE'S ISLAND, an Iſland on the Weſtern Coaſt of Africa, in three degrees of North Latitude, 120 miles from S. Thomas to the N. E. and ſomething leſs from Africa, little, but very fruitful. Its Revenues were aſſign'd to the Prince of Portugal, from whence it took its Name.

PRINCIPATO, a Country in the Kingdom of Naples, divided into Principato Citra, and Principato Oltra; the firſt whereof comprehends part of the Country of the ancient Picentines, and Lucanians, and hath the other Principato to the North of it, with part of Campagnia the Happy; the Tuſcan Sea to the South and Weſt, and the Baſilicata to the Eaſt. Its Capital City is Salerno. Principato Oltra is bounded on the Eaſt and North by the Capitanata, Terra di Lavoro to the Weſt, and the Hither Principato to the South; and its Capital City is Benevento.

PRINCIPATO di Val di Taro, a Province of Italy, in Lombardy, had formerly its particular Lords, but now the Duke of Parma is Maſter of it.

PRINTING. This Art was found out about the middle of the XVth. Century, i. e. between the Years 1420, and 1450, but 'tis a hard matter to determine who was the firſt Inventor, Hiſtorians being divided upon the Point: Some ſay, that John Fauſtus, Citizen of Mentz, invented Printing, with the Aſſiſtance of Peter Scheffer, of Gernſheim, his Son-in-Law, but not having Stock enough to carry on their Buſineſs, they took in for their Partner, one John Guttembergh, a Gentleman of the ſame Town. Others give the Credit of this Invention to John Guttembergh, who, they ſay, was a Knight, living at Strasburg, adding, That this Gentleman, not being furniſh'd with every thing neceſſary for his Deſign, went to Mentz, and communicated the Secret to Fauſtus and Scheffer abovemention'd. Others affirm, that John Mentel, of Strasburg, invented Printing; but that his Servant, John Gansfleiſch, born at Mentz, betray'd his Maſter, and diſcover'd his Art to John Guttembergh who retir'd to Mentz with Gansfleiſch, and took in Fauſtus and Scheffer for his Aſſiſtants. The Dutch aſſure us, That Lawrentius Coſterus of Harlem was the firſt that found out this admirable Secret, and that John Fauſtus, who liv'd with him, ſtole away his Letters, while the other was at Midnight-Maſs, and run away with them to Mentz; but after all, let the Inventers be who they will, it muſt be confeſs'd, that this Art is extremly uſeful to the Commonwealth of Learning. *I. de la Caille Hiſtoire de l'Imprimerie. PRISCIAN, a learned Grammarian of Cæſarea or Rome, was in eſteem at Conſtantinople, not in 440, as Trithemius believed, but in 525, as we are informed by Caſſiodorus, who was his Cotemporary. He writ ſeveral things which Aldus hath printed at Venice in 1476, from a Manuſcript found in France. Putſchius hath placed theſe Works in the Body of the ancient Grammarians. Trithemius in Catal. Geſner in Bibl. Poſſevin in appar.

PRISCILLA, a Lady of Quality, and a Diſciple of the Heretick Montanus. The Priſcillian Hereticks that differ from the Priſcillianiſts, took their name from this Woman. She muſt not be confounded with another Roman Lady of the ſame Name, whom Pope Marcellus I. perſwaded to build a Church-Yard for the interring of the Martyrs about the Year 306. Vid. MAXIMILLUS.

PRISCILLIAN, a Grand Heretick, chief of the Priſcillianiſts, was a Spaniard of Noble Extract, and very wealthy, endued with Wit, Learning and Eloquence; one Mark, an Egyptian, and an Heretick, having ſown the Errors of the Gnoſticks in Gaul, went into Spain, where Carnal Pleaſure, which was the principal Article of his Doctrine, got him preſently a great many Diſciples, the chief whereof was Priſcillian; and as he had the greater Capacity, he did the moſt miſchief; he covered his Vanity under the Appearance of a profound Humility. He taught, beſides the Abominations of the Gnoſticks, That the Soul was of the ſame ſubſtance with God, and that deſcending to the Earth through ſeven Heavens, and certain other degrees of Principality, it fell into the Hands of the evil one, who put it into the Body, which he made to conſiſt of twelve parts, over each of which preſided a Celeſtial Sign: He condemned the eating of the fleſh of Animals, and Marriage, as an unlawful Conjunction, and ſeparated Women from their Husbands without their Conſent; and according to his Doctrine, Man's Will was ſubject to the power of the Stars. He confounded the Perſons in the Trinity with Sabellius. He ordered his Followers to faſt on Sunday and Chriſtmas day, becauſe he believed Chriſt had not taken true Fleſh upon him. Lying was a thing tolerated amongſt them. There was a Volume compoſed by them, call'd Libra, becauſe that in the twelve Queſtions in it, as in twelve Ounces all their Doctrine was explained. The Catholick Biſhops aſſembled at Saragoſſa in 381, and condemned theſe Hereticks; but theſe ſame got Priſcillian ordain'd Biſhop by Inſtantius and Salvian, Prelates of their Party; whereupon the Orthodox had recourſe to Gratian, who by an Edict baniſhed the Hereticks, not only from Churches, but alſo from all Cities; but Salvian, Inſtantius and Priſcillian undertaking a Journey into Italy, obtained of the Emperor, through the favour of Macedonius, Maſter of Requeſts, an Order for the reſtoring of them; but yet they continued to be perſecuted till about [illegible]86, that Priſcillian had his Head cut off at Trier, by the command of the Tyrant Maximinus; but yet it was queſtion'd at the time that S. Jerom writ of Eccleſiaſtical Authors, which was but ſeven Years after the death of Priſcillian. Whether he had maintained the Hereſies attributed to him. His Accuſers Idacius and Ithacius were very ill Men, if we believe Sulpitius Severus, and ſought rather to ſatisfie their own particular Paſſions, than to maintain the truth. So Martin of Tours, diſapproving the Conduct of thoſe who would put Priſcillian to death, endeavoured to hinder it, and failing to accompliſh his End would no longer communicate with the Faction of thoſe two Biſhops. S. Jerom. Catal. Script. Eccleſ. Sulpitius Severus l. 2. & dies 3.

PRISCUS, Brother to the Emperor Philip, was Governour of Syria, and the adjacent Provinces, and after his Brother's death was proclaimed Emperor in 249; but having been declared Enemy to his Country by the Senate, he was kill'd ſometime after. Aurelius Victor de Cæſar.

PRISCUS, a Philoſopher, who had a great ſhare in the eſteem of Julian the Apoſtate, and was accuſed of being a Magician. He muſt not be miſtaken for Priſcus Jabolenus an ancient Lawyer, nor for Priſcus the Sophiſter mentioned by Eunapius, &c. Geſner in Bibl.

PRISCUS (Panites) a Sophiſter that lived in the Fifth Age, in the time of Theodoſius the Younger. He publiſhed, beſides Epiſtles and Declamations, an Hiſtory of Conſtantinople, and ſome other things, which Volatteran ſaith are in the Vatican. *Vol. Com. l. 18. Evagr. l. 5. c. ult. PRIVATUS, Biſhop of Lumbeſa in Africa, in the Third Age, was condemned in a Synod of fourſcore and ten Biſhops. He went to Rome, in order to get himſelf reſettled in his See, but to no purpoſe, inſomuch, that returning into Africa to purge himſelf, as he pretended, he caballed with five other Prelates to put another Biſhop in the place of S. Cyprian. Fortunatus, one of the five Prieſts, who in the Church of Carthage had before made a Schiſm, together with Feliciſſimus, appeared fit for their turn, and they ordained him. Cyprian Ep. 38, & 35. Edit. Rigalt. Baronius in Annal.

PROBA (Falconia) a Roman Lady, who lived in the Year 401. compoſed ſome Cento's taken out of Virgil, writ the Life of Chriſt, and fitted them very well to the principal Actions of the Old and New Teſtament. Some have writ, That ſhe delivered up the City of Rome to Alaricus in 409, but there is little likelihood of it. Baron. in Annal. A. C. 410.

PROBUS (Marcus Aurelius Valerius) became a Roman Emperor, though but Son to a Peaſant of Dalmatia. He was choſen after Tacitus, by the Army that was then in the Eaſt in 276. He was famous for his Victories, for in Gaul he defeated four hundred thouſand Germans; afterwards bravely overcame the Sarmatians in Illyrium, and the Goths in Thrace. Bonoſus and Proculus, who had revolted from him, were alſo defeated by him, as well as Saturninus. His Prudence and Conduct made him generally belov'd, and there was great things expected from his Government; but he was kill'd baſely, at laſt, in 282, by his Soldiers, who were incenſed againſt him, becauſe he kept 'em cloſe under Military Diſcipline, and for fear of being disbanded when this Prince had ſubdued all the Enemies of the Empire, after he had reigned ſix Years and four Months. Vopiſcus in Probo. Euſebius in Chron. Aurelius Victor. Eutropius, &c.

PROCAS, King of the Latins, ſucceeded Aventine, his Father, about the Year of the World 3234, and reigned 32 Years. He died, and left two Sons, Amulius and Numitor, Grandfather to Romulus and Remus. Livy, lib. 8. Dion. Halicarnaſſus. Euſebius, &c.

PROCHORUS, the Diſciple of the Apoſtles, and one of the ſeven Deacons. There is falſely attributed to him a Book that is in the Bibliotheca Patrum, of the Life of S. John the Evangeliſt.

PROCIDA (John de) ſo called becauſe he was Sovereign of the Iſland of Procida, in the Kingdom of Naples, had great Authority in Sicily, in the Reign of Manefroy; but Charles of Anjou, King of Naples and Sicily, diſpoſſeſs'd him of his Eſtate and Places: To be reveng'd, Procida undertook to make Sicily revolt from Charles, and to reduce it afterwards under the Obedience of Peter King of Arragon, who had married Manefroy's Daughter; and, that he might the more ſecretly carry on his deſign, he diſguiſed himſelf in a Franciſcan's Habit in the Year 1280; and when he had run all over Sicily to ſound the Peoples Inclinations, he went to Conſtantinople, to Michael Paleologus, to get ſome Money of him for the Work; and thence came to Rome, where he engaged the Pope to favour the Deſign, but Pope Nicolas dying, and the Cardinal S. Cecilia being advanced to the Chair, it changed the face of things. In the mean time, Procida continued his Deſign, and ſpent two Years in bringing about that horrible Conſpiracy, which was executed in 1282, on Eaſter-day, in the time of Veſpers, wherein were killed, in cold Blood, about eight thouſand Perſons, without regard of Age, Sex, or Condition, all the French, as well Eccleſiaſticks, as Laicks, being kill'd, except William Porcelet, a Gentleman of Provence, whom the Sicilians ſent ſafe into his Country, in recompence to his Fidelity in his Government intruſted to him. *Surita. PROCLINIATES, Hereticks in the Fourth Age, that denied the Incarnation of Jeſus Chriſt, the Reſurrection of the Body, and laſt Judgment. Epiphan.

S. PROCLUS, Patriarch of Conſtantinople, had been Diſciple of S. Chryſoſtom, and Secretary to Atticus. He was choſen Biſhop of Cyzicum, by the Patriarch of the Imperial City, who pretended to have a right to do ſo; but the Inhabitants choſe another, ſo that Proclus ſtay'd at Conſtantinople, and was made Patriarch after Maximinian. He laboured much in the Converſion of Voluſian, and held his See twelve Years, three Months, and died October 24, 445. He writ a Treatiſe, call'd Tractatus de Traditionibus Miſſæ Divinæ, ſome Homilies, &c. S. Cyril in Expoſ. Symb. Nicen. & Ep. 31. ad Joan. Antioch. Socrates l. 7. Hiſt. c. 26. 28.

PROCLUS, an Heretick, the Diſciple of Montanus, publiſhed his Errors in the Second Age. Gaius diſputed publickly againſt him, and confounded him. Euſebius ſaith, That Diſpute was publiſhed, and that he found a great many excellent Reaſons in it againſt the Montaniſts; but Tertullian commends Proclus very much. Euſebius lib. 6. Hiſt. Jerom deſcript. Eccl. in Gaio. Baronius in Annal.

PROCLUS, a Platonick Philoſopher, that lived about the year 500, and no doubt, the ſame that was ſurnamed Diadochus; he was of Lycia, and in favour with the Emperor Anaſtaſius, and being a good Mathematician, it's ſaid, that when Vitalian laid Siege to Conſtantinople, Proclus burnt his Ships with great Brazen Looking-glaſſes, as Archimedes had done by the Roman Ships before Syracuſe. He was a Pagan and writ againſt the Chriſtian Religion: Of his Works we have ſtill remaining Elementa Theologica & Phyſica, done into Latin by Patricius, and printed in Quarto in 1583; Theologiæ Platonicæ, lib 6. publiſhed in 1618 in Folio at Hamburg; Paraphraſis in Ptolem. De ſiderum affectionibus publiſhed in 1635 at Leyden, in Octavo. Suidas in Proc. Annal. p. 3. Geſner in Bibl. Voſſius de Sect. Phil. l. 16. de Matth. &c.

PROCONSUL; this name was given in the beginning of the Republick of Rome, to him who was continued in the Office of Conſul after the year of his Conſulſhip for ſome important reaſons; they afterwards called him Proconſul, who going out of his Conſulſhip, had the Government of a Conſular Province. In the time of the Emperors, he was named Proconſul who was choſen by the Senate to govern one of the Provinces of the People. The Proconſuls going out of their Conſulſhip, were not choſen in the Aſſemblies of the People, but they caſt Lots for one of two Conſular Provinces, and took the Government of that which fell to them, where they adminiſtred Juſtice, and commanded the Army that was in their Province, &c. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. l. 7. c. 42.

PROCOPIUS, a Native of Cilicia, and Kinſman to Julian the Apoſtate, got himſelf ſaluted Emperor in oppoſition to Valentinian and Valens. His firſt attempts proved ſo ſucceſsful, that Valens had thoughts, being reduced to great extremity, to reſign the Empire; but the year after the face of things changed, and Procopius was defeated in Phrygia. It's ſaid, that he was deſerted by his Men, and that Valens cut off his Head and ſent it to Valentinian into Gaul. Ammian. Marcellin. l. 25. & 26. Zoſimus lib. 4.

PROCOPIUS, Son to the Emperor Anthemius and Brother to Marcian and Romulus; they rebell'd againſt Zeno about the year 479, and were ſubdued by the ſubtilty of one Hillus a famous Cheat.

PROCOPIUS of Cæſarea, an Hiſtorian, got great reputation for his Works in the time of Juſtinian. He was Secretary to the famous General Beliſarius in all his Wars, was afterwards made Senator and Prefect of Conſtantinople which was then the higheſt employ. It's not certain whether he was a Pagan or a Chriſtian: All his Works were contain'd in eight Books, to wit, two of the Perſian Wars, abridged by Photius; two of that of the Vandals; and four of that of the Goths. Suidas ſpeaks of a ninth Book that had not been publiſhed, entitled, The Secret Hiſtory, or The Anecdotes, which is a Piece againſt Juſtinian and Theodora his Wife; part of it is now Printed, and as to the whole work 'tis ſo full of Satyr and Venom, and outragious liberty, blackning the Characters of Juſtinian, and Theodora, his Empreſs, to ſuch a Scandalous Degree, that ſeveral of the Learned believe it a Spurious Piece, and not written by Procopius. Cave Hiſt. Lit. p. 1.

PROCOPIUS of Gaza, a Rhetorician and Sophiſt, lived in 560. He was a better Author than Divine. He wrote ſome Commentaries. Photius commends his Style, but finds fault with his too tedious Digreſſions, not that they were altogether uſeleſs, but becauſe he quoted the Explications of the Ancients, tho' never ſo different; he makes uſe of the Verſion of the Septuagint, of Aquila, of Symmachus, of Theodotion, and ſometimes of that of S. Jerom, tranſlated by Sophronius into Greek. Conrade Clauſet of Zurich, Author of a Verſion of this Work, publiſhed it in 1555. John Curtier publiſhed an Abridgment of Procopius's Commentaries upon Iſai. in 1580, and other parts of his Works have been publiſhed by ſeveral others. Photius. Bellarmin. Poſſevin. Godeau.

PROCRIS. See CEPHALUS.

PROCRUSTES, the name of a famous Highwayman in the Country of Attica in Greece, that had his Haunts about the River Cephiſus; he exerciſed great Cruelties upon Paſſengers, ſtretching them upon a Bed, and cutting off the Feet and Legs of thoſe who were longer than the Bed, and extending, with Cords, thoſe who were not ſo long. He was himſelf put to the ſame death by Theſeus. Plutarch in Theſeo.

PROCULUS, ſurnamed Eutychius, a famous Grammarian, born at Sicca, a Town of Africa, lived in the Second Age, and was Tutor to the Emperor M. Antoninus the Philoſopher, who raiſed him to the Dignity of Proconſul. Proculus writ a Treatiſe of what was rare and admirable in Foreign Countries, which piece is quoted by Trebellius Pollio, in the Life of the thirty Tyrants, and in that of Æmilian in particular. Euſeb. in Chron.

PROCULUS (Titius Ælius) Native of Arbenga, a Town near Genoa, he rebelled about the Year 270, in Gaul, againſt the Emperor Probus, at the Sollicitation of his Wife Viturgia, and of the Lionnois, but being unable to make head againſt Probus, he fled; being afterwards taken, he was put to death, together with his Son Herennian. Vopiſc.

PROCULUS (Licinius) an ancient Roman Lawyer in the time of the Emperor Otho and Vitellius. He taught Law after a particular Method of his own, and his Followers were called Proculeians. J. Bertrand de Juriſperitis.

PROCULUS, a Roman, who gave his Countrymen an Account, that Romulus was admitted among the Gods.

PRODOMIANS, Lat. Prodomii, were the Gods that took care of the Foundations of Buildings, and called by Romulus Præſtructores. Comitius Calderinus by this Name underſtands the Gods that were adored at the entring into the Houſes, and even at the Threſholds, called alſo Dii Veſtibulares; and 'tis in one of theſe two Sences that Prodomia Juno is to be explained Pauſanias in Atticis.

PROETUS, the Son of Abas, King of Argos, had a ſtrange Antipathy to his Brother Acriſius from his very Youth; but Acriſius being ſtronger, Proetus retired to Jobates King of Lycia, whoſe Daughter he had married, who aſſiſting him with an Army, brought things to that paſs, that the State was divided between him and his Brother, giving Argos to Acriſius, and Tiryntha to Proetus: Bellerophon coming after this, to ſhelter himſelf in Tiryntha; Proetus's Wife falſely accuſed him of having attempted her Honour, whereupon, that eaſie King ſentenced him to fight with the Chimera; whom, when the innocent Prince overcame, Sthenobea, in deſpair, poiſon'd her ſelf. Apollodorus. Hygin, &c.

PROLOGUE, was a Diſcourſe addreſs'd to the Spectators of a Tragedy or Comedy before the Play was acted, whereof there were ſeveral ſorts, as, ſome that recommended the Poet, and ſome, the Intereſt of the Comedians. Authors have alſo taken this Name of Prologue in another ſence, that is, for an Epiſode or Act placed in the beginning of the Piece, and before the coming in of the Chorus; ſo that it made part of the Poem, and concerned the Subject-matter of the Play from which it could not be ſeparated. Hedelin, &c.

PROMETHEUS, the Son of Japetus, and Brother of Atlas and Epimetheus, concerning whom the Poets have feigned, that having formed the firſt Men of the Earth and Water, he ſtole Fire from Heaven to put Life into them; and that having hereby diſpleaſed Jupiter, he commanded Vulcan to tie him to Mount Caucaſus with Iron Chains, and that a Vulture ſhould prey upon his Liver continually; but the Truth of the Story is, that Prometheus was an Aſtrologer, and conſtant in obſerving the Stars upon that Mountain, and that among other things he found the Art of making Fire, either by the means of a Flint, or contracting the Sun-beams in a Glaſs; by which Expedient he had it in his Power to put Life, as it were, into People, who were almoſt dead with cold. Bochartus affirms this Heathen Prometheus, is the ſame with Magog, mentioned in Scripture. Phaleg, lib. 1. cap. 2. Ovid. lib. 1. Metam. Horace. Heſiod. Cicero. Lactantius, &c.

PROPERTIUS (Sextus Aurelius) a Latin Poet originally of Umbria, called Mevania, now Bevagna, in the Dutchy of Spoleto: His Father is ſaid to have been of the Equeſtrian Order, that he had conſiderable Imploys during the Triumvirate, and that afterwards being of the number of thoſe that followed Antony after the taking of Peruſa, he was beheaded by Auguſtus's Order. Propertius having hereby loſt the greateſt part of his Eſtate, came to Rome, acquired much Reputation, and was in Eſteem with Mæcenas and Cornelius Gallus. He compoſed four Books of his Amours and Paſſion for a Maiden called Hoſtia or Hoſtilia, as Apuleius has it; to whom he gave the Name of Cynthia. The firſt Book of his Elegies was ſurnamed Monobiblos. Lilio Giraldi Dial. 4. Poet. Crinitus. Scaliger.

PROPHETS were choſen Perſons inſpir'd by God for to inſtruct the Jews, and to predict what was to come. Beſides Samuel, David, Nathan, &c. we uſually reckon up ſeventeen who are diſtinguiſhed into the Greater and Leſſer. The word Prophet comes from the Greek προφήτης, which ſignifies a teller of things to come. The Hebrew in the Holy Scripture makes uſe of the Word Nabi, which the Septuagint have tranſlated Prophet, yet the learnedeſt Rabbins, as Solomon Jarchi, and others hold, that Nabi draws his original from the Hebrew Word Noub, which according to 'em, ſignifies to ſpeak; as if the Prophets among the Jews were Orators, who manifeſted God's Will to the People either in publick Diſcourſes, or by their Writings. And it's for this reaſon that they divide their Prophetical Books into two Claſſes, whereof the firſt contains thoſe they call Nebiim Riſchonim, that is, firſt Prophets, under which are comprehended the Books of Joſuah, Judges, the Books of Samuel, and the Kings; in the ſecond are Iſaiah, Jeremiah, and the other Prophets, which they call Nebiim Aharonim, or the Latter Prophets. Theodoret, with ſome other Greek Fathers agree in this with the Jews, becauſe they affirm, that the Prophets wrote each of 'em the Hiſtory of what paſt in their time. This Theodoret makes out clearly, in his Preface to his Expoſition on the Kings. Joſephus alſo in his firſt Book againſt Appion, ſays, That thoſe who wrote the Annals of his Country were called Prophets. The Egyptians alſo gave the Name of Prophets to thoſe that wrote their Hiſtories, as may be ſeen at large in Clemens Alexandrinus and others. The Opinion of Father Simon, concerning the Prophets being Jewiſh Annaliſts, has been examin'd in a Book call'd, The Sentiments of the Divines of Holland, concerning the Critical Hiſtory, Ep 10. and in The Defence of that Book, Ep. 5. where 'tis endeavour'd to be prov'd, That the Keepers of the Publick Regiſters were not ordinarily Prophets

PROPONTIS, 'tis thus we call the Sea of Marmora, that is between Europe and Aſia, or between Aſia minor and Thrace; the Gulf of Comidia, and that of Polmear, are parts of it.

PROPRÆTOR, a Name the Romans gave him who was to continue in the Office of Prætor after his year was out, for ſome particular Reaſon; he was alſo called Proprætor, who having bore the charge of Prætor, had afterwards the Government of a Pretorian Province In the Emperor's time he had the Name of Proprætor who was conſtituted by the Prince to govern one of the Provinces of the Empire, that is, thoſe which the Emperor had united to his own proper Dominion. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. lib. 7. cap. 43.

PROSA, or PRORSA, a Goddeſs of the Pagans that was propitious to Women in their Lying-in, by making the Infant come forth in the right manner; for Proſa in the old Latins ſignified right; hence Proſa Oratio in oppoſition to Verſa Oratio, meaning Poetry from its inverſion of the natural Order of the Words The Statue of this Goddeſs repreſented her the moſt upright of any of the reſt. Aulus Gellius, lib 15. cap. 16.

PROSELYTES, a Greek Word ſignifying a Stranger, whereof there were two ſorts among the Jews, to wit, the Proſelytes of Righteouſneſs, and the Sojourning Proſelytes, or Proſelytes of the Gate; the firſt ſubmitted to the Law of Moſes, and the other lived among the Jews, being obliged only to keep the ſeven Commandments of the Sons of Noah, which by the Jews were eſteemed as the Law of Nature, and every Body bound to obſerve them; the firſt whereof forbiding Idolatry: 2. To hallow the Name of God: 3. To forbid Murther: 4. To condemn Adultery and Inceſt: The 5th. forbidding Theft: 6. To do Juſtice, and ſubmit to it: 7. To forbid eating Things ſtrangl'd, and Blood; all theſe Commands, the Jews held, were immediately given by God; the firſt ſix were enjoin'd to Adam; and the ſeventh to Noah; and this was all the reveal'd Religion there was till Abraham. But as to the Proſelytes of Righteouſneſs, they were obliged to be circumcized of the Jews, and to offer Sacrifice; but this relates only to the Men, for the Women were oblig'd to receive Baptiſim, and have Sacrifice offered for them: But there was no ſuch thing required of the other Proſelytes, it was enough they ſolemnly promiſed to obſerve the foreſaid ſeven Commandments. Before they admitted a Gentile to Circumciſion, they examined the Sincerity of his Converſion, leaſt Fear, Intereſt, or Ambition might occaſion it; then they taught him ſeveral Articles of the Law, as what regarded the Unity of God, the Impiety of Idolaters, the Recompence of Vertue, &c. and when he was cured of the Wound of the Circumciſion, he was led to the Font, where his whole Body was dipp'd in the Reſervatory of Water. Children that had not attained the uſe of Reaſon, that is, Boys under thirteen years and a day, and Girls under twelve and a day, were to have the conſent of their Parents or Magiſtrates. This Baptiſm was never repeated, being very different from the Oblations uſed every day by the Jews. The effect of this new Profeſſion of Faith was altogether ſurprizing; for the Hebrew Doctors ſay, That the Proſelyte was look'd upon as born anew, ſo that they that were born of Gentile Parents, were not look'd upon as their Children when Jews; and if the Proſelyte chanced to have Children before his Converſion they were not to inherit his Eſtate. As for the Proſelytes of the Gate, it was enough that they made a ſolemn Promiſe, in preſence of three Witneſſes, to obſerve the ſeven Commandments of the Children of Noah, after which the Jews ſuffer'd 'em to live among 'em, believing, that they might be ſaved in obſerving theſe Commandments. As for thoſe who refuſed to obſerve this Law of Nature, they were not tolerated in Judæa; nor did this Cuſtom of receiving Proſelytes of the Gate, continue always amongſt 'em, for it ceaſed with the Jubilee, when the Tribes of Reuben, Gad, and Manaſſes were led in Captivity by Tiglath Pilneſer King of Aſſyria in the time of Joatham King of Judah about 757 before Chriſt. The Jews ſtill call Proſelytes the Gentiles and even the Chriſtians that embrace their Religion, and obſerve this Ceremony. When any one preſents himſelf with a Deſign to become a Jew, three Rabbins, or Men in Authority, are employ'd to uſe their Cunning to learn of him, the reaſon of this Reſolution, leaſt the motive might be Humane. If he perſiſts, notwithſtanding the Remonſtrance made him, That Moſes's Law is ſevere, that his Sectators are the contempt of Mankind, &c. He is circumcis'd and bath'd all over in Water in preſence of the three Rabbins that examined him, after which he is eſteem'd as much a Jew as if he were born one. As to the Women that become Proſelytes, the Rabbins ſay, conformably to their Talmud, That they are immerſed in Water to the Neck by other Women, and afterwards inſtructed in Moſes's Law by two Rabbins. Ferrand. R. Leon de Modena coutumes & ceremoines des Juifs.

PROSERPINA, the Daughter of Ceres, was ſtolen by Pluto the God of Hell, after which he married her; Ceres not being able to live without ſeeing her Daughter, made an Agreement with Pluto, that Proſerpina would ſpend ſix Months in the year with her Husband, and the other ſix with Ceres upon the Earth. The meaning of the Fable is this: Ceres, which ſignifies the Earth, gives Life to Proſerpina, which denotes the Seed; this latter continues the ſix Winter Months in the Boſom of the Earth, but ſhoots out in the Spring-time, and appears the other ſix Months above Ground. Proſerpina was called Pherephratta, becauſe Dio or Ceres her Mother had introduced Tillage and Husbandry into Sicily. Ovid. lib. 5. Metam S. Auguſt. lib. 7. de Civ. Dei. Euſebius, lib. 3. Præp. Evang. Claudian de rapt. Proſer.

PROSPER of Aquitain, Secretary to Pope Leo I. was a vigorous Defender of the Books of S. Auguſtin againſt the Semi-Pelagians and Prieſts of Marſeilles. He refuted alſo Caſſian the Author of the Collations or Conferences. It's thought he died ſoon after he had finiſhed his Chronicle in 455, which was continued from Adam to that time. He writ, beſides, a Poem againſt the Ungrateful; but the three Books of The Contemplative Life are none of his, but Julius Pomerus Victor, de Cyclo Paſch. The Criticks hold alſo, That the two Books of the Vocation of the Gentiles, which ſome have attributed without any good Grounds, firſt, to S. Ambroſe, and afterwards to this Saint, do neither belong to him nor to Proſper Biſhop of Orleans, who was his Contemporary, and to whom Sidonius Apollinaris wrote a Letter, which begins thus, Dum Laudibus ſummis S. Anrianum, &c. nor to that Proſper who ſubſcribed to the Council of Carpentras in 525, and to that of Veſon in 529. It's more probable the Author was an African, and the ſame that wrote the Letter to Demetriades, hitherto ill attributed to our S. Proſper; and truly the Stile of theſe Pieces, where are ſo many Rhimes and Antitheſes, and the turn of the Thought are altogether conformable to the Africans way of Writing. *Gennad. de Script. PROSPER (Alpin) of Venice, a learned Phyſician, lived in 1591, and hath left very curious Treatiſes of Phyſick, Plants, &c.

PROTAGORAS of Abdera, a Sophiſt that was firſt a Porter, and afterwards the Diſciple of Democritus. He was baniſhed from Athens for his Atheiſm. He writ ſeveral things, and died in his Travels aged 90 years. Diogenes Laertius lib. 9. vitæ Phil. Athenæus lib. 8. Aulus Gellius, lib. 5. cap. 3. Suidas in Πρωτ.

PROTERIUS Biſhop of Alexandria, conſtituted by the Orthodox Prelates in the place of Dioſcorus in 452, which occaſioned great Strife and Bloodſhed. The Emperor Mercian baniſhed the Enemies of Proterius, but that Prince dying, they returned to Alexandria, and ordained one Timothy, their Chief, to be their Biſhop, and aſſaſſinated Proterius in the Veſtry, at the Feaſt of Eaſter in 457. Evagrius, lib. 2. cap. 5. Liberat. Brev. cap. 14, & 15.

PROTESTANTS, a Name taken by the People of ſeveral Imperial Towns, and others, in Germany in 1529. becauſe they proteſted againſt a Decree made in the Diet of Spire, by Ferdinand, Archduke of Auſtria, and other Roman Catholick Princes; and demanded Liberty of Conſcience, till the Holding of a Council, in purſuance of a Decree made in 1526. Sleidan Comment, &c.

PROTEVANGELION, the Name of a Book attributed to S. James, which treats of the Birth of the Holy Virgin and that of our Saviour. It was brought firſt from the Eaſt by Poſtelus in Greek, who tranſlated it into Latin, affirming, that it's publickly read in the Eaſtern Church, and formerly believed to have been wrote by the ſaid James, firſt Biſhop of Jeruſalem, but the Fables wherewith it's ſtuffed evidence the contrary.

PROTEUS, made by the Poets to be the Son of Neptune, could change his Shape at his pleaſure: What gave occaſion to the Fable, was, That Proteus King of Egypt had his Dominion all along the Sea-ſide, and changed his Cloaths almoſt every day, and eſpecially his upper Garment, which was of different Colours. Ovid. lib. 8. Met. Diod. lib. 2 Bibl.

PROTHESIS was a Name given by the Greeks to a Table, whereon the Bread and Wine were put, before they were carried to the great Altar to be conſecrated. The word Protheſis ſignifies in this place Preparation, becauſe things are prepared on the little Altar before they are placed on the great one. F. Simon.

PROTHONOTARY, has a different Signification in the Greek Church from what it has in the Latin; for in the firſt Protonotarius, is the Name of one of the great Officers of the Church of Conſtantinople, that takes place next the Patriarch, and writes all the Diſpatches he ſends to the Grand Signior; he has, beſides, power to have an Inſpection over the Profeſſors of the Law, into Purchaſes, Wills, and the Liberty given to Slaves; but in the Roman Church, they were formerly called Prothonotaries, who had the charge of writing the Acts of the Martyrs, and the Cirmcumſtances of their Death, but now 'tis a Title of Honour in the Court of Rome, whereunto is attributed many Privileges, as Legitimating Baſtards, making Apoſtolick Notaries, Doctors of Divinity, Doctors of the Canon and Civil Law; there are twelve of them, which they call at Rome Protonotarii Participantes, to diſtinguiſh them from the others who are called Non Participantes, and whoſe number is not fixed. Prothonotary, in the Law of England, is a chief Clerk of the Common Pleas, and King's-Bench, whereof the firſt has three, the other one. He of the King's-Bench Records all Actions Civil; thoſe of the Common Pleas Enter and Inroll all manner of Declarations, Pleadings, Aſſizes, Judgments, and Actions; they make out all Judicial Writs, except Writs of Habeas Corpus and diſtringas Jurator: They alſo make out Writs of Execution and of Seiſin, and Writs of Privilege: They alſo Enter and Inroll all Common Recoveries, &c. Blount's Law-Dictionary.

PROTOGENES, an ancient famous Painter, born in the City of Caunas in Cilicia, imploy'd much time to finiſh his Works. It was he that drew the Picture of Jalyſus, a famous Hunter in the Iſle of Rhodes, which was ſo admired by Apelles, that he confeſs'd, it was the fineſt in the World. This ſame Picture is obſerv'd by Hiſtorians to have preſerv'd the City of Rhodes when Demetrius, King of Macedon laid Siege to it; for it being not to be taken but on the ſide that the Houſe of Protogenes ſtood, that King choſe rather to raiſe his Siege than ſet it on fire, and deſtroy ſo admirable a Work; coming alſo to know, that during that Siege, the Painter ceaſed not to work in an Houſe out of the Town notwithſtanding the noiſe of Arms, Trumpets, and other Warlike Inſtruments, he came to him, and asked him, How he dared do ſo, and whether he believed himſelf ſafe in the midſt of the Enemies of the Rhodians; he reply'd, He well knew that ſo great a Prince as Demetrius made War againſt the Rhodians, and not againſt Arts, which highly pleaſed that Conqueror, and heightened the Eſteem he had for him. It's ſaid, That all the time he was about this Picture he eat nothing but Lupins, which is a ſort of flat and bitter Pea, leaſt the Vapours that other Meat ſends ordinarily to the Brain, ſhould leſſen the force of his Wit, or darken his fine Imagination, that enabled him to proceed with Succeſs; and to make the Picture the more laſting, he covered it with four lays of Colours, that as time ſhould wear one away, that underneath ſhould ſtill appear freſh.

PROTOSYNCELLUS, one of the chief Eccleſiaſtical Dignities amongſt the Greeks, as being the head Domeſtick in the Patriarchal Palace, and the Patriarch's Vicar.

PROVENCE, Lat. Provincia, one of the Southern Provinces of France, and the firſt part conquered by the Romans, who reduced it into a Province, from whence it had its Name. It's bounded on the Eaſt with the Maritime Alps, on the South by the Mediterranean-Sea, on the W. by the Rhoſne. It was formerly part of Gallia Celtica, Liguria, and Gallia Braccata of Narbonne; and had the Name of Celtoliguria. It now takes in alſo the Earldom of Forcalquier, that is united to it; Avignon and the Earldom of Venaiſſain belonging to the Holy See; the County of Nice to the Duke of Savoy and the Principality of Orange. Its Capital City is Aix; the others are Arles, Avignon, Marſeilles, Apt, &c. After the Romans had it, it became ſubject to the Viſigoths, Burgundians, Oſtrogoths, and to the Kings of France, and laſtly, to particular Earls, whereof the firſt was Robaud, or Ratbald, who was ſucceeded by Boſon; theſe Earls Governed about the Years 915 and 920; and thus it continued with the changes of Families till 1481, when Charles, Earl of Maine, the laſt Earl of Provence, gave it to Lewis XI. King of France, his Couſin German, from which time it has been united to the Crown of France. Its Air is very good, and Soil fertil in Corn, good Oyl, Saffron, Figs, Olives, Oranges, Citrons, Prunes, Pomgranates: Has the conveniency of good Ports, as Marſeilles, Toulon, &c. It's watered with curious Rivers, as the Rhoſne, the Var, &c. It has ſeveral Mountains and ſome Woods. This Province is forty four Leagues in length, thirty two in breadth, and its circumference 158. Honorus Bouch. Hiſt. de Prov. Ruffi. des Com. de Prov.

The United-PROVINCES, called The States-General, Lat. Provinciæ Fœderati Belgii, or Belgium unitum & Batavum, are thoſe Provinces that in the 16th. Age revolted from the Spaniſh Government, united together and formed a Republick.

lick. They are ſeven in number, Holland, Zealand, Lower Guelderland, and the County of Zutphen, Friezland, Over-Yſſel, the Lordſhip of Utrecht, and that of Groeningen. Theſe Provinces lie about the Mouths of the Meuſe and Rhine, in the Northern part of the Low-Countries, between the Territories of the King of Spain in Flanders, England ſeparated from 'em by the Sea, and ſeveral Principalities of the Empire. The Civil Wars of the Low-Countries begun in 1566, and laſted till the Peace of Munſter in 1648, except a Truce of twelve years made by the Mediation of King Henry IV. in 1609. The fear of the Inquiſition, and of loſing their ancient Privileges was the principal Occaſion of theſe Wars. The Severity of the Duke of Alva, the change of Religion, and the demand of the Tenth Penny added to it. Cardinal Granville, who treated the People too imperiouſly, begun to make 'em murmur, and at laſt made 'em revolt. Philip II. King of Spain, ſent to the Dutcheſs of Parma, Governeſs of the Low-Countries, to publiſh the Council of Trent, and eſtabliſh the Inquiſition. The States of Brabant oppoſed it ſo, that the Governeſs fearing a Rebellion revok'd the Inquiſition by a publick Declaration. The Gentry of the Country met afterwards at Gertrudenberg, and leagued together for the Preſervation of their Liberties. The Governeſs ſeem'd alarm'd at this Conſpiracy, tho' the Count Barlamont, in deriſion, call'd it the Aſſembly of Beggars; which they hearing, wore on their Cloaths the Figure of a wooden Diſh, with theſe Words, Servants to the King, even to beggary; as if this had been the ſignal of an univerſal Inſurrection, the Proteſtants ran to Arms, ſeiz'd Towns, and broke down Images. Hereupon the King of Spain, ſent the Duke of Alva into the Low-Countries, where he governed five years with unheard of Cruelty, boaſting, that during that time he had diſpatch'd by the hands of the Common Executioner above 18000 Men, and rais'd Forfeitures to eight Millions of Gold a year; this Conduct irritated the People ſo, that the Spaniſh Soldiers mutinying and plundering Antwerp in 1576; the Catholick Provinces fearing the like Uſage enter'd into a Confederacy at Ghent, with thoſe of Holland and Zealand; and this was called the Pacification of Ghent. In the mean time the States eſtabliſhed themſelves better and better, and form'd what we call the United Provinces. In their Aſſemblies they gave their Voices in this Order, Guelderland, with Zutphen, Holland, Zealand, Utrecht, Frieze, Over-Yſſel, and Groeningue, with the Ommelandes. Each Province ſends Deputies to the Hague, where they form three Aſſemblies or Colleges, the States-General, the Council of State, and Chamber of Accounts. All the Provinces muſt agree in the Reſolutions taken in the Aſſembly of the States-General, becauſe nothing is carried on there by plurality, but univerſality of Voices; each Province in particular preſides a Week; the Province of Gueldreland is the chief, becauſe the moſt ancient, and that which firſt propos'd the Union. Commerce and Manufacturies render theſe Provinces ſo very powerful, that they have footing in all parts of the World. The Province of Holland has two famous Companies of Merchants, one for the Eaſt and the other for the Weſt-Indies. The firſt is the moſt powerful, and ſeems to be a Commonwealth of it ſelf; it keeps 18000 Men in pay, and imploys 80000 at work. The Admiralty has five places of Seſſion, and as many Magazines, viz. Roterdam, Amſterdam, Hoorn, Middlebourg and Harlingen, the three firſt in Holland, the fourth in Zealand, and fifth in Friezland. The United Provinces are alſo very powerful at Sea, being able, upon occaſion, to fit out a Fleet of 100 Men of War; nor is there any State in the known World, which in ſo narrow a compaſs has ſo many ſtrong Holds. The King of France over-run a great part of it in 1672, through the Miſunderſtanding of ſome of the greater Cities. For Religion, the Reformed is the moſt followed, tho' all other Sects are tolerated. Strada. Grotius. Bentivoglio, &c.

PROVINS, a City in France in Brie, whereof it is the Capital, ſtanding upon the Vouſie, and famous for its Roſes. It's called in Latin Provinum. It's believed to be the Agendicum of the Ancients, but others would have it to be Sens.

PROVOST of the King's Houſhold, or Grand Provoſt of France, is the ordinary Judge of the King's Houſe, that takes cognizance of all Affairs Civil and Criminal; is the moſt ancient Judge in the Kingdom. He can alſo take notice of all Crimes in Paris, either for or againſt the King's Family. He has two Deputies of the long Robe, and four of the ſhort Robe; the firſt take cognizance of Civil Matters, and the other try Criminal Cauſes, and can call to their Aſſiſtance ſix Maſters of Requeſt. There's no Appeal from their Sentence. Mem. Hiſt.

PRUDENTIUS (Aurelius Clemens) a Chriſtian Poet who flouriſhed in the IVth. Age, and was a Spaniard, as ſome think, of Saragoſſa, in the Reign of Theodoſius the Great. He was at firſt an Advocate, or Bariſter, but its believed he was afterwards advanced to be Prefect of the City, and Conſul. There are ſeveral Editions of his Works; which are, Pſychomachia, Cathemerenon, or, Hymns for every Day. Periſtephanon, or, The Crowns of the Martyrs. Apotheoſis Hamartigenia. Enchiridion Veteris & N. Teſtamenti. The Life of Prudentius, together with a Critick upon his Works, may be ſeen in the Tenth Tome of The Univerſal Bibliotheque.

PRUME or PRUYM, a little Town and Abby of Benedictine Monks in the Foreſt of Ardenne, between the Electorate of Trier and Luxemburg; it is an Eccleſiaſtical Principality of the Empire, whereof the Abbot was formerly Lord, but ſince 1576, the Elector of Trier has it, and it was confirm'd to him in the Diet of Ratisbonne in 1654. All the Monks here muſt be nobly born according to the Cuſtom of all other Abbies, which are Principalities of the Empire. Heiſſ. Hiſt. de l'Empire.

PRUSIA, a Town of Bithynia, built by Pruſias. It was at firſt a Biſhop's See, under the Archbiſhop of Nicomedia, and afterwards became a Metropolis it ſelf; the Turks call it Buruſs.

PRUSIAS, ſurnamed Cynegus, King of Bithynia, ſucceeded his Brother Zielas, was a Politick Prince, and always adhered to the ſtrongeſt ſide. Hannibal fled to him for Succors againſt the Romans, but could obtain nothing but fair Promiſes. After the Defeat of Perſeus he came to Rome, where he was kindly received, and where his Policy engaged him in a weakneſs unworthy of a Prince, which made him acknowledge himſelf to be the People of Rome's Freeman. Livy, lib. 44. Plutarch Polyb.

PRUSSIA, Boruſſia and Pruthenia, bounded on the N. by the Baltick Sea, on the W. by Pomerania; by Poland and Mazovia on the S. and Lithuania and Samogitia on the E. This Province was under Sovereign Dukes of it own, till that the Knights of the Teutonick Order in the XIIIth. Age poſſeſs'd themſelves of it, after a long and tedious War; but in 1454, the Weſtern part was ſubdued by the Poles, and in 1525 the Eaſtern part ſubmitted to that Crown alſo; Albert Marqueſs of Brandenburg, 34th. and laſt Maſter of that Order, doing Homage, and obtaining from that Crown the Eaſtern part, with the Title of Duke of Pruſſia. It ſtands now divided into two parts the Regal and the Ducal Pruſſia, in the firſt whereof belonging to Poland, are the Cities of Dantzick, Mariemburg, Elbin and Thorn; in the ſecond belonging to Brandenburg, are Konisberg, Memel, &c. but the Regal Pruſſia (Dantzick excepted) was yielded by a Treaty in 1655 to the Crown of Sweden. The Country is fruitful, but very woody. The ancient Inhabitants were barbarous, and worſhipp'd the Sun, Moon, and Thunder. On the Coaſt of the Ducal Pruſſia is found all the yellow Amber that is uſed in the World, which is farmed by the Duke of Brandenburg for 20000 Crowns a year. Pruſſia has many ſafe Harbours and pleaſant Bays upon the Baltick Sea. It had heretofore 72 noble Caſtles, and 62 Cities and great Towns, the principal of which were erected by the Knights of the Teutonick Order, which are ſince much encreaſed by the Poles and Brandenburghers. Extended from Torun S. to Menul N. it is 58 P. miles, and in breadth it is 50. The Rivers that Water it are the Viſtula, the Cronon, or Niemen, Nogat, Elbing, Weſer, Paſſar Alla, Prægel, Oſſa, Drebſniez, Lica, and Lavia, and many others. It has ſome Lakes ſeven P. miles in compaſs. The old Inhabitants have been for the moſt part extirpated, and thoſe it now hath, are Poliſh and German Colonies, ſo that no part of Poland has ſo many Cities as Pruſſia. The Earth is ſo fruitful in Corn and Cattel, that it can eaſily ſuſtain its Inhabitants and tranſport great Quantities into other Countries. It had four Biſhopricks, Warmiland, Culm, Samzland, and Pomeſan, but they are all united to that of Culm and Warmiland. Guagninus in deſc. Sarmat. Chithræus in Sax. Cromer, &c.

PRYTANÆUM, a Place in Athens, where the Judges and Magiſtrates ſate, and where thoſe were maintained at the publick Charge, who had done any conſiderable Service to the State: There being alſo an Altar whereon was kept Fire continually, conſecrated to the Goddeſs Veſta; but they were not Virgins, but Widows, that had the keeping of this Fire, whom they called Prytanitides. Suidas, Plutarch in Numa.

PRYTANES, the Name which the Athenians gave to their Judges, whereof there were fifty taken out of each Tribe in Attica, which made up the Council of five hundred. Spon. Voyage de Italy, &c. in 1675.

PSAMENYTUS, King of Egypt, called Semnefertus by Pliny, was, as ſome would have it, the Son of Necus, and Grandſon of Amaſis. Cambyſis, King of Perſia, overthrew him in Battle; and he fled to Memphis, where he was taken and uſed very ſeverely both in his own Perſon, and in the Perſons of his Family. His Daughter being ſent to draw Water, and his Son ſent with two thouſand Egyptians, with Halters about their Necks, into his preſence, whereat he was not diſmayed. But when he ſaw one of his Friends at a diſtance begging of Alms, he was mightily concerned; for which Cambyſes asked him the reaſon; to whom he reply'd, That extream Sorrow was dumb, but that one might bewail the Miſfortune of a Friend. Cambyſes was ſo pleaſed with the Anſwer, that he ſent to ſave his Son that was gone to be executed. But his Orders came too late. Cteſias ſays this Prince was baniſhed to Sus; tho' Herodotus ſaith he was conſtrained to drink Bulls-blood till he died, for having contrived a Revolt among the Egyptians. It's ſaid there fell ſome Rain in his time at Thebes in Egypt, which was looked upon to be a great Prodigy

PSAMETICHUS, King of Egypt, was dethroned by eleven other Kings that reigned in the Country, but was re-eſtabliſhed and expelled all the reſt. He lived in the year of the World 3357, and reigned 58 years. Herodotus, lib. 2. in Euterpe, & lib. 3. or Thalia. Salian & Torniel in Annal. Veter. Teſt.

PSAPHO, a Native of Libya in Africa, was contemptible in his Country, and being not able to bear it, he bethought himſelf of a way to retrieve it, by getting of ſome Birds, and teaching of them theſe words, μέγας Θεὸς Ψάφων, Pſapho is a great God. And when he had done, he let them fly. At the hearing of which words, from the Birds, the People were much aſtoniſhed, and conceived a grand Veneration for Pſapho. Alex. ab Alex.

PSELLUS (Michael) a Greek Author ſurnamed Πολυγραφώτατος, that is, famous for a great number of Works, lived in the time of the Emperor Conſtantine Ducas, and was Tutor to that Emperor's Son. Ann. Commene lib. 5. Alexiad. Cedrenus, and Zonaras in Annal.

PSYCHE, a kind of a Goddeſs of the Ancients, by which they underſtood the Soul, called by the Greeks Ψυχὴ. Apuleius and Fulgentius have deſcribed the Amours of Cupid with this Goddeſs, and their being married together. Pſyche was repreſented with the Wings of a Butterfly on her Shoulders; for that the nimbleneſs of this Creature expreſt in ſome meaſure the Nature and Properties of the Soul; which, according to their Sentiments, was nothing but Air and a Blaſt. The Butterfly was alſo the Emblem of the Soul, becauſe that when a dead Man was painted, they repreſented a Butterfly coming out of his Mouth, and flying into the Air.

PSYLLI, a People of Africa who inchanted Serpents, ſo that they fled away at the ſight of them. Aulus Gellius tells a pleaſant Story of them after Herodotus; That theſe Pſylli having no Water, reſolved to make War upon the South-wind, that had dried up their Water, and ſo marched againſt it; but the South-wind buried them under the Sand. Xenophanes of Collophon has writ a Poem of the Pſylli. Herodotus lib. 4. Plut. in Cal. Utic. Aul. Gell. lib. 16. cap. 11.

PTOLEMAIS, a very ancient City in Phœnicia, ſeated on the Mediterranean Sea, and called Ace, or Acre. The Tribe of Aſher was never able to reduce this City, it being in thoſe early Days very ſtrong, rich, and populous, and of a Triangular Form, two of its ſides being ſecured the Sea, and the third fortified to a Wonder. Its Haven was on the South, large, ſafe, and admitting Gallies within the Walls, to the great inriching of the Inhabitants. In the year of Chriſt 1667, there periſhed here 2000 Jews. It was taken by the Weſtern Chriſtians in 1104. Retaken by Saladin in 1187. Taken again by Richard, King of England, in 1190. The Nubian Geographer ſaith, That when this City was in the Hands of the Weſtern Chriſtians it was two miles in length, but not of equal breadth. On the Weſt ſide it had a Lake of freſh Water, twelve miles ſquare. It was made a Roman Colony by Claudius Cæſar. And during the Holy-war was the Seat of the Knights of S. John of Jeruſalem. In 1290 the Saracens having taken all the other Towns which the Weſtern Chriſtians had taken during the Holy-war, they marched againſt this Place laſt of all, and the Chriſtians deſerting it, the Saracens dug up the Foundations, and from thence forward Palæſtine became inacceſſible to our Armies. It took the Name of Ptolemais from one of the Kings of Egypt, being before called Acca. To the Eaſt it had a very fruitful Field, in which Tulck, King of Jeruſalem, was ſlain hunting of a Hare, his Horſe falling upon him. This City was taken firſt from the Chriſtians by Omar, a Saracen, An. Chr. 636. After they had ruined it in 1291. the Sultans of Egypt rebuilt it, and it continued under them till 1517, when it was taken by Selem, the Grand Seignior of the Turks.

PTOLEMAIS, one of the five Cities of the ancient Pentapolis in Egypt, and now call'd Ptolometa; 'twas formerly a Biſhop's-See, and had the Learned Syneſius for one of its Prelates: This Syneſius, in 1411, held a Synod againſt Andronicus, Governour of Pentapolis in Egypt, who, beſides his Oppreſſion of the People, had been guilty of moſt horrible Outrages againſt God and Religion, being at laſt ſo haughtily blaſphemous as to ſay, That none of the Prieſts or Biſhops ſhould eſcape his Severity, tho' they held Jeſus Chriſt by the Feet: This impious Inſolence made the Biſhops meet and excommunicate him; the Form of which Sentence is ſtill extant in one of Syneſius's Epiſtles. It ſtands thus; The Church of Ptolemais Orders, and gives Notice, to the reſt of her Siſter Churches all the World over, That no Place, conſecrated to God's Service, may be open to Andronicus, Thoantes, or any of their Party, and that all Houſes, dedicated to Religion, may be ſhut againſt them; for the Devil has no Admittance into Paradiſe, or if he could ſteal in by ſurprize, he would quickly be turn'd out. All private Perſons therefore, and Magiſtrates, are forbidden to admit 'em, either to their Table or Houſes, and eſpecially the Prieſts, who are neither to ſalute 'em, if Living, nor ſo much as to follow 'em to the Grave, when Dead: And if any Perſon ſhall contemn this Order, becauſe it comes from a Little See, and entertains the Perſons condemn'd, as if there was no Neceſſity to obey the Decrees of a Poor Church, ſuch a Perſon may pleaſe to know, that he makes a Schiſm in the Church which our Saviour order'd ſhould be but one; and that we ſhall treat ſuch Perſons, let them be Deacons, Prieſts, or Biſhops, in the ſame manner we do Andronicus. This Excommunication made ſuch an Impreſſion upon Andronicus, that he threw himſelf at the Biſhops Feet, ask'd their Pardon, and was admitted to Penance. Syneſius Ep. 57, 58. 72. Baron. in Annal. Godeau, Hiſt. Eccl. 5. Siecle. T. 5. Concil.

PTOLEMY (the Young) Son of Ptolemy Auletes, and Brother to Ptolemy Denys, or Bacchus, King of Egypt, married his Siſter Cleopatra, and was named King of Cyprus by Julius Cæſar. But after the death of his Brother poſſeſs'd Egypt, and accompanied Cleopatra to Rome, where he was forced to ſuffer Julius Cæſar, and Mark-Antony, to have Commerce with his Wife. He married his other Siſter Arſinoe, by Cæſar's Order, whom he ſent afterwards to Epheſus, and was aſſaſſinated there. Arſinoe having preſumed to declare War againſt Cæſar, was vanquiſhed and brought in triumph to Rome, where Mark-Antony put her to Death at the Inſtigation of Cleopatra. Plutarch, Juſtin.

PTOLEMY I. of that Name, King of Egypt, was ſurnamed Lagus. He was Commander under Philip, King of Macedon, and imployed afterwards by Alexander the Great, and became very famous and renowned. He was alſo ſurnamed Soter, becauſe he ſaved the Life of that Prince by covering his Body in a Battle he fought againſt the Oxydracans, a People of India. It was he that ſeized upon Beſſus, who had aſſaſſinated Darius, King of Perſia, and gave him up to Alexander. After Alexander's death he ſeized upon Egypt, and buried his Corps at Alexandria. Perdiccas and Arideus endeavoured in vain to diſpoſſeſs him of this new Sovereignty, which Ptolemy increaſed with new Conqueſts. He took Jeruſalem, and vanquiſhed Antigonus, King of Syria. But Antigonus afterwards re-took Syria, and Demetrius, his Son, won the Battle before the Iſle of Cyprus. Ptolemy reconquered Syria, Phœnicia, and the Iſle of Cyprus, after Antigonus's death, and ſubdued alſo the Cyrenians and took the City of Gaza. He cauſed his Son Ptolemy Philadelphus to be crowned before his Death. He died after he had reigned 40 years in the 124th. Olympiad, and the 470th. of Rome. Polyb. lib. 2. Juſtin lib. 17. Euſebius in Chron. &c.

PTOLEMY II. called Philadelphus, by way of Raillery, becauſe he made away with his Brethren, was a Prince that was a Lover of Books and of Learned Men. Demetrius Phalereus, his Library-Keeper, made it his Buſineſs to get together, from all parts of the World, all Books of Worth, and ſuch as he thought pleaſed the King, which amounted to the number of two hundred thouſand; others ſay more. And that he told that Prince, He hoped in a little time to make them up five hundred thouſand. Ptolemy, by his Advice, ſent to Jeruſalem for a Copy of the Old Teſtament, which he got tranſlated into Greek by ſeventy two Jews. Eleazer, the High-prieſt, ſent it him for that purpoſe, as judging his Library not compleat without it. He did thereupon give their Liberty to 120000 Jews that were Captives in his Kingdom, and ſent very magnificent Preſents to the Temple. He made an Alliance with the Romans, and died in the 3807 year of the World, 507 of Rome, and the 40th. of his Reign, ſince his Father had aſſociated him in the Government. As to the time when the Septuagint was tranſlated, whether in the Reign of Ptolemæus Lagus, or, in that of his Son Philadelphus, the Reader may conſult Dr. Hody's Diſſertation Contra. Hiſt. Ariſtæi, Printed at Oxford in 1685, in which this Author is of Opinion, That the Verſion of the Septuagint was made towards the latter end of the Reign of Philadelphus. To this Book there was an Anſwer Printed by Iſaac Voſſius, the year after, at London.

PTOLEMY III. ſurnamed Euergetes, ſucceeded his Father Ptolemy Philadelphus. Antiochus II. had married Berenice, this King's Siſter, and put her to Death. To revenge, which, Ptolemy made War upon him, ſeized upon Cilicia ſome Provinces beyond the Euphrates, and almoſt all Aſia. But he was obliged to return to Egypt, becauſe of a Revolt there. Joſephus ſaith, He offered Sacrifices to God in Jeruſalem. He died after he had reigned 26 years, in the year of the World 3833. And 'tis ſaid his Son poiſoned him. Juſtin, lib. 29, & 30. Polybius, lib. 2. Euſebius in Chron. St. Jerom, Joſeph. lib. 2. in Appion, &c.

PTOLEMY IV. ſurnamed Philopater, in way of Deriſion, becauſe that after he had put his Father to Death, he made away alſo with his Mother, Brother, and Siſter; others add, that falling in Love with a Strumpet Agathaclea, he likewiſe put his own Queen to death. He ſpent all his Reign in a very licentious manner, whereupon Antiochus III. ſurnamed the Great, willing to make uſe of ſo favourable a Conjuncture, declared War againſt him, but was vanquiſhed in the Battle of Raphia. He went afterwards to Jeruſalem, and would have entred into the Sanctuary. But the High-prieſt, Simeon II. oppoſed him, and God caſt a great dread upon the Army, which at the ſame time ſurprized Ptolemy; ſo that he returned to Alexandria in a great rage, and would have put all the Jews there to Death; but he relented. Joſephus miſtakes in taking this King for Ptolemy Phyſcon. He died after he had reigned 27 years Anno Mun. 3850. Polybius lib. 5. Juſtin lib. 30. Euſebius in Chron. St. Jerom. in Daniel. Torniel & Salian, &c.

PTOLEMY V. called Epiphanes, that is, Illuſtrious, was but four or five years old when his Father died. Agathocles, Siſter to Agathoclea the late King's Concubine, and their Mother Ananthe, had uſurped the Government. They did for ſome time conceal the King's Death, waſted the Treaſure, and would have put the young Prince to death; but the Egyptians freed him from this Danger, and put him under the Protection of the Romans. Antiochus VIII. that he might re take Syria, married his Daughter Cleopatra to Ptolemy; but ſhe preferred the Intereſt of her Husband before that of her Father; and ſo all his Meaſures were broke. Ptolemy left two Sons, and died after he had reigned 27 years, in the year of the World 3873, and 573 of Rome. Euſebius in Chron. St. Jerom in c. 11.

PTOLEMY VI. called by way of Raillery Philometer, becauſe he hated Cleopatra his Mother, would have preferred his younger Brother Ptolemy Phyſcon before him. He married his Siſter Cleopatra to Alexander Bala, or Balez, King of Syria, whom he dethroned. Ptolemy died after he had reigned 35 years, *An.Mun.*3908, in the 167th of the Greek Æra, that anſwers to the 608th. of Rome. Vid. ALEXANDER I. King of Syria.

PTOLEMY VII. called Phyſcon, that is, Debauched, and Euergetes II. by the Alexandrians named Cacergetes, made himſelf Maſter of Egypt after his Brother's Death; reigned 29 years; lead an idle and debauched Life; married his Siſter Cleopatra; had a Son called Memphiſus by her, whom he cruelly murthered, and ſerved to his Mother's Table, after he had divorced her, and married the young Cleopatra, the Daughter of Philometer. He, that he might pleaſe the Syrians that were weary of the Dominion of Demetrius Nicanor, gave them one Protarchus, a Merchant's Son, for their King. This young Man ſaying he was adopted by Antiochus Sidetes, took the Name of Alexander upon him, and was ſurnamed Zebina. Ptolemy Phyſcon died An. Mun. 3937. Strabo, lib. 17. Joſeph l. 13. Hiſt. & Cont.

PTOLEMY VIII. called Lathures, ſucceeded his Father Phyſcon. He was expelled from the Throne by his Mother Cleopatra, who for that purpoſe made uſe of the Forces of Alexander Jannes, King of the Jews; to be revenged on whom he entred into Judea, took Azoth, and defeated the Jews near unto Jordan, and committed unheard-of Cruelty upon the Inhabitants; but yet failing to Maſter Egypt, he retired to Cyprus. He had reigned twenty ſeven years before he was dethroned; but he was recalled after his Brother Ptolemy Alexander was killed, in 3962, or 63; and reigned till 3970, according to Euſebius, or 73, according our modern Writers, in 673 of Rome. Juſtin. lib. 33. Joſeph.lib. 13. &c.

PTOLEMY IX. called Alexander. Vid. ALEXANDER I. King of Egypt.

PTOLEMY XI. Vid. ALEXANDER III.

PTOLEMY XII. called Auletes, was natural Son to Ptolemy Alexander, and King after Alexander III. His Subjects dethroned him, and made Berenice, one of his Daughters, that had married Archelaus a Prieſt of Pontus, Queen in his ſtead. Auletes came to Rome, to demand Succours, but failing, retired to Epheſus. But ſome time after Gabinius, the Proconſul of Syria, reſtored him to his Throne by Pompey's Order. He put his Daughter to death, and died ſome time after (having reigned 13 years) to wit, in the year of Rome 703, as we underſtand by a Letter of Cælius to Cicero, which is the fourth of the eighth Book. Strabo, lib. 17. Dion, lib. 39. Appian. lib. 2. de Bel. Civ.

PTOLEMY XIII. called Denys, or Bacchus, reigned after Auletes with his Siſter Cleopatra, for five years only. 'Twas he, by the Advice of Theodorus and Achillas, that murthered Pompey, after the Battle of Pharſalia, when he came to ſecure himſelf there. And he was no more faithful to Cæſar, but he was aware of him. He was drowned in the Nile, in the 707th. of Rome. Appian. lib. 2. de Bell.Civ.

PTOLEMY, King of Cyprus, was of the Houſe of the Egyptian Kings, of a very lewd Life. Cato, in quality of a Quæſtor, was ſent to Cyprus to diſpoſſeſs this Prince, who put himſelf to Death at the Arrival of that Roman, in the 698th year of Rome. Velleius Paterculus Hiſt. lib. 2.

PTOLEMY (Claudius) a famous Mathematician, was of Peluſium, and flouriſhed in Alexandria in the ſecond Age, in the Reign of Antoninus Philoſophus. He writ curious things both in Aſtronomy and Geography. His Almageſtum, in thirteen Books, De Judiciis Aſtrologicis, in quarto, Phaniſperium, &c. His Syſtem, and that of Copernicus, and of ſome other more modern Writers, who make the Earth to move, vary [illegible]y much. The Ptolemaick Hypotheſis divides the World into two Regions, the Æthereal and Elementary: The Æthereal Region begins at the Primum Mobile, which in the Space of Twenty four Hours, moves from Eaſt to Weſt. According to his Syſtem, there are Ten Heavens within the Primum Mobile, that is, the double Chryſtalline, the Firmament, and the Seven Planets: He ſuppoſes the Two Chryſtallines between the Primum Mobile and the Firmament to ſolve ſome Irregularities which he had obſerv'd in the Primum Mobile: The Elementary Region, which reaches to the Concavity of the Moon, comprehends the Four Elements of Fire, Air, Water, and Earth: His Terreſtrial Globe is made up of Earth and Water, and immoveably fix'd in the Centre of the World: The Element of Air encompaſſes the Earth, and is its ſelf encompaſs'd by the Element of Fire. Later Aſtronomers perceiv'd that ſeveral Appearances were not reconcilable with Ptolemy's Hypotheſis, therefore the moſt Learned in this Science follow the Syſtem of Copernicus. Suidas in Ptolem.

PTOLEMY ſurnamed Appion, King of Cyrene, between Egypt and Libya, was baſtard Son to Ptolemy Phyſcon, who having a great kindneſs for him, ſettled him there. He reigned about twenty years, and finding himſelf without Children, left the Romans his Heir. The Senate ordered, That the Cities of this little kingdom ſhould remain free. Juſtin lib. 39. Livy lib. 70. Euſebius in Chron. &c.

PTOLEMY called Ceraunus, King of Macedon, was Son to Ptolemy Lagus, by his firſt Wife Euridice. He traiterouſly killed Seleucus King of Aſia and Syria, in the year 473, and uſurped the Kingdom of Macedon. That he might accompliſh his Deſigns, he married his own Siſter Arſinoe; but he preſently baniſhed her to the Iſle of Samandrachi, and put her two Sons Lyſimachus aged 16, and Philip 12, to death. He reigned but one Year and five Months, having been killed in 474, with a great many of his People, by the Gauls, who under the Conduct of Belgius ravaged Illyrium and Macedonia. His Brother Meleager ſucceeded him. Juſtin lib. 17. & 24.

PTOLEMY, a Jew, the Son of Abobus, advanced himſelf ſo as to marry the Daughter of Simon Maccabæus, Prince of the Jews, and High-prieſt; but he aſſaſſinated Simon in a Feaſt, in the 3919th. year of the World, and at the ſame time kept his Widow and Sons Priſoners; and afterwards ſent to kill John named Hyrcanus, who was the third Son. But failing of that, he retired to Dagon, a Fortreſs above Jericho, where he was beſieged by Hyrcanus; but his Tenderneſs for his Mother and Brethren hindred him to take the Place. Ptolemy miſerably abuſing of them upon the Walls in his Sight. And no ſooner was Hyrcanus gone, but that he put them to death, and fled afterwards to Zeno, ſurnamed Cotylan, that was become Tyrant in the City of Philadelphia. Joſ. lib. 13. Hiſt. cap. 14, & 15. & lib. 1. de Bell. cap. 2.

PTOLEMY, a grand Heretick in the ſecond Age the Diſciple of Valentinus, called by Irenæus, Floſculus Valentini. He made a Sect apart, and added ſeveral Fopperies to thoſe of his Maſter; giving to God two Wives, Underſtanding, and Will; ſaying, that on them he engendred other Gods. There is a Letter of his to a Woman called Flora, preſerved by Epiphanius, which contains this Heretick's Sentiments of the Law of Moſes. Irenæus lib. 3. cap. 5. Tertullian. adv. Valent. Epiphanius.

PTOLEMY, a Phyſician, lived in the time of Auguſtus and Tiberius. He was an Egyptian Prieſt, and writ an Hiſtory of the Kings of his Country, ſome of which Appion hath tranſcribed. The Ancients make mention of it. Clem. Alex. lib. Strom. Euſebius lib. 10. Præp. Evang. c. 12. Tertullian in Apol. c. 19. St. Cyril,

PUBLICANS, among the Romans were thoſe who farmed the publick Revenue, and raiſed all ſorts of Taxes for the State. They were uſually Roman Knights, and might have Officers under them of divers Nations. But they were generally cruel Oppreſſors and Extortioners, horribly abuſing the Power given them, and hated by all Men, as appears in Holy-writ, and in the Life of Lucullus, as related by Plutarch.

PUBLIUS, a Mimick Poet, born in Syria, and eſteem'd at Rome for his Faculty in the 184 Olympiad, as we may learn from S. Jerom. He was a Favourite of Julius Cæſar's. Macrobius has preſerv'd ſome Fragments of his, and ſo has Aulus Gellius. Macrob. l. 2. Saturn. c. 7. Gell. l. 17. c, 14.

PUDICITIA, a Goddeſs adored by the ancient Heathens, under the form of a veiled Woman, and of an exceeding modeſt Countenance, which had two Temples at Rome, one in foro boario, belonging to the noble Roman Ladies, and the other in vico longo, appertaining to the Plebeians or Tradeſmens Wives; the ground of which Diſtinction was upon a Diſpute that aroſe between the Patrician Ladies and one Virginia, who was alſo of a Patrician Family, but married to a Plebeian called Volumnius, a Man of great Merit. This laſt, one day entring into the Temple of Pudicitia, whereof there was then but one only in Rome; the Roman Matrons, jealous of their own and Husband's honour, would have put her out; to whom ſhe replied, She was born noble, and that they had no reaſon to reproach her upon the account of her Husband, who had been twice Conſul, and acquired by his noble Actions and Imploys, as much glo[illegible] they might have by their Birth. But not to conteſt with them, ſhe departed, and laid a Project of building a Temple near unto her own Houſe, which ſhe conſecrated to Pudicitia by the Name of Plebeian, the other being named the Patrician Pudicitia; to which ſhe aſſembled ſeveral conſiderable Citizens Wives, told them of the Affront put upon her, and deſired them to frequent the Temple ſhe had built; exhorting them to diſtinguiſh themſelves as much by their Vertues from the Patricians, as they pretended, to be diſtinguiſhed from them by their Nobleneſs. This was in the Year of Rome, 459. Titus Livius l. 10. Foltus.

PUERTO-SANTO, an Iſland of Africa, in the Atlantick Ocean, near that of Madera. The Portugueſe diſcovered it in 1428, and are Maſters of it. 'Tis about eight Leagues in circumference.

PUERTO-SEGURO, a Town and Sea-port of America in Braſil, belonging to the Portugueſe.

PUERTO-VIEIO, a Town and Sea-port in South America, in Peru, and in the Province of Quitoa, belonging to the Spaniards, upon the Pacifick or South Sea, near unto the City of Quitoa.

PULCHELY, a large and indifferent well-built Bailiff Town on the Sea-ſhore in Carnarvanſhire, from London 177 m.

PULCHERIA, a brave Empreſs, was Daughter to the Emperor Arcadius, and Siſter to Theodoſius the Younger. She was at the Age of 16 declared Auguſta by Theodoſius, and ſhared with him in the Sovereign Power. She took particular care of that Prince's Education; and in 421 got him married to Athenais, Daughter to the Philoſopher Leontius. The Emperor's Eaſineſs to ſign all manner of Requeſts, made Pulcheria reprove him, which he took ſo ill, that he would have her ordained a Deaconeſs, which made her leave the Court. But Theodoſius dying in 450, ſhe got Marcian choſen, and married him. 'Twas through her care that the General Council of Chalcedon was aſſembl'd in 451. She died, aged 54, in 453. Leo in Epiſt. Theodoret. Niceph. &c.

PUPIENUS (Marcus Claudius Maximus) was choſen Emperor by the Senate to govern with Balbinus, after the Death of the Gordians. He oppoſed the Maximins, was a prudent Prince, and beloved by the People. But the Soldiers, becauſe they had not made him Emperor themſelves, aſſaſſinated him about the Year 228, he being aged 74 Years, and his Collegue 60. They reigned but for about ten Months or a Year. Julius Capitolinus in Gord. & Maxim. Herodian. l. 7. Aur. Victor. de Cæſar.

PURBACH, Purbachius, or Burbach (George) a German, born May 13. 1423. was a great Mathematician, and taught Philoſophy and Theology at Vienna. He went to Italy with Cardinal Beſſarion; laboured to abridge Copernicus's Syſtem, but had not finiſhed the ſixth Book, when he died ſuddenly at Vienna, Apr. 8. 1462, aged 39. Some of his Treatiſes have been publiſhed by Regiomontanus his Diſciple. Trithemius in Catal. Voſſius de Math. C 35. &c.

PURGATION CANONICAL, an Oath, by which a Man cleared himſelf of an Accuſation in preſence of a certain Number of credible Perſons, who affirmed they believed what he ſaid to be true. It was called Canonical, becauſe it was according to the Canon-law. And to diſtinguiſh it from the ordinary Purgation of Fighting, or tryal of Fire and Water. The Combat was perform'd in a Liſt. See CHAMPIONS. As for the Trial, the accuſed was ſometimes obliged to put his Arm in boiling Water. At other times to throw himſelf into ordinary cold Water, to ſee whether he ſhould ſink. Or was to carry a burning Iron in his Hands. Or walk upon live Coals. This Cuſtom was continued for ſeveral Ages among many Nations, and eſteemed ſo lawful, that they were called the Judgments of God. For ſuch was the Simplicity of thoſe times, that they thought God obliged to work Miracles, that Peoples Innocence might come to light. But theſe Abuſes were aboliſhed by little and little. Lewis the Meek forbad the Trial of cold Water in 840. The Trial of hot Iron and boiling Water was aboliſhed by the Emperor Ferdinand the IId. about 1240. And as for Duels Charles the Bald made very rigorous Ordinances againſt thoſe that ſhould endeavour to juſtifie their Innocence by their means. Spelman Gloſſar. Archæol.

PURIFICATION, a Jewiſh Ceremony, ordain'd by the Law of Moſes, where 'tis ſaid, that a Woman ſhould keep within 40 Days after her Lying-inn, if ſhe was brought to Bed of a Son, and 80 if of a Daughter, and when that time was expir'd, She was to go to the Temple, and offer a Lamb with a young Pidgeon or Turtle, or if ſhe were Poor, two Pidgeons or two Turtles. The Feaſt of the Purification among Chriſtians was inſtituted in honour of the Bleſſed Virgins going to the Temple, where according to cuſtom ſhe Preſented our Bleſſed Saviour, and offer'd two Turtles for him. The Inſtitution of this Feaſt is very Ancient, but being worn out in ſome circumſtances, 'twas Renewed again by the Emperor Juſtinian: There is a Homily upon this Feaſt, in the Bibliotheca Patrum, written by Methodius Biſhop of Tyre, who Flouriſh'd in the Third Century. Pope Sergius I. Added the Proceſſion with wax Tapers, to give a more ſenſible Repreſentation of the Myſtery; from whence it was call'd Candlemas-Day. Bollandus, and Bellarm.

PURIM is the Name which the Jews gave to one of their Feaſts celebrated in memory of Eſther, who prevented the Iſraelites being entirely deſtroy'd by the Conſpiracy of Haman. This Name has been given to this Feaſt, becauſe of the Purim or Lots, mention'd in the 9th. of Eſther. R. Leo of Modena ſaith, this Feaſt laſted two days, but 'twas the firſt that was only the Solemn-Day, and that they faſted the Evening before it. But yet that they might work and labour on both theſe Days. On the firſt they read over all the Book of Eſther, and at the time of reading of it, he obſerves, ſome hearing the Name of Haman pronounced, clapped their hands, to intimate they curſed him. They give alſo then very large Alms, Relations and Friends ſending to one another Preſents of things to eat, and all the day is ſpent in rejoicing and feaſting. Leo de Modena, Trait de Ceremonies, part 3. c. 10.

PURITANS, a ſort of Rigid Calviniſts, who appear'd in England, in 1565. or according to others, in 1568. Thuanus, in his Hiſtory for this year, gives this Account of them. ‘At the ſame time ſays he, in England, Coleman, Button, Hallingham, and others of the ſame Opinion, who believ'd or at leaſt, pretended ſo, that their Scheme of Religion was more pure and unexceptionable than that of others, began to queſtion the Receiv'd Diſcipline of the Church of England; and Oppoſe the Liturgy and Authority of the Biſhops, becauſe they ſaid, that theſe differ'd but little from the Church of Rome, and that for their Parts, they thought themſelves oblig'd to conform to the Plan of Geneva. And tho' they were check'd at firſt, yet their Party encreas'd to a conſiderable number: They had even ſome Biſhops enclinable to their Perſuaſion, beſides others of the Lay-Gentry, who had a mind to have ſome more of the Church Lands, not to mention the Common People, who are generally in Love with Novelties, and were beſt pleas'd, with thoſe that made moſt noiſe againſt the Pope. Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. 43. Spondan. A. C. 1565. See Presbyterians.

PUSSA, a Goddeſs of the Chineſes, whom Authors call the Chineſian Cybele. This Idol is repreſented ſitting upon the Flower of a Tree named in Latin Lotus, above the top-branches of the Tree, and having her two Hands in one another upon her Breaſt, beſides which ſhe has alſo ſixteen Arms, eight ſtretched out on the right ſide, and eight on the left; and in each hand a Sword, Knife, Book, Baſon, Wheel, and other myſterious and ſymbolical things. Her Ornaments were very coſtly, and ſhe ſhines all with Diamonds, and other precious Stones. Kircher de China.

LE PUY, Lat. Vellana, & Vellanorum Urbs, Anicium, Avitium & Podium, a City in France, the Capital of the Country of Velay, near the Borne and the Loire, and a Biſhop's See. It's a fair, large and ancient City, famous for the Cathedral of our Lady. Its Biſhop is Count of Velay, hath a right to the Pallium, and formerly coined Money. Its Chapter conſiſts of a Dean, Chaunter, Treaſurer, Veſtry-keeper, 24 Prebends, and two Abbots. This Town is under the Parliament of Tholouſe. And ſome Authors take it for the Ruiſſium of Ptolemy. The Biſhops of Aquitain met here in 1130, and condemned the Antipope Anacletus, approving alſo of the Election of Innocent IId. Baronius.

PUY (Charles du) called the Brave Montbrun, was one of the moſt Valiant Captains the French Proteſtants had during the War in the ſixteenth Age. He did his Party great Services in Dauphine. He was bred up in the Church of Rome; but one of his Siſters turning Proteſtant and retiring to Geneva, he went thither, in order, either to bring her back to his Communion, or to kill her. She, though advertiſed of his coming, received him without fear or diſturbance, and upon ſerious Conference with him, brought him over to Calviniſm, and he proved a moſt zealous Defender of it. The firſt Proofs of his Courage were in the Reign of Henry IId. and in the beginning of that of Francis IId. in 1560. Bouvier, Provoſt-Marſhal of France, in Dauphine, had Orders to ſecure him, but was himſelf taken by him. He fought very valiantly, upon ſeveral Occaſions; was at the Battle of Moncontour; paſſed the Rhine; joined himſelf to the Admiral Coligni, and entred into Dauphine. He had the Confidence to plunder the Baggage of King Henry III. in his Return from Poland, in 1574, and did it not out of Avarice, but pure Bravery; and therefore he reply'd to a Perſon, who reproach'd him with forgetting he was born a Subject, That Arms, and Play ſet all men upon a Level. He defeated the Swiſſers, and got great Advantages over them. But ſome time after he was himſelf defeated, and taken by Gordes near the Pont de Mirebel. Finding himſelf in danger of being killed or taken Priſoner, he jumped his Horſe that was much fatigued into a Mill-pond, and there broke his Thigh. He was proceeded againſt at Grenoble, condemned, and executed, dying with great Fortitude on the 12th. of Auguſt, 1575. But his Family was afterward, by the Peace of 1576, reſtored. Thuan. Hiſt. Corier Hiſt. de Dauph. a' Avila, &c.

PUY (Peter) Library-keeper to the French King, writ ſeveral things, as, A Treatiſe concerning the King's right over Eſtates and Lordſhips. Proofs of the Liberties of the Gallican Church. The true Hiſtory of the Condemnation of the Order of the Templars. A General Hiſtory of the Schiſm in the Church, from the year 1378 to 1428. Hiſtory of the Difference between Pope Boniface VIII. and Philip the Fair. Of the Salick-Law. Of Forfeiture for Treaſon. That the Demeſnes of the Crown are unalienable. Conſiderations on the Treaties of Madrid, Cambray, and Creſpy. Whether Preſcription takes Place among Sovereign Princes. A Hiſtory of Favourites. A Hiſtory of the Pragmatick Sanction. Concerning the Concordat, made at Bononia, between Pope Leo X. and King Francis I. A Treatiſe concerning Regency, and the Majority of the Kings of France. A Treatiſe of Contributions, which the Clergy are oblig'd to pay to the Crown in Caſes of Neceſſity. A Treatiſe of an Eccleſiaſtical Interdict, and ſeveral other Learned Pieces. He died at Paris, Decemb. 16. 1651, aged 69. Rigault writ his Life. His Works are a better Character of him than any Panegyrick, and therefore we ſhall ſay nothing farther.

PUY (Raymond du) Grand Maſter of the Order of St. John of Jeruſalem, was of Dauphine. He went to the Holy-Land with Godfrey of Bullen, and after the taking of Jeruſalem, devoted himſelf to ſerve the Poor and the Pilgrims in the Hoſpital of St. John in that City. Having already manifeſted his Valor in Battle, Gerard, who was Rector of the Hoſpital, dying, Raymond was choſen to ſucceed him. He preſcribed Laws to his Order, took in a great many Brethren, diſtinguiſhed them into three Degrees, to wit, Knights, Servants at Arms, and Chaplains. All his Conſtitutions were confirmed in 1123 by Pope Calixtus IId. and in 1130 by Innocent IId. who gave them for their Standard, A Croſs Argent in a Field Gules. He equipped his Troops, and ſent them to Baldwin, the ſecond King of Jeruſalem, aſſiſted him at the Siege of Aſcalon; and contributed very much to the taking of it. Upon which Pope Anaſtaſius granted the Order very great Privileges. And from this time forward it became very famous. Raymond died in 1160, and was ſucceeded by Auger de Balben. Boſio Hiſt. of the Order of St. J. of Jeruſalem. Naberat Privileges of the Order.

PUY-CERDA, the Capital City of the Earldom of Cerdigne to the Eaſt of that of Rouſillon, between France and Spain.

PUY (James) Cardinal, and Archbiſhop of Bari, born at Nice in Provence, in 1497. He ſtudied the Law under Peter de Accolti, one of the moſt Eminent of his Profeſſion, and was as conſiderable as his Maſter in that Faculty. He ſucceeded him likewiſe in his Employment, for he was Auditor of the Rota fifteen Years, and afterwards Dean; Pope Julius III. made him Archbiſhop of Bari, and then Cardinal, in 1551. He died in 1563. His Writings are, Deciſiones Rotæ. De Mutatione Monetarum, &c. Joffredy Hiſt. Nitienſ. Ughel. Ital. Sacr. Ghilini Teat. de Huom. Let. &c.

PUYSEGAR (James de Chatanet) Colonel of the Regiment of Piemont, and Lieutenant General in the Armies of Lewis XIII. and XIV. he bore Arms 40 years conſecutively, during which, he was at 120 Sieges, and 30 pitch'd Battles, paſt to that Poſt thro' all the Military Degrees, was not ſick, and did not receive the leaſt wound all the time. His Memoirs are worth peruſing, which were printed at Paris and Amſterdam in 1690.

PYGMALION, King of Tyre was the Son of Matgenus or Methres, whom he ſucceeded, and lived 56 years, whereof he reigned 47. Dido, his Siſter, was to have governed with him, but it was pretended, the Subjects thought it not convenient; ſhe married Sichæus who was the King's Uncle, and very rich, wherefore he put him to death, and Dido ſoon after departed the Kingdom. This was in the year of the World 3147. Poets ſay, Pygmalion was puniſhed for the hatred he bore to Women with the love he had to a Statue. Dius cited by Joſ. l. 1. Cont. Appion.

PYGMIES; the Prophet Ezekiel in the 27th Chapter of his Prophecy ſays, That the Pygmies who were upon the Towers hung their Quivers round the Walls; whereupon Nicholas de Lyra, following the moſt common Opinion, ſays, That Pygmies were placed upon the Walls of Tyre, not for the defence of the place, but to inform the Enemy by the ſight of 'em, that the Town by its proper ſituation was of ſtrength enough to defend it ſelf. This bears ſome Reſemblance with what the Jebuſites did, who made uſe of none but Lame and Blind Men to defend their Fortreſs of Sion againſt David, to ſhew the raſhneſs of ſo bold an Enterpriſe. Ariſtotle not only held that there were Pygmies, but ſaid, They lived near the Nile, and were continually in War with the Cranes; that they dwelt in Caverns under ground, and were therefore called Troglodites by the Greeks. S. Auguſtin ſeems to be of the ſame Opinion. Homer was the firſt that made mention of 'em, yet moſt Authors pretend, That this Race is altogether Chimerical, and P. Prade in his learned Commentary upon Ezekiel, explaining this paſſage of the Pygmies, ſays, That the Walls of Tyre were ſo high that ordinary Men on the top of 'em ſeem'd Pygmies to thoſe that beheld them from below. Tho' this Interpretation ſeems reaſonable, yet there are ſome who pretend, that in Ezekiel's time there were real Pygmies. The Samoides, People of Moſcovy, towards the Streights of Waigats may be put in this Number. Le Clark obſerves, That Ezekiel mentions no Pigmies, except in the Vulgar Tranſlation, the Word in the Hebrew is Gammadim, which occurs but once in the Old Teſtament, and is capable of ſeveral Significations; Fuller's Interpretation ſeems the moſt probable, who underſtands the Prophet to mean, the Inhabitants of a Town in Phœnicia, ſee his Miſcellania Sacra Lib. 6. c. 3. Le Clark Quæſt. 1. Acad. 7. Ezek. Ariſt. S. Auguſt.

PYGMIES-ISLAND, one of the Scotch Weſtern Iſlands which hath a Chappel, wherein the neighbouring People believe, That the Pygmies were anciently buried, becauſe, diging deep into the Earth, they find little round Heads and the ſmall bones of other parts of Humane Bodies, nothing derogating from the ancient Reports concerning the Pygmies. Buchanan.

PYLADES, the Son of King Strophius, and faithful friend to Oreſtes, whom his Father had ſaved and brought up in his Country. He was willing to die for his Friend, but Iphigenia coming to know her Brother Oreſtes ſaved him. Ovid and other Poets often mention him.

PYLADES, a famous Pantomime, born in Cilicia, who appear'd at Rome, in the time of the Emperor Auguſtus; and invented a ſort of Dance, conſiſting of Tragick, Comick, and Satyrick Argument, in which they were ſo much Maſters of their Geſtures, that they repreſented a whole Play, and made the Dialogue Intelligible. He ſet up a diſtinct Company, not concerning himſelf with the ordinary Way of Acting upon the Stage, but making himſelf admir'd, by a new Method of dumb Plays, in which the Actors only ſpoke with their Eyes, Geſtures, and Motion. Bathyllus practis'd the ſame Profeſſion, but he was famous for nothing but the Satyr and Comedy, whereas Pylades ſucceeded beſt upon grave Subjects, and Tragick Compoſitions; and for this Reaſon they made two Play-houſes. Plutarch. Sympoſ. Lib. 7. Lucian de Pantomimi Scæna. See Pantomimes.

PYLANDER (George) a German Phyſician, born in Miſnia, and lived in the Sixteenth Age in 1541. He lived long in Italy, and died at Milan. His Name was Thorman, but he changed it for Pylander, which is the Greek of it. He tranſlated Hippocrates out of Greek into Latin while he was at Rome, and compoſed ſome other things. Pet. Albinus in Chron. Miſn. Melch. Adam in vit. Germ. Med.

PYLEMENES, the name of an ancient King of Paphlagonia in Aſia minor, towards the Euxine Sea, which hath been common to the Kings that ſucceeded him. Homer in the ſecond Book of his Iliads makes mention of one Pylemenes, who was Captain of the Paphlagonians during the Siege of Troy, and in the fifth Book ſays, he was kill'd by Menelaus. Juſtin ſpeaking of the Alliance treated of between Mithridates and Nicomedes for the Conqueſt of Paphlagonia, ſaith, That Nicomedes gave the name of Pylemenes to his Son, that he might retain the Kingdom under that feigned name, and for that reaſon it was, ſays Pliny, that Paphlagonia was called Pylemenia. It's certain, that before the Romans entred into Aſia there had been ſeveral Pylemenes's Kings of Paphlagonia; Oroſius is the firſt that mentions them, when he ſpeaks of the Wars of the Romans againſt Ariſtonicus the Brother of Attalus in the year of Rome 672. Some time after the King Pylemenes, a friend to the Romans, being diſpoſſeſs'd of his Kingdom by Mithridates, was re-ſettled upon his Throne by the Romans, and after his death Paphlagonia was reduced to a Province. But Authors do not yet agree touching the re-eſtabliſhment of Pylemenes, and the end of the Kingdom of Paphlagonia. Spon, Recherches Curieuſes de Antiquite.

PYLUS, a City of Ælis near the River Peneus, now called Pilos. There was another Town of this name in the Province of Belvedere, now named Navarino. The Ancients ſpeak of ſome other Cities and Mountains of this name.

The PYRAMIDS of Egypt are very ſtately Buildings within three Leagues of Caire, reckoned by the Ancients to be one of the ſeven Wonders of the World; whereof there are three principal ones, differing both in height and thickneſs; the two firſt are ſhut up, and the third, which is the greateſt is open. It has 208 ſtone Steps, each ſtone about three foot thick; this Pyramid is 520 foot high, and 682 foot ſquare; at one of the Angles is a little ſquare room, where one may reſt and refreſh himſelf; when you arrive at the top, there is a very fine Platform, which conſiſts of twelve great fair Stones that are almoſt ſeventeen foot ſquare; it's obſerv'd, that the ſtrongeſt Man cannot from the Platform throw a Stone beyond the Pyramid, but 'tis not true that an Arrow cannot be ſhot beyond it. There are ſixteen ſteps before you come at the Door of the Pyramid; the entrance is ſquare and always even, and that Walk leads to two more, at the end of one of which ſtands a Hall, where may be ſeen an empty Tomb, made of one Stone only which is like Porphyry; ſome ſay that that Sepulchre had been made for Pharaoh, who was drown'd in the Red Sea in his purſuit of the children of Iſrael. At the end of the other Ally or Walk, there is a hole, which ſeems to have been made to let down the Bodies into the Caverns that are underneath the Pyramid. The other Pyramids that are lock'd, are almoſt of the ſame Structure. Many are amazed whence they could get ſuch great Stones, and ſo great a quantity of them, ſince there is nothing all about there but Sand; but 'tis like there might be a Rock underneath; beſides, there are ſeveral Mountains not very far off; Some ſay they were brought from Suid along the Nile. Before each of the three Pyramids, appear'd ſome remains of old ſquare Buildings, which ſeem'd to have been Temples. At ſome ſteps of the open Pyramid is an Idol called by the Arabs Abon-el-haoun, that is, the chief Column; and by Pliny Sphinx: 'Tis a Buſt cut out of a Natural Rock, and ſeems to be made of five Stones joined together, but being narrowly obſerved, it is perceiv'd that theſe ſeeming Joints are nothing but the Veins of the Rock. It repreſents a Woman's Face, but is of a prodigious bigneſs, being ſix and twenty foot high, and fifteen foot from its Ear to its Chin; the top of its Head is open, and the hole through which a Man may eaſily paſs reacheth down to the Breaſt, and there ends. The Heathens adored this Idol; the ancient Egyptians believed that the Body of King Amaſis was ſhut up within it; others ſay, that a King of Egypt made this Figure in memory of one Rhodope whom he loved. Pliny ſpeaking of theſe Pyramids, ſays, That the biggeſt was built by order of the King of Egypt, who imploy'd 370000 Men for 20 years about it. Some call this King Copthus, others Chauſpes, and ſome Chemnis, and ſay, That he did not reap the fruit of his Expence, becauſe, that having oppreſs'd his Subjects by that tedious Work, they threatned they would burn his Body after his death, which made him order it ſhould be buried in a ſecret place. M. Thevenot Voyage du Levant.

PYRRHO, chief of the Sceptick Philoſophers, was at firſt, as Apollodorus ſaith, a Painter, then became a hearer of Driſo, and at laſt, the Diſciple of Anaxarchus, whom he followed into India for to ſee the Gymnoſophiſts. He pretended that Men did nothing but by Cuſtom, and that there was neither Honeſty nor Diſhoneſty, Juſtice or Unjuſtice, Good or Evil; he was very ſolitary, lived to be 90 years old; was highly eſteem'd in his Country, and created Chief Prieſt. The Athenians made him a Freeman of their City which was a great favour. He lived in the time of Epicurus and Theophraſtus, about the 120th Olympiad; his followers were called Pyrrhonians, beſides which, they named them Ephecticks, Aphoreticks, but more generally Scepticks. This Sect made their Sovereign good to conſiſt in a ſedateneſs of mind exempt from all Paſſion in regulating their Opinions, and moderating their Paſſions, which they called Ataxia and Metriopathia, and in ſuſpending their Judgment in regard of Good or Evil, Truth or Falſhood, which they called Epoche.

PYRRHUS, the Son of Achilles, was at the Siege of Troy where he revenged his Father's death when that City was taken, and then retired to Epirus, where he fix'd his Kingdom. Juſtin lib. 17. Ovid, &c.

PYRRHUS, King of Epirus, the Son of Æacides King of the Illyrians, was left by his Father very young, but taken care of by Glautus, who ſecured him from thoſe that would have kill'd him; he re-eſtabliſhed himſelf in ſpight of his Enemies, and defeated Neoptolemus his Competitor to the Crown; he was an ambitious Man, made great Conqueſts, but always richer in Hope than in Poſſeſſion. He began to give proofs of his Bravery at the Battle of Ipſus in the year 453 of Rome, and was victorious over Antigonus and Demetrius; this laſt being afterwards expell'd by his Subjects from Macedonia; Pyrrhus defeated him again, and made himſelf Maſter of his Country about the 122d Olympiad; but about ſeven Months after he was driven out by the Macedonians, who would not endure a Foreigner to Reign over them. Some time after Pyrrhus made War upon the Romans, againſt whom he fought three great Battels; the firſt in 474. near Heraclea in Great Greece upon the River Siris; he won the day but loſt abundance of Men, which made him ſay, He would be ruined if he ſhould gain another Battle that coſt him ſo dear. C. Fabricius was ſent to him about the releaſement of the Priſoners, which he did without Ranſom. In the mean time, the Romans ſent back his Chancellor Cyneas, who demanded a Peace, refuſing very conſiderable Preſents that were offered him. Theſe reciprocal Civilities were followed with the Battle of Aſcoli in the Povilla in the 475 year of Rome, the Victory was doubtfull, Pyrrhus loſt many Men and was himſelf wounded. Some time after he paſs'd into Sicily, beat the Carthaginians in two Battles, took Erix and ſome other places, but he quitted the Siege of Lylibæum, repaſſed into Italy to ſuccour the Tarentines, and fought a third Battle with the Romans in 479, wherein he was entirely defeated by the Conſul Curius Dentatus, ſo that the year following he went over to Epirus with 7000 Foot and 5000 Horſe. He raiſed a new Army, attack'd Antigonus Gonatus King of Macedonia, defeated him, and became Maſter of his Kingdom; he afterwards enter'd into Peloponneſus, ravaged the Country of the Lacedæmonians, but was obliged to raiſe the Siege of Sparta; thence paſſing by Argos, he was kill'd with a Tile thrown upon his Head by a Woman whoſe Son he would have put to death in the 127th Olympiad, and 481 of Rome. Ælian ſpeaks of a Scriech-Owl that flew at the Javelin of this Prince the Night before he was killed. Ælian l. 10. c. 7. Hiſt. Anim. Juſtin l. 17, 24, 25. Plutarch. Livy. Polybius. Florus. Oroſius, &c.

PYRRHUS, a Monothelite Monk, was made Patriarch of Conſtantinople after Sergius in 638. He was accuſed of having been concerned in the murther of the Emperor Conſtantine the Son of Heraclius, for which he fled into Africa, where coming to be acquainted with Maximus, a learned and holy Man, he inſtructed him in the true Faith; thence came to Rome, preſented the Pope with his Confeſſion of Faith, and was admitted into Communion, but no ſooner departed but he ſpread his Errors at Ravenna, and ſo was deprived of his Sacerdotal Order. He was afterwards re-eſtabliſhed in the See of Conſtantinople, but he held it but 4 Months, and 4 Days. Theophanes in Annal. Niceph. in Chron. Baronius A. C. 639, 642, &c.

PYTHAGORAS, a Philoſopher and Author of the Italian Sect, was of Samos, and lived in the year of Rome 220. He, that he might increaſe his knowledge, travelled into Egypt, Phœnicia and Chaldea, where 'tis likely he learned many things concerning the Jewiſh Religion, as Joſephus ſaith. After his return to Samos being not able to endure the Tyranny of Polycrates, and Siloſo his Brother that ſucceeded him, he retired to that part of Italy called Magna Græcia. His ordinary reſidence was at Crotona, Metapont, Tarentum, &c. where he had a conſiderable ſhare in the Government. He rejected the name of Sophos, and took that of Philoſophus; he underſtood many Sciences, eſpecially the Mathematicks: he invented new Rules of Arithmetick, and Improv'd Geometry. Authors vaunt much of his abſtinence, and confeſs, he was the firſt Philoſopher that maintained the immortality of the Soul; But the tranſmigration of Souls, which was a principal point of his Philoſophy, was a very improper Medium to prove this Truth. It's ſaid he was never ſeen to laugh or weep. Authors accuſe him of Magick, but without juſt grounds. There are few that can agree touching the various adventures of his Life; ſome ſaying he was aſſaſſinated, others, that he died ſuddenly, &c. There are thoſe who would have him to have lived in the time of Numa Pompilius but Euſebius makes his death to be in the fourth year of the 70th Olympiad, and 257 or 58 of Rome, and 80 or 90 of his Life. There are four ancient Authors that writ his Life, to wit, Diogenes Laertius, Malchus Porphyrius, Jamblichus and Anonymus. Monſieur Bale is of Opinion, That he flouriſh'd in the Reign of Tarquinius Superbus, and not in that of Numa, as is commonly ſaid. He adds farther, That his Rhetorick muſt needs be very perſuaſive, conſidering he was ſo ſucceſsful, as to work a general Reformation of Manners in the Town of Crotona, bringing them off from Luxury and Libertiniſm, to Sobriety and Vertue. He likewiſe perſuaded the Ladies to quit their fine Cloaths and Jewels, and conſecrate 'em to Juno, letting 'em underſtand, That Vertue was a much better Ornament than Finery. He likewiſe oblig'd his Diſciples to a ſort of an eaſie Diſcipline, not ſuffering 'em to ſpeak for the firſt two Years. And thoſe he underſtood moſt enclin'd to talking, had their Penance continu'd for three Years longer. Thoſe that reſign'd themſelves to his Conduct, liv'd together in Common, and giving up all claim to Property, put their Fortunes in their Maſters Hands. Juſt. Lib. 20. Aulus Gellius, Lib. 1. cap. 9. &c. Diodorus Siculus. Plutarch. Clem. Alex. Aulus Gellius. Euſebius, &c.

PYTHEUS, a certain rich Man of Caria in Aſia Minor in the time of Xerxes; he had ſo greedy a deſire of heaping up Gold, that a ſearch after that Metal took up all his Mind; being returned one time from a Journey, and having given orders for his Supper, his Wife put upon the Table ſeveral ſorts of Meats all of Maſſy Gold; the Splendor of theſe extraordinary Victuals pleaſed him immediately, but he quickly complained of the hardneſs of it, and that it could not allay his hunger, from whence his Wife took occaſion to let him underſtand his blindneſs, and the misfortune he expoſed himſelf to by ſeeking after nothing but Gold. Plut. Pliny l. 33. c. 10.

PYTHO, the name of certain Diviners, believed by the Pagans to have been inſpired by Apollo, ſurnamed Pythius. Others ſay this name was given to all thoſe that pronounced Oracles and that it comes from the Greek Πυθομαι, which ſignifies to Conſult or Ask. Plut. de Defectu Oraculor.

PYTHON, a Serpent of a prodigious bigneſs, produced by the Earth after the Deluge of Deucalion; the Fable ſaith Juno made uſe of this monſtrous Serpent to hinder the lying-in of Latona beloved by Jupiter, and that ſhe was obliged to fly to the Iſle of Aſteria, which was afterwards call'd Delos, where ſhe brought forth Apollo and Diana to the World; but Apollo growing up kill'd this Serpent with his Arrows, and in memory of that action inſtituted the Pythian Games. Strabo thinks, that by this Serpent might be meant a very wicked Man called Dragon, that Apollo killed, but Naturaliſts ſay, That Python is a Greek word deduced from the word Putrefaction; and that it ſignified the Vapours and Exhalations that aſcended up from the Earth after the Deluge, and which the Sun diſſipated with its Rays. Macrob. Saturn. l. 1. c. 17. Vid. Pythian GAMES.

PYTHONISSA, the Prieſteſs of Apollo, which pronounced Oracles at Delphos in a Temple conſecrated to that God, ſurnamed Pythius. Vid. DELPHOS. This name has been alſo given to all thoſe Women that pretended to Prediction, and boaſted they were inſpired by this God.

Q

Q: THIS mute Letter ſeems as uſeleſs as the K, for that the C may have the ſame ſignification, and ſerve in their ſtead: ſo that it was not always in uſe among the Latins, who, it's like, have borrowed it from the Koph of the Hebrews, and uſed it only to join the U Vowel with another Vowel. The Latins often change this letter into C, as Sequor ſecutus, loquor locutus, &c. The French, Italians and Spaniards have borrowed this Letter Q from the Latins; the Engliſh have it oftner than the Germans, who uſe it but rarely, as well as the Hungarians and Sclavonians, amongſt whom it is not found, but in words derived from the Latin.

QUADI, a People of the ancient Germany, who, according to Cluverius, dwelt between the Danube, Bohemia and the River Marck; and afterwards extended themſelves as far as Hungary, between two very famous Cities called Erlaw and Vacia. Theſe People were very Warlike, and in the time of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus, paſſed the Danube, and fell upon the Territories of the Empire. In the following Ages they did the ſame, and in the Reign of Valentinian, joining with their Neighbours, they advanced as far as Aquileia. Cluvier. deſcr. Germ.

QUADRATUS, a Diſciple of the Apoſtles, was made Biſhop of Athens after Publius. To allay the fury of the Emperor Adrian, who perſecuted the Chriſtians, he preſented him in 126 with an Apology, to lay before him the Innocency of thoſe he purſued with ſo much Cruelty; he made alſo, upon the ſame ſubject, an excellent Speech, which influenced the Emperor to cauſe the Perſecution to ceaſe. Euſebius. Baronius.

QUAKERS, a Sect of Chriſtians Appearing firſt, in the North of England, about the Year 1650. Some of their particular Tenents are as follow; viz. They affirm the Holy Spirit enjoyns them to uſe Thee and Thou, or the Plain Language: (Wyeth's Switch for the Snake, page 157.) That Quivering and Quaking, &c. are Now ſometimes wrought by the Power of God, and juſtifie theſe extraordinary Emotions from Texts of Scripture: (Id. 443.) They own a Diſtinction in the Godhead, an Eſſential Equality between Father, Son, and Holy-Ghoſt, but except againſt the word Perſon, as too groſs to expreſs it: (Pag. 34. 527.) They ſuppoſe new Revelations ſtill continued, and that their Miniſters may be thus ſupernaturally enlighten'd up to the degree of Prophecy and Viſion: (Id. Pag. 74, 75.) They own extraordinary Commiſſions or eſpecial Manifeſtations of God to his Children in the Higher Degrees of immediate Revelation: (Pag. 435.) And in vertue of this Privilege, their Miniſters pretend to receive the Goſpel in the ſame manner St. Paul did, not of Man, but by the Revelation of Jeſus Chriſt: (Pag. 475.) To go on, Thoſe, ſay they, who are not Infallible, are not in the Spirit, and, by conſequence, no Miniſters; For every true Member of the true Church has Certainty, and Infallibility of Judgment, and knows the Infallibility of the Truth he profeſſes: (Pag. 90. 93.) The ſame Author continues, That every Member of the Church of Chriſt muſt neceſſarily have a Meaſure of the Spirit of Chriſt, elſe they are none of his: Now even the leaſt meaſure or manifeſtation of this Spirit is Infallible: (Pag. 90. 93. 95.) Notwithſtanding theſe Aſſertions, they deny their lodging Infallibility in any private Spirit, or even ſo much as in their Church: Where is it lodg'd then? Why, to uſe their own words, In the Infallible Spirit of God, privately or particularly working in the hearts of Men: (Pag. 134, 135.) They grant the Manifeſtation of the Holy Spirit was greater in thoſe who wrote the Holy Scriptures, than in the preſent Quakers: (P. 150.) However Thoſe, as they ſpeak, that through Obedience, improve their Talent, have the ſame ſure Rule of the Holy Spirit, to Read and Underſtand the Scriptures, which the Apoſtles and Prophets had when they wrote 'em: (P. 151.) And that the Senſible Experiences of the Holy Spirit are, at this day, a certain Guide for Interpreting the Scriptures; for thoſe, who concurr with the Grace of God, have an infallible Evidence of the Holy Spirit to diſcern between Truth and Error: (P. 153, 156, 296.) They likewiſe deny, the Holy Scriptures being the only Object (they mean the Rule) of Faith, or that the Letter of the Scripture (or written word) is the Sword of the Spirit: (P. 222.) They make the Light within, the Rule for every one to walk by, and ſuppoſe that God ſpeaks to Men Now, in the ſame immediate manner in which he Reveal'd himſelf to the Holy Apoſtles and Prophets: (P. 381.) And ſeem plainly to aſſert that, their own Writings are Inſtances of ſuch immediate Revelation: (Ibid.) Farther they affirm, we muſt have New Revelations to juſtifie our being Govern'd by the Old ones; For, to practiſe any Command of Scripture, without the moving of the Spirit, is an Abomination to the Lord: (P. 169.) They affirm, the Life of the Saints, to be not Sinful at all, and that it is the Doctrine of Devils to Preach that Men ſhall have Sin, and be in a Warfare, as long as they be on the Earth: (P. 71, 72.) George Fox aſſerts, That it is not Blaſphemy to ſay, that the Soul is a Part of God; but Joſeph Wyeth endeavours to Interpret him in an innocent Senſe, and pretends that Fox's Expreſſions of Chriſt being perſonally in the Profeſſors, means nothing more than a Spiritual Union: (P. 56.) To Proceed, The Quakers Adminiſter neither Baptiſm, nor the Lord's-Supper, but diſown the Inſtitution of both Sacraments: (P. 258, 264, 265.) They hold alſo the Conſecration of Houſes or Churches, vain and inſignificant. (P. 476.) They look upon it as an abſurdity to affirm, That the Joy of the Saints is imperfect in the State of Separation, or that the Happineſs of the Soul depends on that of the Body: (P. 244.) They hold all Swearing unlawful: (P. 13.) They declare againſt the Payment of Tyths, call it an Antichriſtian Yoak of Bondage, and diſown thoſe that comply with the Law in this Point: (P. 13, 416, 371.) They have a mean Notion of the Fathers, and believe that Apoſtacy from the Life and Spirit of Chriſtianity, began very early, even while the Apoſtles were living: (P. 302, 303.) And as for the Clergy of the Church of England, they are, in the Quakers Opinion, Baal's Prieſts, an Antichriſtian and Apoſtatiz'd Generation: (P. 378, 383.) But then they juſtifie their hard Language by parallel Inſtances of Privilege in the Prophets and Apoſtles; affirming, that ſharp and ſevere Expreſſions have ſome times been the immediate Dictate of the Spirit of God: (P. 311, 314.) The Quakers acknowledge that the Magiſtrate is Ordain'd of God to Puniſh with the Sword, but that it is not lawful for any of their Party to make uſe of it: (P. 367, 319.) The Carnal Weapon being only allow'd to thoſe, who are not (as they Phraſe it) under the Goſpel Miniſtration, nor come up to their imagin'd diſcoveries of Truth: (Ibid.) However, tho' their Principle Reſtrains 'em from Fighting, they may be ſometimes extraordinarily Commiſſion'd to Denounce War, and Foretel it: And upon this Claim, to give no more Inſtances, George Biſhop aſſumes the Character of a Prophet to O. Cromwell: (P. 359, 360.) The Quakers apply equally to all Governments, or pretended Governments, and do not ſeem to make one Title better than another; for, to uſe their own words, They diſpute not Authority with any Man, nor queſtion Forms of Government, nor trouble their Heads what becomes of the World: (P. 362. 366.) And, in conſequence of this Principle, I conceive it is, that they ſeem to make a Merit of their Faithful Obedience, under all the Uſurpations of the Rump, Cromwell, &c. (P. 375.) Thus far I have repreſented their Opinions from Joſeph Wyeth, George Whitehead, and other Friends, Quoted by them with approbation: I ſhall now Tranſcribe a few Lines from Robert Barclay, one of the moſt Learned of their Perſuaſion: This Author will afford us more of their peculiar Tenents, and it may be, give a fuller Explication of thoſe above mention'd. To begin: Barclay, in his 2*d* Propoſition, Affirms that the Light within, or the Divine inward Revelation, is, like common Principles, Self-Evident, and therefore is not to be ſubjected to the examination either of the outward Teſtimony of the Scriptures, or of the Natural Reaſon of Man. In his 3*d* Propoſition, he aſſerts, That the Scriptures are not the principal Ground of all Truth, nor the Primary Rule of Faith and Manners, they being only a ſecondary Rule, and ſubordinate to the Spirit: By the Inward Teſtimony of which Spirit, we do alone truly know 'em: So that by this Reaſoning, the Authority of the Scriptures muſt depend upon the inward Teſtimony of the Spirit. Farther he Affirms, That the Deprav'd Seed, or Original Sin, is not imputed to Infants before Actual Tranſgreſſion: (Prop. 4th.) Thoſe who have the Gift of the Light within are ſufficiently Ordain'd to Preach the Goſpel, tho' without any Commiſſion from Churches, or any Aſſiſtances from Humane Learning: Whereas thoſe who want the Authority of this Divine Gift, how well Qualify'd ſoever in other reſpects, are to be look'd upon as Deceivers, and not true Miniſters of the Goſpel: (Prop. 10th.) All acceptable Worſhip muſt be undertaken and perform'd by the immediate moving of the Holy Spirit, which is neither limitted to Places, Times nor Perſons: And therefore all outward Significations of Divine Worſhip, unmov'd by Secret Inſpiration, which Man ſets about in his own Will, and can both begin and end at his pleaſure; all Acts of Worſhip thus miſqualify'd, conſiſting either in Prayers, Praiſes, or Preaching, Preſcrib'd, Premeditated, or Extemporary, are no better than Superſtitions, Will-Worſhip, and abominable Idolatry in the ſight of God: (Prop. 11.) The Dominion of Conſcience belongs only to God, therefore 'tis not lawful for Civil Magiſtrates to Puniſh their Subjects either in Fortune, Liberty or Perſon, upon the ſcore of difference in Worſhip or Opinion; provided always that no Man under pretence of Conſcience, does any Injury to his Neighbour, relating either to Life or Eſtate; (Prop. 14.) The Quakers are Charg'd with other Errors of a very dark Complexion, drawn eſpecially from the Writings of thoſe who were firſt of their Perſuaſion; but theſe Tenents the Modern Quakers ſeem to diſown, and appear very willing to explain, and reconcile their Authors to a more Orthodox meaning: But it being my buſineſs rather to Report briefly, than Argue, I ſhall wave both the Particulars of the Charge, and Succeſs of the Conteſt. To be fully Inform'd of this Matter, the Reader may Conſult their Original Writings: The Tracts lately written by the Author of the Snake in the Graſs; by Mr. Keith, and the Quakers Defences upon this Occaſion. Barclay's Apology. Wyeth and Whitehead's Switch for the Snake, &c.

QUAKERS, a Religious People abuſively ſo called from the word Quake. The Curious may read their Riſe in George Fox's Journal, and William Penn's Brief Account of the Riſe and Progreſs of that People, and their Apology by Robert Barclay, who hath compriſed their Sentiments in Fifteen Theſes. Some of the Principal Doctrines held by this People are, That God hath given to all Men, without any Exception, Supernatural Light, which being obeyed can Save them, and that this Light is Chriſt, the True Light which lighteth every Man, that cometh into the World, John 1. 9. That the Life ought to be regulated according to this Light, without which no Man or Woman is capable of underſtanding the Holy Scriptures, which they believe were given by Inſpiration of God, are to be preferred to all other Writings extant in the World, and do own them to be a Secondary or Subordinate Rule of Faith and Practice, but the Light or Spirit of God they Believe is the Primary Rule; becauſe the Holy Scriptures were given forth by, and do receive all their Authority from the Holy Spirit. That Immediate Revelation is not ceaſed, but a Meaſure or Manifeſtation of the Spirit is given to every one to profit withall. That, in Worſhip, Men and Women ought to wait in the ſilence of all Fleſh, to Receive Immediately from the Lord, before they open their mouths, either in Prayer to Almighty God, or in Teſtimony to the People. That, all Superſtitions and Ceremonies of meer Human Inſtitution in Religion ought to be laid aſide; all alſo in Civil Society, as the Saluting of one another, by Putting off the Hat, Bowing, Curching, and ſaying You inſtead of Thou to a ſingle Perſon, &c. That Men and Women ought to be Plain and Grave in their Apparel, Sober and Juſt in their whole Converſation, and at a Word in all their Dealings; not to Swear, or Fight, or Bear any Carnal Weapons for that End; but to Love one another, and do good, as much as in them lies, unto all Men. ☞ This Account was ſent in by the Quakers.

QUANGTUNG, or Canton, a great Province of China, the Capital City whereof is Quangchen, called Jangchin and Canton upon the Ta, frequented by the Europeans. The Tartars took it after a years Siege in 1650, by a Stratagem, laying it cruelly waſte. It has a Capacious and ſafe Haven with two Caſtles well fortified. It is encompaſſed with Hills, and four German miles in Circuit. The other Towns of the Province are Xaocheu, Nanchiung, Haicheu, Chaocheu, Lincheu and Kiuncheu, to which ſome have added Amacau or Makou. There are ſeventy three leſſer Towns depending upon the aforeſaid Cities. The Province is very fertil, and well Peopled.

QUANSI, Lat. Quanſia, a Province of China, between Quangtung, Junnam, Quiechu and Chochinchine. This Province is the laſt of that vaſt Dominion that hath been taken by the Tartars; the Capital City of it is Queilin, at the foot of the Mountains, and upon the River Quei: The others are called Lieuchen, Kingyren, Pinglo, Gucheu, Cincheu, Fiecheu, Nanning, Taiping, Suming and Chingan; the four laſt belong to the King of Tunquin, and the reſt have appertaining to them 78 meaner Towns.

QUARTODECIMANI, or Paſchites, a Name which was given in the Second Century to ſome among the Chriſtians, who would Celebrate the Feaſt of Eaſter on the fourteenth Day of the Moon, what Day or Week ſoever it happened, in imitation of the Jews; the Diſpute was at firſt only among the Catholicks, and made no breach of Charity; but in a Council held at Rome in 196. Pope Victor Excommunicated thoſe who celebrated Eaſter upon any other Day than Sunday. This Severity appeared too rigorous to Irenæus Biſhop of Lyons, and to ſome other Biſhops. Afterwards, in 325, the Diſpute about the Celebration of the Feaſt of Eaſter was entirely quaſhed in the Council of Nice, which ordered, 1. That the Feſtival of Eaſter ſhould not be Celebrated till after the Vernal Equinox. 2. That the Vernal Equinox ſhould be fix'd to the 21ſt of March. 3. That that Sunday always be pitch'd upon, which immediately followed the 14th Day of the Moon. 4. That if the 14th Day of the Moon happened to be upon a Sunday, it ſhould be deferr'd till the next Sunday following, that Eaſter might not be Celebrated by them on the ſame Day, as by the Jews. So that the full Moon, which regulates the Feaſt of Eaſter, either falls upon the 21ſt of March, or ſome days after; from whence it follows, that the New Moon immediately preceeding, is the Paſchal New Moon. For Example; If the 14th Day of the Moon is the 21ſt of March, the New Eaſter Moon is the 8th day of March; and the Month which this Moon makes, is the Eaſter Month. According to this Ordinance Eaſter-Sunday arrived incluſively between the 22d of March and the 25th of April. And, that the New Moon might be known in every Month, they found out the Golden Number, which they ſet down in the Calendar over-againſt the firſt day of every Lunar Month; but inſtead of the Golden Number they afterwards made uſe of the Epact, which Lilius Giraldus, an Italian, invented, and which F. Clavius put in practice. *Euſeb. QUEBEC, a Town of New France in Canada in Northern America. This Town, which becomes daily more and more flouriſhing, owes its original to a ſmall number of poor Cottages, and its Name to the Mountain whereon 'tis ſituated; for the Barbarians call the heights or elevations of the Earth Quebec. Theſe Cottages were diſcovered in 1508, by Thomas Aubert, a Native of Diepe, who brought ſome of the Salvage Inhabitants into France. In 1608, a great Colony of French being come to ſettle in Canada, preferr'd this place before all others upon the River of St. Laurence, and laid the Foundations of the Higher and Lower Town of Quebec: For one part of the Colony remain'd on the Banks of the River, and gave a beginning to the Lower Town; the reſt ſeated themſelves on the Hill, and changed the Cottages which were there, into good Dwelling-Houſes; but the diverſity of ſituation hinder'd not theſe two places to preſerve the name of Quebec. The Houſes of the Lower Town are but a few in number, and not ſo beautiful as thoſe of the Higher, being moſt of 'em inhabited by Ship-Carpenters and Seamen who live by fiſhing. Upon the Way which leads from the Lower to the Higher Town, is a fair Houſe built by M. Talon when he was Intendant of Canada. The higher Town is large and well Peopled, its Houſes fairly built, make very fine Streets, wherein are Shops furniſhed with all ſorts of Merchandiees that can be brought from Europe. This Town has been erected into a Biſhop's See by Clement X. in 1674, and the Cathedral is conſecrated to our Lady. The College is under the Conduct of the Jeſuits. There is alſo the Monaſtery of the Urſulines, and that of the Religious Hoſpitallers, who follow the Rule of St. Auguſtin. The Recolets have their Convent without the Walls of the Town upon a ſmall River called St. Charles. At one end of the Town is the Fort of St. Lewis, ſurrounded with Walls, and conſiſting of divers Angles bending in and jetting out, drawn according to the nature of the Ground, and well provided with Cannon. The Governor lives in the midſt of this Cittadel. Deny's Hiſtoire de l'Amerique.

QUEDA, a Town of the Indies, in the Province of Siam, with a Port belonging to it; 'tis a Place famous for Traffick, and much frequented by the Europeans.

QUEDELINBURG, a Town of Saxony near Halberſtadt, wherein is a famous Abby of Women, they were formerly Sovereigns of the Town and Country, but the Elector of Saxony is now poſſeſſor of it. Herman of Lorrain, whom the Partiſans of Pope Gregory the VIIth. Elected King of the Romans, in oppoſition to the Emperor Henry IV, paſſed the Feaſt of Eaſter in 1085 at Quedelinburg, and held there a Council in preſence of the Legate of the Holy See. There was an Anathema thunder'd out againſt Guibert the Anti-Pope, and againſt the Emperor's Party, which were called Henritian Hereticks. Henry, Son to this ſame Henry, held another Aſſembly at Quedelinburg in 1103, when he had already revolted againſt his Father, and in this Aſſembly Gebhard Biſhop of Conſtance gave him Abſolution from the Pope for his Rebellion againſt his Father.

QUEENS-COUNTY, a large and good County in the Province of Leinſter in Ireland, called by the Iriſh Countac Loighſaigh, bounded by Kildare to the W. Kilkenny to the S. the King's County to the E. The chief Town is Queen's Town, or Marieborough, 16 miles from Kildare to the W. and 22 from Kilkenny to the N.

QUEICHEU, a large Province in a Mountainous part of China; there are ſaid to be 8 Great Towns in't, beſide 75 leſſer ones. Martin Martini. Atl. Sinic.

QUEICHEU, a Town of China, in the Province Suchuen, upon the River Kiang; 'tis the Capital of 12 other Great Towns.

QUEILLOA, Lat. Quiloa, Kiloa, a Kingdom of Zanguebar in Africa, between Moſambique and Melinde, on the Eaſtern Shoar of Africa. The principal City is ſeated like Monbaza, in an Iſland in a freſh and cool Air, and ſurrounded with Trees always green, and has a fruitful Country, which yields it plenty of Victuals. The Iſland ſtands at the mouth of Coavo, a vaſt River, which my Author erroneouſly ſaith, ſpringeth from the ſame Lake with the Nile. The Inhabitants are Mahometans, of a white Complexion, the Women comely and rich in their Garb, the Houſes are large, built with Brick, Stone and Lime, and richly furniſhed; and have belonging to them Gardens and Orchards, well ſtored with delicious Fruits and Herbs. In former times this City was Miſtreſs of the Coaſt to Cape de Corientes, but their King truſting to his ſtrength, and beginning a War on the Portugueſe was beaten, and Quiloa taken; ever ſince which it is tributary to the Crown of Portugal, and pays yearly 1500 pieces of Gold. The Portugueſe built a Fort on the City Iſland, which is ſince demoliſhed by the order of the King of Portugal. Povy. The Inhabitants are Moors, ſmall of Stature, and of contemptible Courage. The Iſland has plenty of Rice, Millet, Cattle, Woods, Palm-Trees, Limons, Oranges and Sugar-Canes. The City ſtands on the Weſt ſide, and has many Houſes built of fine Marble, but the Streets (after the Arabian way) are very narrow.

QUERCY, a Province of France, between Perigord, Rovergue, Auvergne, Languedoc and Limoſin: Its Inhabitants are the Cadurci of Cæſar, who ſupplied twelve thouſand Men for the ſupport of the League of the Gauls againſt the Romans. Cahors is the Capital City; the others are Montauban, Moiſlac, Lauzerte, Gourdon, Guillaume, Martell, Figeac, Sovillac, Negrepeliſſa, &c. The Inhabitants divide their Country into the Higher and Lower; they diſtinguiſh the Higher Quercy, by the name of Cauſſe, which is that of the Vallies which are along the Lot. Thoſe are called the Lower Towns which are about Aveirou. The Country is fruitful in Grain, White-Wine, Prunes, Cattle, &c. There are found alſo excellent Tulips, and of divers ſorts, which are not ſeen elſewhere. Quercy belongs to the great Government of Guienne, to the Parliament of Tholouſe, and to the generality of Montauban, which hath under it three Elections, Cahors, Montauban and Figeac: theſe three Towns are alſo Royal Seats, juſt as Lauzerte, Figeac and Gourdon are. The Counts of Tholouſe were alſo Counts of Cahors until the time of Raimond the Old, who was diſpoſſeſs'd of his Eſtate for making an Alliance with the Albigenſes. William de Cardillac, Biſhop of Cahors, who had followed Simon de Montfort, got to be Count of Cahors, for which he did homage to the King. Quercy was ſince united to the Crown in the Reign of Philip the Bold, as being the Inheritance of the Counts of Tholouſe. In 1306 King Philip the Fair tranſacted with Raimond Pauchelli Biſhop of Cahors for the right of Peerage, and granted him to take the Title of Count upon him. Du Puy. St. Marthe.

QUERNO (Camillus) was of Monopolis in the Kingdom of Naples; he acquired great facility in making of Verſes, and came about 1514 to Rome with a Poem of twenty thouſand Verſes, called Alexiada. Some young Gentlemen of that City profeſs'd a great deal of friendſhip to him, they treated him in the Country, and at a Feaſt crowned him Arch-Poet; ſo that he was not known afterwards but by this name. Pope Leo X. delighted in his company, and cauſed him to be ſerved with Meat from his own Table. Querno being an excellent Paraſite, humour'd him exactly. He was obliged to make a Diſtych extempore upon whatever ſubject was given him, tho' at that time he was extreamly troubled with the Gout; and accordingly he made this Verſe;

Archipoeta facit verſus pro mille poetis.

And as he heſitated to compoſe the ſecond, the Pope readily added,

Et pro mille aliis Archipoeta bibit.

Querno haſting to repair his fault, cry'd,

Porrige, quod faciat mihi carmina docta, Falernum.

To which the Pope at the ſame inſtant reply'd;

Hoc vinum enervat, debilitatque pedes.

It was then an happy time for Querno; but after the taking of Rome he retired to Naples, where he ſuffered much during the Wars in 1528, and died there in the Hoſpital. He uſually ſaid, He had found a thouſand Wolves after he had loſt one Lyon. Paul. Jov.

QUESNE (Abraham) Marqueſs of Queſne, Admiral of the Naval Forces of France, was one of the greateſt Men of the laſt Age, and the moſt experienced Commander the King had at Sea, having been entirely devoted to this imploy from his very youth; and there are but few examples of ſuch long ſervice as his; for there have not been many General Officers that have ſpent ſixty years in actual Service, commencing with the imploy of a private Captain, and ſo advancing to the higheſt Command. He was born in Normandy in 1610, of a Noble Family. He was in 1637 at the attacking of the Iſles of S. Margaret, and in 1638, contributed much to the defeating of the Naval Power of Spain before Gattari. He received a Musket-ſhot in taking the Ships in the Port of S. Ogne. He was dangerouſly wounded in 1641 before Tarragone, and in 1642 before Barcelona at the time of the taking of Perpignan; as alſo in 1643, in the engagement had at Cape Galles, againſt the Spaniſh Forces the year following. He went to the Service of the Swedes, where his name was already known, becauſe of his Father. He was preſently made Rear Admiral of the Fleet, and afterwards Vice-Admiral. It was in this quality he ſerved the day of that famous Battle wherein the Danes were entirely defeated, and he was the ſecond that boarded and took their Admiral-ſhip called the Patience, where he made a furious onſet, and wherein the Daniſh Admiral was kill'd. He had made the King of Denmark himſelf Priſoner, had it not been, that that Prince having receiv'd a Splinter of a Cannon in his Eye, was obliged to quit the Ship the Eve of the Battle. He was recalled into France in 1647, and Commanded that and the following year, one of the Squadrons ſent on the Expedition of Naples. The Sea-affairs of France being much fallen from their former Luſtre, through the minority of the King, he fitted out divers Ships at his own Charge, being preſſed thereto by the Court; in order to relieve the Royal Army that blocked up Bourdeaux; and at the ſame time, to prevent the Inhabitants receiving any Succors by Sea, he met in the Road with an Engliſh Squadron who would have him lower his Top-Sail; upon which, having ſmartly engag'd, he was dangerouſly wounded, but came gloriouſly off, though ſomewhat unequally match'd. After which he was oblig'd to go and Careen his Ships at Breſt; from whence he Sail'd back to Bourdeaux, without ſtaying to have his Wounds perfectly Cured. The Spaniſh Fleet arrived in the River at the ſame time with him; but he entred in ſpight of them; which was the principal Cauſe of the Surrender of the Town. The Queen Regent, to teſtifie her Acknowledgements to him until he was re-imburſed, gave him the Caſtle and Iſle of Indred in Bretany, which were her Majeſty's Patrimony. But nothing contributed ſo much to his Glory, as the happy Succeſs of the laſt Wars of Sicily, where he beat the Dutch thrice, tho' at the diſadvantage of unequal numbers; in the laſt of which Engagements De Ruyter was killed. This Epigram, which has two Alluſions to Ruyter's Name, was made on the Subject of their three Engagements.

Terrui in Oceano jam ſolo nomine claſſes,
Ter nunc in Siculo territus ipſe rui.

Si vera inverſum quondam dedit omnia nomen
Nunc Rui-ter nomen verius omen habet.

After that the Ships of Tripoli, which were our Enemies, had retired into the Port of Chio, as unto a ſafe Aſylum, under one of the principal Fortreſſes of the Grand Signior, where they were protected by the Captain Baſha at the Head of forty Gallies; the Sieur du Queſne went to attack them with a Squadron conſiſting of ſix Ships; and having kept them block'd up for a long time, obliged that Republick to conclude a very advantageous Peace for France. He afterwards forc'd Algiers and Genoua to implore the King's Clemency. Finally, Aſia, Africa and Europe have ſeen the Effects of his Valour. And an infinite number of Chriſtians to whom he hath in all his Expeditions given freely their Liberty without Ranſom, are uncontrollable Teſtimonies of the Grandeur of his Soul. The King of France honoured his Merit with a particular Eſteem; and though he hated the Proteſtants, yet he made him a Gift of the Land of Bouchet, which is one of the fineſt in the Kingdom, ſituate near Eſtampes, and erected it into a Marquiſate. And having deprived it of its firſt Name, gave it that of Du Queſne, to immortalize the memory of that great Man. 'Tis ſaid, that after the Ceſſation of the Edict of Nants, the King of France ſolliciting him to change his Religion, he generouſly anſwered, That having faithfully ſerved his Prince for the ſpace of ſixty years, he would not be unfaithful to his God in his old days. This Great Man died the ſecond of February in 1688, after having lived ſeventy eight years with an extraordinary health and vigor. He married Gabriella de Berniere, by whom he had four Sons, who have already given divers Proofs of their Merit. Henry, the eldeſt, continuing a ſtiff Proteſtant, retired with the King's conſent to Swiſſerland. The ſecond, Abraham, Captain of one of the King's Men-of-War, took and brought to Thoulon, in 1683, Monleſarchio, the Spaniſh Admiral. And in 1684, ſignaliz'd himſelf at Genoua. Iſaac, the third Son, has alſo ſome Command in the Fleet. And Jacob, the youngeſt, is ſtill at the Univerſity. Memoirs du Temps.

QUESNOY (Francis) ſurnamed the Fleming, an excellent Carver, was born at Bruſſels, in 1592. During his Apprenticeſhip under his Father, who was of the ſame Profeſſion, he wrought in Marble two little Angels, to be ſeen at the Porch of the Jeſuits Church in that City, and the Paſſion of our Saviour in Ivory; with which Albert VIth. Archduke of Auſtria, was ſo taken, that he gave him a Penſion, and perſuaded him to make a Journey into Italy, where he became quickly known by the Excellency of his Work. The Pope ordered him afterwards to make the Statue of St. Andrew in Marble, to place it in St. Peter's Church, which he performed with ſo much Art, that the Italians confeſs'd Michael Angelo never did any thing ſo well proportioned and complete. But of all Pieces, Silenus a-ſleep, ſurrounded by Children, as Virgil deſcribes him in his Sixth Eclogue, was the moſt admir'd, and his Statue of Cupid in white Marble cutting it ſelf a Bow with a Knife; this the Hollanders paid 6000 Florins for, and preſented it to the Princeſs of Orange, who plac'd it in her Garden at the Hague. At his coming into France, according to the King's Commands, who promiſed him a good Penſion, beſides twelve hundred Crowns in Gold which he had ſent him, he fell ſick at Leghorne, in the Dutchy of Tuſcany, where he died. Acad. Put. part. 2.

QUESTOR, among the Romans, was a Perſon who had the Charge of the Publick Treaſury. The firſt Original of this Office may be referred to Pub. Valerius Publicola, Conſul, who having eſtabliſhed the Place of publick Treaſurer in the Temple of Saturn, ſettled there for the Security of it, two Queſtors, or Treaſurers taken from among the Senators, and would afterwards wards have them created by the Suffrages of the People. But in proceſs of time, the People, willing to have a ſhare in this Office, created four, two for the City, to have Care of the publick Treaſury, and the other two to attend the Conſuls, when they went to the War; and enacted that Plebeians ſhould be received of this number. But the Revenue of the Republick increaſing by their great Conqueſts, the number of theſe Officers was increaſed to twenty. Theſe Queſtors were imployed to accompany the Conſuls, Prætors, and other Generals of the Army, when they went to War; having the Charge to receive and keep account of the Spoils of the Enemy; to take the Tribute of the Provinces, and to pay the Army. There were alſo others as well at Rome as in the Provinces who received the Forfeitures and Fines which they regiſtred, to give account thereof. The Queſtors had their Clerks or Comptrollers of the Treaſury, whom they choſe from among Perſons of undoubted Fidelity; wherefore thoſe who had been Conſuls held it an honour to be admitted thereto. There was moreover another ſort of Queſtors, who were ſent into the Provinces by order of the Senate, and who had power to judge of Criminal Cauſes. Their Authority was great, as being empowred to keep Lictors, and other marks of chief Magiſtrates in their particular Provinces. They had alſo ſometimes the Conduct of the Armies as well as the Conſuls and Prætors; but the Queſtors of the City had not ſo great a Power; for they had no Lictors, no Chair of State, nor other Marks of Authority, being themſelves liable to be called to account before the Prætor. Their Buſineſs was to receive Embaſſadors and Kings, Princes or foreign Lords, to make them Preſents, and perform all that was ordered by the Senate upon theſe Occaſions. This Office was annual, although it hath been prolonged to ſome for three years. Alexis ab Alex.

QUEVEDO VILLEGAS (Francis) a Spaniſh Gentleman, Knight of St. James, was born in the Country of March in New-Caſtile. He compoſed divers Treatiſes of Piety, and other pleaſant Pieces; as, The Adventurer Buſcon. The Viſions of Hell Reformed. The Spaniſh Parnaſſus, &c. He was Impriſon'd by order of Count Olivarez, whoſe Miniſtery he had lampooned in his Verſes. He was ſet at Liberty after the Diſgrace of this Favourite. He died very old, in 1647.

QUIANSI, and Kianſi, one of the moſt conſiderable Provinces of China. Its Cities are Nauchang, Jaocheu, Quanſing, Nankang, Kieuchiang, Vncheu, Linkian, Kiegan, Xuicheu, Juencheu, Caucheu and Naugan. Upon theſe Cities depend other leſs conſiderable Towns.

QUIBRICHE, a City in the Kingdom of Barca, in Barbary, upon the Coaſt of the Gulf of Sidra. It's alſo called Berniche, but anciently Berenice. The Caravan of Morocco furniſheth it ſelf with Water there, to paſs through the Country of Barka, and to go to Alexandria, in order to join the Caravan of Tetuan. Duvall.

QUIERAS, a City of Piedmont, upon the River Tanare. It's a ſtrong Place, ſituate upon a Hill. It was there that in 1631 a Peace was made between France, the Empire, Spaniards, the Dukes of Savoy, and Modena. The Trouts of Quieras are famous.

QUIERS, or Chieri, a Town of Piedmont, very well fortified, by its ſituation. This Place is very famous for the Fuſtians made there, and for the Seed its Soil furniſhes the Dyers withal. The Count of Harcourt, in 1639, won a Battle there from the Spaniards.

QUIETERA, a City and Kingdom of Africa, in the Southern part of Æthiopia, which makes part of the Kingdom of Monomatapa, towards Zanguebar.

QUIETISTS, the Followers of Molinos. Vid. Molinos.

QUILOA, a Kingdom of Zanguebar in Africa, upon the Coaſt of the Æthiopian Sea, with a Capital City of the ſame Name, ſituate in a little Iſland called alſo Quiloa, very near the Continent, and guarded with a ſtrong Cittadel. The King of this Country, a Mahometan, and a great Enemy to the Chriſtians, kept always his Reſidence in this City; but in 1505, Fr. Dalmaida coming with the Portugueſe Fleet near this Iſland, ſent to find out the King; who feigning himſelf ſick, made preparation for Defence. Whereupon Dalmaida ſent 700 Soldiers to beſiege the Town, which they took; and the King having eſcaped by flight, they changed the Government thereof, and made it tributary to the King of Portugal. This City hath a Port much frequented. There is alſo a Town of the ſame Name on the other ſide of the Iſland, called The ancient Quiloa, diſtant from Mozambick 150 French Leagues. Brand. Davity.

QUINBOROUGH, or Queenborough, the Chief Town of the Iſland Sheppey in Kent, in Scrag Lath, repreſented by two Burgeſſes in Parliament. It's defended by a Royal College.

QUINDECEMVIRI, Roman Magiſtrates, who took care of the Books of the Sibylls, as formerly was done by the Decemvirs and Duumvirs; they Conſulted thoſe Oracles, when ordered by the Senate, and made their Report from them, adding alſo their own Opinion upon the Matter. It was their buſineſs alſo to execute all that was preſcribed by theſe Books of the Sibylls, and to cauſe the ſecular Plays to be Celebrated. This Name was given them, becauſe they were Fifteen in number. It's believed 'twas Sylla the Dictator that eſtabliſhed them, creating five Magiſtrates, whom he added to the College of Decemvirs. Tit. Liv.

QUINNONES (Francis) a Spaniard, Son of Diego Fernandez de Quinnones, firſt Count of Luna, was a Franciſcan Fryar. Pope Clement VIIth. who was Priſoner in the Caſtle of St. Angelo, and who knew the power F. Quinnones had over the mind of the Emperor, ſent him to negotiate a Peace, which he compaſs'd. This happy Succeſs procur'd him a Cardinal's Cap. He died at Veruli in 1540. This Cardinal had laboured to reduce the Breviary to three Pſalms for every one of the Canonical hours, and to three Leſſons for the Mattins, and he ordered it ſo, that the Pſalter might be repeated over every week. Clement VIIIth. and Paul IIId. approved of this Breviary, which was Printed at Rome in 1536.

QUINQUATRIA, certain Feaſts in Rome, which were Celebrated in honour of Pallas, being like to thoſe the Athenians called Panathenea's. This Name was given them becauſe they laſted for the ſpace of five days. On the firſt day were offered Sacrifices. On the ſecond, third and fourth, were ſhewed the Combats of Gladiators. And on the fifth was made a Cavalcade through the City. They begun on the 18th. of March. Vide Panathenea's.

QUINSAY, an ancient City of China, the King's Reſidence, of which Authors ſpeak variouſly. Its Name imports as much as The City of the Sun. Marcus Polus makes it an hundred miles in circumference, and that it has twelve hundred and ſixty Stone Bridges belonging to it. Modern Authors do not ſo well agree as to the place of its ſituation. Some take it to be Peking, which a Spaniſh Author calls The Metropolis of the World. Mendez, Pinto, Herrera, Maldonat and Trigaut, ſay ſtrange things concerning it. That a Horſe-man can ſcarce paſs through it in a day. That 'tis thirty Leagues in circumference, ten long, and five broad; with four hundred and ſeventy Gates, and Walls whereon a dozen Horſes can run a-breaſt. Others will have the ancient Quinſay to be the Famous Cambalu now; and Hornius is of this Opinion. But Martin Martini thinks it is the Kangcheu of theſe times, called Kingſu, or Kingſay; which was the Royal City in 1300. It ſtands upon the River Cieutang. It's very hard to determine any thing in this matter, ſince among ſo many modern Travellers we have ſcarce any thing of China. And thoſe we have, for the moſt part, diſagree about it. The opinion of Martin Martini appears the moſt reaſonable of any. Marc. Polo. Hornius. Martini Atl. Sinic.

QUINTILIANS, Hereticks, Diſciples of Montanus. Their Name is taken from Quintilla, whom they followed as a Propheteſs. They made the Euchariſt of Bread and Cheeſe, which made them have the Name of Artotyrites, and amongſt them the Women were Prieſts and Biſhops.

QUINTILIANUS (Fabius) an excellent Orator that lived at Rome in the time of Veſpaſian and Domitian. He was a Spaniard, and according to ſome Authors, a Native of Calahorra. Galba brought him to Rome, where he was a Profeſſor of Eloquence with applauſe. And 'tis ſaid alſo, That he was the firſt that was paid by the Publick for Teaching. He had a great ſhare in the Eſteem of Domitian, who committed to him the Care of Educating his Nephews. We have his Inſtitutions of Rhetorick, which deſerve the Name of a Complete Piece.

QUINTILIANUS, Father or Grandfather of him we have ſpoken of, compoſed thoſe hundred and forty five Declamations which we have, and which were firſt publiſhed by Ugolin, and ſince by Peter Pithou.

QUINTILIUS (Marcus Aurelius) was Brother to the Emperor Claudius, and ſucceeded him in 270. But his Severity rendring him odious, the Soldiers killed him ſeventeen days after his Inveſtiture in the Empire. Others add, That finding himſelf too weak to reſiſt Aurelian, he cauſed his Veins to be cut.

QUINTIN (John) of Picardy, a Tailor by Trade, lived in the beginning of the ſixteenth Century. He joined himſelf to one Copin, and they two made the chief of that infamous Doctrine of the Libertines. They publiſhed it in Holland and Brabant. But being taken at Tournay, they were puniſhed in 1530. Vid. Libertines.

QUINTIN MESIUS, or Matſis, a Painter, Born at Antwerp, or according to others, at Lovain, lived about the beginning of the Sixteenth Century. It's ſaid he had a marvellous Inclination for Painting from his Youth, but that his Father bound him to a Farrier. Sometime after he fell paſſionately in love with a Maid, whom a Painter Courted. She aſſur'd him that ſhe had a greater Inclination for him than for the Painter; but added, That ſhe had a grand Averſion for the Trade of a Farrier. Whereupon he gave it over, and applied himſelf to Painting, with ſo much care and aſſiduity, that he rendred himſelf equal to the beſt Maſters that were in Flanders. His Maſter-piece was, a Deſcent from the Croſs: His Excellence lay in drawing Portraicts. Sir Thomas Moor, in his Poems, ſpeaks in his Praiſe,

Quintine, veteris novator artis
Magno non minor Artifex Apelle!

Mire compoſito potens colore
Vitam affingere mortuis figuris, &c.

He died in 1529, at Antwerp, where he was interred in the Church of the Carthuſians. An hundred years after Cornelius Vander Geeſt cauſed his Bones to be transferred to the foot of the Tower of the Church of Nôtredame, where is to be ſeen the Marble-ſtatue of this Painter, with this Epitaph, Quintino Matſis, incomparabilis artis Pictori, admiratrix gratáque poſteritas anno poſt obitum ſeculari 1629. And a little lower is written in Golden Letters upon a black Marble,

Connubialis amor de Mulcibre fecit Apellem:

QUINTUS CURTIUS, Surnamed Rufus, a Roman Gentleman, who writ the Hiſtory of Alexander. It's not well known what time he lived in. Some have imagined becauſe of the excellency of his Style, that he was before Titus Livius, and Velleius Paterculus, and was the ſame that Cicero ſpeaks of in one of his Epiſtles to Quintus his Brother. The moſt common Opinion is, that he lived in Veſpaſian's time; though ſome think he was contemporary with Trajan; each wreſting to their ſence the paſſages in his Tenth Book; where he makes a Digreſſion upon the Felicity of his time. It's added, That having lived to a very great Age, 'tis probable he may be the ſame mentioned by Suetonius; under the Character of a great Rhetorician, in the Life of Tiberius. And Tacitus, as Prætor and Pro-conſul of Africa, under the ſame Emperor; ſince there was no more than thirty two years from the laſt year of Tiberius, to the firſt of Veſpaſian. That which Pliny the Younger, in Lib. 7. Ep. 7. ad Suram, ſays of an Apparition ſeen in Africa by one Curtius Rufus, can be underſtood of no other than him whom Tacitus mentions. It's counted ſtrange that this Author ſhould be unmention'd by Quintilian; but then we are to underſtand that Quintilian does not take notice of all the Authors that liv'd before him. The two firſt Books of this Author, with the end of the fifth, the beginning of the ſixth, and ſome few Pieces of the laſt, which is the tenth, have been loſt. Chriſtoflus Bruno, Freinſhemius, Baderus, and ſome others have made Supplements to it.

QUIR, a Country which makes part of the great Terra Auſtralis. It was diſcovered by Ferdinand Quir, a Spaniard, who gave it his Name. But we know but little of it, becauſe there is no Colony of Europeans.

QUIRIACUS, or Kiriacus, an Hebrew, who was before called Judas, and who did notable Service in finding out the Holy Croſs. The Empreſs Helena, being at Jeruſalem, and ſeeking for this Treaſure, this Hebrew preſented her with a Memorial which had been preſerved in his Family for 326 years, where was ſet down the place ſhe ſought for. The Empreſs made a ſearch there, and found out the Croſs. Having been baptized, ſhe gave him the Name of Quiriacus. And according to the opinion of Beda, he was afterwards made Biſhop, and ſuffered Martyrdom at Jeruſalem.

QUIRINALES, Feaſts which the Romans Celebrated on the 17th. of February, in honour of Romulus, ſurnamed Quirinus. The Feaſt of Fools was kept the ſame day by thoſe who had not celebrated the Fornacalia when the Grand Curio had put them in order, for they did not know of what Curia they were, and to which they belonged.

QUIRINUS was the Name by which Romulus was adored of the Romans after his death. This Name was given him becauſe he was the Founder of the Romans, according to the moſt received opinion, whom he himſelf in his life-time had called Quirites, after he had given part of his new City to the Sabines, who quitted the Town of Cures to come and dwell at Rome, as Titus Livius reports. It's writ, That one Proculus, who had been much beloved by Romulus, made Oath before the Senate, that this Prince appeared to him after his Death, and predicted to him the future Grandeur of the City of Rome, promiſing to be the Protector of it, and expreſly charging him, That he ſhould be adored there under the Name of Quirinus. He had his Temple upon the Mount, which from his Name was called Quirinale, and now Monte Cavallo, becauſe of the 2 Marble Horſes made by Phidias and Praxiteles, which are placed there. The Gate alſo of Rome towards this Mountain is called Quirinale. And the Feaſts which were celebrated yearly in honour of Romulus were alſo called Quirinales. Juno hath moreover been called Quiritis, and Janus beſides hath been ſurnamed Quirinus.

QUIRITES, a Name of the Romans allied with the People of the City of Cures, now called Correſe, in the Country of the Sabines. Romulus having made an Alliance with Tatius, King of the Sabines, gave the Right of Citizens to this People, and would have the Romans and Sabines be called by the common Name of Quirites.

QUISERRA, a King that reigned in Perſia before the Error of Mahomet, that is, before the year 600. He was ſurnamed Arabi-Adel, that is, Juſt. He begun a Palace in the Country, which he could not bring to Perfection by reaſon of the obſtinacy of a Lady who had an Houſe near it, and would not ſell it to him. This Royal Building, which was in truth very beautiful, was much admired by two Embaſſadors of a neighbouring Prince. But they were as much aſtoniſhed at the King's Complaiſance for the unreaſonable Wilfulneſs of this Lady, whoſe little Manſion had ſo ill an Effect upon his Palace. Quiſerra, who weighed the matter like a great Monarch, told them, That that little Houſe which he was not willing to deſtroy by his Authority evidenced his Moderation, a Vertue that ſeldom keeps company with great Power. Whereas the Palace would but ſet forth his Magnificence, which is a Vertue that drains Subjects to eſtabliſh a vain Reputation. Boterus.

QUITO, a Town and Province of America, in Peru. This Country hath had ſometime its particular Princes; afterwards it came under the Dominion of the King of Peru; and finally of the Spaniards, who have a Governour there at Audienca de el Quito. The Government of Quito is a conſiderable part of South America, and one of the three principal Provinces of the Kingdom of Peru, bounded on the North with Popian, on the South with the reſt of Peru, and on the Weſt with the Pacifick Ocean. The Andes divide it into two parts. Beſides Quito it contains Caneta, Quixos, and the South and the Middle Popian, with ſome other Territories of ſmall Note. It's a fruitful, populous, and well-watered Province. The chief City, by the Spaniards, is called St. Francis; but often from the Province, Quito or Quitu. To the North and Weſt the Plain in which it ſtands is cloſed with high Mountains, which extend from Sea to Sea. The Site is but thirty minutes from the Line to the South. The Soil ſeems barren, yet yields Corn, Fruits and Cattle, plentifully. The Poſition is pleaſant, and the temperature of the Air like that of Spain. The natural Inhabitants are more civil and induſtrious than thoſe of the greater part of Peru. It ſtands on a dry, ſandy Foundation, and in the middle of the City is a Cleft in the Ground, over which are many Bridges. In our Author's time it was Inhabited by 500 Spaniſh Families, ſome Portugals, and ſome other European Nations. Laet. pag. 412.

QUIVIRA, a Country of North America, ſituate between New-Mexico, Mount-Suala, and Florida. Others have believed it to be to the North of Calinfornia, towards Terra-Incognita, near the Streight of Jeſſo. However this Country has good Graſs all-a-long the Sea-ſide. The Cows, which are numerous there, have a Bunch upon their Backs, like a Camel, and the Dogs are ſo big, that the Inhabitants make uſe of them as we do here of Horſes. It's ſaid, That a Troop of Spaniſh Soldiers under the Conduct of their Captain Vaſquius Coronetus, willing to try their Fortune, attempted to paſs through this Country, edged forwards with hopes to obtain a Booty which they ſhould find there. They found much Difficulty to paſs over the Sands and Deſarts, where they were much incommoded with a ſort of Hail as hard as Stones, and as big as a Gooſe's Egg. And at laſt, arriving at the Place, they went to ſee the King, called Tatarappus, and found an old Man all over naked, who had a Collar of Braſs for an Ornament about his Neck. Thus underſtanding how much they were miſtaken, when they boaſted of the Riches of this Country, they returned in all haſte to Mexico. Baudr.

QUIXOS, or los Quixos, a People of Southern America, in Peru. This Country was diſcovered in 1557, by the Spaniards, who have four Colonies there.

QUOD-VULT-DEUS, Biſhop of Carthage in the time that that City was taken by Genſeric, King of the Vandals, in 439, who put him with moſt of his Clergy on board ſome Leaky-Ships, without any Proviſion at all. But God was their Pilot, and they happily arrived at Naples, where they were received as the glorious Confeſſors of Jeſus Chriſt. This Prelate is perhaps the ſame, who before he was elected Biſhop, entreated St. Auguſtin to write him a Treatiſe of Hereſies, which this Learned Doctor performed, and dedicated to him. Baronius.

R.

R: THIS Letter, whoſe pronunciation is ſomewhat rough and harſh, was called the Dog's Letter, for that in effect it ſeemed to imitate the ſnarling of thoſe Animals. 'Tis in this ſence that Perſius has ſaid, Sat. 1.

> ——Sonat hic de nare canina
> Littera——

It's ſometimes changed into an S in the end of words, as Arbos for Arbor, honos for honor, and in Diminutives into L, as Frater Fratrellus, Caper Capella, &c.

RAAB or Javarin, a Town and Fortreſs in Hungary, at the Confluence of the Raab and Danube, with a Biſhop's See ſuffragan to Gran or Strigonium. The Germans give it the name of Raab; the French call it Javarin; the Hungarians Gewen; the Italians Giavarin; and the Latin Authors Jaurinum, Arabo and Narabo. This Town was taken by the Turks in 1591, and regained by M. de Vaubecourt, a Frenchman, in 1606. George Draſcovitz, Biſhop of this City, held a Synod here in 1579, the Decrees of which have been publiſhed.

RAAB, or the Rab, Lat. Arabo, a River in Hungary, ariſing in the Lower Stiria, and running through Lower Hungary, and the County of Javarin, waters the Abby of St. Gottard, and the Town of Kerment; afterwards it divides it ſelf into two Branches, and forms the Iſle of Raab, which is ſeven miles in extent; after which it unites again, and diſcharges it ſelf into the Danube. It was upon the Banks of this River, that the French under the Command of the Mareſchal the Duke of Feüillade, won a famous Victory over the Turks in 1664, between Kerment and the Abby of St. Gottard. Baudr.

RABANITES, a name by which the Jews are called, who follow the Doctrine of their Fathers or Anceſtors, which they call Rabbanim; and tis properly thoſe who ſucceeded the ancient Phariſees, all whoſe Traditions they moſt obſtinately adhere to, which diſtinguiſhes 'em from the Sect of the Caraites, ſo called becauſe they confine themſelves to the Scriptures. Theſe laſt, as F. Simon remarks, extreamly hate the other Jews, whom they look upon as Hereticks. P. Simon.

RABANUS (Maurus Magnentius) Archbiſhop of Mayence, one of the moſt illuſtrious Writers of the Ninth Century; he is called by ſome Arabanus Maurus. He was a Philoſopher, Poet, and Divine. He became Abbot of the Monaſtery of Fuldes, wherein he had been placed very young. He carried himſelf with ſo much Wiſdom and Precaution during the unhappy Diviſions between Lewis the Debonnaire and his Children, that he had the good Will of both, and was the Mediator of their Reconciliation: He writ a Letter to comfort Lewis, whom they had unjuſtly depoſed, and afterwards publiſhed a Treatiſe touching the reſpect due from Children to their Parents, and from Subjects to their Princes. Having procured a diſcharge from his Charge in order to apply himſelf the more freely to Contemplation, and to ſatisfie ſome of the Religious of his Monaſtery, he retired to Mount St. Peter, where he had built a Church, and gave himſelf up entirely to Spiritual Exerciſes, and the ſtudy of the Holy Scriptures. Lewis King of Germany coming to Rateſdorf, a Priory depending upon Fuldes, ſent for Rabanus, and ſignify'd his deſire of having an Explanation of the Canticles, which were ſung at Mattins, which put him upon going about it forthwith, and ſent his Work to that Prince. He dedicated to him alſo about the ſame time, a Commentary upon the Prophet Daniel: He compoſed a Treatiſe of the Viſion of God, accompanied with a Diſcourſe concerning the Purity of the Heart; he wrote, beſides, a large Tract of the Univerſe, or of the Nature of Things, which he dedicated to Haimo Biſhop of Halberſtadt. Lewis the German having underſtood that he publiſhed this Treatiſe, deſir'd it of him, and Rabanus ſent him a Copy, accompanied with a Letter, ſhewing, that that Prince had Learned Readers by him, who ſhould ſometimes read the Books to him, which he judged fit to entertain his Mind. The Emperor Lotharius had alſo by him ſuch ſort of Officers as may eaſily be ſeen in an Epiſtle of Rabanus, which is at the beginning of his Homilies or Moral Diſcourſes upon the Epiſtles and Goſpels of the year, which he compoſed by order of this Prince. After the death of Archbiſhop Orgar, which happened in 847, the Chapter of Mayence choſe him for their Paſtor. They drew him then from his Retirements, and altho' he had had Diſtempers upon him, that had much weakened him, he was brought to King Lewis, who conſented to his Election. He was conſecrated in his Cathedral, in the preſence of that Prince, towards the end of June, and three Months after, he held a Council in the Abby of St. Alban of Mayence by Lewis's order. The year following was aſſembled another by him, where was condemned the Opinion of Goteſchalcus, who maintain'd an Erroneous Doctrine upon the Subject of Predeſtination. He went himſelf through the Country to preach the Word of God, and to inſtruct the People. The Famine which deſolated the Territories of Mayence in eight hundred and fifty, gave him opportunity to manifeſt his Charity; for retiring into a Village of his Dioceſs called Winſell, he fed daily above three hundred poor People, beſides thoſe that uſually eat from his Table. Two years after he aſſembled a Council again at Mayence, by the command of Lewis the German, or King of Germany, where were the Abbots of the Eaſtern parts of France, of Bavaria and Saxony. They decided Queſtions about Eccleſiaſtical Affairs, but thoſe Decrees are not extant. Thoſe Commentaries upon the Scriptures were little more than bare Extracts of the Works of the Fathers, according to the Cuſtom of the Divines of his time. He died in 856. We have divers Editions of his Works, which George Colvoner, Chancellor of the Univerſity of Doway, has collected in ſix Volumes in 1627, Printed at Cologne. In the beginning is writ the Life of Rabanus by Rodolphus his Diſciple, and another by Trithemius in three Books. Herman Maurianus. Lambert in Chron.

RABASTEINS, a City of the Dioceſs of Alby in Upper Languedoc upon the River Tarn; it's called in Latin Rapiſtaninum, and hath three Turneps for its Arms. Auger Galliard, who in the laſt Age compoſed ſome Poems in the Vulgar Tongue, was born in this Town. Baudrand.

RABATH, Ammon, Aman, the City of Waters, ſeated on the River Jabock, whoſe Waters ſurrounded it. It was the Capital City of the Ammonites, and before that of a Race of Gyants called Zamzoumims, which the Children of Lot extirpated, Gen. 19. Deut. 2. Og the King of Baſan had taken this City before the Iſraelites entred Canaan. The Ammonites recovered the Poſſeſſion of it from them, and kept it till the time of David, when it was beſieged and taken by Joab, 2 Sam. 11. 12. Ptolemæus Philadelphus King of Egypt took this City, and rebuilding it, called it Philadelphia.

RABBINS, the name of the Jewiſh Doctors, whom the Hebrews called Rab, Rabbi, and Rabboni. Some have obſerved, that Rab was a Title of Honour for thoſe who had been received to be Doctors in Chaldæa; that Rabbi was a Name proper to the Iſraelites of the Holy-Land, and that Rabboni was not given but to the Wiſe-men that were of the Houſe of David. All theſe names ſignified Maſter or Doctor. Selden ſays, That Rabbi was the Title of him who had been made Judge or Senator of the Sanhedrin in the Holy-Land, and that they gave Rab or Rabb to him who had been conſtituted in a Land of Captivity; but it is certain, that thoſe who were elected for Judges of the Sanhedrin, in its firſt Inſtitution, had neither the Title of Rabbi nor that of Rab. It began to be given (under Rabbin Gamaliel the Elder, under Rabbin Simeon, his Son, who died in the Deſtruction of the ſecond Temple, and under Rabbin Jochanan the Son of Zacai, who were all Preſidents of the Sanhedrin) to Men promoted to the Order of Judicature. Since that time they began to give this Title of Rabbi, to Sadoc and Eleazer the Sons of Jacob; and this Cuſtom took its Riſe from the Diſciples of Rabbin Jochanan the Son of Zacai, and continued in this manner; but the order that was commonly obſerv'd herein, was, that Rabbi is greater than Rabb, and Rabban greater than Rabbi; but he who was called ſimply by his name, without any Title, was greater than Rabban. They were to paſs through ſeveral Degrees before they could have the Title of Rabbi; the firſt Degree was of thoſe whom they called Bachur, that is, elected from the number of Diſciples; the ſecond of thoſe named Chaber, that is to ſay, the fellow of a Rabbin, to whom they gave the Title by the impoſition of Hands, and called this Ceremony Semicah. Afterwards, when they judged them capable to teach others, they qualify'd them with the Title of Rabbi. In their publick Aſſemblies the Rabbins were to ſit on high Chairs, the Fellows upon Benches, and the Diſciples upon the Ground, at the Feet of their Maſters. The Rabbins determined all matters in Religion, and were concerned alſo in Civil Affairs; they celebrated Marriages, and publiſhed Divorces; they Preached, if capacitated for it, and had the firſt Seats in the Synagogues; they chaſtiſed the Diſobedient, and had alſo power to excommunicate. Leo de Modena. Cunæus de Rep. Hebr. Lib. 1. C. 21.

RABBOTH. The Jews gave this name to certain Allegorical Commentaries upon the five Books of Moſes, of great Authority among them, and eſteemed very ancient; for they pretend they were compoſed about the 30th of Chriſt. They have a great many fabulous Stories concerning them. It's eaſie to prove theſe Books are not of that Antiquity the Rabbins would make them; And this Morinus has evidently ſhewed in the ſecond part of his Exercitations upon the Bible. When they cited theſe Books they diſtinguiſhed them by the firſt word of each Book of Moſes; for Example, they call Geneſis Bereſcit Rabba; Exodus, Scemet Rabba; Numbers, Bamidbar Rabba, and ſo the reſt; and they call them in the Plural

Number Rabboth; that is to ſay, great Comments. There are divers Editions of them in Italy as well as in the Levant. F. Simon affirms, He made uſe of an Edition of Salonica.

RABELAIS (Francis) Famous for his facetious and jocoſe Railleries, was born at Chinon, a City of Tourain, and lived in the Sixteenth Century; he took the Habit of a Franciſcan Friar in the Monaſtery of the Cordeliers de Fountenay le Comte in the Lower Poictou, where he render'd himſelf well skill'd in the Languages, and eſpecially in Greek, which may be underſtood by the Greek Epiſtles of Budæus, who praiſes him for his excellency in that Language. Afterwards ſome perſons of the firſt Quality, to whom his jocoſe Humour and Merriment were agreeable, made him quit his Cloiſter, and obtained leave for him from Pope Clement the VIIth. to paſs into the Order of St. Benet, in the Monaſtery of Maizellais, but afterwards he quitted his Religious Habit altogether, and went to Study Phyſick at Montpelier, where he took his Degree of Doctor, and publiſhed Hippocrates's Aphoriſms in Latin. The Chancellor du Prat having by an Act of Parliament cauſed the Privileges of the College of Phyſicians to be aboliſhed at Montpelier, it's ſaid Rabelais manag'd ſo well as to get it revoked; and that 'tis for that reaſon, that thoſe who are admitted Doctors in that Univerſity, wear his Robe, which is had there in great veneration. He became afterwards known at Paris, where Cardinal John du Bellay, Biſhop of that City, choſe him for his Phyſician in ordinary, and brought him in that quality to Rome, where Rabelais could not forbear jeering Pope Paul III. to his Face. The ſame Cardinal procured him a Bull of Abſolution for his Apoſtacy. After his return he imploy'd him in moſt important Negotiations, and gave him a Prebendary in St. Maur des Foſſes, with the Parſonage of Meudon. It was about this time that Rabelais writ his Pantagruell, a Comical Satyr, but a little too Licentious. There are other Pieces of his of the ſame nature which are more ſerious. For beſides the Aphoriſms of Hippocrates, there are French and Latin Epiſtles which he writ in a fine ſtyle to Cardinal de Chatillon, to Geffery d'Eſtiſſack Biſhop of Mallezais, to Andrew Tiraqueau, and to other great Men. He publiſhed alſo his Sciomachia, or Rejoicings held at Rome for the birth of the Duke of Orleans. His French Letters manifeſt how fit he was for buſineſs, and that he had contracted friendſhip at Rome, with divers Cardinals and other Prelates. The Learned of St. Martha diſdained not to comment upon his Letters. But yet, tho' Rabelais was much diſcredited for his Manners, becauſe of the Railleries he made on Sacred and Religious things; it muſt be confeſs'd he was a Man of great Parts. He underſtood French, Italian, Spaniſh, Dutch, Latin, Greek and Hebrew: It was ſaid alſo, that he was well skill'd in Arabick, which he learnt at Rome of a Biſhop of Caramith; beſides all this, he was a Grammarian, Poet, Philoſopher, Phyſician, Lawyer and Aſtronomer; for we have an Almanack of his for the year 1553, calculated for Lyons, and printed in that City. He died about 1553, the 70th of his age.

C. RABIRIUS, a Latin Poet that liv'd in Virgil's time, and writ a Poem concerning the Battle of Actium, between Auguſtus and M. Antony. Ovid. l. 4. Eleg. ult.

RABSACES or RABSHAKEH, Sennacherib the King of Aſſyria's General, and his Incendiary, who being come according to his Maſter's Command, to beſiege Jeruſalem, in the time of King Hezekias, and having blaſphemed againſt God, and deſpiſed Hezekias's Forces (who relyed upon the Divine Aſſiſtance) was according to the Prophecy of Iſaiah, entirely defeated; for the Angel of the Lord deſtroy'd in one Night 185000 of his Soldiers.

RABUTIN, a Family which takes its name from a Caſtle ſo called in Charolois, from which the Count de Buſſy Rabutin Author of the French Memoirs is deſcended. It's the nobleſt and moſt ancient of the Dutchy of Burgundy.

Cape RACE, the moſt Southern Cape of New-foundland in North America, in the Lat. of 46. 25.

RACHEL, Jacob's Wife. See Gen. 29. 30, 35.

RACHINGE, a French Prince who lived in the Sixth Century; he render'd himſelf odious by his Cruelties. A young Gentleman who was in his Service, having married a Lady of his Houſe without acquainting him therewith, this Prince is ſaid, when he came to know of their marriage, to have cauſed them to be ſhut up both alive in a thick Wooden Trunk, which he ordered to be made on purpoſe, and ſo buried them in a Ditch. This was the laſt act of his Cruelties, for having conſpired ſome time after, againſt Childebert I. he was taken by that King's Guards and cut to pieces, and by Childebert's Command, caſt to the Dogs. Guil. Paradin.

RACHIS, Duke of Friuli, Son of Remmon, was in 744 choſen King of the Lombards inſtead of Aldebrand Luitprand's Nephew. He made a League with the Holy See for twenty years; but not ſticking to violate his Oath, he beſieged Perugia in 750. Pope Zachary put himſelf at the Head of his Clergy, and went to ſpeak with this Prince, who not only rais'd the Siege, but left his Crown to his Brother Aiſtulphus, and confin'd himſelf to a Monaſtery, to do Penance there for what he had done. Paul. Diacon.

RADAGAISUS, a Scythian by Nation, King of the Goths. In 405 he paſs'd into Italy with an Army of two hundred thouſand Goths, who ruin'd all the Towns they met with in their way, and exerciſed unſpeakable cruelties upon the People. The Forces of the Emperor Honorius were too weak to oppoſe this Torrent, ſo that he was obliged to make uſe of the Troops of the other Goths and Huns, under the Conduct of Haldin and Sarus; but before they came to engage, the Army of Radagaiſus was ſtruck with ſuch a panick fear, that that Prince, who vaunted he would ſhed all the Romans Blood, fled himſelf ſhamefully, and in his flight met with death inſtead of the Victory he promiſed. All his Soldiers were defeated, and ſuch a vaſt number of them were made Priſoners, that they were ſold like droves of Cattle, at a very low price. Proſper & Marcellin. St. Auguſtin.

RADEGONDA, Queen of France, was a Princeſs of great Beauty, but of greater Vertue; ſhe was Daughter to Bertaire or Berthier King of Thuringia, from whence King Clotharius the firſt brought her after the firſt Battle he fought with Childebert. Six years after ſhe married, ſhe became a Nun, and fixed her reſidence at Poictiers, where ſhe built the Abby of the Holy Croſs, and there died on the thirteenth of Auguſt, in the year 587.

RADERUS (Matthew) a Jeſuit, was of Inichinghen in Tirol, where he was born in 1561, and died the 22d of December, in 1634, the 74th of his Age. He publiſhed in 1615 The Chronicle of Alexandria; his other Pieces are, The Hiſtory of Peter of Sicily, with the Latin Verſion and Notes of the ſame nature; The Acts of the Eighth General Council; The Works of St. John Climachus; Viridarium Sanctorum, Par. 3. Bavaria Sancta; Bavaria Pia; Martial with Notes; Quintus Curtius with the Arguments, Comments and Supplements. Aula Sancta Theodoſii Junioris; Auctarium ad lib. 5. Nicholai Trigautii, &c. *Alegamb. RADNOR, Lat. Radnoria, the chief Town of Radnorſhire in South Wales, ſtands in a pleaſant Valley betwixt two Hills on the North ſide of the River Somergil. Upon one of thoſe are ſtill to be ſeen the Ruins of an ancient Caſtle, demoliſh'd by the notorious Rebel Owen Glendower, from whence a Wall was drawn along the Weſt-ſide of the Town, the Ruins whereof appear in many places. It gives Title to an Engliſh Earl, the firſt of which was John Lord Robarts, Son of Richard Lord Robarts Baron of Truro in Cornwall, who for his Eminent Qualifications was frequently called to ſeveral of the higheſt Imployments in the State. At the Reſtauration of King Charles the Second, he was made Lord Privy-Seal, in which Office he continu'd many years. He was alſo made Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and during his abſence the Office of Privy-Seal was executed by Commiſſioners. For his great Knowledge in Parliamentary Affairs, he was often by Commiſſion Conſtituted Speaker of the Houſe of Lords; and for ſeveral years before his death was Lord Preſident of the Privy-Council. All which, and ſeveral other High Truſts he diſcharged with great Ability, Integrity and Courage. He Married the Lady Lucy Rich, Daughter of Robert Earl of Warwick, by whom he had ſeveral Sons; his Eldeſt, Lord Viſcount Bodmyn, died before him at his Return from his Embaſſie in Denmark, ſo that he was ſucceeded by his Grandſon Charles Bodville preſent Earl of Radnor, Lord Lieutenant and Cuſtos Rotulorum of the County of Cornwall. The Juriſdiction of this Town reacheth ten or twelve Miles in compaſs, is govern'd by a Bailiff and 25 Burgeſſes, keepeth Courts of Plea for all actions. From London 119 Miles.

RADNOR-SHIRE, Lat. Radnoria, is an Inland County of South-Wales, ſo called from Radnor, the chief Place thereof; is one of the twelve Shires in the Principality of Wales, bounded on the N. by Monmouth, on the E. by Shropſhire and Herefordſhire, on the S. by Brecknock, cut off by the Rivers of Clarwen and Wye; the Weſtern point falls upon Cardiganſhire. Its form is triangular, the ſides almoſt equal, the whole circumference being about 90 miles. It is divided into ſix Hundreds, wherein are 52 Pariſhes and 5 Market-Towns, anciently Inhabited by the Silures, and being now in the Dioceſs of Hereford. Here the Air is ſharp and cold, as Wales generally is by reaſon of the Snows that lie upon the Hills. The Soil in ſome places poor, in others pretty fruitful, as in the E. and S. parts. Of the Market-Towns, Radnor only is privileged to ſend a Member to Parliament, beſides the Knight of the Shire. This County prov'd fatal to Vortigern the laſt Monarch of the Britiſh Blood by Lightning, and to Llewellen the laſt Prince of the Britiſh Race in 1282, found hid in the vaſt Mountains of this County, and ſlain by one Adam Fracton; his Head being crowned with Ivy was ſet upon the Tower of London, in whom the Britiſh Race of Princes ended.

RAGIMBERT King of Italy, obtained that Kingdom after he had defeated Aſprand and Rothairus. He had divers Wars during his Reign, and then it was that Giſulphus Duke of Beneventum, who had ſucceeded Grimald entred into Campania di Romana, with a puiſſant Army, where he committed great diſorders, and came as far as Horta without any oppoſition. Pope John went to meet him with divers Prieſts, and made him great Preſents in order to oblige him to return, and releaſe thoſe whom he had made Priſoners. Sigon. Faſti Conſular.

RAGIMBERT Duke of Turin, uſurp'd the Crown of Lombardy from Luitberd, who was but a Child. This happen'd in 701; and three months after, Aripert diſpoſſeſs'd him.

RAGOTSKI (Sigiſmund) was elected Prince of Tranſilvania in 1606, after the death of Boskai; but preferring Repoſe to Honour, he refuſed this offer; and ſeeing himſelf conſtrain'd to accept of it, he did it with ſo much reluctancy, that it was no better to him than an honourable Servitude. He poſſeſs'd this Principality peaceably, and was equally belov'd of Matthias King of Hungary, and Achmet Emperor of the Turks; but however, that affected him not, and ſo he yielded up his Right to Gabriel Bathori in 1608. J. Lætus.

RAGUENEAU, a ſworn Scrivener of Paris, hath been known in this Age by a Treatiſe he wrote of Falſe Inſcriptions, and of the Knowing of Writings and Seals: He taught alſo in that Piece, the way to efface a Writing, and to renew thoſe which had been worn out by Time. Therein alſo is ſet forth the Forgeries uſed in the Counterfeiting of Writings; but as Ragueneau made uſe himſelf of that Secret, he was ſeiz'd in 1682, and condemned to Perpetual Impriſonment; his Book was alſo prohibited, as being pernicious for thoſe who would make ill uſe of it.

RAGUSA, a City and Republick in Dalmatia upon the Gulf of Venice, and an Archbiſhop's See. Some Authors believe it to be the ſame with the ancient Epidaurus; but others will have the Ruins of that City to be on the other ſide, in a place called Raguſi Vecchio; however it be, this City, which the Sclavonians call Dubronich, is very well built: Its ſituation is upon a Rock, ſo high on one ſide and craggy, that 'tis a Covert to it; and on the other ſide it ſtretcheth it ſelf along a little Tongue of Land, where 'tis waſhed by the Sea. Near the Town is the Fort of St. Lawrence, and a Port: It's inhabited by many Merchants, and the beſt peopled place in Dalmatia. The Government of it is almoſt like unto that of the Republick of Venice. It's true, that the fear of loſing their imaginary Liberty is ſo great, that it obliges them to change their Duke or Governour every Month, and to continue their Officers in their Poſts but for ſix Weeks: wherefore Gentlemen cannot wear a Sword, nor lie abroad, without informing the Senate therewith; and in the Night-time, Strangers, and eſpecially Turks, are lock'd up in their Lodgings by them. Moreover, the Gates of the City are never open but for three or four hours by Day in Summer-time, and not above an hour and an half in Winter. The Raguſians pay Tribute to the Turks, whom they fear; to the Venetians, whom they hate; to the Pope, Emperor and King of Spain, upon ſome valuable Conſideration. Raguſia, or the Country of Raguſa, is but inconſiderable, comprehending no more than the Town of that name, Stagno, and two or three Villages. This City is very much ſubject to Earthquakes, and had terrible ſhocks in 1634 and 1667. The Senate of Raguſa is compoſed of ſixty Senators, whereof forty at leaſt muſt meet together when they aſſemble for Judgment. Civil Matters, at the commencement of the Suit, are brought before ſix of the Senate, from whom there is an Appeal to the College of thirty. who are no Senators; and if the Decrees be for Sums exceeding five hundred Crowns, the Appeals are finally determined by the Senate. Their Judicial Proceedings are in Latin, but they plead in Italian, or the Language of the Country. Criminal Cauſes are judged by an Officer, from whom there is an Appeal to a Juriſdiction compoſed of ſix Senators; and if the Sentence be confirmed there, the Cauſe is at an end, but if otherwiſe, the Senate takes cognizance thereof, and judges it. As to the Affairs Politick of leſſer importance, the Governour with ſix of the Senate decides them, and theſe ſix Senators are in that Office a year. Monconis.

RAIMOND the Firſt, Count of Tripoli, was before Count of St. Giles. He was Brother to Raimond the firſt Count of Tholouſe, and Brother by the Mother's ſide to Count Hugh the Great, of Luſignan. He bought the County of Tholouſe of his Nephew Hugh Haimond; afterwards joining himſelf with other Princes, he raiſed an Army for the recovery of the Holy Land, whither he went, and carried with him his Wife and Children: The Pope's Legate accompanied him. He preſently took the Holy City, and afterwards Tortoiſe, Biblis, and divers other Towns, and cauſed a new Caſtle to be built near the City of Tripoli, which he called the Pilgrims Mount, and laid Siege to Tripoli, where was the Mahometan King. Hugh the Great, Count of Luſignan, brought an Army out of France to relieve him, with much Proviſion alſo. He died at that Siege, and the Counteſs with her Children was in the Town of Tortoiſe.

RAIMOND the Second, Count of Tripoli, was the Son of Ponce and Cecilia, and ſucceeded in the Earldom of Tripoli: He married Hodierna Daughter of Baldwin II. King of Jeruſalem. He was the Son of a Siſter of Foulques King of Jeruſalem; and his Wife was Siſter to Queen Melizena Wife of Foulques, and of Alix, Princes of Antioch. When his Father was kill'd, he was but eighteen years of age; and as young as he was, before his Father was buried, he, with his Army, fought the Saracens in Mount Libanus, and made a great ſlaughter of them: Nevertheleſs, ſome years after, he was kill'd by two Aſſaſſines of the Saracens who had conceal'd themſelves at the Gate of the City.

RAIMOND the Third, Count of Tripoli, Son to Count Raimond, ſucceded in the Earldom of Tripoli. He married Exitima Widow of Walter Prince of Galilee; he was the cauſe of the ruine of the Kingdom of Jeruſalem, by betraying King Guy of Luſignan, and all the Chriſtian Army, to the Turks; he was alſo about to ſurrender his Earldom to King Saladine; but the day after that Deliberation he was found dead, and alſo circumciſed. He left no Heirs behind him. Hiſt. de Royaume de Cypre.

RAIMOND the Sixth, called the Old, was Count and Marqueſs of Tholouſe. This Prince took the part of the Albigenſes, and was excommunicated, after he had ſuſtained with incredible hardſhip the toils of a tedious War. He was deprived of his Earldom of Tholouſe in 1215, by the Council of Lateran, who gave the Inveſtiture thereof to Simon Count of Montfort, which gave occaſion of new, tedious and troubleſom Affairs. Raimond died in 1222.

RAIMOND, Prince of Antioch, Brother to William laſt Count of Poictiers, obtain'd the Principality of Antioch by the means of his Wife Conſtance, Daughter to Raimond II. and was kill'd in a Battle againſt Nuradin King of the Saracens.

RAIMOND (Roger) Count of Foix: He aſſiſted the Albigenſes, and put himſelf at the head of his own Troops, in oppoſition to thoſe of the Croſs; but after the Battle of Muret he reconciled himſelf to the Church of Rome, and died in 1222.

RAINAUD (Theophilus) a Jeſuit: No Author in this Age hath writ more than he, nor treated of more different Subjects: He publiſhed ſeparately the greateſt part of his Writings; but as there remained yet ſome others which he had not expoſed to the World, he attempted, towards the end of his Life, to get them all printed together; but being prevented by ſickneſs, whereof he died, he left it to the management of a Father of his Order, who compleated that Edition, which was printed at Lyons in Nineteen Volumes, in 1667: The Style is obſcure, affected, and full of Digreſſions.

RAINAUD (Walter) Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and Chancellor of England, was a Perſon of Merit and Learning in the Fourteenth Century. He was firſt Lord Treaſurer under King Edward II. and then preferr'd to the See of Worceſter; ſome time after made Lord Chancellor, and laſt of all Archbiſhop of Canterbury. He held Three Councils, the firſt at London, the ſecond at Oxford, and the third at Lambeth, as Pitts will have it; but ſome of the beſt Authors ſay, this Council of Lambeth was held under Peccham Archbiſhop of Canterbury, in 1280. His Works are, Conſtitutiones Provinciales, where he treats De Scrutinio in Ordine faciendo, De Clericis Peregrinis, De Temporibus Ordinandorum, De Sacra Unctione, De Sacramentis Iterandis, De Officio Archdiaconi, De Celebratione Miſſarum, De Sponſalibus, De Pœnitentiis & Remiſſionibus. He died in 1327, in the beginning of the Reign of Edward III. Pitſæus de Illuſt. Angl. Script. Goodwin de Præſul. Angl.

RAIS, or Reis, a Name which the Turks give to the Captains of their Gallies: 'Tis an Arabick word which ſignifies Commander or Chief. The greateſt part of theſe Rai's are Renegado Italians, or their Children brought up near the Arſenal. They ſpeak a corrupted Italian, which they call Frank, to make them be underſtood by their Slaves, who are better treated than thoſe in the Gallies of Venice. Ricaut of the Ottoman Empire.

RAITHE, a Deſart near to Mount Sinai, in Arabia Petræa; or, according to others, in Egypt. It was inhabited by certain ſolitary Religious, or Hermits, in the third Century. The Greeks ſay that S. Moſes retired thither towards 230, and that after he had lived there ſome ninety years, he ſuffered Martyrdom in the time of the Emperor Diocleſian.

RAMADAN, or Ramazan, the Ninth Month in the Year of the Turks. Their Year is compoſed only of twelve Lunar Months, wherefore this Month Ramadan anſwers ſucceſſively to all the Months of our Year. Ramaz, which is pronounced as Ramadz, ſignifies Violent Heat. And this Month was ſo called, becauſe that at the time when new Names were given to the Months of the ancient Arabians, the Ninth happen'd to be in the Heat of Summer. During this Month the Mahometans are forbid to eat, drink, and lie with their Wives, from Break of day till Sun-ſetting; but when the Sun is ſet, and that the Iman has cauſed the Lamps to be lighted which are placed on the top of the Minarets or Towers of their Moſques, they are permitted to eat. Then they make good Chear, and ſpend the beſt part of the Night in Feaſting. They do moſt of their buſineſs by night, and ſleep all the day. So that their Faſting is properly nothing elſe but the change of Day into Night. They call this Month Holy and Sacred; and believe that as long as it laſts, the Gates of Paradiſe are open, and thoſe of Hell ſhut. 'Tis an impardonable Crime to drink Wine in this Time.

RAMESES, a King of Egypt, the Son of Sothis, began to reign in the Year 1097, after the Deluge, 1292 before the Birth of Chriſt. He cauſed an Obeliſk to be made that was one of the moſt magnificent and noble that was ever ſeen, which he ſet up in the Temple of the Sun, in the City of Thebes, where it remained till the time of Conſtantine the Great, who cauſed it to be tranſported to Alexandria in 334, in order to be brought from thence to Conſtantinople: but dying before this Deſign was executed, the Emperor Conſtantius had it tranſported from Alexandria to Rome, in 352, and ſet it up in the grand Cirque. It was an hundred and thirty two Foot high, and on the top of it was ſet a Golden Ball, which happening to be broken by a Thunder-bolt, Conſtantius placed in the room of it a Figure made of gilded Metal, which repreſented a Flame of Fire. When the Goths ſack'd the City of Rome, in 409, they overthrew this Obelisk, which remained buried in the Sand till Sixtus V. cauſed it to be digged up; and finding it broken in three pieces, he got them jointed together, and ſet up in the Square of St. John of Lateran. Upon the four ſides of this wonderful Piece might be ſeen a great number of Figures and Hieroglyphick Characters, which repreſented Moral and Political Laws, Vertues, the great Actions of illuſtrious Men, the Parts of the World, and divers other Secrets of Nature. This way of Writing was peculiar to the Egyptians, who, for example, repreſented Vigilance by the Eye, Imprudence by the Mouth, Unſtability of Riches by a Peacock's Tail, Prudence by a Serpent, Promptitude by a Sparrow-Hawk, Empire by a Man ſtanding upright with his right Arm lifted up; and thus all things Natural or Moral, as may be ſeen in the Explication which Father Kircher has made of this Obelisk. Kircher. Oedipus Ægyptiacus.

RAMINI, a falſe Prophet, honoured by the Zaffe-ramini, a People of Madagaſcar. He was, ſay they, ſent from God to the ſhore of the Red-Sea, near the City of Meccha; from whence he went to ſee for Mahomet, who gave him great Reception. But the Followers of Mahomet, ſeeing that Ramini would not eat the Fleſh of any Beaſt whereof he himſelf had not cut the Throat, contrived to be revenged of him for that contempt he ſhewed of their Prophet: Which Mahomet prevented, granting him liberty to cut the Throat of any Animal he had a mind to eat of, and giving him alſo one of his Daughters, nam'd Rafatema, to Wife. Ramini went from thence with his Wife towards the Eaſt, where he became Prince of the Country of Mangararo, and had a Son named Rabouroud, the Father of Rabadzi and Racoube, who taking a Sea-voyage, came aſhore in the Iſle of Madagaſcar, where they ſetled, and became the chief of Zaffe-ramini.

RAMIREZ, the firſt of that Name, King of Leon, ſucceeded Alphonſus II. ſirnamed The Chaſte, in 825. He was the Son of Veramond I. and reigned for twenty ſix years very glorioully, eſpecially after the Battle he gain'd over the Moors, wherein he killed ſixty thouſand of thoſe Barbarians. He died in 850. Ramirez II Son of Ordonno II. ſhut up his Brother Alphonſus IV. in a Monaſtery, and ſetled himſelf in the Throne. He defeated, in 939, four thouſand Saracens, and ten years after defeated them again at Talavera. But he enjoyed not that Advantage long, dying ſoon after. Ramirez III. the Son of Sancho I. ſucceeded him towards the year 967. He was then very young, but ſo cruel, paſſionate and debauched, that in 980 he was deprived of his Crown, which was ſet upon the Head of his Couſin Veramond II. But he diſputed it with him for two years, that is, till 982, which was that of his death. Mariana, Turquet, &c. Hiſt. Hiſp.

RAMNENSES, or Ramnes, the Name of the third part of the Inhabitants of Rome, when they were divided by Romulus into three Orders or Tribes, to wit into Ramnenſians, Tatians, and Lucerians. Vid. Luceres.

RAMSEY is the Sirname of the Earl of Dalhuſie, in the County of Lothian in Scotland; he is the chief of the Name, of which there have been very great Men, eſpecially for Valour.

RAMSEY, Lat. Limnus, a ſmall Iſland in the Iriſh Sea, call'd by the Welſh, Lymen. It lies upon the Coaſt of South-Wales, three miles from St. David's. Alſo a Market-Town in Huntingdonſhire in Hurſtington Hundred, towards Cambridgeſhire, near a Meer of it's own Name, and another call'd Whittleſey, each affording plenty of Fiſh and Fowl together, with Rivers watering them. It ſtands amongſt the rich Grounds of the Fens, and had heretofore an Abbey of vaſt Wealth to boaſt of, till its Diſſolution by King Henry VIII. It's diſtant from London fifty five miles.

RAMSEY (John) being a Page to King James I. and attending him to the Houſe of Earl Gowry, at Perth in Scotland, the 5th. of Auguſt, Anno 1600, fortun'd to be the happy Reſcuer of His Majeſty from that barbarous Murther which the ſame Earl, and his Brother Alexander, then one of the King's Bed-chamber, had treacherouſly conſpired to act upon him. For which faithful Service he was advanced to the Title of Viſcount Hadington; and for an augmentation of Honour, had an Arm holding a naked Sword, with a Crown in the midſt thereof, with a Heart at the Point, given him to impale with his own Arms, and this Motto, Hæc Dextra Vindex Principis & Patriæ. And in 18 Jac. created Baron of Kingſton upon Thames, and Earl of Holderneſs, with this ſpecial addition of Honour, That upon the 5th. of Auguſt annually, which was a Day appointed to be kept holy, in giving Thanks to God for that King's Preſervation; That he and his Heirs-male for ever ſhould bear the Sword of State before the King, in remembrance of his happy Deliverance. He married twice; firſt Elizabeth Daughter to Robert Earl of Suſſex, by whom he had Iſſue two Sons, James and Charles, and one Daughter named Elizabeth; and ſurviving her, took to Wife Martha the Daughter of Sir William Cokain, Knight, Alderman of London. She ſurviving him, became the Wife of Montague Lord Willoughby, at that time Son and Heir to the Earl of Lindſey. Dugdale's Baronage.

RAMSEY (Mary) ſecond Wife of Sir Thomas Ramſey, who was Sheriff of London in 1567, and afterwards, in 1577, Lord-Mayor of the ſame. She was eldeſt Daughter of William Dale of Briſtol, Merchant, and married to the aboveſaid Sir Thomas Ramſey in 1584. After whoſe deceaſe, ſhe having no Iſſue of her own, and being withal very piouſly enclined, left ſeveral large Legacies to charitable Uſes, to continue for ever; which are as follow: 1. A yearly Maintenance to two Fellows and four Scholars of Peter houſe in Cambridge, of 40 l. per an. with three conſiderable Livings to any of the ſaid Scholars that ſhall be thought fit to ſupply them. 2. Another of 40 l. per an. for maintenance of ſix Scholars at Oxford, and ſix at Cambridge. 3 A Reward for two Sermons to be preached in Chriſt's-Church yearly. 4. A Salary to a Writing-Maſter to teach poor Children gratis in Chriſt's Hoſpital. 5. A free Grammar-School at Halſted in Eſſex for the poorer Sort. 6. A bountiful Allowance for the Poor of Chriſt's Hoſpital. 7. A large Gift for the Cure of wounded Soldiers. 8. Another for ten poor maimed Soldiers, and ten poor Widows, of 40 l. per an. beſides Apparel. 9. A bountiful Gift of 30 l. per an. to releaſe poor Debtors out of Priſon. 10. Another of 10 l. per an. to relieve Poor Debtors in Priſon. 11. A large Gift towards the Marriage of poor Maids. 12. Another towards the relief of the Poor of four ſeveral Pariſhes; with other pious and charitable Gifts, to be paid by the Governors of Chriſt's Hoſpital, viz. the Lord-Mayor, Aldermen, and Commonalty of London, Overſeers of all theſe her pious Diſtributions. She died in November, 1596, and was buried at the South-eaſt Corner of the Chancel of Chriſt's Church, London, where the Overſeers of her ſaid Will erected a curious Monument to her Memory, which was deſtroyed by the Fire that happened in 1666. Stow, &c.

RAM's-HEAD, a South-point in Hampſhire, near Portſmouth.

RAMUS, or la Rames (Peter) was a Native of Cuth, in Vermandois. He led the life of a Labourer, though deſcended from a Noble Family. His Uncle having been oblig'd, during the Wars, to leave Burgundy, he retired into the Country of Vermandois, where for a Livelyhood he traded in Coals. But Peter, having an inclination for Learning, went to Paris, and made ſo good a progreſs, that he became King's Rhetorick Profeſſor, and a famous Orator. All People reliſh'd his Works; but the Animadverſions againſt Ariſtotle made all the Univerſity his Enemies; and others who envied his Merit, neglected not that occaſion to have a plauſible Pretence to write againſt him. In the mean time Ramus became eminently learned in the Mathematicks, and employed one part of the Money he had ſaved to found a Profeſſor's Chair, who ſhould teach thoſe Sciences. He was a Proteſtant in his Heart: And we ſee by the Letters of Beza, that he deſired to retire to Geneva, where he ſought to be Profeſſor of Philoſophy. His Enemies aſſaſſinated him at Paris, in that Maſſacre on St. Bartholomew's-Day, in 1572, and his Body was caſt into the Seyne. Ramus was baniſhed, and his Books burnt before the Royal College of Cambray, in King Francis the Firſt's time. That King having ſome time before given a Commiſſion to Peter Daneſius Greek Profeſſor, to John Salignac Doctor of Divinity, and to ſeveral other learned Perſons, to examine the Writings and Conduct of Ramus. Theſe Men having examin'd the Affair, gave Sentence againſt Ramus, who was order'd not to treat of, or teach Philoſophy any more. But Henry II. at the requeſt of the Cardinal of Lorrain, recalled him, and made him Profeſſor-Royal. It's obſervable, that Carpentier, and the other Profeſſors of the Univerſity, his Competitors, animated their Scholars to that degree againſt him, that having drawn him out of a Cellar wherein he hid himſelf, they threw him out at a Window, dragged the dead Corps through the Streets, and whipt it with Rods. Thuan. Hiſt. lib. 52. St. Marthe, &c.

RAMUSIO (John Baptiſta) of Venice, was the Son of Paulus, a Lawyer, and rendred himſelf eminent in the Sciences and Languages. He had alſo ſo great an Experience in things, that the Republick of Venice made uſe of him for the ſpace of forty three years in the moſt important Affairs, as well in the quality of Secretary, as in accompanying of Embaſſadors which they ſent to Foreign Princes. We are obliged to him for the Collection of divers Voyages, to which he hath added learned Prefaces. with A Treatiſe of the Encreaſe of the Nile, which he Dedicated to Fracaſtorius, his Friend. He had alſo begun A Treatiſe concerning the Ebbing and Flowing of the Sea, which he left unfiniſhed. Towards the latter part of his Life he retired to Padua, where he died in 1557, aged 72. His Body was carried to Venice, and buried in the Church of St. Mary. Ramuſio publiſh'd a Treatiſe De Nili Incremento, as I have ſaid, and three Volumes of Navigation: The firſt contains A Deſcription of Africa, Preſter John's Country, &c. The ſecond comprehends the Hiſtory of Tartary, and divers other Travels: And the third is, Of Sailing to the New World, &c.

RANATITES, a Sect of Jews, who have a veneration for, and worſhip Frogs, for that God made uſe of them to torment Pharaoh; and who believe, that God is pleaſed with this Superſtition.

RANS (Bertrand de) an Hermit of Champaign, who attempted to paſs for Baldwin I. Emperor of Conſtantinople, Count of Flanders and Haynault, twenty years after the death of that Emperor, whom the King of Bulgaria had taken in a Battle fought in 1205, and had put to death in Priſon the year following. Bertrand de Rans appeared in Flanders for to perſonate him. Jane, eldeſt Daughter to the Emperor Baldwin, then Counteſs of Flanders and Haynault, would not receive him, but order'd her Council to Examine him, to find out the Cheat. This Impoſtor, after he had patiently heard all the Remonſtrances made him, anſwered with a ſtudied Severity, That having been made Priſoner in Bulgaria, he had been detained there for the ſpace of twenty years under a Guard that could neither be corrupted nor deceived; but that they ceaſing at length to watch him ſo narrowly, he found an opportunity to make his Eſcape: That in his way he had been taken by other Barbarians, who carried him into Aſia, without knowing of him: That during a Truce between the Chriſtians and Barbarians of Aſia, the German Merchants, who knew him, bought him of them; and that ſo he had the good fortune to return home. The Counteſs of Flanders ſent into Greece, John Biſhop of Metelin, and Albert a Religious of the Order of St. Bennet, Greeks by Nation, to get true Information whether her Father was dead or living. Theſe Envoys learn'd that the Emperor Baldwin had been cruelly put to death in the Priſon of Ternobe, in Bulgaria. In the mean time, a good part of the Nobility of Flanders acknowledged this Man for their Sovereign, Earl, and Emperor of the Eaſt; and that which authorized the Veneration conceived for his Perſon, was, that he underſtood the Arms, knew the Genealogies and great Actions of the moſt Illuſtrious Flemmins; which he learn'd whilſt he lived an Hermit near Valenciennes. He appear'd in an Armenian Garb, had a Veſt of Scarlet, wearing a great Beard, and carrying a Stick in his Hand. It's true, he was Tall, and had divers of the Features of Baldwin, which got Credit to his Impoſtures. His Deſign had ſo good Succeſs, that the Counteſs Jane was forced to flie into Catelet, and to ſend Embaſſadors to Lewis VIII. King of France, to protect her againſt this Uſurper. The King went as far as Campaign, where the Impoſtor preſented himſelf on a prefix'd Day; but being unable to make a preciſe Anſwer to the Queſtions put to him, his Majeſty commanded him to depart his Kingdom in three days time, without puniſhing him further for his Temerity. This famous Cheat having been thus ſhamefully expelled, retired to Valenciennes in Haynault; where meeting with no Encouragement, he diſguiſed himſelf in a Merchant's Habit, and deſign'd for Burgundy; but on the Road fell into the Hands of a Burgundian Gentleman called Erard Caſtenace, who deliver'd him to the Counteſs for four hundred Marks. The Counteſs put him to the Rack; where having confeſs'd his Name was Bertrand de Rans, and that he was of Champaign, he was led through all the Cities of Flanders and Haynault, that the People might ſee him, and afterwards publickly hang'd in the Iſle of Flanders; which made ſome People believe, that the Counteſs choſe rather to put her Father to Death, than reſign him the Sovereignty. And the Counteſs, as the Inhabitants of the City of the Iſle ſay, firmly believed, after the Execution, that it was her Father, or at leaſt had ſome ſcruple of Conſcience concerning it; and founded an Hoſpital in the Iſle, which ſhe called the Counteſs-Hoſpital; where is a Gallows painted on the Walls and Glaſſes, and the ſame embroidered on the Curtains of the Beds, to ſet forth, ſay they, the Occaſion of that Foundation, which might at length expiate in ſome meaſure her Crime. De Rocoles les Impoſtures Inſignes.

RAOLCONDA, a City in the Kingdom of Golconda, in the Peninſula of Indus, on this ſide the Gulf of Bengala, five days Journey from the City of Golconda. They have a rich Mine of Diamonds there.

RAOUL, or Radulphus, Son of Richard Duke of Burgundy, Count of Autun, ſirnam'd The Juſticiary, uſurped the Kingdom of France from Charles the Simple. He had married Emma the Daughter of Robert, killed in Battle. He was called to ſupport that Party which was formed againſt the lawful Sovereign. And indeed Charles the Simple being caſt into Priſon, Raoul was anointed and crowned King in 923, in the Abbey of St. Medard of Soiſſons; and ſome time after, his Wife received the ſame Honour at Rheims, by the Hands of the Archbiſhop Seulphus. Raoul was a couragious Prince, he expelled almoſt all the Normans out of Aquitain; and by the Factions of the Count of Vermandois, and that of Paris, reigned until 936, when he died without Children at Auxerre, and had the Honour to be buried in the Church of St. Columba de Sens, after he had reigned twelve years, ſix months, and three days. Flodoard.

RAOUL, King of Soiſſons, was married to Emma the Siſter of Hugh the Great, by which means he got the Kingdom of Soiſſons, having before but the Dutchy of Burgundy. That compleat Princeſs intreagued ſo well, during the abſence of her Husband, as to prove agreeable to all the Court of Soiſſons, ſo that all the Efforts made by Charles the Simple could not withdraw any of the Princes and Lords from her Side. Claud. Dormay de la Ville de Soiſſons.

RAPALLO, or Rapello, a City with the Title of an Archbiſhops See and Dutchy in the Baſilicate, in the Kingdom of Naples. It muſt not be confounded with Rapallo a Town and Gulf of Italy, near Genoa.

RAPERSWYL, Lat. Raperſvilla, a Town in Switzerland, which has a very ancient Caſtle on the Lake of Zurick, to the North-eaſt, ſo ſeated, that it's only approachable by a Timber-Bridge; and having been taken, in 1458, by the Swiſs, though often attempted, could not be recovered out of their Hands. It ſtands ſeventeen miles South-eaſt of the City of Zurick.

RAPHAEL ſignifies in Hebrew, The Phyſick of God. 'Tis the Name of that Archangel which was ſent from Heaven to conduct Toby's Son in the Journey he made by his Father's Command. After that he had mediated the Marriage of young Tobias, and brought him back to his Father, he declared, He was the Angel of God, and diſappeared, as is amply ſet forth in the Book of Tobit.

RAPHAEL (d'Urbin) an excellent Painter in the Sixteenth Century, praiſed above all that went before him, and not equalled by any that came after him. He was a Native of the City of Urbin, where he was born on Good-Friday, in 1483. His Father's Name was John de Santi, a Painter by Profeſſion, who judging he was not capable to inſtruct his Son, whoſe excellent Genius appeared when very young, he ſetled him with Peter Perugin, then in great Eſteem. This young Scholar continued not long with his Maſter, whom he not only equalled in the knowledge of his Art, but far exceeded. He made himſelf afterwards known in divers Cities of Italy, and became a perfect Maſter, by imitating the Works of Michael Angelo. Pope Julius II. and after him Leo X. employed him at Rome, to make thoſe Paintings which are the Treaſure and Admiration of the Curious. Raphael d'Urbin was ſweet-natur'd, a handſom Perſon, civil and obliging. His qualities were all amiable; and he was ſo much beloved, that 'tis ſaid, he never went abroad without a great number of Followers. It's a misfortune, that ſo great a Man lived but ſeven and thirty years. The Cauſe of his Death is attributed to a Debauch with Women. And it was reported, that becauſe he diſcovered not his Diſtemper to the Phyſicians, they treated him as if he had a Pleuriſie, and took too much Blood from him. He engaged to marry a Niece of the Cardinal of St. Bibiana ſome time before; but hoping the Pope would make him a Cardinal, and beſides, having no great inclination to marry, he deferred its accompliſhment. He departed this life on the ſame day he was born, on Good-Friday, in 1520. One may ſee at Rome, in the Church of la Rotunda, this Epitaph made in his Praiſe,

Ille hic eſt Raphael, timuit quo ſoſpite vinci
Rerum magna parens, & moriente mori. Felibien.

RAPHELENGIUS (Francis) Profeſſor of the Hebrew Tongue in the Univerſity of Leyden, was of Lanoy, near Liſle, where he was born in 1539. He ſtudied at Louvain: And his Mother, who was left a Widow, obliged him to become a Merchant. He was ſent for that purpoſe to Nuremburg: But as he had a greater inclination for Study, they were forced to bring him back again. He learn'd Greek and Hebrew at Paris, which he taught afterwards in England. After his return into the Low-Countries, he married, in 1555, at Antwerp, Margaret the Daughter of Chriſtopher Plantin, a famous Printer. Raphelengius employed himſelf to Correct his Books, which he enriched with Notes and Prefaces. He took a great deal of pains, eſpecially about the Royal Bible that was printed in 1571, by order of Philip II. King of Spain. Afterwards, in 1585, he ſetled at Leyden, where Plantin had a Printing-Houſe. He laboured there with his uſual aſſiduity. In the mean time, his great Knowledge procured him a Profeſſor's Chair in the Hebrew Tongue. And at laſt he died there of Grief, for the loſs of his Wife, in 1597, aged fifty eight. He compoſed divers Works; as, Variæ Lectiones & Emendationes in Chaldaicam Bibliorum Paraphraſin; Grammatica Hebræa; Dictionarium Hebraicum; Lexicon Arabicum, &c. One of his Sons, of the ſame Name with himſelf, has alſo publiſhed Notes upon Seneca's Tragedies. Meurſius Ath. Batav.

RAPHIDIM, a certain place in the Deſarts of Arabia, near to Mount Horeb, where the Iſraelites, in paſſing through the Deſart, made their tenth ſtation or ſtay, and where, wanting Water, they murmured againſt Moſes, who miraculouſly drew Water for them out of the Rock. Exod. Numb. 33.

RAPIN (Nicholas) a French Poet, was of Fontenay-le-Comte in Poictou, where he exerciſed the place of Vice-Seneſchal with much diligence. M. du Harlay, afterwards firſt Preſident of the Parliament of Paris, taken with his Parts, perſuaded him to come to Paris, where Henry III. made him Provoſt-Marſhal. He managed this Charge with his wonted Fidelity, and continued his Services till the Reign of Henry the Great, when his great Age obliged him to retire to Fontenay-le-Compte, where he had built a pretty Houſe in the Suburbs. He died in 1608, having compoſed divers Latin and French Verſes. He endeavoured to introduce into French Poetry Verſes without Rhime, altho' with the ſame ſyllables and ſame quantity the Greek and Latin uſe. Dominicus Baudius, Nicholas Bourbon, and divers others, made Elegies upon him. He had himſelf made his own Epitaph, which may be ſeen on his Tomb:

Tandem Rapinus heic quieſcit ille, qui
Nunquam quievit, ut quies eſſet bonis.
Impune nunc graſſentur & fur & latro.
Muſæ ad ſepulchrum Gallicæ & Latinæ gemant.

La Croix du Maine.

RAPIN (Renatus) a Jeſuit, born at Tours, rendred himſelf eminent by his Learning and Vertue. He was a Perſon admirably qualified, had a great deal of Genius and Judgment, and was very remarkable for his Probity, and obliging Temper. The Laity look'd upon him as a Man of much Honour, whilſt the Learned conſidered him as one of the fineſt Wits of our Age. He excelled in Latin Poetry, the Works which we have of his in that kind having rendred his Name famous throughout Europe. Amongſt the reſt of his Poems, that entitled The Gardens, is moſt admired by judicious Men, who judge it an excellent Piece, worthy the Age of Auguſtus. His Learning appeared in his Reflections upon Eloquence, Poetry, Hiſtory and Philoſophy; in his Compariſons of Virgil and Homer, Demoſthenes and Cicero, Plato and Ariſtotle, Thucydides and Titus Livius. He compoſ'ed divers Pieces of Divinity, the laſt of which is that of The Life of the Predeſtinated. He died at Paris, the 27th. of October, 1687. Memoires du Temps.

RAPOE, Lat. Rapa, once a City, now a Village in the Province of Ulſter, in the County of Dunnigal, which is a Biſhop's-See under the Archbiſhop of Ardmagh, but united to that of Derry, from which it ſtands twelve miles to the Weſt, forty from Dungal, and forty five from Ardmagh to the South-weſt.

RASEN, a Market-Town in Lincolnſhire in the Hundred of Walbcroft, ſo called for its diſtinction from three other Raſens in the ſame Hundred which have not the privilege to be Market-Towns.

RASIS, or Rhaſis, call'd Almanzar, or Alubetre Arazi, Son of Zachary an Arabian Phyſician, lived in the Tenth Century, about the year 950. He practis'd Phyſick a long time, and left very conſiderable Tracts upon that Subject, and amongſt others, that which is call'd Continens; into which he has tranſcrib'd, by way of Abſtraction, all that had been ſaid by his Predeceſſors upon that Argument. He writ likewiſe a Hiſtory of Spain, to oblige the Emir Balbarubi. His Works, tranſlated into Latin, were printed at Bazil, in 1544. Paſchalis Gallus in Bibl. Medic. Caſtellan in Vit. Medic. Vander Linden de Script. Medic.

RASPOUTES, or Rasboutes, a ſort of Banyans, who are ſomewhat like unto the Sect of the Samarath. They believe the Tranſmigration of the Soul; but ſay, that Mens Souls go into Birds, which afterwards advertiſe their Friends of the good or evil which ſhall befall them; wherefore they are very ſuperſtitious Obſervers both of the Singing and Flight of Birds. The Widows caſt themſelves into the Funeral Pile of their Huſbands, unleſs by Contract of Marriage they provided by an Article, not to be forced to it. Raſpoutes ſignifies a courageous Man; and this name was given them, becauſe they were valiant, and loved War, which is contrary to the inclination of the other Banyans. The Great Mogul and other Indian Princes, make uſe of theſe Raſpoutes in their Armies, for that they deſpiſe Danger and Death. They have ſcarce compaſſion for any thing but Birds, which they take great care to nouriſh, in hopes that when their Souls ſhall paſs into thoſe ſorts of Animals, they will have the ſame charity for them. They marry their Children very young, as the other Banyans do. Mandeſlo. Olearius.

RAT (Jeffrey, or Godfrey XIII.) Grand Maſter of the Order of St. John of Jeruſalem, ſucceeded, in 1194, Prince Alphonſo of Portugal. The Order was then ſeated at Ptolemais, or St. John d'Acre. He was a Frenchman born. In his time the Knights of the Order made War upon the Templars, who had entred by violence upon the Poſſeſſions of a certain Gentleman that was a Vaſſal of the Hoſpitallers. There paſſed furious Rencounters and bloody Skirmiſhes between them; which would have ended in a dangerous War, if Amauri II. King of Cyprus, had not brought both Parties to referr the Deciſion of the Quarrel to the Pope. The Grand Maſter ſent thither the Prior of Barlette, who was of the Family of the Seguins, and Auger, Commander of Italy. The Pope order'd, that the Templars ſhould be ſummoned by a Gentleman before the Bar of the Hoſpitallers, who ſhould appoint impartial Judges to terminate the Difference. Some time after, the Pope granted a Brief to King Amauri, by which he commanded the Grand Maſter to take the Kingdom of Cyprus under his Protection. Which he did, in obedience to his Holineſs, and for the publick good of the Chriſtians. He died in 1206, after he had reigned almoſt twelve years, and had Gwerin de Montague for his Succeſſor. Boſio, Naberat.

RATA (John) Count of Caſetta, in Terra di Lavoro, who underſtanding that his Wife had been forced by Mainfroy King of Sicily, revenged himſelf on him ſoon after. For Pope Urban IV. having inveſted Charles of Anjou, Brother to Saint Lewis, in the Kingdom of Sicily, becauſe Mainfroy was an Uſurper, and an Enemy to the Church; Rata, who was then General of Mainfroy's Army, went over to Charles of Anjou, and gave him the opportunity of making himſelf Maſter of Sicily. Volaterran ſaith, It was Conradin of Swabia, Mainfroy's Natural Brother, that diſgraced Rata's Wife. Fulcoſus.

RATBOT, or Rathold, Duke of Friezland, who, deſirous to turn Chriſtian, in 722, went to ſee for the Biſhop Vulfradus: But as he had one Foot in the Baſon of the Baptiſmal Font, he asked the Biſhop, Whether there were more of his Anceſtors in Heaven or Hell? The Biſhop made anſwer, There were more in Hell. Upon which he preſently withdrew, ſaying, He had rather follow the greater number. He died three days after ſuddenly. Sigebert.

RATCLIFF. See Darwent-Water.

RATCLIFFE (Sir John) for his good Service he rendred King Henry V. and VI. was honoured with the Garter: But his Son and Succeſſor, John, loſt his Head in the Reign of King Henry VII. for attempting to ſet up Perkin Warbeck, who perſonated Richard Duke of York, the younger Son to King Edward IV. Yet Robert, Son and Heir to this laſt, was fully reſtored to his Honour in that ſame Reign; and in 1 H. 8. obtain'd an Act of Parliament for Revocation of the Attainder; being advanced to the Dignity of a Viſcount, by the Title of Viſcount Fitz-Walter, in the 17 H. 8. He ſubſcribed the Articles ſent to the King againſt Cardinal Woolſley; and being created Earl of Suſſex, in the 22 H. 8. joined with the reſt of the Peers in Parliament in the Declaration ſent to Pope Clement VII. To this Robert ſucceeded Henry; to him Thomas, who was employed by Queen Mary as Embaſſador to Charles V. to treat of a Marriage between her and Prince Philip; and afterwards ſent Deputy into Ireland. Queen Elizabeth made him Lord-Chamberlain of her Houſhold. Dying without Iſſue, his Brother Henry ſucceeded him; whoſe Son Robert dying without Iſſue, Sir Henry Mildmay of Mulſho, in the County of Eſſex, Knt. Son and Heir to Sir Thomas Mildmay, Knt. by the Lady Frances his Wife, Daughter to Henry Earl of Suſſex, by Anne his ſecond Wife, laid claim to the Title of Lord Fitz-Walter; which Benjamin, his Brother and Heir enjoyed, the ſaid Henry dying ſoon after. This Benjamin, now Lord Fitz-Walter, hath married Catharine, Daughter and Co-heir to Thomas, Eldeſt Son to Thomas Viſcount Fairfax, of Emmeley in Ireland, and by her hath Iſſue three Sons, Charles, Benjamin, and Walter. Dugdale's Baronage.

RATIBOR, a City of Sileſia, in Germany, upon the Oder, and the Capital of a Dutchy of the ſame Name. Latin Authors call it Ratisboria. It ſtands thirteen miles North-eaſt of Troppaw, and thirty four South of Oppelen.

RATISBONE, an Imperial City of Germany, upon the Danube, with a Biſhop's-See ſuffragan of Saltzburgh. Latin Authors call it variouſly; as Tiberij Auguſti Caſtra Regia, Reginum, Rhætobonna, Rhætopolis, and Ratiſpona; and the Germans, Regenſpurg. It had this Name from the River of Regen, which runneth on one ſide of the City. It was formerly but a Borough-Town. The Diets of the Empire, which are held at Ratisbone, in the old Caſtle, render it one of the moſt famous Cities of Germany. Frederick I. made this a free Imperial City. Henry the Lion proſcrib'd and degraded it, and put it under the Dominion of Otho Wittelſpach Duke of Bavaria. It has a fair Stone-Bridge, built by Henry V. in the year 1135, at the Confluence of the River Regen. It's ſaid to have been converted to the Chriſtian Faith by Lycius Cyrenæus, a Diſciple of St. Paul, in 69. The Biſhoprick was inſtituted by Charles the Great, who held a Council in this City in 792. It ſtands forty four miles Eaſt of Newburgh, and fifty four of Hundius. Cluvier. Bertius.

RATRAMNE, Bertram, or Imtram, a Prieſt and Monk of the Abbey of Corby, lived in the Eleventh Century, in the time of Charles the Bald. He was skill'd in Holy Writ, and good Literature, as Trithemius ſaith; of a penetrating judgment, and equally eſteem'd for his Learning and Manners. He writ A Treatiſe of Predeſtination; and another of The Body and Blood of Chriſt, &c. which the Doctors of Lovain have publiſhed. The laſt of theſe Treatiſes has been the Subject of a Diſpute between the Author of The Perpetuity of Faith, and Monſieur Claude Miniſter of Paris, who ſhewed that Ratramne oppoſed the Doctrine of the Real Preſence, and Tranſubſtantiation. Thoſe who do not underſtand French may conſult the Engliſh of this Treatiſe, with the Preface to it. Sigebert. Trithem.

RATUMENUS, the Name of a Roman, who running in the Circenſian Games, fell from his Chariot; but his Horſes continuing their courſe, and winning the Prize, went with the Crown and Palm to the Capitol; in memory of which, the Gate through which they re-enter'd into Rome was call'd Ratumene's Gate. Ruſcelli.

RATZEMBURG, or Ratzeburg, a City of Mekelburg, in Lower-Saxony in Germany. It hath had a Biſhoprick ſuffragan of Bremen, and the Biſhop was Lord of the City; but now the Prelate is a Proteſtant: And ſince the Peace of Munſter, the Duke of Mekelburg is Maſter of Ratzeburg, which the Latin Authors call Raceburgum. This City embraced the Auguſtan Confeſſion in 1566, by procurement of Chriſtopher the thirteenth Biſhop of the See. It is three miles from Lubeck to the South, four from Lawenburgh, and ſix from Swerin to the Weſt. This Place, in 1693. Auguſt the 31ſt. was bombarded by the King of Denmark; but on the 4th. of September granted a Ceſſation. So that by the Mediation of the King of England, States of Holland, and others of the Confederate Princes, the Matter was at length accommodated, and Reparation promiſed the Town for the Damages ſuſtained by England and Holland.

RAVA, a City and Palatinate in Greater Poland, ſituated upon a River of the ſame Name. The Houſes there are all built of Wood, and there is alſo a Fortreſs belonging to it. It's eleven Poliſh miles from Ploczko to the South, and fifteen from Warſaw to the Weſt.

RAUCHIN, Duke of Soiſſons, was the Son of the Great Clotharius; he obtained in the Revolution which happened at the death of Chilperick, the Government of Soiſſons, and of all the Province, with the Title of Duke. It was he that diſcovered the Conſpiracy of Fredegonda, againſt Childebert, for the two young Men ſuborn'd by that Princeſs to murther him, arriv'd at Soiſſons in order to go to Champaign in diſguiſe; Rauchin being advertiſed thereof, ſeiz'd them, and deliver'd them to Childebert, who brought them to condign puniſhment: By that means he incurr'd the hatred of Fridegonda, and render'd himſelf Potent in the Court of Auſtraſia: But his Fidelity to that King laſted not long, for he conſpir'd againſt him, holding Intelligence with Vrſion and Bertrefroid to make themſelves Maſters of the Kingdom of Auſtraſia by the King's death. Gontran diſcovered their Conſpiracy, and advertiſed Childebert his Nephew thereof, who in a little time after, commanded Rauchin to come to Court, where he preſented himſelf with a very ſplendid Equipage, and at the ſame time the King ſecretly ſent Officers to ſeize upon his Goods in all the Cities that he had any power in. Rauchin, after having had a long Conference with Childebert, took his leave, and went out of the Chamber, but as he came to the Door, two Gentlemen Uſhers took him and threw him down, and at the ſame time the Soldiers fell upon him, and cut off his Head, ſtripping his Body, and throwing it out at the Window. This happened in 587. Dormai de la Ville de Soiſſ.

RAVENGLASS, a Market-Town in the County of Cumberland in the Diviſion of Allerdale, encompaſſed on three parts of it by the Sea and the two Rivers, betwixt which it ſtands: It has ſeveral Barks and ſmall Veſſels belonging to it. From London 214 Miles.

RAVENNA, an ancient City of Italy in Romania, with the Title of an Archbiſhop's See, belonging to the See of Rome. It ſtands on a Marſhy Ground 45 miles from Bononia to the E. 30 from Rimini, and 42 from Ferrara near the Shoars of the Adriatick Sea, upon which it had a great Harbour, and was the Station of Auguſtus's Fleet on the Adriatick Sea, in the Declenſion of the Roman Empire: The Emperor Honorius kept his Reſidence in it, and fortified it with a double Wall. The Authors of the Roman Hiſtories make frequent mention of it. Ravenna was the Reſidence of Theodoricus King of the Goths, and ſince, of the Exarcha's or Vice-Roys, which the Emperors of Conſtantinople ſent into Italy: Longinus was the firſt, ſent thither by Juſtin about 567, or 568; Smaragdus ſucceeded him, and next came Romanus Calliniquus, and the ſame Smaragdus again; John Remigus or Demigez, Eleutherus, Iſaac, Theodorus Calliopas, Olympius, Theodorus Calliopas a ſecond time, another Theodorus, John called Plato, Theophylactus, John ſurnamed Rizocopus, or Francheracinus, Scholaſticus and Paulus, during whoſe Government Ravenna was taken by Luitprand King of the Lombards, and the Vice-Roy re-took it in 727, with the aſſiſtance of the Pope and Venetians. Eutyches, the the laſt Vice-Roy, govern'd after Paulus. Aiſtulphus, King of the Lombards took Ravenna again, and expelled him out of Italy in 752; but he kept not that City long, for King Pepin in 756 obliged that Prince to give it up, with the Exarchate to the Pope; the which was confirmed by Charlemaign in 774. Ravenna hath ſince ſuffered divers Misfortunes. In 1512 the Army of King Lewis XII. led by Gaſton de Foix, took Ravenna, and won a famous Victory near it. Ravenna is not at this day ſo conſiderable as it has been in times paſt. It has one Gate of Marble, which the People call the Golden or Beautiful Gate. It's principal Church is ſupported by four rows of Marble-Pillars. It's Port hath ſometimes ſerved for a Retreat to the Roman Navy. In the Church of St. Mary de la Rotunda, which was built about 757, without the Town of Ravenna, after it was freed from the Dominion of the Lombards; the middle or concluding part of the top of the Dome is of one entire Stone, ten Foot broad, and two hundred thouſand weight, which renders this Church very famous, there being ſcarce any thing elſe remarkable. The Violence of Pope Stephen VI. againſt the Memory of Formoſus, had cauſed great Diſorders in Rome; to terminate which, John IX. Stephen's Succeſſor aſſembled a Council at Rome in 901, where all was annulled that had been done againſt the ſaid Formoſus, and at the ſame time the Coronation of Lambert was confirmed, and that of Berenger made void, theſe two taking upon them to be Emperors or Kings of Italy. Some time after the celebration of this Synod, ſeventy four Biſhops aſſembled at Ravenna by the means of the ſame Lambert, and confirmed all that had been done at Rome. There was another Council celebrated in 967, in the preſence of Pope John XIII. and the Emperor Otho I. for the re-eſtabliſhment of the Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline, and divers others ſince, but none conſiderable. Leander Alberti.

RAVENSBERG, a City and Earldom of the Empire in Weſtphalia; the City is ſituated upon a Hill, and the Earldom very conſiderable. It belongs to the Elector of Brandenburg: It's 18 miles from Oſnaburgh to the S. 32 from Paderborn to the N. and 30 from Munſter to the E. The Earldom is a ſmall Territory between the Biſhopricks of Minden and Oſnaburgh to the N. and W. that of Munſter to the S. and the County of Lippe to the E. Its Capital is Biſeld. This was ſubject to the Dukes of Juliers, and is now under the Elector of Brandenburg in their right.

RAVENSBURG, a ſmall German City in the Circle of Schwaben in Algow upon the River Schaff, ſix miles from Conſtance to the E. and three from Lindaw to the N. an Imperial Free City.

RAVESTEIN, a ſmall City and Country of Brabant: The City ſtands upon the Meuſe below the Grave. The Dukes of Cleve have been Lords of Raveſtein, where they had a good Cittadel, but William Duke of Cleve and Juliers, was obliged to demoliſh it, by one of the Articles of the Treaty made with the Emperor Charles V. The Duke of Newburg is Sovereign of Raveſtein, which is in the poſſeſſion of the Hollanders. It's ten miles W. of Nimmegen.

RAWLEIGH, ſee Walter.

RAWLINSON (Chriſtopher) of Cark-Hall, in Cartmell, in Com. Lancaſtr. Eſq; By the Mother, the laſt of the Male Line of the Plantagenets, of the Royal Family, and by the Father, Lineally deſcended from the Ancient Family of the Rawlinſons of Furnace-Fells in the County above-mention'd, of whom, John Rawlinſon, who ſettled at Green-head in Furnace-Fells above-mention'd, in the Reign of Henry VIIth, whoſe Great Grandſon William built the Parochial Chappel at Coughton, on a Common belonging to his Family. This William dying in the year 1603, left Iſſue William, who Married Margaret Curwen, ſole Daughter of Walter Curwen (a younger Brother of the Curwens of Workington in Cumberland) of Mireſide-Hall in Cartmell Eſq; by whom he had Iſſue Robert Rawlinſon, afterwards of Cark-Hall in Cartmell, who was one of the Juſtices of Peace and Quorum, and of Over and Terminer for the Counties Palatine of Lancaſter and Cheſhire, and Vice-Chamberlain of the City of Cheſter. He left Iſſue, Curwen Rawlinſon, who died in 1688, being Married to Elizabeth Monk, ſecond Daughter and Co-heir of Nicholas Monk, Lord Biſhop of Hereford, Brother to George Monk Duke of Albemarle, third Son of Sir Thomas Monk of Potheridge in the County of Devon. only Son of Anthony Monk of the ſame Place Eſq; Son of Tho. Monk Eſq; by Frances Plantagenet, Daughter and Coheir of Arthur Plantagenet, Viſcount Liſle, Son of King Edward IVth. as 'tis ſuppos'd, by the Lady Lucy. The ſaid Curwen Rawlinſon, by Elizabeth Monk above-mention'd, left Iſſue, Monk Rawlinſon, who died young, and Chriſtopher firſt above-mention'd; who when of Queens-College in Oxford, Publiſh'd the Saxon Verſion of Boëthius de Conſolatione Philoſophiæ, in the Saxon Tongue. His Arms are, Gules, two Barrs Gemelles Argent, between three Eſcallop Shells of the Second; the Creſt, and Helmet, a Sheldrake Proper, holding an Eſcallop Argent, Mantled Gules, Doubled Argent. *Sandford Hiſt. RAYMI, or Yntip-Raymi, a Solemn Feaſt, which the ancient Ynca's of Peru celebrated in the City of Cuſco in honour of the Sun. Yntip is the name of the Sun, and Raymi ſignifies a Feaſt. This Solemnity was perform'd in the Month of June after the Solſtice. Then all the Generals and Officers of the Army, and all the Curaca's or great Lords of the Kingdom being aſſembled in the City: The King began the Ceremony as being the Son of the Sun, and Chief-Prieſt, altho' they had always another Chief-Prieſt of the Royal Family. They all prepared themſelves ready for this Feaſt by a Faſt of three days, during which time they abſtained from their Wives, and no fire was ſuffer'd to be kindled in the City. The Faſt being ended, the Ynca followed by all the Princes of the Blood, and Lords of the Court, went into the great Piazza of Cuſco; and there turning towards the Eaſt, and being all bare-footed, they waited for the riſing of the Sun, and as ſoon as they perceiv'd it, they worſhipped the ſame. Then the King holding a great golden Bowl in his Hand, drank to the Sun, and afterwards gave it to thoſe of the Royal Family to drink: The Curaca's or Lords of the Court drank another Liquor prepared by the Veſtal Virgins, or Prieſteſſes of the Sun. This Ceremony being finiſhed, they all returned towards the Temple, whereinto the Ynca alone, with the Princes of the Blood entred, there to offer to the Sun divers Golden Veſſels, and ſeveral Animals made in Silver and Gold; and after that the Prieſt Sacrificed the Victims, which were Lambs or Sheep; and ſo the whole Ceremony ended with Feaſtings and extraordinary rejoycings. De Laet Hiſt. du Noveau Monde.

RAYMOND (de Martin) a Learned Dominican, was the Author of an excellent Piece againſt the Moors and Jews, which hath been Printed at Paris in 1651, by the name of Pugio fidei. This Book had been unknown almoſt 'till then, and had been read under the name of Galatin a Franciſcan Friar, who put it in his Work De Arcanis Catholicæ veritatis. This Edition hath made appear that this Galatin was a Plagiary, who publiſhed under his own name, a Book, whereof but a very ſmall part was his. Porchet hath alſo inſerted much of the matter of this Book in that he publiſhed under the Title of Victoria contra Judæos, but he fairly acknowledges he took them out of the Works of Raymond. M. Boſquet, Biſhop of Montpelier found a Copy in Manuſcript of this Book at Tholouſe, in the Library of the College of Foix; and 'tis that Manuſcript that hath been publiſhed, whereof the ſame M. Boſquet ſpeaks much in a Letter writ to M. Voiſin, which is at the beginning of that Edition. M. Voiſin, learned in the Hebrew, hath added ſome Remarks to that Work, taken out of the Books of the Rabbins. Raymond lived ſomewhat before the Thirteenth Century, and thoſe that would know the Doctrine and Books of the Jews, may be thoroughly informed out of his Works. *P. RAZIAS, one of the ancient Jews, who courageouſly oppoſed Antiochus, and merited the Title of Father of his Country. He kill'd himſelf afterwards, for fear of falling into the Hands of Nicanor, An. Mund. 3893.

RAZIEL, the name the Jewiſh Cabbaliſtical Doctors gave to the Angel which they feigned to be the Maſter of Adam. Rabbin Abraham Ben Dior, hath obſerved, That the firſt Patriarchs had all of them Angels for their Maſters. Raziel, for Example, was the Maſter of Adam, Jophiel of Sem, Tſedekiel of Abraham, Raphael of Iſaac, Peliel of Jacob, Gabriel of Joſeph, Metatron of Moſes, and Malatiel of Eli. This ſame Rabbin Abraham Ben-Dior adds, That every one of theſe Angels gave his Diſciple, either by Writing or word of mouth, the Cabbala, which is, the Tradition, and that by that means it hath always been preſerv'd among the People of God. Raziel, for Example, who was the Angel or Maſter of Adam, brought him a Book from God, which contained ſecrets of the higheſt and moſt ſubtil Wiſdom, of which he treats in his Book entituled Zohar. The Caraite Sect, who receive not all Traditions, reject all this, as the Fictions of the Cabbaliſts, and as Stories made at pleaſure. Abraham Ben-Dior.

RAZIEL, a Jewiſh Author. The Cabbaliſts have feign'd two Pieces under the name of this Raziel, where he ſpeaks of many Angels names, and divers Spirits, and the way of rendring them familiar to us; 'tis properly nothing elſe but a Book of Cabbaliſtick Magick, that contains nought but fooliſh and ridiculous things, which, for the moſt part are grounded upon the ſubtilties of names. Buxtorf.

READING, the beſt Town in Berkſhire, ſeated upon the Thames, where it receives the Kennet, with ſeveral Bridges over thoſe two Rivers, which had anciently a Caſtle and a noble Church, both ruin'd in Mr. Cambden's time. The Danes, about 846, made this place the Seat of their Rapines, and were hardly expell'd by Æthelwolph King of Mercia. Being Garriſon'd for the King in the beginning of the late Troubles, it was taken by the Earl of Eſſex, April 26. 1643, after a Siege of ten Days, and proved very troubleſom to the City of Oxford, then the King's Head Quarters. The County Aſſizes uſually are kept here. It is a well-inhabited Town, contains three Pariſhes, is the Capital of its Hundred, and a Corporation, beſides repreſented by two Members in the Houſe of Commons. From London 40 miles.

Cividad REAL, Lat. Civitas Regalis, the Capital City of Chiapia in N. America, 70 Leagues from St. Jago de Guatimala to the S. W. and from Tabaſo to the W. It was built by the Spaniards to aſſure the poſſeſſion of the Country, and privileged by the King to increaſe the Inhabitants; and it has alſo a Biſhop's See. Herrera placeth it in 18 30. of N. Lat. but it is contradicted by Laet, it lying but about 16. 00. The Air is cool and dry, and very fine, and the Country about it fruitful, in all things neceſſary to the Life of Man. Chilton an Engliſhman obſerves, the Indians called it Sacatlan, and that in 1570. there were about 100 Spaniſh Inhabitants in it.

REBATA, REBAT, REBATO, a famous Town in the Province of Temeſna in the Kingdom of Fez, built by Manſor King of Morocco, upon the Shoars of the Ocean, at the Mouth of the River Buragray, on a Rock between the Sea and River. In its Form it reſembles Morocco, and was like it adorned with Royal Moſques, Colleges, Palaces, Shops, Stoves and Hoſpitals, and here he uſed to remain with his Army from the beginning of April to September, and the Water there being bad, he built an Aqueduct to ſupply the ſame twelve miles long. After his death the Town fell to decay, and is not now above a tenth part of what it was, and the Aqueduct was broken in the Wars. It has now not above 400 Houſes, yet is very well fortify'd againſt the Portugueſe by the Kings of Fez. It lies about two miles S. of Sale.

RECANATI, a Town of Italy, in Marca Anconitana, with a Biſhop's See, now United to Loretto; this Town is grown conſiderable by the Ruines of Recina; for this Reaſon, Recanati is by Latin Authors call'd Recina Nova, or Recinetum.

RECAREDUS, the firſt of that name King of the Wiſigoths in Spain, ſucceeded his Father Leuvigildus in 586, which was the 624 of the Spaniſh Æra. He got great advantage over the Troops of King Gontran near Carcaſſonna, but was much more glorious for having abjur'd Arianiſm, according to the Example of his Brother Hermenigildus: He alſo cauſed divers Councils to be held, as the Third of Toledo, one at Narbonne, and ſome others; and died after he had reigned fifteen years in 601, leaving his Son Leuva or Liuba II. upon the Throne.

RECHABITES, a certain Sect of the Jews, ſo called, for that they were the Diſciples of Jonadab the Son of Rechab the Prophet; they never drank Wine, and lived abroad in Tents. In the Reign of Jehoakim King of Judah the fear of the Armies of Nebuchodonoſor conſtrained them to retire to Jeruſalem, where they lived privately. It was then that Jeremy having brought them into the Temple, preſented them with Bowls full of Wine, but they refuſed to drink, adding, that they had reſolved inviolably to obſerve the Orders of their Maſter, who forbad them to plant Vineyards, build Houſes, &c. The Prophet took occaſion from hence to reproach the Jews for their Diſobedience and Errors, ſince they ſtuck not to violate the Laws of God, when the Rechabites made a ſcruple of not obſerving the Traditions of Men. Torniel.

RECHESUIND, or Receſiuntus, King of the Wiſigoths in Spain, ſucceeded Chindaſvinthus, or Cindaſiunthus, in 649; he reigned above 23 years, and that peaceably, which contributed much to render the Eccleſiaſtical Government very eminent, ſo that in his time were celebrated three Councils at Toledo, which are the 8th, 9th, and 10th, and one at Merida. He died in 627. Iſidorus.

RECHIAIRUS his Son ravaged Gaſcoigne, too Saragoſſa, and harraſſed the Provinces ſubject to the Romans. In 456 he was defeated by Theodoricus II. King of the Wiſigoths, whoſe Siſter he had married; he retired full of wounds into the utmoſt parts of Galicia, and having been taken in a place called Portucal, he was brought to Theodoricus, who kept him for ſome time in Priſon, and afterwards Murthered him. Mariana.

RECHILA, King of Suevia in Spain, was Crowned by his Father Ermerick, or Hermerick, towards 434. He defeated in Battle one Andevot, won Sevil, Merida, Carthage, and divers other Cities, but he had not time to continue his Conqueſts, dying at Merida, in 447. This Prince was an Arian. Mariana.

RECOLETS, or the Minor Brethren of St. Francis, a Congregation of Religious eſtabliſhed about 1530. There have been divers others of the Order of St. Francis, who all boaſted they obſerv'd the Rules of their Founder in its Purity and Simplicity. Leo X. ordered they ſhould all be reduced to one, under the name of Reformed; but ſince, there have been ſome who would be more rigid than others, and obſerve the Rule more exactly, according to the Letter, conformable to the Declarations of Nicholas III. and Clement V. In 1531 Clement VII. cauſed Manſions to be given them, whereunto they might receive thoſe that had the Spirit of Recollection, for which reaſon they received the name of Recolets. The ſame Pope approv'd of this Eſtabliſhment in 1532. Tulle in Limoſin, and Murat in Auvergue, were the firſt Cities in France who gave them Convents. Some Religious of this Order carried this Reformation into Italy about 1584. You may ſee in Cardinal d'Oſſat's Letters how he recommends them to M. de Villeroy in 1603. They have a Convent in Paris, and near an hundred and fifty throughout the Kingdom, which are divided into ſeven Provinces. Sponde. Mezeray.

RECULVER, a Sea-Town in the County of Kent in Auguſtine Lath, ſome miles N. of Canterbury, deſerving to be particularly taken notice of for the Palace and Reſidence of Ethelbert the Iſt. Chriſtian Saxon King of Kent; the high Spire of its Church makes now a good Sea-mark.

The RED-SEA, Lat. Mare Rubrum, Erythræum, Azanium, and Arabicus Sinus, is a Branch of the Indian or Æthiopian Ocean which parts Arabia from Africa and Egypt, running from N. to S. above 1200 miles. The Arabians call this Sea Buthiel Calzem, the Sea of Calzem, from a City of that name; towards the North it is not above eight or nine miles over, as M. Thevenot obſerves, who travell'd on its Shoars five days. It is narrow and full of Rocks, therefore dangerous to Sailors, for which, and other reaſons, now not much frequented, ſince the way to the Indies was diſcover'd by the Ocean. This Sea will be famous to all Ages, upon the account of the Children of Iſrael's paſſing it dry-foot when they went up out of Egypt. The Red-Sea is like a River, and full of Rocks and Sands, ſome of which appear, and others are covered by the Waters. The diſtance between the Red and Mediterranean Seas is ſeven Days Journey. The Ships which ſail on the Red-Sea are built at Calzem, and are all Flat-bottoms. That part of the Red-Sea that lies between Bugie in Egypt, and Giodda the Port of Meccha is 24 hours ſail, full of Flatts and Rocks, and has ſome Iſlets, which in the Winter have no Inhabitants, except Neaman, or Noman, which is always Inhabited. There is another called Sameri, which is inhabited by Samaritan Jews. The diſtance between Egypt and Arabia is in ſome places 90 miles, and in others not above eight. At Babel-Mandel this Sea joins with the Indian Ocean, and from thence it runs N.W. on the E. it has Tehama and Hagiaz, two Provinces of Arabia fœlix, Aladian, Ailan, and Taran, three Cities of Arabia Petræa; at the bottom of it is Calzem (Sues) on the W. lies Egypt, and then Æthiopia. Its whole length is 1400 miles, and it hath fifteen Iſlands in all. M. Pory, the Tranſlator of Leo Africanus, a learned Man, obſerves, That the middle of this Sea is ſafely Navigable by Day or Night, it being clear, and 25 or 50 Fathoms deep, but the Eaſtern and Weſtern ſhoars are ſo full of Rocks, Shoals, &c. that it is impoſſible to paſs them but by Day-light, and with moſt expert Pilots, which are taken in at the Iſle of Babel-Mandel. He ſaith alſo, This Sea hath few Fiſh, and the Shoars have no green Graſs, Herbs or Weeds, in which he is contradicted by others. The ancient Kings of Egypt barred the Entrance of this Sea againſt the Africans, by drawing a Chain from Arabia to Babel-Mandel, and from the Weſt ſide of that Iſland again to Egypt, as he obſerves out of Strabo. And that the Turks, at this day, do not willingly ſuffer any Ship to paſs upon this Sea but their own, the Portugueſe having provok'd them by their Depredations. The Hebrews call this Sea Jamſuph, and Exod. 15.22. it is called Mare Algoſum. Hornius Ant. Geo. p.11.

REDEMPTION DE CAPTIVES, or Nôtre Dame de la Mercy, a Military, and ſince a Religious Order; it was Founded by Peter Nolaſque, accompanied with Raimond de Rochfort, and Peter King of Arragon. The Religious of this Inſtitution, beſides the three ordinary Vows, to wit, Chaſtity, Poverty and Obedience, make a fourth, to employ themſelves for the deliverance of Chriſtian Slaves detained by the Barbarians, and alſo to enter into ſervitude for the Redeeming of Chriſtians. The Popes have approved of this Order, and have granted them divers Privileges.

REDFORD Eaſt, a Market-Town in Nottinghamſhire, in Northelay Hundred upon the River Iddel, governed by two Bailiffs, ſix Aldermen, and a Steward. From London 110 miles.

REDI (Francis) a Phyſician and Philoſopher, who made himſelf famous in the City of Florence. He hath compoſed in Italian, a Treatiſe of the Generation of Inſects, and ſome Experiments concerning Vipers; which Andrew Friſe, a Printer of Amſterdam, hath got tranſlated into Latin, and publiſhed in 1671. He writ alſo divers other Pieces. Læti.

REDICULUS, was the name of a God to whom the Romans built a Temple near Rome, upon the way to the Gate called Capena, near unto which Hannibal approaching, in order to enter into Rome, the Deſtruction of which he had ſworn, was obliged to return haſtily with all his Army, being ſeiz'd with a ſudden terror, occaſioned by certain horrible Spectrums that appear'd in the Air, as if it were for the defence of the City. In the ſame place, juſt as far as Hannibal had advanc'd, and from whence he returned when abandoning his Enterprize, the Romans built a Temple, which they conſecrated to the God Rediculus, in memory of that forced return of their Capital Enemy; for the Latin Verb Redire ſignifying to return, they called him Deus Rediculus; as if they had ſaid, The God that obliged him to return. Feſtus.

REDOANO (William) Biſhop of Nebio, was born at Vernazza, in the State of Genoa: He was a great Lawyer, and the Pope's Nuntio at Naples. Gregory the XIIIth made him Biſhop of Nebio, in 1572, where he died the next year after. He wrote De Simonia. De Spoliis Eccleſiaſticis. De Alienationibus Rerum Eccleſiaſticarum. Foglieta in Elog. Clar. Lig. Soprani & Juſtiniani Script. della Ligur. &c.

REE, an Iſle of France in the Weſtern Ocean, near unto the Country of Aunis; the Latins call it Rea and Reacus. It belongs to the Biſhoprick of Rochel, and to the Government of Aunis and Broüage. The Wines there are ſo plentiful, that if the Engliſh, Dutch and Norman Fleets did not come every year to take ſome of them away, they ſhould be obliged to give away the old Wine to the People for Casking the new. There are divers Towns in it, the principal of which, are that of St. Martin, where there is a fair Convent of Capuchins, and that of Loye, called the Iſle, becauſe of a Canal that environs it. The moſt conſiderable Fort is that of Pree, where there are Cannon that carry as far as the Main-Land, diſtant about two ſmall Leagues; 'tis flanked with four Baſtions, with Half-Moons and fine Out-works. The King has cauſed to be built in this Iſland, towards the Sea-ſide, a high Tower, which has a Light in the Night, becauſe of the Rocks adjacent, called the Whale-Rocks, whence 'tis called the Tower of Whales. Villalain.

REES, Lat. Reeſium, a ſmall City formerly well fortified, in the Dukedom of Cleves upon the Rhine, and Garriſon'd by the Hollanders, tho' it belong'd to the Duke of Brandenburg, being taken by the French in 1672, in 1674 it was reſtored to that Prince, but firſt diſmantled by the French. It ſtands three German miles from Weſel to the N. and the ſame diſtance from Cleve to the E.

REFERENDARY; this name was formerly taken for Maſter of Requeſts, and for the Keepers of the Seals of a Prince or Chancellor; but now a Referendary in France is an Officer of the Chancery who makes report of the Letters of Juſtice, as of thoſe of Reciſion, and ſuch like. At Rome, the Referendaries of the one and the other Seal are the Prelates, who bring before the Pope, Affairs, and Requeſts or Petitions for the ſignature of Right, and for that of Favonr; and who take cognizance of Cauſes brought before them; and wherein they act for a Sum not exceeding five hundred Crowns in Gold; for if it exceeds that, it belongs to the Juriſdiction of the Rota. It was Pope Alexander VI. that inſtituted theſe Referendaries, and granted them large Privileges. Onuphr. Panvin.

REFON, a Daniſh Lord, whom Gothrick King of Denmark ſent Ambaſſador to the Swedes; theſe People having conſpired the death of the Embaſſador, tied a great Stone to the top of the Bed whereon he lay, the Cords wherewith it was faſtened they cut when he was aſleep, and ſo cruſhed him to pieces. Gothrick to revenge this Murther and Perfidiouſneſs, conſtrain'd the Authors of the Crime to pay yearly twelve Talents of Gold, and every particular perſon an Ounce, the which was called the Tribute of Renard, for that they had given this Surname to Refon. Saxo.

REGALE, a Right which the King of France hath to enjoy the Revenues of Biſhopricks, and Archbiſhopricks, and vacant Sees, until ſuch time as the Biſhop or Archbiſhop has taken his Oath of Fidelity to the King, and that that Oath be Regiſtred in the Chamber of Accounts at Paris. The King alſo, during the vacancy of the See, names perſons to Officiate in the Prebendaries and other Dignities, and in whatever Benefices are in the gift of the Biſhops or Archbiſhops, except Cures of Pariſhes. F. Sirmond and M. Du-Puy, two Famous Writers have ſhewed, That all the Kings of France of the firſt Race, and ſome of the ſecond have had the entire diſpoſal of Biſhopricks throughout their Dominions. Some Authors ſay that this Right was given the Kings of France by way of Recompence, for their Protecting the Orthodox Religion; and that this Privilege was granted to Clovis the firſt Chriſtian King of France (after he had defeated Allarick an Arian Prince) by the General Conſent of the Prelates in the firſt Council of Orleans: But moſt Authors affirm, that this Privilege does not ſtand upon Grant, but is a Right inſeparable from the Crown. The Regale, according to Bignonius, comes from the right of Patronage which the King has over all the Churches in his Kingdom, from his Feudal Right over the Temporals of the Benefices of his State, and from his right of Protection in regard of the Eccleſiaſticks and goods of the Church. The Indulgence and Facility of ſome Kings have given way to Elections. Francis I. and his Succeſſors have been in ſome meaſure re-eſtabliſhed in their ancient right of naming to Biſhopricks and Archbiſhopricks, by the Concordate of Boulògne in 1515 and 1516; that Power of diſpoſing of Biſhopricks and Archbiſhopricks, hath made way to that of preferring to the Benefices which ſhould be dependent thereon during the vacancy of the See. The Capitulary's of Charles the Bald inform us, That when a Biſhoprick came to be vacant, the King ſent an Order to the Governour of the Province to take care of the Dioceſs, and to provide alſo, together with the neighbouring Biſhop, for all that regarded the Spiritual. In the Will which King Philip the Auguſt made before his Voyage to the Holy-Land, there is an expreſs Article, which enjoins thoſe who ſhould have the Government of the State, to conferr upon the moſt deſerving the Prebendſhips and other Benefices which ſhould become vacant, depending upon the Regale. This right of ſupplying the Benefices, was accompanied with the enjoyment of the Revenues of the vacant Biſhopricks or Archbiſhopricks. Hincmar, Archbiſhop of Rheims, complains in one of his Letters to Pope Leo IV. that as ſoon as a See was vacant, the King's Officers ſeiz'd upon all the Revenues of the Church, and cauſed the Epiſcopal Functions to be diſcharged by a Suffragan Biſhop. Philip the Fair leaving to the Dean and Canons of the Church of Paris the exerciſe of their Right during the vacancy of the See, obliged them to declare, and ſolemnly to acknowledge by Writing, that that Toleration ſhould be no prejudice to the Profits of the Regale. King Charles V. gave in 1364 to the Church of the Holy Chapel in Paris, the remainder of the Profits of the Regalia. Charles VII. beſtowed upon the ſame Holy Chapel the Profits of the Regalia for three years. Lewis XI. granted them it during his whole Reign, which was alſo done by Charles VIII. Lewis XII. Francis I. Henry II. and Francis II. Finally, King Charles XI. gave to this Church all the Revenues of the Regalia, without limitation of time. The Chapter of the Holy Chapel enjoy'd it 'till 1641, when King Lewis XIII. gave it the Abby of S. Nicaiſe of Rheims, and left all the Profits of the Regalia to the new Archbiſhops and Biſhops; whereby the Chapter loſt much; for that Abby brought not in above eight or nine thouſand Livers Rent, whereas the Regalia, according to the Sentiments of Cardinal d'Oſſat, equalled the Revenue of three of the richeſt Archbiſhopricks in the Kingdom put together. This Grant was confirmed in the Parliament of Paris in 1642, but the Court ordered that the King ſhould re-enter upon the Regalia, and that if a Biſhop or Archbiſhop died, all the Revenues of the Biſhoprick or Archbiſhoprick ſhould be ſeized upon by the Attorney General, who ſhould conſtitute Commiſſioners to manage it. However the Chamber of Accounts regiſtred the Letters of this Grant and of this Seſſion, and the Clergy have enjoy'd it ever ſince. As to the extent of the right of the Regale, it takes place throughout all the Kingdom, altho' ſome Biſhopricks and Archbiſhopricks, and alſo ſome Provinces have pretended exemption from it; the Abbies were alſo formerly ſubject thereto, but they have been diſcharged. The Parliament of Paris declared, by an Order bearing date the 24th of April 1608, That the King had a right of Regale to the Church of St. John de Bellay, as well as to all the reſt of the Kingdom, and forbad the Advocates and Attorneys to make any Propoſitions to the contrary; ſo that the Archbiſhopricks and Biſhopricks of the Provinces of Languedoc, Guienne, Dauphiné and Provence, made Application to the King's Council hereupon; and this continued till 1673, then, after a delay of above ſixty years, during which, the Prelates of the four Provinces could ſhew no Title to the Exemption they pretended to, the King iſſued out a Declaration in the Month of February 1673, which was confirmed in Parliament the 18th of April following, by which his Majeſty declared, That the right of the Regale appertain'd to him totally in all the Archbiſhopricks and Biſhopricks of his Kingdom, Lands and Signiories under his Obedience, except ſuch as were exempted for burthenſom Titles. On the ſecond of April 1675, the King put forth another Declaration confirmed in Court on the 13th of May the ſame year, wherein is expreſly named the Archbiſhopricks and Biſhopricks of the four Provinces which pretended to be exempt from the right of the Regale; to wit, Bourges, Bourdeaux, Auſch, Tholouſe, Narbonne, Arles, Aix, Avignon, Ambrun, Vienne, and the Suffragans. The King did alſo ſince in January 1682, put forth a perpetual Edict concerning the right of the Regale. M. Bignon.

REGGIO, formerly called Rhegium Lepidi, a City and Dutchy in the Territories of Modena, with a Biſhoprick, ſuffragan of Bolonia. It's the ſecond City in that State, large and ſtrong, with a good Cittadel. Reggio owes its Reputation to Charlemaign, having been ruin'd divers times as well by the Goths as by other Barbarians. It ſtands between Parma to the W. and Modena to the E. 15 miles from either.

REGGIO, or REGGE, formerly Rhegium Julium, an Archiepiſcopal City of the Further Calabria in the Kingdom of Naples, upon the Streight or Fare of Meſſina, over-againſt Sicily. This City was built by the Chalcidians An. Mund. 3279, 82 years after Rome. It flouriſh'd many years as a Free-ſtate, until it fell at laſt into the Hands of the Sicilian Tyrant Dionyſius, after a Siege of eleven Months. This Prince began his Reign An. Rom. 360, and reign'd 38 years. The City was little regarded from that time, till Julius Cæſar rebuilt it, and made it a Roman Colony, calling it Rhegium Julium, after which it is frequently mentioned in the Latin Hiſtorians. It's a very fair City, altho' it has been divers times plunder'd by the Turks; it belongs to the King of Spain.

REGIFUGIUM, a Feaſt which the Romans celebrated on the 24th of February, in memory of the flight of Tarquin who was baniſhed from Rome in the 245th year after the Foundation of that City. Some have imagin'd that Tarquin was baniſhed from Rome about the end of May, and in the Summer-time; for there is mention made in Hiſtory, that the Corn was already ripe; but in the firſt place it muſt be anſwer'd, That between the Decree made againſt Tarquin and the time of Harveſt there muſt be ſome Months ſpace; and ſecondly, That the order of the Months in thoſe days was not the ſame as now, according to the Julian account, and that it may be, that the Month of February was then at the ſame time as our Month of May or June is now; and when Denys of Halicarnaſſus affirms, That the Conſuls entred upon the adminiſtration of their Office four Months before the end of the year, he had reſpect to the year of the Greeks, or the Olympiad, which begun at the Summer Solſtice, according to which was adjuſted the firſt year of the Foundation of Rome. Tit. Liv.

REGILLIANUS (Quintus Nonius) fought twice valiantly againſt the Sarmatians, and afterwards revolting from Gallienus, cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed Emperor; but he continued not long, for the Soldiers that had inveſted him with the Purple, depriv'd him of his Life in 262. Trebellius Pollio.

REGILLUS, a ſmall Lake of the ancient Latium in the Territories of Tuſculanum, now called the Lake of Caſtiglione, or St. Praxede in the Country of Rome, between Tivoli and La Cava dell' Aglio. This Lake is famous for the Victory won by Aul. Poſthumus againſt Tarquin, after that King had been baniſhed. Tit. Liv.

REGINO, an Abbot of Prum, of the Order of St. Benet, in the Dioceſs of Treves; he lived about the end of the ninth Century; and in the beginning of the tenth he was obliged to leave the Government of his Monaſtery. He writ a Chronicle from the time of the Birth of our Saviour till towards 908, and hath afterwards continued it till 967, or 972. He deſcribed in this Book the principal Actions of the French. He has left alſo a Treatiſe De Diſciplinis Eccleſiaſticis & Religione Chriſtiana. He made uſe in this Work not only of the Greek and African Councils and Decrees of the Popes, but alſo of the Councils of Spain, France and Germany, and of the Labours of other Eccleſiaſtical Greek and Latin Authors, and chiefly of the Theodoſian Code, the Capitulars of Charlemaign and his Succeſſors the Kings of France, with the other Laws the ſame Kings had given to divers People that were their Subjects: But as to the Epiſtles of the Popes, he made uſe of no other hardly ſave thoſe of Siricius, and his Succeſſors as far as Hormiſdas, for that the reſt are queſtionable. Joachim Hildebran got this Book printed the firſt time in 1659, at Helmſtadt in the Dutchy of Brunſwick, from a Manuſcript which was in that Univerſity; and M. Baluzius has made it ſince to be re-printed more correct and enlarged in 1671, with very learned Notes upon it. Doujat. Hiſtoire du Droit Canon.

REGINOTRUDA, Dutcheſs of Bavaria, was the Daughter of Childebert or Theodebert King of France, and married to Theodon III. Duke of Bavaria, who became a Chriſtian at the ſolicitation of this vertuous Princeſs; and the Chriſtian Religion afterwards increaſed much in all Bavaria, by the help of Rupert Biſhop of *Worms. REHOBOAM, King of Judah, ſucceeded his Father Solomon, An. Mund. 3060. Shiſhack, King of Egypt, after he had taken divers Cities, beſieged Jeruſalem, whither he brought twelve hundred Chariots of War, with an innumerable Company of Men; but a Peace was made between Rehoboam and Shiſhack, yet ſo, that this laſt carried away all the Treaſure of the Temple, and the other cauſed Brazen Shields to be put in the room of thoſe that were removed. He died An. Mund. 3076, which was the 17th of his Reign, and the 58th of his Age.

REIMS, a City of France in Champaign, that gives Title to the firſt Duke and Peer of France, which is the Archbiſhop of the See, which hath for Suffragans Soiſſons, Chalon Sur Marne, Laon, Senlis, Beauvais, Amiens, Noion and Bullogne; Cambray, Tournay and Arras did alſo formerly belong to it. The Ancients called it Durocortorum and Durocortora Remorum, and now Remi or Remenſis Civitas. It may boaſt to be one of the moſt ancient and faireſt Cities of the Kingdom. It ſtands in the midſt of a pleaſant Plain, where the River Veſle waſhes one part of its Walls, which are in Circumference above an Hours walk, and which encloſe a great many fine Squares, large Streets, well-built-Houſes, and magnificent Churches, both for their Ornament, Greatneſs and Quality. The Cathedral is the chiefeſt, dedicated to our Lady, a noble Pile. The Portal is the moſt conſiderable in France for its Architecture, Figures and Baſs Relief, which render it a moſt Finiſh'd Piece. It's in this Church that the Archbiſhop of Reims anoints the Kings with the Oyl reſerv'd in a little Veſſel called Santa Ampulla, ſent, as they pretend, from Heaven at the Coronation and Anointing of Clovis. This City is very ancient, as manifeſtly appears by the Gates of it, which have the names of the Pagan Deities upon 'em, and the Fort of Cæſar which ſtands near the City. There is alſo at Reims a Preſidial, Bailiage and Univerſity, Founded by Charles of Lorrain, Archbiſhop of this City, with the leave of Henry II. There has been twelve Princes Archbiſhops of this Place, ſeveral of which have been of the Blood Royal of France. Sonantius, who govern'd the Church of Reims towards 630, was Preſident of a Council held at Reims, conſiſting of forty Prelates who aſſembled at the ſame time in this City for the Reformation of Manners. There were made 25 Canons which we have, with 21 Synodical Ordinances, attributed to the ſame Sonantius, as we learn from Flodoard, lib. 2. cap. 5. Wolfarus celebrated a Council there in 813, by the order of Charlemaign, who alſo cauſed divers others to be held at the ſame time, out of a deſire to ſee the Eccleſiaſtical Affairs well regulated before his death. There are 44 Canons of them. Hincmar ſpeaks of a Synod in 879, T. 2. p. 821. Foulque, Archbiſhop of Reims, in the Month of January 892, according to the ancient way of computing by the French, and 893 by the Romans, Crowned Charles the Simple King of France; and at the ſame time there was aſſembled there a Council againſt Baldwin Earl of Flanders, for uſurping ſome Goods of the Church. This ſame Foulque was aſſaſſinated ſome time after. Heriveus ſucceeded him in 900, and aſſembled there the Neighbouring Prelates, who Excommunicated the Authors of this Villainy. It will not be impertinent to add here the Deſcription of that Famous Monument of Antiquity which was diſcovered there in 1677. It's a Triumphal Arch, which was formerly the Northern Gate of the City of Reims, called Port-Mars, or the Gate of Mars. This Gate was buried in Rubbiſh, and hid under the Rampart, in 1554. And there has been another built by it of the ſame Name. This Arch is compoſed of three Arches, the middle, called the Arch of Seaſons; that on the right, the Arch of Romulus and Remus; and that on the left named the Arch of Læda. The Arch of Romulus was digged up in 1595, and the other two were diſcovered in 1677. In the Roof of the Arch of the Seaſons are to be ſeen four Children, which repreſent the four Seaſons of the year, and a Woman ſitting in the midſt of them denoting a Cornucopia. The twelve Months are repreſented ſtanding round, with divers other Ornaments which time hath worn out in a great meaſure. The Roof of the Arch of Romulus, encloſes in a Square, enriched with Trophies, a Figure of Remus and Romulus, ſuckled by a Woolf, with two Figures by it, whereof each hold a Truncheon in its hands, and one wears a Head-piece, and the other a Laurel. It ſeems however that this muſt be the Shepherd Fauſtulus, and his Wife Laurentia, who having taken theſe Children from the ſhe Woolf, bred them up to the Age of eighteen. In the Roof of the Arch of Læda is ſeen Læda, the Mother of Caſtor and Pollux, with a Swan and a Cupid holding a Torch in his hand. There are ſome who would have this Edifice to be a Triumphal Arch built in honour of Julius Cæſar, when in the Reign of Auguſtus Cæſar they made great Roads or Cauſways in France, one of which Butted upon this Gate. Others are of opinion that Julius Cæſar built it himſelf. Some thinking that this ſort of Architecture is not ſo old, have attributed this to Julian the Apoſtate, who paſſed by Reims when he came to Paris, in his return from his Conqueſts in Germany. It is hard to affirm under what Emperor this Monument has been built; ſince not only the Heads which were placed in the Frontiſpiece are broken, but the Place alſo where of old the Inſcription was wont to be put, is entirely defaced. All that can be ſaid with certainty, is, That it is a Triumphal Arch which hath been erected in honour of ſome Roman Emperor, and that it was done after the gaining of ſome Victory, whereof there are the Marks both on the out and inſide of this Work. There are yet ſtrong Reaſons to believe that this Triumphal Arch hath been built in honour of Julius Cæſar; for that Emperor pretended to be deſcended from Iulus, the Son of Æneas, and firſt King of Alba, from whom Remus and Romulus the Founders of Rome were deſcended. The twelve Months ſhew that Cæſar regulated the Calendar, and compoſed the year called the Julian. And the Swans which never ſink under Water, was a Commemoration of that Adventure of Cæſar in Egypt; when he was obliged to caſt himſelf into the Sea in his Robes and Purple, and had the Fortune to ſwim to a Ship that took him in; ſo that the Papers he held in one of his hands were not ſo much as wet. The Figures of Remus and Romulus ſeem to intimate, That this Monument was deſigned in honour of Julius Cæſar, who boaſted he was deſcended from the Race of Iulus, the Son of Æneas, and the Grand-ſon of Venus; more eſpecially, ſince in the midſt of the City of Reims there hath been alſo another Triumphal Arch with a Figure of Venus, the Mother of Æneas. The ſecond Arch is yet to be ſeen, but above half ruined. There remains nothing conſiderable of any of 'em but the middle Arch, and ſome Footſteps of the other two built upon each ſide. Du Cheſne. St. Marthe.

REINECCIUS (Reinier) a German, a Native of Steinheim in the Dioceſs of Paderbourg, who for a long time was Tutor in the Univerſies of Frankfort and Helmſtad, and hath publiſhed Genealogical and Hiſtorical Treatiſes, with divers other Pieces. He writ alſo a Book concerning The Method of Hiſtory, wherein is much Learning; but he hath obſerved no good order, nor always judged well of the Merit of Hiſtorians. His Hiſtorieal Treatiſes have been eſteemed by the Learned, and above all by Voſſius. He died in the year 1595. His Works that have been Printed are, Familiæ Regum & Pontificum Boſphoranorum, &c. Familiæ Regum Macedoniæ, Familiæ Regum Armeniorum, &c. Familiæ Regum Judæorum, &c. Familiæ Regum Mediæ, Spartanorum. Syntagma de Familiis quæ in Monarchiis tribus prioribus rerum potiti ſunt, & de Familiis duorum Ægypti Regnorum. Regum & Pontificum Iſraelitarum Regna celebratiſſima cum Familiis. Hieroſolymitanum Chronicon. De Marchionum, & Electorum Origine. Methodus Legendi Hiſtorias. Hiſtoria dubia, & Syntagma Hiſtoricum. Hiſtoria Julia, ſeu Syntagma Heroicum. Hiſtoria Orientalis. Familiæ Luceburgenſes, &c. with divers other Pieces of the ſame nature. Thuanus. Voſius de Philol.

REINESIUS (Thomas) a German Phyſician Born at Altenburgh, a Town in Miſnia. He liv'd in the XVIIth Century, wrote Six Book de Variis Lectionibus; A Cenſure of Salmaſius's Exercitations upon Pliny. Commentaries upon, and Supplements to Gruter's Inſcriptions. He died in 1657. Grævius Epiſt. Ded. Epiſt. Caſaub.

REINSBOURG, a Village a League from Leyden, in Holland, where there has been a Famous Abbey founded ſucceſſively by two Counts of Holland named Theodorus and Florentius, by the Counteſs Peronnella, and by a Lady of the Houſe of Saxony, where they were painted upon the Glaſs of the Church in their order. It's now under the Dominion of the States of Holland. Here was formerly a Religious Order of Women of St. Benet; all called Ladies; for that the Abbeſs was Lady temporal and ſpiritual of the place; and none were admitted but ſuch as were Nobly deſcended, and of ancient Extract. Thoſe that entred into it, for the moſt part, did not make Profeſſion till after ſome years, and ſome not at all, but went out and married. They gave large Alms thrice a week, and there aſſembled thither every day to receive it above two thouſand perſons. The four Founders are buried in the Church, and there are alſo to be ſeen a great many magnificent Tombs of the Counts and Counteſſes, and other Lords of Holland. Guichardin.

RELIGION is properly the Worſhip given to God; but this Name is alſo applied to the Worſhip of Idols and falſe Gods. It will not doubtleſs be impertinent to ſee here the State of Religion in the four Parts of the World.

RELIGIONS of EUROPE. The Inquiſition ſuffers not in Italy, nor in any of the Iſles thereabouts, any of thoſe they call Hereticks, for that they look upon them as Rebellious Subjects againſt the Pope its Head. They nevertheleſs tolerate Jews, for particular Reaſons, and the Pope makes them pay Tribute for the Liberty they enjoy in the Territories of the Eccleſiaſtical State. The Republick of Venice have baniſhed the Jews which ſettled there in an Iſland belonging to that City called Gioudezza. In the Kingdom of Naples, where the Inquiſition reigns as in Spain, are yet ſuffer'd ſome Greeks and Albanians of the Greek Church. Sicily profeſſes the Roman Catholick Religion, and makes uſe of the Inquiſition, and ſo does Sardinia; the Iſle of Malta which is, as it were, a Bulwark againſt the Turks, permits no Religion but the Roman-Catholick. Dalmatia is poſſeſs'd by the Venetians and the Turks. The little Republick of Raguſa pays Tribute both to the one and to the other, but is of the Roman Catholick Religion and hath an Arch-biſhop. The Venetians have two Arch-biſhopricks in Dalmatia, which are thoſe of Zara and Spalatro. The Inhabitants of the Iſle of Corfu, which belongs to the Republick of Venice, are Chriſtians of the Greek Church. The Iſle of Candia is now under the Dominion of the Grand-Seignior, where, beſides Mahometans, are Roman Catholicks, Greeks and Jews, who pay Tribute for their Liberty. There are none but Romaniſts in Spain, the Inquiſition being exerciſed there with great Severity, as well as in Portugal, and they ſuffer neither Moors nor Jews to be there. France is now all Roman Catholick ſince Lewis XIVth. has pulled down the Churches of the Reformed, and Revok'd the Edicts of Nants. In all the Netherlands which belong either to the King of France or Spain, there is no other Religion but the Roman Catholick, and if there be any Calviniſts or Lutherans there, they do not diſcover themſelves. In the States of Holland the reformed Religion according to Calvin is uppermoſt, but a great number of Roman Catholicks are ſuffered to be there, as well as Lutherans, Remonſtrants, Anabaptiſts, and Jews. The Papiſts are not permitted the publick Exerciſe of their Religion; but the Lutherans have leave to build Churches, and the Anabaptiſts have alſo theirs; as have alſo the Jews their Synagogues at Amſterdam and Roterdam. There are none but thoſe of the reformed Religion at Geneva. Of the thirteen Cantons of Swiſſerland, there are five of them Romaniſts, to wit, Uri, Switz, Onderwald, Lucern and Zurick. The Canton of Soulern is almoſt all Catholick; Zurick, Bearn, Bale and Schaf-hauſe, are either Zwinglians or Calviniſts. Fribourg, Glarits and Apenzeel, are partly Roman Catholicks, and part Calviniſts. Their Allies the Vaudois, are part of 'em Zuinglians; the Country of the Griſons partly Roman-Catholicks, and partly Proteſtants. The Valtoline all Roman-Catholick. Germany has almoſt as many Religions, as there are Princes, States and Free Cities; but the Roman Catholick is profeſs'd by the Emperor; and the principal Perſwaſions beſide, are Lutheraniſm, Anabaptiſm, and Calviniſm; but Lutheraniſm is of the greateſt extent, and moſt countenanced by Authority. Calviniſm is moſtly profeſs'd in the Palatinates; in the Country of Heſſe, the Dutchy of Wirtenburgh, and the Hans Towns. The Anabaptiſts had formerly gain'd ground all over Germany, excepting in Auſtria and Bavaria, but now there are none of them remaining, unleſs in the Neighbourhood of Holland. Hungary is in part Roman-Catholick, and in part Lutheran, beſides Arians in a great many Places. The Kingdom of Poland is of the Popiſh Religion, but there are many Proteſtants there; eſpecially in lower Poland, about Lublin, Pruſſia, and Livonia, towards the Baltick-Sea. In the Provinces that confine upon Hungary, Moravia, and Sileſia; and thoſe which advance towards the South and Levant, they follow for the moſt part the Greek Church. Tranſilvania is filled with all ſorts of Religions; the Roman Catholick is the leaſt in requeſt. Swedeland and Denmark follow the Confeſſion of Augsburg. In all the Territories of the King of Great Britain the Reformed Religion is eſtabliſhed, but in England they follow the Epiſcopal Government, and now in Scotland the Presbyterian. The Muſcovites follow the Religion of the Greek Church; and although they have a Patriarch at Moſco, yet they ceaſe not to acknowledge the Church of Conſtantinople. The Morduois, that are upon the Frontiers of Muſcovy, circumciſe in the ſame manner as the Jews and Turks do, although they are not of their Religion. They are neither profeſſed Chriſtians nor Idolaters, but live according to the Laws of Nature, and worſhip one God, Creator of the World, to whom they offer the Firſt-fruits of all that they gather, and caſt them up towards Heaven. Crim Tartary makes profeſſion of Mahometaniſm. There are alſo among them ſome Jews and Roman Catholicks to whom they grant the Exerciſe of their Religion, paying Tribute for the ſame. The Mahometan Religion reigns in Turkey, but the Grand-Seignior ſuffers Chriſtians and Jews there in divers places. The Chriſtian Greeks are there in great numbers, and have a Patriarch at Conſtantinople, whoſe Juriſdiction extends as far as Aſia Minor, or Natolia.

RELIGIONS of ASIA. In Turkiſh-Aſia, The Mahometan Religion is uppermoſt. The Grand-Seignior permits there other Religions, as well as in Europe. The Greeks have two Patriarchs there, that of Antioch, and that of Jeruſalem. It's in this Empire where principally are the Chriſtians called Armenians, Georgians, Neſtorians, Jacobites and Maronites. There are alſo Roman Catholicks, Sabæans, Coptes, and great numbers of Jews. The Roman-Catholicks are for the moſt part French and Venetian Merchants, who are aſſiſted by the religious Franciſcans, whoſe ordinary abode is at Jeruſalem and Bethlehem. In Perſia is the Mahometan Religion, according to the Sect of Ali, which differs from that of Abubeker, Omar and Oſman, whom the Turks preferr before that of Ali. But the Perſians give full Liberty of Conſcience to all Strangers, ſo that there are Roman-Catholicks, Armenians, Neſtorians and Sabæans; there are alſo Jews and Banyans, or Indian Prieſts, and other Idolaters. Arabia is ſubject to the Grand-Seignior, and Mahometan Princes, who tolerate Chriſtians to live there, where they have a famous Monaſtery upon Mount Sinai, poſſeſs'd by the Caloyers, or Religious Greeks of the Order of St. Baſil. The Empire of Mogul in India is ſubject to a Mahometan Prince of the Sect of Ali, which is that of Perſia. But in theſe Dominions are many Idolaters. There are alſo Roman Catholicks, Jews and Abyſſines, for every Nation has the free Exerciſe of its Religion. The Peninſula of Indus, on this ſide the Gulf of Bengale, comprehends divers Kingdoms, whoſe Inhabitants are almoſt all Idolaters. But to be a little particular; the little Iſland of Goa belongs to the Portugueſe, who have divers Churches and Monaſteries in it. The Arch-Biſhop of this Iſle hath under him all the Biſhops of the Eaſt-Indies. The Inquiſition exerciſes there its Tyranny againſt Apoſtates, as they call them. But Armenians, Jews, Moors, and Banyans, or Indian Prieſts, are ſuffered to live there according to their Religion; beſides Arabs, Perſians and Abyſſines, who partly follow the Chriſtian and partly that of the Moors which is the Mahometan Religion. The People of the Kingdom of Calicut believe in one God, Creator of Heaven and Earth; but they feign him to be Idle, and ſay, that 'tis an Evil Angel that governs the World. They pay Divine Honours to this Angel, whom they call Deumo, and to divers other falſe Divinities. The ſame Superſtitions are practiſed in the Kingdom of Narſingua, which is full of Pagods, or Temples built in honour of their Dæmons. The King of Golconda follows the Religion of the Perſians, but the People are Idolaters. The main Land of India beyond the Ganges is poſſeſs'd by divers Idolatrous Princes, the Peninſula of the ſame Indus, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Gulf, is alſo a Country where they worſhip Idols and falſe Gods. The principal Kingdoms of this Peninſula are thoſe of Siam, Tonquin, Lao and Pegu. The King of Siam permits the Exerciſe of all ſorts of Religions, and teſtifies a particular eſteem for that of the Chriſtians. The Peninſula of Malaca is dependant upon the Kingdom of Siam; but the greateſt part of it belongs to the Hollanders, who grant Liberty of Conſcience to Merchants of divers Religions that trade and live there. There are a great many Roman Catholicks in the Kingdoms of Tonquin and Lao, where the Jeſuits preach. The People of Pegu are ſo bent upon Idolatry, that they have fruitleſly attempted to bring the Chriſtian Religion into their Country. The Chineſes are Idolaters; but the Exerciſe of the Chriſtian Religion is permitted in that Country; and the Jeſuits have divers Churches there. There are alſo a great number of Jews who have there their Synagogues by the permiſſion of the Emperor of China. Tartary is ſubject to divers Princes, whereof the moſt Potent is The Great Cham. Some of the Sovereigns follow the Religion of Mahomet, others are Pagans and Idolaters. There are alſo Neſtorians and Jews; but ſuch as obſerve but little of the Law of Moſes. Idolatry reigns in Japan; and ſince the Perſecution of Taicoſama, who reigned there in 1630, the Chriſtians have now no Church in that Country, but have had formerly. The Philippine Iſlands belong to the King of Spain, who gives Liberty of Conſcience to all thoſe of the Country who are Idolaters, and to divers Indian Chineſes. The Iſles of Sonda called Java and Sumatra, are inhabited by People addicted to the worſhip of Idols. There are alſo Mahometans and Chriſtians. The Hollanders are very potent in the Iſle of Java, wherein they have Batavia. The Natives of the Iſle of Ceylon are Idolaters; but there are many Mahometans and a good number of Chriſtians, the Hollanders poſſeſſing divers Cities there. The Iſle of Cyprus is under the Dominion of the Turks, but they grant the Latin and Greek Chriſtians to live there without moleſtation, as do alſo the Armenians, Coptes, and all ſorts of Sects, paying only a Tribute for their Liberty. The Iſle of Rhodes is inhabited by Turks, Greeks and Jews.

RELIGIONS of AFRICA. Barbary is inhabited by Moors, Turks and Arabs, who follow the Religion of Mahomet. The Portugueſe, Spaniards and Engliſh, poſſeſs ſome places there. There are ſome Towns where the Infidels ſuffer the Chriſtians and Jews the Exerciſe of their Religion, paying Tribute for the ſame. The chief Religion of Egypt is the Mahometan, which the Moors, Turks and Arabs obſerve. The Chriſtian Coptes have alſo there their Churches, and the Jews their Synagogues. The People of Zanguebar, and thoſe on the Coaſt of Abex, are Mahometans; but the Portugueſes, who have places in Zanguebar, have introduced the Chriſtian Religion. There are alſo in this Country Jews and Idolaters. The Natives of the Iſle of Madagaſcar believe there is one God, Creator of Heaven and Earth; but they alſo worſhip an Evil Spirit. The French who are eſtabliſhed there endeavour to bring them to Chriſtianity. Cafreria is peopled with Idolaters. The Hollanders having only two Forts towards the Cape of Good-Hope, and the Portugueſe a Caſtle in the Kingdom of Sofala. There are many Idolaters in the Kingdom of Congo, ſome Mahometans, and divers Chriſtians, particularly in the Province of Angola, of which the Portugueſe are Maſters. The People of Guinea worſhip Idols; but the Engliſh, Hollanders and Danes poſſeſs ſome place upon that Coaſt, and the Portugueſe have Habitations in the Country, where they indeavour to introduce Chriſtianity. The Negro's mix with their Idolatry ſome Ceremonies of Mahometaniſm; as do alſo the Inhabitants of Zaara. Biledulgerid obſerves the Mahometan Religion. The Religion of the People of Nubia is a mixture of the Chriſtian Ceremonies with thoſe of Judaiſm and Mahometaniſm. The Abyſſines are the pureſt of all the Oriental Chriſtians. Heathen Idolatry is the ancient Religion of Monomotapa; but the Jeſuits have eſtabliſhed Chriſtianity there in divers places.

RELIGIONS of AMERICA. Canada, or New-France, is Peopled with Roman-Catholicks, the Country belonging for the moſt part to the King of France. New-England, New-Holland and New Swedeland, have alſo their Colonies, where each of theſe Nations exerciſe its Religion. The Savages, Iroquois, Hurons, Algonquains, and others have almoſt no Religion, ſave thoſe who converſe with the People of Europe. The Engliſh have divers places in Virginia. The Natives believe there are divers Gods, of different orders, who depend upon one Chief, called Keuvas, which is their Sovereign, and hath been ſo from Eternity. They eſteem the Sun, Moon and Stars to be Demi-gods. The Salvages of Florida are Idolaters, and adore the Sun and Moon; but the Spaniards and the Engliſh have Colonies there, and have introduced the Chriſtian Religion into divers places. Mexico, which is alſo called New-Spain, is well peopled with Roman-Catholicks, where there is an Archbiſhop, and divers Biſhops. The Spaniards are alſo Maſters of New-Caſtile, otherwiſe called Caſtille d'Or, where they have introduced the Roman-Catholick Religion. The Mountaneers of this Country are ſtill Idolaters, and adore the Sun and Moon as the principal Divinities, holding the one to be the Huſband and the other the Wife. The Caribee Iſlands and Natives of Guiana adore Idols, and ſome of them believe the Immortality of the Soul. The Inhabitants of the Country of the Amazons are alſo Idolaters. Braſil belongs to the Portugueſe, who have there a fair City called San-Salvador, where is an Archbiſhop's-See. The Salvages are converted to the Faith daily. The Country of Plata and that of the Patagons are peopled with Idolatrous Inhabitants; but the Spaniards have divers places there, and a Town called l'Aſſumption, which is a Biſhop's-See, and where is a College of the Jeſuits. The Spaniards have eſtabliſhed divers Seminaries in Chili, to labour for the Converſion of the Natives, who have but very little Religion. The Roman Catholick Religion is eſtabliſhed in Peru, which belongs to the King of Spain. There is an Archbiſhoprick at Lima, and divers Biſhopricks in the other Provinces; and Idolatry remains but amongſt very few of the Salvages. Memoires Hiſtoriques.

RELIGIOUS. See Monks.

RELIGIOUS MAHOMETANS. See Chalvetti and Nakſchibendi, who are the principal Founders of Religious Orders in the Empire of the Grand Seignior, and theſe Orders in particular, which are the Nimetulabites, Cadrites, Calenders, Edbemites, Hizrevites, Bectaſchites, Ebebuharites and Memelavites or Derviſes.

RELUCIN, a Man very learned in the Hebrew Tongue, and who was the firſt among the Latins that publiſhed an Hebrew Grammar and Lexicon.

REMI or REMIGIUS, Archbiſhop of Reims, was of Noble Extract. It's ſaid he was put into this See when he was but twenty two years of age, much contrary to his inclination. He Baptized Clovis, the firſt Chriſtian King of France. Sidonius Apollinarius praiſes him as one of the moſt Eloquent Men of his time. We have ſome Letters of his in the Library of the Fathers. He died in 535. Greg. of Tours. Flodoard. Hiſt. Rem.

REMI, or Remigius Archbiſhop of Lions, was great Almoner to the Emperor Lotharius, and afterwards elected to this See, after Amulon. He preſided at the IIId. Council of Valence, in 855, and at divers others aſſembled at Toul, Langres, &c. Maldonat judges Remi to be the Author of the Commentaries upon the Epiſtles of St. Paul, which are the Works of a very ancient Author, to wit, of Hilarius the Deacon, who lived about the middle of the fourth Age. But it is likely that this Illuſtrious Prelate, has writ the Commentaries upon St. Paul, which Sixtus Senenſis attributes to Remi of Auxerre, and Villapandus to St. Remi of Reims; which yet cannot be, ſince that therein is cited the Order of St. Bennet, St. Gregory, Caſſiodorus, the Venerable Bede, with Cyprian of Toulon, that were after the time of that Biſhop of Reims. That of Lions, of whom I ſpeak, died the 26th of October, in the year 873, or 879.

REMI, or Remigius Archbiſhop of Roan, was named to that Archbiſhoprick after Rainfroy, in 745. Some believe him to be the Brother of Charlemaign, others the Son of Charles Martel, Brother by the Mother's ſide to Pepin the Short. He quitted his Intereſt in the Kingdom, and retired to Mont-Soracte in Italy, where he became a Religious. He was the firſt, according to Paulus Æmilius, who received in France the ſinging according to the manner of Rome, brought thence by King Pepin. Gregory of Tours. Flodoard.

REMIGIUS (Peter) Lord of Montigni, ſucceeded in the Treaſury to Marigni and Laguette, under the Reign of Philip de Valois; the Exemplary Puniſhment of his two Predeceſſors could not deterr him from making his Fortune too faſt, by being falſe to his Truſt. He was therefore Tried in 1328 by the Parliament of Paris, conſiſting of 78 Knights, 25 Lords and Princes, and the King himſelf, and receiv'd Sentence to be Hang'd upon the Gibbet of Monfaucon, which himſelf had caus'd to be built. His Forfeited Eſtate amounted to above fifteen Millions of Livres. Mezeray.

REMIREMONT, a Famous Monaſtery in the Dioceſs of Toul, in Lorrain, upon the Moſelle, where none are admitted that are not of Noble Extraction. They are all called Canoneſſes.

The Abbeſs cannot quit her Habit; but the others may go forth, and Marry. St. Romerick is ſaid to have been the firſt Founder of this Monaſtery; wherefore it is called by them in Latin Romaricus, or Romericus Mons. The Nuns were formerly of the Order of St. Bennet. Hadrian. Valeſ. Notit. Gall.

REMONSTRANTS, or Arminians, ſo is a powerful Party called in Holland, who have taken the Name of Remonſtrants, from a Writing called a Remonſtrance, that was preſented by them to the States of Holland in 1609, wherein they reduced their Doctrine to theſe Five Articles. 1. That God in Election and Reprobation has a regard on the one ſide to Faith and Perſeverance, and on the other ſide to Incredulity and Impenitence. 2. That Jeſus Chriſt died for all Men without any Exception. 3. That Grace is neceſſary for the application of ones ſelf to Good. 4. That yet it doth not act in an irreſiſtible manner. 5. That before affirming that the Regenerate cannot totally fall off, this Queſtion muſt be more accurately examined. The Name of Arminians was given them, becauſe that Arminius, Profeſſor of Divinity at Leyden, was one of the firſt who oppoſed the then received Sentiment in Holland of an abſolute Predeſtination, which was that of Calvin. The Arminians complain extremely of the ill uſage they receiv'd from the Calviniſts, the moſt part of their Party being at firſt Impriſon'd, or Baniſh'd: The Hiſtory of this Perſecution may be ſeen in a Volume of Letters of the Remonſtrants, Reprinted at Amſterdam, in 1685. where their Remonſtrance, which gives 'em their Name, is inſerted. Their Opinions being Condemn'd in 1618, at the Synod of Dort, conſiſting of Dutch, German, Engliſh and Swiſs Calviniſts. They, in 1620, publiſh'd a Book, Intitul'd Acta & Scripta Synodalia Dordracena Miniſtrorum Remonſtrantium, in Fœderato Belgio; in which they defend their Doctrine upon the five Articles above-mentioned, and attack their Adverſaries, who determin'd the contrary in the Synod of Dort. The Remonſtrants likewiſe publiſh'd a Confeſſion of Faith, in which they give an account of their Sentiments upon all the points of Chriſtianity: In Defence of which Confeſſion, Simon Epiſcopius publiſh'd an Apology in 1629, Intitul'd, Apologia pro Confeſſione ſive Declaratione Sententiæ eorum qui in Fœderato Belgio vocantur Remonſtrantes ſuper præcipuis Articulis Religionis Chriſtianæ, contra cenſuram quatuor Profeſſorum Leidenſium. Here they clear themſelves of the Tenents charg'd upon 'em, i. e. of the reviving the ancient Errors of the Pelagians, and Semi-Pelagians, and agreeing in many things with the Socinians; from whom notwithſtanding, they differ in two Principal Articles. That is, the Trinity, and the Propitiatory Sacrifice of our Bleſſed Saviour; both which are deny'd by the Socinians, but maintain'd by the Remonſtrants. Epiſcopius and Curcelleus are two of the moſt Celebrated Writers of this Party; but not to mention the Voluminouſneſs of their Works, they both died before they had finiſh'd a compleat Syſtem of the Arminian Doctrine; this Task therefore has been undertaken and perform'd by Philip Limborch, in his Book Printed in 1686, at Amſterdam, under the Title of Theologia Chriſtiana, a conſiderable part of which is extracted in the Second Tome of the Bibliotheque Univerſelle.

REMUS, Vid. ROMULUS.

RENARD, Count of Soiſſons, was the Son of Guy of Vermandois, firſt Count of Soiſſons. His Father Guy introduced him to King Robert, whom he ſerved in the quality of chief Steward of his Houſhold, and kept that ſtation till the Reign of Henry I. but finally falling into diſgrace he withdrew into Soiſſons, where the King beſieged him in the Counts-Tower, which was then the Fortreſs of that City. It's ſaid, that Count Renard and his Son died during this Siege. Dorm.

RENATUS, ſurnamed the Good, King of Naples, Sicily, &c. Duke of Anjou, Count of Provence, &c. was ſecond Son to Lewis II. King of Naples, and of Toland, Daughter to John I. King of Arragon. He was born at Angers the 16th of January 1408. This Prince married in 1420, Iſabel, the Daughter and Heireſs of Charles I. Duke of Lorrain, and of Margaret of Bavaria; he was about to take poſſeſſion of this Dutchy, but Antony de Vaudemont, Brother to Duke Charles, pretended that Lorrain belong'd to the Line Male, and ſo to him. This Affair in 1431, was referred to the Fathers of the Council of Bâle, and to the Emperor Sigiſmond, who decided it in favour of Renatus, but Antony would not ſtand to this Deciſion, and ſo, being aſſiſted by the Troops of Philip ſurnamed the Good, Duke of Burgundy, he debated it by Arms: At firſt King Renatus had the better ſucceſs, but afterwards his Enemies Army being reinforc'd, his was defeated at Bullenville near unto Neufchatel in Lorrain the 2d of July, 1431, and he himſelf made a Priſoner, and carried to Dijon, where he remained four or five years; and there learnt in 1434, the death of Lewis II. King of Naples, his Brother, and that of the Queen Jane II. who had made him her Heir in 1435. Thus getting free from his Confinement, he was obliged to take a Journey into Naples; but it was neither fortunate for himſelf nor his Son after him, to wit, John of Calabria, who attempted alſo in vain the Conqueſt of the Kingdom of Arragon, which in right of his Mother Toland juſtly belonged to Renatus; ſo this Prince ſtop'd in Provence, where he lived in Repoſe. He was well made, full of Courage and Invention. To divert his Melancholy he fell to Painting and Writing both Verſe and Proſe. Being at Angers in 1448, he inſtituted the Military Order of the Creſcent. This Prince had by Iſabel of Lorrain, John of Calabria, Lewis Marqueſs of Pont, Nicholas Duke of Bar, Charles and Renatus that both died young; Toland Wife to Ferry Duke of Lorrain, Margaret married to Henry VI. King of England, and Iſabel and Anne that died in their Infancy. He married the ſecond time Jane the Daughter of Guy XIII, called the XIVth Count of Laval, but had no Children by her. His Sons died all before him, inſomuch, that ſeeing himſelf without Heirs of his Body, he left his Eſtate to Charles his Brother's Son of the ſame name, Count of Maine. Du Puy.

RENATUS II. Duke of Lorrain, was the Son of Ferry II. and of Toland of Anjou Daughter of Renatus King of Sicily. This Ferry was Son to Antony I. Count of Vaudemont, and thus married in order to terminate the difference between him and the King of Naples. Duke Renatus took upon him the Title and Arms of King of Sicily and Arragon, becauſe of the Rights of his Mother. He was ſolicited by the Emperor and King of France, to make War upon Charles Duke of Burgundy, which he did, and thereby loſt his Dutchy; but having afterwards received conſiderable Succors, he fought his Enemy, who had beſieged Nancy, and kill'd him on the fifth of January in 1477. It was ſaid, That the Duke of Lorrain being trimmed with a Golden Beard, was deſirous to ſee the Duke of Burgundy, whom he found with difficulty among the dead, and ſaid, Hah! good Couſin! you have done us much evil. This Prince died in 1508. Vignier. St. Marthe. Mezeray.

RENAUDOT (Theophraſtus) began in 1631, to publiſh News by the name of Gazettes; he left a Son behind him, who was Chief Phyſician to M. the Dauphin, and died at St. Germans en Lay, November 19. 1673.

RENDESHAM, an ancient Town in the County of Suffolk, and Hundred of Looes upon the River Deben. Redwald, the firſt Chriſtian King of the Eaſt Angles kept his Court here.

RENEA de France, Dutcheſs of Ferrara, was born at Blois in 1509, being the Daughter of Lewis XII. and Queen Anne of Bretany; ſhe was Married to Hercules d'Eſte Duke of Ferrara, tho' Betrothed before to Charles of Auſtria, afterwards Emperor, and demanded ſome years after in marriage by the King of England. Francis I. married her to the Duke of Ferrara, becauſe he was a Prince whoſe Power he needed not to fear. She did not content her ſelf to become knowing in Hiſtory, Languages, Mathematicks, and alſo Aſtrology, but ſtudied moreover, the moſt difficult points in Divinity, which engaged her inſenſibly in the Opinions of the Proteſtants. Brantome ſays, That reſenting the ill turns which the Popes Julius and Leo had done the King, her Father, ſhe denied their Power, and withdrew from their Obedience. Calvin paſſed from France into Italy in a diſguiſe, and with Marot, her Secretary, confirmed her in this Belief. After the death of the Duke, her Husband, ſhe returned into France, and there gave new marks of her Courage and Reſolution. The Duke of Guiſe, her Son-in-Law, having ſummoned her to ſurrender ſome of the Proteſtants, who had ſheltred themſelves in the Caſtle of Montargis, whither ſhe retired during that War about Religion, ſhe utterly refuſed, and daringly anſwered, That if he attack'd the Caſtle, ſhe ſhould be the firſt that ſhould come upon the breach and ſee whether he had the Courage to kill a King's Daughter. She died in 1575, in the Caſtle of Montargis, after having adorn'd the Town with many Fair Buildings. Bernier Hiſtoire de Blois.

RENNES, a Town in France, the Capital of Bretany, with a Biſhoprick ſuffragan of Tours. The River of Villaine divides it into two parts, and ſerves to enrich it by way of Trade, becauſe of the great Boats that come up thither from the Sea. Rennes is a very ancient City, and hath been the ordinary Reſidence of the Dukes of Bretany. Authors call it Redonæ, or Condate Redonum; the ancienteſt Biſhoprick is St. Moderan. The Parliament was eſtabliſhed there by King Henry II. Lewis XIV. has ſince transferr'd it to Vannes. There are to be ſeen the Cathedral of St. Peter, the Abbies of St. Melain and of St. George; a College of Jeſuits, and divers other Eccleſiaſtical and Religious Houſes; not to forget the Parliament-Houſe, built according to our Modern Architecture, and the Clock that is in it, whoſe Bell is eſteemed to be the biggeſt in the Kingdom. Rennes ſtands 50 miles N. of Nants, 115 W. of Tours, as many N. of Rochelle, and 200 W. of Paris. Santa Marthe.

RENOMME, or FAME, a Goddeſs invented by the Poets, called the Meſſenger of Jupiter by Homer; they repreſented her like a Woman richly clad, having her Robe tuck'd up, and Wings beſpangled with Eyes, with a Trumpet in her Mouth. Virgil deſcribes her almoſt in the ſame manner, calling her an horrible Monſter, and giving her as many watching Eyes as ſhe has Feathers; as many Mouths with ſo many Tongues in them that are never ſilent; and as many Ears that are always liſtning; and that in the day time ſhe placed her ſelf upon high Towers to frighten Men, bringing them very often ill news, and oftner lyes than truth.

RENTY, Lat. Rentica, a Town in Artois, heretofore of great ſtrength, which in 1554 repell'd the Forces of Henry II.

King of France, but in 1638 was ruin'd. It lies Five Leagues from Bologne to the Eaſt, and four from Arras upon the River Aa, which falls into the Britiſh Sea below Graveling in Flanders.

RENTY (Gaſton John Baptiſta Baron of) was born in the Caſtle of Beny in Lower Normandy, in the Dioceſs of Bayeux in 1611. He inſtituted a Society of Artiſans to live together, as the Primitive Chriſtians did, having all the gain of their labour in common, giving the overplus after their own neceſſities were ſupply'd, for the ſuſtenance of the Poor. There are now at Paris two of theſe Communities of Tradeſmen, the one of Taylors, and the other of Shooe-makers. There is alſo one of Shooe-makers at Toolouſe; they call themſelves Brethren, and live in common, obſerving the Rules preſcribed by the Baron de Renty. He fell ſick on the 11th of April 1649, and died the 24th of the ſame Month, aged 37 years. Giry.

REOLA, Lat. Regula, a City of Guienne upon the Garonne, where is a Famous Monaſtery Founded by Gombaud Biſhop of Bazas, and William Sancha Duke of Gaſcony his Brother.

REPEHAM, in Norfolk, ſeated in a Valley, and noted for its three Churches in one Church-yard. From London 92 Miles.

REPENDON (Philip) an Engliſhman, Cardinal, and Biſhop of Lincoln, was a Vigorous Oppoſer of the Wickliffites; He was preferr'd to the See of Lincoln in 1405, made a Cardinal three years after, and died about 1417. This Cardinal is ſaid to have been very Learned for his time, and diverted himſelf ſometimes with making Verſes; being once in Company with one Neckam, a Perſon of a debauch'd Life, he made this Diſtich upon him.

> Et Niger & Nequam, cum ſis cognomine Neckam,
> Nigrior eſſe potes, Nequior eſſe neques.

Neckam, who was pretty quick at the knack of Punning, made him the following Reply:

> Phi nota fœtoris, Lippus malus omnibus horis,
> Phi malus & Lippus, totus malus ergo Philippus.

RESENDIUS (Andrew) Canon of Evora in Portugal; he was Deſcended from a Noble Family, and made Præceptor to Alphonſo and Henry, Sons to King John III. He died in 1573. Aged 80. His Works are extant in two Volumes; the firſt contains a Treatiſe De Antiquitatibus Luſitaniæ, & Hiſtoria de Antiquitate de Cividad de Evora, Tranſlated by Andreas Schottus into Latin; the ſecond Volume conſiſts of divers Poems, and Hiſtorical Epiſtles; as de Æra Hiſpanica; Pro colonia Pacenſi, and ſeveral other Learned Pieces. Ambroſio Morales. Oſorius. Nicholas Antonio Bibl. Hiſp. &c.

RESTITUTUS, Biſhop of London, in the IVth Century. He maintain'd a Correſpondence with St. Hilary of Poictiers, as appears by ſeveral Letters of his, which have ſince been digeſted into a Volume. He aſſiſted at the firſt Council of Arles, in 314, to which he Subſcribed thus, Reſtitutus Epiſcopus de Civitate Londinenſi, Provincia Britanniæ. Pits de Illuſt. Script. Angl. Wharton Hiſtoria de Epiſc. & Decan. Londinenſ.

RESURRECTION, a Weekly Feaſt Inſtituted in Honour of our Saviour's Riſing from the Grave, which happen'd on the third day after his death. He appear'd firſt to Mary Magdalen, and other Holy Women who came to the Sepulchre, then to St. Peter, the Diſciples that were going to Emaus, and to the Apoſtles when met together. A week after he appear'd a ſecond time to the Apoſtles; and here St. Thomas who was abſent and doubted before, was convinc'd of his Reſurrection, and Divinity. The Scripture likewiſe acquaints us with three other publick Appearances of our Saviour. The firſt was near the Sea of Tiberias, where St. Peter, St. Thomas, the two Sons of Zebedee, Nathanael, and two other Diſciples were preſent. The ſecond was upon a Mountain in Galilee, ſuppoſed to be Mount Tabor, where, as St. Paul informs us, he was ſeen by five hundred Diſciples at once. The laſt time of his publick Appearing was the Day of his Aſcenſion, upon which he went with all the Apoſtles to Mount Olivet; where, after he had Bleſſed them, and given 'em a Commiſſion to Preach, and Baptize, he Aſcended into Heaven in their ſight. St. Matth. St. Mark, St. Luke, St. John. 1 Acts. 1 Cor. 15. Cap.

RESWICK, is a Royal Palace belonging to William III, King of England, lying betwixt the Hague, and City of Delph, and made very Famous for being the Place of the Treaty of Peace between the Moſt Serene Confederates, and the French King, in the Year 1697. which was happily Concluded here, after ſo long and bloody a War, that had ravaged and impoveriſh'd almoſt all Europe, and particularly the Kingdom of France; who by this Peaoe, not only agreed to acknowledge William III. to be King of England, but reſtor'd to him his Principality of Orange, and all his Lands in Burgundy, and other Dominions of France, with the Arrears due to him from them; yielded to the Spaniards, beſides all the Places Conquer'd during the War in the Netherlands and Catalonia, the City and Dutchy of Luxemburg; Dinant to the Prince of Liege, Friburg and Briſac to the Emperor (which laſt Place France had been in Poſſeſſion of for near threeſcore Years) Lorrain to that Duke, which the French had enjoy'd intirely ever ſince 1670. And in ſhort, made ſuch Conceſſions every way, to the Dutch in the way of Trade, and to the other Confederates, as diſcover'd how weary they were of the War, and what neceſſity they were under of a Peace.

RETEL, a Town of France in Champaign, the Capital of a little Country called the Retelois; it's now called Mazarin. It hath often-times been beſieged. The Arch-Duke Leopold took this City in 1650. The King of France's Army commanded by the Mareſchal Du Pleſſis Praſlin, obtain'd in the neighbourhood of this City a great Victory over the Troops of Spain, and thoſe of the Prince of Conde, commanded by the Mareſchal de Turenne. The Prince re-took Retel three years after. It now has the Title of a Dutchy. Retel ſtands 22 miles N. E. of Rheims, and 24 N. of Chalon ſur Marne.

RETIARII, a ſort of Gladiators who fought againſt the Myrmillones; the Arms of the Retiarii were a Pitch-fork with three points, and a Fiſhing-net, wherein they endeavour'd to entangle the Heads of their Enemies. The Myrmillones were armed with a Sword, Buckler, and an Head-piece, whereon was pictured a Fiſh. When the Retiarian fought, he ſang, or rather the People for him, I make not at thee, but at thy Fiſh; why doeſt thou ſhun me, Gaul? It's ſaid, That Pittacus, one of the Seven Wiſe Men of Greece, was the firſt that invented this ſort of fighting, when coming to fight againſt Phrynon, in order to terminate the difference that was between the Athenians and Mytilenians, touching the Bounds of their Country, he brought a Net hid under his Coat, wherein he entangled the Head of his Enemy. This name is derived from the Latin word Rete, which ſignifies a Fiſher's or Hunter's Net. Feſtus. Lipſius.

RETIMO, a City in the Iſle of Candia, and a Biſhop's See. The Turks are Maſters of it ſince the laſt Wars, wherein they brought this Iſland under their ſubjection.

REVARD (James) a famous Lawyer, whom Juſtus Lipſius calls uſually the Papinian of the Low Countries, was born about 1335, in a Village near unto Bruges. He ſtudied at Louvain, and afterwards at Orleans, where he received his Doctor's Degree. After that he returned to Bruges, where he made himſelf ſoon known by his great Abilities. He was a little after offered a Profeſſor's Chair, but his Indiſpoſition obliged him to retire home, where he died in 1568. He writ divers Pieces, as, De Juris ambiguitatibus, l. 5. De Præjudiciis, l. 2. Protribunalia; De Autoritate Prudentum; De Jure Liberorum; De veris uſucaptionum differentiis; Comment. ad Legem Scriboviam; Commentarium ad leges duodecem Tabularum. Le Mire. Valerius Andreas.

REUCHLIN (John) a German, much eſteemed for his Learning; he was alſo called la Fume or Capnion, for that Reuch in the Language of that Country, and Capnion in Greek is the ſame as Fumus (Smoak) in Latin. He was born in 1454 at Phortzheim, a Village of Germany near Spire, and render'd himſelf Famous by his Learning; the Hebrew, Greek and Latin were familiar to him; he was alſo skill'd in the Law, and in all Polite Learning. The Emperors and Princes of Germany honoured him with their eſteem. A certain Jew called Pfeffercorn, getting himſelf baptized, adviſed the Emperor Maximilian to burn all the Books of the Rabbins, that he might oblige the Jews to buy them for a great Sum of Money, whereof he pretended to have part: Reuchlin oppoſed him, and that engaged him againſt the Monks of Cologn, that were of Pfeffercorn's Party. He publiſhed a Tract De Verbo Mirifico; De Cabbalæ placitis; a Grammar, and an Hebrew Lexicon, and divers other conſiderable Pieces. He died in 1521. John Henry Mayus Profeſſor at Dourlach, publiſh'd all that he could Collect concerning the Life of Reuchlin, in a Volume in Quarto, Printed at Franckfort in 1687. an Extract of which, the Reader may ſee in the Eighth Tome of the Bibliotheque Univerſelle. Melchior Adam.

REVEL, an Hanſe-Town in Livonia, the Capital of the Province of Eſthonia or Eſten, near the Gulf of Finland, part of the Baltick Sea. Waldemar or Wolmar II. King of Denmark laid the firſt Foundations of it about 1230. Wolmar III. ſold it in 1347, with the Towns of Narva and Weſemburg to the Great Maſter of the Teutonick Order for nineteen thouſand Marks in Silver. About 1565 this Town put it ſelf under the protection of Erick King of Swedeland, in order to be ſecured againſt the Muſcovites, who fruitleſly beſieged it in 1570, and in 1577. The City of Revel began to be a trading place from 1477, and the Trade continued there till 1550, at which time the Muſcovites taking the Town of Narva, eſtabliſhed the Commerce there which they had before at Revel. It's fortify'd after the Modern way, and its Caſtle is built upon a Rock that is ſteep and craggy on all ſides ſave towards the City. Its Haven and Road are very commodious for Trade. Its Laws are much the ſame with thoſe of the City of Lubeck, and it hath a Conſiſtory, and a Superintendant for Eccleſiaſtical Affairs. They profeſs there the Proteſtant Religion, following the Confeſſion of Augsburg. The Government of Revel is Democratical; the Magiſtrate being obliged to call the chief among the People to the Deliberations of important Affairs. About half a League from the City there was a very fine Convent of Friars and Nuns, who had there their Churches and Manſions apart. The Hiſtory of that Convent reports, That the Brethren and Siſters had found out a way to ſpeak to one another by Signs, whereof they had compoſed a Dictionary. Revel ſtands 120 miles Weſt of Narva, 140 North of Riga, 124 South-eaſt of Abo, and 235 Eaſt of Stockholm. Olearius Voyage de Moſcovie.

REVEL (Hugh de) the twentieth Grand-Maſter of the Order of St. John of Jeruſalem, whoſe Convent was then at Ptolemais or St. John de Acre, ſucceeded in 1260 William de Chateau-neuf. He was endued with as much Courage as Prudence, but the Forces of the Souldan of Ægypt were too potent for him, inſomuch that he was obliged to make a Truce with him, which was ſoon broken by the Souldan, in 1270. The Hoſpitallers loſt their Fortreſs of Crac in the Earldom of Tripoli, after having generouſly ſuſtained a tedious Siege, where all the Knights of the Garriſon reſiſted unto death, rather than they would ſurrender. About 1276, Bruchard Deſchwenden, Grand-Maſter of the Teutonick Order, renounced his Maſterſhip, and received the Habit of the Hoſpitallers at the hands of the Great-Maſter de Revel, who died in 1278, after having held five noble Chapters, and made divers excellent Laws for the Government of his Order. Nicholas de Lorgue ſucceeded him. Boſio. Naberat.

REVEL, a City of the Higher Languedoc, in the Dioceſe of Lavaur. The Inhabitants ſay, It was called formerly La Baſtide de Lavaur, and that it was named Revel for Rebel, for that it was ſurrounded with Walls by the Order of Philip ſirnamed the Fair.

REUSNER (Nicholas) a German Lawyer, was born in 1545, at Lewenburg in Sileſia; his Learning acquired him much Reputation. He was Profeſſor at Jena, and Councellor of the Dukes of Saxony, and died the 12th. of April, 1602, aged 58. He has writ divers Pieces. Poems, Monarcharum ſive ſummorum Regum, lib. 8. Principum Germaniæ, ſive Electorum, lib. 3. Principum & Cæſarum Auſtriacorum Sylvula; Elogia illuſtrium Heroum; Germaniæ Urbes Imperiales; De Italia, lib. 2. &c. Melchior Adam.

REUSNER (Elias) a Phyſician, Brother to Nicholas, and Profeſſor in the ſame Univerſity. In 1592 he publiſh'd a Book, entitled, Genealogia Imperatorum, Regum, Ducum, &c. which was Reprinted in 1612. He wrote likewiſe Iſagoge Hiſtorica; Hortulus Hiſtorico-Politicus, &c.

REUTER (Quirin) a Lutheran, Profeſſor of Theology in the Univerſity of Heydelberg, was born at Mosbach, a City of the Palatinate of the Rhine, in the year 1554. Having gone through his Studies in Heydelberg, he taught Philoſophy and Theology in divers Cities of Germany, and returned afterwards to Heydelberg, where he was received to be Profeſſor in Divinity, and elected Rector of the Univerſity, in the year 1607. He writ divers Tracts, the principal whereof are, De Significationibus Cometarum; Aphoriſmi Theologici; Commentarij in Abdiam ſive Obadiah Prophetam, &c. He died in 1613, and was buried in the Chapel of the Univerſity. Melchior Adam.

REUTLINGEN, Lat. Reutlinga, a ſmall City in the Province of Schwaben in Germany, within the Borders of the Dukedom of Wirtemberg, made an Imperial Free Town, in 1215; or as others ſay, in 1240. It is of a ſquare form, built in a Plain upon the River Echetz (which a League beneath it falls into the Necker) at the foot of Mount Achameck, one mile from Stutgard, ten from Ulm, and five from Tubinghen, under the Protection of the Duke of Wirtemberg.

REY, once the greateſt City of Aſia, now entirely ruin'd. It lies nine miles from Save to the Weſt. The Perſians tell incredible Stories of the greatneſs of it. See Chardin, p. 387. Ptolemy calls it Raquaja. It lies in Longit. 76. 20. Lat. 35. 35. and was ruin'd in the Twelfth Century after Chriſt. It ſtood in a fertile Soil, but unhealthful Air, much ſubject to Agues, yet the People liv'd as long there as in other places; and it was a great while the Univerſity of Perſia, and the greateſt Mart of the Eaſt. This City is in Parthia, a Province of Perſia, and is now a heap of Rubbiſh.

REYGATE, a large Market and Borough-Town in the County of Surry, in a place commonly call'd Holmes Dale, where Fullers-Earth is digged up in abundance, ſhewing the Ruines of an ancient Caſtle, and under ground a long Vault, with a ſpacious Room at the end of it, ſaid to be the ſecret Chamber in which the Barons met in Council in their War againſt King John. The Danes fought ſeveral unſucceſsful Battles near this Town. It is the Capital of its Hundred, and a Corporation, repreſented in the Lower Houſe of Parliament by two Burgeſſes.

REYNA (Caſſiodorus) hath tranſlated all the Bible out of the Original into Spaniſh. This Tranſlation is become ſo rare, that Gaſſarell, who ſold it to M. Carvati, for the King's Library, made him believe it was an old Bible of the Jews: But beſides that, the New Teſtament is tranſlated as well as the Old. It is eaſily known by the Pictures of the Bears in the firſt Page of the Book, that it was printed at Bâle. The Tranſlator has a long Diſcourſe in Spaniſh, at the beginning of the Bible, to prove, That the Holy Scriptures ought to be tranſlated into the Vulgar Tongue; he has alſo adorn'd it with Marginal Notes, for the explanation of the moſt difficult places, and principally the words that have different ſignifications, by placing one in the Text, and the other in the Margin, which is judiciouſly done. He hath alſo a Diſcourſe therein, where he gives an account of the manner of his Tranſlation. P. Simon.

S. REYNE was born in 238, in the City of Alize, in the Dutchy of Burgundy, and in the Dioceſs of Autun: This City is now a great Borough-Town called Sainte Reyne, for that it is the Place of the Birth and Burial of this Perſon. The Emperor Decius having put out an Edict in 253, to perſecute the Chriſtians, Olibrius Governour of the Gauls took Sainte Reyne, and after having to no purpoſe made uſe of Promiſes and Threats to oblige her to marry him, and renounce Chriſtianity, he cauſed her to be cruelly tormented, and at laſt commanded her Head to be chopt off. Her Body was buried by the Chriſtians at the foot of the Mountain of Alize, together with an Iron Chain that had been one of the Inſtruments made uſe of in her Martyrdom.

REZAN, a City of Muſcovy, and a Biſhop's See: It's the Capital of a Dutchy, which makes a great Province, where are the Springs of the River Tanais or Don. This Country formerly belong'd to Lithuania. Rezan ſtands 36 miles from Moſco to the South-eaſt, and 12 from the Fountains of the Tanais, ariſing within this Dukedom. It is an Epiſcopal City. The Province of Rezan lies between the Den and Occa, having on the Weſt Muſcovy, which is divided from it by the River Aka. It is the moſt fruitful Province in this Kingdom. Beſides the chief City, which lies upon the Occa, it has Corſira and Tulla upon a River of the ſame name. Rezan was totally ruin'd in 1669, and the Inhabitants remov'd to Periſlaf.

RHA, or the Wolga, a River of Muſcovy, and one of the greateſt in Europe; the Tartars call it Edel, and the Armenians Thamar. It ariſeth in Muſcovy near unto the City of Reſcow, or in the Country of Twer. It is affirmed, That to the Eaſt of this City, and near unto a great Foreſt call'd Wolkowskiles, there is a Marſh call'd Wronow, whoſe Waters form a Rivulet which diſcharges it ſelf into the Lake of Volga, which is not paſt two or three Leagues diſtant, and 'tis there the River takes its Name I ſpeak of. After having travers'd the Twer from the Weſt to the Eaſt, as far as the Kingdom of Cazan, it turns toward the South, and paſſeth through the Kingdoms of Bulgan and Aſtracan, encreaſing by the Waters of many great Rivers; and divided into divers Branches, it diſchargeth it ſelf into the Caſpian-Sea, after having paſſed by Aſtracan, and formed the Iſland of Dolgoi, which is very barren. Olearius.

RHADAMANTHUS, a ſevere Judge; and according to others, King of Lycia. His great Juſtice has given the Poets occaſion to ſay, That he was one of the three Judges of Hell. Natalis Comes.

RHADAMISTUS, the Son of Pharaſman King of Iberia (which is now called Georgia, in Turkey, in Aſia) who feigned himſelf to be out of favour with his Father, and retired to his Uncle Mithridates King of Armenia, whoſe Daughter he married; but having by his ſubtilty gained the Friendſhip of the People, and the Affections of the Grandees of the Kingdom, he made a ſhew of reconciling himſelf to his Father, to whom he went ſecretly to give Inſtructions concerning the Succeſs of his Deſign; and under pretence of making War upon the People of Albania, he raiſed a potent Army, which he conducted to Armenia, where he beſieged Mithridates in a Fortreſs called Gorneas. But ſeeing he could not prevail by force, he made uſe of a new ſtratagem, and demanded a Treaty of Peace, with his Uncle, who came to meet him in a Wood near unto Gorneas. Rhadamiſtus embraced Mithridates, and ſwore to him, he would offer him no violence either by Sword or Poiſon. There were Preparations made for the Ceremony of the Treaty; and becauſe it was the Cuſtom of the Country to tie the Thumb, and draw Blood thence and drink it, to ratifie and confirm the Alliance, Rhadamiſtus gave Orders to one whom he had pitch'd upon for that Action, to make as if he fell himſelf, and throw Mithridates down, and ſo took that King, with his Wife and Children Priſoners, and afterwards cauſed them to be ſtifled with a Pillow, being unwilling to violate the Oath he had made at the beginning of their Interview. This wicked Prince was vanquiſh'd by Artaban King of the Parthians, in the year of our Lord 52; and being conſtrain'd to flie, he himſelf kill'd his Wife Zenobia, who was unwilling to ſurvive ſo many Misfortunes; and finally, his Father Pharaſman put him to death, as a Traytor. *Tacitus. RHAMNUS, a Town of Attica, which the Moderns call Tauro-Caſtro, or Ebræo-Caſtro. There was a Temple in it dedicated to the Goddeſs Nemeſis, whereby it became famous, becauſe of the admirable Statue of that Goddeſs, which Phidias, or according to others, Agoracritus, one of his Scholars, had placed there. It is ſaid that Agoracritus and Alcamenes, both brought up by Phidias, ſtrove which ſhould make the beſt Statue of Venus, and therein employ'd the utmoſt effort of their Skill. When they were finiſhed, they took the People of Athens to be Judges between them. But as Alcamenes was an Athenian, and Agoracritus of the Iſle of Paros, they gave Judgment in favour of their own Citizen, though without doubt the Work of the laſt was much finer than the other. Agoracritus had recourſe to thoſe of Rhamnus, and called his Statue Nemeſis (which was the Goddeſs of Revenge) willing perhaps to intimate thereby, That he ſhould ſufficiently revenge himſelf upon the Athenians, in placing it in a Temple where the excellency of this Maſter-piece of Art ſhould quickly be acknowledged. *J. RHENS, or Rhenia, a little Iſland in the Ægean-Sea, one of the Cyclades, near to that of Delos, and now one of the Sdilles.

RHESCUPORIS, King of part of Thrace, who making an unjuſt War upon Cotys, his Nephew, who poſſeſs'd the other half of the Kingdom, brought him to an Interview, where he ſecured his Perſon at a Feaſt, and afterwards cauſed his Throat to be cut in Priſon. The Emperor Tiberius coming to know of this Treachery, ſent Pomponius Flaccus, whom Rheſcuporis entirely lov'd, to diſcover the truth of the matter. Flaccus drew him cunningly to the Frontiers, and then carried him to Rome, where he was diveſted of his Dominions, and carried to Alexandria under a ſtrong and ſecure Guard ; and when they ſaw he uſed all his Efforts to make his eſcape, he was put to death. Tiberius gave one part of Thrace to Rhemetalces the Son of Rheſcuporis, who was not an Accomplice in his Father's wicked Deſign ; and the other part to the Children of Cotys, who being not of age, Tiberius made Tribellius Rufus, who was juſt out of the Prætorſhip, Lieutenant and Governour of the Kingdom, as formerly M. Lepidus had been made Tutor to the Children of Ptolemy King of Egypt. Tacit.

RHESUS, King of Thrace : He came to help the Trojans againſt the Greeks ; but being betray'd by Dolon a Trojan Soldier, he was put to death the very firſt Night by Diomedes and Ulyſſes ; ſo his White Horſes could not drink of the River Xanthus, nor feed in the Fields of Troy, to the end Troy might be impregnable, according to the Oracle. Homer.

RHIN, or the Rhine, a great River in Germany and the Low-Countries ; it riſes in the Alps in Mount Adula, or S. Gothar, two or three Leagues from the Head of the Rhône. It ſprings from two Fountains, the one called Voder Rhin, or the Firſt Rhine ; and the other Hindes Rhin, or the Second Rhine, which join both together. This River begins to be Navigable near Chur in Swiſſerland, and entring into the great Lake of Conſtance and Celle, it paſſeth to Schaffouze, Bazil, &c. from thence it runs into Alſatia towards Briſac, and near to Straſburgh ; and encreaſing by the Waters of many great Rivers, it waters Philipsburgh, Spire, Wormes, Mayence, Cologne, and divers other Cities ; finally, near unto the Fort of Schenk it divides into two Branches, whereof the one called Vahal runs towards Nimeguen, Tiel and Bommel, and joining with the Meuſe, it loſeth its Name. The other Branch takes its courſe toward the North, almoſt as far as Arnheim, where it ſeparates into two parts, whereof the one called the Yſſel paſſeth to Doesburg and Zutphen, and diſchargeth it ſelf into the Zuider-Zee ; the other Arm, which ſince the year 860 hath formed a new courſe by the overflowing of the Sea, is called Lech, and runs not by Utrecht nor Leyden, as it did then, but to Wyck, Cullemburg and Newport, and finally, diſchargeth it ſelf into the Merwee, and from thence into the Sea. Moller has writ an ample Deſcription of the Rhine, with Geographical Tables of the Provinces and Countries it runs through. Reuther, in his Hiſtorical and Chorographical Obſervations, hath given very particular Deſcriptions of the Mouths of it : And Monconis ſpeaks thus of the Chataracts of this River ; The Rhine running very broad, but not very deep among the Mountains, falls near Schaff-houſe in Swiſſerland from the Rocks into a ſecond Channel about ſixty foot lower than the former, and that in five Streams, whereof that in the middle runs between two narrow and high Rocks ; in the midſt of the firſt Channel may be ſeen, as it were, two great Pillars, which are ruinous : This fall makes a very great noiſe, and is worth ſeeing. Hoffman adds, That the ancient Inhabitants about the Rhine did uſe to try the Legitimacy of Children, by throwing them into it, reckoning ſuch as ſunk Baſtards, but thoſe who ſwom were look'd upon as lawfully begot. It was alſo called Aurifer by ſome, becauſe of the Gold found mix'd in its Sand. It was the ancient Boundary betwixt France and Germany. Charlemaign built a wonderful Bridge of Wood over this River at Ments, of 500 paces long, which was burnt by a caſual Fire, about a year before his death. And Conſtantine the Great begun a Bridge over this River at Cologne, to ſtrike terrour into the French. In ſhort, this River, fam'd by Greek and Latin Writers, is without doubt the greateſt in Europe, next the Danube, and noted for the excellent Wine which grows on its Banks, call'd Rheniſh Wine. The Etymology of its Name is variouſly diſcourſed of by Authors ; ſome deriving it from the German word Reyn, which ſignifies flowing hitherward ; or Rein, which ſignifies Clearneſs and Purity, becauſe it was formerly made a Teſt of Conjugal Chaſtity. Hence Claudian, Et quos naſcentes explorat gurgite Rhenus ; and St. Gregory Nazianzen, 'Ες νόθον ὀυγγνέος 'Ρήνῳ κελάδοντα ῥεέθροις. Guichardin. Bertius. Cluvier.

RHINEBERG, or Rheinberg, Lat. Rhenoberga, a City in the Biſhoprick of Cologne, in the Borders of the Dukedom of Cleves, ſituate upon the Rhine, is little, but very ſtrong. It was taken from the Spaniards by the Hollanders in 1633, and continued under 'em till 1672, when it was taken by the French, and reſtored to the Elector of Cologne, the right Owner. It ſtands two German miles from Weſel to the South, and three from Gueldres to the Eaſt.

RHINFELD, or Rhinfelden, a ſtrong City of Germany, upon the Rhine, in Swabia, appertaining to the Houſe of Auſtria ; it was often taken during the Wars in Germany, and ſurrendered up by the Peace of Munſter. It was alſo the Theatre of the War in 1676, when it ſuffered much by the French : It was once a Free Imperial City, but in 1410 granted by Lewis of Bavaria to the Arch-duke of Auſtria. Alſo the more famous for a defeat of the Imperialiſts, and the taking of John de Wert by the Duke Bernard Weymar, in 1638.

RHINSFELD, a ſtrong Caſtle upon the Rhine above St. Goar, in the County of Catimeliboch, under the Landtgrave of Heſſe, built by one Dieter a Count of this Country, in 1245, between Coblentz to the North, and Bingen to the South, in the Borders of the Biſhoprick of Trier. It is ſixteen miles South of Coblentz. The French beſieged it in 1692, but were obliged by the Landtgrave of Heſſe to retire with loſs.

RHIPHÆI, Mountains of Sarmatia, which are in that Country now called Petzora, a Province of Muſcovy, towards the Obdora or Obi, and upon the Frontiers of Aſia and Tartary.

RHODES, an Iſland of Aſia in the Mediterranean-Sea, with a City of the ſame Name, the Metropolis thereof. The Inhabitants of this Iſland were once ſo very expert in Navigation, that for ſome Ages they gave Law to the World, and were Sovereign of the Sea, their Conſtitutions and Judgments in Affairs concerning the Sea being withal ſo juſt, as to become incorporated afterward into the Roman Pandects. It hath had formerly divers Names from Great Men, and much Reputation. Amongſt the number of thoſe ancient Kings attributed to it, there were Tlepolemus the Son of Hercules, Dorieus, Demagetes, Diagoras, Evagoras, Cleobulus, Cleobulinus, who yielded up his Right to Eraſtides, Demagetes II. and Diagoras the Rhodian, who reigned about An. Mun. 3370. It was alſo very famous for the Coloſſus of the Sun, which paſſed for one of the Wonders of the World. It was a Statue of the Sun ſeventy Cubits high, the Work of Chares the Diſciple of Lyſippus. It is added, That falling by an Earthquake, they durſt not touch it for fear of the Oracle, which had predicted that Rhodes ſhould be ruined after the Wrecks of this Coloſſus. But Muavias the Sultan of Egypt having rendred himſelf Maſter of the Iſle, took up this Statue 1461 years after it had been made, and laded ſeventy two Camels with it, who carried it away. However, after the loſs of Jeruſalem and Acre, the Hoſpitallers, or Knights of Saint John, took Rhodes from the Saracens, who had before taken it from the Emperors of Conſtantinople. Foulques de Villeret, a French-man, Grand Maſter of the Order, was the chief in this great Enterprize ; and it was happily accompliſh'd on the Day of the Aſſumption of the Virgin Mary, in 1309, or 1310. The Infidels often endeavoured to recover this advantageous Poſt, but to no purpoſe. The Order which were called by the Name of Rhodes, were Maſters of it till 1522. Mahomet II. Emperor of the Turks, attacked it in 1480 ; and Peter d'Aubuſſon, the Grand Maſter, defended it valiantly for three months, and conſtrained the Turks to withdraw, after they had loſt the beſt part of their Army. Solyman ſent an Army before Rhodes in 1522, and the Turks began their Seige with a frightful havock. The Knights, animated by the Grand Maſter Philip Villiers de l' Iſle Adam, a French-man, courageouſly withſtood them, and would have triumphed over their Enemies, if they had not been betrayed ; and in effect, the Infidels being dejected with their continual Loſſes, were thinking of a Retreat, when the Advice they received made them take new Meaſures. Andrew d'Amarat, a Portugueſe, and Chancellor of the Order, diſſatisfied that l'Iſle Adam, his Enemy, had been preferred to the Dignity of Grand-Maſter, made no ſcruple of violating all the Laws of Honour, to revenge himſelf for the Injury he pretended was done him : He underſtood their Councils, as being one of them himſelf, and knew the weakneſs of the Place, and gave Information thereof to Solyman, who alſo received an Account of it from others, by means of a Jewiſh Phyſician whom he kept at Rhodes. The Treaſon of Amarat was at laſt diſcovered, and he was beheaded the 30th. of October. But the Turks being ſtill more obſtinate to puſh on the Siege, and the Place being no longer in a condition to defend it ſelf, it was ſurrendered to Solyman, who entred into it on Chriſtmas-Day, in the ſame Year. Since that time the Turks have been Maſters of Rhodes, where they have a Baſha. Rhodes hath to the North of it Caramania, part of Natolia, a Branch of the Sea running between both, being about twenty miles broad ; towards the Eaſt-part of it is the Iſle of Cyprus, to the Weſt the Iſle of Candia, and to the South Egypt. It is about ſix and twenty miles in circumference. The Air is there ſo ſerene, that there is no one day paſſeth wherein the Sun does not ſhine ; and 'tis for that reaſon that the Ancients dedicated it to the Sun. Phoroneus King of the Argives, built the City of Rhodes, the Capital of the Iſle, about the year of the World 2145, in 1310. Ottoman, King of the Turks, laid Siege to it before they had leiſure to fortifie the Place: but Amadeus IVth. Count of Savoy, who came to the Relief of it, ſaved it; and for the eternizing this Victory, inſtead of the Eagles, that were the Arms of his Predeceſſors, he took a Croſs Argent in a Field Gules, from the Order of Rhodes, and theſe four Letters F. E. R. T. that is, Fortitudo ejus Rhodum tenuit.

RHODES, the Capital City of the Iſle of Rhodes, is ſituate on the Sea-ſide, at the foot of an Hill that grows inſenſibly ſteep, and in an agreeable Plain in the Northern part of this Iſland. It is invironed with ſeveral little Hills full of Springs, and cover'd with Orange, Pomegranate, and other Trees of that nature. When it was beſieged by Mahomet IId. in 1480, it was ſurrounded with a double Wall, and fortified with ſeveral great Towers. But to the South part, and on that Side where the Jews dwelt, in the lower Town, the Towers were at greater diſtance one from another; and 'tis that which rendred the Place very much weaker. That quarter thereof where the Knights lived was ſtronger; for beſides that the Sea ſurrounded it to the North and Eaſt, it was fortified with Baſtions and Towers; the Port was towards the Eaſt, and a little to the North. It's formed of two Moles, which coming near one another in a Demi-circle, leave no ſpace between them, but for one Ship to paſs. The Entrance of it is flanked with two great Towers, built upon two Rocks, and upon theſe two Rocks was formerly placed the Famous Brazen Coloſſus of the Sun: It had one Foot fixed upon the Top of one of the Rocks, and the other upon the other Rock, inſomuch that Ships with Maſts erect might paſs between the Legs of it. There are two ſmall Gulfs adjoining to the Port, to the North and South. The Gulf which faces to the North is ſhut up with a Mole, which enters above three hundred Paces into the Sea, and at the end of that Mole is a Fort, which is called St. Nicholas Tower. The Grand Maſter, Zacoſta, cauſed this Tower to be built, which was called by that Name, becauſe there had been a Church called St. Nicholas in the place where it was built. Mahomet IId. looked upon the Iſle of Rhodes as a Place that might facilitate the Conqueſts of Egypt and Syria; and laid a Deſign of beſieging this City in the year 1479. The Ottoman Fleet commanded by the Baſha Paleologus, arrived at Rhodes the 23d. of May, 1480. It conſiſted of an hundred and ſixty Ships, and carried at leaſt an hundred thouſand fighting Men. The Turks coming a-ſhore lodged themſelves forthwith upon the Mount of St. Etienne, and in the neighbouring Plains. Scarce were they encamped, when a Troop of their Forlorn-hope came to Skirmiſh as far as the Gates of the City; but they were cut to pieces by the Viſcount du Monteil, eldeſt Brother to the Grand Maſter d'Aubuſſon. Demetrius, who led them, had the Honour to die there with his Arms in his hands, too much for a Runagade and a Traitor. Theſe firſt Attempts having not ſucceeded well for the Infidels, the German Engineer, named George Frapam, was of opinion that the Tower of St. Nicholas ſhould be battered firſt. Next morning that Engineer preſented himſelf before the Ditch of the Town, over-againſt the Grand Maſter's Palace, and deſired entrance, which was granted him. He pretended he would take the beſieged's part, as being willing to preferr the Intereſt of his Salvation before that of his Fortune. The Grand Maſter imagined he might make good uſe of this Engineer; but yet that he ought not to be truſted; and therefore order'd that he ſhould be obſerv'd as a Spy, and be always followed by perſons who ſhould conſtantly keep him in view. In the mean time the Baſha Paleologus cauſed his greateſt Cannon to be brought thither, where he raiſed the firſt Battery. St. Nicholas Tower was ſhattered and much ruined in divers places. So that Terror having ſeized upon all the Inhabitants, their Spirits were revived by the Exhortations of Anthony Fradin, a Franciſcan, who did almoſt the ſame at Rhodes as John Capiſtran had done at Belgrade. The Grand Maſter knowing of what importance that Place was for the preſervation of the Town, laboured all that night to put it into a poſture of Defence, and put himſelf, together with his Brother, the Viſcount du Monteil, into the Tower. The next day the Turks hoiſed Anchor from before Mount St. Etienne, and drew near unto St. Nicholas Tower with the ſound of Tabrets and Trumpets. Theſe Barbarians leapt a-ſhore, and ran to the Attack with a furious Tranſport. On the beſieged's part, the artificial Fires, Vollies of great Shot, Showers of ſmall Shot, Arrows and Stones, had a terrible Effect. Beſides the Fire-ſhips had fired divers of the Turkiſh Gallies, and the Artillery of the Town very much annoyed thoſe who defended themſelves from the Fire-ſhips. So that the Enemy who before gloried that they would out-brave Death, fled and re-entred their Gallies with Precipitation. The Baſha having had ſo bad Succeſs on that Side, brought eight great Pieces of Canon before the Walls of the Jews, near unto the Poſt of Italy, where the Cannon and Mortars of the Turks made ſo horrible an havock, that the Spaniards and Italians had already caballed to excite the Grand Maſter to ſurrender the Town; but their Propoſals had no other Effect, than to diſcover their Faint-heartedneſs, for which they immediately repented, and afterwards did Wonders. The Baſha who pretended to reduce the Place by his great Cannon, finding the beſieged ſpeak nothing of a Capitulation, and being unwilling to hazard the ſtorming of it, had recourſe to Treaſon, and ſent for two Runagades who had been in the Turkiſh Camp from the beginning of the Siege, and had abjured the Chriſtian Religion, and promiſed them a great Reward if they could kill the Grand Maſter by Sword or Poiſon. The Runagades engaged to do the Work, and returned into Rhodes, pretending they had fallen into the hands of the Barbarians, at the ſecond Sallie. They were received there as perſons who had eſcaped from Captivity; but their Treaſon having been diſcovered, they were publickly Executed. Then the Baſha had no other hopes of carrying it but by Force, ſince he was not able to prevail by Treachery. He turned all his Efforts againſt St. Nicholas Tower, which he had abandoned, and made a furious Attack, which was vigorouſly ſuſtained by the Grand Maſter. The Bridge was cut to pieces by the Batteries on the Tower, which alſo ſunk four Gallies, with divers Ships of War. This hindred not the Infidels to continue their Attack, where the moſt remarkable of their Commanders were left upon the Place, and amongſt others Ibrahim, Mahomet's Son-in-law. The Death of this Prince allayed the Fury of the Barbarians. They ran away, maugre the Reſolution of the Baſha, who exhorted them to revenge the Death of the Son-in-law of the Grand Seignior. And ſo ſhameful a Retreat caſt the General Paleologus into a deep Sorrow, and obliged him to think no longer of attempting any thing againſt St Nicholas Tower, which appeared to him impregnable. He formed a Deſign of reducing the City, by dividing the beſieged, and attacking of it in divers Places at once. In the mean time the German Engineer was known to be a Traytor; and after having confeſs'd his Crime, he was publickly hanged. The Baſha was ſenſibly afflicted for the Death of this Traytor, upon whom he depended much. And after having ſent an Embaſſador to Rhodes, who made fruitleſs Threats and Promiſes, he commanded all the Engines to be put on work, and to batter the Town night and day. They in a little time ſpent three thouſand five hundred Shot, but that frighted not the Rhodians, who prepared to ſuſtain the Aſſault.

Finally, on the 27th of July, the Ottoman Army aſſaulted the Town on all Sides, and preſently gained the Jews Quarter, which the Knights regained after an Engagement of two hours. The Turks returned to the Charge, and had Orders from the Baſha, to ſingle out the Grand Maſter from among the reſt, and not to ſpare him. Freſh Men like furious Beaſts fell upon the Chriſtians, and the moſt audacious advanced up towards the Grand Maſter, who received five Wounds all at a time; nevertheleſs they were conſtrained to fly, and the other Turks who had met a vigorous reſiſtance every-where, quitted their Attacks when they ſaw the Walls of the Jews abandoned. At the ſame time they went out at the Breaches in great numbers, and the Rhodians purſued the Ottoman Army as far as their Camp. The Baſha Paleologus endeavour'd to rally his Troops in vain, and was himſelf forced to get to the Sea-ſhore. The victorious Knights returned into the Town with the Grand-Seignior's Standard, which they had brought away from before the Tent of the Baſha. Whereupon Paleologus ſeeing that neither open Force, nor ſecret Treachery could prevail, immediately gave Orders to imbark; but while this was a-doing, and that the Turks took their Warlike Engines and all their Baggage on board, there appeared two great Ships, which Ferdinand, King of Naples, had ſent to the relief of the Knights of Rhodes. The Baſha, Paleologus, cauſed them to be battered from the Shore with the Artillery which he had not yet imbarked, being not able to attack them by his Ships, which had the Wind contrary, one of theſe Ships entred happily into the Port, and the other ſtayed in the Channel, becauſe of the Shot ſhe had received, and found her ſelf next day very near the Infidels Fleet. The Baſha ſent twenty Gallies to ſeize upon her, and commanded the General of the Gallies to go thither himſelf; but after a bloody Engagement of three hours, the Turks were obliged to withdraw; and the Death of the General of the Gallies made them abandon the Ship. The Ottoman Fleet put out to Sea on the 19th of Auguſt, and ſailed towards Port Fiſco, where after they had debarked their Land-army, they continued their Courſe towards Conſtantinople. Thus Rhodes continued in the Power of the Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem; but forty two years after, Solyman IId. made himſelf Maſter thereof, in 1522, by the Treachery of Amurath, a Portugueſe, and Chancellor of the Order. Bellonius ſpeaking of Rhodes ſaith, That it's ſeated in a Plain, fenced with double Walls, thirteen Towers and five Baſtions of great ſtrength and beauty. And adds, That the Turks have to this day ſo great a Veneration for the Valour of thoſe Knights of St. John of Jeruſalem, that they preſerve their Houſes as they left them, with all the Arms, Paintings, Statues and Inſcriptions; and have put the Walls of the City in the ſame ſtate they were in before the Siege. From hence theſe Knights paſſed to Sicily, and in 1530 obtained from Charles the Vth. the Iſle of Malta. Two ſmall Bays join to that Harbour on the North and South ſides. The former is locked up by a Mole, which enters into the Sea above 300 paces, bearing a Fort called the Tower of St. Nicholas, built by the Order in 1464. Boſio. P. Bouhours.

RHODIGINUS (Cœlius) or Lodovicus Cœlius Richerius. Rhodiginus was famous for his Learning towards the end of the XVth. Century, and the beginning of the XVIth. He was a Native of Rovigo, the capital City of Policina, in the State of Venice, where he was born in 1450. He is better known by the Name of Rhodiginus, which is that of his Country, than by Richeri, that of his Family. Lewis XIIth. drew him by his Liberality to Milan, where he taught Greek and Latin. The Publick is obliged to him for divers Works; but principally for the thirty Books De Antiquis Lectionibus. There are ſome other Tracts attributed to him. After his departure from Milan, he taught at Padua, where he died a little while after, in 1520, aged 70 years. Julius Scaliger, who was his Scholar, gives a great Character of him, and look'd upon him as the Varro of his time. *Tomaſini. RHODOMAN (Lawrence) Born at Saſſowerf, a Village belonging to the Counts of Stolberg, in upper Saxony; he was a great Grecian, as appears by his Edition of Diodorus Siculus. He likewiſe publiſh'd Quintus Calaber in Greek and Latin. Scaligerana Poſteriora, &c.

RHODOPE, a Mountain in Thrace, which the Italians call Monte Argentaro, and the Greeks Baſiliſſa, as if they ſaid, The Queen of Mountains. It's Mines have acquired it this Name, but they are not to be found there now.

RHODOPE, a Noted Wench, Contemporary with Æſop, and a Slave in the ſame Houſe with him. Her Maſter Xanthus the Samian carry'd her into Egypt, where Charaxus a Merchant of Mitylene, Sappho's Brother, fell in Love with her, and bought her at a conſiderable Price; by this means ſhe got her Freedom, upon which ſhe ſettled at Naucratis, and being very handſome, and the Town full of Rich and Licentious People, ſhe got a great Eſtate by her Scandalous Profeſſion; but the Story of her being wealthy enough to build one of the Pyramids of Egypt, is a meer Fable, and rejected by Herodotus as ſuch. *Herod. RHONE, a River of France, which hath its riſe in Mount Saint Gothard, near unto the Fountain of the Rhine. It proceeds from two Fountains, and is increaſed with the Waters of ſome Brooks; runs through the Lake of Geneva; about five Leagues from that City loſeth it ſelf in the Earth, and ſome time after appears again, ſeparating France from Savoy, and Dauphiny from Breſſe. It aſterwards paſſeth on to Lyons, where it receiveth into it the Soan, to Vienne, Condrieu, S. Vallier, Tournon, and to Valence, and receives into it the Iſere, a League above that City. After that, it deſcends to S. Eſprit, Avignon, and between that City and Taraſcon and Beaucaire the Durance runs into it. At Arles it is divided into two Branches, which are again ſubdivided. They ordinarily attribute five Mouths to it, by which this ſame River, which is the moſt rapid in the Kingdom, diſchargeth it ſelf into the Mediterranean, called Gras du Midi, Gras de Paulet, Gras d'Enfer, Grand Gras, and Gras de Paſſon; others alſo add, Gras Neuf. It ſhould ſeem that this word Gras ſhould be derived from the Latin Gradus, remarked in the Itinerary of Antoninus, ſpeaking of the Entrance of the Rhone into the Sea. Latin Authors call it Rhodanus. Papier Maſſon, Bouche.

RHUA (Peter) Born at Numantia in Spain; he was a Learned Antiquary, and examin'd the Works of Antonio Guevara, and mark'd the places in which this Author had fail'd in Hiſtory and Chronology. He likewiſe wrote a Treatiſe De Lege Julia, Poppæa, Cornelia, Falcidia, &c. De Medicina & Empyrica. Biblioth. Hiſpan.

RIARIO (Peter) a Cardinal, was Native of Savonna, in the State of Genoa, his Uncle who became Pope, by the Name of Sixtus IVth. made him Cardinal in 1471, named him Patriarch of Conſtantinople, and conferred upon him at divers times the Archbiſhopricks of Sevil and Florence, and divers other Benefices very conſiderable. This Elevation made Riario forget the meanneſs of his Birth, and the Humility of a Monk, ſo that he ſuffer'd himſelf to be tranſported with the Vanities of the Age ſo much, that there was never any thing ſeen more magnificent and pompous than his Train. He equalled that of Kings, and his Expences in Entertainments were very extraordinary. To be ſhort, he was Cardinal-Nephew, and it was he who introduced that which the Italians call the Nepotiſm. Sixtus IVth. who paſſionately loved him, named him in 1473 to be Legate of Umbria, and afterwards of all Italy. His Entrance into the principal Cities was moſt magnificent; and they were well pleaſed to flatter the Vanity of the young Man, in order to manage the Pope. But Cardinal Riario enjoyed not theſe Grandeurs long; but died at Rome the third of January in 1474, and the 29th. of his age, with great ſigns of Piety and Chriſtian Behaviour. Fulgoſus. Onuphrius.

RIARIO, or Galeotto, (Raphael) a Cardinal, born the third of May, 1451, at Savonna, being Son to Violentina Riario, Siſter to Cardinal Peter Riario. Pope Sixtus IVth. ſubſtituted him in the Place of his Belov'd Nephew, made him take his Name, and gave him a Cardinal's Cap in 1477, although Galeotto was but ſeventeen years of age. He conferred alſo upon him at divers times the Biſhopricks of Imola, Lantriguer, Oſma and Cuenſa; and 'tis ſaid alſo, that he had the Archbiſhopricks of Coſenza, Salerno and Trente, with the Abbeys of Mount-Caſſin and Cace. Sixtus IVth. pretended then to have Cauſe to complain of Laurence de Medicis, he gave ear too eaſily to Francis Pazzi, who had conſpired his ruine, and that of Julian de Medicis, his Brother. Cardinal Riario, who ſtudied at Piſa, had Orders to be at Florence, to animate the Conſpirators by his preſence; but that Deſign not having the Succeſs expected, Cardinal Riario was like to have been torn to pieces by the Mobile; this happened in 1478. He remain'd extreme pale after it all his Life. One of his Uncles, called Jerom Riario, Cardinal Peter's eldeſt Brother, had induced the Pope to enter into this Conſpiracy. Sixtus, who loved him with an immoderate Paſſion, which cauſed all the Misfortunes of his Pontificate, had given him the principalities of Forli and Imola, and had married him to Catharine, the natural Daughter of Galeazzo Sforza, Duke of Milan. His Fortune changed not during the Pontificate of Innocent VIIIth. but it was not ſo ſtable under that of Alexander VIth. Cardinal Galeotto Riario had contributed much to the Election of this Pope, and believed that that Service would fix the good Fortune of his Couſins the Sons of Jerom already deceaſed. But he was miſtaken, for Alexander VIth. deprived them of the Principalities of Forli and Imola, and alſo impriſoned the Princeſs Catharine their Mother. The Cardinal was forced to ſeek for a Sanctuary in France. He came afterwards to the Election of Pius IIId. and Julius IId. and Leo Xth. Under this Pontificate he became an Accomplice in the Deſign which Cardinal Petrucci had laid to take off the Pope. He was ſecured in the Caſtle of St. Angelo, confeſſed his Crime, and Leo Xth. generouſly pardoned him. Some time after Riario retired into Naples, and there died on the ſeventh of July, 1521. Onuphrius. Machiavel. Hiſt. de Fior. Lib. 8th, &c.

RIBADENEIRA (Peter) a Jeſuit, was Native of Toledo in Spain. Ignatius Loyola received him among the number of his Diſciples in 1540, before his Society was confirmed by the Pope. He was imployed in France and the Low-Countries, and had the Charge of Provincial in Tuſcany and Sicily. And finally he was ſent in 1574 into Spain, where he died at Madrid, the firſt of October, in 1611, Aged 84, of which he had ſpent 71 in his Society, Ribadeneira writ the Life of Ignatius, Francis Borgia, &c. De Schiſmate Anglicano, De Scriptoribus Societatis Jeſu, &c. Le Mire. Mariana, &c.

RIBERA (Francis) a Jeſuit, born at Villecaſtin, in the Territory of Segovia in Spain; he Studied at Salamanca, was a great Linguiſt, and one of the beſt Divines of his time. He was a Perſon of great Penetration and Judgment, and had a very happy Memory. His Works are, Commentaria in 12. Prophetas Minores. Comment. Hiſtorici Selecti in eoſdem XII Prophetas. In Epiſt. ad Hebræos. In Apocalypſin. In Evangelium ſecundum Johannem. De Templo & iis quæ ad Templum pertinent. He died at Salamanca, in 1591. *Alegamb. De Script. Soc. Je. Miræus. RIBLERA, or Ribiezra, the principal Town in St. Jago, one of the Iſlands of Cape-verde, taken by Sir Francis Drake in 1585, and Sir Anthony Shirley in 1596. It is a Colony of Portugueſe, ſituate on a fine River and a beautiful Haven, by Struys this is called Porto-de-Praye, who ſaith it will contain one hundred Ships. The Town he calls St. Jago too, and ſaith it is two Leagues from the Port. This is a Biſhop's-See.

RICCI (Michael Angelo) was Born at Rome in 1619, and made Cardinal by Pope Innocent XI. in 1681. He had a great Genius for Mathematicks, in which he made a conſiderable Progreſs, as appears by his Tract de Maximis & Minimis, twice or thrice Re-printed. He likewiſe wrote two Learned Diſſertations, one of which is inſerted among the Works of Cardinal Brancaccio, and the other in an Epiſtle of Carlo Dati ad Philalethos. Afterwards he apply'd himſelf with great Inclination and Induſtry to the Study of Divinity. Gaſſendus, Cardinal Pallavicino, and other Great Men ſpeak much to his advantage. He had gone through many great Imployments before he was made Cardinal, particularly he was Secretary of the Congregation of Indulgences and Relicks, and Conſultor of the Holy Office; which Functions he Executed in 1678. when he gave his approbation of the Biſhop of Condom's Book Intituled, An Expoſition of the Doctrine of the Catholick Church. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

RICCIARDI (Antony) a Rhetorician and famous Philoſopher, was born at Breſſe, in the State of Venice, he taught Rhetorick and Philoſophy at Aſola, a City and principal Fortreſs of Breſſan, where he acquired great Reputation. He writ two great Volumes entitled Commentaria Symbolica, wherein he has explained all that referrs to the myſtical ſence of things, with A Treatiſe of Angels, another Of the Knowledge of Man, and another Of the Oriflame, which was an ancient Standard of France, loſt in a Battle againſt the Flemmings. He compoſed alſo The Hiſtory of Aſola, and A Book of the Excellency and Antiquity of Languages, wherein he pretends to ſhew that the Cimbrick Language (now that of the People of Jutland in Denmark) is ancienter than the Hebrew. He died in 1610. Ghilin.

RICCIAVELLI (Daniel) known by the Name of Volattera, the Place of his Nativity, was an Italian Painter, who lived in the XVIth Century. He firſt learn'd to deſign under Sodoma, afterwards he improved much under Baltazar de Sienna, otherwiſe called Peruſi. He ſo applied himſelf to follow the Inſtructions and Models of that excellent Maſter; that although he did not appear at firſt to have a natural Genius for Painting, yet he came to do Land-skip and Hiſtory, that were not inferior to the Works of the beſt in Rome: Thoſe that firſt advanced his Reputation, were the Hiſtories of St. Helena, the finding of the Croſs, and the Proceſſion wherein the Emperor Heraclius carried that Holy Croſs into the City of Jeruſalem. This ſubject took up the Roof of the Chappel de la Trinite du Mont at Rome, which belongs to the Family of the Urſins. He made alſo the Picture of an Altar of this Chappel, which is a deſcent from the Croſs, where is repreſented, the wonderful manner of the vaniſhing of the Holy Virgin, the grief of the Maries, and the different poſtures of thoſe that took down our Saviour's Body, which appears pale, and extended between their Arms: He made alſo a Grot in the Belvedere, in which his Skill appears as great as his Induſtry; but if theſe Works ſet forth his excellency in the Art of Painting, we have a ſignal teſtimony of his Underſtanding in caſting of emboſs'd Figures, by the Braſs Horſe in the Royal Piazza at Paris; it was deſign'd by him for the Statue of Henry II. on Horſe-back, which Catharine de Medicis, his Widow, was deſirous to erect for him, and which remain'd unfiniſhed, for that Ricciavelli having only finiſhed the Statue of the Horſe, died in the 57th year of his Age, in 1566, before he had begun that of the King. He was a Solitary and Melancholy Man. Vaſari. Felibien.

RICCIUS (Paul) a Phyſician of Germany, Living in the beginning of the XVIth Century. He was born of Jewiſh Parents, but turn'd Chriſtian; Profeſs'd in his Faculty at Pavia, and was afterwards Phyſician to the Emperor Maximilian I. Eraſmus, who was his Friend and Acquaintance, gives him a good Character. His Works are, De ſexcentis & tredecem Moſaicæ Sanctionis ſeu Pentateuchi dictis. Philoſophia Prophetica & Thalmudiſtica. Iſagoge in Cabbaliſtarum Doctrinam, &c. Eraſm. Lib. 1. *Epiſt. ad Ricard. RICH (Richard) Son to an opulent Mercer in London, having been an induſtrious Student of the Laws in the Middle-Temple, was in 21 H. VIII. made choice of for the Autumn Reader in that Honourable Society; ſhortly after which, by degrees, having ſundry eminent Imployments, he arriv'd to great Wealth and Honour, being made Attorney General in Wales and the Marches thereof for Life; afterwards the King's Sollicitor General, and Chancellor of the Court of Augmentation, erected in that Reign. In 1 Edward VI. he was advanced to the Degree of Baron of this Realm, by the Title of Lord Rich, and conſtituted Lord Chancellor of England; but foreſeeing troubleſome times he reſign'd that Office in the 5 Eliz. He died 9 Elizabeth, and was ſucceeded in his Honour by his Son Robert, this by another Robert his Son, who by Penelope his Wife, Daughter of Walter Earl of Eſſex, had Robert Henry, afterwards created Earl of Holland, and Charles Robert ſucceeded him in his Honours, and was Admiral for the Long Parliament. He left two Sons, both which dying without Iſſue, the Dignity of Earl of Warwick, and thoſe other Titles which they enjoy'd, are thereupon devolv'd to his Kinſman, the now Earl of Holland, deſcended from Henry ſecond Son to Robert the firſt Earl of Warwick; which Henry being taken Priſoner by the Parliament Forces, after the miſcarriage of his Deſign upon Kingſton upon Thames in 1648, was beheaded before the Gates of Weſtminſter-Hall upon the ninth of March the ſame year. Dugdale.

RICHARD I. King of England, for his great Courage ſurnamed Cœur de Lion, ſucceeded his Father King Henry II. in 1189; whoſe third Son he was, but the eldeſt when he died. After he was Crowned, he took upon him the Croſs, and went to the Holy-Land with Philip King of France, ſurnamed Auguſtus. In his way, at Acon in Syria he ſo behaved himſelf, that he became an object of Envy to the other Chriſtian Princes. Joppa in Palæſtine was reſcued by him; and ſo might Jeruſalem have been, had not the Duke of Burgundy forſaken him. In ſhort, of all the Chriſtian Princes then engaged in the Holy War, none was ſo formidable to the Saracens and Turks as King Richard. Where-ever he went Terror was his fore-runner; and it grew common amongſt thoſe Eaſtern People to terrifie their Children when they did any thing amiſs, with the apprehenſion of King Richard's coming. At his return Anno 1192, being driven by a ſtorm upon the Coaſt of Dalmatia, he reſolved to make the reſt of his way home, as far as he could by Land; which he did Incognito, 'till he was at laſt diſcover'd paſſing through Auſtria, and ſent to the Emperor Henry VI. who kept him two years his Priſoner, till he had paid 100000 Marks for his Ranſom. Being arriv'd in England, he freely forgave his Brother John, who had been falſe to him in his abſence. A War breaking out between England and France, King Richard went thither, and got a ſignal Victory over the French at Giſors in Normandy. Afterwards he went to beſiege the Caſtle of Chalus in Limoſin, from whence he happened to be ſhot with a fatal Arrow, which gave him his mortal wound. Some ſay that he undertook this Siege upon a Report, that the Lord of this Caſtle had found there under Ground, the Statues of an Emperor with his Wife and Children ſitting at Table, all of maſſy pure Gold; and that Richard reſolv'd to have thoſe Statues againſt the Will of the owner, went to Beſiege him in his Caſtle. He died of his Wound, April 6. 1199, and ordered his Body to be thus diſpoſed of; his Bowels to be buried at Charrona amongſt his Rebellious Poictovins, as thoſe who deſerved only his worſt parts; his Heart at Rouen, for her conſtant Loyalty; and his Corps at Fontevraut, at his Father's Feet, as a ſubmiſſion for his former undutifulneſs. He was contracted to Alice, Daughter to Lewis the VIIth. King of France; but he Married Berengaria, Daughter of Sancho VI. King of Navarre; leaving no Iſſue, the Crown was ſeiz'd by his Brother John.

RICHARD II. King of England, ſucceeded to his Grandfather King Edward III. Anno 1377. He was Son to the Famous Edward the Black Prince, Eldeſt Son to the ſaid King Edward, who died before his Father. His Mother was Joan, Daughter to Edmund Earl of Kent, the youngeſt Son of King Edward I. From Bourdeaux, his birth-place, where his Father kept his Reſidence as Duke of Aquitain, he was called Richard of Bourdeaux. And being but eleven years old when he came to the Crown, the Kingdom was governed, during his Minority, by his two Uncles, the Dukes of Lancaſter and Gloceſter; beſides which, he had another Uncle living, Edmund Duke of York, all three younger Brothers of Edward the Black Prince, his Father. He had Wars firſt with France, and next with Scotland, with pretty good ſucceſs, in the laſt eſpecially. His Reign was inwardly diſturb'd by the famous Rebellion of the two Engliſh Mazaniello's, Wat Tyler and John Slater, otherwiſe Jack-Straw, tho' it ended in their deſtruction. Next he found himſelf diſturb'd with a Rebellion of the Barons, who forc'd him at laſt to ſacrifice his miſleading Favourites to their Revenge. But that which proved moſt fatal to him, was, in the firſt place, the Duke of Gloceſter's Death, the Peoples Darling, who was ſecretly ſmothered, without being brought to his Trial. Then his unjuſt ſeizure of the Duke of Lancaſter's Goods upon his deceaſe, and his purpoſe to baniſh his Son for ever: Upon which Provocations King Richard being gone over to Ireland to pacifie a Diſturbance there, Henry, the young Duke of Lancaſter landed in England with ſome Forces; which preſently increaſed to a great number, by the diſcontented Party. The Duke of York, whom King Richard had left behind him to govern the Kingdom in his abſence, could gain but little Aſſiſtance to oppoſe the Duke of Lancaſter. Nor did the King, who returned upon this from Ireland, find any effectual Aſſiſtance from his Subjects, the Nation being ſo much exaſperated, that they loſt the ſence of their Allegiance in their diſſatisfaction. In ſhort, his Affairs had then ſo diſmal a proſpect, that he offered to reſign his Crown, provided himſelf and eight more whom he ſhould name might have an aſſurance of a private quiet Life, with an honourable Allowance. Upon promiſe whereof he put himſelf into the Duke of Lancaſter's hands, who conducted him from Flint-Caſtle near Cheſter, to London, where he was lodged in the Tower. Then was ſummoned a Parliament to be held at Weſtminſter, in which King Richard was charged by the Rebels with the breach of his Coronation Oath, in 32 Articles; the reſult whereof was his ſolemn Reſignation of the Crown to his Couſin Henry Duke of Lancaſter, which was accepted by the Parliament; upon which Duke Henry ſeiz'd the Crown, and this was the beginning of the Uſurpation of the Houſe of Lancaſter; in which Line it continu'd for three Deſcents, 'till the Houſe of York was reſtor'd in King Edward IV. Upon this Reſignation King Richard was remov'd to Pomfret-Caſtle in Yorkſhire, where he was ſoon after murthered. He had two Wives, Ann Daughter of the Emperor Charles IV. and Iſabel Daughter to Charles VI. King of France. The firſt he loved ſo extravagantly, that he curſed the place where ſhe died, which was Shene in Surry. Speed. Truſſel.

RICHARD III. formerly Duke of Glouceſter, was the youngeſt Brother of King Edward IV. and the laſt King of England of the Line of York. He was an Uſurper, for he got the Crown from Edward V. his Nephew, and ſet it upon his own Head. 'Tis ſaid of him, That he was born with all his Teeth, and Hair on his Shoulders. He was Crook-back'd, or at leaſt Round-ſhoulder'd, which got him the name of Richard the Crook-back. This wicked Prince, to come to the Crown, and ſecure it when it was in his poſſeſſion, ſpared none that ſtood in his way. Having firſt imbrued his Hands with the Blood of Henry VI. and Prince Edward his Son, he next procured the death of the Duke of Clarence his own Brother, by an Impeachment of High-Treaſon in the Reign of Edward IV. This King Edward dying left two Sons in their Nonage, Edward V. his next Succeſſor, and Richard his Brother. Before Eaward could be Crowned, Richard, his Uncle, ſeated himſelf on the Throne by the induſtrious Aſſiſtance of the Duke of Buckingham. This done, he cauſed King Edward and his Brother, then in the Tower, to be ſtifled in their Beds. Whether the horrour of the Murther, or ſome other Reſentments wrought upon the Mind of the Duke of Buckingham, the great

Inſtrument of all his Villainies, 'tis plain, that from this time he projected his Ruine, tho' he had been the chief Inſtrument of his Elevation. There was then at the Court of the Duke of Bretaigne in France, Henry Earl of Richmond, the next Heir to the Houſe of Lancaſter, whoſe advancement to the Crown, Buckingham with ſome others of the Conſpiracy reſolved upon, with this ſage Proviſo, That Henry ſhould conſent to marry the Lady Elizabeth, eldeſt Daughter to King Edward IV. for the uniting of the two Houſes of York and Lancaſter; but before the Plot took effect, the Duke being betray'd by an old Servant of his, loſt his Head, without any form of Trial. Henry, in the mean time, was preparing to come over, and landed ſoon after with 200 Men only, at Milford-Haven. At laſt, with a Body of 5000 Men, or, as Speed ſays, 4000, he encounter'd King Richard at Boſworth in Leiceſterſhire, in 1485. The Fight was ſharp and doubtful a long while, but at laſt Henry got the day, and by this ſingle Victory obtain'd the Crown. Richard was kill'd in the Fight, after having given extraordinary Proof of Reſolution and Bravery. As for his Reign, this may be ſaid of it, That he procured many good Laws for the eaſe of the People, and omitted nothing that might tend to the Honour of the Engliſh Nation. His Wife was Anne the Daughter of Richard Nevil Earl of Warwick and Salisbury, commonly call'd the make King, who was firſt married to Edward Prince of Wales, Son to King Henry VI. and after his death to this Uſurper, in the year 1472. He had Iſſue by her, Edward created Prince of Wales, but he died before his Father. Speed and Truſſell.

RICHARD Duke of Cornwall, Son of John King of England: This Prince, in 1240, carry'd ſome Engliſh Troops into Syria againſt the Saracens, but had no Succeſs in the Expedition. In 1257 he was choſen King of the Romans, and crown'd at Aix le Chapelle the 17th. of May, being Aſcenſion-Day. Alphonſus X. King of Caſtile, was choſen by another part of the Electors: Notwithſtanding which oppoſition, Richard paſs'd into Germany to ſupport his Claim; but wanting both Men and Money, he was forced to return without carrying his Point, and died ſoon after. Du Cheſne Hiſt. Angl. Speed.

RICHARD Armachanus, or of Armagh, ſo called becauſe he was the Archbiſhop of that City: He was born in Ireland, and bred at Oxford, where he commenced Doctor in Divinity, and was afterwards Vice-Chancellor of that Univerſity. Afterwards his Merit preferr'd him to the Archdeaconry of Lichfield, and from thence to the Biſhoprick of Armagh. In his time the Fryars Mendicants began their Encroachments upon the Hierarchy. Theſe Liberties were reſented by the Univerſity of Oxford, whoſe Opinion was heartily eſpous'd by Richard their Vice-Chancellor. This honeſt Zeal gave him ſome diſturbance, and rais'd the Pens of the Monks upon him: However, Richard purſu'd his Point; and after he was made Archbiſhop and Primate of Ireland, engag'd in a further Defence of the Eccleſiaſtical Government; and here he ſtrongly undertook the Cauſe of the Pariſh Prieſts, who, under the Biſhops, are the only lawful Paſtours and Guides of Souls; to which purpoſe he wrote a Treatiſe, entituled, Defenſio Curatorum adverſus Mendicantes. He was violently attack'd by the ſcribbling of the Fryars, who not being contented with this Paper-War, made a further Puſh at him; for having prepoſſeſs'd Pope Innocent VI. againſt the Archbiſhop, they prevailed with him to cite him to Avignon. He appeared at the Place, and defended himſelf before four Cardinals deputed to hear the Cauſe; but plainly perceiving they had no inclination to do him Juſtice, he ſet forward again for Ireland, and died upon the Way, in 1359. Beſide the Book above-mention'd, he wrote Sermons upon the Croſs, and a Volume againſt the Armenians. Walſingham in Edward III. Ware de Script. Hybern. Harpsfield in Hiſt. Angl. Sæc. xiv.

S. RICHARD, a Pariſian, martyr'd by the Jews. He was a young Man, twelve years of age, a good Tradeſman's Son, whom the Jews ſeiz'd upon at the Feaſt of Eaſter, 1180, in order to put him to death, in hatred to Chriſt and his Religion; having lock'd him up in a Cellar, they whipt him almoſt to death, and afterwards lifted him up upon a Croſs, where they made him ſuffer all the torments which their Rage and Cruelty could inſpire them with. This barbarous Impiety continued not unpuniſhed; for ſoon after the Authors thereof were diſcovered, who were brought to condign puniſhment, and King Philip ſirnamed the Auguſt baniſh'd all the Jews out of his Kingdom by an Edict which hath ever ſince been in force. His Body was interred at firſt in a Church-yard called Petits Champs, whence it was ſince transferr'd into the Church of Innocence, where it continu'd till the Engliſh took Paris, in the Reign of Charles VI. King of France, and carried this Relique into their Country. Dupleix.

RICHARD, ſirnamed the Juſticiar, Duke of Burgundy, and Count of Autun, was the Son of Beuves or Boyon, and Brother of Boſon, who gave him thoſe Lands wherein he was ſupported by Hugh the Abbot. He took the City of Sens for King Charles ſirnamed the Simple, in 897. Afterwards, towards 898, he beat the Normans; and in 911 he defeated them again, with Robert, Brother to King Eudes. He died the firſt of September, in 921. He had by Alix or Adelaide, his Wife, the Daughter of Conrad II. called the Young, Count of Paris, Raoul, who was crowned King of France, Boſon Count of the Higher Burgundy, Hugh ſirnamed the Black Prince of Burgundy, and Hermengarda married to Gilbert, who was Count of Autun. Santa Marthe. Mezeray.

RICHARD I. of that Name, Duke of Normandy, ſirnamed the Old, was the Son of William I. He made himſelf famous by his Valour and Piety, having founded divers Monaſteries. Some ſay he died in 996, others in 998, and others again in 1002. He married Emma the Daughter of Hugh the Great, Count of Paris, but he had no Children by her. Richard entertained Gounot, whom he married after the death of his firſt Wife, and had by her Richard, Robert the Archbiſhop of Roan, Mauger Count de Corbeil, Emma Queen of England, Hadiviga Wife of Geoffery Count of Bretany, Maud married to Eudes I. Count of Chartres; and another Daughter, and Geoffry, and William, his Natural Children. Richard II. ſirnamed Fearleſs, reigned after his Father till 1026; he firſt married Judith the Daughter of Conan, and Siſter of Geoffry Count of Bretany, and had by her Richard III. who was poiſon'd in 1028; Robert who was Duke of Normandy, William a Monk of Fecamp, Alix Wife of Renard Count of Burgundy, Leonora who was married to Baldwin IV. Earl of Flanders, and another that died young. The ſecond Wife of Richard II. was Pavia or Poppa, the Daughter of Sueno King of Denmark or Norway, who made him Father of William Count of Talon, and of Mauger Archbiſhop of Roan. Du Cheſne.

RICHELIEU, Lat. Richeleum, a City in the Province of Poictou built by the Cardinal of that Name, who was born here, in 1585, and for ſome time was Secretary of State to Lewis XIII. of France. He was the greateſt Politician of his Time; and amongſt other of his Actions, built, or at leaſt eebuilt this Place, to perpetuate the memory of his Name and Family, and procured it to be honoured with the Title of a Dukedom. It ſtands four miles from Loudon to the Eaſt, five from Mirebeau, and one from Tours to the North-weſt, now in a flouriſhing ſtate. See Pleſſis.

RICHER (Edmond) born at Langres in France, was Doctor in Divinity and Syndick of the Univerſity of Paris, and very remarkable for his Learning and Skill in Antiquity: He wrote a Book in the beginning of the Seventeenth Century, of Eccleſiaſtical and Civil Power, in which there were ſome Propoſitions that were cenſured as erroneous; for which reaſon the Tract was condemn'd by a Synod of the Province of Sens, and another at Aix in 1612. Several Great Men, as Cardinal Perron, M. du Valle, &c. replied to this Author, who was turn'd out of his Office of Syndick by the Order of the King and the Faculty. Notwithſtanding, this Richer was a Man of Honeſty and Learning, and in 1629 he came off his Opinion, as appears by a Writing of his preſented to Cardinal Richelieu. Spondan. A. C. 1612, 1629.

RICHMOND, a Market and Borough-Town of Gillingweſt Wapentake, in the North-riding of Yorkſhire, ſituate on the North-ſide of the River Swale, over which it has a Stone-Bridge, grac'd with handſom Houſes, and well frequented by Gentry. Alan Earl of Bretagne, and firſt Earl of Richmond, was the Founder of it upon the Norman Conqueſt, from whoſe Loins it paſt three ſeveral Families, and particularly to Henry Earl of Richmond, afterwards King of England, by the Name of King Henry VII. The next that had his Honour from hence was Henry Fitz-Roy, Lord Admiral, baſe Son of Henry VIII. who was created Duke of Richmond and Somerſet, but thoſe Titles were extinct with him. An. 1613, the Title of Earl, and afterwards of Duke of Richmond, was conferred by King James I. upon Lodovick Duke of Lennox, in whoſe Houſe it continued till the death of Charles Stuart, who died without Iſſue in 1672, being then Embaſſador at the Court of Denmark; but the Title was revived within leſs than three years after, by King Charles II. upon his Grace, Lennox, the preſent Duke of Richmond, the King's Natural Son by the Dutcheſs of Portſmouth. Richmondſhire lies on the North-weſt of Yorkſhire towards Lancaſhire, which bounds it on the Weſt. It is a mountainous and deſolate place, yet produceth Graſs in reaſonable quantity. It takes its Name from Richmond, which ſtands 32 miles from York to the North-weſt, and 20 from the Sea to the South-weſt. From London 175 miles.

RICHMOND, a Town in Surry, upon the Thames, between Kingſton and London, heretofore called Schene, but by Henry VII. nam'd Richmond, adorn'd with an ancient Palace or Royal Houſe belonging to the Kings of England, in which Edward III. died in 1377. Henry VII. rebuilt this Pile twice, it being burnt in his Reign, and afterwards he died here, April 22. 1509. Queen Elizabeth died here alſo March 24. 1602; and before her, Anne Daughter to the Emperor Charles V. and Wife to King Richard II. eſteem'd a very beautiful Lady. This Town ſuffered in the Civil Wars, but is ſtill fair, large, well built, and inhabited pleaſantly and healthfully, ſituate on the eaſie aſcent of a Hill in the Hundred of Kingſton.

RICOBON (Anthony) born in 1541 at Rovigo, a little Town in Italy, in the Dominions of the State of Venice: He ſtudied Humanity under Paulus Manutius, Carolus Sigonius, and Muretus. He made a conſiderable progreſs under theſe great Maſters, and at the age of twenty eight years publiſh'd Hiſtorical Commentaries, with fragments of old Hiſtorians, which he illuſtrated with learned Notes upon 'em. After the death of Robertellus, he was invited to Padua to ſupply his Place, and to be Rhetorick Profeſſor in that Univerſity. He held the Chair thirty years, and then died in 1599. Ricobon was a ſort of an Enemy to Joſeph Scaliger, being one of thoſe who was ſo hardy as to diſpute the Advantage and Nobleneſs of his Family, and furniſh'd Scioppius with Memoirs to write againſt that great Man; for this reaſon Scaliger treats Ricobon with great contempt. His Works are, Praxis Rhetorica; Commentarij in Ciceronis Libros de Inventione, &c. Paraphraſis in Rhetoricam Ariſtotelis; De Uſu Artis Rhetoricæ; Ariſtotelis Commentarius; Poetica Ariſtotelis Latinè Converſa; Ars Comica ex Ariſtotele; Commentarius de Hiſtoria Ariſtotelis Ethica cum Commentariis. Jac. Phil. Thomaſ. Thuan. Hiſt.

RICQUIUS (Juſtus) a learned Orator, Poet, Philoſopher and Lawyer; he was the Son of James Ricquius, and born at Gaunt in Flanders, May 6. 1587. He died in 1627, aged forty one years. His Treatiſe De Capitolio Romano, wherein he has made a curious Deſcription of the Columes, Statue's, Coloſſus's, Trophies, and all the ancient and modern Works of Sculpture and Painting that is rare, was printed at Gaunt in the year 1617. Mart. Hankius.

RICTIOVARUS was Præfect or Governor of the Gauls, under the Emperor Diocleſian; he made ſo great a ſlaughter of the Chriſtians at Treves, that the Waters of the Moſelle were died with their Blood, which run into it in great Streams. He perſecuted the Chriſtians with ſo much fury, that he ſent every where Officers of Juſtice to put cruelly to death all thoſe they could meet with. Vincent, l. 12. c. 136.

RICULFUS, Archbiſhop of Mayence, had a great ſhare in the favour of Charlemaign, who from his Chaplain raiſed him to that Dignity. It's believed that he was a Spaniard, and it is at leaſt certain that from that Country he brought into France the Canon Law, which he expounded with much Reputation: It was a Collection of Iſidorus Mercator. It is ſaid alſo, That he laboured to digeſt the Capitulars of Charlemaign, whereunto he added afterwards ſome fragments of the Decretal Epiſtles of ſome Popes, collected by Benet the Levite. Hincmar. Alcuin.

RIDLEY (Sir Thomas) Doctor of Civil Law, Son of Thomas, and Great-Grand-Son of Nicholas Ridley of Willimonſwyke in Northumberland, Eſq; was born in Ely, firſt educated at Eaton-School, and then removed to Kings-College in Cambridge. He was afterwards School-Maſter of Eaton, one of the Maſters of Chancery, Knighted, Chancellor to the Biſhop of Wincheſter, and Vicar-General to George Archbiſhop Canterbury. Sir Thomas Ridley was a Man of great Parts, and general Learning. He died in 1628. He wrote A View of the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Law. Athen. Oxon.

RIDLEY (Nicholas) Biſhop of London, was born of an ancient and conſiderable Family in the County of Northumberland, and bred in the Univerſity of Cambridge, where he took the Degree of Batchelor in Divinity. He was mightily beloved by King Edward VI. who firſt promoted him to the Biſhoprick of Rocheſter, and then of London. He wrote a Treatiſe De Cœna Dominica, and ſeveral other things againſt the Papiſts; and after Queen Mary's ſucceeſſion to the Crown, he was outed of his Biſhoprick, impriſon'd, and burnt at Oxford, where he ſuffered with great fortitude and compoſure of Mind. He was a Perſon of Learning, and great Judgment, and one of the beſt Divines of the Engliſh Reformation. Burnet's Hiſtory of the Reformation.

RIDPATH, commonly pronounced and ſometimes writ Rippet or Rippeth, a Barony in the Shire of Berwick, in the South of Scotland, which gave Name to an ancient and ſometimes conſiderable Family, Poſſeſſors of the ſame, and chief of the Name, but now it is in other hands: Their Arms is a Field Argent, a Cheveron Engrail'd Gules between three Boars-heads eras'd; of the ſecond, the Creſt a Demi-boar Gules, briſtled and hoofed Or; of which Family Geo. Ridpath, one of thoſe concerned in the former Edition of this Dictionary, is lineally deſcended.

RIETI, a City of Italy in Umbria, a Province of the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate, with a Biſhoprick depending immediately upon the See of Rome. It is ſituate upon the River Velino, in the Borders of the Kingdom of Naples, between Aquila to the Eaſt, and Narin Weſt, 28 miles from each, and 40 from —— to the South. Though this City ſtands in a bad and unhealthful Air, yet it is populous, and a thriving ſtate, and of great Antiquity, being mention'd by Strabo, Ptolemy and Pliny.

RIEUX, near the Garonne and the Rize, a City of Languedoc, with a Biſhoprick ſuffragan of Tholouſe. It was in the Dioceſe of Tholouſe, but Pope John XXIV. made it a Spaniſh See in 1318, and the Cardinal Pilefort de Rabaſtens was the firſt Prelate of it. Rieux is 7 Leagues from Tholouſe to the South, 8 from de Foix to the South-weſt, and 8 from Lyons to the South-eaſt.

RIEZ, a City of France in Provence, with a Biſhoprick ſuffragan of Aix. Latin Authors call it variouſly, as Rejus, Rejenſis Civitas, Albecum Rejorum Apollinarium, Colonia Rejorum: Gregory of Tours, and others, Regium & Civitas Regienſium. This City is very ancient, and the Inſcriptions and other Monuments of Antiquity that are to be ſeen there are an unqueſtionable proof thereof. It is finely ſituated, and its Soil very fertile. In 439 fourteen Biſhops aſſembled at Riez, for to rectifie the Errors of the Ordination of Armentarius Biſhop of Autun, which was by two Prelates only, without the Authority of the Metropolitan; it was rendred null, and Armentarius reduced to the Dignity of Chorepiſcopus. S. Hilarius of Arles preſided at this Council. It ſtands 28 miles South of Siſteron, 37 North-eaſt of Aix, and 46 North of Toulon.

RIGA, which the Germans call Rigen, and the Inhabitants Riig, is the Capital City of Livonia upon the River Duna, which diſchargeth it ſelf a little lower into the Gulf of Riga, part of the Baltick Sea. It was built by Albert III. Biſhop of Livonia in 1196; or according to others, by Bertold alſo Biſhop of Livonia, in 1186, who there fixed his Epiſcopal See. This Church was erected into an Archbiſhoprick, in 1215, by Pope Innocent III. and made Metropolitan of all Livonia, Pruſſia and Curland. The Knights of the Order of Eſpadon, and afterwards the Grand Maſter of the Teutonick Order in Pruſſia, divided there the Government and Sovereignty with the Archbiſhop, until the change of Religion came. At the ſame time the War of the Muſcovites obliged the Inhabitants of Riga to have recourſe to the King of Poland, to whom they voluntarily gave themſelves up, in 1561. Charles IX. King of Swedeland, beſieged the Town of Riga, in 1605, but he was conſtrained to raiſe the Siege then, as alſo in 1609. His Son, Guſtavus Adolphus, was more fortunate, who took this City in 1621; ſince that time it has been in the poſſeſſion of the Swedes. Some years ago the Muſcovites had a deſign to render themſelves Maſters of it, but they loſt a great part of their Army, and raiſed the Siege ſhamefully. The ſituation of this City is very agreeable, ſtanding in a great Plain upon the brink of the River Duna, which is a quarter of a League broad in that ſame place. It is very populous and conſiderable, becauſe of its Commerce as well with the Engliſh as with the Hollanders, and the Hans-Towns of Germany, when the Summer renders the Baltick-Sea navigable; and alſo with the Muſcovites, when the Ice can bear their Sledges. Proviſions there are very cheap, as alſo Fowl and Veniſon, for that every body are free to hunt. They are of the Proteſtant Religion: The Miniſters preach in the German Tongue, but for the meaner ſort of People they make uſe of the Sclavonian Language, and in two particular Churches the Curland Speech. The Magiſtrate alſo expedites all Deeds, and the like, in the German Tongue. Meinardus the Apoſtle of Livonia became the firſt Biſhop of this City, in 1186. Bertoldus was his Succeſſor. He was ſucceeded by Albert of Brandenburgh, who walled Riga for a Citadel of the Livonians, in 1200, or thereabout; for he ſpent two Summers by way of Incurſion before he ſetled. During the time it was under the Poles the ſtate of it is thus deſcribed by Guagninus, who lived then in Poland: Riga is the celebrated Capital of Livonia, fortify'd with a ſtrong Wall, Ramparts, and many Towers; it has two Ditches, a Counterſcarp, and three rows of Cannon, one above another, round about the Town, and a Palliſado on the Counterſcarp. It has Ammunition, Victuals, and a good Garriſon in it, as well in times of Peace as in War. Gothard Ketler, Duke of Curland, reſides (ſaith he) in the Caſtle, but he has no Authority over the City, but they pay their Tributes, and yield a willing Subjection to the King of Poland, and are govern'd by Magiſtrates of their own appointment. Ruſſia ſends hither Pot-aſhes, Timber, Furs and Corn in vaſt abundance, by the River Dwina, and in exchange receives back the Merchandice of all the reſt of Europe. At the entrance of the River is a ſtrong Caſtle called Dunamunt, and another above it call'd Blokaus, both garriſon'd by the Poles, and for that reaſon hated by the Citizens. Thus far he. Riga is ſeated on the Banks of Dwina, four Leagues from the Baltick. It is not great, but compact, and very well peopled. Its Buildings are all of Stone or Brick, and it is fortify'd with a good Wall, good Ditches and Ramparts on that ſide towards Muſcovy. Next the River it has a ſtrong Caſtle, in which reſides the Governour General of Livonia. But, after all, it's moſt regarded for the Commerce which it draws from all parts of the Baltick, the Ships coming up the Dwina to the very Gates of the City. In the Winter by Sledges they trade with Pleſco, Novogorod and Muſcow, and with Curland at all times. Carliſle's Embaſſy, p. 338. This was the ſtate of the place in 1664. It ſtands in a Champaign Country, on the North-eaſt ſide of the River Struys, p. 116. Riga is 120 miles North-eaſt of Memel, 250 South-eaſt of Stockholm, and 320 North-eaſt of Warſaw. This preſent year 1700 the King of Poland beſieged it, which he afterwards turn'd into a Blockade. Olearius. Hoffman.

RIGAULT or Rigaltius (Nicholas) of Paris, Councellor to the King in the Parliament of Metz, and Keeper of the Royal Library, famous for his Learning, and the knowledge he acquired in the Languages, and particularly in the Greek Tongue. The Learned of thoſe times kept a correſpondence with him, and Peter du Puy, whoſe Life he writ, was one of the principal. The King made him Keeper of his Library after Iſaac Cauſabon, and afterwards Counſellor or Member in the Parliament of Metz. He died very aged, in the year 1653. The principal Works we have of his, are, Gloſſarium τακτικὸν μιξοβάρβαρον; Obſervationes de Populi Fundis, In Oſonandri Stratagicum, &c. He publiſhed alſo the Works of Cyprian and Tertullian, with Notes upon them, as he did alſo upon Phædrus, Artemidorus, Julian, and the Writers de Re Agraria. Mr. Dodwell, a learned Man of England, ſpeaks thus of him: Rigaultius, though otherwiſe an able Critick, is little exact in the things he treats of, and being of the Communion of the Church of Rome, yet often takes part with the Calviniſts, when he found any thing in the Authors which he publiſhed that appeared not only contrary to the Cuſtoms of his Church, but alſo of the Univerſal Church, he very carefully remarks it, perhaps in order to render his Remarks the more agreeable to his Reader by their Novelty. Mr. Dodwell makes this Remark upon him, in the Preface of his Treatiſe, De Jure Laicorum Sacerdotali, upon the occaſion of a Diſpute between Rigaltius, and Albaſpinæus Biſhop of Orleans, about a paſſage in Tertullian, from which Rigaltius maintain'd It appear'd that Tertullian believ'd, that the Laity had a Right to Conſecrate the Euchariſt, when they had no opportunity of being aſſiſted by the Clergy. Wading. in Annal.

S. RIGOBERT, or ROBERT, Archbiſhop of Reims, born in the Dioceſs of Reims, towards the middle of the Seventh Century. After the death of Pepin, King Dagobert II. gave the Office of Major of the Palace to a Lord named Rainfroy. Charles Martel who made pretenſions to it, raiſed an Army to deprive him of that Authority, and to inveſt himſelf in the ſame; and after he had render'd himſelf Maſter of divers places, he drew near unto the City of Reims, and would have entred into it; but Rigobert oppoſed him, proteſting to him, nevertheleſs, That if God put the Kingdom into his hands, he would open the Gates to him, and be very faithful and obedient. This Reſolution exaſperated that Prince ſo much, that after that he had defeated his Adverſary, and render'd himſelf Maſter of the State, he drove him from his See, and put in his place one called Milo; he withdrew into Gaſcony, from whence Milo made him be recalled, and gave him liberty to celebrate Maſs in the Church of Reims. This great Man, ſo unjuſtly depoſed, led a private Life for ſome years in a Country Houſe that Pepin had given him, and died in the year 733. Sigebert.

RIMINI, Lat. Ariminum, a City of Italy upon the Adriatick Sea in Romania, a Province of the Eccleſiaſtical State, with a Biſhoprick ſuffragan of Ravenna. Its ancient Port formerly famous, is now filled up with Sand; and there are but very ſmall Barks that can come in there: The Marble wherewith it was built, has been uſed for the erecting of the Church of St. Francis. At one of the Gates is a fine Triumphal Arch built in honour of Auguſtus, and in the City are to be ſeen the remains of a great Theatre of Brick. The Bridge upon the River of Rimini is very famous, and joins the Flaminian to the Æmilian way. This City has had divers Maſters, ſince the Romans. It reſiſted the Goths in the time of the Emperor Juſtinian: There was in it a very fine Palace built for the Malateſti, the ancient Lords of Rimini, which now belong to the See of Rome. This City ſtands between Bononia to the W. and Ancona to the E. 25 miles from Ravenna to the N. E. and a little more from Urbino to the N. The Via Flaminia made by the old Romans with ſo much expence, ended at the Bridge of this City, and the Æmilian began here, which went to Piacenza. The Inhabitants were very faithful to the Romans under the Diſtreſſes brought upon 'em by the Victorious Arms of Hannibal in the ſecond Punick War. The taking it by Julius Cæſar was the firſt act of the Civil War between him and Pompey; being deſtroy'd by the Dalmatians it was rebuilt by Diocleſian. In the time of Juſtin it ſuſtain'd a Siege from the Goths in 359. The Emperor Conſtantius Conven'd a Council at Rimini in 359, conſiſting of above 400 Prelates of the Weſtern Church, as is obſerv'd by St. Athanaſius, Sulpitius Severus, and Sozomen; the number of the Arrians amounted to near Eighty, the Principal of which were, Urſacius, Valens, Germinius, Auxentius, &c. The Emperor had given Orders to Taurus, the Præfectus Prætorio, to keep 'em together 'till they agreed upon one common Confeſſion of Faith, with a promiſe to make him Conſul if he effected the Buſineſs: Giving him in charge likewiſe to furniſh the Biſhops with all things neceſſary for their accommodation. But the Biſhops of Gaul and Britain, except 3, refus'd to accept the Emperor's Favour. Pope Liberius ſent his Proxies thither. In this Council the Orthodox and the Arrians ſate in diſtinct Places; and here Urſacius and Valens propos'd the laying aſide all the Confeſſions of Faith then extant, and to receive one drawn up by themſelves, in which they affirm'd only, That the Son of God was like his Father in all things, without making any particular mention of Eſſence or Conſubſtantiality, which Form ſeem'd to favour the Arrian Hereſie; but the Orthodox Prelates would receive no Confeſſion but the Nicene-Creed, as being ſufficient to ſecure the Faith, and free from all ſuſpicion of Error. To this they added the Condemnation of the Hereſie of the Arrians, and depos'd Urſacius, Valens, Germinius, Auxentius, Demophilus, and Caius, who were the chief Hereticks of the Party. This was tranſacted in ſome of the firſt Seſſions of the Council of Rimini. As for other Matters which were afterwards Debated, which Athanaſius calls the Innovations of Rimini; Theſe Matters, I ſay, cannot be ſaid to be the Reſult of a Lawful Aſſembly. The Prelates gave an account to Conſtantius of their firſt Decrees and Reſolutions, diſpatching ten of their Aſſembly to that Emperor with a Synodical Epiſtle, deſiring him withal to give them leave to break up, and go home to their Dioceſſes. But Conſtantius being pre-poſſeſs'd in favour of Urſacius and Valens, detain'd this Committee of the Council a great while at Court, and at laſt oblig'd them to ſign a Confeſſion of Faith, where the Son was no more than barely declar'd to be like to the Father. Theſe Delegates, after this Act of perfidiouſneſs, return'd with the Arrians to the Council, and notwithſtanding they alledg'd in their excuſe that they were threatned and forc'd by the Emperor into this Compliance of Signing, were yet refus'd Admittance to Communion. In the mean time the Vice-Roy Taurus had Orders not to ſuffer any Biſhop to leave the Council without Signing, and to Baniſh thoſe who continu'd unmanageable. This Rigour occaſion'd the greater part of the Council to give up their former Conſtancy, and comply with the Emperor; being both very deſirous to go to the Government of their Churches, and likewiſe tir'd out with the uneaſineſs of their Circumſtances and Condition upon the place. This defection was ſo general, that in a little time there was but twenty remaining that adher'd to the Council of Nice; and even two of theſe, viz. Phæbadius Biſhop of Agen, and Servatius of Tongres were over-reach'd by Valens, who allow'd 'em to add to their Confeſſion, that the Son of God was not a Creature like the reſt, provided they did not make uſe of the words Eſſence and Conſubſtantial; but by this Comparative preference, theſe Arrians made the word no more than the moſt Excellent of God's Creatures. The Arrians Triumph'd in their advantage in this Confeſſion, which had been not only Condemn'd by the reſt of Chriſtendom, but even by the greateſt part of thoſe who at laſt Subſcrib'd it. *Athanaſ. de Synod. RINGWOOD, a Market-Town of Ringwood Hundred in the S. W. of Hampſhire, ſituate upon the Avon, 75 miles from London.

RIO Grand de Sancta Martha, or De la Madalena, a River of New-Caſtile, or Caſtile d'Or in South America; theſe two names have been given to it, for that it runs all along through the Province of Sancta Martha, and that the Mouth of it was diſcovered by the Spaniards on the day of the Feaſt of St. Magdalene. This great River is formed of two Rivulets, whereof the one is called Rio Cauca, or Rio grande de la Madalena ſpringing in the Popayan, and the other named Rio Grande de la Madalena ariſing in the New Kingdom of Granada; they unite near unto Tenariffa, a Town in the Province of St. Martha, and run in the ſame Channel 'till they diſcharge themſelves into the Northern Sea. All the Merchandiſes of Europe are brought up this River into Caſtile d'Or by the help of Oars and Ropes; and all the Merchandizes of the New Kingdom of Granada and Popayan deſcend along this River to the Sea. It is affirmed, That the Current of this River may be ſeen ten Leagues in the Sea, diſtant from its Mouth, ſo impetuous and violent is its Courſe. De Laet.

RIOLANUS (John) an Eminent Phyſician of Amiens; he was likewiſe well skilled in Antiquity, and very much eſteem'd towards the end of the XVIth Century. He defended Hippocrates againſt the Chymiſts, and appears to have been a great Man by his Writings. In 1620. his Works were Collected and Printed in one Volume in Folio. Lettres de Guy Patin.

RIOM, a Town in France in Lower Auvergne; the Latins call it Riomagum. It is ſituate upon an Eminence, which renders its Proſpect very agreeable; it is well built, and has large Streets and very uniform. This City hath in the Suburbs of it the famous Abby of Moſac, Founded by Calminius Senator of Rome in the beginning of the Seventh Age. It is the Capital of the Dutchy of Auvergne, of which all the Fieſs and under-Fieſs of the Province are held, erected into a Dutchy, in favour of John Duke of Berry, the Son of John King of France, in 1360. It is the Principal City of that Province, where are held the King's Courts of Judicature, and that of the Finances; it being above nine hundred years ago, that the Judge of this City was called the Univerſal Judge of all the Province, for that he judged by an Appeal of all Cauſes. There is a Seneſchalſhip and Preſidentſhip, the greateſt and moſt conſiderable in the Kingdom. There is alſo a generality of Finances, Election, Marſhalſea, and Conſular Juriſdiction; the Lieutenant General of the Seneſchalſhip is alſo Provoſt of the Chamber of the Mints, which is eſtabliſhed there, and he is Judge of all the differences which may ariſe in the Convocation of the Ban and Arrier-ban of the Province held here. In this City is a Caſtle built magnificently by John of Berry, wherein are the Courts held. Here are three Chapters, that of St. Amable, that of Santa Chapelle, and that of Nôtre Dame du Marthuret. Here is alſo a College of Prieſts of the Oratory, where they teach Theology, founded by Lewis XIV. a publick Hoſpital, and divers Religious Houſes. Du Cheſne.

RIOTHIMUS, was, as is believed, the firſt King of Little Bretany, about 470, having been elected by the Britons to defend their Liberty after the death of Aetius General of the Roman Army. It is from his time the Hiſtory of the Britons ought to commence. All that is ſaid of Conan and his Succeſſors to him, being nothing but Fables. Vignier.

RIPA or RIPEN, a City of Denmark in Jutland, with a Biſhoprick ſuffragan of Lunden. There is a good Port belongs to it, and a Fortreſs that was taken by the Swedes in 1645; but has been ſince retaken. In this Dioceſs are obſerv'd to be thirty Governments, 282 Pariſhes, ſix Fortreſſes, and five Towns. Ripa ſtands 55 miles N. W. of Slefwick, and 67 S. of Wiborg.

RIPA TRANSONA, a City of Italy in the Territories of Ancona, with a Biſhop's See, founded by Pope Gregory XIII. and Suffragan of Fermo.

RIPATH the Son of Gomer, Gen. 10. from whom deſcended the Ripatheans, ſince called Paphlagonians.

RIPLEY, a Market Town in the Weſt Riding of Yorkſhire, in Claro Hundred, upon the River Nyd, over which it has a Bridge, 152 miles from London.

RIPPON, Lat. Rhidogunum, a Town in Yorkſhire, in the Weſt Riding and Hundred of Claro, of good antiquity, ſituate near the Toure, over which it has a Bridge, adorn'd with a Collegiate Church with three lofty Spires, and anciently with a ſtately Monaſtery built by Wilfride Archbiſhop of York, 'till the Danes deſtroy'd it with the Tower; yet Odo Archbiſhop of Canterbury repair'd it again, and tranſlated the Reliques of the holy Founder to Canterbury. There is a narrow hole in a Vault under ground in the Church, called St. Wilfride's Needle, thro' which, as it is reported, honeſt Women could paſs, but the unchaſt ſtuck in it. It is one of the beſt Towns in the County, well Inhabited, and of note, particularly for making good Spurs; having the privilege to be a Corporation alſo, repreſented by two Members in the Houſe of Commons; govern'd by a Mayor and Aldermen; from London 158 miles.

RIPUARIÆ; ſo were called the Salick Laws of the French called Ripuarians or Riperots, becauſe they dwelt near unto the Rivers of Sal and Mein, which are in Franconia, or, Eaſtern France.

RISBOROUGH, a Market Town in Buckinghamſhire, ſituate on the Hills. From London 29 m.

RISHANGER (William) an Engliſh Benedictin, wrote a Hiſtory of his Country, from the year 1239, to his own time, Entituled Opus Chronicorum, &c. He died in the year 1312. Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat. Lib. 3. Cap. 9. Pits, &c.

RISSUICH (Herman) a Dutch Hereſiarch, preaching new Errors in his Country in the Fifteenth Century, was ſeiz'd and impriſon'd by the Magiſtrates in 1499, but abjuring his Novelties he was diſmiſs'd for that time. This treatment did not render him a whit the wiſer, ſo that reſuming his darling Doctrine, he was burnt at the Hague in 1512. Among other things, he taught, That the Angels were not Created by God; That the Soul was not immortal: That the Matter of the Elements was Eternal; that Moſes was a Mad-man, and rejected both the Scripture and new and old Law. Prateol. Sanderus. Spond. Gautier.

RITTERSHUYS Conrad, (in Latin Ritterhuſius) was of Brunſwick, a City of Lower-Saxony in Germany. He made himſelf famous at the beginning of this Age, by the learned Notes he made upon the Epiſtles of St. Iſidorus and Pliny, upon Oppian, upon Petronius, and upon the ancient Latin Panegyricks; he has alſo writ divers Law Books, wherein he hath intermix'd ſeveral Criticiſms. He died in 1613. Bibliogr. Cur.

RITTIUS or RIS (Michael) a Lawyer and Hiſtorian, born at Naples, lived about the beginning of the Sixteenth Century, to wit, in 1505. He followed K. Lewis XII. into France, where he made himſelf known under the name of the Advocate of Naples. He writ a Treatiſe of the Duty and Privileges of Soldiers, which he dedicated to the ſame King Lewis XII in 1505. We have alſo other Pieces of his written in Latin, and in an excellent Stile, to wit, The Hiſtory of the Kings of France in three Books; that of the Kings of Spain alſo in three Books; one Book of the Kings of Jeruſalem; four of thoſe of Naples and Sicily, and the Hiſtory of the Kings of Hungary, in two Books. Voſſius, la Croix du Maine.

RIVET (Andrew) a Proteſtant Miniſter of France, and Profeſſor of Divinity in the Univerſity of Leyden, was of St. Maixent in Poictou, where he was born in 1572: He was in great eſteem among thoſe of his Communion, who entruſted him with their moſt important Affairs: He preſided at divers Synods in France, and in 1622, he was invited to Leyden to teach Theology there. Rivet has compoſed divers Tracts of Controverſie, Commentaries upon divers Books of Scripture, Criticus Sacer, &c. which is collected in three Volumes in Folio. He died very old, in 1650. One of his Brothers named William Rivet, Miniſter alſo in France, has writ a Treatiſe of Juſtification, of Eccleſiaſtical Liberty, &c.

RIVIUS (John) Born at Altendorp, or Oltendorp, a Town in Weſtphalia in Germany, in the County of Schwembourg. He firſt taught School at Cologne, and was afterwards Counſellor to George Duke of Saxony, and Præceptor to Auguſtus, who at laſt came to be Elector. Rivius being tir'd with a Court-life, withdrew, and was made Maſter of the College of Meiſſen, where he died in the year 1553. He wrote ſeveral Books, of which Oporinus made a Collection, (viz.) De inſtaurata Doctrina Eccleſiaſtica Libellus. De Grammatica, Dialectica, Rhetorica Lib. XVIII: De Familiari Genio, ſeu De Præſidio Angelico Libellus. De Conſcientia Libri Tres. De Spectris & Apparitionibus Vmbrarum. De Lucta Chriſtiana. De Vita & Moribus Chriſtianorum. This Rivius was a Lutheran. Thuan. Hiſt. Pantaleon Proſopog. part 3. Melchior Adam.

RIZIO (David) See Mary Queen of Scots.

ROALDES (Francis) a Famous Lawyer, was deſcended from a Noble Family of the Town of Marſillac in Rovergne. The moſt learned Lawyers of his time eſteemed him much; amongſt others, Cujacius and Hottoman; and M. Pithou dedicated to him his Book of the Laws of the Wiſigoths, printed with Caſſiodorus. Of all his Works there have been but two Pieces that have been publiſhed, the firſt called, Annotationes in notitiam utramq; tum Orientis, tum Occidentis; the ſecond, A Diſcourſe of memorable things concerning the City of Cahors; the reſt of his Works are in the hands of M. de Launoy, Profeſſor of the French Law in the Univerſity of Paris. Thuan. St. Marthe.

ROAN, a City of France, the Capital of Normandy, one of the greateſt, richeſt and moſt populous in the Kingdom, being an Archbiſhop's-See, and has a Parliament holden there. The Ancients called it Rotomagum and Rotomagus. It is very ancient, and was even famous in the time of Theodoſius the Great, as may be ſeen by the Letters of St. Paulinus to Victricus, Biſhop of Roan. It muſt be confeſs'd, that next to Paris it is the greateſt in the Kingdom, and beſt ſituated; for one ſide of it is near to the Sea, and the other ſtands upon the Banks of the River Seyne, where the Tide comes up ſo high, that Veſſels of above two hundred Tun can come up to a great Key that joins to it, for to unlade the Merchandices that are brought thither from far Countries, with which this famous City has a general Commerce; in ſo much that it is a Magazin of precious Commodities; which by the means of the Seyne are diſperſed throughout the reſt of the Kingdom. The Dukes of Normandy made choice of this Place to keep their Courts in, and there may yet be ſeen their ancient Palace in the Place of the old Tower, which ſerves at preſent for the publick Magazins. Roan is beſet with Mountains, from whence proceed ſmall Rivers, which ſerve to fill the Ditches of the Town, and cleanſe the Streets; but eſpecially to turn divers Mills; and many other things neceſſary for ſo great a number of Artificers that live there. They reckon one hundred and twenty five Streets in it, whereof moſt are very fine, not to ſpeak of its Squares, Fountains, Palaces, and other Edifices for ſacred and civil Uſes, which contribute much to its Ornament. The Church of Roan is illuſtrious for its Antiquity, and the Merit of its Prelates, whereof St. Nicaſius was the firſt. The Archbiſhops, Primates of Normandy, were diſcharged from being under the Primacy of Lyons ſince 1457, when Cardinal d'Eſtouteville obtained that Exemption from Pope Calixtus IIId. The Suffragans of this Archbiſhoprick are Bajeux, Auranches, Eureux, Sees, Lizieux, and Coutances. The Chapter conſiſts of fifty Canons or Prebendaries, whereof ten are dignified, to wit, the Dean, Chanter, Treaſurer, ſix Archdeacons, and a Chancellor, without mentioning eight leſſer Canons, and a great number of beneficed Perſons and Chaplains. The Archdeacons have under them twenty ſeven Country Deanaries, wherein are reckoned 1388 Pariſhes, whereof thirty are in the City of Roan, and five in the Suburbs. There are alſo twenty ſix Abbeys in the Dioceſs, comprehending thoſe of St. Oüen and St. Amand in Roan, where may be found in the City and Suburbs, twenty four Religious Houſes of Men, and ten of Women. The Metropolitan Church is Nôtredame, which is Famous for its Grandeur and Magnificence. Its Bell is eſteemed one of the greateſt in the World, and called the George d'Amboiſe, for that it was made by order of the Cardinal of that Name, who was alſo Archbiſhop of Roan; where may be ſeen divers Tombs and other Rarities worthy of the Curioſity of Travellers, not to ſpeak of the Treaſure of its Veſtry, which has been very conſiderable before it was plundred, during the War about Religion, in the ſixteenth Century. There is a Bridge of Boats at Roan, over the Seyne, which raiſeth it ſelf up as the Tide flows, and lowers again when it ebbs; the which it doth with that exact evenneſs, that one would ſay, this Bridge, which is paved, and two hundred and ſeventy Paces long, is as firm as if it were made of Stone. In this City alſo is a Chamber of Accompts, an Office of the Treaſurers of France, a Mint which marks with the Letter B. and a Preſidial. The Parliament has been a Court of Exchequer erected by King Philip the Fair about 1286, for the adminiſtration of Juſtice in Normandy. Lewis XIIth. in 1459 confirmed it, and made it perpetual at the deſire of Cardinal d'Amboiſe, and in 1515, Francis I. having aboliſhed that Name of Court of Exchequer, gave it the Title of Parliament. Moreover Roan hath often been ſubject to great Misfortunes, and terrible Fires, as in 1019, Authors note. It was taken by the Normans in 841. The Engliſh made themſelves Maſters of it in 1418. And in 1449 it was reduced under the obedience of Charles VIIth. It ſuffered much in the ſixteenth Age, during the War about Religion in France. The Proteſtants took it; but was retaken and ſacked by Charles IXth. in 1562. Anthony de Bourbon, King of Navarre, received there during the Siege, near unto the Gate of St. Hilary, a Wound, of which he died in a little time after. His Son, Henry the Great, took it afterwards from thoſe of the League in 1594, after it had been beſieged in vain in 1592. The Firſt Council of Roan was celebrated about ſix hundred ninety two. Ambert, who was Prelate of this City preſided at that Aſſembly; which conſiſted of ſixteen Biſhops.

ROANNE, a Town of France in Foret, the Capital of a little Country called Roannois; upon the River Loire, which there begins to carry Boats. There is alſo a College of Jeſuits, and divers other Religious Houſes. King Charles IXth. erected that Country into a Dutchy for Lewis Gouffier Boiſſi.

ROBERT BOYLE Eſquire, was fourth Son to Richard the firſt Earl of Cork in Ireland, and born at Liſmore in that Kingdom. The promiſing Bloſſoms of his great Piety and Capacity begun to appear very early, and after he had paſſed the trivial Schools in Ireland, he ſtudied at Leyden in Holland, and then travelled into France, Swiſſerland, Italy, &c. without receiving the leaſt tincture of the Vices of the Places or Times. He often owned, That his Piety receiv'd a great increaſe by his Converſe with the Godly and Learned Archbiſhop Uſher, who duly cultivated the hopeful Seeds which he foreſaw would produce ſuch a glorious Harveſt. Mr. Boyle did for many years ſo exactly ſtudy the Holy Scriptures in the Original Languages, that he could readily quote both the Hebrew and Greek, and underſtood that Sacred Book ſo well, as few, whoſe Profeſſion did oblige them to it, could equal him in it; and if in Converſe he heard any thing which gave him a clearer view of a Text, he receiv'd it with pleaſure, examined it with accuracy, and would deſire it from the perſon in Writing, if he found them not uneaſie. His Veneration for the name of God was ſo profound, that he never pronounced it without a diſcernible pauſe. He was conſtant in his ſecret Addreſſes to his Throne, and in all his Enquiries into Nature, his chief deſign was to raiſe higher thoughts in himſelf and others, of the Greatneſs, Glory, Wiſdom and Goodneſs of God, and in that Article of his Will relating to the Royal Society, he recommends it to them, and other ſearchers into Phyſical Truths, to referr their Attainments to the Glory of the Great Author of Nature, and the Comfort of Mankind. Having poſſeſſed himſelf with ſuch an amiable view of Chriſtianity as ſeparated from the Superſtition or Sowerneſs of Parties; he rejoiced in every diſcovery from Nature which might either illuſtrate it or remove Objections againſt it; having always conſidered it as a Syſtem of Truths, which ought to purifie the Heart and Practice. He loved nothing that might leſſen that, nor any nicety which occaſioned Diviſions amongſt Chriſtians, ſo that for the advancement of pure and diſ-intereſſed Chriſtianity he hath left by his Will a liberal proviſion for a certain number of well-digeſted Sermons on purpoſe to evince the truth of the Chriſtian Religion in General, without touching upon ſub-diviſions amongſt Chriſtians in particular. He was ſo zealous for propagating our Holy Religion, that he was at the charge of a Tranſlation and Impreſſion of the New Teſtament into the Malyan Tongue, which he ſent over all the Eaſt-Indies. He gave a noble Reward to him who tranſlated Grotius's incomparable Book of the Truth of the Chriſtian Religion into Arabick, and was at the charge of an Impreſſion, which he took care to have diſtributed where that Language obtains. He reſolv'd alſo to have carried on an Impreſſion of the New Teſtament in the Turkiſh Language, but the Company thinking that it became them to do it, ſuffered him only to contribute his large ſhare: He gave 700 l. towards the charge of the Iriſh Bible, which he ordered to be diſtributed in Ireland; and contributed liberally towards the Welſh Bible, and that in Iriſh for the Highlands of Scotland. He gave, during his Life, 300 l. towards propagating the Chriſtian Religion in America, and gave 100 l. to the Eaſt-India Company towards their deſigns of the like nature in the Eaſt-Indies, intending a much greater Sum when the Work ſhould be ſet on foot to purpoſe; and as his Zeal was lively toward the greateſt concerns of Religion, he avoided entring far into thoſe things which have weakned and diſtracted Chriſtianity; had an utter averſion to whatever was deſtructive of Morality and Charity, and was particularly zealous againſt all Severities and Perſecutions upon the account of Religion. He approved of the Church of England's Doctrine, and did never ſeparate from her Communion. He was charitable in his Opinion toward Diſſenters, and did plentifully ſupply their Neceſſities; ſo that as he ſhut himſelf up in no Party, neither did he ſhut out any Party from him. He had been ſollicited to take Orders, but declined it, conceiving that what he wrote in defence of Religion, might have the more Authority when he did not ſhare in the Churches Patrimony. He never dictated to others, but propoſed his own Sence modeſtly; and if he differed in his Sentiments, did never expreſs himſelf ſo as to offend thoſe he differed from; and as he gave no occaſion of diſguſt to any when preſent, he would be ſilent if any thing was ſpoken hard of thoſe who were abſent, and it inſiſted on, would divert it. He was civil to the utmoſt, eſpecially to Strangers; and though his time was precious, he made it a piece of Religious Charity to admit them. His Charity to thoſe in want, and Bounty to Learned Men was extraordinary, but without Oſtentation. He was particularly liberal to Perſons in diſtreſs, without letting them know whence it came; ſo that for ſeveral years his Charity exceeded 1000 l. per An. And as he had a good Eſtate, he made a good uſe of it, denying himſelf in all worldly Pomp, and applying himſelf conſtantly to his Studies and Philoſophical Experiments. He would neither lye nor equivocate, but could well be ſilent, by which he avoided making himſelf or others uneaſie. He was decently Cheerful, and had nothing of that moroſeneſs which Philoſophers and Men of extraordinary Devotion are ſometimes inclinable to. He made true Judgments of Men and things; his Advices were ſound, yet cautious and modeſt, and his Invention fruitful to ſuggeſt good Expedients. He withdrew early from Courts and Publick Affairs, yet was always honourably treated by his Princes. He was very ſagacious in diſcerning Men's Talents, and had ſuch a vaſt Scheme of Projects, that he could quickly ſet thoſe at work who had Leiſure and Capacity, and when he ſaw them engaged, would enable them by a handſome Preſent to carry it on. He was very well vers'd in Rabbinical Learning, and the Fathers; had nicely conſidered the whole Controverſies of Religion, and thoroughly underſtood the Body of Divinity. He was abſolute Maſter of the Mathematicks, and knew the utmoſt in Geometry; Geography in its ſeveral parts, with Hiſtory and Books of Travels were his diverſions. He was expert in all the parts of Phyſick; but for the Hiſtory of Nature, of the productions of all Countries, of the Virtues and Improvements of Plants, Oars, Minerals, with their Varieties in different Climates, he was, perhaps, the perfecteſt and exacteſt Man in the World; which enabled him to make a greater number of different Experiments than any Man that ever we read of; and he delivered his Diſcoveries ſo exactly according to Truth, that they may be ſafely depended upon; but his peculiar and beloved ſtudy was Chymiſtry, in which he engaged with no avaritious deſign, but only to find out Nature, to ſee of what principles things were compounded, and into what they might be reſolved, and to prepare good Medicaments, without ſpending his Eſtate and Time upon high Pretenſions, but kept always within compaſs. He made Chymiſtry much the better and himſelf never the worſe nor the poorer by it, making it an Entertainment to himſelf, and a Charity to others, the Products being diſpoſed by his Siſter, &c. to whom he entruſted it. In ſhort, his Knowledge and great Performances this way are valued through the World, and his numerous Writings univerſally eſteem'd. He was of a weak infirm Body, which renders it the more aſtoniſhing how he could write, meditate, read and try Experiments as he did; but his ſimplicity of Diet to which he was adviſed, and ſo ſtrictly obſerved, that for above thirty years he neither eat nor drank to gratifie Appetite, but meerly to ſupport Nature, is thought to have preſerv'd him ſo long. He was ſo wonderfully exact in keeping to his Preſcription, that during all that time he never once tranſgreſſed in rule, meaſure, nor kind. The cauſe of all this Caution was, that the pains of the Stone might not increaſe above what he was able to bear, and to preſerve his Sight, which was feeble; in both which reſpects the goodneſs of God towards him was very remarkable, for his Sight did not fail till four hours before his death, and inſtead of lying long in Bed, which he always dreaded for fear of the Stone, he had not lain three hours till he expir'd, and that with no great pain December 30. 1691, aged 64, about a Week after his Siſter, the Lady Ranelagh, with whom he had lived 40 years. See Mr. Boyle's Funeral Sermon by Dr. Burnet Biſhop of Sarum. The Books publiſhed by this great Author, and thoſe which he did not diſown to be his, are as follow: New Experiments Phyſico-Mechanical of the Spring and Weight of the Air, and its effects, with a Continuation; A Defence of the ſame; An Examen of Hobb's Dialogus de Natura Aeris; The Sceptical Chymiſt; Phyſiological Eſſays; Experimental Hiſtory of Colours; Conſiderations of the uſefulneſs of Experimental Natural Philoſophy, in three Volumes; an Experimental Hiſtory of Cold; An Examen of Hobbs's Doctrine of Cold; Attempts to convey Liquors immediately into the maſs of Blood; Obſervations and Experiments upon the Barometer; Hydroſtatical Paradoxes made out by new Experiments; An account of an Earthquake near Oxford, and its Concomitants; The Origin of Forms and Qualities illuſtrated; A way of preſerving Birds taken out of the Egg, and other ſmall Fœtus's; An account of a new kind of Baroſcope; A new Frigorifick Experiment to produce a conſiderable degree of Cold; Tryals propoſed to Dr. Lower for the improvement of transfuſing Blood out of one live Animal into another; Free conſiderations about ſubordinate Forms; Letter to the Author of the Philoſophical tranſactions, with Experiments of injecting Acid Liquors into Blood; New Experiments concerning the Relation between Light and Air in ſhining Wood and Fiſh, with a Continuation of the ſame; An Invention for eſtimating the Weight of Water with ordinary Balances and Weights; Certain Philoſophical Eſſays about the abſolute reſt of Bodies; New Pneumatical Experiments about Reſpiration upon Ducks, Vipers, Frogs, &c. and a Continuation; Tracts about the Coſmical Qualities of Things, the Temperature of the Subterraneal and Submarine Regions; A diſcovery of the admirable Rarefaction of the Air without Heat; An Eſſay upon the Origin and Virtues of things; Some Obſervations upon ſhining Fleſh, of Veal and Pullet, without any ſenſible putrefaction; A new Experiment of the effect of the varying Weight of the Atmoſphere upon ſome Bodies in the Water; Tracts of new Experiments touching the Relation between Flame and Air, Expoſitions, Hydroſtaticks; Of the poſitive or relative Levities of Bodies under Water; Of the Airs Spring or Bodies under Water, &c. Eſſays of the ſtrange Subtilty, great Efficacy, and determinate Nature of Effluviums; A Letter concerning Ambergreaſe; Obſervations about the Saltneſs of the Sea; A Diſcourſe about the Excellency and Ground of the Mechanical Hypotheſis; An Account of the two ſorts of Helmontian Laudanum, with the way of Preparing it; Tracts of Suſpicions about ſome hidden qualities of the Air, Celeſtial Magnets, and Hobb's Problemata de Vacuo; A Diſcourſe of the Cauſe of Attraction by Suction; Some Phyſico-Theological Conſiderations about the Poſſibility of the Reſurrection, annexed to a Diſcourſe, entitled, The Reconcilableneſs of Reaſon and Religion; A Conjecture concerning the Bladders of Air that are found in Fiſhes; A New Eſſay—Inſtrument, invented by the Author to try the goodneſs of Metals; Ten New Experiments about the weakened Spring, and ſome unobſerved Effects of the Air; An Experimental Diſcourſe of Quickſilver growing hot with Gold; Experiments, Notes, &c. about the Mechanical Origin or Production of divers particular Qualities, with Reflections on the Hypotheſis of Alcali and Acids; New Experiments about the Superficial Figures of Fluids, and a Continuation; The Sceptical Chymiſt, or Chymico-Phyſical Paradoxes; The Aërial Noctiluca; The Glacial Noctiluca; Memoirs for the Natural Hiſtory of Humane Blood; Experiments about the Poroſity of Bodies; Memoirs for the Natural Experimental Hiſtory of Mineral Waters; Hiſtorical Account of a ſtrangely Self-moving Liquor; The Reconcilableneſs of Specifick Medicines to Corpuſcular Philoſophy; The great Effects of Languid Unheeded Motion; A Free Enquiry into the Vulgar Notion of Nature; A Diſquiſition about the Final Cauſes of Natural Things; Medicina Hydroſtatica; Experimenta & Obſervationes Phyſicæ; Medicinal Experiments; Theology; Seraphick Love; Conſiderations about the Style of the Scripture; Occaſional Reflections on ſeveral Subjects of the Excellency of the Study of Theology, compared with that of Natural Philoſophy; Conſiderations about the Reconcilableneſs of Reaſon and Religion; A Treatiſe of Things above Reaſon, with Advices about them; The Veneration that Man's Intellect owes to God; The Martyrdom of Theodora and Didymus; The Chriſtian Virtuoſo. See the Catalogue of his Works, printed for Sam. Smith, in St. Paul's Church-Yard.

ROBERT BRUCE, Father to him of that Name who was King of Scotland, was Earl of Carrick, deſcended from Robert Bruce called The Noble; a Perſon of High Deſcent and Great Eſtate in England, who married Iſabella, ſecond Daughter to David Earl of Huntingdon, Brother to King William of Scotland. This Bruce being Competitor with Baliol for the Crown of Scotland, upon account of the ſaid Deſcent from David, Brother to King William, was worſted by the Arbitration of Edward I. of England, for generouſly refuſing to hold the Crown of Scotland, as depending on him, which his Anceſtors had left him independent. But Baliol having broke his Agreement with King Edward afterwards, Bruce was eaſily perſuaded by that King to join with his Party againſt Baliol, upon Promiſe, That he would ſettle him on the Throne; and having contributed much to the breaking of Baliol's Party, he demanded the accompliſhment of King Edward's Promiſe; who, 'tis ſaid, anſwer'd him, What, Have I nothing elſe to do, but to conquer Kingdoms for you? After which we hear no more of this Bruce. But the whole Kingdom being hereupon over-run with the Engliſh, Edward, by his Policy, kept Bruce's Party, and the Cumins, at that time the greateſt and moſt powerful Family in Scotland, from oppoſing him by putting both of them in hopes of the Crown. And for this end he often communed with Robert Bruce, Son to the former Robert, and afterwards King of Scotland, and John the chief of the Cumins, apart; who conceiving that he only flatter'd them, to carry on his own Conqueſt, they conſulted together, lamenting how their Country had been brought into Slavery; and made a private Agreement to recover their ancient Freedom, That Bruce ſhould have the Crown, and Cumin Bruce's Eſtate, and be next to him in Dignity; which was writ, ſealed and ſworn betwixt themſelves. Bruce, watching for an opportunity, went to the Court of England: And in the mean time Cumin betrayed his Deſign to King Edward, ſending him the Covenant for Verification. Bruce was forbid to depart the Court, had a privy Guard ſet on him, and was deſigned to have been proceeded againſt as a Traitor; but King Edward delayed a little, for Reaſons beſt known to himſelf. But the Earl of Montgomery, his Grand-father's old Friend, not daring to write, did however warn him of his Danger, by ſending him a pair of gilt Spurs, and ſome Pieces of Gold, as if he had borrow'd them of him. Bruee, upon the receipt of them, did ſtraitway apprehend his meaning, ſent for a Smith in the night, made him ſhooe his Horſes backward, to prevent his being traced by the Snow, and with two of his Friends eſcaped, joined ſome of his Relations in Scotland, and intercepted a Flying-Poſt from Cumin at the ſame time, adviſing King Edward to diſpatch him ſpeedily, leſt being a popular, wiſe and bold Man, he ſhould create him new Troubles. Hereupon Bruce rides ſtraight to Cumin, then at Dumfreiz, found him at Church, upbraided him with his Treachery, ſhewed him his own Letters, and upon his diſowning them, ſtabb'd him, Feb. 10. 1305. which made all the Cumins his Enemies; and to heighten his misfortune, the heroick Wallace was juſt then betray'd by Menteith, and put to death by King Edward. However, Bruce having obtain'd his Pardon from the Pope for killing a Man in Holy Church, was Crowned at Scoon, in April, 1306. but was twice defeated that ſame year, his Wife and four of his Brethren taken, and the latter executed in England; as were alſo many of his Kindred, and their Eſtates confiſcated; ſo that he fled privately into the Weſtern Iſles, where he lurk'd for ſome months, till the Enemy thinking he was dead, had given over to ſearch for him. But leſt his Party ſhould totally faint, being accompanied with ſome of his Friends, he lands in Carrick, ſurprizes a Caſtle of his own, put all the Garriſon to the Sword; and marching as far as Innerneſs, did alſo ſurprize the Garriſon there. Hereupon his old Friends, and all who were weary of the Engliſh Government (which grew more ſevere after the News of his Death) came in to him; ſo that he quickly reduced the North, and demoliſhed the Garriſons becauſe he was not ſtrong enough to keep them. The Cumins oppoſed, yet durſt not fight him, but came to a Truce, during which they obtained help from England, and in the mean time, Bruce grew ſtronger, and took more Garriſons. Not long after, he was joined by James the chief of the Douglaſſes, newly come from his Travels, whoſe Father, King Edward had kept in Priſon till he died, and forfeited his Eſtate, becauſe he would never ſubmit. Then Bruce and King Edward fell dangerouſly ſick at the ſame time: And the latter dying at Lancaſter, in his March to Scotland, his Son, Edward II. advanced with the Army, came to Dumfreiz, and ſummoned the Nobility to attend him, but few of them obeyed. His Affairs being alſo declining beyond Sea, he left a Force ſufficient, as he thought, to ſubdue King Robert, and returned to England. But Bruce, upon News of his Father's Death, encreas'd in his Hopes, and though weak in Perſon, prepar'd for a Battel. John Cumin conceiving that King Robert was dead, or at leaſt unfit to take the Field, would have the Glory of finiſhing the War himſelf, and marched directly towards the Army. King Robert cauſed himſelf to be ſet on Horſeback, and though ſo weak that two Men were forced to ſupport him, his Preſence did ſo much encourage his Soldiers, that they obliged the Enemy to a ſhameful Retreat, but uſed the Priſoners courteouſly. This Victory at Ennerury, in 1309, recovered his Health, and eſtabliſhed his Crown. At the ſame time his Brother Edward did alſo reduce Galloway. And the King of England, having entred Scotland as far as Renfrew, retired again without coming to a Battel: Whereas Bruce reduced many other Garriſons; and in 1310 invaded England twice, and returned loaden with Spoils, without any Rencounter. The two following years he recovered all the ſtrong Holds which the Engliſh poſſeſs'd in Scotland, except Sterlin-Caſtle, and that had alſo promiſed to ſurrender, if not relieved in a year's time. The King was diſpleaſed with the Capitulation; but his Brother having ſign'd it, he would not break it: And knowing that the Engliſh would endeavour its Relief before the time, he prepared to fight them. Edward II. being fretted at his Loſs of the Kingdom of Scotland, which did alſo diminiſh his Credit in England, he reſolved to put an end to thoſe Diſturbances, and for that end did levy an Army not only of Engliſh and Scots who were ſtill of his Party, but in his French Territories, which were then very large; and to thoſe he joined the Flemiſh Auxiliaries which he had from his Allies in Flanders and Holland, and forming an Army of 100000 Men effective, did not expect to fight but conquer. Bruce being unequal in Strength, makes uſe of Policy; levies 30000 expert Soldiers, and encamps advantageouſly on the River Bannock, two miles from Sterlin. And to make the River uneaſie for the Engliſh to paſs, he dug Trenches in the Valleys, which he covered with Hurdles and Turf, to conceal the Deſign, and ſtrewed Iron Balls with ſharp Spikes, or Chevaux de Friſe, to lame the Horſes. The Engliſh ſat down on a neighbouring Hill, and the day before the Battle ſent out 800 Horſe, which were defeated by 500 Scots, who took it as an Omen of the enſuing Victory. The Night, though ſhort, being the 23d of June, ſeem'd long to both, becauſe they were eager. Bruce commanded the Main Battle of the Scots, his Brother Edward the Right, and Thomas Randolph, his Nephew, the Left. The Engliſh, beſides a multitude of Archers on their Flanks, had alſo Curiaſſiers from France, who charging upon Randolph as he ſtood on the lower Ground, fell into the Ditches above mention'd, and were forced to retreat with loſs; which ſtruck a Terrour into the Foot, who were afraid of being alſo caught in ſome Stratagem. Another Accident happened, which did not a little contribute to the Victory of the Scots: Their King riding up and down at the Head of his Army to give Orders, an Engliſh Knight, call'd Sir Henry de Bohun, who knew him, rode up and charged him with his Spear; the King warding off the Blow, ſtruck the Cavalier dead with his Battoon. The King's extraordinary Courage and Danger did ſo much animate the Soldiers, that they ruſh'd upon the Engliſh in a tumultuary manner, and had certainly broken their Ranks, if they had not been repulſed by the Archers, who made them retire with great loſs. Whereupon Bruce commanded out ſome Troops of Horſe, who drove back the Archers. But a fatal Miſtake occaſioned the total Overthrow of the Engliſh, which was thus; The Baggage-men, Sutlers, and others belonging to the Scots

Camp, having drawn up with their Carriage-horſes, &c. on a neighbouring Hill, and put their Camp-ſheets upon Poles, to reſemble Colours; the Engliſh who ſtood next them being terrified with the approach of another freſh Army, as they believed, fell into Diſorder, put the Whole into Confuſion, and occaſioned a total Rout, ſo that a vaſt multitude of common Soldiers were ſlain, Scotiſh Writers ſay Fifty thouſand, the Engliſh Ten, the Purſuit being above 40 miles: The Slaughter was certainly ſo great, that the Engliſh, though provoked by the Scots, did not ſtir in two or three years after. Two hundred of the Nobility fell, and as many were taken. King Edward himſelf had not eſcaped Douglas, who purſu'd him with 400 Horſe for forty miles, had not the Earl of March, who was of the Engliſh Side, received him in his Caſtle at Dumbar, and ſent him to Berwick in a Skiff. The Scots loſt 4000 Men in this Battle, but none of Quality except two Knights. This Victory did not only reſtore the Caſtle of Sterlin, but brought Honour, Riches and Arms to the Scots; ſo that many made up their Loſſes which they had ſuſtained in former Wars, and others got great Eſtates by the Spoil, which was very Rich; for King Edward and his Army reckon'd ſo much on an abſolute Conqueſt, that they carried the beſt of their Moveables with them. The Scots did alſo raiſe great Sums for redemption of the Engliſh Captives, and ſet all their own at liberty. A little before this Battle there happened a remarkable Providence to King Robert: John Menteith, who had betray'd his Friend Wallace to the Engliſh, for which he incurred the general Odium of the Scots, had the Government of Dunbarton-Caſtle for his Reward from the Engliſh. King Robert having recover'd all or moſt of the other Forts in the Kingdom, was deſirous alſo to have that, becauſe impregnable, and made uſe of the Governour's Friends to encline him to a Surrender; which he would not hear of on any other Terms than having the Earldom of Lennox for Recompence. But the Earl of that Name had been always ſo true to his Majeſty's Intereſt, that he would not conſent to it till the Earl himſelf perſuaded him: And hereupon the Bargain was made. But as the King was going to take Poſſeſſion of it, a Carpenter praying to ſpeak to him, diſcover'd the Governour's Deſign to betray his Majeſty into the hands of the Engliſh, for which end he had a conſiderable number of armed Men hid in a Cellar, who were either to kill or carry him off, as at Dinner, and a Ship ready in the next Bay for that purpoſe. The King going on to the Caſtle, and having view'd all but the ſaid Cellar, was invited by the Governour to a Feaſt, but refuſed to ſit down till the Cellar were opened: And the Governour pretending that a Smith had the Key, but would come with it preſently; the King cauſed the Door to be broke open, and the Men in Armour brought forth; who being ſeverally examined, confeſs'd the Plot. Menteith's Aſſociates were all put to death; but the King ſpared himſelf, on account of his Relations, leſt they ſhould have otherwiſe deſerted him on the day of Battle; and his Sons-in-Law having undertaken for him, he was ſet at liberty, and placed in the Front of the Army: Where, ſays Buchanan, he behaved himſelf with ſo much Bravery, that he not only merited Pardon, but a Reward. The King having been ſucceſsful in the War, ſpent the next Winter in ſetling the Kingdom, took Berwick the Spring following, and then convened the States at Aire; where, by the Suffrages of all the Orders, the Kingdom was confirmed to him. And becauſe he had but one Daughter, the States remembring their ſtill bleeding Wounds by the Diſputes about the Succeſſion, made a Decree, That if the King left no Iſſue Male, his Brother Edward, and his Iſſue Male, ſhould ſucceed: But if his Iſſue Male ſhould fail, then the Crown ſhould devolve upon Mary, Daughter to King Robert, and her Poſterity; with this Condition, That the Nobility ſhould chuſe her a Husband fit for her Royal Eſtate, and the Succeſſion of the Crown. And they alſo decreed, That in the King's Minority, Thomas Randolph; and if he ſhould miſcarry, James Douglas ſhould be Tutors to the King. Bruce's Fame being great, by his Military Exploits, the Iriſh ſent Embaſſadors to him, to put themſelves and their Kingdom under his Protection; and if his Domeſtick Affairs would not permit him to take the Title of King himſelf, that he would ſend over his Brother to do it, that that Nation, allied to him, might no longer be under the Servitude of the Engliſh. They wrote to the ſame effect to the Pope, who, by his Miſſives, adviſed the Engliſh to forbear their oppreſſing the Iriſh, but in vain. So that Edward Bruce went thither with a great Army, and was made King by ſome of the Iriſh Nobility: But engaging the Army ſent from England with an unequal number, leſt his Brother, who was within a Day's March of him, ſhould obſcure his Glory, and have the Honour of the Victory, he was defeated and killed. The Engliſh, in the mean time, underſtanding that Robert was in Ireland with the Flower of his Army, invaded Scotland by Sea and Land; but Douglas defeated them thrice on the Borders, killing moſt of their Commanders. And Biſhop Sinclare, of Dunkel, repulſed them when they landed in Fife. For which the King, after his Return, called him always His Biſhop. Next year, Edward II. of England, raiſed a great Army, and beſieged Berwick; and at the ſame time Thomas Randolph paſſed the Solway, and invaded England, deſtroying the Country as far as York. Whereupon the Archbiſhop of that City raiſed an Army, and marching againſt him with more Courage than Conduct, was totally routed, and ſo many Prieſts ſlain, that the Engliſh call'd it thence, The White Battle. This obliged Edward to raiſe the Siege, and the Scots withdrew. Whereupon enſued a Truce, both Kings being rather tired with War, than deſirous of a Peace. During this Calm, King Robert called a Convention of States; and becauſe the Calamities of the War had confounded the Right of Mens Poſſeſſions, he commanded every one to produce the Right by which they held their Eſtates. This was equally diſpleaſing to the old Poſſeſſors, who had loſt their Evidences during the War, and the new ones, who had acquired theirs by the Price of their Blood. So that they agreed, that upon the King's ordering them to produce their Titles in Parliament, every Man ſhould draw his Sword, and cry out, That they carried their Titles in their Right Hand. Which being accordingly done, the King was amazed at ſuch an unuſual Spectacle, but put up the matter at preſent, till he had an opportunity of Reſentment, which happen'd very quickly after; for the chief of the Conſpirators dreading his Majeſty's Revenge for ſuch an Affront, conſpired to deliver up the Kingdom to the Engliſh; which being proved againſt them, they were condemned in a Convention at Perth, and put to death; David Brechin, the King's own Nephew, being one of them, though the gallanteſt Young Man of his Age, having acquired much Honour by his Valour in the Holy-Land. About this time the Pope's Legates came to compoſe the Differences betwixt the Kingdoms; but not being able to effect it, did Excommunicate the Scots. However, Bruce deſpiſing the Pope's Curſes, followed the Legates at the heels, deſtroying the North of England with Fire and Sword as far as Stanmore Croſs. To revenge which, Edward levied ſo great an Army, that he promiſed himſelf an undoubted Victory. But Bruce having removed all Proviſions out of his way, he was obliged to retire in a little time, deſtroying the Country as he went, and ſparing no Place ſacred nor prophane. Whereupon Bruce followed him as far as York, and ſurpriſing him at Biland, not far from Malton in Yorkſhire, put him to flight, took all his Baggage, Money and Furniture, and very narrowly miſs'd his Perſon. Next year the Scots ſent an Embaſſador to procure Abſolution from the Pope, and another to renew their League with France, both which were granted; the Pope (as Buchanan relates it) being convinced by the Records of his Predeceſſors, who had determined in favour of the Scots, that the Engliſh had nothing to defend their Claim of Superiority, but old Fables, and late Injuries. And one Article was added to the League with France, viz. That any future Controverſie about the Succeſſion to the Crown of Scotland, ſhould be determined by the Council of the States, and the French ſhould ſupport him who had the Suffrage of the ſaid Council by their Authority and Arms. Edward II. being dead, and Bruce being old, he took care to ſettle the Succeſſion, by an Act of the States, upon his young Son David and his Iſſue; and that failing, upon Robert Stuart, his Grand-child by his Daughter; and took an Oath of the States for performance of this Decree. And to leave all in quiet, he ſent James Douglas to Baliol, then in France, with Gifts and Promiſes, to make him reſign his Pretenſions; which being extremely old, he eaſily conſented to, confeſſing that he was deſervedly deprived of his Kingdom, and very willing that his Kinſman Robert ſhould enjoy it, who by his Valour and Succeſs had reſtored its ancient Honour. This happen'd in 1327. That ſame year, Edward III. ſent Embaſſadors to treat of a Peace; who having acted fraudulently, ſay the Scots, carried home War. Which Bruce being unable to manage in Perſon, becauſe of his Age and Infirmity, he ſent Thomas Randolph and James Douglaſs with 20000 Light-Horſe, without any Foot, to invade England, haraſs the Country, and not fight, but when they found an Advantage. King Edward rais'd above 60000 Men againſt them. The Scots paſſed Tine, deſtroyed the Country about Durham; and the Engliſh perceiving by the Fires from the Hills where they were, made towards them; but wearied themſelves, and were not able to keep pace with them. Then the Nobles came about the King, and deliberated how to bring the Scots to a Battle, and reſolved to hinder their re-paſſing the Tine; but were mightily incommoded in their March, by the badneſs of the Ways, Rain, and want of Proviſions; nor could they have any certain Account where the Scots were, till they ſent out Scouts, one of which being taken by the Scots, was by them informed, that they had been as uncertain of them for eight days paſt; and bid him tell the King, that they were within three miles of him, as deſirous to fight as he, and would wait for him in that Place. Upon which he advanced, but would not attack the Scots, becauſe of their advantageous Poſt, and therefore ſent a Herauld, adviſing them to come and try their Valour in the Plain. To which they anſwered, That they would not be taught by an Enemy how to fight. Some Skirmiſhes paſs'd, and after three days the Scots removed, and encamped in a more advantageous Place. Where having ſtaid ſome days, and obſerved the Engliſh to be ſomewhat negligent in their Watch, Douglas, with 200 of his beſt Horſe, entred their Camp by Night, cut the Cords of the King's Tent, and finding the Army alarm'd, retired, but kill'd 300 Men. After which the Engliſh kept better Guard. Having taken a Scotchman Priſoner afterwards, he inform'd them, that the Army had Orders to follow Douglas. About the third Watch of the Night they doubled their Guards at the Fords of the River, and ſtood all night in Arms;

in Arms; but next morning two Scotch Trumpeters were brought to the King, to tell him that the Scots were commanded to return home, and if he had a mind for Revenge, he muſt follow them. And ſending to view the Scots Camp, he found they were gone, having left five hundred Stags killed, &c. behind them. And then, by Advice of a Council of War, he returned with his Army. In March following, the Engliſh ſent Embaſſadors to treat of a Perpetual Peace, which ended in a three years Truce. Next year, being 1328, in a Parliament held at Northampton, the Engliſh agreed to a Peace with the Scots, on theſe Terms, viz. “ That they ſhould renounce all Right “ which they or their Anceſtors pretended to the Crown of “ Scotland, and ſhould leave it as free as they found it at the “ death of Alexander III. and faithfully return all Pacts, “ Bonds, Writings, or any other Monuments of Subjection “ obtained by Fraud or Force, and diſanul them for the future. “ And that the Scots ſhould ſurrender all the Lands which they “ held as Feudatories in England. And that Northumberland and “ Cumberland, as far as Stanmore, ſhould be Boundaries to the “ Scots. That David, their King's Son, ſhould marry Joan “ the King of England's Siſter, and pay him 30000 Marks for “ the Damages they had lately done to his Kingdom, and “ for the Lands which his Father and Grand-father had given “ to their Favourites in Scotland.” The King of England did the more eaſily conſent to this Peace, becauſe he was afraid of Inteſtine Diviſions; and the King of Scotland, becauſe he was rendred uncapable of the Adminiſtration, being fallen into a Leproſie, and of a great Age. So that Randolph and Douglas governed all in his Name, and he lived like a private Man. Finding his Death to approach, he called for his Nobles, commended his Son and Grandſon to them, Concord among themſelves, and Loyalty to their Prince; aſſuring them, That if they obſerved this, they would be unconquerable. He alſo gave them three other Advices: 1. That they ſhould never make one Man Lord of all the Weſtern Iſlands, leſt being diſguſted, he might join with the Publick Enemy. 2. That they ſhould never hazard all their Force in one Battle againſt the Engliſh, becauſe they were more numerous, richer, and better provided for War. 3. That they ſhould never make a Perpetual League with the Engliſh, leſt having no other Enemy, they ſhould grow ſluggiſh, forget Arms, and be eaſily conquered by them whoſe Wars with France kept them in uſe of Arms. Then he commended it to James Douglas to carry his Heart, bury it at Jeruſalem, and aſſiſt the Chriſtians againſt the common Enemy, which he had been hindred from performing himſelf. See Douglas and Bruce. Having thus ſetled his Affairs, he died July 9th. 1329. in the 24th. year of his Reign; being ſuch an Heroick Prince, that he is ſcarcely to be parallelled by Antiquity; Valiant in War, Temperate in Peace, Meek in Proſperity, and Undaunted in Adverſity. For what Man would it not have rendred deſperate, to be defeated by his Enemies, deſerted by his Friends, have his Wife impriſoned, four valiant Brothers beheaded, his other Relations hang'd or baniſh'd, and his Kingdom and Patrimony poſſeſs'd by the greateſt Monarch and Soldier of his time: And though he was ſurrounded with all theſe Calamities at once, he never doubted of recovering his Crown, nor did any thing unbecoming a King. And when over-charged with Old-age, and a grievous Diſtemper, was ſo much Maſter of himſelf as to conſult the Peace of his Country, and Repoſe of his Poſterity. So that the People bewail'd his Death, as that of a Father as well as a King. Buchanan.

ROBERT the II$^{d.}$ the Hundredth King of Scotland, and Firſt of the Stuarts, ſucceeded David Bruce, his Uncle, and had ſome little Wars with England in the beginning of his Reign, wherein he was ſucceſsful. The Relation deliver'd by Buchanan and ſome other Scotch Hiſtorians, that this Robert II. had, before his Marriage to Euphemia Roſs, three Sons, (viz.) John, Robert, and Alexander, by Elizabeth Mure, whilſt he was Steward of Scotland, and Earl of Strathern, which Elizabeth was not his Wife till the third year after his Succeſſion to David his Uncle; that this Account is abſolutely falſe, appears from ſeveral unqueſtionable Scotiſh Records: For, Firſt, Euphemia Roſs did not die in the ſecond or third year of King Robert's Reign, as Buchanan affirms, but liv'd many years after. Secondly, John, Elizabeth Mure's Eldeſt Son, was Earl of Carrick, in the firſt year of King Robert's Reign, and not in the third. as Buchanan pretends. Thirdly, The Convention of the Eſtates of Parliament, which declar'd John, the Eldeſt Son of Robert, by Elizabeth Mure, to be his lawful Succeſſor to the Crown, was held in the firſt year of King Robert's Reign, leaving his Queen Euphemia, and not after her death, and in the third year of his Reign, as is aſſerted by Boetius and Buchanan. Fourthly, Robert, Steward of Scotland, and Earl of Strathern, long before his coming to the Crown, did, by ſeveral publick Inſtruments, own John, his Eldeſt Son by Elizabeth Mure, to be his Eldeſt Son and Heir; which John was likewiſe own'd and Recogniz'd under that Title and Relation by King David Bruce, which is another unanſwerable Proof of the Legitimacy of his Birth. Fifthly, For a further Vindication of the Line, it appears evidently upon Record, that the three Eſtates conven'd in Parliament, did immediately, upon Robert the Second's coming to the Crown, and firſt year of his Reign, own John above-mentioned as the undoubted Heir and Succeſſor to Robert: He being likewiſe acknowledged as ſuch by Queen Euphemia and all her Relations. Sixthly; 'Tis likewiſe apparent, that Elizabeth Mure was dead before the year 1364; and therefore the Suggeſtion, that her Children were advanc'd by her Marriage to the King, in the year 1373, or after Euphemia Roſs's death; I ſay, it plainly appears that this Suggeſtion is notoriouſly falſe, and that John's Right and Title is clear, beyond all controverſy and diſpute. And, Laſtly, 'Tis no leſs evident, that Elizabeth Mure, Daughter of Sir Adam Mure, was ſo far from being an obſcure Perſon, or a Concubine, that ſhe was a Perſon of Quality, and ſo nearly Related to Robert her Husband, that he was oblig'd to procure the Pope's Diſpenſation to marry her; which Diſpenſation was granted ſeveral years both before he was King, and before Euphemia Roſs's death. Vid. Several Charters granted by King Robert II. and King Robert III. as likewiſe a Record in Parliament, mention'd in A Vindication of Robert III. King of Scotland, by George Viſcount of Tarbat, &c. printed at Edenburgh in 1695. At the Sollicitation of Charles V. of France he invaded England, and took Berwick and Perith; and defeated 15000 Engliſh, who invaded Scotland under General Talbot. The Duke of Lancaſter, in Revenge, waſted the next Counties to England, as far as Edinburgh, but loſt a great part of his Fleet by Tempeſts; and his Men being forced aboard, many of them were drowned in the haſty Flight. A Truce being agreed betwixt the Engliſh and French ſoon after, wherein the Scots were comprehended; the Engliſh invaded them before the Publication, waſting the Lands of the Douglaſſes and Lindſeys; and they deſtroyed Northumberland as far as Newcaſtle, to revenge themſelves on the Lord Piercy. The Truce being ended, the Scots invaded England; whereupon Richard II. invaded Scotland with 60000 Foot, and 8000 Horſe, carrying Proviſions in his Navy. The Scots, not having Force enough to fight him, invaded England again, to divert him. So both Armies having deſtroyed their Enemies Country, returned home. William Douglas did after this invade Ireland, take Dundalk; and having burnt and plunder'd the ſame, returned. The Scots, not thinking themſelves ſufficiently revenged, deſigned to invade England again: But knowing the King to be of a peaceable Inclination. and his eldeſt Son unfit for War, they made Application to Robert Earl of Fife, the ſecond, and levied 30000 Men privately for the Expedition, but not ſo ſecretly but the Engliſh had notice of it by their Spies, one of whom being taken in the Scotiſh Camp, diſcovered the Deſigns of the Engliſh; and the Scots divided their Army into two parts, the greateſt commanded by the King's two Sons, marched towards Carliſle: And Douglas with 300 Horſe and 2000 Foot entred Northumberland. The great Army carried all before them without oppoſition; but Douglas, having waſted the Country as far as Durham, came before Newcaſtle, and threatned them with a Siege. He ſtaid before the Town two days, which were ſpent in Skirmiſhes; and at laſt the Generals, Douglas and Piercy, agreed upon a Perſonal Rencounter, wherein Piercy (as Buchanan relates) was diſmounted and diſarm'd; but his Men coming to his Reſcue, Douglas carried off his Spear, telling him aloud, That he would carry it with him into Scotland; and Piercy anſwer'd, That he ſhould not. In the mean time Douglas marched off with his Men, not thinking it ſafe to ſtay near a City well peopled, and full of Enemies, but attack'd a neighbouring Caſtle called Otterburn. The other Commanders were for joining the great Army e're they fought, but Douglas reſolved to ſtay there and anſwer Piercy's Challenge; who marching againſt him with 10000 Men, had well nigh ſurpriz'd him at Supper: But the Alarm being given, and the Scots advantageouſly poſted, the Battle began with great Vigour; Piercy fighting to redeem, and Douglas to maintain his Honour. So the Fight continued till late at night, that the Moon being over-clouded, they ceaſed a while. At next On-ſet the Scots loſt Ground; but by the Valour of their Leaders, did quickly recover it: And Douglas falling in amongſt the thick of his Enemies, with two of his Friends, made a terrible ſlaughter; but e're his Men could come up, he had received three mortal Wounds, and was laid down on the Ground, a Prieſt defending him valiantly from any farther hurt. The Nobles coming up, ask'd him, How he did? To which he anſwer'd, Very well; That he was dying in the Field of Honour, as moſt of his Anceſtors had done, and had only three things to deſire of them; Firſt, That they would conceal his Death till the Battle was over. Secondly, That they would not ſuffer his Standard to be taken down. Thirdly, (an Expreſſion much to his diſadvantage) That they ſhould Revenge his Death. Whereupon they cover'd his Body with a Cloak, diſplay'd his Banner, and cry'd out, A Douglas! A Douglas! At which his Friends making a deſperate Charge, they beat (as the Scotiſh Hiſtory goes on) the Enemy back, took Henry Piercy their General, and put the reſt to flight. Henry Piercy junior being alſo taken and defeated by the other Wing. The Engliſh were totally routed, 1840 ſlain; 1000 wounded, and 1040 taken Priſoners. Of the Scots 100 fell, and 200 were taken, as purſuing a much greater number of the Engliſh. The Biſhop of Durham was on his March with 10000 Men, to aſſiſt Piercy; but hearing of the Defeat, returned to Newcaſtle, and adviſing with his Friends, reſolved to attack the Scots, while weary and wounded. The Earl of Murray, who was General after Douglas's death, having notice of it, called a Council of War. Their greateſt Difficulty was, how to diſpoſe of the Priſoners; to kill them was inhumane; and to ſave them, being almoſt equal to themſelves in number, was dangerous; and therefore having ſworn them not to ſtir, they left them in the Camp under a ſmall Guard, with Orders to cut them oſt, if they began to move. The Scots being encouraged by their late Victory, poſted themſelves ſo as that they could not be attacked but in Front; and ordered every man to take a Horn and blow on the Enemies approach, which being reſounded by the echoing Hills, made ſuch a terrible Noiſe, that the Biſhop believing them to be re-inforced, and his Men being frightened at the Sight of their own Slain and the bold Advance of the Scots, retired without Fighting. This Blaſt being over, the Scots carried off the Piercies, with four hundred Priſoners of Note; diſmiſſed the reſt; took Douglas's Corps, with thoſe of other great Men, along with them, and buried them at Melroſſe. His Standard is at this day kept in the Houſe of Sir William Douglas of Cavers in the County of Roxburgh, that Family being hereditary Sheriffs of that County, and his lineal Deſcendants. This Victory was obtained July 21. An. 1338. But the Loſs of Douglas was ſo laid to Heart, that both the Scots Armies returned home as melancholy as if they had been Conquered. Next year Archibald, Earl of Douglas, made an Inroad into England, and returned with great Booty. Not long after, by the Pope's mediation a Truce was concluded betwixt the French and Engliſh, wherein the Allies were to be included on both Sides. King Robert of Scotland aſſented to the ſame; King Robert died April 19. 1390. in the nineteenth year of his Reign. Buchan.

ROBERT III. the 101ſt King of Scotland, ſucceeded Robert the IId. His firſt name was John, but that name being hateful to the Scots on account of John Baliol, he chang'd it to Robert. He carried the name of King, but being an unactive Man, his Brother Robert had the charge of the Government. In the beginning of his Reign the Highland Clans fell at ſuch variance one with another, eſpecially the Clan Chattan, and Clan Cameron, that the Courtiers, to put an end to the Cruelties on both ſides, perſwaded them to fight it out with an equal number, and that the Conquerors ſhould have a Pardon, and the Conquered the reſpect of the King and the Nobles; whereupon 30, ſome ſay 300 of a ſide met on an Iſland in the River Tay, before Perth; but one of the number having abſconded for fear, none of the reſt would ſuffer himſelf to be laid aſide on his account; whereupon an ordinary Tradeſman offers himſelf in place of him who had run, for a Reward; and by his Valour, eſpecially, the Party that he eſpouſed obtain'd the Victory after a bloody and barbarous fight, ten being only left of the Conquering ſide, and but one of the other; ſo that both Parties were at Peace for many years after. This happened in 1396. King Robert was the firſt who created Dukes in Scotland, and his Brother, the Vice-Roy was made Duke of Albany; but Douglas diſdained and refuſed this new Title. A War happened afterwards with England, by an affront given to George Earl of March, whoſe Daughter was to have been Married to the King's Son, but it was prevented by Douglas, who objected, That the Prince ought not to be match'd without conſent of the States, and ſo carried it for his own Daughter; whereupon the Earl of March took part with the Engliſh, who invaded the Kingdom, and beſieged the Caſtle of Edinburgh with the Heir of the Crown in it, and by his Uncle, the Governours ſlow March to relieve it, it appear'd that he wiſh'd him out of the way, to make room for his own Iſſue; but the Engliſh returning without effecting it, the Scots invaded Northumberland, and were ſurprized and defeated, returning with the Spoil; whereupon Archibald Douglas Levy'd 10000 Men, but was defeated, himſelf taken Priſoner, and many of the Nobles ſlain by Henry Piercy of Northumberland, and George Earl of March above-mention'd, May 7. 1401. In the mean time all things went to wrack in Scotland by the Tyranny of the Governour, who ſtarv'd his Nephew, the Prince, to death; ſo that the King was obliged to ſend James, afterwards James I. his remaining Son, into France to preſerve him, having writ a lamentable Letter to all the Princes bordering upon the Ocean, beſeeching them to treat him gently if he ſhould be driven upon their Coaſts; but Landing at Flamborough in Yorkſhire, he was detained Priſoner by the Engliſh, which broke his Father's Heart, ſo that he died April 1. 1406, and the Government was ſettled upon his Brother by the States, during whoſe Adminiſtration the Engliſh invaded Scotland, and waſted the Southern Counties. In 1411 Donald of the Iſles rebell'd, and was fought at Harlaw in the North by Alexander the Governour's Brother, in which Battle there fell more Nobles than ever there did in any fight againſt a Foreign Enemy; and the Succeſs was ſo dubious, that each Party claim'd the Victory. Much about this time the Univerſity of St. Andrews was firſt erected, and the Scots Clergy adhered to Martin the Vth. according to the deciſion of the Council of Conſtance againſt Peter de Luna the Antipope. In 1419 Auxiliaries were ſent to France under the Earl of Buchan, who defeated the Duke of Clarence the King of England's Brother, for which the Earl of Buchan was made Lord High Conſtable of France. Robert the Governour of Scotland died in 1420, and his Son Murdo ſucceeded, during whoſe Regency more Auxiliaries were ſent to France, and Douglas was created Duke of Turein in that Kingdom; but they were twice defeated by the Engliſh, under the Conduct of John Duke of Bedford, who carried James I. King of Scotland with him, being ſtill Priſoner ſince his arrival at Flamborough as aforeſaid; who being prevailed upon to forbid his Subjects to fight againſt that Army where he was in perſon; they anſwered, That they did not acknowledge him for their King while he was in the power of his Enemy: But not long after, Murdo the Governour being diſpleaſed with the Inſolence of his own Sons, who would not obey him, told them, That he would ſend for one whom he and they both ſhould be oblig'd to obey; and accordingly King James I. was Ranſomed and brought home in 1423. Buchanan.

ROBERT, firſt Abbot of Chaize-Dieu, in the Dioceſs of Clermont, was the firſt Canon of the Church of St. Julian in the City of Brioude. After having made a Journey into Rome, he retired, together with two converted Soldiers, called Stephen and Dalmacus into a Solitary Place, where he found an old Building of a ruined Church, the number of theſe Hermits being much augmented, and the Devotion of others offering them a Maintenance. Robert, by the Conſent of the Biſhop of Clermont, cauſed a Monaſtery to be built hard by, which was called la Caſe, or la Chaize Dieu. The Biſhop made Application to Pope Leo IXth. to obtain his Approbation, and deſired K. Henry I. to ratifie ſome Gifts made to his Monaſtery. Both the one and the other being returned, they performed the Ceremonies of the Dedication of the Church. Then Robert received the Habit at the hands of the Biſhop, and took upon him the Government of the Brethren according to the Pope's Order. In a little time there came above three hundred Monks into his Monaſtery, and found the means to repair almoſt fifty Churches which had been ruined during the Wars. He died in 1067, or 1068. Bollandus, Baronius.

ROBERT, King of France, ſurnamed The Saint, The Devout and The Wiſe, was the Son of Hugh Capet. In 988 he was crowned King at Orleans, in the life time of his Father, who ſucceeded him not till 997. He had married Berta, his Couſin, the Daughter of Conrad, King of Burgundy, and of Maud of France, whom having divorced by the Sentence of Pope Gregory Vth. he married Conſtance, ſurnamed Blanche, Daughter of William Count of Arles and Provence. The lofty and violent Humour of this Woman would have overturned the Kingdom, had not the Prince's Wiſdom prevented the ſpreading of the Diſorder. Eudes, Count of Champeign plotting to moleſt him, was very quickly puniſhed for his Temerity. Otho William, Count of Outre-Sône, or the Upper-Burgundy, thinking to invade the Dutchy of Burgundy, which fell to Robert by the Death of Duke Henry, his Uncle on the Father's ſide, he beat and expelled him with his Party, and at the ſame time Sens was ſeized upon, and taken from Renard, Count of that City, for his ill Treatment of his Archbiſhop, whom the King protected. And thus having quitted his Dominions, his inclinations for Learning and Piety began to appear, giving countenance to Men of Letters, and aſſiſting the devotion of the People, by building a great many magnificent Churches. He cauſed Hugh, his eldeſt Son, to be crowned at the Age of eighteen years at Champeign in 1016, for the ſecuring the Succeſſion in his Family; but this young Prince dying at the Age of 28 in 1026, he advanced Henry his younger Brother into his place, in ſpight of all the Artifices uſed by the Queen his Wife, who forgot nothing that might contribute to the preferring his youngeſt Brother before him, to wit, Robert, who was Duke of Burgundy. This good King died at Melun, the 20th. of July, in 1031, or 32, according to others, aged 60 years; after he had Reigned 33 years, nine months, and four days, after the death of his Father. He was buried at St. Denys. Vezelai. Glaber. Hiſt.

ROBERT I. of that Name, called The Strong, Duke and Marqueſs of France, and Abbot of St. Martin de Tours, is one of the Anceſtors of the Kings of France of the third Race, deſcended from Childebrand, the Son of Pepin the Groſs. Childebrand left Nebelong behind him, the Father of Thiebert, or Theodebert, who was the Father of Robert, who by his Courage and great Actions came to merit the Name of Strong. In 861 King Charles the Bald gave him the Dutchy, that is, the Government between the Seyne and the Loire, for to preſerve it againſt the Enemies of the State. He was the Support of the Church, and the Bulwark of his Country, courageouſly oppoſing the Infidels; ſo that he was called the Macchabee of his time. In 862 he took twelve Norman Ships which came up the River Loire, and killed thoſe that were on board of them. Some time after he beat the Britons, who had fallen into Anjou; but at laſt loſt his Life, in fighting againſt the Normans at Briſerte upon the Maine; others ſay at Anjou, in 866, according to the Annals of St. Bertin; or 867, according to thoſe of Mets and Fuldes. Mezerai. Sante Marthe.

ROBERT II. was the Son of Robert the Strong, and Brother of Eudes, who was proclaimed King of France, and who left the Crown to King Charles the Simple. A Favourite named Haganon, abuſing the ſimplicity of this Prince, drew upon him the publick hatred of the Nobility, who reſolved in 920, to dethrone him. Robert, who contented himſelf before with the Quality of D. of France, Count of Poictiers, and Marqueſs of Orleans, was the chief of a Party of Malecontents; and pretending to have a right to ſucceed his Brother Eudes, he cauſed himſelf to be proclaimed King of France in 922. He was Crowned the 29th of June by Heriveus or Harveus, Archbiſhop of Reims, who died three days after. In the mean time Robert put himſelf at the Head of a potent Army. Charles had another who gave him Battle on the River of Aiſne, near unto Soiſſons, and killed him himſelf according to the relation of ſome Authors, which happened on the 15th day of June, 923. Robert had married Beatrix, of Vermandois, the Daughter of Herbert I. He had by her Hugh the Great, Father of Hugh Capet, and Emma, married to Raoul, or Ralph, who was crowned King of France after the death of this Robert. Flodoard in Chron. Dupleix.

ROBERT of France, the firſt of that Name, Duke of Burgundy, was the Son of King Robert and Conſtance of Provence. This Princeſs, who loved him tenderly, would have preferred him before Henry his Elder Brother, but ſhe could not compaſs her Deſign. Robert contented himſelf with Burgundy; he had a great ſhare in the Affairs of his time. Robert had alſo a great Difference with Renard I. Count of Nevers, his Brother-in-law, about the Limits of the Earldom of Auxerre, and killed his Brother-in-law with his own hands. He died by a ſhameful and ſudden Accident in the Church of Floeri, upon the Ouſche, in the Dioceſs of Langres, in 1075. Du Cheſne.

ROBERT of France, Count of Dreux, Perche and Braine, Lord of Frere, in Tardenois, of Pouterai, Neſſe, Longneville, Quincy, Savigni, Forci, Brie-Comte-Robert, Chilli, Lonjumeau and Baudemont, was ſurnamed The Great. He was the fifth Son of King Lewis the Groſs. He took a Voyage beyond Sea, for the Relief of the Holy-Land in 1147, and after his Return aſſiſted King Lewis the Young, his Brother, in his War againſt the Engliſh, in 1158. He died very Aged, in 1188. Du Cheſne.

ROBERT II. ſurnamed The Young, Count of Dreux, Braine and Nevers, Maſter of Frere in the Tardenois, &c. Founded in 1115, the Priory of Fermincourt, of the Order of St. Auguſtin. He was at the Siege and taking of Acre in 1191, and after his Return ſerved King Philip the Auguſt, his Couſin, in his Wars againſt the Engliſh, at the Siege of Roan in 1204, at the Fight of Bovines in 1214, and elſewhere. He alſo carried Succours to Simon, Count of Montfort in Languedoc, againſt the Albigenſes; and died the 28th. of December, in 1218, or 19, according to Alberick.

ROBERT III. Count of Dreux and Braine, Sieur of St. Valeri, Gamaches, &c. was ſurnamed Gaſteble by William le Breton. King Philip the Auguſt Knighted him in 1209. He defended the City of Nantes againſt John, King of England, and fell into an Ambuſcade, by which means he came into the hands of his Enemies, and continued ſo 'till 1214. When after the Battle of Bovines he was exchanged for the Earl of Saliſbury. Afterwards he accompanied Prince Lewis in his Voyage into England, was at the Battle of Avignon in 1226, and died in 1233.

ROBERT II. Count of Artois, ſurnamed The Good and The Noble, was Knighted by St. Lewis, whom he followed into Africa. Afterwards King Philip the Bold ſent him againſt the Rebels of Navarre. He was made Regent of the Kingdom of Naples during the Impriſonment of Charles II. and he defeated the Arragonians at Sea. He got alſo great advantage over the Flemmings, near unto Furnes, in 1297. In acknowledgment of which the King made him a Peer of France. Afterwards endeavouring to force the Flemmings near Courtray, he loſt the Battle, and was killed there, having received thirty Wounds, in 1302, Aged 54.

ROBERT of France, Earl of Clermont, in Beauvoiſis, and Head or firſt Anceſtor of the Royal Branch of Bourbon, was the ſixth Son of King St. Lewis and Margaret of Provence. He was a Prince much eſteemed for his Piety, and the ſweetneſs of his Temper, and had a conſiderable ſhare in the Publick Affairs in his time. He Married Beatrix of Burgundy, Daughter to John of Burgundy, and Agnes Heireſs of Bourbon, by whom he had ſeveral Children, Lewis the firſt Duke of Bourbon being his Eldeſt Son. This Prince Robert died in February, 1318, and was buried at Paris. Peter Mathew Hiſt. de St. Lewis. St. Marthe Hiſt. Geneal. de France.

ROBERT of Courtenay, Emperor of Conſtantinople, was the Son of Peter II. and of Joland of Hainault, his ſecond Wife. He ſucceeded his Father about 1224. He went to take poſſeſſion of the Empire of Conſtantinople in 1220. It was in right of his Mother, the Siſter of Baldwin I. and of Henry of Hainault, Emperors of Conſtantinople. Robert was there Crowned in 1221. He was worſted by John Ducas, ſurnamed Vataces, Emperor of Nicæa, in the Battle of Pimarin, in 1224. It's ſaid that Robert having taken away the Wife of a certain Lord in Burgundy, this ſame Lord bore ſuch a Grudge for it, that entring into the Emperor's Palace he cut off the Ears and Noſe of this Eloper, and threw her Mother into the Sea, who was privy to this foul play. He died in Achaia, in his Return to Conſtantinople, in 1228, or 1229. His want of Courage, and Weakneſs, cauſed great Revolution in the Eaſtern Empire. Du Cange. Hiſt. Conſtantinop. Blondus. Spondan, &c.

ROBERT, Emperor of the Eaſt, ſurnamed The Little, was Prince Palatine, and Duke of Bavaria. Part of the Electors made choice of him, after the depoſing of Wenceſlaus King of Bohemia, which was in 1400. Pope Boniface IXth. approved of this Choice. He died at Oppenheim upon the Rhine in 1410. and was buried at Heidelburg, where he had founded an Univerſity.

ROBERT, ſurnamed The Wiſe and The Good, King of Naples, Jeruſalem and Sicily, Count of Provence, was the Third Son of Charles II. called The Lame. Charles II. called Charibert, King of Hungary, and Son to Charles Martel, eldeſt Brother of Robert, pretended to ſucceed his Uncle by the Right of Repreſentation, but this Affair was terminated by Pope Clement V. in favour of the Prince I ſpeak of. The Emperor Henry VIIth. created him ſome trouble, from which he ſucceſsfully freed himſelf. He made divers Journeys into Provence and Naples, where he died in the beginning of 1343, aged ſixty four, and in the thirty third of his Reign. This Prince was good, prudent, liberal and magnificent. He loved men of Learning, and Founded divers Religious Houſes. Petrarch, who had a great ſhare in his favour, made him an Epitaph. Bzovius & Sponde in Annal.

ROBERT I. Duke of Normandy, took this Name at his Baptiſm. His own Name was Rollo, or Roul, Commander of the Danes or Normans, that made Inroads into France in the ninth and tenth Centuries. In order to put a ſtop to them, King Charles The Simple allotted them a part of the ancient Neuſtria, ſince called Normandy, and Rollo married Giſla, that King's Daughter. In the mean time, having been inſtructed in the Chriſtian Religion, by Francon, Archbiſhop of Roan, he was Baptized, and called Robert, for that at that Ceremony Robert, Duke of France and Paris was Godfather to him. He died in 917, or 920.

ROBERT Guichard, Duke of Poüilla and Calabria, was a Norman. Tancrede de Haute-ville, a Lord of Normandy, having a great Family, and having but a ſmall Eſtate, ſent his two eldeſt Sons into Italy, to try their Fortune there. Theſe ſame called Fierebras and Dreux, put themſelves into the Service of Pandulfus, Lord of Capua; afterwards joyning themſelves with others, they attempted to make War upon the Saracens of Sicily. They had Succeſs in their Deſign, and ſent for their Brethren and Friends from Normandy to come to them. Robert Guichard was the moſt Illuſtrious of them. He defeated his Enemies divers times, and after many Adventures he died in 1085, aged about ſixty two years, leaving Beaumond behind him, renowned for his Wars in Palæſtine, and Roger, who had Poüilla, Puglia and Calabria for his ſhare. Andrew du Cheſne in T. Script. Norm. Baron. in Annal.

ROBERT I. of that name Count of Flanders, called the Friezlander, or of Caſſell, was the ſecond Son of Baldwin V. of Liſle, and of Alice the Daughter of Robert King of France, and Brother of Baldwin VI. ſurnamed of Mons; this laſt dying in 1070, left by Richilda of Hainault, Arnold and Baldwin: Robert was made their Tutor, and in that quality baniſhed Richilda, and put himſelf into a poſture of becoming Maſter of Flanders. Arnold III. ſurnamed The Unfortunate, aſſiſted by the Troops of King Philip I. fought the Battle of Mont-Caſſel on the 20th of February in 1071; he afterwards reconciled himſelf to the ſaid King Philip, and having overpowered his other Nephew Baldwin, he obliged him to content himſelf with Hainault, which belonged to him in right of his Mother. He married Gertruda of Saxony, and had two Sons and three Daughters by her; Robert II. was the eldeſt, he was ſurnamed The Jeruſalemite, becauſe that he undertook a Voyage beyond Sea, and was at the taking of Jeruſalem under Godfrey of Bullen; he was alſo in a Battle with King Lewis the Burly, fought againſt Thibaut Count of Champeign, where falling from his Horſe he was trampled upon and died; ſome time after, in 1111, he was buried in the Church of Sant Waſt d' Aras. Ordoric. Vitalis.

S. ROBERT, the Founder of the Ciſtercians, died in 1110.

ROBERT, Duke of Glouceſter, Natural Son to Henry I. King of England, was both a Great Soldier, and a Scholar; the fine Speeches he made to his Troops in the Civil Wars of England, were very much admir'd. He wrote likewiſe ſeveral curious Letters to the King, and to ſome Engliſh Boroughs. There's Extant of this Prince, Opuſculorum, Lib. 1. He Liv'd to 1140. in the Reign of King Stephen. Pits do Illuſt. Angl. Script.

ROBERT call'd Perſcrutator, or the Inquiſitive, was an Engliſh Dominican born at York, and liv'd in the XIVth Century, to the beginning of the Reign of Edward III. He was for his time, a great Philoſopher and Mathematician, which made ſome People count him a Magician; and 'tis poſſible he might go a little too far in ſome Curioſities. His Works are, Mirabilia Elementorum. Impreſſiones Aeris. Magia Ceremonialis. Myſteria Secretorum. Correctorium Alchymiæ. Pits de Illuſt. Angl. Script. Leland, &c.

ROBERT Archbiſhop of Roan, was the Son of Richard I. of that Name, Duke of Normandy, and was named to that Archbiſhoprick in 989, which he govern'd about 48 years. He Baptiz'd Olaus King of Norrick or Norway, whom Richard had cauſed to come to aſſiſt him in the War he had with the Britons. He had part of the Earldom of Eureux granted him, and the three Sons he had by a Concubine named Helena, to wit, Richard, Radulphus, or Ralph, and William who ſucceeded him in the Earldom; but for theſe Liberties he was Exemplarily Penitent afterwards. It was he that laid the firſt Foundation of the Cathedral Church of Roan. John Dadre.

ROBERT ſurnamed Paulin, Archbiſhop of Roan, was choſen for that Dignity, in 1207, after the death of Gautier. There was a Bull ſent to him by Pope Honorius I. about the reception of Canons: In the ſame year the Privileges of the Roman Church were diſputed, but the King's Officers for Philip the Auguſt a little before, had made himſelf Maſter of all Normandy; the King commiſſioned the Archbiſhop and Judges of the Arches to take information of the matter, which they did, and ſent his Majeſty the reſult of their Inquiry, which imported, That ſince the time of Henry and Richard, Kings of England, there had been no difference upon this Subject, and that when the Proceſſion went through the Caſtle, the Canons went to the Gate-houſe, and ſet him at liberty whom they pleaſed, provided he were not accuſed of Treaſon againſt the King's perſon: That it was very true, that when King Richard was detained a Priſoner in his return from the Holy-Land by the Archduke and the Emperor, they let out no Priſoner out of the reſpect they had for the King then in Priſon; but the year following, the King being ſet at liberty, they ſet two Priſoners free for that and the preceeding year. The King confirmed this Privilege to him. Robert engaged himſelf in the War againſt the Albigenſes, with divers other Prelates. He died in 1221, and was buried in the Abby of Mortimer, as he himſelf had ordered it before. John Dadre.

ROBERT of Arbriſſel, Founder of the Order of Fontevraud, was a Native of Arbriſſel in the Dioceſs of Rennes in Bretany; he ſtudied Theology at Paris, and after having received his Doctor's Degree he retired into Bretany, where his Preaching drew a vaſt number of People of both Sexes after him: He cauſed Cells to be built for them in the Wood of Fontevraud, three Leagues from Saumur; he afterwards ſhut up the Women apart, ſo that in 1100 this famous Monaſtery was founded and perfected. He died in 1117. This Robert has been reflected on for being too free with the Nuns of his Order. A Monk of the ſame Order, named Mainferme, hath put out an Apology for him, printed at Paris in 1684, entituled, Clypeus Naſcentis Fontebraldenſis ordinis, &c.

ROBERT du MONT, ſo called for that he was Abbot of Mont St. Michael in Normandy, was of the Houſe of Torigny. The Hiſtory of his Monaſtery affirms, he had compoſed an hundred and forty Volumes, whereof we have but ſome Hiſtorical Pieces. He died June 24. 1186. Voſſius. Poſſevin.

ROBERT, or Albert de St. Remi, a Monk of the Abby of St. Remi, or Reims. He took a Voyage to the Holy-Land, and writ The Hiſtory of the War which the French Princes undertook under Godfrey of Bullen againſt the Saracens. This Piece which begins with a Relation of what was done at the Council of Clermont, where the Author aſſiſted, ſpeaks of the taking of Jeruſalem, and ends in 1099. We have this Hiſtory in a Collection called Geſta Dei per Francos. Robert collected The Acts of the Councils, and was alive in 1120. Trithemius, Voſſius, Simler.

ROBERT CLAUD, great Arch-deacon of Chalons upon the Saone, was a Scholar of Reputation in the XVIIth. Century, and much eſteem'd by Cardinal Baronius, d'Oſſat, Bellarmine, and other great Men; the moſt conſiderable of his Writings is that laborious Collection of all the Biſhops of France, which he publiſh'd in Folio in 1626, uuder the Title of Gallia Chriſtiana; and which has ſince been conſiderably enlarg'd by St. Marthe in 1656.

ROBERT (Ivorius ſo call'd from a Town in Normandy, the Birth-place of his Grandfather) was an Engliſhman born at London. He took the Habit of a Carmelite, and Studied at Cambridge, where he was eſteem'd a Celebrated Preacher, and an Eminent Philoſopher and Divine. He was choſen Provincial of his Order for England, and died in 1392, in the Reign of King Richard II. He wrote Commentarii in Apocalypſin. Lecturæ Scripturarum. Regiſtrum Monumentorum Provinciæ, &c. Pits de Illuſt. Angl. Scriptor. Sixtus Senenſis.

ROBERT SORBON, or de Sorbonne, Founder of the College of that Name at Paris in 1252. He compoſed three Tracts, which are in the Library of the Fathers: 1. De Conſcientia, 2. De Confeſſione, 3. Iter Paradiſi. He died about the year 1271. Bellarmin, Dupleix & Mezerai.

ROBERTELLO (Francis) a Native of Udine in Friuli, was a Learned Critick in the 16th. Age. He was Profeſſor of Rhetorick and moral Philoſophy in the Univerſities of Italy, as at Luques, Piſa, Venice, Bolonia, and Padua, where he died in 1567, the 51ſt of his Age. His Treatiſe of Hiſtory was writ by him with ſuch order and exactneſs, according to Keckermannus, that it exceeds all thoſe that have been done upon that Subject. We have divers Tracts of his of the ſame Nature; as, his Commentaries upon the Greek and Latin Poets, De Republica Romana, De Nominibus Romanorum, Explicationes de Satyræ, Epigrammate, Comœdia, Salibus at Elegia, De Artificio Dicendi, De Nominibus Arborum, &c. This Author ordinarily diſputed with that paſſion that becomes not a Man of Learning. He conteſted with Alciat, Sigonius and Baptiſta Ignatius, who would have killed him once at Venice. The Germans were Favourers of him; they honoured him much after his death, and made him an Epitaph, which may be ſeen in St. Anthony's Church at Padua. Thuan.

ROBIGO, a Goddeſs to whom the Romans offered Sacrifice, to keep off the Mildew that came upon the Corn through too much Drought, which the Latins call Robigo. Varro ſaith, That it was the God Robigus which was joined with Flora. Numa Pompilius was the Author of the Feaſts called Robigalia, which they celebrated in honour of him about the Month of April. Alex. ab Alex.

ROBIL, or REBIL, a Town of Germany, in the Circle of the Lower Saxony, in the D. of Mechlenburg. It ſtands by the Lake Muritz, near the Confines of Brandenburg. Lon. 33. 8. Lat. 53. 34.

ROBIN-HOOD'S BAY in Yorkſhire North-riding, ſo called from Robin the famous Robber; and noted for the Jet and black Amber found in it.

ROBOGH, a Village in the County of Tyrone, upon the Sea-ſhore, over-againſt Scotland, in the Province of Ulſter, in Ireland, which has preſerved the memory of the Rhobogdii, an old Iriſh Clan that poſſeſs'd the Counties of Antrim, Colrain and Tyrone in this Province, from whence that Cape now called The Fair-fore-land by the Engliſh, was then called Rhobogdium, being in the County of Antrim, ſcarce 15 miles South of the neareſt ſhore of Scotland.

ROC, ſurnamed The Braſilian, was a Native of Groningen, in the States of Holland. His Relations carried him with them into Braſil, when they went to ſettle, whilſt the Hollanders were in Poſſeſſion of that Country, which they had taken from the Portugueſe in 1623; but the Portugueſe entring upon it again, Roc retired into the Antilles, which belonged to the French, and where the Hollanders drove a great Trade. It was not long before that he perfectly learned the French Tongue; but not liking well theſe Iſlands, he went from thence into Jamaica, where he quickly learn'd Engliſh, and laid a deſign of turning Pyrate. He had ſcarce made three Voyages as ſingle Companion of Fortune, when that a Company of Adventurers, that had revolted from their Captain, made choice of him for their Chief. Some few days after he took a very rich Spaniſh Ship, and afterwards continued his Piracy with good ſucceſs. But at laſt he was taken by the Spaniards, who would have put him to death, if he had not frighted the Governour of Campeſcha by a Letter which a Slave brought him. He had found a way to win this Slave, and gave him that Letter, as if it had been writ by a famous Pyrate who threatned the Governour he would come and plunder the City if he gave not Roc his Life. This Stratagem ſucceeding, he was put on board a Fleet of Galleons of the King of Spain's. As ſoon as he got into Spain he was propoſed not only to have his Liberty granted him, but alſo ſome good Employ. And pretending to accept of the ſame, he preſently ſought an opportunity to eſcape into England. He went afterwards back into Jamaica, where he ſignalized himſelf in many bold Adventures, and in the taking of divers Spaniards, for whom he had an irreconcilable Hatred. Oëxmelin.

ROCAS, or the Count of Rocas, was Regent of the Kingdom of Cyprus, while Peter I. was imployed in his Conqueſts of Egypt and Syria; but abuſing the Authority his Prince gave him, he endeavoured to make himſelf King, and debauched alſo the Queen; which obliged the King to return into Cyprus, where he cauſed this Traytor to be ſeized and tryed, in order to have him puniſhed according to the rigour of the Law. The Queen's Protection, his own Credit, and his great Riches, ſaved his Life, the corrupted Judges acquitting him, and condemning Viſconti, Steward of the King's Houſhold, his Accuſer, to perpetual Baniſhment. This Injuſtice gave way for Rocas to continue his Diſorders, and to diſturb the King's mind, who became furious, and committed a thouſand Indignities on Wives and Maidens to be revenged for the Diſhonour done him. Gratiani Hiſt. de Cypr.

ROCCA Nova, a Dutchy in the Kingdom of Naples, in the Territories of Otranto; Rocca de Mondragone, otherwiſe called Simueſſa, Rocca Romana, a Principality in the Kingdom of Naples; in the Territories of Labour, near unto Aliſi.

ROCHDALE, a Market-Town in Lancaſhire in Salford Hundred, upon the River Roche, in a Dale, from London 145 miles.

La ROCHE, in Latin Rupes, a little Town in Savoy, near the Country of Geneva. It is about five or ſix Leagues from the City of Geneva, and a little leſs from Anneci, from whence to it is a difficult way called the Borneſs or Brunds. There is a Collegiate Church in it, a College of Jeſuits, and a Nunnery. La Roche is ſituate at the foot of the Mountains, from whence there is a Deſcent into a great Plain ſtretching as far as the River of Arve, which is about a League diſtant.

ROCHE-BLOND, a Citizen of Paris, begun the Faction of Sixteen, in order to oppoſe the King's Deſigns, whom they ſaid favoured the Reformed. And to hinder the King of Navarre's ſucceeding in the Kingdom; he firſt applied himſelf to a Canon of Soiſſons, who preached at Paris, called Matthew de Launoy. Afterwards he communicated his Deſign to two ſeditious Curates, the one of St. Severin, called John Brevôt; and the other of St. Bennet, who was the famons John Boucher. Theſe drew in eight more; and thoſe twelve quickly got a good many Aſſociates, as well Eccleſiaſticks as Courtiers and Merchants. Maimbourg's Hiſt. de la Ligue.

ROCHECHOVART, the Name of an Illuſtrious Houſe deſcended from that of the Viſcounts of Limoges.

La ROCHE-EN-ARDENNE, a little Town of Luxembourgh, upon the River Urt. It is very well fortified, ſtands within twelve Leagues of Luxemburg, and nine from Liege, towards Baſtogne. La Roche has the Title of an Earldom.

ROCHEFORT, a Town and Port of France, in the Country of Aunis, at the mouth of the Charent. It was formerly but a Village; but not long ſince it has been fortified with Baſtions, and beſet with rows of Trees planted in order. There are very fine Magazines in it, and they pretend to bring the River Surgere into the Charent, and ſo make a Chanel whereby to ſupply it with Proviſions. They erect there alſo divers ſorts of Buildings, and among the reſt an Hoſpital for Seamen.

ROCHEFOUCALD, the Name of one of the moſt Noble and Ancient Families of the Kingdom of France.

ROCHEL, a City and Sea-port in France, in the Country of Aunis, with a Biſhoprick Suffragan of Bourdeaux. Latin Authors call it Rupella Santonum, or Rupella only. It hath been always a conſiderable and trading City, eſpecially ſince they began to build there ſome Houſes, to oppoſe the Deſcent of the Normans. It was ſubjected to the Engliſh by the Treaty of Bretigny, but came again under the Dominion of France. In the ſixteenth Century the Inhabitants embraced Calviniſm, and in 1567 delivered their City to thoſe of that Party during the Civil War. Henry, Duke of Anjou, Brother to King Charles IX. beſieged it in 1573, and had without doubt carried it, although defended by the brave La Noüe, had not the Embaſſadors of Poland, who brought him a Crown, made him give over the Siege. The Rochellers not being puniſh'd for their Revolt, grew hardy and obſtinate, and Triumph'd (as Morery ſpeaks) in the ſecurity of their Town. The Roman-Catholick Religion being reſtored in Bearn, by the Arms of Lewis XIIIth, and the Deſign which that Prince had of bringing the Proteſtants to a Compliance, frighted 'em very much; upon this, in 1620 they met at Rochel, and Revolted againſt their Prince; being beaten in 1622 they ſued for the King's Mercy; but relapſing afterwards into Diſobedience, the K. by the Advice of Cardinal Richelieu, beſieg'd the Town, and having intercepted any Supplies from the Sea, oblig'd (as Morery continues) the Rebels to Surrender in October 1628. After the Reduction of Rochel the King made his Entry into it on All-Saints-Day, and there eſtabliſh'd the Roman Catholick Religion, and demoliſhed the Fortifications of the Town, but yet reſerved ſome Towers for the Defence of the Port. The Entrance of this Port is a perfect Arm of the Sea which comes up to the Town, where there are two Towers, built formerly by King Charles Vth. out of the Ruins of the old Caſtle. To theſe Towers is faſtned a Chain, which locks up the Port in the night-time when 'tis lifted up. The diſtance between the two Towers is two and forty foot; and Ships of two hundred Tun can come in with the Tide. After the taking of Rochel, King Lewis XIIIth. deſigned to ſettle a Biſhop there; but that was not done, till after his death the King his Son obtained of Pope Innocent Xth. to tranſlate the Epiſcopal See of Maillezais thither in 1648. They have a Præſidial there, a Sovereign Court, for the Salt-Works of the Weſtern Parts, a Mint, &c. Its Port is much frequented. Rochel is 68 miles South of Nants, 80 North of Bourdeaux, 166 S.W. of Orleans, and 230 of Paris. Thuan. Sponde. Dupleix.

ROCHES (Catharine) of Poictiers, is often mentioned in the Writings of the Learned Men that lived in 1580. She was the Daughter of N. Fredonnet Sieur de Roches and of Madelaine Neveu. This Lady, who was much skilled in the Languages and Sciences, brought up her Daughters ſo well that they were conſidered as the Muſes of France. They compoſed divers ingenious Pieces both in Proſe and Verſe. The Manſion of theſe Illuſtrious Ladies, ſays Scævola de Sainte Marthe, was at Poictiers, an Academy of Honour, reſorted to daily by many Excellent Men, who were received with much Civility. There was ſo perfect an Union between them, and ſuch tender Friendſhip, that they ſaid, It was not in the power even of Death it ſelf to ſeparate them one from the other. This juſt Tenderneſs was the Cauſe, that though divers Men of Quality ſought Catharine de Roches in Marriage, ſhe could never be perſuaded to leave her Mother. They lived thus till 1587, when the Plague which reigned furiouſly in Poictiers, ſeized upon them both at the ſame time, and carried away thoſe two perſons on the ſame day. Sainte Marthe.

ROCHESTER, Lat. Roffa, Durobius, Dorobrevis, Rutupia, a City in the County of Kent, and a Biſhop's-See under the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, ſituate upon the River Medway, over which it has a ſtately Stone-bridge, one of the faireſt in England. This is an ancient City, conſiſting moſt of one principal Street; but it has undergone many Calamities. Firſt, in 680, when the Saxons contended amongſt themſelves for Superiority, then in the Attempts of their common Enemy the Danes, who about 884 ſailed up the River Medway, and beſieged this City ſo cloſe, that had not King Alfred haſtned to its Relief, it muſt have fallen into their hands. Secondly, In 999, when the Danes miſerably ſpoiled it. Thirdly, In the Reign of King Henry I. by Caſualty of Fire, which conſumed a great part of it, the King being then preſent with moſt of his Nobility, for the Conſecration of the Cathedral Church. Laſtly, In 1177, about the latter end of Henry the Second's Reign, when it hapened to be almoſt all buried in its Aſhes. Yet by the Bounty of King Henry IIId. it recover'd again from all theſe Calamities. Here was a Caſtle, the Arms whereof are ſtill to be ſeen. As for the Cathedral, which is the greateſt Ornament of the City, the ſame was firſt erected by Ethelbert, King of Kent, to Saint Andrew, wherein he placed a Dean and ſix Prebendaries; but being grown ruinous and decayed, it was repaired by Gundulphus a Biſhop of this See, about 1080. The Dioceſs is the leaſt in England, containing only a ſmall part of Kent, in all but 98 Pariſhes, whereof 36 are impropriate. Yet it is the moſt ancient See next to Canterbury, being erected by that Auſtin who firſt preach'd the Goſpel to the Saxons, An. 606. In the King's Books it's valued at but 358 l. 3 s. 2 d. and the Tenths of the Clergy hereof amount but to 222 l. 14 s. 6 d. But the better to ſupport the Epiſcopal Dignity, the Deanary of Weſtminſter does commonly go along with it. 'Tis obſervable that this Biſhoprick was anciently and a long time together in the immediate Patronage of the Archbiſhop of Canterbury, until under colour of free and capitular Elections the Popes had brought all Churches into their own hands. However, after this the Biſhops of Rocheſter ow'd more than ordinary obedience to their Metropolitan, and in all Solemnities were commonly their Croſs-bearers. Laſtly, This City gave firſt the Title of Viſcount to Sir Robert Carr, Knight, created Viſcount of Rocheſter by King James I. An. 1611. Afterwards it gave that of Earl to Henry Wilmot, Viſcount of Athlone in Ireland, which continuing but in two Generations; after him Laurence Hide, ſecond Son to Sir Edward Hide Earl of Clarendon, and Lord Chancellor of *England*was by King Charles II. created Earl of Rocheſter, November 29. 1682. From London 30 miles.

La ROCHE-SUR-YON, in Latin, Rupes ad Yonem, a City of France in Lower-Poictou, towards Lucon, with the Title of a Principality. It is ſituate upon the little River Yon, which afterwards joins with the Lay.

ROCHETAILLADE (John de) a famous Franciſcan Friar of the City of Avignon, whom Pope Innocent VIth. cauſed to be impriſoned, for that he ſtirred up Commotions among the People by his Prophecies. He ſaid, That Divine Juſtice would puniſh the Pride of Prelates and the Tyranny of Kings; and made uſe of ſome Paſſages out of the Revelations and the Prophets for to enforce what he would have believed. In 1346 he publiſhed a Book wherein he predicted things that aſtoniſhed the People, and menaced alſo the Kingdom of France with an entire Deſolation. And as an Invaſion of the Engliſh happened at that time, Edward having made a Deſcent into Normandy with a potent Army, they imagined that this Cordelier had had ſome Revelation from Heaven, or that he had ſome ſecret knowledge in underſtanding the Myſteries of the Apocalypſe, from whence he drew part of his Predictions. His Vade-mecum in tribulatione is printed in the Appendix of the Faſciculus Rerum Expetendarum, London, 1690. Froiſard.

ROCHFORD, a Market-Town in the County of Eſſex, the capital of its Hundred. This Place by His Majeſty King William III. has been Dignified with giving the Title of Earl to William Zuleſtein, of the Noble Family of the Naſſaws.

ROCKINGHAM, a Market Town in Northamptonſhire in Corby Hundred, upon the River Welam, giving the Title of Baron to the Right Honourable Edward Watſon, Lord Rockingham, to whom belongs the Caſtle here, formerly very ſtrong, but now ruinous. From London 62 miles.

ROCKLY, in Wiltſhire, a ſmall Village, ſo called from divers Stones like Rocks pitch'd up on end, amongſt which there ſometimes breaks forth a violent Stream of Water, which is reputed the Fore-runner of a Dearth, and by the Country People called Hungersborn.

ROCKLEY (Catharine) of Rockley in the Weſt-Riding of Yorkſhire. This Family is very Ancient, having been ſeated at Rockley ever ſince the Reign of Henry II. The Rockleys have likewiſe Inter-marry'd with very Conſiderable Families, as the Fitz-Williams, Duckenfields, Warrens, Nevels, Fairfaxs, Wentworths, &c. In the Reign of King Charles I. ſeveral of this Family were kill'd in the Field, in his Majeſty's Service.

ROCROY, a Town of France in Champeign, upon the Frontiers of the Low-Countries. It is an important and well-fortified Place. Lewis de Bourbon, Duke of Anguien, won there the 19th. of May in the year 1643, and ſix days after the death of Lewis XIIIth. a famous Victory over the Spaniards. Don Franciſco de Melo, Governor of the Netherlands, had promiſed to himſelf great Succeſs, becauſe of the Conſternation he found France in for the Sickneſs, and afterwards the Death of the King. He laid Siege to Rocroy, where the Duke defeated him, took all his Cannon and Baggage, and above ſixty Colours, leaving near ſeven thouſand dead upon the place, and almoſt as many Priſoners. The Count of Fuenta, one of the Spaniſh Generals was killed there, ſitting in a Chair to give Orders for the Battle. This Advantage was followed by the taking of Maubeuge, Barlemont, Armeruck and Bince. Rocroy ſtands 10 miles South of Marienburg, and 29 North of Rethel. Thionville.

RODAS, the ſtrongeſt Fort in Aſia, ſeated upon a Mountain fortified with ſix Baſtions and twenty ſeven Cannons, ſurrounded with three Moats full of water and good Fiſh. The Mountain is not to be aſcended but in one Place, the reſt is Precipices covered with great Trees; at the Top is a fruitful Plain watered with 20 Springs, and producing Rice and Corn. It is about a mile and a half in compaſs. This ſtrong place belonged to the Raja of Soumelpour, but was bought by Treachery from him by Aureng-zeb, now Mogul, who keeps in it 800 Men in Garriſon. It ſtands 191 Leagues from Agra Eaſt, and 30 from Soumelpour Weſt. Tavern. part. 2. p. 139.

RODERICK, the laſt King of the Viſigoths in Spain, who in conjunction with his Brother Coſſa, raiſed a Rebellion againſt the King Vitiza, cauſed his Eyes to be pulled out, and rendred themſelves Maſters of the Kingdom in 710. They governed it with much violence. The two Sons of Vitiza, accompanied by the Count of Julian, paſſed into Africa, and ſolicited the Moors to fall upon the Dominions of Roderick. This Count complained of Violence offered his Daughter, which Authors ſpeak of very variouſly. However it was, they perſuaded them to what they deſired. The Infidels fell with their Troops upon Spain, ſubdued part of it, and in 713 the unfortunate King loſt his Crown and Life in a Battle againſt the Infidels, in the 94th. of the Hegira, and the 751ſt. of the Æra of Spain. Iſidore, Mariana.

RODERICK, Sanche d' Arevalo, Biſhop of Valencia, was very much eſteem'd for his Learning about the middle of the XVth Century. He was Almoner to Henry IVth. King of Caſtile, and one of his Council. He wrote the Hiſtory of Spain, which is extant in the third Volume of the Collection of Authors, call'd, Hiſpania Illuſtrata. Baſſæus in Hiſt. Chron. c. 4. Voſſius de Hiſt. Lat.

RODERICK I. King of Wales, was the Son of Idwallo, Son of Cadwallader, the laſt King of the Britains, and firſt King of Wales. He lived in the eighth Century.

RODERICK II. King of Wales, ſurnamed The Great, ſucceeded his Father Mervin, Anno 843. His Kingdom, ſmall enough before, he divided amongſt his Sons; giving North-Wales to Amaraud, the eldeſt; South-Wales to Cadal, his ſecond Son; and Powiſland to Mervin, the Youngeſt; with this Proviſo, that the two younger Sons ſhould hold their Eſtates in Fee of the Kings of North-Wales, and acknowledge the Sovereignty thereof as Liege-men and Homagers. But notwithſtanding the Reſervation of the Sovereignty to the Kings of North-Wales, Roderick committed a great Solecism in point of State by this Diſmembering of his Kingdom, eſpecially at a Time when all the Kingdoms of the Saxons were reduced into one, and that one apt enough upon all occaſions to work upon the weakneſs of the neighbouring Welſh. Who, had they continued under one ſole Prince, might have preſerved their Liberty, and themſelves a Kingdom, as well as thoſe of Scotland, againſt the Power of England. But Roderick did not think what might be the Conſequence, nor his Succeſſors neither; who, following his Example, ſubdivided their ſmall Eſtates into many Parcels. Inſomuch that of the eight Tributary Kings which Rowed Edgar on the Dee, five of them were the Kings (or Princes) of Wales.

RODES (Francis) one of the Learned Juſtices of the Court of Common-Pleas, ſub Elizab. Regina; a Perſon of a moſt ancient Family, which hath now Flouriſh'd for above 500 years, in the Counties of Nottingham, Lincoln, York, and Derby ſucceſſively, being extracted from, as well as allied to many Worthy Houſes: His Lineal Anceſtor Gerard de Rodes living tem. Hen. II. whoſe Mother was Siſter to Gerbald Scald, otherwiſe call'd Gerbod de Scaud, and Gherbod de Eſcalt, or Gerbod de Eſchaud (a Fleming) to whom that King gave Clifton and Langar, &c. Principal Mannors in Com. Nottingh. (of the Demeſne of William Peverell, and forfeited by him to the Crown) as alſo diſpos'd of the Barony of Horncaſtle, in Lincolnſhire [lately beſtow'd on Ralph Fitz-Gilbert temp. Steph. which formerly belong'd to Adeliza de Conde, or (as others have it) Alicia de Cundi ſole Daughter and Heir to William de Cheney Lord of Cavenby and Glentham, in this County, Wife to Roger de Cundi, in her Right, of Cavenby and Glentham aforeſaid,] after whoſe Death one Richard Revell had it, by the Gift of Richard I. and held it during Life; but Gerard de Rodes (Nephew and Heir to Gherbod Scald) recover'd, by the Favour of the ſame King, all the Soke of Horncaſtle (a Seigniory of 13 Lordſhips) ſaving four Farms that Hugh, the Son of Ralph Fitz-Gilbert, and the Son of Richard Revell, (during his Fathers Occupation) had granted away; which Hugh, in the time of the Wars of King Stephen, entred upon this Barony, and alienated ſome part thereof, like as Richard Revell, before-mentioned, alſo did after him. This Gerard de Rodes, by the conſent of Hen. III. convey'd the Barony and Soke of Horn-Caſtle to Walter (le Mal-Clerk) Biſhop of Carliſle, and to his Succeſſors; having, in the firſt year of that King's Reign, obtain'd a Grant of all the Lands lying within the ſeveral Counties of York, Lincoln, Cambridge, Eſſex and Northampton, belonging to Gilbert de Gant, one of the Rebellious Barons, who adhered to Prince Lewis of France, An. 1216, then call'd in, with purpoſe to be made King; and coming to him at London, was thereupon conſtituted Earl of Lincoln. To which Gerard the two Lordſhips of Langar and Barnſton (amongſt others) were ratified by Rich. I. which King John (for whom he was Ambaſſador to Foreign Parts) likewiſe confirm'd; and theſe Eſtates continued ſome time to his Poſterity, who afterwards ſetled at Thorp, near Rotheram, Com. Ebor. and remov'd from thence (upon the Marriage of an Heireſs) to Stavely-Woodthorp in Derbiſhire, where they were ſeated ſeveral Generations; till this Francis Rodes Eſq; the Judge, Purchaſed Barlborough, (which hath ever ſince been their principal Manſion) whoſe Eldeſt Son and Heir, Sir John Rodes of Barlborough, was Knighted at the Tower of London, Mar. 15. 1603, and Father to Sir Francis Rodes of Barlborough, who received the Honour of Knighthood at Whitehall, Aug. 9. 1641. and was Created Baronet the 14th of the ſame Month, An. 17. Car. I. to whom ſucceeded another Sir Francis Rodes Baronet his Son, Father of a third Sir Francis Rodes Baronet, deceas'd, whoſe only Son and Heir Sir John Rodes of Barlborough, is the preſent Inheritor of that Dignity.

RODES (Sir Godfrey) of Great Houghton in Yorkſhire, (one of the Judge's younger Sons, but the eldeſt, by a ſecond Venter) was Knighted at Havering Com. Eſſex, July 13. 1615. and left Iſſue (among others) Sir Edward Rodes, late of Great Houghton Knight, as alſo Elizabeth Counteſs Dowager of Strafford deceaſ'd, 3d Wife to that moſt Renowned Peer, the truly Right Honourable Thomas Earl of Strafford, Viſcount Wentworth, Baron Wentworth of Wentworth-Woodhouſe, Newmarch, Overſley and Raby Baronet, and Knight of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, ſometime Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, &c.

RODEZ, near unto Aveirou, a City of France, the Capital of Rovergne, with a Biſhoprick Suffragan of Albi. It is very ancient, but is much decayed from its former Grandeur, in that it has been often ruined by the Goths, Saracens, and ſince by the French. Latin Authors call it Rutenæ and Segodunum Rutenorum. It is 36 m. S. of Orkilack, 48 W. of Mende, 74 N. E. of Tholouſe, 80 of Narbonne.

RODOGUNA, the Daughter of Phraates, King of the Parthians, ſhe was married to Demetrius Nicanor, King of Syria, whom Phraates kept Priſoner, which was the Cauſe of great Misfortunes, through the Jealouſie of Cleopatra, Wife to that Prince.

RODOLPHUS I. of that Name, Emperor, was Count of Hapsburg, which is a Caſtle between Bale and Zurick, in the Country of Argou. He was elected at Frankford, on the laſt day of September, in 1273. This unexpected Promotion was by many look'd upon as the Reward of his extraordinary Piety, concerning which, to mention no more, we ſhall Relate one Remarkable Inſtance. Being one day in the Field with a Servant, he happen'd to meet in bad way, a Pariſh Prieſt a foot, who had the Conſecrated Hoſt about him, which he was going to Adminiſter to a Sick Perſon. Rodolphus ask'd him how it came to paſs that he travel'd without a Horſe in ſuch troubleſome Roads? The Prieſt anſwer'd him, that his Poverty was the occaſion of his footing it, upon which the Earl gave him his Horſe, and follow'd him on foot to attend the bleſſed Sacrament. Pope Gregory Xth. confirmed the Choice that was made of Rodolphus, who would not go to Rome to be Crowned there, after it had been done at Aix la Chapelle. He overcame Ottocarus, King of Bohemia, and beſtowed Auſtria upon his Son Albert, from whom the Princes, his Succeſſors, have taken the Name. Rodolphus got vaſt ſums of Money from the Cities of Italy, for freeing them from the Yoke of the Empire; and died at Germenſheim, upon the way from Erford to Spire, in 1291. Serrarius.

RODOLPHUS II. was firſt King of Hungary, and afterwards crowned King of the Romans in the life-time of his Father Maximilian II. in 1575. He ſucceeded him in the Government of the Empire in 1576. The beginning of his Reign was very peaceable; but that laſted not long. The Turks, with whom he had made a Truce, carried the War into Hungary; took the ſtrong Town of Raab, raiſed the Siege of Gran, and cauſed divers other great Diſorders and Troubles. Rodolphus demanded Succour, made a League with Sigiſmund Batthori Prince of Tranſilvania, which had very pernicious effects, and ſent an Army into Hungary, which arrived not there till after the taking of Agria. He gave them Battle, wherein the Turks were defeated, but they revenged themſelves at the ſame time by cutting off divers Chriſtians, who amuſed themſelves to plunder. The Duke de Mercœur, accompanied by a great number of French, did in 1600 re-ſettle the Affairs of that Kingdom by relieving Caniſa, by the taking of Alba-Regalis, and by ſome other conſiderable Advantages, whilſt the Emperor was taken up in oppoſing the Revolt of his Brother Matthias, to whom he yielded the Kingdoms of Hungary and Bohemia. He died in 1612 of Grief, that the Electors had Demanded his leave to chuſe a Succeſſor to the Empire. Sanſovin, Sponde.

RODOLPHUS, ſurnamed The Debonnaire, and the fourteenth of thoſe who commanded in Bohemia during the Interregnum's, was Duke of Auſtria, and Son of the Emperor Albert I. Henry Prince of Carinthia, diſputed with him for the Crown, and carried it in Right of Ann his Wife, the Daughter of Wenceſlaus ſurnamed The Pious, King of Bohemia. Rodolphus was the firſt of the Houſe of Auſtria who governed that Kingdom. He had at firſt but a ſmall Court, but afterwards by his complaiſant temper, he drew all his Subjects thither. He married the ſecond time Elizabeth, Widow to Wenceſlaus the Pious, and paid out of the Eſtate the Debts of the laſt Kings, without laying new Impoſitions on his People. He was obliged to muſter his Troops againſt ſome Lords who oppoſed him, and againſt the Governour of Stratonica, and laid Siege to Horazdicum, whither he was retired. He died at that Siege, but 'tis not certain whether it was through eating too much Fruit, or through Poiſon. He reigned but one year. Jul. Solimanus.

RODOLPHUS, or Raoul, I. the Son of Conrad II. Count of Paris, eſtabliſhed a little Kingdom in the Alps, between France, Italy and Germany, about the end of the IX Century. The Wars of France, and the Misfortunes that happened after the depoſing of Charles the Groſs, put ſeveral Princes upon thoughts of ſiezing Sovereignties for themſelves. This whom I ſpeak of gave to his new Dominion the Name of Burgundy Transjurana. Arnold, who ſtood for Succeſſor and Heir to Charles the Groſs, underſtanding that Rodolphus had been Crowned by the Biſhops and Lords aſſembled at the Abbey of St. Maurice in Chablais, fell upon him with a powerful Army, but without Succeſs. For Rodolphus was ſo well fortified in thoſe unacceſſible Places, that Arnold was conſtrained to retire and leave him to enjoy his Uſurpation till 911, which was the time of his death. Paradin. Vignier.

RODOLPHUS II. the Son of the former, ſucceeded him in 911. Albert Marqueſs of Yvree, and ſome other Lords of Italy perſuaded him to come into their Country. He followed their Council, defeated Beranger, who was kill'd in 924, and reigned two or three Months after him; but he was at laſt forc'd to quit the place by Hugh King of Arles, with whom he capitulated to repaſs the Alps, and to go live peaceably in his own Eſtate. He died in 937, leaving a Son behind him called Conrad, very young. Du Cheſne. Chorier. Bouche.

RODOLPHUS III. ſurnamed the Idle, ſucceeded his Father Conrad I. in 994; his Negligence and want of Courage cauſed great diſorders in his Government, wherein divers Lords revolted. Having no Children by the two Wives he married, he ſought for an Heir that could protect him; named firſt Henry Emperor, but that Prince dying a little while after, Rodolphus confirmed his Gift to Conradus the Salick, Succeſſor of Henry. About the end of his Life he ſent him his Scepter and Crown, with the Launce of St. Maurice, and died September 6. 1032, after he had reigned 38 years. Delbene, Paradin, du Cheſne.

RODOLPHUS (Anthony) a French Gentleman born in Normandy. He ſtudied with good ſucceſs, and learnt the Hebrew Tongue at Paris under Francis Vatable, and in England at Oxford, under Paul Fagius: He afterwards engaged himſelf in the Service of Queen Elizabeth, and taught her the French Tongue. After the death of Edward VIth. going into Germany, he married Emanuel Tremelius's Wife's Daughter. He afterwards taught at Strasburg and Geneva with great applauſe. In 1563 he came to Caen, where he lived peaceably until that the Civil Wars being kindled in France, he was conſtrained to go into England two years after, to wit, in 1565, but when the Peace was made in France with the Reformed, he returned again to Caen, from whence he was obliged that ſame year to repaſs again into England; but as the Air of this Country did not agree with him he retired into the Iſle of Guernſey, where he died in 1572, aged 65. Beſides the Theſaurus of Pagninus, which he had enriched with large Notes, and his Grammar of the Hebrew Tongue, he had alſo undertaken a new Edition of the Bible in four Languages.

RODOLPHUS (Stadler) a Proteſtant, was a Native of Zurick in Swiſſerland, and a Clock-maker by profeſſion: He went firſt into the Service of the Sieur Smith the Emperor's Reſident at the Port, and accompanied him to Conſtantinople, inſomuch that he was ordinarily called Rodolphus Smith from his Maſter's Name. The Sieur Tavernier carried him from Conſtantinople to Iſpahan, where his Induſtry gained him much Credit, for that they had never ſeen before him any Clock-maker in Perſia. He made a curious ſtriking Watch of the bigneſs of a Crown piece, which the Kam de Schiras preſented the King withal, who having admired the Artifice thereof, ordered Rodolphus a Penſion of thirty Tomans, which makes about 450 Crowns of our Money, with Proviſion for himſelf, a Man, and two Horſes, commanding him to undertake ſome other piece of Clock-work. Rodolphus was obliged to be every Morning at the King's Levy for to ſet his Watch, and as he ſpoke the Turkiſh Language very well, the King took much pleaſure to converſe with him. He preſented him every day after he had finiſhed his buſineſs with a Bowl of Wine, and the King afterwards conceiv'd ſo great an affection for him, that he ſollicited him divers times, and cauſed ſome of his prime Courtiers to ſollicit him to forſake the Chriſtian Religion, and turn Mahometan. Rodolphus was often with the Embaſſadors of the Duke of Holſtein, who were at Iſpahan, and had engaged him in their Intereſts. One day returning from a Feaſt which theſe Embaſſadors had made, he found a young Perſian in his Lodging, where he kept a fair Neſtorian, which incenſed him highly; for 'tis a great Crime in Perſia to enter into a Houſe that has Women in it without the leave of the Husband; and every Man in that Country is eſteemed the Husband of the Woman he keeps without taking any notice of his being married to her. This Perſian, who loved Rodolphus's Wife, or her Siſter that was with her, made his eſcape over the Wall of the Garden; he was Brother to one of the Porters of the King's Palace, which when Rodolphus came to underſtand, he gave him warning to return thither no more; notwithſtanding, ſome days after he found him in his Lodgings again, and tied him faſt to a Tree that was in the Court, and afterwards ſhot him with a Piſtol through the Head, of which wound he died the next day: Rodolphus unconcern'd, and relying much upon the King's Favour, went according to cuſtom to the King's Levy for to ſet his Clock. The King, who was uſed to ask him what news there was in Iſpahan, was a little ſurpriz'd at the cold anſwer Rodolphus made him, that he had kill'd the Brother of one of his Porters, becauſe he had found him twice in his Lodgings after that he had forbid him, and intreated the Porter, his Brother, to admoniſh him not to hazard his life any more. The King, upon this Relation, told him he had done well, and gave him his Pardon; but Mirza-Take, who was Atemat Doulet, that is, Chief Miniſter of State, and who loved not Rodolphus for ſome time paſt, perſwaded the King that Rodolphus had miſ-repreſented the thing unto him, and repreſented to his Majeſty, That there was now a good opportunity to oblige Rodolphus to become Mahometan, ſeeing that when a Chriſtian kills a Muſſulman, there is nothing but the Chriſtian's Blood that can waſh away that Crime, or at leaſt-wiſe, he muſt embrace the Law of Mahomet. The King believing that Rodolphus was culpable, declared to him, That he muſt reſolve to turn Mahometan or die. Rodolphus generouſly anſwered, That he would never renounce the Chriſtian Religion. The King caſt him into Priſon, in order to bring him to comply, and having cauſed him to be brought into his Preſence again, made him an offer of ten thouſand Tomans, which was an hundred and fifty thouſand Crowns in value, and a Wife out of his Haram or Seraglio, with all her Jewels; but Rodolphus remained always conſtant in his Faith: At length, the King provoked to ſee him continue his Reſolutions, delivered him up, according to cuſtom, to the Brother of the deceaſed, to carry him to the Meidan, there to be executed. The Embaſſadors of Holſtein hoped from day to day to have audience, and intended to beg his Life of the King; but the Atemat-Doulet foreſeeing their deſign, retarded the Audience. Rodolphus being brought to the Meidan, the Brother of the deceaſed (to whom it belong'd, according to the Law, to do the Execution) miſs'd the firſt blow, and the Sabre falling upon one of the branches of the Palank, he gave himſelf a wound in the Leg (the Palank is an Inſtrument of Wood made of a triangular form whereon is put the Neck of the Criminal) hereupon the People made a great noiſe, and hindred the Execution. The King being advertiſed therewith, commanded he ſhould be remitted into Priſon, and a few days after cauſed him to be brought into his Preſence again. Some Lords preſs'd him very much to change his Religion, at leaſt in appearance, and the King made him then an offer of twenty thouſand Tomans, that is, above three hundred thouſand Crowns; but the Conſtancy of Rodolphus was not at all ſhaken, and the King not being able to gain him by his Promiſes, nor to intimidate him by his Threats, remitted him into the hands of the Relations of the deceaſed, who carried him to the place of Execution; and that they might not miſs their blow, they removed the Palank from him, and after Rodolphus had prayed, his head was ſtruck off. This Execution was done in 1637, Rodolphus being about eight and twenty years of age. The King ſent Orders to all the Franks, as well Religious as Secular, and to all the Armenian Clergy to go to the Meidan for to gather all his Blood, and to put his Body in a Coffin, to the end it might be carried to Zurpha, where he would have a Tomb erected for him in the Church-yard of the Armenians. The Carmelites and Capuchins write, That if he had embraced the Roman Religion before his death, they would have made no ſcruple to acknowledge him for a Martyr. His Tomb is covered with a little Dome, ſtanding upon four Pillars, which is renewed almoſt every year; for that all the Armenians come thither to ſay their Prayers, and carry always ſome pieces of the Stone away with them. The Atemat-Doulet preſented Rodolphus's Servant to the King, in order to ſupply his Maſter's

Place; but he being not expert enough in his Calling, the King threw his Watch at the Atemat-Doulet's Head, and after having reproached him bitterly, ſwore by his Throne, That he would never again ſuffer any Chriſtian to die for his Religion. In effect, ſince that time there had been great Reſpect for the Franks in Perſia, and none of them put to death, though ſome committed ſuch Actions as might have endangered their Lives. Tavernier Voyage de Perſe.

RODOSTO, a City of Romania upon the Sea of Marmora, at the mouth of the Streight of Gallipoli; it is ſituate at the end of a little Gulf, which affords it the conveniency of a very good Port. The Commerce it holds with the Merchants of Romania by the Sea of Marmora and the Black-Sea, renders it the moſt frequented of all other Towns in thoſe Parts. It is well peopled, and may contain about 15000 Perſons. There are many great Moſques in it, ſome Churches of the Greeks, and two Jewiſh Synagogues. On the Land-ſide are to he ſeen divers Gardens, but ill cultivated; yet they bear a great quantity of Cotton. Grelot Voyage de Conſtantinople.

ROGATIANUS, a Donatiſt Biſhop in the Fourth Century, who was deputed, together with Pontius and Caſſianus, two other Donatiſt Biſhops, to Julian the Apoſtate, to get the Edicts of Conſtantine, Conſtantius and Conſtans revoked; by which the Donatiſt Biſhops were deprived of their Churches Julian granted their Requeſt, and reſtor'd to 'em the Churches they had been diſpoſſeſs'd of: But Honorius renewed the Edicts of thoſe three Emperors, and revoked all that had been done by Julian in favour of the Donatiſts. Baronius.

ROGATIONS, Publick Prayers which are us'd three Days before the Feaſt of Aſcenſion. St. Mamertus, Biſhop of Vienne in Daupbiné, began the Cuſtom of theſe Devotions, in 474. 'Tis ſaid, the Deſign of 'em was, that the Earthquakes might ceaſe, and to free the People from being diſturb'd by Wolves, which at that time were very numerous, and did much miſchief in the Country, ſometimes coming even into the Towns, and devouring all they met with. Faſting, and theſe Rogation-Prayers, having remov'd this Judgment, the Devotions were annually kept on; that what ſerv'd for a Remedy for the time paſt, might be a Preſervative for the future. Afterwards the Council of Orleans, held in 511, Decreed, That theſe Rogations ſhould be practiſ'd all over France, at the ſame time they were at Vienne. Theſe Proceſſions have ſince been call'd the Little Litany, or the Gallican Litany, to diſtinguiſh it from the Great or Roman Litany introduc'd by Pope Gregory the Great. *Gregor. Turon. ROGER, Duke and Count of Apuleia and Calabria, was the Son of Robert Guiſchard, and Brother of Boemond, renowned in the Wars of Palæſtine. Their Uncle by the Father's ſide, Roger I. ſirnamed the Crooked, drove the Saracens out of Sicily, and rendred himſelf abſolute Maſter of it. He died in 1101, extremely regretted by his People, leaving two Sons behind him, to wit, Simon, and Roger II. This latter ſeiz'd upon Apuleia and Calabria, partly in the life-time, and partly after the death of his Couſin William, the Son of Roger, and Nephew of Boemond, in 1129. He was crowned King of Sicily at Palermo, and obtained the confirmation of it of the Anti-Pope Anaclet II. for taking his part. Afterwards, in 1130, he was reconciled to Pope Innocent II. made War upon the Greeks, delivered out of their hands K. Lewis VII. ſirnamed the Younger, whom they had taken Priſoner in his return from the Holy-Land, in 1129; and after he had taken much Pains, and acquired a great deal of Glory, he died in 1152. It is affirmed he had this Verſe engraven upon his Sword;

Appulus & Calaber, Siculus mihi ſervit & Afer.

to ſignifie, that he had won all theſe Provinces, and that he ow'd 'em to his own Valour. He left William I. ſirnamed the Bad, the Father of William II. call'd the Good; who dying without Children, had for his Succeſſor Tancrede the Baſtard Son of Roger. Tancrede left one Son call'd Roger, whoſe Eyes Henry II cauſed to be put out, and kept him in Priſon. Fazel. Baronius.

ROGER Prince of Antioch, the Son of Richard, received the Principality by the Laſt Will of his Couſin Tancrede, till ſuch time as Raymond II. the true Heir, ſhould be of Age, to whom he was to have reſtored it. He firſt married the Siſter of Joſſelin of Courtnay, but he would not ſurrender the Principality to Raymond. He received a mortal Wound in a Battle againſt the Infidels, and died ſome time after, leaving no Children. Hiſt. du Roïaume de Cypre.

ROGER of Bruſſels, ſo called for that he was of that City, but Vanderweyde was the Sirname of his Family. He was a famous Painter, and died in the year 1529. His chief Pieces are, the Emperor Traian at the Head of his Army, with a Woman proſtrate at his Feet, deſiring Juſtice upon a Soldier who had kill'd her Son. The ſecond, Pope Gregory the Great on his Knees before an Altar, holding the Emperor Adrian's Head. The ſubject of the third is Archambault Prince of Brabant, who lying on his Bed, holds his Nephew by the Hair, and runs a Knife into his Throat, to puniſh him for a Crime he had committed; the other part of this Picture repreſents a Biſhop near the Prince's Bed, who ſeems to conteſt with him, and refuſe him the Viaticum, becauſe he does not repent for the Murther. He has alſo curiouſly drawn the whole Hiſtory of Zeleucus, Legiſlator of the Locrians, who having made a Law to puniſh Adulterers with the loſs of their Eyes, and finding his own Son convict of the Crime, put out his own Right Eye, and his Son's Left, to manifeſt himſelf at the ſame time a ſevere Judge and a tender Father. Vaſari.

ROGER (Michael) a Jeſuit and Miſſioner in the Indies about 1575; being returned to Rome, he was ſent again in 1583, together with F. Matthew Riccius, to preach in China, where they found an acceſs to the Vice-Roy of the Province of Quantung, through the favour of the Portugueſe Embaſſador, who was then at Canton, the Capital City of that Province. They preſented the Vice-Roy with divers Curioſities which he admired, among other things, with a Clock which ſhewed every Day the courſe of the Moon as well as the Sun, and with ſome Maps of the World, which ſurprized the Vice-Roy, for that the Chineſes believed there was no other Empire but theirs. Theſe Miſſionaries, through his Favour, ſucceeded well in their Deſigns, notwithſtanding the Perſecutions of the Bonzes. Kircher de la Chine.

ROHAN, the Name of a Family in Bretany, which is one of the moſt ancient and moſt illuſtrious in the Kingdom of France.

ROHAN (Henry II.) a Proteſtant Duke of Rohan, Peer of France, Prince of Leon, Count of Porhoet, was the chief of the Proteſtants in France. He re-enter'd into the Favour of Lewis XIII. who ſent him into Swiſſerland, and among the Griſons, and afterwards made him Lieutenant-General of his Armies in Germany, where he was wounded in 1638, at the firſt Battle of Rhinſeld, and ſometime after died in the Abbey of Cuneſild in Swiſſerland. His Body was buried on the 27th. of May following in the Church of St. Peter in Geneva, where was erected for him a magnificent Marble Tomb, with this Epitaph in Golden Letters, which I have formerly taken a Copy of upon the place; it contains the moſt famous Actions of the Duke of Rohan:

D. O. M. S. Henricus Rohanij Dux inclitus, priſcorum Armoricæ Regum genuina & Maſcula Soboles, Navarræ & Scotiæ Princeps, ſummis Europæ Dynaſtis affinitate innexus, hic jacet. O Viator! noli in geſta altum inquirere, non ſunt illa Mauſolei, manent in animis hominum fama rerum, æternitate temporum. Abi contentus: Quod ſtrictim tibi ediſſero. An. Ætatis XVI. ſatis oſtenſus ſub Ambiani mœnibus obſeſſis ante Henrici Magni ora equo proſtrato cæſoque, Audax Juventa opima reportavit. Quod manes cinereſque diu teſtatur Amatos.

The Duke of Rohan was a Man indeed conſtant in his Reſolution, of quick Apprehenſion, ſolid Judgment, and heroick Courage. Before his death, he left the Arms he uſually wore to the Republick of Venice, as a mark of his Eſteem. His Memoirs are extant.

ROHAN (Peter de) Knight, Lord of Gie Verger and Ham, Count of Marle, &c. Mareſchal of France, known by the Name of Mareſchal de Gie. He was Son of Lewis of Rohan, the firſt of that Name, Sieur of Guemene, and of Mary of Montauban. He rendred himſelf conſiderable both in the Field and at Court, in the Reign of Lewis XI. who made him Mareſchal of France in 1475; and afterwards, in 1480, he was made one of the four Lords that governed the Kingdom during that King's Sickneſs at Chinon. He aſſiſted at the Coronation of King Charles VIII. in 1484, and two years after he made head againſt the Arch-Duke of Auſtria in Picardy; his Conduct defended that Province from the Inſults of the Enemy: He got alſo, in 1487, great advantage over the Duke of Guelderland and Count of Naſſau; and in 1489 the Count of Angoulême and he defended again the Frontiers of Picardy. Afterwards the Expedition of Naples being reſolved upon, the Mareſchal de Gie accompanied the King in that Conqueſt, and commanded the Van of the Army at the Battle of Fournova, and contributed much to the defeating of ſo many Princes confederated againſt the French. It was in 1495 after that he concluded a Truce with the Venetians. When King Lewis XII. came to the Crown, the Mareſchal de Gie accompanied him again into Italy, and was at the famous Entry he made into Genoua on the 26th. of Auguſt, 1502. The King honoured him with his particular Eſteem, made him Preſident of his Council, Lieutenant of Bretany, and General of his Armies in Italy: But after that, having the misfortune to diſpleaſe Queen Anne of Bretany, ſhe cauſed him to be proceeded againſt in the Parliament of Tholouſe, deprived him of his Penſions and Government, and ſuſpended him from his Charge of Mareſchal of France, being forbid to come within ten Leagues of the Court. The Mareſchal de Gie died at Paris the 22d. of April, in the year 1513. His Body was carried to the Church of St. Croix of Verger, which Church he had founded.

ROHAULT (James) a Carteſian Philoſopher, was the Son of a Merchant of Amiens; his Inclination carried him chiefly to ſtudy the Mathematicks, in which he made ſuch a great progreſs that he taught it at Paris; here he came acquainted with Monſieur Clercelier, an Advocate who render'd his Name famous by his Learning, and who hath publiſh'd divers Pieces of the illuſtrious Renatus des Cartes, ſome whereof he tranſlated out of Latin into French. This learned Man underſtanding the Genius of Rohault, engaged him to read over all the Works of Des Cartes, and to write his Reflections upon them; which gave him occaſion to compoſe the Phyſicks we have of his, and which he taught ten or a dozen years at Paris before they were publiſh'd. He died in 1675, aged 55. Memoirs du Temps.

ROMAGNA, or Romandiola, a Province of Italy in the Eccleſiaſtical State, which comprehends the greateſt part of the ancient Æmilia and Flaminia; it is between Bouloneſe, the Dutchy of Ferrara, the Country of Urbin and Tuſcany. Its cities are Ravenna, Faenza, Imola, Forli, Bertinora, Rimini, Cervia, Ceſene, Sarſina, &c. The Northern part of Romagna belongs to the Duke of Tuſcany, with the Cita de Sole, and is therefore called Romandiola Florentina. Leandr. Alberti Deſc. Ital.

ROMAN, the Country Roman, or the Country of Vaux in Swiſſerland, in the Canton of Berne, and formerly belonging to the Duke of Savoy.

ROMANIA, a Province of Europe in Turkey. (Vid. Thrace.) It muſt not be confounded with Little Romania, a Country in the Morea, about Argos.

ROMANS, a People of Italy of whom we ſhall ſpeak under the Article of Rome. But here ſomewhat muſt be ſaid of the particular Genius of their Learned Men, and of the Authors of that Nation. It ſeems the Romans had at firſt a greater diſpoſition of Mind for the exerciſing the Faculty of Commanding, than for cultivating Sciences purely ſpeculative, and good Literature; which was more the Genius of the Grecians, and of that Eaſtern People. But by the Commerce they had with the Greeks, they learn'd Philoſophy and the other Sciences They formed alſo their Eloquence upon the Models of that Nation, and if they came not up to them in Delicacy of Style, they ſurpaſſed them perhaps in the Solidity of their Conceptions. But this Glory is almoſt confined within the limits of two Ages, whereof one was the laſt of the Republick, and the other the firſt of the Monarchy, in the Reign of Cæſar and Auguſtus. It was in this interval of time that thoſe Authors appeared which we call Claſſick, or of the firſt Claſs, whoſe number is very ſmall, and conſiſts almoſt of none but Poets and Hiſtorians. We have none remaining of the Orators and Philoſophers of theſe two Ages, but Cicero; Seneca, perhaps, may be placed in the number of Roman Philoſophers, but we cannot grant him the Name of a Claſſick Author, which belongs to thoſe only who are remarkable for Purity of Style, and Propriety of Thought or good Sence. Their Hiſtorians bear greater Credit, and are leſs ſtuffed with Fictions than the Greeks; but their Vanity hath made them often come ſhort of Sincerity in ſpeaking of foreign Nations. The Romans had almoſt no inclination for the Mathematicks, and few of their Writers have ſucceeded therein.

ROMANUM, in French, Romans, a City of France in Dauphiny, ſituate upon the Iſere, between Grenoble and Valence; in it is the Collegiate-Church of St. Bernard. The Juriſdiction of this City did formerly belong to the Chapter. Pope Clement VI. gave it, in the year 1344, to the Dauphin Humber, who yielded up to him Aviſan. The ſituation and form of this City is thought to be like to the ſituation and form of that of Jeruſalem. An Eminence adjoining to its Walls perfectly reſembles Mount-Calvary. Romanetus Boſſin, who travelled into the Holy-Land, has made this Obſervation. There is in this Place a Building reſembling St. Sepulchre. King Francis I. in 1520, laid the firſt Stone of it. Boſſin founded there a Convent which he beſtowed upon the Monks of St. Francis, under the Title of the Houſe of Mount-Calvary. Thuan.

S. ROMANUS, Archbiſhop of Rohan, deſcended from the Kings of France, was named to that Archbiſhoprick in the time of King Dagobert, in 622. The Legend ſaith, That there being in his time, about the City of Rohan, a Dragon which devoured both Men and Beaſts: This Prelate went on Aſcenſion-Day into the Priſon, where finding a Priſoner condemn'd for Murther and Theft, he carried him to the place where that Dragon was, and having ſigned him with the Sign of the Croſs, he commanded him to bring him away; which he boldly executed, leading the venomous Beaſt tamely into the City, in the midſt whereof he was burned, in the preſence of all the Inhabitants. The King, after that, gave power to the Church of Rohan to ſet at liberty every year a Criminal, whatever Crime he had committed, on the ſame Day, in commemoration of ſo miraculous an Action, which is obſerved to this day with a great deal of Ceremony. There is a famous Proceſſion made, the Streets hung with Tapeſtry, and a Reſting-place prepared at the old Tower, where the Priſoner takes up the Shrine of St. Romanus, which he and a Prieſt carry to the Church of Nôtre-Dame. The Proceſſion ended, they ſing the ordinary Maſs at Five a Clock in the Evening, for that that Ceremony is generally performed after the Veſpers, and the Priſoner takes the Sacrament there. John Dadre. Chron. Hiſt. des Archev. de Roan.

ROMANUS, a Pope, was advanced to that See after Stephen VI. in 900. It's not certain whether he was elected by the Faction of the People, or by the lawful Suffrages, which is the reaſon that ſome Authors place him among the number of Anti-Popes, and others, on the contrary, among thoſe Canonically elected. He condemned the Severity of Stephen VI. and repeal'd his Acts, and died after he had reigned four months and twenty days. Onuphrius & Genebrard.

ROMANUS I. ſirnamed Lecapene, Emperor of the Eaſt, being General of the Armies of Conſtantine Porphyrogenetus, acquired much of his Favour, and perſuaded him to ſhut up his Mother Zoe in a Monaſtery; at laſt he managed his buſineſs ſo effectually, that that Prince, who was become his Son-in-law, having married his Daughter Helena, declared him firſt of all Cæſar, on September 24. 919; and afterwards Auguſtus, in the month of December following. This Advancement render'd him ſo inſolent, that he became unſupportable to every body; abuſing the youth of the Prince, he inſerted his own Name in the Publick Records before that of Conſtantine; and ſome time after cauſed his Sons to be proclaimed Cæſars, and made the youngeſt Patriarch of Conſtantinople, though he was but ſixteen years of age: But God travers'd all his temerarious Deſigns; for one of his own Sons, named Stephen, diſpoſſeſs'd and ſent him into Baniſhment, in 944; and diſputing the Precedency with his other Brother called Conſtantine, the lawful Emperor awaking out of his Lethargy, cauſed them both to be ſeized, and baniſhed them into the Iſlands. Curopalat. Luitprand. Baronius.

ROMANUS II. ſirnamed the Young, Son of Conſtantine Porphyrogenetus, ſucceeded him on the 9th. of November, 959. It was ſaid, that it was by Parricide he got upon the Throne, as having poiſon'd his Father. He expell'd his Mother Helene and his Siſters, who were forced to proſtitute themſelves, to get wherewithal to ſubſiſt. Nicephorus Phocas, General of his Army, took Candia from the Saracens, while Romanus led an idle and debauch'd life at home; but it was not long ſo with him, he dying in 963, either by Poiſon, or rather conſumed with his continual Debaucheries. John Curopalates. Cedrenus.

ROMANUS III. ſirnamed Argyre, or Argyropilus, came to the Empire by his marrying of Zoe the Daughter of Conſtantine, and began to Reign the 9th. of November, 1028. He appeared at firſt Pious, Liberal and Magnificent, but ſome Loſſes he ſuſtained againſt the Saracens made him covetous. It's ſaid, That being a rich Banker, Conſtantine the Young made him divorce his Wife to marry Zoe, a Woman exceeding laſcivious, though very old, who becoming enamour'd on her Privy Purſe, named Michael, in order to put him upon the Throne, poiſoned Romanus; and becauſe the Poiſon was too ſlow, ſhe got him ſtrangled in a Bath, the 11th. of April, 1034, and the 46th. of his age, when he had reigned five years and ſix months. John Curopalates. Cedrenus. Baronius.

ROMANUS IV. called Diogenes, was Emperor after Conſtantine Ducas. This latter left three Sons under the Tutorage of his Wife Eudoxia, who had promiſed him not to marry again; but changing her Sentiments, ſhe married Romanus, who had been in Baniſhment, and who was crowned the 1ſt. of January, 1068. The Turks making Incurſions into the Territories of the Empire, he raiſed an Army to oppoſe them. This Deſign ſucceeded well; but afterwards receiving ſome Loſſes through the Treachery of his Subjects, he fell into the hands of Azan Captain of the Infidels, it is affirmed that he ask'd him, that if he had had the ſame good Fortune, how he would have treated him; and that Romanus confeſſed he ſhould have run him through. I will not (replied Azan) imitate that Cruelty, ſo little conformable to what Jeſus Chriſt your Prophet hath commanded you; and afterwards ſent him away with all manner of Civility. But the News of his being taken arriving at Conſtantinople, Michael the Son of Conſtantine Ducas got himſelf crowned Emperor, and ſhut up his Mother Eudoxia in a Monaſtery; in the mean time he ſeized Romanus, who being clad in Black, and mounted on a Mule, was conducted to the Emperor, who cauſed his Eyes to be plucked out. And as there was no care taken of his Wounds, his Head ſwelled extremely, and was quickly fill'd with purulent Matter, Worms and Putrefaction. This unfortunate Prince ſuffered theſe Pains with an admirable Patience, and died about the month of October, 1071, having reigned three years, eight months, and twelve days. Curopalates, Cedrenus, Baronius, &c.

ROMANUS, an illuſtrious Deacon of the Church of Cæſarea, born in Palæſtina, generouſly ſuffered Martyrdom under the Emperor Diocleſian. This holy Deacon publickly reproving the Chriſtians, who, to avoid the Fury of the Executioners, went into the Temples to worſhip their Falſe Gods, was taken and carried before the Judge, and condemned to be burned. Seeing himſelf upon the Pile, and faſtned to the Stake. and the Executioners ready, waiting the Emperor's Order to put the Fire to him; he very importunately demanded where the Fire was? The Emperor being advertiſed thereof, cauſed him to be brought before him, to condemn him to ſuffer another Puniſhment, and ordered his Tongue ſhould be cut out; which he generouſly offer'd them, and was afterwards carried into Priſon. In the twentieth year of the Reign of Diocleſian, an Edict was publiſh'd, whereby Liberty was granted to all the Chriſtians: There was none ſtrangled but he; ſo he had his Wiſh, to die a Martyr. Euſebius.

ROME. This City, which for its Magnificence, Antiquities, Greatneſs, and other Curioſities to be ſeen in it, paſſeth for one of the fineſt in the Univerſe, is ſituate upon the Tyber. Dionyſius Halicarnaſſeus relates divers opinions concerning its Founders, but it is moſt likely that Romulus built it. It had a ſecret Name which its Religion forbad to be divulged, and which, 'tis likely, was Valencia. The Emperor Commodus would have had it take the Name of Colonia Commodiana; a King of the Goths, that of Gothia; and other Princes their own Names: But that of Rome has been always continued. Romulus built it ſquare, and took in the Mounts Capitolinus and Palatinus: This was done An. Mun. 3301, in the fourth of the ſeventh Olympiad. It had four Gates, called Trigonia, Mugonia, Jandina, and Carmentalis. In proceſs of Time the City encreaſed, and took in five Mountains to the other two aforeſaid, beſides five other leſſer ones. Tarquinius Superbus began to build the Walls of good Stone, which before were only made of Mud. Their circumference, in the Reigns of the firſt Emperors, till its declenſion, was fifty miles, but now it exceeds not thirteen or fourteen at moſt. The great Mounts of Rome were Capitolinus, Palatinus, Aventinus, Cœlius, Eſquilinus, Viminalis and Quirinalis. The leſſer ones, Janiculus, Pincio, Vaticanus, Citorio, and Giordiano. There are eighteen Gates belonging to Rome; Port de Populo, formerly Flaminia; Port de Sainte Metod'a, formerly Gabioſa; la Pinciana, formerly Collatina; la Latina, anciently Ferentina; l'Agonia, formerly Quirinalis; la Port St. Sebaſtian, formerly Capenna; that of S. Agnes, anciently Viminalis; the Port de S. Paul, or d'Oſtia, called Trigemina; la Ripa, formerly Portuenſis; that of S. Laurence, anciently Eſquilina; the Port of S. Pancras, called Aurelia, or Septima; la Port Major, formerly Nevia; la Septimiana, called Fontinalis; la Port S. John, formerly Celimontana; the others are Porta Fabricia, Petuſa, Angelica, la Porta del Caſtello. The Walls are flanked with three hundred and ſixty Towers, which under the firſt Emperors have been ſeven hundred and forty. The Gate of the Holy Ghoſt, called formerly Triumphalis, leads from the Vatican to the Capitol; and this Name was given it, for that thoſe that triumphed paſſed that way: For this reaſon the Emperor Charles V. would enter Rome through that Gate where the Peaſants were not to paſs at all. The Ancients made them thirty Gates, which gave a beginning to as many great Roads paved with incredible Induſtry, not ſparing any thing that might contribute to make them laſting and convenient for Travellers. Thus the greatneſs of the Stones, the evenneſs of the moſt rough Places, the filling up of Vales, and the Marble Pillars ſet at every mile's end, are convincing Teſtimonies of its wonderful Magnificence. Theſe ancient great Roads were thus called, Via appia, Campaniana, Valeria, Caſſia, Tiburtina, Latina, Præneſtina, Laurentina, Oſtienſis, Collatina, Labicana, Cimina, Flaminia, Ardeatina, Gallicana, Tiberina, Setina, Portuenſis, Cornelia, Laticulenſis, Nomentana, Quinctia, Prætoriana, Claudia, Salaria, Æmylia, Triumphalis, and Aurelia. All along theſe great Roads are to be ſeen divers Aqueducts which ſerved to bring Water into the Baths of the City, where Perſons went to waſh and perfume themſelves, the Wood and the Oil being furniſhed by the Publick. There may alſo be ſeen the Remains of divers Tombs which have been raiſed there, for that it was forbid to bury the Dead within the City, conformable to that Law of the Twelve Tables, In Vrbe nè ſepelito, néve urito. There were formerly eight Bridges in Rome; Pons Sublicius, built by Ancus Martius, and afterwards repaired by Æmylius Lepidus. It was upon this Bridge that Horatius Cocles ſuſtained the Efforts of the Tuſcans, who endeavoured to reſtore Tarquinius Superbus to the Throne, and where Heliogabalus was thrown headlong into the Tiber. It is now ruined, as well as that whoſe Foundations may be ſeen behind the Hoſpital of the Holy Ghoſt, called Pons Triumphalis, or Vaticanus. The Bridge Saint Angelo hath been called Ælius, according to the Name of Ælius Adrianus the Emperor. The Aurelius, or Janiculenſis of the Ancients, is the Pons Sixtus now. And that of St. Bartholomew was the Ceſtius formerly. The Bridge Quadro-capi, ſo called becauſe of a Marble Stone with four ſides, is the Fabricius, or Tarpeius of the Ancients. Their Senatorius, or Palatinus, is that of St. Mary of Egypt, or Traſtavere, broken down by the Inundation of the Tyber. Pont Mole, formerly called Milvius, is without Rome, remarkable for the Victory of Conſtantine the Great over Maxentius, who was there drown'd in the Tyber. They reckon'd in Rome of old eighteen Fountains (now there are but three of principal note, la Virgina or Trivio, la Felica, and Paulina,) which furniſhed ſo great a quantity of Water, that there were but few Houſes which had not ſome ſort of Pipe in 'em. There was a vaſt number of Statues, and the Streets and Houſes were ſo full of them, that Chariots could not paſs for them in divers places; one may yet ſee the glorious Remains of them as well as of Coloſſus's Obelisks, and eſpecially Pillars, whereof that of Trajan and Anthony are admirable. Antiquaries ſpeak of about forty five Obelisks that were at Rome; there are but eight now. The Palaces there were magnificent, the Families powerful, and all things ſo well ordered, that there were divers Common-Shores made, which emptied themſelves all into one that was ſo large that a Cart-load of Hay might eaſily go into it; and, what is ſtrange, is, That the Cenſors, who cauſed them ſometimes to be drained, ſold the Filth and Excrements to the Gardiners for ſix hundred thouſand Crowns. I ſay nothing of the ancient Temples of this City; one may eaſily gueſs at their number by the many Gods the Romans worſhipped, who, according to the Remarks of Varro and ſome others, were no leſs than thirty thouſand. Romulus, the firſt King of Rome, had for Succeſſors Numa Pompilius, Tullus Hoſtilius, Ancus Martius, Tarquinius Priſcus, Servius Tullius, and Tarquinius Superbus. The Cruelty, Avarice and Inſolence of this laſt, made the Romans ſhake off this Government. The Violence which his Son Sixtus offered Lucretia, ſerved them for a Pretence in the 221ſt. year of the Foundation of Rome, which was afterwards governed by two Conſuls, who were elected every year, unleſs it was in extreme danger, and then they gave all the Authority to a Dictator. The Conſuls had under them Prætors, Tribunes, Quæſtors, Ediles, Cenſors, Præfects, and ſome other Magiſtrates. Rome governed by the Conſuls, became almoſt Sovereign of all the Univerſe. Julius Cæſar, after the Battle of Pharſalia, was declared perpetual Dictator, about the year 708, or 709, which was the firſt Julian year; and neglecting the Title of King, as odious and unſupportable to the Romans, he took that of Emperor upon him; which Title they gave to the General of an Army, after he had gain'd a Victory in which there were at leaſt 2000 of the Enemy ſlain. There ſeems to be ſomewhat of Hyperbole in what Authors tell us of the Power, Grandeur, Magnificence and Riches of the Romans. Auguſtus found them to be One million, three hundred one thouſand and thirty ſeven Perſons. And Tiberius counted them Sixteen hundred thouſand, two hundred and ninety one. To ſay nothing of the Calculation made in the time of Servius, after the Defeat of the Fabij, and at the beginning of the Punick War. Their uſual Army in the time of the Emperors, according to Appian and Plutarch, was Two hundred thouſand Foot, Forty thouſand Horſe, Three hundred Elephants, and Two thouſand Chariots: And their Maritime Force conſiſted of Fifteen hundred Gallies, from two to five Banks of Oars, and Two thouſand Frigats. They had an Hundred and ſixty Granaries, a great Arſenal, and two Places where they kept their Treaſures. And finally, Their Empire had for its Bounds, to the Eaſt, the River Euphrates; and in Trajan's time, the River Tigris, Mount Taurus, & Armenia; and to the South, Æthiopia; the Danube to the North; and the Main Ocean to the Weſt. But one may better judge of the Power of this Empire, if he make Reflection upon what Authors ſay of particular Perſons, to wit, that the Riches of the Romans were found to be ſo great, that they had above Twenty thouſand Subjects whoſe Revenues were large enough to maintain the Army of the Republick for a whole year: Lucullus was of that number; ſo that after his death there were found in his Wardrobe Five thouſand Suits of Cloaths, and Fiſh in his Fiſh-pond ſold for Thirty thouſand Seſterces. It is added, That the Romans, from the time of the Conſuls, had Seventy five thouſand Talents from Egypt; That every one of thoſe Talents amounted to Eight thouſand Crowns: ſo that the Seventy five Talents, according to our Computation, muſt be equivalent to Six hundred millions of Crowns. But to proceed: The Republick, from the time of Julius Cæſar, changed its Name into that of the Roman Empire, becauſe of the Government of the Emperors. Though it was taken by Brennus King of the Gauls, in 365, and all burnt except the Capitol, ſhook by Hannibal, rent by the domeſtick Broils under Marius and Sylla; yet it continued a freed State until Julius Cæſar, after the Battle of Pharſalia, An. Rom. 705, made himſelf to be declared perpetual Dictator and Emperor. And tho' the Civil Wars broke out again after his death, Auguſtus put an end to them by the Victory of Actium in 721, and prepar'd the World to receive the Prince of Peace by an Univerſal Peace. He was born under this Prince in 753 of Rome, and the 3950 year of the World; and Rome continued ſtill great until Conſtantine, having defeated Maxentius under its Walls, An. Chr. 312, laid the Foundation of its Ruine by removing the Seat of the Empire to Byzantium or Conſtantinople, which afterwards brought on the Diviſion into Eaſtern and Weſtern, with the many Calamities that followed it. Alaricus, An. Ch. 410, took and ſack'd Rome. Genſericus the Vandal did the like in 455, Odoacer King of the Heruli in 465, and Totila in 546. So that in the ſpace of 137 years it was a Prey four ſeveral times to Barbarians. But it was again recovered by the Eaſtern Emperors. And Narſes, General to Juſtinian in Italy, having ſlain Totila in 553, and three years after taking the Town of Capua, put an happy end to the Gothick War. The next Troubles were occaſioned by the Popes, to be revenged of the Emperors who prohibited the Worſhip of Images; and being oppreſs'd by the Lombards, who grew powerful in this Change, ſent firſt for Pepin, then for Charlemaign, to their aſſiſtance, which laſt put an end to the Kingdom of the Lombards, and made the Weſtern Empire once more conſiderable, and beſtowed ſome Territories upon the Sea of Rome. The Empire being tranſlated from the Franks to the Germans, in the Perſon of Arnulph, a Natural Son of Carloman, about 890, and a Schiſm being about this time in the Church of Rome, little was done by the Popes, till Berengarius growing potent in Italy, neceſſitated them to have recourſe to Otho I. who being crowned at Rome in 962, a Council there held in 964 acknowledged in him the ſame Right that had been in Charles the Great. Gregory VII. on this account begins a Quarrel with Henry IV. Emperor, ſets up Anti-Emperors, and excommunicates him: Whereupon that Prince thus provoked, beſieged Rome in 1081, took and burnt it in 1084; and ſoon after this turbulent Pope died in baniſhment, in great miſery. In 1242, Pope Gregory IX. having excommunicated Frederick II. Emperor, for refuſing to give the See of Sardinia to Rome, and proclaiming a Croiſade againſt him, that Prince defeated his Army, and following his blow, took Ravenna, Siena, and Faenza, with divers of the Cardinals, and reduced the See of Rome to a mean condition. Innocent IV. renews the Excommunication againſt the Emperor in 1242; whereupon aroſe the famous Factions of the Guelphs for the Pope, and the Gibelines for the Emperor, which made Italy extremely miſerable for ſome Ages, during part of which time, in 1305, Pope Clement V. removed the See to Avignon in France, where it continued to 1376, upon which aroſe a Schiſm between the Popes of Rome, and Avignon, not ended till the Council of Conſtance, which begun in 1414. In 1408, Ladiſlaus King of Naples took Rome, and levell'd its Walls. In 1494, Charles VIII. of France, in his Expedition to Naples, march'd through Rome without Reſiſtance; and in 1527 the Forces of Charles V. commanded by the Duke of Bourbon, took and ſack'd it. Philip II. beſieged it alſo, and had certainly taken it, if the Pope had not complied in 1557. Yet after all theſe Changes and Calamities, it's at this day 13 or 14 miles in compaſs, very populous, and full of magnificent Buildings, as well ancient as modern. They reckon in it above three hundred thouſand Souls, beſides eight thouſand Jews who have a particular quarter of the City to themſelves, and are obliged every Saturday to hear a Chriſtian Sermon; Houſes and Palaces twenty two thouſand, Pariſhes ninety two, forty one National Churches, ſixty four Religious Houſes for Men, above forty for Women, thirty Hoſpitals, one hundred and ſix Societies of Penitents, and divers Colleges. It hath eighteen Gates, three hundred and ſixty Towers flanking the Walls, ſix Bridges over the Tyber, three principal Fountains, and eight Obelisks out of about forty five it formerly had, rehearſed in the Writings of Antiquaries. The ſeven principal Churches are, St. John of Lateran, St. Paul's without the Walls, St. Mary Major, St. Laurence without the Walls, St. Sebaſtian, St. Croſs's, and St. Peter's: This laſt, in which the Body of that Apoſtle is ſaid to be depoſited, is the moſt ſtately Building, perhaps, that ever was ſeen, it is built within and without of Marble, in the figure of a Croſs about ſix hundred Foot long, and 396 broad in the Branches, with a Dome three hundred thirty foot high, and a Square one hundred forty four. The Portal, erected by Paul V. together with all its Riches, Paintings, Columns, Statues, Altars and Galleries, ſurpaſſes the greateſt Idea that the Mind can well form of Beauty and Grandeur. In the magnificent Gallery, over the Portique, the Pope bleſſes the People every Holy-Thourſday and Eaſter-Day, who kneel in the great Place before it. The great Altar under the Dome, upon which the Pope is placed immediately after the Election, and acknowledged St. Peter's Succeſſor, is richly built over St. Peter's Tomb. This Church is paved with Marble, and the Roof gilded with Gold. The Place that fronts the Church is inviron'd with a great Gallery, which gives it the oval form of a Theatre, three hundred Paces in length, and two hundred and twenty wide. Three hundred twenty four Pillars ſupport the Gallery, ornamented with a fine Baluſtrade, embelliſh'd with the Copper Figures of the Twelve Apoſtles, and eighty eight other Saints, with the Arms of Pope Alexander VII. This Gallery was Deſign'd by the famous Monſieur Bernini, and built by Pope Alexander VII. In the middle of this Place or Square are two fine Fountains, and between both their curious Baſins one of the moſt magnificent Obelisks in the World, all of one piece of unpoliſh'd Marble, eighty foot high beſides the Baſis and Pedeſtal, which add twenty eight more. Some Authors ſay, That the Urn that contained Julius Cæſar's Aſhes was formerly on the top of this Obelisk, where now the Croſs ſtands. The fourteen quarters of Rome, are, 1. de Monti, 2. del Borgo, 3. della Colomna, 4. del Ponte, 5. de Aronula or Regola, 6. della Pigna, 7. del Capitello, 8. del Traveſte vere, 9. del Campo Marzo, 10. di Parione, 11. di S. Angilo, 12. della Ripa, 13. di S. Euſtachio, 14. di Rivo. The moſt conſiderable Families are, the Urſins, Colonni's, Conti, Savelli, Farneſe, Cajetan, Baglioni, Vitelli, Sforza, Perreri, Buon compagni, Aldobrandin, Geſi, Altiempi, Borgheſe, Barbarini, Pamphilio, Roſpiglioſi, &c. Beſides the Council which the Church of Rome calls General, held in the Lateran, Pope Victor held a Synod about the Celebration of the Feaſt of Eaſter, in 197. After Pope Fabian's death, the Clergy and neighbouring Biſhops met, in 250, about the Libellatici, and others that had fallen during the Perſecution. Cornelius, Fabian's Succeſſor, confirmed in a Synod held in 252, what the Church of Carthage had ordered concerning thoſe that had fallen into Idolatry; and added, That the Prieſts who had apoſtatized from their Faith, might be received into the Communion of the Church, but not be permitted to exerciſe their Function. And in execution of this Canon he received a Biſhop call'd Trophimus, who had fallen off during the Perſecution: for that together with himſelf, he had brought back to the Church all thoſe who by his Fall he had cauſed to leave it, and that he had by his Tears and Humility teſtified a ſincere Repentance for his Offence; but he loſt his Office. In 253, the ſame Pope, willing entirely to exterminate the growing Error of the Novatians, aſſembled a Synod at Rome, conſiſting of forty two Biſhops, and a great number of Prieſts, where by common conſent it was condemned, and thoſe that followed it were expelled the Church by Excommunication. St. Jerom makes mention of another National Synod of Italy. Pope Stephen I. in 257, ordered in an Aſſembly, That that Tradition ſhould be followed which forbad Re-baptization, and that it was enough they ſhould be received upon their Repentance only who forſook Hereticks. About the year 270, Pope Denys aſſembled a Synod at Rome, to examine the Accuſation of ſome Chriſtians of Pentapolis, againſt St. Denys of Alexandria. In 313, Melchiades held an Aſſembly of nineteen Biſhops. They examined with much diligence the Cauſe of Cecilian of Carthage and that of Donatus. The firſt, upon the Confeſſion of the Witneſſes produced againſt him, who acknowledged they had nothing to ſay either againſt the Innocency of his Life or his Behaviour, was diſcharged by the common conſent of the Prelates; and the other, convinced by his own Confeſſion, to have re-baptized and ordained Biſhops which had fallen into Idolatry during the Perſecution, was condemned. After the Condemnation of the Arians and ſome other Hereticks, they laboured to regulate the Revenues of the Church, which began to be very conſiderable, and divided it into four parts; for the Biſhops, for the Clergy, Places of Worſhip, and for the Poor; the Number and Age alſo of the Church Miniſters was regulated in a Council of two hundred and thirty Biſhops, held in 324, under Pope Sylveſter, who again the year following celebrated another conſiſting of 275 Prelates, and received there the Decrees of the General Council of Nice. Julius I. held three other Synods: The firſt in 337, with an hundred and ſixteen Prelates; they confirmed the Acts of the Council of Nice, and the Errors of the Arians were then alſo condemned. The ſecond in 341, celebrated in favour of Athanaſius, who was there diſcharged of the Calumnies charged upon him by the Hereticks, and received to Communion, after he had waited eighteen months for his Accuſers. The year following the ſame Pope aſſembled the third upon the ſame account: It was in this Synod, and in the Name of them, that he writ a very excellent Epiſtle to the Arians. The Sacrament was denied theſe Arians, and given to the Holy Prelate, in a Council held by Liberius the Succeſſor of Julius, in 352. Damaſus depoſed Urſacius and Valens, Arian Biſhops, in a Synod held in 368. The year following was celebrated another by him, conſiſting of fourſcore and ten Prelates, as well of France as Italy. Auxentius of Milan, an Arian, was depoſed there; the Articles of Faith of Rimini condemned, and thoſe of Nice confirmed. The ſame Pope condemned the Hereſy of Apollinarius, in a Synod celebrated in 373; and in another held in 382, he endeavoured to find ſome Expedient for the Schiſm that diſturb'd the Church of Antioch, which grew very flagrant ſince the Ordination of Flavian. Siricius ſucceeded Damaſus, he laboured to reform the Church of Africa in a Synod aſſembled at Rome in the Church of St. Peter. in 386, where fourſcore Biſhops were preſent. Zoſimus aſſembled a Synod in the Church of St. Clement, in 418, againſt Cœleſtius. Cœleſtinus convocated one in 430, where Neſtorius was condemned, and to be depoſed, if in ſix days after the Publication of the ſaid Judgment he did not abjure his Errors. Sixtus III. the Succeſſor of Cœleſtinus, was accuſed by Anicius Baſſus to have debauched a Virgin in the Church; and in order to diſcover the Truth, the Emperor Valentinian aſſembled a Council at Rome, where fifty ſix Biſhops were preſent: They examin'd his Life with much Rigour and Exactneſs; and having found him innocent as to what was charged upon him, they condemned Baſſus for a falſe Accuſer. Leo the Great, who ſucceeded Sixtus, aſſembled divers Synods in 444: He condemned and judicially proceeded againſt divers Manichæans, in an Aſſembly where ſeveral of thoſe erroneous Perſons were examined, eſpecially thoſe whom they called the Elected and the Exalted: They confeſſed ſuch ſtrange Villainies, and abominable Crimes, that the Biſhops and Prieſts that heard them, were ſtruck with Horrour thereat. Wherefore there was made a Record of the Examination, whereby it appear'd that there was neither Honeſty, Shame nor Modeſty among that Sect. The ſame Pope, in 445, aſſembled another Council upon the account of St. Hilarius of Arles. In 449 he held a Synod, wherein was repealed all that was enacted in the pretended Council of Epheſus. Pope Hilarius, elected after Leo, laboured much to re-eſtabliſh Eccleſiaſtical Diſcipline. Divers Biſhops came to Rome in 465, to celebrate the Anniverſary of his Ordination, which happened on the twelfth of November. He together with them held a Synod, where he acquainted them how the Biſhops of Spain had conſulted him, concerning ſome Ordinations made by the Biſhop Sylvanus, contrary to the Canons, and about other important Affairs. About 470, Pope Simplicius aſſembled a Synod, where Eutyches and Dioſcorus were condemned, and the Council of Chalcedon confirmed. Felix, who ſucceeded him, depoſed Petrus Fullo in an Aſſembly of the Biſhops of Italy, called upon the Requeſt of the Patriarch of Alexandria, whom the ſame Peter had driven from his See. He had written to Acacius of Conſtantinople, but the Legates, who carried thoſe Letters ſuffering themſelves to be ſeduced, were condemned in another Synod compoſed of ſixty ſeven Biſhops, which the ſame Pope Celebrated in 484. He aſſembled a third in 487, for the reconciling of thoſe who had been rebaptized in Africa during the Perſecution of the Vandals. Gelaſius, the Succeſſor of Felix, celebrated in 494 a Council conſiſting of ſeventy Biſhops, who after they had declared which were the Canonical Books that the Church received, put among the number of Apocryphal divers Writings of ſome Authors who had lived in the preceeding Ages. The year after, in another Synod, he gave Abſolution to Miſenus, one of the Legates, condemned by Felix in 484. Symmachus called ſix Councils. In the firſt, in 499, he was acknowledged lawful Pope, in oppoſition to Laurentius. And in the ſecond, in 504, he was acquitted of the Crimes laid to his Charge by his Adverſaries, who were condemned by the third in 501; and in the fourth in 502. He was alſo obliged to aſſemble the Biſhops in a fifth Synod, againſt the Diſturbers of the Repoſe of the Church, who had publiſhed a Libel againſt the validity of the Pope's abſolving, againſt the competency of the Judges; and the Legality of the form of Judgment. Ennodius was appointed to refute theſe Calumnies; and he made ſo ſtrong and eloquent a Defence, that the Pope's Enemies made no Reply to it. There were two Decrees made there, the one againſt the Liberty that was taken to accuſe the Biſhops upon other Heads than the Articles of Faith. The other was, That no Prelate accuſed ſhould be obliged to appear before other Prelates, before the time that he ſhould be eſtabliſhed in his See, and in the Poſſeſſion of thoſe things which appertained to him. The ſixth Synod was held in 504, againſt thoſe who encroached upon, or invaded the Patrimony of the Church. In 518, Pope Hormiſdas aſſembled a Synod of Biſhops who refuſed to receive the Reconciliation of the Eaſtern Church, if they raſed not the Names of Acacius, Euphemius and Macedonius out of their Church-Regiſter or Diptychs. Boniface II. who had obſerved the Trouble that happened at his Election, and who feared the like might be after his death, called a Synod in 531, and having Nominated the Deacon Vigilius for his Succeſſor, he made that Nomination to be ſubſcribed at the Sepulchre of St. Peter; but this being a Violation of the Canons, the Innovation was revoked in another Synod held ſoon after; Boniface being better adviſed there, changed his Sentiments, and had John II. for his Succeſſor; who aſſembled the Biſhops in 532, upon the account of a Broil that happened between the Emperor Juſtinian (who ſaid that one of the Trinity who was made Man, was dead) and the Monks ſurnamed Acœmites, which were Neſtorians, who would have this Propoſition condemned; but they ſucceeded not. Pelagius II. held a Council in 589, of whom there is mention made in an Epiſtle to the Biſhops of Gaul and Germany, who had writ to him, to know what Prefaces were made uſe of by the Roman Church. St. Gregory the Great was Elected after Pelagius; the Emperor Maurice writ to him, to exhort him to hold a Synod of Biſhops, in order to find out a way to quell the Schiſm of thoſe of Iſtria, the Milaneſe, and Country of Venice. The Pope aſſembled them, but the Biſhops of Iſtria would not come thither. In another Council Celebrated in 595, John, a Prieſt of Chalcedon, was acquitted of the Crime of Hereſie laid to his Charge, for which he had been condemned at Conſtantinople, and whipped with Rods, according to the Sentence of the Judges. There were ſix Canons made in that Council. The ſame Pope celebrated two more in ſix hundred and one. The one in favour of Monks, and the other againſt an Impoſtor named Andreas, who belonged to the Church of St. Paul. Boniface III. Aſſembled a Synod in 606, where ſome abuſes at the Election of Popes were Reform'd. Boniface IVth, in 610, Conven'd a Synod to provide for the Neceſſities, and Regulate the Affairs of the Engliſh newly Converted. In 640, John the IVth held a Synod againſt the Monothelites. In 680 Pope Agatho held two Councils for ſettling the Affairs of the Engliſh Church. In 721. Gregory II. Conven'd a Council againſt the Emperor Leo, in Defence of the Worſhip of Images. Formoſus, in 893, endeavour'd to find out ſome Synodical Expedient to put a ſtop to the Schiſm, as they call it, of the Greek Church. Stephen who ſucceeded him, Decreed that the Pope Formoſus ſhould be dug up, degraded, and thrown into Tyber; but John IXth declar'd againſt this violence, in a Council held in 901. In 996, Gregory Vth had a Form drawn up into an Ordinance, relating to the Election of Emperors. In the XIth Century Gregory VIth held a Council in 1047, to Reform the Clergy, and particularly to prevent the practice of Simony. And Leo IXth held another in 1050, in which Berengarius was Condemn'd for denying the Corporal preſence of our Saviour in the Euchariſt. In 1081, Gregory VII held a Council againſt the Emperor Henry IVth, who was there Excommunicated. Urban II. confirm'd the Proceedings of Gregory againſt the Emperor, and ſome Schiſmatical Biſhops in a Synod held in 1089. Otho the IVth was Depos'd by Pope Innocent III. in a Council held in 1210; and Gregory IX held another againſt Frederick II. in 1228; as did likewiſe Boniface VIII, againſt Philip the Fair in 1302. And to conclude, John XXIII. made uſe of the ſame method in 1413, againſt John Hus and Wickliff. See Councils of Lateran.

Though an Account of the 244 Popes that have held their Sees at Rome and Avignon, may be ſeen under their ſeveral Names. However, to preſent the whole under one view, and to ſhew the Order of Time, it may not be amiſs to inſert a Chronological Liſt of the Popes and Emperors, which are as follow.

I have ſpoken of the Emperors of the Weſt, under the word Germany; and of thoſe of the Eaſt, under that of Conſtantinople: Thoſe that are mention'd here, are thoſe that have reigned at Rome, and 'tis that Time alone which I have taken notice of, which ſhould be carefully obſerved. For Example: When I make mention of Theodoſius, I ſay, that he reigned 2 Years and 5 Months from the Year 392; which muſt be applied to the time wherein he governed the Weſt, after the death of Valentinian the Younger: He was Emperor of the Eaſt from the Year 379, and reigned in all 16 Years wanting 2 Days; and this Obſervation will ſuffice. But that we may not over-look any thing proper for this Occaſion, I ſhall give you the Names of thoſe who have uſurped the Sovereign Power in ſeveral of the Provinces of the Empire, which are commonly diſtinguiſh'd by the Name of Tyrants. Trebellius Pollio hath obliged us with the Lives of thirty of thoſe Tyrants who embroyl'd the Empire in the Reign of Gallienus: Beſides which, I ſhall likewiſe ſet down the Names of thoſe who have been Colleagues in the Empire.

In the Year of our Lord 137, Lucius Ælius Verus Cejonius was made Colleague in the Empire by Adrian: He died in 138.

ROMESCOTT, or Peter-Pence, was a yearly Acknowledgment of One Penny paid out of every Family to the Biſhop of Rome, at the Feaſt of St. Peter. Malmsburienſis affirms, That Ina King of the Weſt-Saxons was the firſt who order'd this Payment to be made, though other Hiſtorians aſſign the beginning of this Cuſtom to Offa King of the Mercians. The Church of St. Alban was not only exempted from this Contribution, but likewiſe receiv'd what was collected, upon this account, in the County of Hertford, for its own Uſe; this Privilege being granted 'em by the Pope, at the Inſtance of King Offa. Mat. Weſt. in 794. Spelman. Gloſſar.

ROMIEU (Mary de) a Damſel who lived in the laſt Age, was a French-woman, of the Province of Vivaretz, Siſter to James de Romieu, and Niece to the Sieur d'Auberts; ſhe had much Wit, and was very deſerving; ſhe publiſh'd in 1581 her Poetical Labours, and has there a Tract wherein ſhe ſets forth the Excellency of her Sex above ours; it was an ingenious Anſwer to a Satyr which her Brother had made againſt Women. She has alſo put forth a Book of Inſtruction for young Ladies.

ROMILDA, Dutcheſs of Frejus, withdrew into the City of Frejus after the death of her Husband Ciſulphus, and brought with her the four Sons and four Daughters he had left her. She retired into this City with a deſign to ſecure her ſelf againſt Cacanus King of the Huns; and her Undertaking had proved effectual, if ſo be ſhe had had but Conſtancy; but having one day ſeen Cacanus airing himſelf on Horſe back near unto the Walls of the City, ſhe fell in love with him, and ſent forthwith to acquaint him, That he ought not to come with his Sword in his Hand againſt a Woman; That ſhe made him an offer of the City, and was ready to end the War by marrying of him. Cacanus accepted of this Propoſal, and entred the Town, which he put to Fire and Sword, and the ſame day took Romilda in marriage, which laſted but for one night, for next day he cauſed her ſhamefully to be faſtned to a Stake, where ſhe died. Her four Sons made their eſcape, and her Daughters preſerved their Chaſtity by a ſtrange ſhift; they hid in their Boſoms a piece of raw fleſh, which being heated, cauſed a very noiſom ſmell, ſo that their Enemies could not approach them, and ſaid in way of ſcorn, That the Lombard Women had ſtinking Breaths. Andreas Brunet.

ROMUALD, the Founder and firſt Abbot of the Order of Camaldoli, was of Ravenna; he died in the year 1027, aged 120, an hundred whereof he had ſpent in a retir'd life, and the ſervice of God.

ROMUALD, Archbiſhop of Salerno, lived about the end of the Twefth Century. He writ a Chronicle, which Cardinal Baronius cites in 1085 and in 1177, and affirms, he had ſeen two Copies of that Work. He ſpeaks of what happened from the beginning of the World till 1177. Romuald was one of the Legates ſent to Venice to propoſe Methods for accommodating the Differences that aroſe between Pope Alexander III. and Frederick Barbaroſſa.

ROMULUS, the firſt King and Founder of the City of Rome, was Brother of Remus, and Son of Rhea Sylvia, the Daughter of Numitor. This latter, who was the rightful King of Alba, had been dethroned by his Brother Amulius, who alſo put Rhea his Niece amongſt the Veſtal Virgins; but conceiving by Mars, as ſhe ſaid, ſhe was brought to bed of Twins. Amulius, who would have no Heir, cauſed theſe two Brothers to be caſt into the Tyber, whom the King's Shepherd found upon the Banks of that River, and bred up in his own Houſe. It's ſaid, That at the age of fifteen they ſettled the Feaſts called Lupercalia, and that afterward coming to know their true Deſcent, they expelled their Uncle Amulius from the Throne, to reſtore their Grand-father Numitor therein. Some time after, to wit, in the 3301ſt year of the World, they built the City of Rome, of which Romulus had the Name of the Founder. He ſurrounded it with a ſlight Ditch, which Remus leaped over in a way of ſcorn and deriſion, which contempt coſt him his life. In the mean time Romulus made it an Aſylum, or Privileged Place, thereby to draw People to dwell there; and becauſe they had no Women, retained the Daughters of the Sabines who came thither to a Feaſt. This violence was the cauſe of ſeveral Wars, which were ſucceſsfully terminated. Romulus conſtituted the Senate, made good Laws, and died after the had reigned 58 years. Vid. QUIRINALIA and QUIRINUS. Proclus.

ROMULUS, the Son of the Tyrant Maxentius, and of a Daughter of the Emperor Galerius Maximinus; he was declared Cæſar by his Father, and after his death was Deiſy'd after the manner of the Pagans. Idacius, in his Annals, makes him to have been twice Conſul with his Father Maxentius, to wit, in the year 308 of Rome, and the next following.

RONSARD (Peter) a famous French Poet. He was born in the Caſtle of Poſſoniere in Vandomois, in 1524, bred at Paris in the College of Navarre. Having no inclination for Study, he put himſelf Page with the Duke of Orleans, who preſented him to James Stewart, King of Scotland, with whom he lived above two years. After his return into France the ſame Duke employ'd him in divers Negotiations, and he accompany'd Lazarus de Baif, Maſter of Requeſts, to a Dyet at Spire; the Converſation of this learned Man, and his own Inclination, engaged him again to Study. We have his Franciades, Odes, and divers other Pieces. King Henry II. Francis I. Charles IX. and Henry III. gave him marks of their Eſteem and Favour. Ronſard died at S. Came de Tours, which was one of his old Benefices, the 27th. of December, 1585. The Learned of his time made his Elegies and Epitaphs.

ROPER (John) deſcended of a very ancient Family of Kent, Son of John Roper Attorney-General to King Henry VIII. took to Wiſe Jane the Daughter of Sir John Fineux, Knight, Chief Juſtice of the Court of King's Bench in part of King Henry VII. and beginning of King Henry VIIIth's Reign, and Coheir to her Mother, Daughter and Coheir to William Apulderfield, Eſq; by whom he had Iſſue two Sons, William Roper of Eltham, ſometime Clerk of the King's Bench, who married Margaret the Daughter of the famous Sir Thomas Moor, Knight, at that time Lord Chancellor of England, from whom the Ropers of Well-hall are deſcended, and Chriſtopher Roper of the Lodge in Linſted, who by Elizabeth, Daughter to Chriſtopher Blore of Renham in Com. Cant. had Iſſue John, who, upon July 9. 1603, 1 Jac. received the honour of Knighthood; alſo upon July 9. 14 Jac. was advanced to the dignity of a Baron of this Realm by the Title of Lord Tenham, a fair Manor of his own Inheritance in thoſe Parts; and departing this life about the end of Auguſt, An. 1618, 16 Jac. left Iſſue, by Elizabeth his Wife, Chriſtopher his Son and Heir, and two Daughters. This Chriſtopher was ſucceeded by his Son John, who by Mary his Wife, Daughter to William Lord Petre, had Iſſue three Sons and four Daughters; dying in 1627, he was ſucceeded by Chriſtopher his eldeſt Son and Heir, who married firſt Mary Daughter to Sir Francis Englefield of Wotton Baſſet in Com. Wilts, Knight, by whom he had Iſſue John a Son who died young, and a Daughter called Frances. His ſecond Wife was Philadelphia, Daughter to Knolles of Grove-place in Hantſhire, by whom he had Iſſue three Sons, Chriſtopher now Lord Tenham, Henry who died young, and Thomas; and departing this life in 1673, was ſucceeded by Chriſtopher his eldeſt Son, who married Elizabeth Daughter to Francis Viſcount Mountague, by whom he hath Iſſue——— Dugdale's Baronage.

RORARIUS (Jerome) Nuntio to Pope Clement VII. at the Court of Ferdinand King of Hungary, wrote a Book upon a very extraordinary Subject, the deſign of it being to prove, that Beaſts are not only Rational, but that they make uſe of the Faculty of Reaſon better than Men. The Occaſion of Writing this Book was as odd as the Subject; for having met with a learned Perſon in Converſation, who maintain'd, That Charles V. fell ſhort of the Character of the Otho's, and Frederick Barbaroſſa, Emperors of Germany; upon this occaſion, I ſay, Rorarius being a Man of heat and humour, immediately concluded that Men were exceeded by Beaſts, in the Talent of Reaſoning, which made him fall to work and write a Treatiſe upon that Argument, about 1547. This Book lay in Manuſcript almoſt an hundred years, being printed firſt at Paris in 1645, and afterwards in Holland. The Argument is not ill managed, it affords a great many extraordinary Inſtances of the Induſtry of Beaſts, and the obſtinate Perverſeneſs of Men: This Opinion ſeems to preſs a little upon both the Carteſians and Ariſtotelians, the firſt making Beaſts no better than Machine and Clock-work; and the latter, though they allow 'em Senſe, Memory and Paſſions, yet deny 'em the privilege of Reaſon. Rorarius, amongſt other Inſtances in defence of his Aſſertion, tells a Story from his own knowledge, of two Wolves which he ſaw hung upon a Gibbet in the Country of Juliers: The Terrour of this Execution, he obſerves, clear'd the Country from being diſturb'd by theſe ill Neighbours, and made a greater impreſſion upon the reſt of the Wolves, than either Whips, Gaols or Burning-Irons will do upon a Thief, who is often ſo incorrigibly fooliſh, that nothing but a Halter will cure him. Bayle Diction. Hiſtor.

ROSARY, an Office in the Church of Rome, made up of five or fifteen Tens of Beads (each of the Tens beginning with a Pater Noſter) to direct them to ſay ſo many Ave-Maria's in honour of the Bleſſed Virgin. This number of Ave-Maria's is ſaid in Commemoration of the five Joyful, the five Afflicting, and the five Glorious Myſteries communicated to the Bleſſed Virgin. The five Joyful Myſteries are, The Annunciation, Her Viſitation of Elizabeth, The Birth of our Saviour, The Purification, and Our Saviour's Diſputing with the Doctors in the Temple. The five Afflicting Myſteries are, Our Saviour's Agony in the Garden, His Scourging, His being Crown'd with Thorns, His being oppreſs'd with the Weight of the Croſs, and His Crucifixion. The five Glorious Myſteries are, The Reſurrection of our Saviour, His Aſcenſion, The Deſcent of the Holy Ghoſt, His Glorification in Heaven, and Her own Aſſumption. St. Dominick was the Beginner of this Devotion, being (as they ſay) encouraged to it by an Apparition of the Bleſſed Virgin, in 1208. Alain de la Roche Tratte du Roſaire.

ROSCELIN, Clerk of the Dioceſe of Beauvais, was famous for his Knowledge. He renewed the Errors of Sabellius, and maintained, That the Father and Holy Ghoſt were incarnated as well as the Son, ſince the three Perſons in the Trinity had but the ſame Eſſence, and that the Nature of the Son was the ſame Nature as that of the Father and Holy Ghoſt. This Errour was condemned in the Councils that were held at Soiſſons in 1092, and at Reims in 1094. 'Tis againſt this Roſcelin that Anſelm wrote when he was Abbot of Bec; he finiſhed that Work afterwards when Archbiſhop of Canterbury, and ſent it to Pope Urban II. Baronius.

ROSCILLUS and EGUS were the Sons of Albucillus Prince of the Allobroges. Theſe two young Princes ſerved Cæſar in all his Wars in Gaul, and had conſiderable Commands in his Army. They received for their Reward the principal Offices in their Country, and an admittance into the Senate before the uſual time; but the Troops accuſing them for detaining their Pay, they took it as an affront, that Cæſar had liſtned to the Complaints againſt them, and joined with Pompey, with all thoſe that were of their Faction. Cæſar de Bello Civili.

ROSCIUS, a very famous Comedian, and ſo excellent in his Art, that when any one was to be mention'd who was Maſter of his Profeſſion, he was called Roſcius. He was the firſt that uſed a Vizard on the Theatre, for that he ſquinted, and had a deform'd Face; but the People often delighted to hear him with his Face unmask'd, becauſe of the ſweetneſs of his Speech. Cicero defended him in Court in an Oration entituled Pro Roſcio Comœdo.

ROSCOMEN, Lat. Roſcomenum, a Town and County in the Province of Connaught. The County is bounded on the North by the Curlew Mountains, dividing it from Slego; on the Eaſt from the River Shannon, dividing it from the Counties of Letrim, Longford, Weſt-meath, and King's County; and on the South by King's County and Galloway; and on the Weſt by the River Suck, which parts it from Galloway and Mayo. It's of a conſiderable length, viz. 60 Engliſh miles from North to South, but not above 19 where broadeſt. The Soil is level and extremely fruitful, ſo that it abounds with Graſs and Corn produced by little Husbandry. Roſcomen, the principal Town which gives name to it, ſtands upon the River Suck towards the Weſtern Border, but near the middle of the County, 12 miles from Athlone to the N. W. and 33 from Galloway to the N. E.

ROSECROIX or Roſecrucians, called alſo the Inlightened, Immortal and Inviſible. This Name was given to a certain Fraternity or Cabal which appear'd in Germany in the beginning of the XVIIth. Age: Thoſe that are admitted thereunto, called the Brethren, or Roſecrucians, ſwear Fidelity, promiſe Secrecy, write Enigmatically or in Characters and oblige themſelves to obſerve the Laws of that Society, which hath for its end the re-eſtabliſhing of all Diſciplines and Sciences, and eſpecially Phyſick, which, according to their Notion, is not underſtood, and but ill practiſed; they boaſt they have excellent Secrets, whereof the Philoſopher's-Stone is the leaſt; and they hold, That the ancient Philoſophers of Egypt, the Chaldæans, Magi of Perſia, and Gymnoſophiſts of the Indies, have taught nothing but what they themſelves teach. They affirm, That in 1378, a Gentleman of Germany, whoſe Name is not known but by theſe two letters A. C. being put in a Monaſtery, had learn'd the Greek and Latin Tongue; and that ſome time after going into Palæſtine, he fell ſick at Damaſcus, where having heard ſpeak of the Sages of Arabia, he conſulted them at Damut, where they had an Univerſity. It's added, That theſe wiſe Arabians ſaluted him by his Name, taught him their Secrets, and that the German after he had travelled a long time, returned into his own Country; where aſſociating with ſome Companions, he made them Heirs of his Knowledge, and died in 1484. Theſe Brothers had their Succeſſors till 1604, when one of the Cabal found the Tomb of the firſt of them, with divers Devices, Characters and Inſcriptions thereon, the principal of which contained theſe four letters in Gold, A. C. R. E. and a Parchment-Book written in Golden letters, with the Encomium of that pretended Founder. Afterwards, that Society, which in reality is but a Sect of Mountebanks, began to multiply, but durſt not appear publickly; and for that reaſon was ſirnamed the Inviſible. The Inlightned or Illuminati of Spain proceeded from them; both the one and the other have been condemned for Fanaticks and Deceivers. We muſt add, That John Bringeret printed in 1615 a Book in Germany which comprehends two Treatiſes, entitled, The Maniſeſto and Confeſſion of Faith of the Fraternity of the Roſecrucians in Germany. It was dedicated to Monarchs, States, and the Learned. Theſe Perſons boaſted themſelves to be the Library of Ptolemy Philadelphus, the Academy of Plato, the Lyceum, &c. and bragg'd of extraordinary Qualifications, whereof the leaſt was, That they could ſpeak all Languages: And after, in 1622, they gave this Advertiſement to the Curious; We deputed by our College the principal of the Brethren of the Roſecrucians to make our viſible and inviſible abode in this City, through the Grace of the Moſt High, towards whom are turned the Hearts of the Juſt: We teach without Books or Notes, and ſpeak the Languages of the Countries where-ever we are, to draw Men like our ſelves, from the error of Death. This Bill was matter of merriment; in the mean time the Brethren of the Roſecrucians have diſappeared, though it be not the Sentiment of that German Chymiſt, the Author of a Book entitled, De Volucri Arborea; and of another who hath compoſed a Treatiſe ſtiled De Philoſophia Pura. Sponde. Gautier.

ROSEMONDA, Queen of the Lombards, was the Daughter of Cunemundus King of the Gepides, whom Alboin put to death about 572. Alboin marry'd her, and at a Feaſt would force her to drink out of her Father's Skull; which inſpired her with ſo great an hatred for him, that ſhe reſolved to make him away. She imparted her Deſign to Helmigus, Maſter of her Horſe, who adviſed her to gain Phæredeus, a Man of Quality and Repute, to make the thing yet more ſure; but he refuſed to conſent to the Murther of his Prince; which much diſturb'd the Queen, who however had recourſe to another Crime to accompliſh the firſt. Phæredeus having debauched one of her Women, ſhe puts her ſelf into her Bed one night that he was to come to her; and when he had miſtaken her, ſhe made her ſelf known to him, ſaying, That after what had paſs'd there was no time to be loſt, he muſt either deſtroy Alboin, or Alboin would certainly deſtroy him. This unfortunate Rencounter engaged him in the Murther. In the mean time Roſemond fled to Ravenna with Helmigus, who married her. The Vice-Roy Longinus received her kindly, and falling in love with her, promiſed to marry her, if ſhe made Helmigus away; which flattering her Vanity, as Helmigus came out of the Bath, ſhe gave him a poiſonous Potion. As it begun to work, Helmigus ſuſpecting the Treachery, took his Sword, and conſtrained her to drink up what remained in the Cup. And ſo died this wicked Woman, who ſacrificed all to her Ambition, about the year 574. Paulus Diac. lib. 2. de Geſt. Longob. Gregor. Turon. &c.

ROSES, Lat. Rhodopolis, once a City, now only a Caſtle and a ſmall Town in the Country of Rouſillon, in Catalonia in Spain, which has a large Harbour on the Mediterranean-Sea; very ſtrong, and regularly fortified. It was taken by the French in 1645, reſtored by the Pyrenæan Treaty to Spain, but re-taken in the year 1693. It ſtands ten Spaniſh Leagues from Perpignan to the South, and now is in poſſeſſion of the Spaniard by the Treaty of Reſwick, 1697. This Place was firſt fortified by Charles V. before which it was only a Monaſtery, though in the time of the Romans it had been one of the moſt conſiderable Cities in Spain, ſuppoſed to have been built by the Rhodians, before the Romans were Maſters of this Kingdom, and from them to have taken this Name.

ROSETTA, a City and Sea-Port upon the Egyptian-Sea, in Africa, near unto one of the mouths of the Nile. The Ancients called it Metelis, and the Turks now Raſchit. Between Roſetta and Alexandria were formerly found in the Sand divers Pieces of old Coin. There are in this Country a great number of Goats, with ſuch long Ears, that beſides that they drag them along upon the ground, are yet tuck'd up three fingers high. Sugar-Canes grow alſo there in abundance. Monſieur Thevenot ſays, It's next to Cairo, one of the beſt Cities in Egypt, and ſtill encreaſing, being a Place of great Traffick, very pleaſant, ſurrounded by lovely Gardens, and full of well-built, tall Houſes, and in which there is great plenty of Victuals, very cheap; but in the months of July and Auguſt they have none but Ciſtern-Waters to drink.

ROSEVEQUE, a ſmall Town in Flanders, famous for a Battle which Charles V. won againſt the rebellious Gaunt Men, of whom were ſlain 40000, and their General Philip d'Arteville taken and hanged.

ROS-HASCANA; this word, much uſed in the Writings of the Jews, ſignifies the Beginning of the Year, a Day which they kept as holy. Their Doctors diſpute, in their Talmud, about the Beginning of the World; ſome will have it in Spring, in their Niſan, which anſwers our March; others in Autumn, in the month of Tiſri, our September, which is the time they keep their Feaſt Ros-haſcana, or Beginning of their Year, abſtaining from all manner of Work the two firſt days of their Tiſri. R. Leo of Modena ſays, The Jews hold by Tradition, that God judges on thoſe Days particularly, the Actions of the preceding Year, and for this reaſon begin their Penance from the firſt Day of Etal, the foregoing Month, ſome praying and ſinging Pſalms from break of day, and a great many faſting and giving Alms without diſcontinuing to the day of Pardon. Theſe Devotions are practis'd moſt the Week before the Feaſt, on the Eve whereof many waſh and give themſelves thirty ſeven ſtripes with a Whip, by way of Diſcipline; this they call Malcud; and ſome in Germany put on their Burial Habits, to mortifie themſelves the more, and make them think of the laſt Judgment. Leo de Modena.

ROSIN (John) a Native of Iſenack in Thuringia, hath been in eſteem for a learned Grammarian. He publiſh'd in 1585 his Treatiſe of Roman Antiquities, in Ten Books, which Thomas Dempſter has ſince enlarged.

ROSKILL, or Roſchild, a City of Denmark in the Iſle of Zeland, with a Biſhoprick under that of Lunden. It is famous for being the Place where the Kings of the Country are buried, and for the Peace concluded in 1658 between the Swedes and the Danes. Latin Authors call it Roſchildia.

ROSSANO, Lat. Roſcianum or Ruſcianum, a City of the Kingdom of Naples, in Calabria, having the Title of a Principality and an Archbiſhoprick.

ROSSE, a large County in the North of Scotland, which gives Title of Earl to the ſecond Son of Scotland. Towards the Weſt Sea it abounds with Hills and Woods full of Dear, and to the Eaſt Sea the Country is fruitful, and well inhabited. It was, during Epiſcopacy, a Dioceſe. This County does alſo contain the famous Bay of Cromarty, call'd by the Ancients Portus Salutis, being one of the beſt Harbours in the King's Dominions. In this County is contain'd alſo Ardmanagh, which gives Title of Lord to the ſecond Son of Scotland; and Aſſinſhire, which is indented by many Arms of the Sea. Camb. Brit.

ROSSE, Lat. Roſſa, a Town anciently in the Province of Munſter, and County of Cork, and a Biſhop's See under the Archbiſhop of Caſhel. It ſtands upon the Britiſh Channel, at the mouth of a ſmall River called Finn, 32 miles from Cork to the South weſt, and 22 from Kinſale to the Weſt. The Biſhop's-See in 1618 was united to that of Cork, the Town being reduced to a meer Village.

ROSSI (Jerom) Biſhop of Pavia, was Native of Parma. He became very learned, and noted at Rome, where Pope Leo X. gave him the Abbey of Chiravall in the Picentin, and Clement VII. made him Clerk of his Cloſet. Roſſi afterwards put himſelf out of this Place, in favour of John-Marie du Mont, who quitted to him the Biſhoprick of Pavia. A little while after his Enemies accuſed him of having killed a Man. He was taken into cuſtody, and impriſon'd in the Caſtle of St. Angelo; but his Innocence appearing, after a ſad Impriſonment of three years, he was re-eſtabliſhed in his Biſhoprick, and Pope Julius III. made him Governour of Rome. Roſſi died in the month of April, in the year 1564, aged 65. He compoſed a Treatiſe of Illuſtrious Men, a Poem, ſome Pieces of Theology and of the Canon-Law.

ROSSI (Blanche). See BLANCHE.

ROSSO, (ſo called from his Red Hair) born at Florence, Anno 1496, was educated in the Study of Philoſophy, Muſick, &c. and having learned the firſt Rudiments of Deſign from the Cartoons of Michael Angelo, improv'd himſelf by the help of Anatomy, which he underſtood ſo very well, that he wrote two Books upon that Subject. He had a copious Invention, great Skill in the Mixture of his Colours, and in the management of his Lights and Shadows; gave his Figures a good Relievo, and proper and eaſie Poſtures: his only fault was, that he ſuffer'd himſelf to be too much overborn with the heat of his Fancy, which he ſometimes preferr'd to the Rules of Art. From Florence his Curioſity carry'd him to Rome and Venice, and afterwards into France, where, by his Works in the Galleries at Fountainbleau, and by ſeveral Proofs which he gave of his extraordinary Knowledge in Architecture, he recommended himſelf ſo effectually to Francis I. that he made him Surveyor and Superintendant-General of all his Buildings, Pictures, &c. and gave him other opportunities of growing ſo vaſtly rich, that for ſome time he lived like a Prince himſelf, in all the Splendour and Magnificence imaginable; till at laſt, being robb'd of a conſiderable ſumm of Money, and ſuſpecting one of his intimate Friends, he caus'd him to be Impriſon'd, and put to the Torture, which he underwent with ſo much Courage and Conſtancy as to procure his Releaſe; upon which Roſſo, partly out of remorſe of his barbarous treatment of his Friend, and partly out of fear that he would revenge it, diſpatch'd himſelf by a Doſe of Poiſon. Vaſary, Felibien, &c. Vies des Peintres.

ROSTOCK, called variouſly in Latin, as Roſarium Urbs, Rhodopolis and Roſtochium. It's an Hans-Town of Germany, in the Dutchy of Mecklenburg, within a League of the Baltick-Sea, where there is an Univerſity founded, about 1415, according to Bectius. This is a Free Imperial City, and has an Harbour made by the River Warna, on which it ſtands, 8 miles from Wiſemar to the Eaſt, and 11 from Stralſundt to the Weſt. It's about 5 miles in compaſs, and almoſt equal to Lubec. A Sedition ariſing in this City in 1572 againſt the Duke of Mecklenburg, under whoſe Protection it is, he entred it with Arms, and treated the Senate with great ſeverity. In 1629 it was, with the whole Dutchy of Mecklenburg, taken by the Imperialiſts, out of whoſe hands it was recovered by the Swedes.

ROSTON, a Dutchy and Archiepiſcopal City of Muſcovy. The City is guarded with a wooden Fortreſs, and the Dutchy has been formerly the Appennage or Portion of the ſecond Sons of the Princes of Ruſſia; ſince which, John Baſilides, Duke of Muſcovy, has uſurped this Country, and put to death the laſt of the Family that reigned there.

ROSVEIDE (Heribert) a Jeſuit, Native of Utrecht, where he was born, in 1569, and died at Antwerp the 5th. of Octob. 1629. The Works we have of his, teſtifie him to have been an indefatigable Perſon, and that he had acquired great knowledge in Eccleſiaſtical Antiquities. He publiſh'd the Works of St. Paulinus, with Notes upon them, two Tracts of Eucherius, an Apology for Thomas à Kempis, whom he believed to be the Author of a Book, entitled, The Imitation of Jeſus, an Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory, with divers others. Le Mire.

ROSVIDE, Roſvite, or Huroſvith, a Nun of the Monaſtery of Gandeſtheim or Grandeſheim, in Germany, was in great eſteem in the tenth Age. She was illuſtrious both for her Birth and penetrating Judgment. She ſpake the Greek and Latin Tongues fluently; and the Pieces ſhe has writ in Proſe and Verſe had the approbation of all that knew her in her time. She compoſed in Verſe, at the deſire of the Emperor Otho II. and by order of Geberg her Abbeſs, An Hiſtorical Elogy upon the Life of Otho I. She writ alſo in Verſe, The Martyrdom of St. Denys and Pelagius, and other Works of that nature, which Conrade Celtus cauſed to be printed at Nuremberg, in 1501. She flouriſh'd about 980. Trithemius miſtakes in putting her in another Age, as well as Humfridus, who confounds her with Hilda an Abbeſs of England. Voſſius.

ROTA, a Juriſdiction of Rome, compoſed of twelve Prelates, who judge by Appeal of all Matters Eccleſiaſtical and Civil ariſing between the Clergy. They are call'd the Auditors of the Rota, and this Name is derived from the Pavement of the Chamber where they meet to examine Affairs, or to decide Cauſes, which is of Marble, faſhioned like a Wheel. This Court is compoſed of Perſons of divers Nations, whereof there are eight Italians (to wit, three Romans, one Tuſcan, one Milaneſe, one Polonian, one Ferrareſe, and one Venetian,) one Frenchman, two Spaniards, and one German. Pope John XXII. eſtabliſhed theſe Judges; Clement VIII. augmented their Privileges; and Alexander VII. made them Subdeacons Apoſtolick. They wear a Violet-coloured Robe, and a Band of the ſame colour about their Hats; each of them has an hundred Ducats per Month allowed them, and the Dean two hundred.

ROTA (Bernardine) of Naples, very conſiderable both for the Nobleneſs of his Family, and fineneſs of his Wit: He had an admirable ſtroak at Latin and Italian Poetry. It is the opinion of ſeveral Criticks, that his Latin Poems may compare with the beſt Authors of Antiquity; and as for his Performances of this kind in Italian, they are ſo charming and ingenious, and written with ſo much Judgment, that, next to Petrarch, he may challenge the Preference to all the Poets of that Nation. He wrote likewiſe very finely in Proſe, and had always a great regard for Men of Letters. He died at Naples in 1574, at the Age of 66. His Works are, Eloge Piſcatorie, Sonneti è Canzoni, Rime Scilingate, Coſmedia, Li Loſtribaldi, Comediæ, Poëmata, Ælegiarum Lib. 3. Epigrammatum Libri 4. Metamorphoſeon Lib. 1. Nænia Porcia nuncupata. Thuan. Hiſt. Ghilini Teat. d' Huom. Letter.

ROTEMBURG, upon the Taubur, an Imperial City of Germany, in Franconia: It's not the ſame as Rotemburgh the Capital City of the Earldom of Hohenburg, in Swabia; and another the Capital of the Dutchy of Ferden, in the Lower Saxony, belonging to the King of Sweden.

ROTERDAM, upon the Meuſe, a City of Holland in the United Provinces. It's thought its Name is taken from the Canal call'd Rotte, although Trithemius, Robert Cenales, and ſome others are of opinion that it muſt be Ruther King of the Franks that was the Founder of this City. It is large, rich, and a great Mart-Town. There are divers Canals cut there, which are ſo well contrived and kept, that the greateſt Ships can enter to it. It is the richeſt City in Holland, next to Amſterdam. Eraſmus, the great Reſtorer of Learning, was born in this City, and they have taken care to preſerve the memory of it by an Inſcription ſet upon the Houſe, and placed his Statue on the Bridge beſides, which was erected in 1564, and very injuriouſly treated by the Spaniards in 1572. The greateſt Convenience of this Town, is, that Ships of great burthen are taken into the middle of many of the greateſt Streets without difficulty. It was ſmall when the Spaniards had it, and therefore not mentioned as to the time of its conjunction with the States. One of the Courts of Admiralty is kept there.

ROTHARIS, King of the Lombards, was the Son of Ajon, Duke of the Country of Breſſe. He ſucceeded Arioaldus in 638, by the Choice that Gundoberga, the Daughter of Agilulfus and Theodelinga made of him for her Husband; upon condition he would ſend away his firſt Wife, and that he would ſwear never to forſake Gundoberga. He promiſed all, to get upon the Throne; but when he was confirmed in it, he kept her for the ſpace of five years Priſoner in the Palace of Pavia, and put to death divers Perſons of Quality who had oppoſed his Election. Aubedon, Embaſſador to King Clovis II. demanded her of Rotharis, who durſt not refuſe it; and ſhe employ'd the remainder of her life in the practice of Vertue. This ſame King took Genoa, Albenga, Savonna, and other Places which belonged to the Empire, and ruined them as well as Tarvis and other Cities of Tuſcany. He order'd the Laws of the Lombards to be drawn up in writing. He reigned fifteen years and four months, that is, till 653, when Rodoaldus, his Son, ſucceeded him.

ROTHERAM, a Market-Town in the Weſt-Riding of Yorkſhire, and the Hundred of Stafford, ſituate upon the River Dun, over which it hath a fine Stone Bridge. Of note, for giving Name and Birth to Thomas of Rotheram, Archbiſhop of York, one of the Founders of Lincoln College in Oxon; who alſo expreſs'd his Kindneſs to this Town, by founding likewiſe a College in it, with three Schools, for Grammar, Writing and Muſick.

ROTRUDA, or Crotruda, the Wife of Charles Martell, and Mother to Charlemain, Pepin the Short, and Chiltrudus. She died about 724.

ROTWEIL, an Imperial City of Germany, in Swabia, allied with the Swiſſers. The Mareſchal de Guebriant died there of a Wound he had received in a Battle he had gained from the Imperialiſts, the 17th. of November, 1643. This City is ſituate upon the Neckar, under Mount Abeno, from which it ſtands 3 Leagues to the South, 10 from Briſach to the Eaſt, and 6 from Scaffhauſe to the North. Conrad III. Duke of Schwaben, inſtituted a Chamber of Juſtice here, for the whole Dutchy, in 1147.

ROVERGUE, a Province of France that has Auvergne to the North of it, Guivandan to the Eaſt, Languedoc to the South, and Quercy to the Weſt: Rhodes is the capital City of it. The Country is barren, but this is made up by the Mines of Iron, Copper, Alum, Sulphur, &c. that are found there. There is alſo a Burning Mountain. The great Riches of Rovergue conſiſt in Cattle and Wooll. The ſingle Trade of Mules which are carried thence into Spain, brings them above two hundred thouſand Crowns every year. Rovergue has divers Rivers, as the Tarn, the Lot, the Aveiron. And Cæſar ſpeaks of theſe People, which he calls Ruthenii. This Province is ordinarily divided into three Parts. Into the Higher-Marck, or Milhand, County of Rhodes, wherein is the City of the ſame Name, and into the Lower-Marck, where are Ville-Franche and Ville-Neuſe. All the Country is under the Government of Guienne, and belongs to the Parliament of Tholouſe. They reckon in it twenty five Cities and fifty great Towns. Theſe three Parts have as many Elections under the Generality of Montauban. Milhard hath many Forfeitures belonging to it. Naiac is noted for its Vitriol, St. Antonin for its Prunes, Roquefort for its Cheeſe. Marſillac, which gives Title to a Principality, hath in its neighbourhood the Cave de Bouche Roland, which goes above four Leagues under ground. Severac has the Title of a Dutchy, under the Name of Arpagon, Etrangues, and Eſtaing that of Earldoms, Rhodes and Vabres of Biſhopricks.

ROVIGO (in Latin Rhodigium) a little Town Capital of Poleſin, in the Republick of Venice. Its Diſtrict is environed with the River Adiga in form of an Iſland thereof. This City is the Reſidence of the Biſhop of Adria, and is famous for having been the Birth-place of Cardinal Roverella, and of the Learned Cœlius, ſurnamed Rhodiginus. It ſtands 20 m. to the W. of Adria, and 25 from Ferrara to the N. and about the ſame from Padoua to the South.

ROVILLA, the Name of one of the moſt ancient Families in Normandy, which was at firſt called Gouzeul, and by ſucceſſion, Rovilla.

ROUND-TABLE, See TABLE.

ROURE, or Roer, (in Latin Rura) a River of the Dutchy of Juliers in Germany. Trithemius ſaith it was called Rora in Latin, from Rorich, the Son of Clovis King of France, who was unfortunately drowned in it. Its firſt Riſe is near to the Village of Bullingen in the Country of Juliers, from whence it runneth by Duren, and the City of Juliers, and at laſt towards Ruremond, to which it gives the Name, and then falls into the Meuſe. Guichard, Deſcript. d' Pais bas.

ROUSSEAU, ROUSSELL, or LE ROUX, (Gerard) Abbot of Nerac, and afterwards Biſhop of Oleron, lived in the ſixteenth Century. He was a Dominican Friar, but quitting the Habit, he travelled into Germany, and became acquainted with the Doctrine of Luther, which he publiſhed afterwards in the Court of the Queen of Navarre, who procured him the Abby of Nerac, and after that, the Biſhoprick of Oleron, in 1540, and protected him againſt the Perſecutions of the Sorbonne, and got him his Liberty when taken Priſoner. Rouſſel had good Qualities, led an exemplary Life, and was the firſt that communicated under both kinds. It's ſaid he approved neither of the Doctrine of Luther, nor of Calvin altogether. He died in 1550, or 1551, by the means of Peter Arnaud de Mactie, who was acceſſary to his death, and whoſe Son, Arnaud, was afterwards Biſhop of Oleron. Sainte Marthe, Gal. Chriſt. T. 11. p. 832.

ROUSSI (Henry de) Lord of Seiſſone, near unto Laon, was deſcended from the ancient Race of the Counts of Sarbruch and Roſſi. He married the Lady Jaquelina de la Noi, by whom he had Nicholas and Claude de Rouſſi, Twins; who afterwards had for their ſhares, the Eldeſt, the Land and Lordſhip of Seiſſone; and the younger, that of Origni. They were born on the 7th. of April, 1548, ſo like one another, that their Nurſes were obliged to put Bracelets upon their Arms of different colours to diſtinguiſh them. This great Reſemblance of each other continued always, conſiſting not only in their proportion, and the lineaments of the Face, but alſo in their geſtures, humours and inclinations; inſomuch that being clad alike, not only Strangers, but even their Father and Mother could very hardly diſtinguiſh them. They were bred up firſt in the College, and afterwards at Court. The Sieur de Seiſſone was Page of the Preſence to Antony de Bourbon, King of Navarre, and the Sieur de Origni to young Henry of Bourbon, his Son, afterwards King of France. They were much beloved by Charles the IXth. who often took pleaſure to put them both together, and to obſerve them for a long time, thereby to find ſome diſtinguiſhing Marks between them, and having ſent them amongſt his Courtiers, made them afterwards to come into his Preſence again, without being able to diſtinguiſh them. The Sieur de Origni was an excellent Tennis-Player, and the Lord de Seiſſone engaged himſelf ſometimes in Matches that were diſadvantageous to him; to remedy which, he once left the Play, pretending to go about ſome neceſſary buſineſs, and cauſed his Brother cunningly to enter into his place, who retrieved his loſs, and won without either the Players or any of thoſe in the Galleries knowing any thing of the Change of Perſons made by them. It is moreover a thing worthy of Admiration, that the ſame Accidents that befel the one during his Life, happened a-like to the other; the ſame Diſeaſes, the ſame Wounds, at the ſame time, in the ſame parts of their Bodies; and when the Lord de Seiſſone ſickned, of the Diſeaſe whereof he died in the thirtieth year of his Age, through the Phyſicians fault; the Lord d'Origni found himſelf alſo at the ſame time attacked with the ſame Diſtemper, and his Life much endangered, but he eſcaped it through the Care of an Able Phyſician. Before they were Sick, their Pictures were both drawn upon one Cloth, in which they were truly Repreſented alike both in Air, Shape and Complexion. The Lord of Chandieu making the following Copy of Verſes, which were plac'd under their Picture.

> Sous un même aſcendant ces deux Jumeaux Enfans,
> Furent Pareils en Corps & Pareils en Viſage,

ROUSSILLON, an Earldom in the Pyrenæan Mountains, between Languedoc and Catalonia. It is on the South part of the Higher-Languedoc, with the Sea to the Eaſt, and Catalonia to the Weſt. Perpignan is the Capital City thereof; the others are Elme, Colioure, Ceret, &c. This Country was formerly united to Spain, and made part of Catalonia. John, King of Arragon, ſold it to Lewis XI. and King Charles VIII. gave it up to Ferdinand, upon condition he would grant no Succors to thoſe of Naples; but he kept not his Promiſe, and yet detained Rouſſillon; but Lewis the XIVth. hath retaken it from the Spaniards, and hath re-united it to France by the Pyrenæan Peace in 1659. This Country lies in the Mountains, and hath good Paſture; it has three very conſiderable Rivers in it; the Tet, Tech, and Egly. Rouſſillon has often been the Theatre of the War, although it be not above twenty or five and twenty Leagues from Eaſt to Weſt, and about twenty from North to South.

ROXANA, the Daughter of Oxiartes, a Perſian Prince, and one of the Ladies taken by Alexander upon his defeating of Darius. She was the handſomeſt Woman in Aſia, and that Conqueror no ſooner ſaw her, but he fell in Love with her, and marrying her, left her at his death, in the 431ſt. year of Rome, big of a Son, who was named Young Alexander. Caſſandra put afterwards both the Mother and Infant to death. Quintus Curtius, Plutarch.

ROXELLANA, a Sultaneſs, the Wife of Solyman the Magnificent, Emperor of the Turks, was a Woman of a great and very bold Spirit. Ambition tranſported her to commit the moſt notorious violences. Solyman had a Son, and his Eldeſt too, called Muſtapha; but ſhe was the Mother of Selim II. Bajazet, and two other Sons, and of Camena, the Wife of Ruſtan the Grand Vizier. Roxellana was ſollicitous to advance her Children to the Throne, and therefore pretended ſhe had an ardent deſire to build a Moſque and an Hoſpital for Strangers. Solyman, who loved this Woman paſſionately, and was alſo zealous for his Religion, eaſily conſented to it. She afterwards conſulted the Mufti about the Matter, who made anſwer, That her Deſign was Holy, but that theſe good Works could not conduce to the Salvation of the Soul of Roxellana, becauſe that being a Slave ſhe had no Eſtate of her own. The cunning Sultaneſs hereupon affected an extraordinary Melancholy, which made Solyman make her free. But coming to ſee her afterwards according to his uſual manner, ſhe refuſed to co-habit with him. And when the Mufti, in concert with her, gave him to underſtand that he could not have a free Woman without ſinning, he married her. Roxellana then being become the Wife of that Prince, managed her buſineſs ſo well that ſhe deſtroyed Muſtapha in 1553. After that Bajazet, her ſecond Son, revolted againſt him, and ſhe found a way to re-eſtabliſh him in his Father's favour. Roxellana died in 1561. She had been inſtrumental in the death of the Grand-Vizier Ibrahim, in 1546, as has been noted elſewhere. Baudier. Hiſt. des Turcs. Thuan. Hiſt. Lib. 12.

ROY (Lovis de) ſurnamed Regius, a Native of Coutances, in Normandy, was in eſteem among the Criticks of the laſt Age. His Letters, and the Life of Budæus, which he has publiſhed, made him quickly known to Foreigners, who became afterwards more fully ſatisfied of his Merit when he came to ſee them in the ſeveral Journeys he made into Italy, and elſewhere; after his return into France, he was made Profeſſor Royal of Philoſophy at Paris, where he publiſhed divers Pieces of his own compoſing, beſides ſeveral he tranſlated out of Greek into French. It's ſaid his Criticiſms created him much trouble, and that thereby he incurr'd the diſpleaſure of John du Bellay, who expoſed him furiouſly in his Verſes. Le Roy died in the year 1579. Sainte Marthe.

ROY (Marin) Lord of Gomberville, a Member of the French Academy, was one of thoſe that were choſen by Cardinal Richelieu to compoſe that Academy; they met as his Houſe for ſome time, in 1635, near unto the Church of St. Gervais, and that ſame year he made an Oration on the 7th of May, the ſubject whereof was, That when an Age produced an excellent

Hero, it found Perſons qualified to praiſe him; which is the ninth Academick Diſcourſe, mentioned in the Hiſtory of the Academy compoſed by M. Peliſſon. The Sieur de Gomberville has writ divers Tracts, whereof the firſt three are Romances, which he compoſed when thoſe ſort of Books were in Vogue in France; to wit, Polexander in five Volumes, Cytherea in four Volumes, and Young Alcidiana; the Preface to the Poems of Mainard is alſo of the Sieur Gomberville's compoſing, who has beſides that writ a Treatiſe of the Requiſites and Faults of Hiſtory, wherein he ſharply reproves certain famous Hiſtorians. He hath explained by way of Moral Diſcourſes the Deſcriptions out of which Otho Venius has compoſed his Moral Theatre of Humane Life. He writ beſides ſome Chriſtian and Spiritual Poems much in requeſt, as alſo an Hiſtory of the Amazons. He publiſhed the Latin Poems of M. de Lomenie de Brienne. The Sieur de Gomberville was born at Paris, about the end of the laſt Age; and died there in 1675, aged about eighty years. Memoirs des Tems.

ROY, an Illuſtrious Houſe, that has taken its Name from that of a Town called Roy, upon one of the Springs of the Moreville in Picardy.

ROYAUMOMT, an Abbey in the Government of the Iſle of France, Eight Leagues from Paris, towards the River Oiſe. In the year 1409, a ſtorm of Thunder and Lightning fell upon the Abbey-Church, and burnt down half on't with the Steeple, the Bells being likewiſe all melted, as was alſo the Lead that cover'd the Church. Juv. des Urſines Hiſt. de Char. VIth.

ROYSTON, a Market Town divided between Cambridgeſhire and Hartfordſhire, at the bottom of a Hill, in the Hundred of Odſey.

RUBEN, the eldeſt Son of Jacob and Leah, was born An. Mund. 2282. His Tribe had for its ſhare the Lands beyond Jordan. He died An. Mun. 2406. aged 124.

RUBENS (Albert) a Learned Man, and an excellent Explainer of Medals, was the Son of Peter Paul Rubens, a famous Painter and great Antiquary, and the Nephew of Philip Rubens, of whom we have his Electa, the Verſion of the Homelies of Aſterius, and ſome Latin Poems. Albert Rubens, according to the Sentiment of Voſſius and ſome other Learned Men, is the Author of the Commentary upon the Medals of the Count of Arſchot, and not Peter Paul his Father, as ſome have believed. He has alſo writ a Tract De veſtiaria & Lato Clavo, which was not printed till after his Death.

RUBENS (Sir Peter Paul) a Famous Painter Born at Cologn in 1577, was the beſt accompliſh'd of all the Flemiſh Maſters, and would have come up to the moſt Celebrated Italians, if his Parents, inſtead of placing him under the Tuition of Adam Van Noort and Octavio Venus, had bred him up in the Roman and Lombard Schools, yet notwithſtanding, he made ſo good uſe of that little time which he ſpent in thoſe places, that perhaps none of his Predeceſſors can boaſt a more beautiful Colouring, a Nobler Invention, or a more Luxuriant Fancy in their Compoſitions; But beſides his Talent in Painting, and his admirable Skill in Architecture, he was univerſally Learn'd, ſpoke Seven Languages very perfectly, was well read in Hiſtory, and withal ſo excellent a Stateſman that he was Imploy'd in ſeveral publick Negotiations of great Importance, which he manag'd with extraordinary Prudence and Conduct. His Principal Performances in Painting are in the Banquetting-Houſe at Whitehall, the Eſcurial in Spain, and the Luxemburgh Galleries at Paris; and in each of theſe three Courts, had the Honour of Knighthood conferred upon him, beſides ſeveral Magnificent Preſents. His uſual Abode was at Antwerp, where he built a ſpacious Apartment in imitation of the Rotunda at Rome, for a Noble Collection of Pictures which he had purchas'd in Italy; ſome of which, together with his Statues, Medals, and other Antiquities, he ſold to the Duke of Buckingham for ten Thouſand Pounds. He died Anno 1640, leaving vaſt Riches behind him to his Children, of whom Albert the Eldeſt ſucceeded him in the Office of Secretary of State in *Flanders. RUBICON, a little River of Æmilia in Gallia Ciſpadana, on the Southern Part of Gallia Ciſalpina, which ſeparates it from Italy, and diſchargeth it ſelf into the Adriatick Sea, called at this day Piſatello, a River of Romania, a Province of the Eccleſiaſtical Eſtate, which falls into the Gulf of Venice. They call it Rico, or Ragoſo, near unto its Spring. This River is famous in Hiſtory, by reaſon of Cæſar's paſſing over it, when he began to declare himſelf againſt the Republick. A Pillar was ſet up there that the Remembrance of ſo famous a Paſſage might not be loſt.

RUBIN, Prince of Antioch, was the Nephew of Leo I. King of Armenia, and the Son of Rubin's Daughter, Prince of Armenia, the Brother of Leo, and of Beimond, the Eldeſt Son of Beimond IIId. Prince of Antioch. He came to the Principality by the means of Leo, his Uncle, who expelled Beimond d'Iblaim. He afterwards married Chelvis, the Daughter of Amaury of Luſignan, King of Cyprus, and of Queen Civa, Siſter to Queen Sibylla, the Wife of King Leo. He was at laſt, after he had enjoyed the Principality ſeven years, driven out by the Emperor Frederick II. Hiſtoire de Roiaume de Cipre.

RUBRUQUIS (William) a Franciſcan Friar, ſent by the King Saint Lovis to Sartach, a Tartarian Prince. Vid. SARTACH.

RUEL (John) a famous Phyſician, a Native of Soiſſons, was in great eſteem in the ſixteenth Age; having learn'd the Greek and Latin Tongues, he imploy'd them very advantageouſly for the publick, by tranſlating divers Greek Authors, which procured him the Honour of being ſtyled, The Eagle of Interpreters, which Budæus beſtowed upon him. Ruel has writ divers other Pieces, and was ſo bent upon Study, that he neglected to follow the Court, whither he was called by King Francis I. and Loviſa of Savoy his Mother. Stephen Boucher Biſhop of Paris, brought him into that City; and Ruel having already buried his Wife, accepted of a Prebendſhip which that Prelate beſtowed upon him in the Church of Nôtre-dame. He died in 1537, aged about 63.

RUFFACH, Lat. Rubeacum, a ſmall City in the Upper-Alſatia, in the Territory of Mundal, upon the River Roltback, once an Imperial and Free City, but taken by Turenne in 1675, after a great Defeat of the Imperialiſts, and now under the Biſhop of Strasburg. It's one of the ancienteſt Towns in Alſatia, and was, for the Fertility of its Soil, for five hundred years the Seat of ſome of the Roman Nobility. It ſtands three miles from Briſac to the Weſt, and two from Mulhuſe to the North.

RUFFEC, Lat. Roffiacum, and Ruffiacum, a little Town in the Dioceſs of Poictiers, about five or ſix Leagues from Angoulême.

RUFINA, Vid CLAUDIA RUFINA.

RUFINI, the Family of the Rufini in Rome, which was a Branch of that of the Cornelii. P. Cornelius was the Father of P. Corn. Rufinus, Conſul in the 464 year of the building of Rome, with M. Curius Dentatus. They had good Succeſs againſt the Samnites. Rufinus had again the Honour of the Conſulſhip in 477, with C. Junius Bubulcus, and afterwards the Office of Dictator. The Cenſor Fabricius cauſed him to be turned out of the Senate, for that he was too great a Lover of Luxury, and had found in his Houſe as much Silver Plate as was valued at fifteen Marks. He left a Son of his own Name, and this ſame was the Father of P. Corn. Rufinus, that was ſurnamed Sulla or Sylla, for that he had drawn out of the Books of the Sibyls, an Authority for the Inſtitution of the Plays in Honour of Apollo. He had two Son, P. and Ser. Cornel. Rufinus. The firſt, Governor of Sicily, left a Son of his own Name, the Father of L. Corn. that ſucceeded, and of P. Cornel. P. Corn. Sulla was the Son of this laſt, who was defended by Cicero in an Oration we have to this day, and who had alſo a Son of his Name Conſul in 749 with Auguſtus. L. Corn. Sulla of whom I have ſpoken under Sulla, was the Father of another whom P. Sirius killed in Spain, after the Death of Pompey. Tit. Liv. Florus, Dion. Cicero, Caſſiodorus.

RUFINUS, a Prieſt of Aquileia, and a Monk, lived in the fourth Age and the beginning of the fifth. He was ſo famous, that St. Jerom, in his Chronicle, particularly remarks, that among all the Monks of Aquileia, Florentius, Bonoſus and Rufinus, were the moſt Illuſtrious. It was there that St. Jerom contracted Friendſhip with thoſe three pious Men, and having afterwards retired into the Deſarts of Syria, and learning by Heliodorus, that Rufinus had left Rome, with Melania, in order to go viſit the Hermits of Egypt, he writ to him his 41ſt. Letter all full of Tenderneſs and Commendation. We may ſee by a Letter of the ſame St. Jerom to Florentius, that after he came to underſtand that Rufinus was, together with Melania arrived at Jeruſalem, he writ him another Epiſtle which we have loſt. Rufinus lived five and twenty years at Jeruſalem, and compoſed divers Works there. He returned to Rome about 397. His great Inclination to the Works of Origen, cauſed a Rupture between St. Jerom and him. This Diviſion between two excellent Men came at laſt to extremity, and grew ſomewhat unfortunate, however Theophilus reconciled them. But Rufinus having publiſhed at Rome a Tranſlation of Origen's Books de Principiis, without putting his Name to it, their Friendſhip was at an end; for that having therein praiſed St. Jerom for the Eſteem he had of Origen, he gave occaſion of ſuſpecting him as a Follower of his Errors. This miſunderſtanding had pernicious Conſequences. St. Jerom complained highly of Rufinus, whom he treated as an Heretick and Predeceſſor of Pelagius and his Adherents. And Rufinus run him down in three Invectives he diſperſed among his Party. Pope Anaſtaſius having Information hereof, cited him to appear, and anſwer to the Points alledged againſt him; but he would not come, and only ſent his Apology. The Pope condemned Rufinus, who according to what may be gathered from the Writings of St. Jerom, died in Sicily about 410. He had Tranſlated out of Greek into Latin, the Works of Joſephus; the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtory of Euſebius; and ſome other Pieces. He added at the deſire of S. Paulinus two Books to That Hiſtory of the Church. He publiſhed alſo that of the Fathers of the Deſart, which Baronius and ſome others attribute without reaſon to Evagrius. We have alſo of his ſome Commentaries upon the Prophets Hoſea, Joel, and Amos, and ſome other Pieces in A Collection of his Works Printed at Paris in Folio, in 1580. St. Auguſtin. Baron. Bellarm.

RUFINUS, Captain of the Guard, and Patrician. The Emperor Theodoſius the Great raiſed him from a very mean Condition to the higheſt Honour in the Empire, and at his death left him Guardian to his Son Arcadius. Rufinus, being ambitious, reſolved to put himſelf upon the Throne; to which end he called the Goths and other Barbarians into the Empire, that during that Deſolation he might have an opportunity to ſeize upon it, or divide it between them and himſelf. His Charge capacitated him to put into the hands of his Creatures thoſe Governments that were of greateſt importance: In the mean time the Goths entred into the Empire, and came to beſiege Conſtantinople. Rufinus hindred their being repulſed: He gave Orders that the Eaſtern Army ſhould advance near the City, and in the mean time diſpoſed of all things in order to be declared Emperor, when he ſhould go viſit the Camp with Arcadius. He had engaged divers Perſons of Quality in his Conſpiracy, and was ſure of the Barbarians. But his Deſign coming to be diſcovered, he was kill'd in the midſt of the Army, in 395, whither he had brought the Emperor in order to have him murder'd, and to ſecure the Empire to himſelf by his death. His Body was hewed to pieces, and his Head carried upon a Lance, and ſhewed to the People, who hated him for his Avarice and Cruelty. A certain Perſon having cut off one of his Hands, and ſeeing that the Nerves which moved the Joints were hanging, bethought himſelf of going to beg Alms in the Name of Rufinus, opening or ſhutting the bloody Hand according to what was given him. Zoſim. lib. 5. Niceph.l. 15. Claudian in Rufin. &c.

RUFINUS, or P. Cornelius Rufinus, a Roman, was made Dictator An. Rom. 420, in the Conſulſhip of T. Viturius and Sp. Poſthumius; he was entruſted with this Charge, upon a Report made, That the Samnites had taken up Arms. Rufinus gave the Command of Colonel of the Cavalry to M. Antonius, and both the one and the other of them laid down, for that there was ſome default in the Ceremonies of their Creation, as did alſo the other Magiſtrates for the ſame reaſon. Tit. Liv.

RUGEN, an Iſland and Principality of the Baltick-Sea upon the Coaſt of Pomerania. It hath been formerly more conſiderable than it is at preſent. Ericus King of Denmark gave it, in 1438, to the Duke of Pomerania; but having been ſince taken by the Swedes, it has been confirmed to them by the Peace of Munſter, in 1648. It is ſurrounded with ſome other ſmall Iſlands, Peninſula's and Gulfs. Its Soil is very fertile, being as it were the Granary of the neighbouring Countries. In it are all ſorts of Animals except Wolves and Rats. In this Iſle were formerly Towns and Fortreſſes well peopled, but they lie at preſent almoſt all ruin'd, becauſe of the Wars. Its Inhabitants received not the Chriſtian Religion till about 813, in the time of the Emperor Lewis the Debonnaire; yet they forſook it a little after, and embraced a vaſt many Superſtitions, together with the Hereſy of the Manichæans: but about the year 1168 Waldemar King of Denmark brought them to the Faith again. This Iſland is about ſeven German miles ſquare, but the Sea breaks in and covers a conſiderable part of the middle of it from the Weſt, and almoſt divides it into ſeveral Iſlands: This was cauſed by an outrageous Tempeſt in 1309, a part of this Iſland at the ſame time which lay to the South-eaſt as far as the Iſle of Ruden, then join'd with this, was torn away, and ſunk ſo deep into the bottom of the Sea, that the greateſt Ships may ſail over it. *Mercator. RUMFORD, a Market-Town in the County of Eſſex, in Sheway Lath, noted on account of the great reſort of the London Butchers to the ſame to buy Calves.

RUMIA, or Rumilia, a Goddeſs which the Romans invoked for to take care of their ſucking Children, called anciently Ruma by the Latins. When they ſacrificed to this Goddeſs, they uſed no Wine, but offer'd Milk and Water mix'd with Honey. Plut. in Vit. Rom.

RUPERT, Prince Palatine of the Rhine, Duke of Cumberland, Knight of the moſt noble Order of the Garter, &c. was Son to Frederick, Prince Elector Palatine of the Rhine, and Elizabeth Daughter to King James the Sixth of Scotland, and Firſt of England, afterwards King and Queen of Bohemia. Their Son, Prince Rupert, was born December the 17th. 1619. In 1632 he marched with the Prince of Orange to the Siege of Rhineberg, though but thirteen years old, and gave proof of his Courage and Conduct much above his years. In 1637, being about eighteen years of age, he commanded a Regiment of German Horſe in the Wars; and in 1638 was taken Priſoner by the Imperialiſts, who detained him three years; but having procured his Liberty, he came into England in 1642, and offer'd his Service to King Charles I. his Uncle, who made him Knight of the Garter, and gave him a Command in the Army, wherewith he marched to Worceſter, then beſieged by Captain Fienes, whom he obliged to diſlodge, and defeated ſeveral Regiments who were coming to his aſſiſtance, having attack'd them in a Paſs where not above four could march in Front; but upon information that the Earl of Eſſex was marching towards Worceſter, he went to Ludlow, twenty miles thence. At Edge-hill he commanded the Right-wing of the King's Horſe, and charged the Parliaments Left-wing with ſo much Gallantry that he totally routed them, purſuing them as far as Kineton with great ſlaughter. In 1643, the Parliament having drawn a great Strength into Cirenceſter, he commanded the Prince with 4000 Horſe and Foot to ſeize the Town, which he did by ſurprize, after an hour's reſiſtance, taking 1100 Priſoners, and 3000 Arms. After this he ſummoned Glouceſter to ſurrender, but without ſucceſs; whereupon he took a courſe into Wales, and returning, beſieged Lichfield with ſo much vigour, that he compelled the Governour to ſurrender: A little after he took Birmingham, whence he march'd to the King at Oxford, attack'd the Parliamentarians at Poſtcomb and Chimer in their Quarters, and took many of them. He alſo defeated Colonel Hampden, Sheffeld, and a part of the Parliaments Army at Chalgrove-field, where he kill'd and took many. Upon the Queen's arrival at Oxford, he was commanded by the King to join his Brother, Prince Maurice, and reduce Briſtol, which he did in three days. He afterwards march'd with the King to the Siege of Glouceſter, but was commanded thence, to oppoſe the Earl of Eſſex's March, wherein he behaved himſelf with great Gallantry, but was obliged to retire. As the Earl was returning to London after having raiſed the Siege of Glouceſter, the Prince, with the greateſt part of the King's Horſe, charged him as marching over Woburn Chaſe, and put his Army into much diſorder. He behaved himſelf with no leſs Gallantry at Newbury Fight, where he was obliged to retire at firſt by the Parliaments Horſe; but rallying again, put them in confuſion, and drove them back to the Lane's-end, and Night drawing on ſeparated both Armies. At Oxford, the January following, the Prince was created Duke of Cumberland and Earl of Holderneſſe. In March following he was commanded to the relief of Newark, and marched with ſuch ſpeed as to prevent the fame of his coming: Sir John Meldrum, who beſieged it with 8000 Horſe and Foot, endeavoured to hinder his joining with the Forces under the Lord Loughborough, but was worſted, and obliged to retreat; ſo advancing towards Newark, he fought the Parliament Forces, having entred the Enemies Ranks ſo far that he was known and dangerouſly aſſaulted by three ſturdy Soldiers, whereof he ſlew one with his Sword, a ſecond was piſtoll'd by one of his Gentlemen, and the third being ready to lay his Hand upon the Prince's Collar, had it almoſt chopt off by Sir William Neal; being thus diſingaged, he charg'd with ſo much fury, that he beat the Parliamentarians to their Works; and in a ſecond Charge beat them out of the Field, ſo that Meldrum was obliged to draw his Forces into his Works, and compound on the uſual Articles. In 1644 he march'd to relieve York, then beſieged by the Scots, Mancheſter's and Fairfax's Armies, taking in his way Longford and Tong-Caſtle in Shropſhire, Stopford in Cheſhire, Bolton in Lancaſhire, and raiſed the Siege of Latham-houſe, which had been defended 18 months by the Counteſs of Derby. He alſo defeated divers ſmall Parties that encounter'd him at ſeveral times. On the 1ſt. of July he advanced near York; whereupon the Parliamentarians drew off, and the Prince overtook them on Marſton Moor, where he gave them Battle, and entirely defeated their Right Wing, conſiſting of the Lord Fairfax's Troops in the Van, and the Scots Cavalry in the Rear; the Yorkſhire Horſe being not well trained, contributed much to the defeat of this Wing: But on the other hand, Cromwell being Lieutenant-General under Mancheſter, charged the Marquis of Newcaſtle with ſuch an irreſiſtible force, by the aſſiſtance of Sir David Leſley and another Body of Scots, that they gained an entire Victory, though Prince Rupert did all he could to retrieve his loſs; but finding it impoſſible, he retired through Lancaſhire and Shropſhire, often defeating ſeveral Parties of the Parliamentarians upon the Severn. In May 1645 he brought off the King from Oxford, which General Fairfax had a mind to beſiege; after which he relieved Cheſter, and took Leiceſter by ſtorm; whereof Fairfax having notice, march'd to give him battle, and falling upon the King's head Quarters at Naſeby the King retired to Harborough, where the Prince and the Van of the Army quarter'd, call'd up the Prince, and ſummon'd a Council of War, wherein it was reſolved to march back and fight the Enemy; which was accordingly done, and the Prince behaved himſelf with extraordinary Gallantry, having routed three Diviſions of the Enemies Left Wing: but notwithſtanding of this, the Victory fell on the Parliament ſide. The Prince, after this, put himſelf into Briſtol, the moſt important Garriſon the King then had, where he was ſummoned to ſurrender by Fairfax, who ſent him an amicable Letter, inſinuating the Honour and Reſpect the Parliament and People of England had for his Family, high Birth, Valour, and other rare Endowments. There was a Ceſſation of Arms hereupon, yet the Town was afterwards ſurrender'd upon honourable Terms, after a gallant Reſiſtance, Fairfax denying the Prince liberty to conſult the King in that important Affair. After which he went for Oxford, which he left two days before its ſurrender, and went to France. In 1648 he accompanied King Charles II. from Holland with part of the Navy which had returned to him, and attempted the relief of Colcheſter, Sandwich, Walmore and Deal Caſtles, but in vain. He was conſtituted Admiral of the King's Navy, much annoying the Engliſh in the Weſtern Seas; ſo that Blake was ſent againſt him, and took ſome of his Ships, but he eſcaped himſelf, and infeſted both the Engliſh and Spaniſh

Ships. He took, among others, an Engliſh Ship of 39 Guns, which he made his Rear-Admiral; and having cruiſed about the Caribbee Iſlands, and taken five or ſix Prizes, he left his Brother, Prince Maurice, who was caſt away betwixt the Iſlands of St. Chriſtopher and Tortudas. After this he arrived in France, was highly complemented by that Court, and kindly received by King Charles II. who ſojourned there for the time. The reſt of his time, till that King's Reſtoration, he ſpent in Princely Studies. In 1662 he was made one of the Privy-Council, and attended His Majeſty to receive the Queen at Portſmouth. In 1664 he put to Sea with His Majeſty's Fleet, and, including their Bourdeaux Fleet, took 135 Dutch Prizes that year. In 1665 he accompanied his Royal Highneſs the Duke of York to Sea again, and appear'd before the Texel in Holland with an hundred and fourteen Ships, and afterwards defeated their Fleet of an hundred and three Men of War, eleven Fire-Ships, and ſeven Yatchs; The Dutch, ſays the Author of his Life, loſing thirty of their beſt Ships. Feb. 26, that year, a Third-Rate, call'd Rupert, in honour of his Name, was launched at Harwich. In 1666 he was with the Duke of Albemarle made joint-Admiral, and the Prince commanding the Blue Squadron ſail'd in queſt of the French, ſuſpected of a deſign to come and join the Dutch; but the Duke of Albemarle being engaged by the Dutch in the mean time, had been hardly put to it, if the Prince had not come to his aſſiſtance, and fought with incredible Courage, having five times broken through the Dutch Fleet, and fought and defeated them in two bloody Fights, chaſing ſome of 'em into their Harbours; but the Dutch putting to Sea again, ſpeedily paſs'd the Goodwin to join the French. In 1673 he was made Admiral at Sea, and being terrible to the Dutch, repulſed them in their attempt to block up the entrance into the Thames. The Prince ſail'd to join the French Squadron under d'Eſtree, and on the 28th. of March engaged the Dutch Fleet about five Leagues off of the Wheelings; the Engliſh fell on the Van commanded by Van Trump, who was obliged to retire, then the reſt of the Fleet engaged de Ruyter, and the Prince who commanded the Van behaved himſelf with ſo much Courage, that de Ruyter fled, and the Prince having purſu'd him as far as the Sands would allow, ſtood off to Sea, and ſent an Account of the Action to Secretary Arlington. On the 2d. of June the Dutch put to Sea again, and then happened another bloody Rencounter, wherein Sir Edward Sprag and the Earl of Oſſery carried themſelves with wonderful Gallantry, and the Prince, who was in the Rear, acquitted himſelf with unſpeakable Courage. The Dutch went off in the Night, and the Prince, by Advice of a Council of War, returned to the Thames with the Fleet. In July, the ſame year, he came to another Engagement with the Dutch; but the French, pretending to get the Wind, ſailed away: ſo that the Prince being attack'd by de Ruyter and Bankert both at once, was hard put to it; but bearing up with invincible Reſolution, charged through them ſeveral times, and, in ſhort, acquitted himſelf ſo, that had the French play'd their part, he might have aſſured himſelf of a compleat Victory; the Dutch ſuſtaining great loſs as it was, though de Ruyter laid claim to the Victory. In this Battle died Sir Edward Spragg, as going to join the Earl of Oſſery, and board Van Trump. On the 24th. the Prince returned with the Fleet to the Buoy-of-the-Nore, and was kindly received by His Majeſty, who declared himſelf very well ſatisfied with his Conduct. A Peace being concluded not long after, the Prince applied himſelf to his Chymical and Philoſophical Studies; from whence he hath furniſh'd us with many curious Arts, and uſeful Inventions. He took extraordinary delight in Windſor-Caſtle, which he beautify'd and adorn'd, and died Novemb. 29. 1682, and was Interred with all the Magnificence beſeeming his great Birth, amongſt the reſt of the Blood Royal in King Henry VIIth's Chapel, Weſtminſter.

S. RUPERT, was a Frenchman originally, and of the Royal Blood. Having been raiſed to be a Biſhop, he exerciſed his Function in the Dioceſe of Worms, though 'tis not certain whether he was the proper Biſhop, or that he participated with him who had that quality in the Cares and Labours of the Paſtoral Offices: The moſt common opinion is, That he was really Biſhop of Worms, but that he was driven from his See by a great Lord whom he had reprehended for his Faults and Diſorders. Theodore Duke of Bavaria, who governed from 695 till 711, in the time of Childebert III. King of Auſtraſia, having invited S. Rupert to come into his Country, he went to him to Ratisbonne, and after he had inſtructed him in the Myſteries of the Faith he baptized him, and a great number of Perſons of all ſorts and conditions followed the Example of their Prince. He continued his Preaching at Lorchet and Jevare; he ſtay'd in this laſt City, which hath ſince been called Saltzbourg, and there built the Church of St. Peter, where he fixed his Epiſcopal See. This is the original of the famous Abbey of St. Peter in Saltzbourg. After ſuch a happy beginning he went into his own Country, and brought with him from thence twelve Preachers. He died March 27. 718. P. Mabillon.

RUPERT, Abbot of Limbourg in the Dioceſe of Spire, who not content to enjoin his Monks not to eat Fleſh, would have them beſides forbear the uſe of Fiſh, Eggs, Milk and Wine, under pretence of ſome Revelation he ſaid he had received; but they all oppoſed him, ſo that he was baniſhed by the Biſhop of the place: And having been recall'd a little while after, he perſiſted ſtill in the ſame Reſolution to his death, and ſuffered much perſecution for the ſame. He flouriſh'd about 1124, and wrote a Commentary upon the Canticles.

RUPERT, Abbot of Tux or Tuitienſis, was famous for his Learning and Piety. He died in 1135: He left divers Works behind him, of which there are ſeveral Editions, as thoſe of Cologn, Louvain and Paris in 1638, in two Volumes, which contain forty two Books of the Trinity, Commentaries, Treatiſes of Theology, and ſome Lives of the Saints.

RUREMOND, the ſecond City of Guelderland, belonging to the King of Spain, with a Biſhoprick under Malines. It ſtands upon the Meuſe, at the mouth of the Roer or Rura, from which it takes its Name. Its Collegiate-Church was erected in 1559 into a Cathedral by Pope Paul IV. William Lindall was the firſt Prelate of it. The City is large, fair and rich, having many ſtately Monaſteries in it, whereof that of the Carthuſians is the moſt conſiderable. Guichardin. Gaſey. Sante Marthe.

RURICIUS, Biſhop of Limoges, lived in the Fifth Century: He was of the illuſtrious Family of the Anicians. He married Liberia the Daughter of Ommachus; and Sidonius Apollinaris, who was his Friend, compoſed upon that Marriage an Epithalamium which is yet extant. Ruricius was choſen Biſhop of Limoges after Aſtedius. We find alſo, beſides Sidonius Apollinaris, that Cæſarius of Arles, Fauſtus of Riez, Sedacius Victorinus, &c. have writ Letters to him. We have two Books of his, which Henry Caniſius hath publiſhed in the Fifth Tome of his Antiquæ Lectiones, having taken them out of the Abbey of St. Gall in Swiſſerland. Ruricius excuſes himſelf there, that he could not be preſent at the Council of Agde, in 506, and ſays, That the Infirmities of Old Age were a ſufficient hindrance; which manifeſts he lived not long after. Fortunatus, lib. 4. Sidonius Apollinaris, lib. 4. ep. 16. lib. 5. ep. 15, &c. S. Marthe Gall. Chriſt. &c.

RUSBROCHIUS (John) or Ruisbroech, ſo called, for that he was born in a Village of that Name upon the Sambre in Brabant, lived in the Fourteenth Age. He writ divers Pieces of Myſtical Theology in his Country Language; and Denys the Carthuſian Fryar, or Dionyſius Carthuſianus, and others, have rendred them into Latin. There are ſeveral Editions of them; that of Cologn in 1609, in 4to, is the moſt valued: In the beginning is the Life of Rusbrochius, writ by Henry de Pomere. The principal Pieces are, Summa Vitæ Spiritualis; Speculum Salutis Æternæ; Commentaria in Tabernaculum Moſis, &c. three Books De Nuptiis Spiritualibus, cenſured by Gerſon; Though (ſays Moreri) without grounds for it. Rusbrochius departed this life Septemb. 2. 1381, aged 88. Le Mire. Val. Andreas.

RUSINA was acknowledged by the Ancient Gentiles for a Rural or Country Goddeſs, who preſided over all the Labours and all the Divertiſements of the Country.

RUSSEL or Roſſel, Biſhop of Lincoln, and Doctor in Divinity, was one of the moſt learned Men of his time. He was much eſteem'd, and had conſiderable Employments in the State, as well as in the Church, being one of the Kings Privy-Council, and Lord Chancellor of England. The moſt conſiderable of his Works are, Upon the Canticles; De Poteſtate Summi Pontificis & Imperatoris, &c. He is ſuppoſed to live to 1484, in the Reign of Edward IV. King of England. Pitts de Illuſt. Angl. Script. Sir Tho. Moor, &c.

RUSSEL, Earl and Duke of Bedford, an ancient Family in Dorſetſhire, who have been for many Ages poſſeſſed of a fair Eſtate in that County, as appears upon Record in the 3d. of King John, at which time John Ruſſel paid 50 Marks to the King for Licenſe to marry the Siſter of a great Man call'd Doun Bardolf. This John was Conſtable of Corf-Caſtle in 5 Hen. III. and had a Son called Ralph, who married Iſabel, Daughter and Co-heir of James de Newmarch, a Baron. His Son William, in 12 Edward I. obtained the Markets and Fairs for Kingſton Ruſſel in Dorſetſhire, which is ſtill poſſeſſed by this Family: But the firſt of them advanced to the Peerage was John Ruſſel of Berwick, near Bridport, Dorſetſhire, who being a Gentleman of excellent Accompliſhments, and one who had travelled, was ſent for by Sir Thomas Trenchard, to entertain Philip Arch-Duke of Auſtria, who was driven aſhore at Weymouth. This Prince was ſo much taken with Mr. Ruſſel, that he deſired his company to Court at Windſor, where he recommended him to King Henry VII. to whom, as alſo to King Henry VIII. his Deportment and Qualifications rendred him very acceptable. He attended the latter at the taking of Terouenne and Tournay, being then a Gentleman of his Privy-Chamber; and for his Service had Lands granted him in Tournay, in 8 Hen. VIII. and was Knighted for his Service at taking Morlets in Bretany. In the 15th. of that King he was made Marſhal of the Marſhalſea, and employ'd in Negotiations to the Emperor Charles V. the French King, Pope, and Duke of Lorrain. He was alſo at the Battle of Pavia, where Francis King of France was taken Priſoner, and attended King Henry at entertaining the ſaid King at Calais, &c. In the 29th. of that Reign he was made Comptroller of the Houſhold, ſworn of the Privy-Council, and on the 29th. of March following created a Baron of England; and being ſo much in favour, had a large ſhare in the Abbey-Lands, &c. upon the diſſolution of Monaſteries; and was made Warden of the Stannaries in Devon and Cornwall, as he was ſuddenly after inſtall'd Knight of the Garter, and created Preſident of the Council for the Weſtern Parts. In 32 Hen. VIII. he was ſent with ſome Forces againſt the French King; and in the 34th. made Lord-Keeper of the Privy-Seal, and Captain-General of the Vanguard of the Army againſt France. Henry VIII. on his Death-bed appointed him of the Council to Prince Edward, for whoſe Coronation he was appointed Lord High Steward of England. In 2 Edw. VI. he was ſent againſt the Rebels of Devon, defeated them at Fennyton-Bridge, relieved Exon, kill'd 600, and took 4000; for which, and other Services, he was created Earl of Bedford, Jan. 19. 3 Edw. VI. and next year ſent Embaſſador into France. He was alſo Lord Privy Seal to Queen Mary, who ſent him into Spain to attend her Nuptials with King Philip. He died March 14. 2 Mary, at his Houſe in London, and was buried at Cheneys, Com. Bucks. His Wife was Ann, ſole Heir to Sir Guy Sapcotes, who by her Will bequeathed her Mannor of Thornhaw to the Lord Edward Ruſſel her Grandſon. John Earl of Bedford was ſucceeded by his Son Francis, created Knight of the Bath at the Coronation of Edward VI. took Arms for Queen Mary after that King's death, aſſiſted at the Siege of St. Quintins in Picardy, and was commiſſioned to raiſe Men for the relief of Calis. In 1 Eliz. he was ſworn of the Privy Council, and ſent twice afterwards Embaſſador to France. In 6 Eliz. he was made Governour of Berwick upon Tweed, ſent afterwards Embaſſador to Scotland, and aſſiſted at the Baptiſm of King James VI. in that Kingdom, where the Queen preſented him with a Font of pure Gold. In 15 Eliz. he ſat on the Tryal of the Duke of Norfolk. In the 24th. he treated with the Duke of Alençon about marrying the ſaid Queen; and in the 26th. did by his Will order his Corps to be buried at Cheneys, and twenty Godly Sermons to be preached there the next five months after his death, for which he allowed 20 l. To the Lord Burleigh, then High Treaſurer, he bequeathed his great George of Lapis Lazuli garniſh'd with Gold and Precious-Stones, and all his Manuſcripts of Wickliff's Works. To the Lord John, his Son and Heir, he bequeathed his Parliament and Garter Robes and George; and left 20 l. per an. for two poor Students in Univerſity College, Oxon. His firſt Lady was Margaret Daughter to Sir John St. John, Siſter to the Lord St. John, by whom he had four Sons and three Daughters, who were married to the Earls of Warwick, Bath, and Cumberland. His ſecond Wife was Daughter to John Lord Heuſe, by whom he had no Iſſue. He died July 28. 27 Eliz. and was ſucceeded by Edward his Grand-ſon, who dying without Iſſue May 3. 1627. Francis Lord Ruſſel of Thornhaw, Son of William, fourth Son of Francis Earl of Bedford above-mentioned, ſucceeded; which William was General of the Engliſh Horſe in the Netherlands, Governour of Fluſhing, and Deputy of Ireland. His Son Francis Earl of Bedford married Catharine ſole Daughter to Giles Bridges, Lord Chandois; and in 6 Car. I. was the principal Undertaker for draining the vaſt Fens call'd the Great Level, in Northampton, Cambridge, Huntingdon, Norfolk and Lincoln-ſhires; died May 9. 1641, and was buried at Cheneys. He had four Sons, William made Knight of the Bath, at the Coronation of King Charles I. Francis, who died unmarried; John, a Colonel under King Charles I. Edward; and four Daughters, Catharine married to Robert Lord Brook, Ann to George Earl of Briſtol, Margaret to James Earl of Carliſle, and Diana to Francis Lord Newport of Ercal. William his eldeſt Son and Succeſſor was elected Knight of the Garter, in 1672; and by his Lady Ann, Daughter to Robert Earl of Somerſet, hath had ſeven Sons, Francis dead without Iſſue, John died in his Infancy, William afterwards Lord Ruſſel, Edward, Robert, James and George; and three Daughters, viz. Diana firſt married to Sir Grevil Verney of Compton Verney, Com. War. Knight of the Bath, and afterward to William Lord Allington; Ann who died young, and Margaret who was lately married to Admiral Ruſſel. William Lord Ruſſel, the Earl's third Son, was married to Rachel Daughter and Coheir to Thomas late Earl of Southampton, Lord High Treaſurer of England, Widow of Francis Lord Vaughan, eldeſt Son to Richard Earl of Carbery. He hath left one Son, Wriotheſly now Duke of Bedford William the late Duke of Bedford was choſen General of the Parliament Horſe in the Wars between King Charles I. and the Parliament, dignify'd with the Garter by King Charles II. and ſince the acceſſion of Their Majeſties King William and Queen Mary to the Crown, choſen one of the Privy-Council, appointed Lord-Lieutenant of Middleſex, and created Duke of Bedford, &c. The great Service done to the Nation by his Son-in-Law Admiral Ruſſel, in defeating the French Fleet under Tourville —— 1692, is ſufficiently known, and needs not here be enlarged upon.

RUSSIA ALBA, or White Ruſſia. Vid. MUSCOVIA.

RUSSIA NIGRA, or Black or Little Ruſſia, a Province of Poland between Volhinia, Podolia, Little Poland, Hungary and Tranſilvania. The Inhabitants of this Country are called by Latin Authors Ruſſi or Rutheni, for that they are eſteem'd to deduce their original from the Roxolans. Ruſſia has had formerly its particular Dukes, and the Grand Czar of Muſcovy put to death in the Sixteenth Age, the laſt of the Race of thoſe Princes. Its Capital City is Leopoll or Luvow, which the Germans call Ruſſelemberg; the others are Premiſlau, Belz, Chelm or Chielmnick, Jeroſlaw, Zamoski, &c.

RUSTAN, Grand Viſier and Son-in-Law of Solyman II. who reigned in 1550, was the Son of a Cow-herd, and had been himſelf a Cow-herd; but he had a Genius worthy of a nobler Extract, which raiſed him even to the Charge of Grand Viſier, and to the honour of being Son-in-Law to the Grand Signior: He had various fortunes, and was for ſome time in diſgrace; but finally, Solyman, who had great Affairs upon the Wheel, and made War upon the Perſians, having need of Money, recall'd Ruſtan, and committed to him the management of his Exchequer; he knew his great Ability, and how capable he was to put his Treaſury quickly into a good condition; in which that Miniſter laboured with ſo much care and ſucceſs, that he quickly filled the Coffers, and re-eſtabliſhed the Affairs of the Empire. Tavernier.

RUSTICI (John Francis) a famous Carver, flouriſh'd in the beginning of the laſt Age; he was of Florence, where he learn'd to Deſign and Carve of Andrew Verrochio, who ſeeing that from his very Youth he was of himſelf addicted to make little Earthen Pictures, judg'd, by that ſlender beginning, of the force of his Imagination, and took him under his conduct to teach him how to uſe his Pencil and Hammer. Ruſtici found in this School Leonard de Vinci, by emulating of whom, as well as by the care of that learned Maſter, he became one of the moſt famous of his Profeſſion in Italy. The greateſt part of the Statues he made are of Braſs; amongſt the moſt remarkable are thoſe of Leda, Europa, Neptune, Vulcan, a naked Man on Horſe-back of an extraordinary height; a Woman twelve foot high, repreſenting one of the Graces. In 1528 he came into France to preſent himſelf to Francis I. for whom he made ſome conſiderable Pieces; it is believed alſo that he died there, being unwilling to return again to Florence, becauſe of the Factions that troubled the City. Acad. des Arts.

RUSTICUS, a Deacon of the Roman Church in the Sixth Age. In 548, being diſſatisfied that Pope Vigilius had condemned the three Chapters, he joined himſelf to Stephen alſo a Deacon, and they together formed a Schiſm againſt that Pope: They drew into it the Sub-Deacons, Notaries of the Church, and ſome others. They writ Letters to divers Eaſtern Biſhops againſt the Pope, whereby they blamed Vigilius for having forſaken the defence of the Council of Chalcedon, to pleaſe the Emperor Juſtinian. Ruſticus compoſed a Dialogue, part of which we yet have, where he treats him very ill. Vigilius excommunicated him and his Adherents. Baronius in Annal. Bellar. De Script. Eccl.

RUSTICUS ELPIDIUS, or Ruſticus Helpidius, of a Noble Family, Phyſician to Theodoric King of the Goths; he was in eſteem in the Fourth Age. He compoſed in Heroick Verſe, The Hiſtory of the Old and New Teſtament; and a Tract of Chriſt's Works, which have been publiſhed by George Fabricius. He has alſo writ in a like Verſe, Comfort againſt Sorrow, which we have loſt, and whereof he makes mention himſelf.

RUTH, a Moabitiſh Woman. In the time of the Judges a great Famine happening in Iſrael, a Man of Bethlehem named Elimelech, went with his Wife Naomi and his two Sons into the Land of Moab, to find Suſtenance. Elimelech dying there, Naomi remained alone with her two Sons, whom ſhe married to two Maidens of the Country of Moab, one of which was called Ruth, who married the youngeſt. Two years after the two Sons of Naomi died, and ſhe, willing to return into her own Country, deſired her two Daughters-in-Law to go to their Kindred and remain there. Orpha, who had married her eldeſt Son, bid her adieu; but Ruth, unwilling to forſake her, followed her to Bethlem, the place of her Nativity. She afterwards married Booz, by whom ſhe had Obed the Father of Jeſſe, and Grand-father of David. As the Holy Scripture takes no notice under what Judge this Hiſtory happened, Authors find it difficult to fix the time; but 'tis likely that it was in the time of Barac, about An. Mund. 2748. It is the Sentiment of Torniel, who makes the Marriage of Ruth with Booz to be in 2759. Some Authors are of opinion, That Ruth was the Daughter of Eglon King of Moab; but this opinion is advanced without any juſt ground for it; the Book of Ruth was writ by Samuel. Conſult Comeſtor, Liranus, Janſenius, &c.

RUTILIANS, an ancient People of Italy in Latium; Ardea was their Capital City.

RUTILIUS (Bernardin) born in a Town in the Territories of Vicenza in Italy, lived about the beginning of the Sixteenth Age; he acquired much Learning, and was well skill'd in Antiquity. Cardinal Nicholas Ridolphi would have him in his Family. Rutilius dedicated to him The Lives of the Lawyers, which he publiſhed by the Title of Juriſconſultorum Vitæ, noviſſimè elimatæ & à mendis non paucis quibus ſcatebant repurgatæ. He undertook ſome other Pieces of that kind, but died very young at Venice, about the year 1537.

RUTILIUS CLAUDIUS NUMANTIANUS GALLUS, a Perſon of great Learning; he lived at the beginning of the Fifth Age; and after the taking of Rome by Alaric, which happened in 410, he compoſed an Itinerary in Verſe, which he dedicated to Venerius Rufus; it conſiſts of two Books, but part of the laſt is loſt. Rutilius there is furiouſly tranſported againſt the Chriſtians and Jews in favour of Paganiſm, which he profeſs'd. He was Præfect of the City, had been Conſul, and held other conſiderable Places. This Work of his was found in a Monaſtery in Italy in the time of Volaterran, and hath been often publiſhed. The beſt Edition is that of Amſterdam, printed in 1687, in Twelves, with Notes of ſeveral learned Perſons upon it.

P. RUTILIUS RUFUS, an Orator, Hiſtorian and Lawyer. He was Conſul at Rome with Manlius, An. Rom. 649: being afterwards ſent into Baniſhment, he retir'd to Smyrna, whither all the Cities of Aſia ſent Embaſſadors to him; inſomuch that it may be ſaid, It was rather a Triumph than a Baniſhment. Sylla recalled him; but Rutilius refuſing to return to Rome, he employed the time of his Exile in ſtudy, ſo that he compoſed the Hiſtory of his Life in Greek, and divers other Pieces which ſeveral ancient Authors make mention of. Livy, lib. 70. Valer. Maximus, Cicero in Bruto, Plutarch, &c.

RUTLAND, Lat. Rutlandia, the leaſt County of England, lies between Lincolnſhire, Leiceſterſhire and Northamptonſhire, parted from this laſt by the River Weland, as from Leiceſterſhire Weſtward by the Little Ely; beſides which Rivers, here are croſs the Country the River Waſh, which empties it ſelf into the Weland. The Name of Rutland it has probably from the Redneſs of its Soil. Its greateſt length is from North to South, but not full twelve miles, from Eaſt to Weſt hardly nine, and its Circumference about forty. The whole divided into five Hundreds, wherein are forty eight Pariſhes, and but two Market-Towns, whoſe ancient Inhabitants, in the Romans time, were called Coritani, that Country making part of the Kingdom of Mercia in the time of the Heptarchy, and now making, with Northamptonſhire, the Dioceſe of Peterborough. What this Country wants in extent, it is made out in the goodneſs of its Soil for Corn and Tillage, giving place to none. The Vale of Catmouſe, which lies to the Weſtward, is chiefly noted for wonderful fruitfulneſs. The Air is alſo temperate, ſerene and healthful. Woods and pleaſant Springs are not wanting neither. Okeham is its Shire-Town, and Uppingham its other Market-Town. In 1390 Edward Plantaginet, eldeſt Son to Edmund Duke of York, in 1326 Richard ſecond Brother of the ſaid Edward, and in 1450 Edmund Plantaginet, ſecond Son of Richard Duke of York (all of the Royal Family) ſucceſſively were Earls of this County; and in 1525, Thomas Mannors, Lord Roos of Hamlake, Treſbut and Belvoir deſcended by the Lady Anne his Mother, from the ſaid Richard Duke of York, was created Earl of Rutland by King Henry VIII. in 1325, whoſe Poſterity enjoy this Honour to this day; John the twelfth of this Family ſucceeding John his Father in 1679.

RUYTER (Michael Adrian) Duke, Knight, and Lieutenant-Admiral of the United Provinces, born at Fluſhing in Zealand in 1607. His Father, who was a Citizen of that City, was called Adrian Michael; and his Mother Alyda Jans Ruyter, whoſe Name he retained. He was but eleven years of age when he began to accuſtom himſelf to the Sea, where he ſignalized himſelf in the divers Employs he ſucceſſively had. After he had been a Mariner, Maſter's Mate and Pilot, he was made Captain of a Ship, then Commander of a Squadron, Rere-Admiral, Vice-Admiral, and finally, Lieutenant-Admiral, which is the higheſt Dignity he could arrive to, for that that of High-Admiral belongs to the Prince of Orange, the Stadt-holder of Holland. When he was Captain of a ſingle Ship, he acquired Reputation in Foreign Countries, took divers Prizes in Greenland, made eight Voyages into the Weſt-Indies, and was twice at Braſil. In 1641 he was ſent to the aſſiſtance of the Portugueſe againſt the Spaniards, and made Rear-Admiral. Having forced into the midſt of the Enemy in the Engagement, he made divers Ships run for it, and the King of Portugal highly commended him for his good Services. He acquired more Glory before Sally, a City in Barbary, where, in ſpight of five Corſairs of Argiers, he entred alone into the Road of that City. The Moors of Sally who had ſeen this noble Action, would have de Ruyter enter into the City in Triumph, mounted on Horſeback, and attended on Foot by the Corſair Captains. In 1653, after the death of Admiral Van Tromp, he was made Vice-Admiral of the Amſterdam Squadron. He went afterwards into the Mediterranean, about the end of the year 1655, and took there a great many Turkiſh Ships, together with the famous Renegado Aman de Dias, who was there hanged. In 1659 he came to aſſiſt the King of Denmark againſt the Swedes, and gave proofs of his extraordinary Valour in the Iſle of Funen; for which the King of Denmark rewarded him nobly, granting him a Penſion after he had ennobled him and all his Family. In 1662 he cauſed a Ship of Tunis to run a-ſhore, and deliver'd forty Chriſtian Slaves that were detained there, entred into a Treaty with thoſe of that City, and reduced the Algerines to Reaſon. So many brave Actions having acquired de Ruyter much Reputation, he was choſen Lieutenant-Admiral of the Amſterdam Squadron in 1665, and in that Quality took divers Ships upon the Coaſt of Guinea. During his abſence the States made him their Admiral. He continued to ſignalize himſelf in many illuſtrious Actions till 1676, that he was mortally wounded with a Cannon-ball in an Engagement with the French under du Queſne, before the City of Augouſta in Sicily. He died a few days after he was wounded, and his Body was carried to Amſterdam, where the States erected a ſtately Monument for him. He had been married three times, and left ſeveral Daughters by his two laſt Wives, and a Son by the ſecond, call'd Engell. Gerard Brain has writ his Life in Flemiſh, a Book in Folio, an Abridgment whereof may be ſeen in the beginning of the 4th. Tome of the Univerſal Bibliotheque.

RYE, Lat. Ripa, a Market, Sea-Port and Borough-Town of Haſtings Rape, in the Eaſt part of Suſſex, bordering upon Kent. 'Tis one of the Cinque-Ports, conveniently ſituate at the mouth of the Rother, and upon a Bay from hence called Rye-Bay. 'Tis not a Town of any beauty, its Inhabitants being for the moſt part Fiſhermen, who catch here excellent Herrings in their ſeaſon. But as it ſtands over-againſt Diepe in Normandy, it is upon that ſcore much frequented by Paſſengers on both ſides in time of Peace.

RYER (Peter du) the French King's Hiſtoriographer, was of a Noble Family of Paris. He is known by the many Tranſlations of his, viz. the Works of Cicero, Seneca, Titus Livius, Herodotus, Polybius, Strada, Ovid's Metamorphoſis, and part of Thuanus's Hiſtory. He died Novemb. 6. 1658. aged 53 years.

S.

S. This Letter being a Semi-Vowel, commonly takes its proper force and ſound from the Vowel that follows, though ſometimes alſo from that which comes before it. In Latin and Greek words, when it comes before m, p or t, it always belongs to the following vowel in ſimple words, as in theſe, Coſmus, Proſper, Teſtis. In Latin words it's often changed into m, as rurſus, rurſum; and in declining, into n, as Sanguis, ſanguinis; and into r, as Flos floris. The change of ſ into t is more common in many other Languages. And laſtly, this letter is quite left out in ſeveral Latin words, ſo Numerus for Nuſmerus, Dumoſus for Duſmoſus, and Camœna and Camillus for Caſmœna and Caſmillus. And Varro aſſures us that Omen comes from Oſmen, and Idem from Iſdem. And therefore Virgil ſaith, 11 Æneid,

——— Matriſque vocavit,
Nomine Caſmillæ, mutata parte Camillam.

SA or SAA (Emmanuel) a Portugueſe Jeſuit: He read Divinity at Coimbra and Rome and was lock'd upon as an excellent Expoſitor of Scripture, and a good Preacher. He died in 1596. His Works are, Scholia in IV Evangelia, Notationes in Sacram Scripturam, Aphoriſmi Confeſſariorum, &c. Ribadeneira, & Alegamb. Bibl. Script. Soc. Jeſ. Nicholas Antonio Bibl. Script. Hiſp. &c.

SAADA, a City of Aſia ſituate in Arabia Felix. Some Authors take it to be the ſame which ancient Writers call Sabatha. It ſtands three hundred miles from Aden to the North. This City is ſmall but populous, and famous for Tanning of Leather which is carried into other Parts. It ſtands an hundred and eighty miles from Sanaa.

SAADIAS GAON, i.e. Saadias the Excellent. This Rabbi lived in the beginning of the Tenth Century, and was the Head of a famous Academy or School of Learning of the Jews, who at that time gave their Doctors the Title of Gheonim, i.e. Excellent. He was one of the firſt that taught the Hebrew by Grammar, living at that time in a Country where they ſpoke Arabick, and where there were Grammars of that Language. We have none of his Grammars, but may gueſs from his other Works, that he was not over-exact in it, as being too much prepoſſeſs'd with the childiſh Subtilties of their Cabbala. He hath writ a Book of Jewiſh Divinity, with the Title of Sepher Hac Munoth, i.e. The Book of Faith, wherein he handles the chief Articles of their Belief; which Book we have now in Rabbinical Hebrew, though the Author wrote it in Arabick; in it we find ſome particular Opinions of his own. But that which hath moſt recommended him, is his Arabick Verſion of the Bible, whereof we have now only the Pentateuch, which the Jews of Conſtantinople have printed with Hebrew Characters; and ſince that it hath been re-printed in Arabick letters, and join'd to the London and Paris Editions of the Polyglott Bibles, with ſome Alterations. This Arabick Verſion of the Pentateuch, which has been tranſlated into Latin by Gabriel Sionita, is rather a Paraphraſe than a faithful Tranſlation. Wherefore alſo the Conſtantinopolitan Edition gives it the Name of Targum, which ſignifies a Paraphraſe. P. Simon.

SAAL, a Town of Carinthia, anciently a Roman Colony. It hath a Field near it, whence many Roman Antiquities have been digg'd. In this Field is that fam'd Antiquity of the King's Chair, being of Stone, and like two Elbow-Chairs join'd back to back, having very ancient Inſcriptions. At the Inſtalling of the Duke of Carinthia, whether he be Emperor, King or Prince, either he or his Proxy ſits in the Eaſtern Chair, and a Boor ſits in the Weſtern, who, among other Ceremonies, riſes up and preſents the Duke with a Fat and a Lean Ox, the Duke being obliged to take the Lean, and return the Fat, and then to receive a gentle Box o'th' Ear from the Country-man, and ſo is Inſtalled. Brown's Travels.

SAAL, Lat. Sala, a River in Germany, by the French called Sale; it riſes in Franconia near the Fountains of Nab, and the Main; runs through Turingia, waſhes Saal, Feld and Siena; and entring Miſnia, paſſes by Naumburgh, Mersburgh and Hale, and after receiving many other Rivers, falls into the Elbe, below Berenbourg in Upper-Saxony, four miles South of Magdeburgh.

SABA, an Iſland in the Northern part of America, being one of the Antillæ Iſlands that belong to the Hollanders, on the Weſt of St. Chriſtophers.

SABA, Sabæa, Seba, Sheba, the ancient Capital City of Arabia Felix, ſo called from the Grandſon of Ham, by Chuz, Ptol. Longit. 73. 40. Lat. 16. 56. being placed by him near the Red-Sea over-againſt Ptolemais Ferarum in Egypt, five Degrees from Babel Mandel to the North, or ſeventy German Miles. This was the Royal City of that famous Queen that came to King Solomon, call'd the Queen of the South, 1 King. 10. Mat. 12. The Nubian Geogr. p. 26. calls it Mareb, and that Queen Belaquis, The City in his time was deſtroyed, as he ſaith after, pag. 52. becauſe the Inhabitants were proud and deſpiſed all other Men, and yet were ignorant of the Benefits of God, wherefore he ſent an Inundation which deſtroyed the City and Inhabitants in one Night. This Country was famous for its Riches and precious Spices. The Name of the Chief City is now called Siban or Zibit. Joſephus thinks that the Queen of Sheba's Royal city was in the Iſle of Meroe.

SABA, or rather Sheba, the Son of Raamah the Grandchild of Chus, who imparted his Name (according to ſome Authors) to a People inhabiting near the Perſian Gulf. As alſo a Son of Jocktan, and Grand-child of Heber, who was the Father of the Sabeans or Sacces Inhabitants of the Eaſt-Indies, of whom Pomponius Mela and Ptolemy make mention.

SABA, Sheba, the Son of Jockſhan, who was the Son of Abraham by Keturah. He is ſuppoſed to be the Father of thoſe Sabeans that took away Job's Cattle. About theſe four Saba's, and the Country of the Queen that gave a Viſit to King Solomon, conſult Bochart in his Phaleg. lib. 2.

SABACH, a King of the Æthiopians who conquer'd Egypt, and having dethron'd Anyſis, reigned there fifty years. Herodot. Euterpe.

SABAITES, Sabeans or Sabians. Authors ſpeak very differently concerning the Perſons called by this Name, which properly is the Name of a Sect. R. Moſes who had read ſeveral Arabick Books, unknown to us, containing an exact Account concerning theſe Sabeans, tells us, that Abraham had been educated in the Religion of theſe Sabaïtes, who were the ancient Chaldeans, and own'd no other Deity but that of the Sun and Stars; and that Abraham oppoſed himſelf ſtrongly againſt this their falſe Faith, by aſſerting one only God, the Author of the Univerſe, and who govern'd all things by his Providence. 'Tis upon this account that Moſes has inſerted many things in his Books, which refer to the Opinions and Practices of theſe Sabaïtes or Chaldeans, to keep the Iſraelites from embracing them. In theſe Books is found the Hiſtory of Abraham and of the other Patriarchs; neither needs this ſeem ſtrange to us, ſeeing that Abraham himſelf was a Chaldean. They contain alſo the Hiſtories of Adam, Seth, and the other Patriarchs, but intermix'd with Fictions. Beſides, they have Books that bear the Name of Adam (mention'd by Abraham Ecchellenſis in his Eutychius Vindicatus) and are writ in the Chaldee Language, but in Characters very different from thoſe of the Chaldeans. Some of theſe Books in Manuſcript brought from the Eaſt, are to be found in the Library of Monſieur Colbert. The Father Ange of St. Joſeph, a Carmelite, who was a Miſſionary in the Eaſt, in his Works, treats very largely concerning theſe Sabaïtes, whom he ſuppoſes to be the very ſame with thoſe who are called Chriſtians of St. John. He tells us alſo that they are called Mendai, that is to ſay, according to their Interpretation, Bende-hai, or Creatures of the Living One. But other Authors will have Mendai to be a Chaldee word, and ſignifying Γνωςικὸς, Gnoſtick, as if theſe modern Sabaïtes were a Remainder of the ancient Gnoſticks. In defence of this Opinion they tell us, that the ancient Gnoſticks were Chriſtians in Name only, but no more than Philoſophers in reality; that they followed the Philoſophy and extravagant Conceits of the Chaldeans in their Aſtrology, and that they had the Books of Adam, of Seth, and many other of the Patriarchs. Moreover, they take notice, as of a very ſingular thing, that the Chaldee Language of the Sabaïtes doth expreſs all the Vowels with a diſtinct literal Character, as by Example, the vowel a with an Aleph, the vowel i with a Jod; and that they do not write by way of abridgment of the vowels, as they do in Hebrew, Arabick, Chaldee and Syriack, where they are ſupplied by Points, when they have a mind to expreſs them. See Sabeans or Sabians. Father Simon. Vanſleb. Relation de Perſ. &c.

SABARIA, a City of the ancient Pannonia, famous for the Birth of St. Martin. Cluſius, Lazius, and ſome others take it to be the ſame which is now called Stainam Angern; but Cluverius will have it to be Satwar, which the Germans call Rothenthurn, about three Leagues diſtant from the place foremention'd, at the confluence of the Rivers Rab and Sabaria, which latter the Germans call Guns, and the Hungarians Benge.

SABARO, Sabaris, a River of Calabria in the Kingdom of Naples; others call it Cochale, and ſay it falls into the Bay of Taranto, near Morano.

SABASIUS was an Epithet of Jupiter, and ſeems to be the ſame with Ægiochus; becauſe as this comes from a Greek word which ſignifies a She-Goat, ſo the former is derived from a Phœnician word Iſebaoth, which ſignifies Kids. There were alſo Feaſts kept in Honour of Jupiter, which were called Sabazia, of which ſee J. Meurſius's Græcia Feriata. As for Bacchus, he is ſaid to be the Son of Caprius, to intimate that he was the Son of Jupiter who was ſirnamed Sabaſius. Another original of this word may be found in Bochart Chan. lib. 1. cap. 18.

SABATHIUS, a Jew, and afterwards an Heretical Biſhop in the Fourth Century, who having been ordained Prieſt by Marcianus a Novatian Biſhop, he ſometime after endeavoured to introduce the Jewiſh Cuſtoms and Ceremonies amongſt his Sect, and having drawn over two Prieſts to his Party, called Theoctiſtes and Macarius, he endeavoured to fix the Celebration of Eaſter on the Fourteenth Day of the Moon of March, contrary to the Ordinance of the Church. Under pretence of a greater Purity, he began to ſet up private Meetings, and to make a Schiſm, in all which his chief Deſign was to become a Biſhop. Marcianus being informed of his Proceedings, called a Synod of thoſe of his Sect at Angouri, to which he ſummoned Sabathius; where being come, they demanded of him the reaſon why he had ſeparated himſelf from them, and knowing that it was about the Celebration of Eaſter, they determined that the ſame being a thing indifferent, ought to cauſe no Diviſion amongſt them; and only made Sabathius promiſe them upon Oath, that he would never pretend to a Biſhoprick: But Ambition, which is unreaſonable in its Deſigns, and ſcorns to be a Slave to its Word, made him ſtill continue his private Meetings, and not to reſt till he was ordained Biſhop by thoſe of his Communion who were called Sabathians. Socrates, l. b. 7. Baronius, A. M. 391. N. 17. About an Age ago the ſame Name of Sabatians, or rather Sabatarians, was given to ſome Anabaptiſts, who obſerved the Saturday like the Jews.

SABAZIA, the Name of a Pagan Feaſt, inſtituted in honour of Dionyſius Son of Caprius King of Aſia. Cicero, l. 3. de Natur. Deorum.

SABBATH is a Hebrew word properly ſignifying Reſt, as alſo the Name of our Saturday. The Obſervation of this Day was commanded to the Jews, that they might continually have in remembrance that God had created the World out of nothing in ſix Days, and reſted the Seventh Day from the Works that he had made. Maimonides, in his More Nevochim, gives another Reaſon for the Inſtitution of the Sabbath, in which the Jews are only concerned, and that is their Deliverance from the Egyptian Bondage: This Solemnity being to put them in mind of their hard Uſage in that Country, and to repreſent the Reſt which God had given 'em from their laborious Servitude in Egypt. It's ſaid that the ancient Fathers equally obſerved Saturday and Sunday as Days of their Holy Aſſemblies; and accordingly we find ſtill at this day, that the whole Eaſtern Church take the laſt Day of the Week to be a Feſtival, and therefore never Faſt upon it. The Jews obſerve this Day very religiouſly, and their Rabbins have exactly ſet down all the particular Works that are forbid on that Day, which are reduced to 39 Heads, every one of which hath its ſubordinate. Theſe 39 Heads are ſpecified by R. Leo of Modena: They are forbid to Plough or Till the Ground, to Sow, to Reap, to bind up into Sheaves, to Threſh, to Winnow, to Sift, to Grind, to Boult or Range Meal, to Knead, to Bake, to Twine, to Bleach or Whiten, to Comb or Card, to Spin, to Twiſt, to Warp, to Tack, to Colour or Dye, to Bind or Tie, to Untie, to Sew, to Tear or Pull in pieces, to Build, to Pull down, to Strike with an Hammer, to Hunt or Fiſh, to Cut the Throat of any thing, to Flea, to Dreſs Skins or Hides, to Cut them out for Work, to Write, to Blot or Scrape out, to Rule for Writing, to Light or Kindle, to Extinguiſh, to Carry any thing from one place to another. Theſe 39 general Heads include many Specialties, as by Example, Grinding includes Filing, all which Dependencies or ſubordinate Kinds are determined by the Rabbi's with a wonderful accuracy. Though they are forbid to kindle a Fire on that Day, yet they may make uſe of one that is not a Jew to kindle a Fire for them, but they may not dreſs, or cauſe any Meat to be dreſs'd for them. They are not permitted to Talk about any Buſineſs, nor of the Price of any thing whatſoever, to agree upon any thing that concerns Buying or Selling, to give or receive. They may not go above a Mile from the City and Suburbs. They begin their Sabbath about half an hour before Sun-ſet, and then the Obſervation of their Prohibitions take place. The Women are bound to light a Lamp in their Chamber ber with ſix or at leaſt four Wieks, which continues burning the moſt part of the Night. Beſides they cover a Table with a clean Table-cloth, and ſet Bread upon it, covering it with a long and narrow piece of Linen Cloth, which they do, as they ſay, in Commemoration of the Manna, which fell in the ſame manner, as having the Dew both over it and under it, and did not fall on the Sabbath-Day. Sueton, Lucian and Gellius do plainly prove, that the Grecians and Aſiaticks had ſomething reſembling the Obſervation of the Sabbath. Sueton ſays that Diogenes Laertius uſed to diſpute at Rhodes on the Sabbath. Lucian in Pſeudo-Logiſta; Καὶ ὁ μὲν κόθορνόν τινα εἶπεν ὃ ἢ Ἑϐδόμῳ, &c. importing that School-boys uſed to have a Holy-day every Seventh Day. Gellius, Is in Conviviis Juvenum, &c. ſignifying, that there uſed to be publick Orations at the Aſſemblies of Young Men held in Athens every Seventh Monday, which was conſecrated to Apollo, and the Feſtival called Ἑϐδόμη. Vulcatius Gallianus ſays, that the Soldiers uſed to Exerciſe on that Day. Lampridius ſays of Severus, that he uſed to go into the Capitol, and frequent the Temples on that Day. Clemens Alexandrinus and Joſephus aſſert that the Greeks obſerved the Seventh Day, and yet the Heathens did unanimouſly deſpiſe the Jewiſh Sabbaths, in their Writings, as Dion, Juſtin, Leo de Modene Ceremony des Juifs.

SABBATICUS, a fictitious River flowing with a very ſwift Current all the Week, and ſtanding ſtill on the Sabbath-Day. The Jews, who are the Inventers of this Fable, tell us that the Ten Tribes are held in Captivity beyond this River, which is only paſſable on the Sabbath, when it is unlawful for them to take a Journey. See Buxtorf. Diction. Talmud. upon the word Sambathion.

SABBATIUS, a Biſhop of the French Church, about an. 440, who wrote De Fide, againſt Marcion and Valentinus, Eunomius and Aetius, defending the Truth of Chriſt's Incarnation againſt the firſt, and that he was Conſubſtantial with the Father againſt the laſt. Cave Hiſt. Liter.

SABEANS or Sabiens, the Name of a certain Sect patch'd up of Chriſtianiſm, Judaiſm, Mahometaniſm, and Heathen Superſtitions. Some Authors call them Chriſtians of St. John the Baptiſt, becauſe they honour that holy Prophet, but are indeed more Heathens than Chriſtians. There be great numbers of them in Curdiſtan a Province of Perſia, and at Balſora in Arabia Deſerta. They receive Baptiſm, in Commemoration of St. John's Baptizing Jeſus Chriſt, but do not adminiſter it in the Name of the Holy Trinity. They acknowledge four Sacraments, Baptiſm, the Euchariſt, Orders and Matrimony, rejecting Confirmation, Extreme Unction and Penance. They do not pronounce the words of Conſecration over the Hoſt, but only ſome Prayers; they make their Hoſts or Wafers of Flour, which they knead into a Paſte with Wine and Oil; and the Wine they make uſe of in the Sacrament they draw from Raiſins ſteep'd in Water, whence afterwards they preſs out the Juice. As to their Sacrament of Orders, they have Superiour and Inferior Miniſters; but the Children always ſucceed the Fathers in the Miniſterial Function, and in caſe of want of Children, their next Relations. The whole Ceremony of their Conſecration conſiſts only in a few Prayers, which another Miniſter pronounceth over him who is to receive that Dignity. Their Matrimonial Ceremonies are theſe; They oblige the Bride to ſwear her ſelf a Virgin; after which, the Miniſter baptizeth both the Bridegroom and his Bride, and placing them Back to Back, reads ſome Prayers over them. The Miniſters, as well as the Laicks, are allow'd each of them to have two Wives. The Celebration of their Euchariſt conſiſts in ſome Prayers, and in Communicating of their Wafers or Cakes prepared and conſecrated after their way, and of their Wine of Raiſins. Beſides the Lord's-Day, they obſerve three Feaſts in the Year; the firſt is the beginning of the Year, which is celebrated by them three Days together, in memory of Adam's Creation. Their ſecond Feſtival is the beginning of the Fourth Month, which alſo laſts three Days, in honour of St. John the Baptiſt. Aud their third Feaſt is at the beginning of the Seventh Month, and continues five Days, in remembrance of Jeſus Chriſt's being Baptized by St. John the Baptiſt. During theſe five Days they are all of them baptized once every Day, and they call this laſt Feſtival Pendgia. They own no other Saints but St. John Baptiſt, St. Zachary his Father, and St. Elizabeth his Mother; and they honour Jeſus Chriſt only as a Servant of St. John. They believe Paradiſe and Hell, but reject Purgatory; and teach, that Wicked Men, after their deceaſe, ſhall paſs through a ſtrait Way beſet on both ſides with Lions, Serpents and Dragons, who will devour them: But that the Good, paſſing the ſame Way, ſhall not be ſo much as once frighted with theſe terrible Beaſts, but ſhall through it arrive at Paradiſe, which they fill with all manner of things pleaſing and delightful to Men, and capable of fully ſatisfying all the Senſes, following herein the Conceits of the Alcoran, whence they have taken many of thoſe Fables, which make up a conſiderable part of their Belief. They abſtain from eating the Fleſh of any Beaſts that are not killed by ſome of their Religion; and their Miniſters are their Butchers, for they kill their Poultry, their Sheep, their Fiſh, and all other living Creatures they uſe for Food. They refuſe to drink out of any Veſſel that hath ever been made uſe of by any that are not of their Sect, as judging all others Profane and Wicked. Their Year conſiſts of Three hundred ſixty ſix Days, that is to ſay, of twelve Months, whereof each hath thirty Days, and ſix ſupernumerary ones. In 1665, the 2d. day of November, N. S. they counted the 20th. of their firſt Month; ſo that the Beginning of their Year muſt be the 14th. of October, N. S. See M. de Thevenot's Travels into the Levant. Ricaut gives us the following Account concerning theſe Sabeans. They worſhip the Sun as the greateſt of all the Gods, the Moon as the greateſt Goddeſs, and the Stars as inferiour Deities. This Religion hath infected a great part of the Eaſt: Mahomet makes mention of them in his Alcoran, and affords the ſame Privileges to the Sabeans which he doth to Chriſtians. Theſe Idolaters are call'd by ſeveral Names, but all ſignifying the ſame ſort of People, or that differ little from one another. They are called Chaldeans, Nabatheans, Canaanites, &c. There are ſome Aſtrologers and Phyſicians of this Sect at Conſtantinople; but in the Kingdom of Perſia, near the Sea of Tabriſtan, they are in great numbers. They ſeem to have no ſtrong Perſuaſion of the Immortality of the Soul, nor of any Puniſhment or Reward after this Life. They ſeldom or never revenge any Injuries done to them, becauſe they look upon them as the natural and neceſſary Effects of the Heavenly Influences, and are no more provoked by them, than we are at a great Showre falling upon us, or at the Heat of the Sun in the midſt of Summer. They call themſelves Mendai; and beſides the Arabick, they ſpeak a ſort of corrupt Chaldee, which they write with peculiar Characters; ſo that there be very few beſides their Prieſts that can read or write it. Theſe Prieſts are called Sheicks, that is to ſay, Old Men, and are obedient to other higher Prieſts, Monks or Biſhops, whom they call Chanzebra. They believe that Iſſa, that is, Jeſus, is the Soul of God; that is to ſay, his Well-beloved, and that he never died, the Jews having crucified a Phantome inſtead of him. They obſerve three kinds of Offerings or Sacrifices, the firſt is Bread, Wine and Oil, the ſecond a Hen, the third a Sheep. Ricaut of the Ottoman Empire.

SABELLIANS, Hereticks that took their Name from one Sabellius of Libya, who raiſed his Sect about the year 260, under Stephen I. Biſhop of Rome.

SABELLICUS, known by the Name of Marcus Antonius Coccius. Sabellicus was born in a ſmall Country Town of Italy called Vico Varro, in the Country of the ancient Æquicolani, and having a great inclination to Learning, he followed his Studies with extreme Diligence, and having got Money by teaching young Children in ſome Country Towns, he went to perfect his Studies under Pomponius Lætus and Domitius Veronenſis; and not long after appear'd with great fame and luſtre both in the City of Rome and Venice, where he was a publick Profeſſor. We have theſe following Writings of his, (viz.) Hiſtoria Enneadum in eleven Books, from the beginning of the World, till the year 1504. De Situ Venetiarum, Lib. 3. Exemplorum, Lib. 10. De Venetis Magiſtratibus, Lib. 1. and ſeveral other Pieces. He died in the year 1506. of an Infamous Diſeaſe, being near Threeſcore and ten years of age, and leaving only one Natural Son, who was his Heir. The Epitaph which he made for himſelf was thus:

Quem non res hominum, non omnis cæperat ætas
Scribentem capit hæc Coccion urna brevis.

Latomus beſtows this Epitaph upon him:

Magnus in hoc tumulo jacet ille Sabellicus, Orbis
Cujus ad Ingenium non ſatis unus erat.
Tempora permodicis incluſerat omnia chartis
Servire exemplo quæ potuêre aliquo.
In Venere incerta tamen hic contabuit; atque
Maluit Italicus Gallica fata pati.
Quid juvat humanos ſcire atque evolvere caſus,
Si fugienda facis, & facienda fugis?

SABELLIUS, an Heretick, and Head of the Sabellians, born at Ptolemais a City of Libya. He was the Diſciple of Noëtus of Smyrna, and publiſh'd his Errors about the year 260. He taught, that there was no diſtinction between the Perſons of the Trinity, but that they were all one, as the Body, Soul and Spirit make but one Man; the conſequence of which was, that the Father and Holy Ghoſt ſuffered Death as well as the Son, which Noëtus alſo had taught, and many others before him. Tertullian taxeth Praxeas with this Errour: And St. Ignatius of Antioch writes, that in his time a certain Perſon own'd this blaſphemous Tenet. St. Epiphanius adds, that Sabellius had ſuck'd this Errour from ſome Apocryphal Books, and more-eſpecially from that which is called The Goſpel of the Egyptians, where our Saviour is introduc'd teaching his Apoſtles that the Father and the Son are but one and the ſame Perſon. St. Denys of Alexandria writ ſome excellent Treatiſes againſt this Errour, which hath been condemn'd in divers Councils. Baron. Godeau. Hiſt. Eccl. Gauter. Chron.

SABEO, known by the Name of Fauſtus Sabæus, was born at Ghiari, in the Territories of Breſcia in Italy. He raiſed himſelf by the ſtrength of his Wit and Parts, from a very poor and mean Extraction. His Merit being divulged at Rome, gave Pope Leo X. a deſire to ſee him, who made him Keeper of the Vatican Library; and not long after ſent him to England and Ireland, to ſearch out ſeveral Manuſcripts that were kept in the Monaſteries of thoſe Kingdoms. During this Journey, Sabeo loſt the Pope his Patron; and being come back to Rome, he lived there very poorly, not being able to procure any Reward for his Services. In this time he publiſh'd a piece of Coſmography, and five Books of Epigrams, which he dedicated to King Henry II. of France, who beſtowed upon him a Golden Chain worth above an Hundred Louis d'Ors, and ſome other Preſents, which came very ſeaſonably to ſupply his Wants. He died in the Papacy of Paul IV. about 1556.

SABINES, an ancient People of Italy, who inhabited the Country betwixt Hetruria and Latium, whereof they alſo poſſeſſed ſome part. The capital City of the Country was Cures, whence the Romans were called Quirites; and the next to it for conſiderableneſs was Reate, now Ruti in Umbria, at preſent the ancient Biſhoprick of Sabina, which conſiſts only of a Monaſtery, and ſome Remains of that ancient City. The Romans under Romulus took away by force the Daughters of theſe Sabines for their Wives, having invited them to ſome Shows. The Sabines reſolving to revenge this Affront, proclaim'd War againſt the Romans; but this Difference was ſoon after terminated by the Mediation of theſe Women, who reconciled their Fathers the Sabines to their Husbands the Romans. At this day part of the Country of the Sabines make one of the Provinces of the Eccleſiaſtical State, and is called Terra Sabina, and its chief City is Magliano. Ancient Authors frequently make mention of this People, and their Country, as Strabo, Pliny, Titus Livius, Plutarch, &c. We have the Synodal Ordinances of Ptolemæus Cardinal and Biſhop of Sabina in 1590. Gabreas Paleota publiſh'd more of them in 1593 and 1595, and Ludovicus Madrucius in 1579.

SABINIA, a Province in the States of the Church, bounded on the North by the Dukedom of Spoleto, on the Eaſt by Abruzzo, on the South by Campania di Roma, and on the Weſt by St. Peter's Patrimony, cut off by the Tiber: The chief Town in it is Magliano a Biſhop's See. It is of no great extent, but very fruitful in Oil, Wine and Figs, and divided by the River Farfa, and the Lake Dipedeluco.

SABINIA TRANQUILLINA, by ſome corruptly called Sabina, the Wife of the Emperor Gordianus III. There were, not long ſince, two Medals of this Empreſs, amongſt many others, found at Vienna, in 1681, on the reverſe of which is a Concordia with this Motto, Concordia Augg. Whence it appears that what Savot aſſerts is not true, viz. That all the Medals of that Princeſs had Greek Inſcriptions. Hevin. Remarq. Gen.

SABINIANUS, a Pope born at Volterra, was choſen after the death of St. Gregory the Great, who had ſent him to Conſtantinople with the Character of his Apocriſiary or Nuncio. Hiſtorians tell us, that Covetouſneſs was the cauſe of his death, conformable to a Viſion he had of his Predeceſſor's threatning him for not diſtributing Corn to the Poor, in the time of a great Famine. He kept the Chair only from the 1ſt. of September 604, to the 19th. of February the year following, when he died. Anaſtaſius in Vita Pontificum, Baron. in Annal. There was another of the ſame Name, whom the Carthaginians choſe for their Emperor in 240; but being Preſs'd by the Governour of Mauritania, they were forced to deliver him up, and to ſubmit themſelves to Gordianus. Zoſimus and Julius Capitolinus in Gordianum.

SABINUS Biſhop of Heraclea, and a Macedonian Heretick; he lived towards the end of the Reign of Theodoſius the Great. He made a Collection of the Acts of ſeveral Councils, which he publiſhed, as Socrates informs us. Some Authors are of opinion that he was the ſame with Sabinus the Monk who compiled an Abridgment of all the Synods General and Provincial but there is ſmall probability for it. Cave Hiſt. Literar. Socrat. l. 1. c. 5. l. 5. c. 11, &c.

SABINUS Biſhop of Placencia, now Piacenza, famous for his Learning and Piety. He aſſiſted at the Council of Aquileia in 381. St. Ambroſe had a very high eſteem for him, as appears by his taking him to be the Judge of his Writings.

SABINUS (Georgius) born in 1508, of the Family of Schalter in the Marquiſate of Brandenburgh, was a Poet of great repute amongſt the Germans, and highly eſteemed in his Lifetime by the Cardinals Bembo and Contareno, as alſo by Baptiſta Ignatius, and Ludovico Beccatelli. This Sabinus had travelled much in Italy, and the German Princes employ'd him about their Affairs. The Marquis of Brandenburgh invited him to teach at Francfort upon the Oder, whence he afterwards went to be Profeſſor of Rhetorick in the new Univerſity founded at Koninsberg by the Duke of Pruſſia; thence returning again to Francfort, the Elector honour'd him with the Place of Councellor, and employ'd him in ſeveral Embaſſies, wherein he gave great Proofs of his Prudence and Conduct. The Emperor Charles V. by Patent, conferr'd upon him the Privileges of a Nobleman. He made himſelf famous by the Hiſtory he writ of the Emperors of Germany, and by many others of his Works publiſhed by Euſebius Menius. He died the 2d. of December, 1560, at Francfort upon the Oder, where his ordinary Dwelling-place was. He was called Sabinus, becauſe he excelled in Poetry, as did the Latin Poet of the ſame Name. He was but twenty years of age when he publiſh'd his Poem entitled Res Geſtæ Cæſarum Germanicorum, according to what he declares himſelf in this following Diſtich:

Hoc opus exegi florentibus integer annis,
Bis duo cum natus luſtra Sabinus eram. Melchior Adam.

SABIONETTA, a City and Dutchy of Italy lying in Lombardy between the Dukedom of Mantua to the Eaſt, and the Territory of Cremona to the Weſt; formerly the Duke of it was one of the Houſe of Caraffa, but now it belongs to the Prince de Stigliano Grandee of Spain, and ſtands 18 miles South-weſt of Mantua, and 24 Eaſt of Cremona. Longit. 30. 50. Lat. 44.

SABLE, a ſmall City of Orleannois in France, 25 Leagues North of Angers, and 30 South-weſt of Mans, Longit. 18. 4. Lat. 47. 52.

SABLESTAN, Lat. Sableſtania, an Inland Province in the Kingdom of Perſia, towards the Eaſt, between Charazan to the North, and Chermon or Caramania to the South. The chief Cities of this Province are Zarant, Buſt and Nebeſaſt. In this Province is the beſt and ſtrongeſt Caſtle in all Perſia. Tavernier.

SABURRANUS, a General of the Roman Army, and the ſame to whom the Emperor Trajan preſented a Sword, with theſe remarkable words, Receive this Sword, to make uſe of it for my Service, as long as my Orders are reaſonable; or to make uſe of it againſt me, whenever I command you any thing that is Unjuſt, According to the Motto, Pro me ſi mereor in me. Aurelius Victor.

SABUS was (as is ſaid) the Father of Sabinus, from whom the Sabines took their Name. And foraſmuch as we find, by all the Account we have of thoſe fabulous Times, that the People commonly worſhipped the firſt Author of their Nation, that is to ſay, him who had firſt brought them into a Society, and govern'd them by Laws: Accordingly alſo the Sabines owned this Sabus for their God; and being come to Rome, they brought their God along with them, and the Romans built a Temple for him near to that of Quirinus. The different Names which Authors beſtow upon this Sabus, and the diverſity of Opinions about him, gives us ground to believe him very Ancient. Beſides the Name Sabus, he was called Semi-caper, i. e. Half-Goat, or as ſome read it in Ovid, Semi-pater. They call him alſo by the Name of Sagus or Sangus, Sancus & Sanctus. He was alſo ſtyled Fidius, i. e. Fidei Deus, the God of good Faith. Ovid mentions three of theſe Names, ſpeaking of the Feſtival which was yearly celebrated on the Nones of June, on which day a ſolemn Sacrifice was offer'd to this God on the Mountain Quirinalis, where his Temple was.

Quærebam Nonas Sanco, Fideo ne referrem
An tibi Semicaper: Tunc mihi Sancus ait,
Cuicunque ex iſtis dederis ego munus habebo
Nomina terna fero. Sic voluêre Cures.

Propertius beſtows upon him the Name of Sanctus;

Salve, Sancte Pater, cui jam favet aſpera Juno.
Sic Sanctum Tatiæ compoſuêre Cures.

St. Auſtin tells us, that this God was alſo called Xanchis. In a Fragment of Porcius Cato, we find that the Sabines called him Sabus, and that the Romans were the firſt that named him Sancus, which in proceſs of time they turn'd to Sanctus. Silius Italicus calls him Sabus & Sanctus.

—— Et læti pars Sanctum voce canebant
Authorem Gentis; pars laudes ore ferebant,
Sabe, tuas, qui de Patrio cognomine primus
Dixiſti Populos magnâ ditione Sabinos.

Titus Livius gives him only the Name of Sancus, and ranks him amongſt the Semones. Plutarch in Rom. St. Auſtin, Tit. Liv.

SACADAS, a Greek Poet, who was the firſt that introduced the ſinging of every Stropha, and every Chorus with a diſtinct time or meaſure. Pindar, Plutarch and Pauſanias make mention of him, as alſo Suidas, who ſpeaks of Sacas a Greek Poet and Writer of Tragedies.

SACÆ, a People of ancient Scythia, inhabiting between the Mountain Imaus and the Scythæ Alani, being at preſent (according to Sanſon) the Country of the Chazalgite Tartars. Theſe Sacæ were a Cruel and Savage People, as Pliny and Strabo tell us. Dionyſius Africanus deſcribes them thus;

Inde Sacæ certis, nimium Gens dura Sagittis.

SACCA, a Sea-Town of Sicily in the Valley of Mazara, in Latin Saxa, Xacca or Sacca, and is the ſame which the Ancients called Thermæ Selinuntia, 22 miles eaſt of Mazara, and 40 from Gergenty. Fredericus Cornelius Biſhop of Padua and Earl of Sacca did here publiſh Synodal Ordinances, in 1579.

SACCANIA LACONIA, the moſt Southern Province of Morea, containing that part which was anciently under the Lacedæmonians and Argians, the Capital of which is Mitra.

SACCOPHORI, a Sect of Meſſalian Hereticks, ſo called becauſe they frequently cover'd themſelves with great Sacks. See Meſſalian.

SACKVILLE, Earl of Dorſet. The Anceſtors of this Family came into England with William the Conqueror, and their Deſcendants have been of great Note ever ſince. Sir Robert de Sackville, Kt. had a great Eſtate in Eſſex and Suffolk in the time of King Henry I. Jordan de Sackville was his Son and Heir, ſucceeded by Geoffrey, and he by another Jordan, who was taken Priſoner in the Battle of Eveſham, where he join'd with the Barons. Moſt of his Succeſſors were Knights, had large Poſſeſſions in the County of Suſſex and elſewhere, their principal Seat being at Buckhurſt. John Sackville, Eſq; deſcending from him, married the Daughter of Sir William Blickling of the County of Norfolk, Siſter to Thomas Earl of Wiltſhire and Ormond, by whom he had Richard a Lawyer, bred in the Inner-Temple about the end of Henry VIIIth's Reign. He was one of the Governor's of that Houſe from the Firſt to the Sixth of Eliz being then a Knight. He was alſo Chancellor of the Court of Augmentation in Queen Mary's time, one of the Privy-Council to Queen Elizabeth, and Under-Treaſurer of the Exchequer. He married Winefrid Daughter of Sir John Bruges, Kt. by whom he had Agnes married to Gregory Fienes Lord Dacres, and Thomas who ſucceeded him, An. 1566. his Widow Winefrid being afterwards wedded to William Marquis of Wincheſter. This Thomas being Knighted by the Duke of Norfolk, June 8. 1567. 9 Eliz. was that ſame day created Baron by the Title of Lord Buckhurſt; and in 12 Eliz ſent Embaſſador to Congratulate the Marriage of Charles IX. of France with Maximilian the Emperor's Daughter. He was one of the Peers upon the Tryal of Thomas Duke of Norfolk, and in 30 Eliz. ſent Embaſſador to the States of Holland upon their Diſlike of the Earl of Leiceſter's Proceedings, to compromiſe the Differences, by which he fell into the Earl's Diſpleaſure, who got him confin'd to his Houſe for many Months; but ſurviving that great Earl, Queen Elizabeth made him Lord-Treaſurer, and one of the Commiſſioners for exerciſing the Office of Earl-Marſhal of England. King James, in the firſt year of his Reign, made him Lord-Treaſurer for Life: And on the 13th. of March next created him Earl of Dorſet. He was likewiſe Knight of the moſt Noble Order of the Garter, and Chancellor of the Univerſity of Oxford. He died of an Apoplexy, April 9. 1608, as he ſate at the Council-Table, Queen Ann being preſent. He was a Comely Perſon, and of great Endowments, but profuſe beyond meaſure in his Youth: But Queen Elizabeth, whoſe Kinſman he was, ſeeing him begin to take up, made him Treaſurer, in which ſtation he advanced his Eſtate and Honour. He was an excellent Scholar, of a facetious Wit, accurate Style, and free from all Factions of State, but faithfully adhered to the Queen's Service. His Son Robert ſucceeded, who founded an Hoſpital for 31 poor People at Eaſt-Greenſted in Suſſex, endowing it with 330 l. per Annum. He had two Wives, the firſt Margaret Daughter to Thomas Duke of Norfolk; the ſecond Ann Daughter to Sir John Spencer, and Widow to Henry Lord Compton, by whom he had no Iſſue. Richard his ſecond Son by the firſt Wife ſucceeded his Elder Brother dying without Iſſue; within two days after his Father's death he married the Lady Ann, ſole Daughter and Heir of George Earl of Cumberland, by whom he had Thomas who died without Iſſue, Margaret married to John Earl of Thanet, and Iſabella to James Earl of Northampton, and died March 28. 1624. Sir Edward Sackville his younger Brother ſucceeded him, who was firſt Lord-Chamberlain to Queen Mary, Wife of King Charles I. and afterwards to that King; he married Mary Heireſs to Sir George Curſon of Croxhall in the County of Derby. He died in May, Anno 1652, and was ſucceeded by Richard his Son, who marrying the Lady Frances, Daughter to Leonel Earl of Middleſex, and at length Heir to James Earl of Middleſex her Brother, by whom he had three Sons, viz. Charles Lord Buckhurſt, Edward and Richard; and three Daughters, viz. Elizabeth married to the Lord Broghil, Son and Heir to the Earl of Orrery in Ireland, Ann to the Earl of Hume in Scotland, and Frances to Sir George Lane, Kt. Charles hath married Elizabeth Daughter of Henry Bagot of Pipehall in the County of Warwick, Widow of Charles Earl of Falmouth, and was created Earl of Middleſex, April 4. 27 Car. II. Dugdale.

SACRED, Clecrach or Clergy-Iſle, one of the Scots Weſtern Iſlands, abounding with Paſturage and Eggs of Sea-Fowl. Buchanan.

SACRED, or Sanctuary-Iſlands, Lat. Flavanæ, they lie 50 miles from the Lewis, among the Scots Weſtern Iſles, abound with Graſſy Mountains, but are not inhabited, nor have any Four-footed Beaſts living in them but wild Sheep, and thoſe not eatable.

SACRIFICE is the Worſhip which is given to God by the Oblation of ſome Victim. Sacrifices at firſt were offer'd by the Fathers of Families, or the eldeſt Perſons in every Houſe, but afterwards Prieſts were ordained to that Function. The firſt Sacrifice mention'd in Scripture is that of Abel, who offer'd Sheep and young Calves to God, whilſt Cain offer'd but Fruit. The ſecond is Noah, who when he came out of the Ark, ſacrificed to God for his Deliverance; this was in the year of the World 1657. The third is that of Melchiſedec, when he came to meet Abraham, in the year of the World 2118, and offer'd Bread and Wine to the Lord for him. The Holy Writ makes mention likewiſe of the ſeveral Sacrifices offer'd by Abraham, Iſaac and Jacob, in the year of the World 2544. God commanded Moſes to prepare the Sacrifice of the Paſchal Lamb, which was offer'd the 14th. of the month Niſan, which anſwers to our April. The Ceremonies of the Jewiſh Sacrifices were ſet down by Moſes, according to the Order he had receiv'd from the Mouth of God. Aaron was the firſt High-Prieſt the Jews had, and after this Appointment the Sacrifices were only offer'd by the Prieſts in the Tabernacle or the Temple. Before the Victim or Beaſt deſign'd for Sacrifice was offer'd, the Perſon for whom it was offer'd laying his Hand upon the Head of it, made a publick Confeſſion of his Sins; whereupon the Beaſt was ſlain, flea'd, and cut into ſix or nine parts. The Prieſts took of the Blood and ſprinkled with it the four Horns of the Altar, at the foot of which he poured forth the reſt that remained in the Cup. This done, if the Sacrifice was an Holocauſt or whole Burnt-Offering, the Beaſt was wholly conſum'd by Fire; whereas in other Sacrifices they only burnt the Inwards and the Fat about them; the Levites in the mean time ſinging Hymns of Praiſe to God, and entreating him to accept of the Sacrifice. The Parts that were not burnt were for the Prieſts, and for the People, who made a Feaſt therewith, when the Sacrifice was over. There were five ſorts of Victims amongſt the Jews; 1. of Cows, Bulls and Calves; 2. of Sheep; 3. of Goats; 4. of Pigeons; 5. of Turtles. Beſides theſe Sacrifices of living Creatures, they had alſo Oblations of fine Wheat-Flower, with Oil and Incenſe. In theſe Oblations the Prieſt laid all the Incenſe upon the Altar, with an handful of Flower, and a little Oil, to be there conſum'd, and the Remainder was for himſelf, according to the Law of God. Laſtly, They had their Drink-Offerings, wherein they preſented Wine and Oil, which they poured forth upon the Altar; this was called Libations. None was permitted to have any Honey or Leven in their Oblations, whereas there was none but had Salt. Levit. 1, 2, 3, 4. Outram de Sacrificiis Hebræorum, &c. The Idolaters obſerved other Ceremonies in their Sacrifices, ſome of them ſeem to have been borrowed of the Jews, either for that the Heathen Philoſophers had read the Books of Moſes, or becauſe the Devil was ambitious of being worſhipped in the ſame manner as the True God. When the Victim was brought near to the Altar, the Prieſt holding his Hand on the Altar, repeated certain Prayers, which began with an Invocation of Janus and Veſta, who were firſt called upon in all Sacrifices, as Deities that were ſuppoſed to give acceſs to other Gods; and after this he implored the Aſſiſtance of that God to whom the Sacrifice was deſign'd. Afterwards he caſt Flour baked in the Oven, mingled with Salt, upon the Head of the Sacrifice, upon which he alſo poured forth Wine, after that he had firſt taſted of it himſelf, and given of it to thoſe for whom he offer'd up the Sacrifice. The Ceremony of the Flour was call'd Immolation, from the Latin word Mola, which ſignifies a Paſte or Cake of Flour and Salt; and that of pouring forth the Wine was called Libation, from the word Libare, which ſignifies to taſte, pour forth gently, or ſprinkle. This done, the Prieſt pluck'd off ſome of the Hair from between the Horns of the Sacrifice, and caſt it into the Fire which was upon the Altar, offering up the Victim to the Deity to whom it was intended. Afterwards he deliver'd it to his Servants or Aſſiſtants, who cut the Throat of it, receiving the Blood in Cups, and having got off the Skin, waſhed it, and ſo returned it into the Hands of the Prieſt, or of the Sooth-ſayer (called Aruſpex) who took out the Inwards, as the Liver, Lungs, Heart, and Spleen, to draw his Conjectures from the condition he found thoſe parts in. This piece of Superſtition being performed, the Prieſt's Aſſiſtants cut off a little bit of each Joint of the Sacrifice, as well as of every one of the Inwards, which they wrapp'd up in a Paſte of Wheat-flour, that they brought in little Baskets to the Sacrifice, and caſt them into the Fire upon the Altar. This Offering being conſumed, they made a Feaſt with the reſt of the Victim, to which they added other Diſhes of Meat. During the Sacrifice, they ſung the Praiſes of the God to whom they offered, and danced round the Altar to the Muſick of Cymbals. Roſin. Antiq. Rom. lib. 3. cap. 33.

SACROBOSCO (Joannes de) called alſo Holywood, becauſe he was born at a Town in Yorkſhire of that Name, which we now call Hallifax: He lived in the Thirteenth Century, and had the eſteem of being the moſt learned Mathematician of his time, of which his Works are a ſufficient Proof. He at firſt followed his Studies here in England, and continued for ſome time at the Unverſity of Oxford; but the Reputation which that of Paris had at that time, made him curious to conſult the famous Men that were Profeſſors there; whereupon he took a Journey to France, where he wrote his Book de Sphæra Mundi, which Clavius, Pierius Valerianus, Elias Vinetus and Petrus Nonius have ſince adorned with their Obſervations and Commentaries, tranſlated into ſeveral Languages. He publiſhed alſo a Treatiſe de Computo Eccleſiaſtico, &c. and died at Paris in 1235.

SACROVIR (Julius) was a Native of the Country of Ædui or Æduani in France, now called l'Autunois, and the Perſon that contriv'd and carried on the Revolt of the Gauls againſt the Romans, under the Reign of Tiberius Cæſar; who, the better to diſſemble his being the Author of that Rebellion, fought bare-headed among the Romans, againſt thoſe of his own Party, who knowing him by that Mark, did not ſhoot at him. This daring Reſolution of his had ſo good ſucceſs, that it gave him an opportunity of poſſeſſing himſelf of the City of Autun, which was the chief City of the Country, and a place to which the Youth from all parts repaired to follow their Studies. Tiberius hearing of the Surprize of this City, did greatly apprehend the loſs of the Gauls, becauſe the greateſt Lords of the Country found themſelves engaged to follow the fortune of this City, for their Childrens ſake that were there. Sacrovir in the mean time raiſes an Army of 40000 Men, and amongſt them a number of Slaves, deſign'd for Gladiators, and were called Crupellarij, becauſe of the weight of their Arms, which were Iron Plates wherewith they were covered from Head to Foot. The Succeſs did not anſwer the Courage and Bravery of the Commander; for this Army of his not having been train'd to the Wars, was ſoon put to the Rout by the Roman Legions, and Sacrovir was fain to flee to the City of Autun; but not being ſecure there, he ſecretly withdrew himſelf to a Country-houſe not far off, where he kill'd himſelf; ſome of his Friends alſo, who had ſaved themſelves with him, killed one another, after having ſet fire to the Houſe. Tacit. Annal. lib. 3.

SADDUCES, a certain Sect amongſt the Jews, which took its Riſe from one Sadoc. They denied the Exiſtence of Spirits, the Immortality of the Soul, and the Reſurrection of the Body. And as for their other Opinions, they agreed with the Samaritans, except only in this, that they were Partakers of all the Jewiſh Sacrifices, which the Samaritans deteſted. They obſerved the Law, to enjoy the Temporal Bleſſings it promiſed, and to eſcape the Puniſhments denounced to its Tranſgreſſors. They rejected all manner of Traditions, and abſolutely denying all Fatality, aſſerted, that as it was impoſſible for God to do any Evil, ſo neither did he take notice of that which Men committed: And thence concluded, that it was wholly in our Will to do Good or Evil. Though this Sect was not very numerous, yet was it conſiderable, as being compoſed of Perſons of Eminence. There was an irreconcilable hatred between theſe and the Phariſees. Joſephus obſerves of them, that they were of a very ſavage humour, behaving themſelves with great rudeneſs to one another, as well as to Strangers. Joſeph. Lib. de Bello, cap. 12. lib. 13. Ant. cap. 9. & lib. 18. cap. 2. See the Tribæreſion of Druſius and Scaliger.

SADIATES or Sadyattes, King of Lydia, of the Family of the Mermnades, ſucceeded Ardys, in the year of the World 3427, and had for his Succeſſor Halyattes the Father of Crœſus. Sadyattes made War with the Town of Miletum for ſix years together: His Reign was twelve years. Herodot. lib. 1.

SADOC, Zadoc, a High-Prieſt of the Jews, the Succeſſor of Abiathar, who was deprived of that Dignity by Solomon after the death of David, for ſiding with Adonijah, 1 King. 2. 26, 27, & 35. 1 Chron. 29. 22. There is alſo another Sadoc mention'd in the Genealogy of our Saviour, Mat. 1. 14.

SADODELA, Edus, a River of Liguria in Italy, now in the States of Genoua, which falls into the Porcevera.

SADOLET (James) Cardinal and Biſhop of Carpentras, was born in 1478, at Modena. John Sadolet, his Father, being one of the moſt renowned Lawyers of his time, gave him his Education at Ferrara, where he was Profeſſor of Law, taking care to cultivate his Mind with uſeful Learning: which Paternal Care was not loſt upon the Son, who having a great inclination to Learning, in a ſhort time made himſelf Maſter of the Latin and Greek Tongues, not neglecting the Study of Philoſophy, wherein he advanced wonderfully. Some time after he made a Journey to Rome, and had his abode with Cardinal Oliver Caraffa, who was a great Lover of learned Men. Being in this City, he contracted a peculiar Friendſhip with Frederick Fregoſus Biſhop of Salernum, and with Peter Bembo, afterwards Cardinal, two refined Wits, and much of his ſize. It was not long after, that Leo X. induced by the fame of his Worth, deſired to be better acquainted with him, and made him his Secretary; which Employment he diſcharged ſo well, that there were none of his time that wrote more elegantly, or with greater facility than he did. He was univerſally learned, an excellent Divine, Orator, Philoſopher and Poet. And though the fame of his Worth, and his Place, had raiſed him ſo high, yet could not the leaſt appearance of Ambition or Vanity be ſeen in him; yea, when the Pope had conferred upon him the Biſhoprick of Carpentras in the County of Avignon, nothing leſs than an expreſs Command from the Pope could make him reſolve to accept of it. After the death of Leo X. he retired to his Biſhoprick; but Clement VII. the Succeſſor of Adrian VI. ſent for him to come to Rome: which Order he obeyed, but upon condition, that after three years ſtay there, he might return to his Charge; as accordingly he did, and from thence took a Journey to Lyons to ſee King Francis I. who expreſs'd a ſingular eſteem for him. In the year 1544, Paul III. who ſucceeded Clement VII. ſent for Sadolet again to come to Rome, and made him his Nuncio to France, to induce the King to conclude a Peace with Charles V. where he diſcharged the Employment laid upon him ſo much to the Pope's ſatisfaction, that at his return he made him Cardinal. He aſſiſted alſo at the Conference the ſaid Pope had with the Emperor at Parma; and the Peace being concluded, he wrote an elegant Oration De Bono Pacis. And finding himſelf drawing near to his end, he retired to Rome, where he died in the year 1547, being aged ſeventy years, three Months, and ſix Days, and was buried in the Church of St. Peter ad Vincula, which was that whereof he had the Title, without any Pomp, as he had ordered by his Laſt Will. The Cardinal Caraffa pronounced his Funeral Oration before the Pope, and Jacobus Gallo delivered another in Commendation of him in the Church of St. Laurence. The Works we have of his, are his ſixteen Books of Epiſtles, ſeveral Orations, many Poems, an Interpretation of the Pſalms, and the Epiſtles of St. Paul; De Philoſophica Conſolatione & Meditatione in Adverſis, De Liberis Recte Inſtituendis, De Philoſophiæ Laudibus, &c. Antonius Florebeau hath writ his Life, and many learned Men have left an honourable mention of him.

SAFACOS, Uſila, a City and Sea-port of Barbary in Africa, three days Journey from Caſsa to the North, ſixty miles from Capes to the Weſt, and fifty from Tunis Eaſt. It lies on the North Entry of the Gulf of Cabeſt, over-againſt the Iſland of Cercina, now Chicari or Cherchen.

SAFARDA, a great and Navigable River in the Kingdom of Fez, which falls into the Atlantick Ocean on the North of Arzilla. It is ſuppoſed to be the Zilia of Ptolemy. Nub.

SAFFAY, Lat. Savus, a ſmall River of Barbary, which falls into the Mediterranean Sea in the Kingdom of Argier, between Accharara and Metaſus.

SAGAN, a City of Germany in Sileſia, belonging to the Houſe of Auſtria, and is the Head City of a Dutchy of the ſame Name; in Latin it is called Saganum, and in the Poliſh Language Zegan; ſituate upon the Bober, where it receives the Quiſs, ſeven German miles from Glogaw to the Weſt, and ſix from Croſſen to the North, now in the hands of the Emperor as King of Bohemia, whoſe Predeceſſors redeemed it in 1548 from the Elector of Saxony, to whom it was mortgaged, together with its Dukedom. The Town ſtands 24 miles South of Croſſen, and 80 North-weſt of Breſlaw. Longit. 35 30. Lat. 31. 38.

SAGAREL (Gerard) was born at Parma, and lived in the Thirteenth Century; he rejected all ſorts of Vows, and aſſerted that all the Popes that had poſſeſſed the Chair ſince St. Sylveſter were no true Popes, excepting only Peter de Moeron, who was Celeſtine V. and thence concluded that no body was bound to be obedient to the Decrees of the Popes of Rome, nor to pay Tithes. He was burnt for an Heretick not long after. Spondan. A. C. 1298.

SAGES of Greece. This Name hath been beſtowed upon ſeven Men famous for their Wiſdom and Prudence, viz. upon Thales of Miletum Pittacus of Mitylene, Bias of Priene, Solon of Athens, Cleobulus of Lyndus, Periander King of Corinth, and Chilo of Sparta or Lacedæmon: Some Authors put Miſon the Lacedæmonian inſtead of Periander; others, Anacharſis the Scythian, who lived at the ſame time. Plutarch tells us that there was always a great Correſpondence between theſe Wiſe Men, and that their Converſe together was only about Matters of Natural and Moral Philoſophy. Some have been of opinion that Epimenides of Creet ought to have had a place amongſt theſe Men, who lived at the ſame time, and is quoted by St. Paul in his Epiſtle to Titus. Some alſo have had the ſame eſteem for Æſop, who likewiſe was their Contemporary, ſome of whoſe Fables, Socrates (as Plato tells us) thought worth his turning into Verſe. That memorable Sentence Γνῶθι σεαυτὸν is attributed by Laertius to Thales, by Ovid to Pythagoras, and by Plutarch to Æſop. See every one of their Names as they ſtand in Alphabetical Order. Plutarch, Diogenes Laertius, Cyrillus Alexandr.

SAGITTARIUS, Biſhop of Gap in the Sixth Century, the Brother of Salonicus Biſhop of Ambrun in France. They were both accuſed of having commited ſeveral Robberies and Murthers, and of entring with armed Men into the Church of the Biſhop of St. Pol Troiſchateaux, where they tore to pieces his Sacerdotal Habits, beat his Miniſters that aſſiſted him at the Altar, and took away with them all that they found in his Houſe. Upon this occaſion a Council was called at Lyons, in 567, where being convicted of theſe Enormities, they were both depoſed. But they having recourſe to the Pope, he heard them, and without any further examining of the Matter, did re-eſtabliſh them in their Sees; and being returned to France, King Gontran conſented to their readmiſſion. Some time after, the Lombards having made an Invaſion into the Country, they ſided with Mommol that fought againſt them, and boaſted that they had killed many Barbarians, meaning the Lombards. Thus continuing their former wicked courſe of Life, Gontran was fain, in 579, to call a Council at Chalon, where, upon an Indictment of High Treaſon, and many other Miſdemeanours preferred againſt them, they were depoſed from their Biſhopricks, and confined to a Monaſtery in Burgundy; from whence they made a ſhift to eſcape, and lived like wretched Vagabonds for a long time, and at laſt died miſerably. Sagittarius taking part with Gondebald againſt Gontran, after the taking of Cominges, a Soldier lighting upon him, cut off his Head. Greg. Turonenſ. lib. 4. c. 47. lib. 5. c. 21. lib. 7. cap. 34. Baron. in Annal.

SAGITTARIUS, one of the twelve Signs of the Zodiack, into which the Sun enters in November. This Sign is repreſented in the ſhape of a Centaure, half Man, half Horſe, holding a bent Bow in his Hand, ready to ſhoot an Arrow, to denote the Violence of Cold, and the ſharpneſs of the Winds that reign in that Month. The Fables tell us, that this Sagittarius is Chiron the Centaure, or as others will have it Crocus the Son of Euphem, the Nurſe of the Muſes, who being much addicted to Hunting on Mount Parnaſſus, was after his Death ranked amongſt the Conſtellations, by the Favour of the Muſes. Nat. Comes. Hygin. Aſtron.

SAGON, or Sagona, a City of Corſica, with a Biſhoprick Suffragan to that of Piſa. At preſent this place is wholly deſtroyed, and the Biſhop hath his Reſidence in a neighbouring Country Town.

SAGRANO, Sagro, a ſmall River in the farther Calabria.

SAGUENAY, a Province of New France in America, with a River of the ſame Name, whence the Country is denominated, and which diſcharges it ſelf into the River of St. Laurence.

SAGUNTUS, or Saguntum, a great and ancient City of Spain, in Alliance with the Romans, the Inhabitants whereof advertiſed the Senate of all the Proceedings of Hannibal in their Country; who at laſt beſieging them in the 535*th* Year from the Building of Rome, they defended it againſt him eight or nine Months, but being preſſed with Famine, and tired out with the Miſeries they had ſo long endured, kindled a great Fire in the midſt of their City, into which they caſt themſelves, with their Wives, Children, and all the precious things they had. This was one of the cauſes of the ſecond Punic War. This City being raſed to the ground, the Town that now ſtands in the place of it, is called Morvedre. Flor. Tit. Liv. Eutrop. Strabo. Oroſ.

SAHID DELTA, an Iſland made by the divided Branches of the Nile and the Mediterranean Sea, which is the beſt part of the lower Egypt; the Country being more Fruitful than the reſt, and poſſeſſed by more Civil Inhabitants. Leo African.

SAINT AGATHA, Di Gotti, Lat. Agatha or Farum Sanctæ Agathæ, a City in the further Principality of Naples, a Biſhop's See, Suffragan of Benevento, 90 Miles South of Taleſe, and 14 from Capua and Benevento.

SAINT AIGNAN, or Agnan, a City of France in Berry, upon the River Cher, at the place where the Saudre runs into it: Formerly it was an Earldom, but now raiſed to a Dutchy and Peerdom of France, in Favour of Francis de Beauvilliers, firſt Gentleman of the French King's Bed-Chamber, Knight of the King's Order, and Governour of Havre de Grace, &c. The Name of this City of old was Hagand, but hath ſince taken the Name of St. Aignan Biſhop of Orleans, and preſerves part of his Relicks.

SAINT-ALBAN, a Market-Town in the County of Hartford, built upon the Ruines of the Ancient Verulamium. St. Alban, the firſt Engliſh Martyr ſuffer'd here in 293, under the Diocleſian Perſecution. The Church of the Monaſtery is ſtill remaining, which for its Antiquity, Largeneſs, and Beauty is well worth the ſeeing. This Noble and Religious Pile had at the Diſſolution of the Monaſtery been pull'd down, had not the Towns-Men purchas'd its ſtanding, for the Sum of four hundred Pounds. It has a Noble Font of Braſs, brought out of Scotland (during the Wars in King Henry VIIIths time) in which the Children of the Kings of Scotland us'd to be Baptiz'd. Speed. Cambd. Brit.

SAINT ALYRE, an Abby and Village near to Clermont in Auvergne a Province of France, near the River Tiretaine, of old called Scateon, which riſeth from a Spring, whoſe Waters petrefie or turn to Stone, ſo that inſenſibly it hath made a kind of Bridge under which this little River runs.

SAINT AMAND, a ſmall City in Flanders, four Leagues from Tournay, upon the River Scarpe, of which the French have been in Poſſeſſion ever ſince 1667. Latin Authors give it the Name of Elno: In it is the Famous Abby of St. Amand, where died the Saint of that Name, Abbatia St. Almandi Elnonenſis. The Foreſt of St. Amand beginning on the Frontiers of Flanders, and extending it ſelf in the County of Hainault near to the City Valenciens, was cut down by order of Lewis XIV. in 1676. after his taking of Condé and Bouchain. St. Amand, before the French diſmantled it, was a place of great Strength, the River Scarpe on which it ſtands, falls a little lower into the Schelde. The Lands that lie between the two Rivers, are called the Iſles of St. Amand. Guichard. in Deſcrip. pais bas. Le Mire.

SAINT AMOUR, a ſmall Town in the County of Burgundy, and Dioceſs of Lyons in France, honoured of late with a Collegiate Church.

SAINT ANDERO, Lat. Andreopolis Antiqua Flavionavia, a Town and Port in the Principality of Biſcay in Spain, lately advanced to the Dignity of a Biſhop's See; ſome place it in the Aſturias.

SAINT ANDIOL, upon the River Rhone, a City of France in Vivarets, belonging to the Biſhop of Viviers, from whom it is alſo called le Bourg de Viviers. Latin Authors call it Vivarienſe Monaſterium, Fanum Sancti Andeoli, or St. Andochi, but this laſt is improper. St. Andiol is a very ancient City, which was known by the Name of Gemo, Gemibo or Gemibus, as appears from the Martyrology of Ado Archbiſhop of Vienne, who lived in the Ninth Century. St. Andiol, a Grecian, ſent by Polycarpus into Gaul, ſtop'd at Gemibo upon the Rhone, being a very conſiderable City, and there ſuffered Martyrdom under the Reign of Severus about the Year 190, from whom this City afterwards took its Name. The Name of St. Andoche is improperly given to this place, foraſmuch as this Saint ſuffer'd in Burgundy, whither he, with ſome other of his Companions, came to preach the Goſpel. St. Andiol ſuffered the firſt day of May. Adon. in Martyr. Catel. Memoir. of Langued.

SAINT ANDRE, (Francis of) Son of Philip Andre, chief Preſident of the Parliament of Languedoc, became Preſident of the Parliament of Paris, and one of the greateſt Men of his time, and was therefore highly eſteemed by Francis I. Henry II. Francis II. and Charles IX. Kings of France; this laſt made him Preſident of the Flaming Chamber, a place hung with Black, and enlightned with Lamps and great Tapers, where thoſe that embraced the Proteſtant Religion were to be tried. St. Andre, weary with theſe Civil Diſſentions, quitted this Station for a Country Life. He died in 1571. leaving his fine Library much embelliſh'd and augmented by William Budæus's Books, and rare Manuſcripts. Blanchard, Lovis Jacob, Traie de Bibliot.

SAINT ANDRES, a City of Germany in the Dutchy of Carinthia, upon the River Lavant, a little before it runs into the Drave. This is the Flavia of the Romans; it belongs to the Archbiſhop of Saltzburg: Some confound this place with Lavanmund, which is a near neighbouring City and Epiſcopal See: It ſtands ſeven Miles from Edinbourg, and eleven East of Clagenfurt. The Biſhoprick was Inſtituted by Eberhard Biſhop of Saltzburg in 1221, whence the Prelates of this place are ſubject to him and not to the Emperor. Alſo a City of Biſcay in Spain, which the Spaniards call St. Andero, being a commodious Sea-port. See St. Andero. Others place this City in Aſturia Santillana, and it's ſaid that an Epiſcopal See hath been erected there of late. Alſo a Promontory in Achaia in the Peloponneſus, now known by the Name of Cabo Sant Andrea, and is the ſame with the Antirrhium of Ptolemy and Pliny. There is alſo a Promontory in the Iſle of Cyprus called Capo di Andreano, to which Ptolemy gives the Name of Clides, and Pliny Dinaretum. Alſo a ſtrong place in the Low-Countries called Fort de St. Andre in the Dutchy of Gelderland, between the Meuſe and the Waal or Vahalis, about two Leagues from Boiſleduc, built by Andrew Cardinal of Auſtria in 1599, but the following Year was taken by the Hollanders, who are yet Maſters of it. The French took it from them in 1672, but two Years after quitted it, having firſt demoliſh'd it. Alſo a Town in Hungary near to Buda, which Bonfinius ſuppoſes to be the Station of the Quartodecima Legio Germanica mentioned by Ptolemy.

SAINT ANDREWS, a Town of Scotland in the County of Fife, was an Archbiſhop's See, which had for Suffragans Dunkel, Aberdeen, Murray, Dumblain, Brechin, Roſſe, Cathnes and Orkney, &c. The Scotch call this Town St. Andrews, Latin Authors Andreopolis Regmundia and Abernethum; this laſt Abernethi though very different from St. Andrews, being often confounded with it, becauſe it was the Biſhops See before it was removed to St. Andrews by Kennet or Canut III. King of Scotland, who lived in the Tenth Age. Pope Sixtus IV. at the requeſt of K. James III. made it an Archbiſhoprick. The Town lies near the German Sea, has a good Haven, and a Famous Univerſity erected by James I. in 1426. is Capital of the Province of Fife, and the Archbiſhop was Metropolitan of all Scotland. John Leſly and Boetius's Hiſtory of Scotland. It was fin'd 500 l. for not ſurrendring to Oliver in 1651. at firſt Summons, but he afterwards remitted it. A late Author does poſitively aſſert that the Archbiſhops of St. Andrews were formerly ſubject to the Archbiſhop of York, whom he would have to be Primate of Scotland: But the Curious may conſult Anglia Sacra, Part 2. p. 234. where they will find the contrary determined by Pope Nicholas, who aſſerts that the Dioceſs of York, was converted by the Scots, and had many Scots Biſhops, but that Church never ſent any Biſhops to Scotland, and Turgod Pror of Durham, being choſen Archbiſhop of St. Andrews, was the firſt over whom the Archbiſhop of York ever claimed Superiority, but in 1109. Thomas Biſhop of York conſecrated him by the Command of King Henry, without any Claim of Subjection, there being only a Mutual Proteſtation for Right on both ſides. Ang. Sac. part. 2. But it's true that this Claim was often renewed afterward, 'till finally determined by the Pope in the Reign of James the Third of Scotland againſt the Archbiſhop of York.

SAINT ANGELO, Lat. Angelopolis, a City of Naples in the Capitanato, ſmall but ſtrong, five Miles from Manfredonia, and four from the Adriatick Sea.

SAINT ANGELO de LOMBARDI, a ſmall City in the further Principality, and a Biſhop's See under the Archbiſhop of Coſenza, from which it ſtands eight Miles towards Benevento.

SAINT ANGELO in VADO, a ſmall City in the Dukedom of Vrbino, in the Territories of the Church, made a Biſhops See in 1635. by Pope Vrban VIII.

SAINT ANTONINE, a City of France in Rovergue, ſituate at the Confluence of the Rivers l'Aveirou and la Bonnette, and compaſſed with high Mountains, which ſerve for a Wall to it. The Proteſtants having fortified this place, it was taken by Lewis XIII. in 1622. This place is Famous for a ſort of Plumbs which are commended before others.

SAINT ANTONIO, a Town in Florida, built by the Spaniards, and burnt by Sir Francis Drake, in 1585. It being left by the Spaniſh Garriſon that ſhould have defended it. Cambden.

SAINT ASAPH, a Town of Flintſhire in Wales, and a Biſhops See, under the Archbiſhop of Canterbury; Latin Authors call it Aſaphopolis, Fanum St. Aſaphi, and ſome Elwa, becauſe it's ſituate upon the Confluence of the Rivers Elwi, and Elwid, which empty themſelves into the Sea a little below the Town. This Place owes its Original to Kentigern Biſhop of Glaſcow in Scotland, who coming into England in 560. to preach the Goſpel, built a Monaſtery here, which was ſoon after enlarged, by reaſon of the great number of Monks and Seculars that flock'd from all parts to profit by his Sermons and Example. In Proceſs of time the Seculars built themſelves Houſes, and call'd their growing Town St. Aſaph, from Aſaph one of Kentigern's Diſciples, and inſtituted Biſhop of this place by him, who died here in 590. This Dioceſs contains 128 Pariſhes. The Town ſtands three Miles from the Sea, 16 from Cheſter, and 159 from London, the Market on Saturdays. Lat. 53. 22. Long. 3. 17. Cambden, Pitſeus, Godwin, Leland, Boetius.

SAINT AUBIN, Lat. Fanum Sancti Albini, a Town of Bretagne in France, five Leagues from Rennes to the North, and as many from the Borders of Normandy to the South, ſituate on the River Coveſnon, Famous for the great Victory obtained here by Lewis of Tremoville General for Charles VIII. King of France, againſt the Duke of Bretagne, and his Confederates, in 1488.

SAINT AUGUSTIN, a City and Sea-port of Northern America in Florida, where the Spaniards poſſeſs this place and that of St. Matthew: Alſo a Promontory of South America in Brazil, belonging to the Government of Pharnambuck, known by the Name of Cabo de St. Agoſtino, caput St. Auguſtini. Here is a conſiderable Fort built by the Portugueſe, which the Hollanders made themſelves Maſters of, but the former have ſince re-taken it.

SAINT BARTHOLOMEW, one of the Antilles, or Caribbe Iſlands, in the North Sea towards America, of the number of thoſe that are ſurnamed by the Spaniards de Barlovereto. It is accommodated with a very good Haven, and is very Fruitful of Tabaco and Manyoc, and conſequently great Quantities of Caſſava is made there, which ſerves for Bread to almoſt all the South part of America. This Manyoc is a little Tree or Shrub full of crooked knots, and its height not above a Fathom. There be ſix or ſeven different ſorts of it, diſtinguiſhed by the colour; that which is much of a violet colour is the beſt of all, being reduced into Meal or Flour, it makes a kind of white Bread. R. P. de Tertre. Hiſt. Gen. des Antilles.

SAINT BENNET in the Holme, a Village in the County of Norfolk, and the Hundred of Tunſted, not far from Hickling, receiving its Name from an ancient Abby founded by King Canutus the Dane, and afterwards fortified with Walls and Bulwarks by the Monks, one of which betrayed it to William the Conquerour, and though ſince decayed, yet the Title of Lord Abbot of St. Bennet is ſaid to remain to this day to the Biſhops of Norwich.

SAINT BEOME, a Town of Provence in France, where is the Grotto of St. Mary Magdalen, whoſe Body is ſaid to be there yet preſerved.

SAINT BONNET (John) Lord of Tovias, and Mareſchal of France, was of the ancient Houſe of Cailar, which is a Barony ſince ſold to the Biſhops of Lodeve in Languedock. He was born in that Province at St. Jean de Gardonnenques the firſt of March, 1585. He was at the Siege of Montauban, Montpellier, the Iſle of Rhée, and the Town of St. Martin, where he Commanded, together with St. Luc, and de la Rochefoucaut. The French King afterward conferred upon him the Government of that Iſle, which he defended valiantly againſt the Engliſh. After having aſſiſted at the Siege of Rochel, he was ſent into Italy, where he Commanded the French King's Forces in Montferrat, and defended Caſal againſt the Marquis of Spinola General of the Spaniſh Army. The King in recompence of his Services, made him one of the Officers of the Crown, Mareſchal of France, and Lieutenant General of his Armies in Italy; and ſome time after was admitted Knight of the Order of the Holy Ghoſt. After all theſe Services of his, and the publick acknowledgment of them by the Honours conferred upon him, he was put out of Favour without ſo much as knowing for what, his Penſions and Governments were taken away from him, by which means he ſaw himſelf reduced to want. The Enemies of France imbraced this Opportunity to draw him over to their ſide, but he choſe rather to be Unhappy than Diſloyal. However his Worth was highly eſteemed in Italy, where they called him their Defender, and the Reception he had given him at Rome, Venice and other Cities, which he viſited during his Diſgrace, were convincing Marks hereof. Some time after Victor Amadeus Duke of Savoy, being Confederate with France, raiſed an Army againſt Spain, whereof he made Toiras Lieutenant General, with conſent of the French King, with which he entred the Enemies Country, and in attacking the Fort of Fontain or Fontenette in the Dutchy of Milan, was killed with a Musket-ſhot, as he was viewing a Breach his Cannon had made the Fourteenth of June 1637. His Body was carried to Turin, where he was interred in the Capuchine Monaſtery. Baudier.

SAINT BRIEU, or St. Brieux, Briocum, Fnum Sancti Brioci, a City of France in Vpper-Britany, to which this Saint, who was its Apoſtle, gave Name. It is ſituate between the Rivers of Trieu and Arguenon, and hath a Biſhoprick under the Archbiſhoprick of Tours, Founded about 844, by Neomenius Duke of Britany, in the Reign of Charles the Bald. Others ſay that this Biſhoprick was erected in 552, and that St. Brieu the Diſciple of St. Germain of Paris, was the firſt Biſhop of it, that after his Death the Prelates having been driven thence, were reſtored by Neomenius. However it is ſuppoſed that this was the Country of the Biduceans mentioned by Ptolemy, who alſo names the Rivers of Trie and Arguenon, both which contribute to the making this a very pleaſant City, ſituate in a Fruitful Valley, at the foot of a Rock, which hinders it from the Proſpect of the Sea, though it be not above half a League diſtant. It hath a commodious Haven, and upon all accounts is a fine City, being handſomly built, and well Peopled. The Cathedral Church dedicated to St. Stephen, is adorn'd with two great Steeples, and has a fine Chapter, compoſed of a Dean, a Treaſurer, two Arch-deacons, a Theologal, a Chaunter and twenty Canons. The Palace of Audience, and that of the Biſhop, well deſerve to be viewed by Strangers. It is looked upon as a particular Happineſs of this City, that during the Conteſts between the Houſe of Blois and that of Montfort, who diſputed about the Dutchy of Britany, St. Brieu only enjoyed Peace and Tranquility, when all other places were engaged on one ſide or other, and the whole Province was haraſs'd with War. Argentre Hiſt. de Bret. Du Cheſne Recherche des Ant. des Villes de France.

SAINT CATHARINE, an Iſland in the North Sea, upon the Coaſt of Honduras in New-Spain in America: It's 20 Leagues from the Continent, and belong'd formerly to the Spaniards, until diſpoſſeſſed by the Engliſh, who have new-named the Place the Iſland of Providence: It hath a convenient Port and Cittadel. There is alſo a Monaſtery of this Name at at the foot of Mount Horeb or Sinai, near the Mountain of St. Catharine, which makes a part of Sinai in the Stony Arabia. The Repoſitory of the Relicks of a Saint of the ſame Name, pretended to have been brought hither by Angels from Alexandria in Egypt, ſoon after her Martyrdom. The Archbiſhop of Mount Sinai, who acknowledges no Patriarch, reſides at this Monaſtery. One of the Greek Emperors built it for the uſe of the Caloyers of the Order of St. Baſil, and the Ottoman Port favours it with great Privileges.

SAINT CROCE, Lat. Stauropolis, an Inland City of Caria in the leſſer Aſia, is an Archbiſhops See of a very large Juriſdiction; there being under it twenty ſeven Suffragan Biſhops.

SAINT CRUX, a Town upon the North Coaſt of the Iſland of Cuba in America.

SAINT CRUX, a ſmall but ſtrong City in the Kingdom of Suſa upon the Atlantick Ocean, built by the Portugueſe in 1536, but ſince taken by the King of Suſa, under whom it is alſo called Cape d'Aguer.

SAINT CRUX de la Sierra, a ſmall City in the Kingdom of Peru, a Biſhops See under the Archbiſhop of La Plata; from whence it ſtands one Hundred Spaniſh Leagues to the Eaſt, in 1572 it was burnt by Sir Francis Drake.

SAINT CHRISTOPHERS, ſo called from Chriſtopher Columbus the firſt Diſcoverer. It is in the Latitude of 17 and 25. on this ſide the Line, about 75 Miles in Circuit. It has very high Mountains in the middle, whence flow ſeveral Rivers. The Soil is light and Sandy, and fruitful in Sugar, Tabaco, Cotton and Ginger. Between the Mountains are dreadful Rocks, horrid Precipices, thick Woods, and hot ſulphurous Springs. On the Shore is a Salt-pit and an Iſthmus, within a Mile and half of Nevis. The Iſland is exceeding delightful, and the Mountains lying one above another, afford a delightful Proſpect over all the Plantations in the Iſland, which are bounded with rows of Trees always Green, and there are many fair Houſes covered with glaz'd Slate. The Iſland is divided into four parts, two whereof are poſſeſſed by the Engliſh, and the other by the French, but ſo ſeparated, that the People cannot go from one Quarter to another, without croſſing one anothers Dominions. The Engliſh part is beſt Watered, but the French better for Tillage. The Engliſh are moſt numerous, but the French have moſt Forts; that chiefly noted hath regular Works like a Cittadel, is called Baſſe Terre, and commands the Haven. The Engliſh have only two, one commanding a great Haven, and the other a Deſcent near Point Sable; each Nation keep Guard on their Frontiers, which they renew every day. The Engliſh have five Churches, the Seats whereof are excellent Workmanſhip in precious Wood. In 1625. Sir Thomas Warner an Engliſh, and Monſieur Deſnambuck a French Gentleman took poſſeſſion of this Iſland on the ſame day, in the name of their reſpective Maſters, it being a place of ſafe retreat for Ships of both Nations bound to America. Theſe two Gentlemen leaving People to keep Poſſeſſion, deſign'd to return home: But ſuſpecting a Deſign of the Natives and Spaniards to deſtroy them, in one night they rid themſelves of the moſt Factious of that Nation, and forced the reſt to retire into other Iſlands; and returning to their Maſters, their Conduct was approved, and themſelves ſent with Recruits in Quality of Governors. So that the French and Engliſh divided the Iſland betwixt them, but the latter being beſt ſupplied increaſed moſt. The French have a good Town at Baſſe Terre, well built with Brick, Free-ſtone and Timber. It is well inhabited by Merchants and Tradeſmen, and hence the Planters are ſerved with Utenſils and Neceſſaries in Exchange for their Commodities. Here is a fair large Church, a fine Hoſpital, and ſtately College for the Governours Reſidence, having ſtately Courts, pleaſant Walks and curious Gardens. In 1629. Don Fred. de Toledo was ſent with a Fleet from Spain of 24 great Ships of Burden, and 15 Frigots, to diſpoſſeſs the Engliſh and French; they ſoon took ſome Engliſh Ships near the Iſle of Nevis, and then caſt Anchor in St. Chriſtopher's Road in the French Diviſion: Neither their Forts nor ours were in Condition to hold out, nor were the Engliſh and French both able to ſtand againſt the Number of Spaniards; yet they made a Vigorous Oppoſition, but being overcome, the French Ship'd off and forſook the Iſland. The Engliſh were hereupon in great Diſorder, ſome endeavouring to eſcape by Sea, and others to hide in the Mountains: But at laſt ſent Deputies to treat with the Spaniard, who commanded them immediately to leave the Iſland, or to expect the Rigour of the Law of Arms, and for that end ſent them the Ships he had taken at Nevis, and gave leave for the reſt to ſtay till they could be tranſported, and thereupon Don Frederick weighed Anchor; after which the Engliſh rallied, and reſolved to carry on their Colony. The French having ſuffered much at Sea, put in at the Iſland of St. Martin and Montſerrat, but finding thoſe places much ſhort of St. Chriſtophers, they ſent thither to diſcover the Motion of the Spaniard, and being informed how things went, returned with ſpeed. The Engliſh Colony being conſtantly ſupplied from London, grew ſo faſt, that they ſent others to Antego, Barbadoes, Barbuda, &c. In this Iſland there is an Animal called a Rocquet, whoſe Skin is like a withered Leaf mark'd with little yellow or bluiſh Points; they have four Feet, the foremoſt higheſt, they have ſparkling Eyes, hold up their Head conſtantly, and are in continual Motion: Their Tails are turned up towards their Backs, making a Circle and a half, they love to ſtare upon Men, and when purſued they put out their Tongues like Hounds. Here is a large Bird called the Eagle of Orinoca, ſhap'd like an Eagle, his Feathers light-gray, ſpotted Black, the end of his Wings and Tail yellow; he never ſets upon any Bird but in the open Air, and thoſe who have Beaks and Tallons like himſelf. They have another Bird called a Crawfoul about the bigneſs of a great Duck, aſh-coloured, hath a long flat Back, great Head, ſmall Eyes and ſhort Neck, with a Craw which will contain two Gallons of Water: They ſit upon Trees by the Sea to catch Fiſh, which they diſcover at a great diſtance, being ſo intent on their Prey that they are eaſily ſhot, but not eatable. The Colibry or humming Bird is admirable for its Beauty, Bulk, ſweet Scent, and manner of Life; it is no bigger than the greater ſort of Flies, yet of ſuch Beauty, that the Feathers on the Neck, Back and Wings repreſent a Rainbow; under their Neck is ſuch a bright red, that it reſembles a Carbuncle, their Belly is yellow as Gold, the Thighs green like an Emerald, the Feet and Beak black like poliſh'd Ebony, the Eyes like Diamonds ſet in an Oval, the Head of a ſhining Green, and look as Gilt: The Male has a Tuft on his Head of all the Colours aforeſaid, he makes a noiſe with his Wings like a little Whirl-wind, he ſucks Dew from the Flowers, ſpreading abroad his little Creſt, which looks like ſo many precious Stones: The Female lays but two Eggs, of an Oval Form, as big as a Pea or ſmall Pearl, ſome Ladies wear them for Pendants when Dead, though then they loſe much of their Beauty; they ſmell like that of the fineſt Musk. Baſſe Terre ſuffered much by an Earthquake, April, 1690. In June and July the ſame Year, the Engliſh, under Captain Codrington, Captain Wright, and Sir Tim. Thornhill, diſpoſſeſſed the French.

SAINT CHRISTOPHER, an Iſland of North America, and one of the Caribbes: Chriſtopher Columbus, who diſcover'd it in his firſt Voyage he made to America, put his own Name upon it, and the Savages at preſent call it Ay-ay; it is 75 Miles in Circuit. It is divided between the Engliſh and French, who took Poſſeſſion of it at the ſame time in the Year 1625. It is Fruitful of Sugar, Tabaco, Ginger and Indigo, and hath three good Havens. The middle of the Iſland is raiſed into high Mountains. The Air is good and wholſome, but much diſturbed with Hurricanes, which often cauſe ſtrange Diſorders. The Drug called Indigo in this Iſland, where it is prepared in great Quantity, is uſed by our Dyers, to give the firſt Dye to thoſe things they would have of a blue colour, and Painters make uſe of Indigo for the ſhading of a light blue, as ſtriking a very dark and deep colour. The Plant whence it is made, is called Inde-plate by the Inhabitants; it is a Shrub bearing Cods of about an ordinary Pins length, very ſlender, which contain little Grains of an Olive colour. The places where they make Indigo out of theſe Seeds are provided with a great Copper, two large Fats, which are called ſteeping Veſſels, with a Maſhing-Tub, and Setling-Tub: All theſe are placed one above another: the Plants are rang'd in different Layers in the ſteeping Veſſels, and hot Water poured upon them, which cauſeth an Effervеſcence or Fermentation, whereby the Matter of the Indigo is drawn forth from the Plant. Out of the ſteeping Fats, when the Matter is fully extracted, the Water is made to run down into the Maſhing-Fat, where being well ſtir'd with an Inſtrument made on purpoſe, provided with ſix Pails in the Figure of a Pyramid and full of holes, it works and purgeth it ſelf, by caſting forth moſt malignant Vapors, which frequently choak the Workmen. At laſt there ſettles a kind of Lees, which being put into Linen Sacks, the Water runs away and leaves the Indigo behind, which is afterwards put into ſmall Baskets to be dried, and then laid up in Warehouſes. Du Tartre.

SAINT CLAUDE, Fanum Sanctum Claudii, a Town in the Franche Comte, well fortified. It is upon the Frontiers of Bugey, and the Country of Gex, about five Leagues from Geneva to the Weſt, and Famous for a celebrated Monaſtery, where lies the Body of St. Claudius Archbiſhop of Bezanſon, who lived in the Seventh Century, and gave his Name not only to the Town, but to part of an adjoyning Mountain called Mont St. Claude.

SAINT CLOU, a noted Town of the Iſle of France, upon the Seyne, two Leagues below Paris, was formerly called Nogent, which Name was changed, after that St. Clou (in Latin Clodoaldus) the Son of Clodomir King of Orleans had been buried there. It was here that Henry III. of France was killed in 1589. It has a magnificent Palace belonging to the Dukes of Orleans. The Lordſhip of this place, which belongs to the Archbiſhoprick of Paris, hath been raiſed to a Dutchy and Peerage in Favour of Franſois de Harlay, at preſent Archbiſhop of that City. Gregoire de Tour.

SAINT DAVIDS, Lat. Menevia, a City and Biſhoprick in the farthermoſt corner of Pembrookſhire in Wales, upon the Iriſh Sea, near the Promontorium Octapitarum of the Ancients, which we now call St. David's Head. This Town ſuffer'd much by the Daniſh and Norwegian Pyrates. The Cathedral dedicated joyntly to St. Andrew and St. David (the latter having founded the See) was built by Peter their 49th. Biſhop in 1176. St. David the Founder was in the time of the Saxons Archbiſhop of Caerleon upon Vsk, but tranſlated the See to this City then called Menew, whence the Biſhops to this day ſtile themſelves Menevenſes. When St. Auſtin the Monk came into England, there were ſeven Suffragans belonging to this See, and continued ſo for 26 Succeſſions, till Sampſon the Archbiſhop in time of a Plague, transferred the Dignity to Dole in Britany, by which his Succeſſors loſt the Title of Archbiſhops, and in 1115 Bernard the Biſhop ſubmitted to the See of Canterbury, which none of his Predeceſſors had ever done. This Dioceſs contains the Counties of Pembrook, Cardigan, Carmarthen, Radnor, Brecknock, with part of Monmouth, Hereford, Montgomery and Glamorganſhires. The Town is ſeated in a barren Soil within a Mile of the Sea, and expoſed to Storms; it is Ruinous and thinly inhabited; the Roof of its Cathedral was the higheſt in England. It is 207 Miles from London. Giraldus Cambrenſis, when Biſhop of St. David's, ſtickled to have it exempted from Canterbury, but being overcome at Rome by the Intereſt of Hubert Archbiſhop of Canterbury, he died re infecta, Anno 1250. The Monument of Edmund Earl of Richmond, Father to King Henry the Seventh, ſaved this Cathedral from Ruin in the time of King Henry the Eighth: The Biſhop's Palace is a ſtately Building of Free-ſtone, Anglia Sacra. D. Fuller, Speed.

SAINT DENYS, a Town of France, in the Iſle of France, being formerly called Catulliaque, from a Woman called Catulla, who is ſaid to have buried here the Body of St. Denys, and of his Companions. It is a place famous for the Abby of St. Denys, being the Sepulchre of the French Kings, and a Monument of the Piety of King Dagobert I. who was the Founder of it. St. Denys is two little Leagues diſtant from Paris, upon the ſmall River called la Crou, which ſoon after runs into the Seyne. It is called in Latin Dionyſiopolis or Fanum Sancti Dionyſii. The Chappel of St. Denys, in which are the Tombs of moſt of the French Kings, well deſerves a particular Deſcription: It is built in the Figure of a great Croſs, and divided into three parts, viz. The Body of the Church, the Quire, and that part which is behind the High Altar. The whole Structure is Magnificent, and the Windows are large and lightſome; on Solemn Days ineſtimable Treaſures are here expoſed to view, and the Richeſt Curioſities (as the French tell us) that are in all Europe. The Magnificence of the Tombs is very remarkable, I ſhall not make any mention of the Monuments of Princes and Princeſſes, or great Lords, who have had the Honour of being interred here, but only of thoſe of the French Kings and ſome Queens. On the right ſide of the High Altar is the Tomb of King Dagobert, the Founder of this Abby, of gray

Porphyry, and his Figure repreſented upon it in its natural length: Near adjoyning to this is that of Pepin the Short, Father of Charlemagne: Upon the next Tomb are ſeen the Figures emboſſed of Lewis III. and of Carloman the Son of Charles the Stammerer. A little higher is the Monument of Philip III. ſurnamed the Bold, the Son of St. Lewis, and that of Philip IV. Then follow the Tombs of Philip Auguſtus, of Lewis VIII. and of St. Lewis. Near the Abbots Chair, in the entry of the Quire at the left Hand, is the Monument of Clovis II. It was this Prince that took away the Silver, wherewith Dagobert I. had cauſed the Church to be covered, to diſtribute it to the Poor, at a time of publick neceſſity. The Monument of Charles Martel is near adjoyning to that of Clovis II. where he is repreſented in his Royal Robes, with this Inſcription, Carolus Martellus Rex. On the other ſide of the Quire, over-againſt the Iron Grate, are the Tombs of King Eudes and Hugo Capet. In the midſt of the Quire is the Monument of Charles II. ſurnamed the Bald, of Copper, with his Statue of the ſame, in his Royal Robes, having the Imperial Crown on his Head, and a Golden Globe in his left Hand. At the corners of the Tomb are the four Doctors of the Church, and at the top are two Angels each of them holding a Cenſer, all of Copper. Beſides theſe in the Quire are interred the Bodies of Clotarius III. and IV. Thierry II. Childeric III. and Louis V. ſurnamed Faineant or the Idle. Coming out of the Quire at the left Hand is the Tomb of Lewis X. called Hutin, of black Marble, and that of King Robert. Near adjoyning is the Monument of Henry I. and Lewis VI. called the Groſs, both in the ſame Monument. Then follows the Tomb of Philip the Younger, and that of Charles VIII. of black Marble, on which is his Statue in Braſs, and on the corners four Angels of Braſs gilt. On the ſide of the High Altar are the Tombs of King Philip the Tall, of Charles IV. Philip VI. ſurnamed de Valois, and of King John. In one of the Chappels on the South ſide are the Tombs of Charles V. ſurnamed the Wiſe, of Charles VI and VII. Before the ſaid Chappel is the Magnificent Mauſolæum of Francis I. Near to the Chappel of Nôtredame la Blanche, is the ſumptuous Tomb of King Lewis XII. of white Marble two Stories high; on the ſecond Story are repreſented the King, and Queen his Conſort kneeling, in their Royal Robes, with a Praying Desk before them; at the four corners are the four Cardinal Virtues: Upon the Corniſh compaſſing the firſt Story are the Twelve Apoſtles repreſented, ſitting in their bigneſs to the Life: And on the Baſs Reliefs are engraven the Battles and Victories obtained by the ſaid King. This is a Work well becoming the Magnificence of Francis I. who cauſed it to be made at Venice in 1527. by Peter Ponce one of the moſt Famous Statuaries of his time. It was brought into France Piece-meal, which were afterwards joyned upon the place. Near to the Superb Mauſolæum of Lewis XII. is a great Gate, leading to a magnificent Chappel, which Katharine de Medicis cauſed to be built, with deſign to place there the Tomb of Henry II. her Husband. This piece of Architecture is built after the Model of the Pantheon at Rome, which now is called our Lady della Rotunda; it contains three Stories, the firſt being the Vault wherein the Coffins are laid. In the midſt of the ſecond Story is the white Marble Sepulchre of Henry II. and Katharine de Medicis; on the top of it are two Statues lying along, ſurrounded with twelve Pillars of Jaſper-Marble, ſupporting a Table of the ſame, upon which are ſeen the Effigies of the King and Queen in Braſs, kneeling before a praying Desk of the ſame. In each Story are ſix little Chappels on the outſide of the Work, adorned round about with an Arch ſupported by twelve Pillars of white Marble. In the Vault of this Magnificent Edifice are alſo interred the Bodies of Francis II. Charles IX. and Henry III. The Body of Henry IV. is laid in the Vault, where the Ceremonies of the Royal Burials are celebrated, near the Baluſtres that ſerve for a Door to the Quire. The Body of Lewis XIII. lies in the ſame place. The Church of St. Denys is not only the place of the Sepulchres of the French Kings and Queens, and of the Princes and Princeſſes of the Blood, but alſo of ſome great Lords, whoſe extraordinary Atchievements have procured them this Favour. Amongſt many others we meet with in this Church, is the Tomb of Bernard du Gueſclin Earl of Longueville, and Lord High Conſtable of France, at the Feet of Charles V. That of Lewis de Sancerre Conſtable of France is in the ſame Chappel. The Body of Henry de la Tour d'Auvergne Viſcount of Turenne, and Marſhal of France, was depoſited by order of the preſent French King in the Church of St. Denys in 1675. as intending to have it laid in the Mauſolæum he deſigns to build for himſelf, and all the Royal Family of Bourbon. In the mean time till this Project be put in execution, the Cardinal of Bouillon Lord High Almoner of France, his Nephew, hath cauſed a ſumptuous Monument to be erected over the Vault where his Body lies, upon which are repreſented the Victories he gained. It would take up too much room and time to give here a particular account of all the Riches contained in the Treaſury of St. Denys; it will be ſufficient to take notice, that there are to be ſeen a great number of Relicks, Croſſes, Images of Gold and Silver ſet with Precious Stones, Veſſels of Gold and Silver, Books covered with Plates of Gold or Silver gilt, writ with golden Letters, and enrich'd with precious Stones; a Golden Cup ſet round with Jacynths, Emralds, and a Sapphire, on which is ſeen the Figure to the Life of Solomon ſitting on his Throne, which is therefore called the Cup or Bowl of Solomon; the Sword of St. Lewis, that of Turpin Chancellor of France, and that of Joan of Arc, commonly called the Maid of Orleans; many Crowns enrich'd with precious Stones, the Claſp of the Royal Mantle, the Royal Sword, the Golden Scepter (which is that of Charlemagne) the Hand of Juſtice made of Unicorns Horn, the Golden Spurs, all gliſtering with precious Stones, and all the Royal Robes uſed at the Coronation of the Kings of France. Before we make an end of this Article, we will ſet down ſome Remarkable things concerning this Abby of St. Denys. This Monaſtery was exempted from Epiſcopal Jurisdiction by St. Landry Biſhop of Paris, which Immunity was afterwards confirmed by Clovis II. King of France, in an Aſſembly called for that purpoſe, at which were preſent all the Great Men of the Kingdom, and many Prelates. Pepin and Charlemagne alſo ratified this Exemption, and Charles the Bald ratified it in a Council held at Soiſſons, with the Conſent of Æneas Biſhop of Paris who aſſiſted at the ſame. Pope Stephen III. granted to the Religious of this Monaſtery a very particular Privilege, which gave them power of electing one from amongſt themſelves to be their Biſhop. The ſame Pope alſo gave to the Abbot of St. Denys leave to wear the Ring, the Miter and the Croſs, and to make uſe of Pontifical Ornaments whenever he celebrated Maſs in his Church. Where it is obſervable that upon certain ſolemn Feaſts they do wholly ſing the Maſs in Greek, and on other Feſtivals the Epiſtle and Goſpel only are read in Greek, but the reſt of the Office is ſung in Latin, as in other Churches. The Kings of France have alſo beſtowed great Privileges upon the Abbot and Religious of St. Denys, as to grant Letters of Grace and Pardon to Criminals of their Jurisdiction, to coin Money, and to keep Markets and Fairs. Moreover the Abbot of St. Denys hath the Right of ſitting in the Parliament of Paris, in quality of a Counſellor born. King Lewis the Big, declared in an Aſſembly held at St. Denys, that he held the County of Vexin of this Abby, in virtue of which he enjoyed the Right of bearing the Oriflamme or Holy Banner. From the Foundation of this Abby to the preſent time, are counted ſeventy two Abbots, as well Regular as Commendatary. The firſt Abbot Commendatary was Lewis of Bourbon, Cardinal and Archbiſhop of Sens, who was nominated to it by King Francis I. in the Year 1528, and ſince that time this Abby has been always given in Commendam till the Year 1686. when the Revenue became united to the Community of the Nuns of St. Lewis at St. Cyr, near to Verſailles, and the Title of Abbot ſuppreſs'd. This Church was often plundered of part of its Riches, as by the Normans in 857. by the Engliſh in the Reigns of Charles VI. and VII. and by the Proteſtants during the Civil Wars in 1562, and 67. Le Mire, Paris Ancien & Noüveau.

SAINT DIZIER, a ſtrong City of Champagne in France, upon the River Marne, is the chief of a ſmall Country called le Valage between Joinville and Chalon, ſix Leagues from Bar le Duc to the North Eaſt, and Forty two from Paris. This City is famous for its Siege maintained by the Count of Sancerre againſt Charles V. in 1544. who thinking to take it by Surprize, was not only diſappointed in his Deſign, but loſt many of his Men before it, in an Aſſault where the Beſieged Fought Hand to Hand with their Enemies, to defend their Walls; ſome time after the City was delivered to Charles V. with the conſent of the French King, and reſtored again to France by the Peace of Creſpy.

SAINT DOMINGO, Lat. Civitas Sancti Dominici. The chief City of the Iſland Hiſpaniola. It is a Large, Rich and fair City, and is ſituate in the South part of the Iſland at the Mouth of the River Ozama, having near it a very ſafe and large Haven, adorned with the Reſidence of the Governor, an Archiepiſcopal See, the Courts of Juſtice, Exchequer and the Mint. Chriſtopher Columbus built this City in 1494, on the Eaſt Bank of the River, but in 1502 it was removed by Nicholas de Obando, then Governour, to the oppoſite Shoar. Sir Francis Drake, in 1586, took this City by Force, and kept it a Month, burning part of the Houſes, and forcing the Spaniards to redeem the reſt. It lies in Long. 305. 40. Lat. 14. 00.

SAINT DONATO, Lat. Forum Apium, a Town of Campania di Roma in Italy.

SAINT ESPRIT, or, Holy Ghoſt, an Order of Knights, firſt Inſtituted by Lewis of Anjou King of Jeruſalem and Sicily, upon Whitſunday in 1352. After this Prince's Death there happened ſuch Revolutions in Sicily and Naples, that the Order fell quite, and probably would never have been heard of, had not the Original of the Inſtitution fallen by chance to the Venetians, who preſented it to Henry III. of France, in his return from Poland. This Prince having given order to copy the Statutes which he liked moſt, commanded the Sieur Cheverny to burn the Original, that he might paſs for the firſt Inſtitutor himſelf. However it was thus reſtored in 1579. on Whitſunday in Memory of King Henry's Nativity, Election to the Crown of Poland, and coming to the Crown of France, all which are ſaid to have happened on that day. The Knights wear a Collar made of Flowers de Luce of Gold, corner'd with Flames of Fire interwoven with ſome Letters, the firſt whereof is H. becauſe the firſt of Henry's Name, from the Collars hangs a Dove in the midſt of a Croſs, like that of Malta, all beſet with Rays and four Flowers de Luce. The King is Chief of the Order, whoſe Oath is to maintain the Catholick Religion, and Unity amongſt his Subjects. The Knights are all bound to Communicate every firſt day of the Year, and on the day of Pentecoſt, and to ſwear their Zeal to the Catholick Faith, and Fidelity to the King and his Succeſſors. It conſiſts of the King and a Hundred Knights, amongſt which are four Cardinals, five Prelates, a Chancellor, Provoſt, Maſter of the Ceremonies, a High Treaſurer and Regiſter, which with the reſt are to wear a Croſs on their Garment. The Feaſt is kept on the firſt of January, on which the Knights wait on the King to Church, who after Maſs treats them in his Palace; they alſo accompany him to Evening Song, and are treated a ſecond time. Sancte Marthe. Mezeray.

SAINTES, a large and ancient City of Guienne in France, a Biſhops See, and Capital of Zaintogne, ſituate on the Charente, 32 Miles South Eaſt of Rochelle, 40 Weſt of Angouleſme, and 54 North of Bourdeaux, Long. 17. 44. Lat. 45. 42. See Xaintonge.

SAINT ESTIENNE, or, St. Eſtienne de Forez, in Latin Furaenum and Fanum Sancti Stephani, a little City of France, belonging to the Government of Lyons, about two Leagues from the River Loire, and ten from the City of Lyons. It is ſituate at the foot of the Mountains, upon the little River Fureus. The Waters about this place are very proper for the tempering of Steel and Iron, which makes the Inhabitants to drive a great Trade with the Manufactures of that Metal. There is a Mountain near it which abounds with Pit-coal, the bowels whereof have burnt for many years together, and do ſtill. This Town ſuffered much in the Civil War of France towards the end of the laſt Century. In 1563 it was taken by Sarras a Proteſtant Captain, who not long after was himſelf taken Priſoner by the Duke of Nemours, and in 1570, it was taken again by the Proteſtants. Thuan. Hiſtor. lib. 34, 47, &c.

SAINT EUSTACHIA, one of the Caribbes or Leeward Iſlands in the Weſt-Indies. The Engliſh under Sir T. Thornhill and Captain Wright, took it from the French July 1690. It is ſmall, and lies near to St. Chriſtophers, defended with a Fort capable of about 80 Men.

SAINT FE, Lat. Fanum Sancti Fidei, a Town of Granada built by King Ferdinand, Anno 1421. in a Valley on the River Zenile, two Leagues Weſt of the City of Granada.

SAINT FE DE BOGOTA, an Archbiſhops See, and Metropolis of New Granada in Southern America upon the River Pati, by the Lake Guaravita at the foot of the Mountain Bogota, at a great diſtance from the Sea: The Air is Temperate and Healthful, and Proviſions Plentiful.

SAINT FEE, a City in South-America, 150 Leagues from Aſſumption to the South, Lat. 30. The Inhabitants are for the moſt part imployed in Husbandry and feeding Cattle, and weaving courſe Cloth, which they ſell to good Profit in Braſile. By it there lies a Road to Potoſi, and Peru, and Corduba in Tucumana, which being eaſie and convenient, inricheth this place very much, the Journey not being above 350 Leagues. Laet. Page 530.

SAINT FLORENSA, Lat. Fanum Sancti Florentii, a Town in the North of Corſica, having a good Haven, and being well fortified. It is ſubject to the Genueſes, and thought to be the Canelata of Ptolemy.

SAINT FLOUR, a City of France in the upper Auvergne, with a Biſhops See under the Archbiſhop of Bourges, in Latin Floriopolis and Fanum Sancti Flori. Some take it to be the Indiacum of the Ancients. It ſtands upon a ſteep Rock, at the foot of which runs the ſmall River Larder, twenty Leagues from Clermont to the South, and eight from le Puy to the Weſt. The Biſhoprick of St. Flour, which before was only a Priory, was founded by Pope John XXII. in 1317.

SAINT FOR, a Town of Aquitaine in France, upon the Dordogne in the Province of Agenois, four Leagues Weſt of Bargerac.

SAINT FOY, a Town of Guienne in France, upon the Dordogne, betwixt Bargerac and Libourn, it was taken by the Proteſtants in 1563. It is 37 Miles Eaſt of Bourdeaux. Lon. 18. 48. Lat. 44. 51.

SAINT GAL, Fanum Sancti Galli, an Abby and City of Switzerland. The Abby has the Precedence of the City, as being more ancient than it, and having a greater Diſtrict of Lands and more Subjects, and as they are commonly joyned together, are called the Abby and City of St. Gal. This Famous Abby owes its Original to one St. Gal, a Scotch, or as others ſay, an Iriſh Man; who coming to France in Company of St. Columba, in the Seventh Century, travelled to Switzerland, where he preached the Goſpel in ſeveral places, and more particularly in the Territory of Turgaw, where this Abby ſtands. Gonzom Duke of the Almans, having offered him the Biſhoprick of Conſtance, he refuſed to accept of it, and choſe rather to live retiredly in a deſert place, where ſince this Abby, bearing his Name, was built. His Diſciples, in Proceſs of time, being greatly multiplied, eſpouſed the Rule of St. Bennet, and about Fourſcore Years after the Death of St. Gal, the Prieſt Omer was made the firſt Abbot of this place by King Pepin, Son of Charles Martel. Some time after, this Abby being greatly enriched, the firſt Abbot that took the Title of Prince of the Empire was Conradus, being elected to that Dignity in the Year 1226. His Succeſſors were all of them great Lords, and the Abbots of St. Gal, even to this day, have a Territory belonging to them, in which they can raiſe ſix thouſand Men, and is ſituate between the Cantons of Zurick and Appenzel, and the Dioceſs of Conſtance. Charles Martel, Pepin, Charlemagne, and many other Kings of France, as alſo ſeveral of the Emperours, have beſtowed great Privileges and Revenues upon the Abbots of St. Gal, who at preſent have for Patriots and Defenders of their Immunities and Revenues, the Cantons of Zurick, Lucerne, Schwitz and Glaris. 'Tis above 800 years ſince the Foundations of this City were firſt laid, and was afterwards encompaſs'd with a Wall in the Reign of the Emperor Arnold. It joyns to the Abby, which hath its encloſure apart; and between them is a Common Gate, which is locked on both ſides, by the Abbot, and by the Citizens. The City is not great, but very neat and well built, on a riſing Ground, between two little Hills, and is very famous for its curious Manufacture and Rich Trade of fine Linen. This Corporation is divided into ſix Companies, out of every one of which are choſen twelve Perſons, who conſtitute the greater and leſſer Council of the City, and the Magiſtrates are Elected every year. This City in former times, did in many things depend upon the Abbot, but at preſent the Citizens enjoy a Sovereignty apart, independent on that of the Abby. Ever ſince the year 1454. they have been Allied with ſix of the Cantons, viz. Zurick, Berne, Lucerne, Uri, Schwitz, Zug and Glaris. This City is one Mile diſtant from the Lake of Conſtance, and four from Landaw towards the Weſt. See Simler Repub. Helvet. The Citizens of St. Gal are Zealous Calviniſts, and have a very good Government; and though their Prince be a Papiſt, and has his Convent near the City, there are no Papiſts in it; for they have little, if any dependance now on the Prince.

SAINT GALMIER, a ſmall City belonging to the Government of Lyons, in the Suburbs of which is an Alom Fountain, called by thoſe of the Country, la Font Forte, or the ſtrong Fountain.

SAINT GELAIS, an Illuſtrious Family of France, taking its name from the Town of St. Gelais, the Ancient Patrimony of the Lords of Lezignan in Poictou.

SAINT GELAIS (Melin de) a famous French Poet, who flouriſh'd in the laſt Century, and for his Wit was highly eſteemed in the Court of Francis I. and Henry II. He was the Son of Octavianus Biſhop of Angouleſme, who took great care of his Education. He ſtudied at Poictiers, Padua, &c. and was well skill'd in the Laws, Divinity, Philoſophy and Mathematicks, but more eſpecially excell'd in Poetry, ſo as to deſerve the Name of the French Ovid, and did much excell Marot. He died at Paris in the Reign of Henry II. 1554. St. Marthe, Lib. 1. Elog. Gall.

SAINT GEORGIA, a Monaſtery on the Eaſtern Bank of the Nile, about 60 Miles above Cairo, to the South, which had heretofore about 200 Monks, and a vaſt Revenue: About 100 years agone, they all died of the Plague, and the Governour walled the ſame in, and Peopled it with Artificers. The Soldan was ſo taken with the pleaſantneſs of its Seat, that he went thither, and lived in it ſome time, but being overcome by the Solicitations of the Patriarch, he built a new Monaſtery, and gave it Lands to maintain Thirty Monks. This was Seated in the Ruins of an old City near the former. Leo Africanus, p. 326.

SAINT GEORGIO DEL MINA, a Town and Caſtle in Africa, upon the Gold Coaſts of Guinee, lying between the Cape of Three Points, and Cape Corſo. Two Portugal Captains having diſcover'd the Coaſts of Guinee in 1471. perſuaded their King Don Juan, to take poſſeſſion of it in the year 1481. who ſent thither Dom Diego d'Azemburcha, with ten Caravels (a ſort of Round-bottom'd Veſſels) and two great Ships, laden with all things needful for the Building of a Fort. After thirteen days Sailing, Dom Diego caſt Anchor in the Haven where he intended to Build, and gave Advice of his Arrival to the Prince of that Country, called Caſamentè, with whom he had made ſome Acquaintance in a former Voyage; and in the mean time landed his Forces, and took poſſeſſion of the Country in the name of the King of Portugal. Caſamentè came and received him as a Friend, accompanied with a conſiderable number of his Subjects, moſt of them naked, and Armed only with Bows and Javelins. The Portugueze Commander received them at the Head of his Army, with the gravity proper to his Nation, though withal very obligingly: And after having amplified on the puiſſance of his King, and above all, his great Piety and Zeal he had for the Converſion of the People of Guinee, and deſired him to contribute his Endeavours to ſo good a Work, and to the building of a Fort, to ſecure the Commerce between both Nations; Caſamentè, who was a Man of Wit and Underſtanding, eaſily perceiv'd the Trick they would put upon him; and being willing to divert the Blow, anſwer'd, That it was fitting ſome time ſhould be allow'd him and his People, to adviſe about the Change of their Religion; and that ſeeing he was reſolv'd to eſtabliſh an Union and good Intelligence between his Subjects and the Portugueze, Porphyry, and his Figure repreſented upon it in its natural length: Near adjoyning to this is that of Pepin the Short, Father of Charlemagne: Upon the next Tomb are ſeen the Figures emboſſed of Lewis III. and of Carloman the Son of Charles the Stammerer. A little higher is the Monument of Philip III. ſurnamed the Bold, the Son of St. Lewis, and that of Philip IV. Then follow the Tombs of Philip Auguſtus, of Lewis VIII. and of St. Lewis. Near the Abbots Chair, in the entry of the Quire at the left Hand, is the Monument of Clovis II. It was this Prince that took away the Silver, wherewith Dagobert I. had cauſed the Church to be covered, to diſtribute it to the Poor, at a time of publick neceſſity. The Monument of Charles Martel is near adjoyning to that of Clovis II. where he is repreſented in his Royal Robes, with this Inſcription, Carolus Martellus Rex. On the other ſide of the Quire, over-againſt the Iron Grate, are the Tombs of King Eudes and Hugo Capet. In the midſt of the Quire is the Monument of Charles II. ſurnamed the Bald, of Copper, with his Statue of the ſame, in his Royal Robes, having the Imperial Crown on his Head, and a Golden Globe in his left Hand. At the corners of the Tomb are the four Doctors of the Church, and at the top are two Angels each of them holding a Cenſer, all of Copper. Beſides theſe in the Quire are interred the Bodies of Clotarius III. and IV. Thierry II. Childeric III. and Louis V. ſurnamed Faineant or the Idle. Coming out of the Quire at the left Hand is the Tomb of Lewis X. called Hutin, of black Marble, and that of King Robert. Near adjoyning is the Monument of Henry I. and Lewis VI. called the Groſs, both in the ſame Monument. Then follows the Tomb of Philip the Younger, and that of Charles VIII. of black Marble, on which is his Statue in Braſs, and on the corners four Angels of Braſs gilt. On the ſide of the High Altar are the Tombs of King Philip the Tall, of Charles IV. Philip VI. ſurnamed de Valois, and of King John. In one of the Chappels on the South ſide are the Tombs of Charles V. ſurnamed the Wiſe, of Charles VI and VII. Before the ſaid Chappel is the Magnificent Mauſolæum of Francis I. Near to the Chappel of Nôtredame la Blanche, is the ſumptuous Tomb of King Lewis XII. of white Marble two Stories high; on the ſecond Story are repreſented the King, and Queen his Conſort kneeling, in their Royal Robes, with a Praying Desk before them; at the four corners are the four Cardinal Virtues: Upon the Corniſh compaſſing the firſt Story are the Twelve Apoſtles repreſented, ſitting in their bigneſs to the Life: And on the Baſs Reliefs are engraven the Battles and Victories obtained by the ſaid King. This is a Work well becoming the Magnificence of Francis I. who cauſed it to be made at Venice in 1527. by Peter Ponce one of the moſt Famous Statuaries of his time. It was brought into France Piece-meal, which were afterwards joyned upon the place. Near to the Superb Mauſolæum of Lewis XII. is a great Gate, leading to a magnificent Chappel, which Katharine de Medicis cauſed to be built, with deſign to place there the Tomb of Henry II. her Husband. This piece of Architecture is built after the Model of the Pantheon at Rome, which now is called our Lady della Rotunda; it contains three Stories, the firſt being the Vault wherein the Coffins are laid. In the midſt of the ſecond Story is the white Marble Sepulchre of Henry II. and Katharine de Medicis; on the top of it are two Statues lying along, ſurrounded with twelve Pillars of Jaſper-Marble, ſupporting a Table of the ſame, upon which are ſeen the Effigies of the King and Queen in Braſs, kneeling before a praying Desk of the ſame. In each Story are ſix little Chappels on the outſide of the Work, adorned round about with an Arch ſupported by twelve Pillars of white Marble. In the Vault of this Magnificent Edifice are alſo interred the Bodies of Francis II. Charles IX. and Henry III. The Body of Henry IV. is laid in the Vault, where the Ceremonies of the Royal Burials are celebrated, near the Baluſtres that ſerve for a Door to the Quire. The Body of Lewis XIII. lies in the ſame place. The Church of St. Denys is not only the place of the Sepulchres of the French Kings and Queens, and of the Princes and Princeſſes of the Blood, but alſo of ſome great Lords, whoſe extraordinary Atchievements have procured them this Favour. Amongſt many others we meet with in this Church, is the Tomb of Bernard du Gueſclin Earl of Longueville, and Lord High Conſtable of France, at the Feet of Charles V. That of Lewis de Sancerre Conſtable of France is in the ſame Chappel. The Body of Henry de la Tour d'Auvergne Viſcount of Tu enne, and Marſhal of France, was depoſited by order of the preſent French King in the Church of St. Denys in 1675. as intending to have it laid in the Mauſolæum he deſigns to build for himſelf, and all the Royal Family of Bourbon. In the mean time till this Project be put in execution, the Cardinal of Bouillon Lord High Almoner of France, his Nephew, hath cauſed a ſumptuous Monument to be erected over the Vault where his Body lies, upon which are repreſented the Victories he gained. It would take up too much room and time to give here a particular account of all the Riches contained in the Treaſury of St. Denys; it will be ſufficient to take notice, that there are to be ſeen a great number of Relicks, Croſſes, Images of Gold and Silver ſet with Precious Stones, Veſſels of Gold and Silver, Books covered with Plates of Gold or Silver gilt, writ with golden Letters, and enrich'd with precious Stones; a Golden Cup ſet round with Jacynths, Emralds, and a Sapphire, on which is ſeen the Figure to the Life of Solomon ſitting on his Throne, which is therefore called the Cup or Bowl of Solomon; the Sword of St. Lewis, that of Turpin Chancellor of France, and that of Joan of Arc, commonly called the Maid of Orleans; many Crowns enrich'd with precious Stones, the Claſp of the Royal Mantle, the Royal Sword, the Golden Scepter (which is that of Charlemagne) the Hand of Juſtice made of Unicorns Horn, the Golden Spurs, all gliſtering with precious Stones, and all the Royal Robes uſed at the Coronation of the Kings of France. Before we make an end of this Article, we will ſet down ſome Remarkable things concerning this Abby of St. Denys. This Monaſtery was exempted from Epiſcopal Jurisdiction by St. Landry Biſhop of Paris, which Immunity was afterwards confirmed by Clovis II. King of France, in an Aſſembly called for that purpoſe, at which were preſent all the Great Men of the Kingdom, and many Prelates. Pepin and Charlemagne alſo ratified this Exemption, and Charles the Bald ratified it in a Council held ot Soiſſons, with the Conſent of Æneas Biſhop of Paris who aſſiſted at the ſame. Pope Stephen III. granted to the Religious of this Monaſtery a very particular Privilege, which gave them power of electing one from amongſt themſelves to be their Biſhop. The ſame Pope alſo gave to the Abbot of St. Denys leave to wear the Ring, the Miter and the Croſs, and to make uſe of Pontifical Ornaments whenever he celebrated Maſs in his Church. Where it is obſervable that upon certain ſolemn Feaſts they do wholly ſing the Maſs in Greek, and on other Feſtivals the Epiſtle and Goſpel only are read in Greek, but the reſt of the Office is ſung in Latin, as in other Churches. The Kings of France have alſo beſtowed great Privileges upon the Abbot and Religious of St. Denys, as to grant Letters of Grace and Pardon to Criminals of their Jurisdiction, to coin Money, and to keep Markets and Fairs. Moreover the Abbot of St. Denys hath the Right of ſitting in the Parliament of Paris, in quality of a Counſellor born. King Lewis the Big, declared in an Aſſembly held at St. Denys, that he held the County of Vexin of this Abby, in virtue of which he enjoyed the Right of bearing the Oriflamme or Holy Banner. From the Foundation of this Abby to the preſent time, are counted ſeventy two Abbots, as well Regular as Commendatary. The firſt Abbot Commendatary was Lewis of Bourbor, Cardinal and Archbiſhop of Sens, who was nominated to it by King Francis I. in the Year 1528, and ſince that time this Abby has been always given in Commendam till the Year 1686. when the Revenue became united to the Community of the Nuns of St. Lewis at St. Cyr, near to Verſailles, and the Title of Abbot ſuppreſs'd. This Church was often plundered of part of its Riches, as by the Normans in 857. by the Engliſh in the Reigns of Charles VI. and VII. and by the Proteſtants during the Civil Wars in 1562, and 67. Le Mire, Paris Ancien & Noüveau.

SAINT DIZIER, a ſtrong City of Champagne in France, upon the River Marne, is the chief of a ſmall Country called le Valage between Joinville and Chalon, ſix Leagues from Bar le Duc to the North Eaſt, and Forty two from Paris. This City is famous for its Siege maintained by the Count of Sancerre againſt Charles V. in 1544. who thinking to take it by Surprize, was not only diſappointed in his Deſign, but loſt many of his Men before it, in an Aſſault where the Beſieged Fought Hand to Hand with their Enemies, to defend their Walls; ſome time after the City was delivered to Charles V. with the conſent of the French King, and reſtored again to France by the Peace of Creſpy.

SAINT DOMINGO, Lat. Civitas Sancti Dominici. The chief City of the Iſland Hiſpaniola. It is a Large, Rich and fair City, and is ſituate in the South part of the Iſland at the Mouth of the River Ozama, having near it a very ſafe and large Haven, adorned with the Reſidence of the Governor, an Archiepiſcopal See, the Courts of Juſtice, Exchequer and the Mint. Chriſtopher Columbus built this City in 1494, on the Eaſt Bank of the River, but in 1502 it was removed by Nicholas de Obando, then Governour, to the oppoſite Shoar. Sir Francis Drake, in 1586, took this City by Force, and kept it a Month, burning part of the Houſes, and forcing the Spaniards to redeem the reſt. It lies in Long. 305. 40. Lat. 14. 00.

SAINT DONATO, Lat. Forum Apium, a Town of Campania di Roma in Italy.

SAINT ESPRIT, or, Holy Ghoſt, an Order of Knights, firſt Inſtituted by Lewis of Anjou King of Jeruſalem and Sicily, upon Whitſunday in 1352. After this Prince's Death there happened ſuch Revolutions in Sicily and Naples, that the Order fell quite, and probably would never have been heard of, had not the Original of the Inſtitution fallen by chance to the Venetians, who preſented it to Henry III. of France, in his return from Poland. This Prince having given order to copy the Statutes which he liked moſt, commanded the Sieur Cheverny to burn the Original, that he might paſs for the firſt Inſtitutor himſelf. However it was thus reſtored in 1579. on Whitſunday in Memory of King Henry's Nativity, Election to the Crown of Poland, and coming to the Crown of France, all which are ſaid to have happened on that day. The Knights wear a Collar made of Flowers de Luce of Gold, corner'd with Flames of Fire interwoven with ſome Letters, the firſt whereof is H. becauſe the firſt of Henry's Name, from the Collars hangs a Dove in the midſt of a Croſs, like that of Malta, all beſet with Rays and four Flowers de Luce. The King is Chief of the Order, whoſe Oath is to maintain the Catholick Religion, and Unity amongſt his Subjects. The Knights are all bound to Communicate every firſt day of the Year, and on the day of Pentecoſt, and to ſwear their Zeal to the Catholick Faith, and Fidelity to the King and his Succeſſors. It conſiſts of the King and a Hundred Knights, amongſt which are four Cardinals, five Prelates, a Chancellor, Provoſt, Maſter of the Ceremonies, a High Treaſurer and Regiſter, which with the reſt are to wear a Croſs on their Garment. The Feaſt is kept on the firſt of January, on which the Knights wait on the King to Church, who after Maſs treats them in his Palace; they alſo accompany him to Evening Song, and are treated a ſecond time. Sancte Marthe. Mezeray.

SAINTES, a large and ancient City of Guienne in France, a Biſhops See, and Capital of Zaintogne, ſituate on the Charente, 32 Miles South Eaſt of Rochelle, 40 Weſt of Angouleſme, and 54 North of Bourdeaux, Long. 17. 44. Lat. 45. 42. See Xaintonge.

SAINT ESTIENNE, or, St. Eſtienne de Forez, in Latin Furaenum and Fanum Sancti Stephani, a little City of France, belonging to the Government of Lyons, about two Leagues from the River Loire, and ten from the City of Lyons. It is ſituate at the foot of the Mountains, upon the little River Fureus. The Waters about this place are very proper for the tempering of Steel and Iron, which makes the Inhabitants to drive a great Trade with the Manufactures of that Metal. There is a Mountain near it which abounds with Pit-coal, the bowels whereof have burnt for many years together, and do ſtill. This Town ſuffered much in the Civil War of France towards the end of the laſt Century. In 1563 it was taken by Sarras a Proteſtant Captain, who not long after was himſelf taken Priſoner by the Duke of Nemours, and in 1570, it was taken again by the Proteſtants. Thuan. Hiſtor. lib. 34, 47, &c.

SAINT EUSTACHIA, one of the Caribbes or Leeward Iſlands in the Weſt-Indies. The Engliſh under Sir T. Thornhill and Captain Wright, took it from the French July 1690. It is ſmall, and lies near to St. Chriſtophers, defended with a Fort capable of about 80 Men.

SAINT FE, Lat. Fanum Sancti Fidei, a Town of Granada built by King Ferdinand, Anno 1421. in a Valley on the River Zenile, two Leagues Weſt of the City of Granada.

SAINT FE DE BOGOTA, an Archbiſhops See, and Metropolis of New Granada in Southern America upon the River Pati, by the Lake Guaravita at the foot of the Mountain Bogota, at a great diſtance from the Sea: The Air is Temperate and Healthful, and Proviſions Plentiful.

SAINT FEE, a City in South-America, 150 Leagues from Aſſumption to the South, Lat. 30. The Inhabitants are for the moſt part imployed in Husbandry and feeding Cattle, and weaving courſe Cloth, which they ſell to good Profit in Braſile. By it there lies a Road to Potoſi, and Peru, and Corduba in Tucumana, which being eaſie and convenient, inricheth this place very much, the Journey not being above 350 Leagues. Laet. Page 530.

SAINT FLORENSA, Lat. Fanum Sancti Florentii, a Town in the North of Corſica, having a good Haven, and being well fortified. It is ſubject to the Genueſes, and thought to be the Canelata of Ptolemy.

SAINT FLOUR, a City of France in the upper Auvergne, with a Biſhops See under the Archbiſhop of Bourges, in Latin Floriopolis and Fanum Sancti Flori. Some take it to be the Indiacum of the Ancients. It ſtands upon a ſteep Rock, at the foot of which runs the ſmall River Larder, twenty Leagues from Clermont to the South, and eight from le Puy to the Weſt. The Biſhoprick of St. Flour, which before was only a Priory, was founded by Pope John XXII. in 1317.

SAINT FOR, a Town of Aquitaine in France, upon the Dordogne in the Province of Agenois, four Leagues Weſt of Bargerac.

SAINT FOY, a Town of Guienne in France, upon the Dordogne, betwixt Bargerac and Libourn, it was taken by the Proteſtants in 1563. It is 37 Miles Eaſt of Bourdeaux. Lon. 18. 48. Lat. 44. 51.

SAINT GAL, Fanum Sancti Galli, an Abby and City of Switzerland. The Abby has the Precedence of the City, as being more ancient than it, and having a greater Diſtrict of Lands and more Subjects, and as they are commonly joyned together, are called the Abby and City of St. Gal. This Famous Abby owes its Original to one St. Gal, a Scotch, or as others ſay, an Iriſh Man; who coming to France in Company of St. Columba, in the Seventh Century, travelled to Switzerland, where he preached the Goſpel in ſeveral places, and more particularly in the Territory of Turgaw, where this Abby ſtands. Gonzom Duke of the Almans, having offered him the Biſhoprick of Conſtance, he refuſed to accept of it, and choſe rather to live retiredly in a deſert place, where ſince this Abby, bearing his Name, was built. His Diſciples, in Proceſs of time, being greatly multiplied, eſpouſed the Rule of St. Bennet, and about Fourſcore Years after the Death of St. Gal, the Prieſt Omer was made the firſt Abbot of this place by King Pepin, Son of Charles Martel. Some time after, this Abby being greatly enriched, the firſt Abbot that took the Title of Prince of the Empire was Conradus, being elected to that Dignity in the Year 1226. His Succeſſors were all of them great Lords, and the Abbots of St. Gal, even to this day, have a Territory belonging to them, in which they can raiſe ſix thouſand Men, and is ſituate between the Cantons of Zurick and Appenzel, and the Dioceſs of Conſtance. Charles Martel, Pepin, Charlemagne, and many other Kings of France, as alſo ſeveral of the Emperours, have beſtowed great Privileges and Revenues upon the Abbots of St. Gal, who at preſent have for Patriots and Defenders of their Immunities and Revenues, the Cantons of Zurick, Lucerne, Schwitz and Glaris. 'Tis above 800 years ſince the Foundations of this City were firſt laid, and was afterwards encompaſs'd with a Wall in the Reign of the Emperor Arnold. It joyns to the Abby, which hath its encloſure apart; and between them is a Common Gate, which is locked on both ſides, by the Abbot, and by the Citizens. The City is not great, but very neat and well built, on a riſing Ground, between two little Hills, and is very famous for its curious Manufacture and Rich Trade of fine Linen. This Corporation is divided into ſix Companies, out of every one of which are choſen twelve Perſons, who conſtitute the greater and leſſer Council of the City, and the Magiſtrates are Elected every year. This City in former times, did in many things depend upon the Abbot, but at preſent the Citizens enjoy a Sovereignty apart, independent on that of the Abby. Ever ſince the year 1454. they have been Allied with ſix of the Cantons, viz. Zurick, Berne, Lucerne, Uri, Schwitz, Zug and Glaris. This City is one Mile diſtant from the Lake of Conſtance, and four from Landaw towards the Weſt. See Simler Repub. Helvet. The Citizens of St. Gal are Zealous Calviniſts, and have a very good Government; and though their Prince be a Papiſt, and has his Convent near the City, there are no Papiſts in it; for they have little, if any dependance now on the Prince.

SAINT GALMIER, a ſmall City belonging to the Government of Lyons, in the Suburbs of which is an Alom Fountain, called by thoſe of the Country, la Font Forte, or the ſtrong Fountain.

SAINT GELAIS, an Illuſtrious Family of France, taking its name from the Town of St. Gelais, the Ancient Patrimony of the Lords of Lezignan in Poictou.

SAINT GELAIS (Melin de) a famous French Poet, who flouriſh'd in the laſt Century, and for his Wit was highly eſteemed in the Court of Francis I. and Henry II. He was the Son of Octavianus Biſhop of Angouleſme, who took great care of his Education. He ſtudied at Poictiers, Padua, &c. and was well skill'd in the Laws, Divinity, Philoſophy and Mathematicks, but more eſpecially excell'd in Poetry, ſo as to deſerve the Name of the French Ovid, and did much excell Marot. He died at Paris in the Reign of Henry II. 1554. St. Marthe, Lib. 1. Elog. Gall.

SAINT GEORGIA, a Monaſtery on the Eaſtern Bank of the Nile, about 60 Miles above Cairo, to the South, which had heretofore about 200 Monks, and a vaſt Revenue: About 100 years agone, they all died of the Plague, and the Governour walled the ſame in, and Peopled it with Artificers. The Soldan was ſo taken with the pleaſantneſs of its Seat, that he went thither, and lived in it ſome time, but being overcome by the Solicitations of the Patriarch, he built a new Monaſtery, and gave it Lands to maintain Thirty Monks. This was Seated in the Ruins of an old City near the former. Leo Africanus, p. 326.

SAINT GEORGIO DEL MINA, a Town and Caſtle in Africa, upon the Gold Coaſts of Guinee, lying between the Cape of Three Points, and Cape Corſo. Two Portugal Captains having diſcover'd the Coaſts of Guinee in 1471. perſuaded their King Don Juan, to take poſſeſſion of it in the year 1481. who ſent thither Dom Diego d'Azemburcha, with ten Caravels (a ſort of Round-bottom'd Veſſels) and two great Ships, laden with all things needful for the Building of a Fort. After thirteen days Sailing, Dom Diego caſt Anchor in the Haven where he intended to Build, and gave Advice of his Arrival to the Prince of that Country, called Caſamentè, with whom he had made ſome Acquaintance in a former Voyage; and in the mean time landed his Forces, and took poſſeſſion of the Country in the name of the King of Portugal. Caſamentè came and received him as a Friend, accompanied with a conſiderable number of his Subjects, moſt of them naked, and Armed only with Bows and Javelins. The Portugueze Commander received them at the Head of his Army, with the gravity proper to his Nation, though withal very obligingly: And after having amplified on the puiſſance of his King, and above all, his great Piety and Zeal he had for the Converſion of the People of Guinee, and deſired him to contribute his Endeavours to ſo good a Work, and to the building of a Fort, to ſecure the Commerce between both Nations; Caſamentè, who was a Man of Wit and Underſtanding, eaſily perceiv'd the Trick they would put upon him; and being willing to divert the Blow, anſwer'd, That it was fitting ſome time ſhould be allow'd him and his People, to adviſe about the Change of their Religion; and that ſeeing he was reſolv'd to eſtabliſh an Union and good Intelligence between his Subjects and the Portugueze, the Building of a Fort would be unneceſſary, and only conduce to exaſperate his Subjects. The Portugueze Commander reply'd, alledging many ſpecious pretences to colour the neceſſity of Building the Fort, as that the publiſhing of the Goſpel would not fail of meeting with conſiderable Oppoſition, and that in this caſe, ſome ill-minded Men might come in a tumultuous manner, and deſtroy thoſe, who deſign'd their Converſion and Salvation; that to avoid the fatal effects of ſuch a ſeditious Conſpiracy, it would be of abſolute neceſſity to Build a Fort. Caſamentè perceiving that the Portugueze reaſoned with Arms in their Hands, than which nothing can be more perſuaſive, was fain to agree, to what he was not in a Condition to hinder, and ſo retir'd; whereupon the Portugueze immediately began to mark out the place for the Building of a Fort. There was one thing that extremely exaſperated the Moors, which was this, they had a great Veneration for Rocks, to that degree as to Worſhip them, and the Portugueze going to break ſome of them that hindred their laying the Foundation of their Fort, it ſo ſtrangely enrag'd the Guineans, that they were about riſing as one Man againſt them, had not the Portugueze, to prevent the miſchief, appeaſed them by Preſents, accompanied with Remonſtrances, that thoſe inanimate Rocks could be no Deities. The Fort being finiſhed, was called St. George, and becauſe there was a Gold Mine not far off, it was ſurnamed del Mina. To this Caſtle there is a Town adjoyning, and a large and ſafe Haven, which together with the Caſtle, a few years ſince were taken from the Portugueze by the Dutch. See Mina. Marmol. lib. 3. c. 22.

SAINT GERMAIN EN LAYE, a Town and Caſtle in the Iſle of France, between Paris (whence it is four Leagues diſtant to the Weſt) and Poiſſy; it is ſeated upon a Hill by the Seine, and contains two magnificent Palaces, the one called the New, the other the Old Caſtle. King Charles V. firſt caus'd a Caſtle to be Built here, which the Engliſh continued. Francis I. built that which now is called the Old Caſtle, and Henry IV. caus'd the New Caſtle to be built. The preſent King Lewis XIV. who was Born in this Royal Seat, has added ſeveral Ornaments to it. A Peace was concluded here in 1679. between the Kings of France, Sweden, and the Elector of Brandenburgh.

SAINT GERMAINS, a Corporation in Cornwal, in the Hundred of Eaſt, which ſends two Burgeſſes to Parliament.

SAINT GILES, a ſmall Town of France in Low Languedoc, about a League from the River Rhone. It ſtands on a Rivulet, between Beaucaire and Arles. Some Authors take it to be the Anatalia of Pliny, and others the Heraclea of the ſame Author. It took its Name from St. Giles an Hermit, who retired to this place in the Sixth Century; ſince which time it hath born the Latin Name of Fanum Sancti Ægidii. Some think it was alſo called Palatium Gothorum. This Place, at preſent belongs to the Knights of Maltha. The Count of Somerive, Head of the Catholicks, was defeated by the Proteſtants near this place in 1562. Thuan. Hiſt. lib. 32.

SAINT GOAR, or SAINT GUER, Lat. Fanum Sancti Guoari, a Town upon the Rhine in the County of Catzenellobogen, on the Borders of the Biſhoprick of Triers, ſubject to the Prince of Heſſe Rhinfield, defended by a ſtrong Caſtle called Rhinfield, which gives Title to the Prince. It's fourteen Miles South of Coblentz, and twenty five Weſt of Mentz, Long. 27. 6. Lat. 56. It was beſieged by the French under Monſieur Tallard, who was dangerouſly wounded before it in December 1692. the Lantgrave of Heſſe Caſſel marching with an Army to Relieve it, the French retired in great precipitation, having loſt ſome Thouſands of their Men, and ſeveral Guns before it.

SAINT GOTTARD, or SAINT GODARD, Lat. Adula, the higheſt part of the Alps, between Swiſſerland and Milan.

SAINT GOTTARD, an Abby in Lower Hungary, on the Frontiers of Stiria upon the River Raab, famous for the defeat of the Turks in 1664. between this place and Kerment, which lies but two German Miles off it. The French attribute the Victory to their own Troops, becauſe it was they that diſputed the Paſs, and beat off the Infidels.

SAINT GUILIN, GISLAIN or GHISLIN, Fanum Sancti Ghiſleni, a ſmall fortified Town in the Province of Hainault, in the Spaniſh Netherlands, ſituate upon the River Hayne, two ſmall Leagues weſt from Mons, taking its Name from a famous Abby built in Honour of St. Giſlain. The French took the place in 1577.

SAINT HELENA, a Town in Florida, Built by the Spaniards, and Burnt by the Engliſh under Sir Francis Drake, in the year 1585.

SAINT HUBERT, a City and Biſhoprick in the Dukedom of Luxemburgh.

SAINT JAGO, an Iſland and City in Africa, well Fortified by the Portugueze, who made it a Biſhops See. It was plundered by Sir Francis Drake in 1585. its principal product is Salt. The length 45 Leagues, and breadth 10. There is another City of this Name on the South of Cuba, which is a Port Town and Biſhops See, Suffragan of St. Domingo in America, plunder'd alſo by Sir Francis Drake in 1578. of great Stores of Gold and Wine.

SAINT JAGO DE CHILI, Lat. Fanum Sancti Jacobi, a City built by the Spaniards, Capital of the Kingdom of Chili, and a Biſhops See, Suffragan of la Plata: It's ſituated on the River Meipus, at the Foot of the Mountain Andes. 15 Leagues from the South Sea. It's the beſt Port of the Province, and Seat of the Government; there being 80000 Indians in the Dioceſs.

SAINT JAGO DEL ESTERO is 180 Miles from Potoſi, N.E. 180 from Buenos Ayres, and 80 from Corduba, Lat. 28. 00. on a Branch of the River la Plata. It is the Capital of Tucumania, ſeated in a hot, but healthful Air, and a Sandy Soil: The River overflows yearly, and watereth their Gardens and Vineyards; but their principal Wealth is from Woollen Manufactures, and the preſence of their Governour and Biſhop. The Fields about it are covered with Woods, and not very fruitful ſince the River hath failed to overflow them as before; ſo that the City has not ſo great a number of Inhabitants for want of Proviſions. The Indians too are much diminiſhed in number, and do daily decreaſe, by reaſon of the Cruel Uſage of the Spaniards, who exerciſe their Authority over them with Rigour, and waſte them with Immoderate Labour, in gathering, beating, and ſpinning Cotton, ſtriking them till they die very often under their hands, for not performing the Task enjoyned them. Laet. p. 535.

SAINT JAGO DE LEON, Sancti Jacobi Legionenſis, a Town of Venezuela in South America, ſeven Leagues from the Bay of Mexico, 70 from Coro to the Eaſt, and four from Caravaleda. In the year 1595. this place was ſurpriz'd by the Engliſh. It is ſeated in a fruitful Plain, having a Ridge of high Mountains between it and the Sea, Laet. p. 682.

SAINT JAGO of Cape Verde. This Town lies in the form of a Triangle, having on the Eaſt and Weſt ſide two Rocky Mountains or Cliffs, as it were hanging over it, on the Tops of which are Fortifications. St. Omer, or Audomarus, Biſhop of Therouan built this City in 660. and Foulques, Abbot of St. Bertin, began to encompaſs it with Walls in 880, which was afterwards finiſhed by Baldwin II. Surnam'd the Bald, Earl of Flanders, in 902, and joined the Abby of Sithieu to the City. Afterwards Therouan being demoliſhed in the XVI. Century, there were inſtead of it, founded two Biſhopricks in 1559, viz. that of Bologne and of St. Omer. Near to this City is a great Lake, containing ſeveral ſmall floating Iſlands. St. Omer is a great and fair City, well fortified, having on the one ſide the River and Mariſhes, and on the other ſide is defended by a ſtrong Caſtle, with good Baſtions, and deep and broad Ditches: In 1639, the French beſieged it, but in vain. About 1596, Philip II. of Spain founded here a College for Engliſh Jeſuits, endowing it largely; they have ſince purchaſed Watton Cloiſter, which is within two Miles of St. Omers; a very pleaſant Place, and worth five Hundred Pound per annum. The Duke of Orleans, the French King's Brother, took this Town in April 1677, after having gain'd the Battle of Caſſel; and by the Treaty at Nimeguen, it was yielded to France. Long. 23. 22 Lat. 50. 47. Guichardin, St. Marthe.

SAINT PABRO, a great Mountain between Porto Bello and Panama in the Weſt-Indies, from the Top of which Sir Francis Drake ſaw firſt the Mar del Luz, in the Year 1572. The Memory of this Attempt is ſtill preſerved by the Spaniards that live here, who fright their Children with his Name. Gage Tra. p. 170.

SAINT PALAIS, The chief City of the lower Navarre, belonging to France, upon the River Bidouſſe above Grammont, was the Seat of the Sovereign Judicature of the Country, before that it was united to the Parliament of Pau. It is called in Latin, Fanum Sancti Palatii.

SAINT PAPOUL, Fanum Sancti Papuli, a ſmall City in upper Languedoc near Freſqu'il, three Leagues from Caſtelnau-darri, five from Carcaſſone, and nine from Tolouſe, with a Biſhop's See, under the Archbiſhop of Tolouſe. This place being watred with the Blood of St. Papoul the Martyr, was at firſt only a Pariſh, and a Monaſtery being built here towards the end of the Eighth Century, Pope John XXII. chang'd it to a Cathedral in 1317. The Dioceſs at preſent conſiſts only of forty five Pariſhes.

SAINT PATRICK'S; Patrick's Purgatory, a ſmall Iſland in the Lake Erme, in the County of Dunegal or Tirconnel in the North of Ireland; in this Iſland, hard by a little Monaſtery, is a narrow Vault, noted for walking Spirits, dreadful Apparitions, or rather ſome Religious Horror; though the Natives thereabouts, devoutly credulous, believe that their Apoſtle St. Patrick, obtain'd by his earneſt Prayers to God, that the Puniſhments and Torments that the ungodly are to ſuffer after this Life, might here be preſented to the Eye, that the Heatheniſh Iriſh may be thus work'd to a ſpeedier and more real Converſion. Cambd. Brit.

SAINT PAUL TROIS CHATEAUX, a City in Dauphine, with a Biſhop's See, under the Arch-biſhop of Arles; it is the chief City of the ſmall Territory of Tricaſtin, and is ſuppoſed to be the Auguſta Tricaſtinorum, by Pliny placed in Gallia Narbonenſis, and is now called in Latin Sancti Pauli Tricaſtinorum Civitas; which modern Name it has borrow'd from St. Paul one of its Biſhops. It is now a ſmall Town, ſtanding upon a Cliff, one Mile from the Rhone, four from Montelimart to the South, and from Orange to the North. The Proteſtants kept this Town about fifty Years, drove out the Popiſh Clergy, ruin'd the Churches, and plunder'd the Communion Plate.

SAINT PIERRE LE MOUTIER, Monaſterium Sancti Petri, a Town of Nivernois, and Seat of Juſtice for that Province; it is ſeven Leagues North of Nevers, and ſeven South of Moulins.

SAINT PONS DE TOMIERES, a City of Languedoc, being a Biſhop's See, under the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, from whence it ſtands eight Leagues to the North, and about the ſame diſtance from Alby to the North-Weſt: Latin Authors call it Tomeriæ, Pontiopolis, & Sancti Pontii Tomeriarum Urbs. It was formerly an Abby of the Order of St. Bennet, Founded in 936, by Raimund Pons Earl of Toloſe, to the honour of St. Pons, Martyr, Biſhop of Cimele or Nice. Pope John XXII. made it a Biſhop's See in 1318, and the Monks of it were made Seculars in 1625. The Biſhop is Lord of the City, which is but a ſmall one, ſeated among the Mountains, and thinly Inhabited.

SAINT QUINTIN, on the Somme, being the chief City of the Country of Vermandois in Picardy, it is a ſtrong Place, in Latin, Quintinopolis & Fanum Sancti Quintini, and ſuppos'd by ſome to be the Auguſta Nova Veromanduorum of the Romans, but without ſufficient ground, for the Roman Town ſtood about two Leagues from this place; it ſtands upon a Hill, having the River on one ſide of it, and on the other a very deep Valley, except only on the ſide next to St. John's Gate, where a great Baſtion is built with ſome half Moons: The chief Church is the Collegiate Church of St. Quintin; there are alſo other very fair ones, with many Monaſteries. It is a great City and well Inhabited, and famous for ſeveral ſorts of Manufactures, but eſpecially of Linen, and formerly was in the Poſſeſſion of the Earls of Vermandois. In 1557, after that the Truce was broken between Philip II. of Spain, and Henry II. Philibert Emanuel, Duke of Savoy, Governour of the Low-Countries, beſieged St. Quintin, which at that time had but a ſmall Garriſon, and was not well fortified. Admiral Coligny made a ſhift to get into the Town with ſome Forces, whoſe Reputation and Valour defended the Place for ſome time, which without that would ſcarcely have held out twenty four hours: In the mean time ſeveral Attempts were made to get more Succours into the Town, which the Conſtable, Montmorency, attempted by paſſing the River Somme, with the French King's Army, whereof he was Commander in chief; but this Enterprize was carried on with ſo much Precipitation, that after all, ſcarcely five hundred Men got into the City with Dandelot a Colonel of Foot, and the Admiral's Brother. This done, the Conſtable reſolv'd to draw off again with his Army at broad Day in the ſight of the Enemy, notwithſtanding that he was greatly cumbered with Baggages, and much inferiour to the Spaniards in number. Accordingly the Duke of Savoy reſolving to make the beſt uſe of this Error of the Conſtable, ſet upon him unawares between the Villages of Eſſigni and Rizeroles, and charg'd him ſo warmly, that he had no leiſure to give the neceſſary orders for Battle, and totally routed his Army. The Conſtable himſelf was taken Priſoner, with Montheron his Son, with the Dukes of Monpenſier and Longueville, Lewis of Gonzaga, ſince Duke of Nevers, the Marſhal of St. Andre, Ten Knights of the Order, Three Hundred Gentlemen, and about two thouſand five hundred ſlain, amongſt whom was found the Body of John de Bourbon Duke of Anguien, and much the ſame number were taken Priſoners. This was called the Battle of St. Quintin of St. Laurence, becauſe it was Fought on St. Laurence's Day. The Spaniards loſt not above 80 or 100 Men, but had not the wit to make good uſe of this great Advantage. They return'd to the Siege of St. Quintin, where King Philip arrived the 27th of Auguſt. The Admiral, who had too long delay'd Capitulating, gave occaſion to the Spaniards to ſtorm the Place at five ſeveral Breaches, and was made Priſoner. This City was ſurrendred to the French in 1559, by the Peace of Chaſteau Cambreſis. Du Puy. Thuanus. Belcarius.

SAINT REMI, a ſmall Town of France in Provence, four Leagues from Arles, which in ancient times was called Glanum, and took its modern Name from St. Remigius, Archbiſhop of Reims. Within and without this Town are found many Monuments of Antiquity, a ſufficient Argument of its former Greatneſs and Renown: about a quarter of a League diſtance from it is to be ſeen a Triumphal Arch, and a magnificent Mauſolæum, cover'd with a Dome, ſupported by two Rows of Pillars, plac'd one above another, and adorn'd with many Statues and Figures, with Trophies of Arms in Baſs Relief. There are alſo daily diſcover'd in the Neighbourhood of the Town, Urns, Gold and Silver Medals, and Stones, bearing ancient Roman Inſcriptions. At preſent there is in this place a Collegiate Church of Secular Canons, Dedicated to St. Martin, Founded about 1330, by Pope John XXII. who kept his Reſidence at Avignon. The Temporal Lordſhip of this Town has been ſucceſſively poſſeſt by ſeveral Lords, and is now a dependance of the Barony of Baux, enjoy'd by the Prince of Monaco, being conferr'd upon him by Lewis XIII. in 1641. Bouche, Chron. de Provence, Lib. 3. & 4.

SAINT REMO, a Pleaſant Town and Seaport of Italy, on the Coaſt of Genoa, the Country about it being very fruitful in Orange, Lemon, and Olive-Trees. It is call'd in Latin, Fanum Sancti Remuli, or Sancti Remigii.

SAINT RUF, An Abby of the City of Valence in Dauphine, and chief of the Order of the Canon-Regulars of St. Auſtin. Amaldus, Odilon, Pontius and Durand, Prieſts of the Church of Avignon, having reſolv'd amongſt themſelve to lead a more retir'd Life, did about 1039, deſire of Benet their Biſhop the Grant of two Churches for them to diſpoſe of, which were thoſe of St. Juſtus and St. Ruf or Roux in his Dioceſe, near to Durance, which he having granted them; and for as much as they took up their abode about this latter Church, the Name of it was put upon them. But ſince that time, whether becauſe theſe Churches were ruin'd, during the Wars againſt the Albigerſes, or for ſome other reaſon, theſe Monks came and ſetled themſelves near to Valence in the Iſle of Eſparviere, which Abbot Raimond had purchas'd of Eudo Biſhop of that City, and where he had built a moſt ſumptuous Monaſtery, which was pull'd down during the Civil Wars, in 1562. They had alſo a Priory belonging to them within the Walls of Valence; which thereupon was made chief of the Order. The Abbot-General has his Reſidence here, and hath carried along with him thither the Rights, Authority and Dignity of the Monaſtery of the Iſle Eſparviere; King Henry IV. having approved of this Tranſlation, in 1600. Thirty nine or forty Abbots-General have ſucceſſively governed this Order till this time, which hath afforded three Popes, Anaſtaſius IV. Adrian IV. and Julius II. Le Mire, Sancte Marth.

SAINT SABA, or SEGOVINA, a Province between Dalmatia, Boſſina and Monte-Negro, ſeventy Miles long and thirty broad; the Inhabitants were reckon'd about 50000 Families, and very forward to put themſelves under the Protection of the Venetians, in 1688, there not being 5000 of the Families Turks.

SAINT SALVADOR, a City of New-Spain in the Province of Guatimala, by the Inhabitants called Cuzcatlan, ſix Leagues from Axacutla, and Mare-Pacificum, towards the North-Eaſt; and forty Spaniſh Leagues from San Jago de Guatimala to the Eaſt, by a ſmall Lake.

SAINT SALVADOR of MONTREAL, a Military Order of Spain, Inſtituted about 1120, by Alphonſus VII. ſurnamed the Warriour, King of Arragon and Caſtile, who having built the City of Montreal to check the Moors of Valencia; he put Knights-Templars into it to defend it, and to make War upon the Infidels: But after that the Templars had been exterminated by the Council of Vienne, in 1311, Montreal was put into the hands of Knights taken out of the moſt Noble Families of Arragon, whoſe habit was a white Robe, with a red Jeruſalem Croſs, and were called the Knights of St. Saviour. The Deſtruction of the Moors occaſioned the ceaſing of this Order. Mariana. There are alſo in Italy Canons of St. Saviour, commonly called Scopetini; and were Founded in 1408, by Stephen a Monk of the Order of St. Auſtin. Their firſt Settlement was in the Church of St. Saviour near to Sienna, whence they took their Name. That of Scopetini they derive from the Church of St. Donatus de Scopete, at Florence, which was beſtowed upon them in the Popedom of Martin V.

SAINT SALVADOR, Soteropolis; a City in South America, is the Capital of the Province of Bahia, ſeated on the North ſide of the Bay of All-Saints, upon a riſing ground, built not long ſince, by Thomas de Souſa, wall'd and adorn'd with Churches, and other publick Edifices, and ſecured by ſome Forts and Caſtles. This whole Government is the Richeſt and moſt populous in Braſile; ſo this City has flouriſhed above the reſt: Towards the Sea, the foot of the Hill it ſtands on, is covered with ſhrubs and buſhes, through which there are narrow Paſſages cut to the City. In the Year 1623. the Inhabitants built a Fort on the ſide of the Bay to ſecure a Suburb againſt the Hollanders then expected. Yet after all, it is not poſſible to make it a ſtrong Place, becauſe the Hills behind it are higher than the Town, and Command it. It has about it Forty Sugar-Mills, which with the Plenty of Cotton that grows here, yield it a good Trade; the Bay it ſtands upon, being one of the beſt Harbours of Braſile. Laet. pa. 589. Lat. 12. 50.

SAINT SEBASTIAN, a ſtrong City and Sea-port of Spain in the Province of Guipuſcoa, now united to Biſcay, on the Ocean, at the Mouth of the River Orio, about three Leagues from Galicia to the North, and twelve from Bayonne to the South, and as many from Pampelona to the Eaſt. There is another St. Sebaſtian, a City in Braſil in America, which is a Biſhop's See, under the Archbiſhop of St. Salvador, and is the Capital of a Province, and hath a Haven, ſecured by two Forts, and is in the poſſeſſion of the Portugueze. And a third Town of this name is in the Province of Chiamerlan in New Mexico.

SAINT SEVERE, Lat. Severopolis, the Capital of Gaſcoigne in France, upon the River Adour, ſix Miles Weſt of Aire, eight Eaſt of Dax, and twenty three South of Bourdeaux.

SAINT SEVERO, an Epiſcopal City of the Capitinate, in the Kingdom of Naples, Suffragan of Manfredonia, whence it is Twenty four Miles to the Weſt, and Eleven from the Adriatick to the South: It is a flouriſhing and well peopled City, and its Biſhoprick was Founded by Pope Gregory XIII.

SAINT SIMON, a Country Town of France, in Vermandois in Picardy, having the Title of a Dukedom, and ſtands upon the River Somme, between St. Quintin and Ham; and hath beſtowed its Name upon the ancient Family of St. Simon.

SAINT THIERRY AU MONT d'OR, an Abby near to Reims in Champagne, which was Founded about 525, having been ſince ruined by the Saracens, and repaired by Arch-biſhop Adelberon, in the ninth Century.

SAINT THOMAS, an Iſland in the Atlantick Ocean under the Line, which makes there a continual Equality of Days and Nights. Its Name was given it by Vaſconcellos Admiral of Portugal, who diſcover'd it on St. Thomas's day 1405. and found it altogether overgrown with Woods, and uninhabited; but the Portugueſe having ſent a Colony thither, it became very flouriſhing. It hath a City of the ſame name, by ſome called Paroaſan, which in the Portugal Language betokens a Colony: It is a very unhealthy place for Europeans, as well as all the reſt of the Iſland, though the Blacks live there, ſome of them, to 110 years of Age. This City is ſituate upon a ſmall River, and the Houſes are all of Wood. It hath a Church, with the Title of a Biſhops See, and is defended by a Caſtle, or rather Citadel, flank'd with four Baſtions. The Figure of this Iſland is almoſt Circular, and is ſaid to be 30 Spaniſh Leagues, or 110 Engliſh Miles round; it abounds every where with Springs of Water, and in the midſt of it there is a very high Mountain, cover'd with tall Trees, whoſe Tops have throughout the whole year, a Cloud hovering upon them, which moiſtning their Leaves, they continually drop down a Dew or Water, which nouriſheth the Sugar-Canes, and is alſo conveyed by Chanels and Pipes into their Sugar-works, which are diſperſed up and down the Iſland, that Commodity being in a manner, the whole Riches of it. The Women of Europe that live here, are ſubject to Iſſues of Blood, which are incurable; and kill them after three or four years ſtay in the Iſland, which has made the Portugueſe to marry with the Females of Congo. The Children that are Born of Whites Father and Mother, are White alſo, notwithſtanding the exceſſive ſcorching Heat of the Country. There are about 700 Portugueſe Families in the Principal City. This Iſland was taken by the Dutch in 1599. who abandon'd it, and took it again in 1641. but the Portugueſe re-took it ſince by force of Arms. Long. 27. It is 180 Miles from the Coaſts of Africa. Davity de l'Afrique.

SAINT THOMASO, or Melange, a Town of Aſia in the Peninſula of Indus, on this ſide Ganges. On the Coaſt of Coromandel, upon the Bay of Bengale, 200 Miles North of Ceilan, with an Archbiſhops See, and called St. Thomas, becauſe that Apoſtle is ſaid to have been Martyred upon a Stone near this City, which has been a long time in the hands of the Portugueſe; it was taken by the French in 1671. but two years after re-taken by the Portugueſe, who ſtill retain it. Kircher.

SAINT TRINIDAD DE BUENOS AYRES, Fanum Sanctæ Trinitatis, a City of Paragna in South America, and an Epiſcopal See, Suffragan of La Plata, and the Seat of Juſtice for that Province. It is a famous Sea-port, and Mart, ſituate on the South of the River Plata, where it falls into the Ocean, in an excellent Air, whence it takes its Name.

SAINT TRON, or, St. Truien, Lat. Fanum Sancti Trudonis, a Town in the Country of Liege, on the Borders of Brabant, the Capital of the County of Hasbain or Haſpengo, five German Miles Weſt of Maeſtricht, and as much Eaſt of Liege; it was diſmantled in 1673.

SAINT TROPEZ, Lat. Fanum Sancti Tropetis, a ſmall but very ſtrong City of Provence in France upon the Mediterranean, five Leagues South of Fregus, and twelve Eaſt of Toulon. It has a good Haven.

SAINT VEIT AM-FLAUM, Lat. Fanum Sancti Viti Flomonienſis, a ſtrong City in Carniola, with a Caſtle and Haven on the Gulf of Venice, and Confines of Croatia, ſubject to the Emperor.

SAINT VENANT, Lat. Fanum Sancti Venantii, a Town upon the River Lys in the Province of Artois in the Netherlands, a League from Aras; it was taken by the French in 1669. and formerly a place of great ſtrength, but now much neglected.

SAINT VINCENT, one of the Iſles of Cape-Verd, (in Latin Heſperides) in the Atlantick Ocean; it doth abound with Tortoiſes, which are of an excellent Taſte: They are of that bigneſs, that ſome of them weigh 300 pound; they commonly find in the Bellies of them 250 Eggs with Shells, and as many without Shells, which are all very good. Many little Shrubs grow in this Iſle, which give forth a milky Juice, very dangerous to the Eyes, if a drop only chanceth to fall into them. All along the Shoar there is abundance of Fiſh, with which, and the Fruits of the Iſland, there is ſufficient to ſupply the neceſſities of the Inhabitants; but the Water here is not very good. The Iſland is acceſſible on all ſides, and hath a very fine Haven, where the Ships Ride ſafe. Travellers that have been here never could meet with any Inhabitants: If there be any, they hide themſelves at the approach of Ships. Beaulieu. Thevenot.

[☞ The diſorder of Alphabet is occaſioned by the French Original, which diſtinguiſhes the Gender of the Word Saint; ſo that the Reader muſt conſult this laſt Alphabet, if he look for a She-Saint.]

SAINT BEAUME, the name of a Rock near St. Maximin in Provence, between Aix, Marſeille, and Toulon, upon a Mountain three Leagues high, and ten wide; ſeveral great Men have taken the pains to deſcribe this Place, becauſe it was believ'd, St. Mary Magdalen ſpent 30 years in Works of Devotion and Penance in it.

SAINT BRIGET, or, Saint Saviour, The Name of a Religious Order under the Rule of St. Auſtin, which was confirm'd by Pope Urban V. and the Foundreſs St. Briget having caus'd a Monaſtery to be Built, placed there 60 Nuns, and 25 Monks, which together made the number 85. to equal the number, as is ſaid, of the thirteen Apoſtles, and the ſeventy two Diſciples of our Lord. Of theſe Monks there were thirteen Prieſts, to repreſent the thirteen Apoſtles, and four Deacons, with reference to the four Doctors of the Church. There was but one Church for them both, only the Monks performed Divine Service below, and the Nuns above. The Monks who had their ſeparate Apartments, were to Adminiſter the Sacraments, and whatſoever concern'd Divine Service; but the Abbeſs exercis'd all Authority in the Monaſtery, and governed the Temporal Concerns thereof. This Order hath flouriſhed a long time in the Northern Countries; and there are ſeveral Foundations of it in Italy, Portugal, and elſewhere. This Order is alſo called the Order of Font-Evrard, from an Abby in France of that Name, which is the Monaſtery-General of that Order. Honorat. Niquet.

SAINT CATHARINE, a Monaſtery at the Foot of Mount Sinai and Mount Horeb in Arabia Petræa. It is ſaid, that Juſtinian a Greek Emperor caus'd it to be built for ſome Greek Fryars of the Order of St. Baſil: And amongſt other things it is reported, that the falſe Prophet Mahomet, becauſe of the Friendſhip he bore to one of theſe Caloiers, or Greek Monks, beſtowed great Preſents upon this Convent, and endow'd it with extraordinary Privileges, of which one was an Exemption from all manner of Impoſts, and ſubjecting all the Arabs they met with to their Service; but yet with this Condition, of affording ſome refreſhment to the Arabians, that ſhould have occaſion in their Journey to paſs by their Convent; which privilege he confirm'd to them by a Patent ſigned with his own hand, which he did after his wonted manner, viz. By dipping it in Ink, and then laying his Hand upon the Patent; neither as 'tis ſaid, had he any other way of ſigning, becauſe he could not Write. Selim Emperor of the Turks took this Patent away from them, to place it in his Treaſury, having firſt left them a Copy of it, with a Confirmation and Amplification of their Privileges. This Convent is a large Building of a Square Figure, whoſe Walls are 50 Foot high, which puts them out of fear of having them Scal'd. They have only one Gate, which is barricado'd with a Wall, to keep out the Arabians. On the Eaſt ſide they have a Window, from whence thoſe within draw up the Pilgrims that come to Viſit them, in a Basket, which they let down with a Rope from a Pully, and by the ſame ſend down Food to the Arabians. The Church which is Built in the midſt of this Cloiſter, is a very ancient Building, adorn'd with many Pictures after the Greek manner. Behind the High-Altar is a Chappel, which as they ſay, covers the Burning-Buſh, in which God appeared to Moſes; none enter hither except Barefoot. The Archbiſhops Seat is high raiſed like a Throne. At the ſide of the great Altar is a Cheſt of White Marble, adorn'd with Leaves and Branches in Bas Relief, and generally cover'd with an extraordinary Rich Cloath: In this are kept the Relicks of St. Catharine, as a Scull, a ſhrunk Hand, whoſe Nails ſeem whole. This Greek Prelate, who takes the Title of Archbiſhop of Mount Sinai, is not ſubject to any Patriarch, and upon ſolemn Days makes uſe of two Miters, the one is of Goldſmiths Work all Gilt, and beſet with precious Stones. The other, which is the Richer of the two, is almoſt of the ſame faſhion as the Papal Diadem, having a Croſs at the Top, but hath only one Crown Fleury in the midſt, the reſt of it being adorned with abundance of Embroidery and precious Stones. His Tunic is made in ſome ſort like that of Deacons; it trails upon the Ground, and is ſlit on the Sides, and tied together with Gold and Silk Bands, with cloſe Sleeves, that reach only to the Elbow. The Stuff of this Tunic is Cloth of Gold wove in little Squares, in each of which is wrought very Artificially the Figures of our Saviour, the Bleſſed Virgin, and ſome other Saints. This Tunic was a Preſent of one of the Great Dukes of Moſcovy. On his right ſide hangs a ſquare piece of Cloth of Gold, like to a Shepherds Bag or Pouch, and has about his Neck two goodly Croſſes of precious Stones, and a ſquare Plate of Gold beſet with Pearls, Turcois, and other precious Stones, reſembling the Ephod of the Jewiſh High-Prieſts. Upon his Left Shoulder he wears a Stole or Cope of Brocard embroider'd with Pearls, a Foot broad, hanging down before, and going about his Neck, afterwards doubling upon his Breaſt, falls back over his Left Shoulder. He has for a Shepherds Staff, a Croſier of Silver Gilt, from the Top of which hangs down a kind of Handkerchief of Cloth of Gold, much like that which he wears by his ſide. Near to this Monaſtery is the Mountain of St. Catharine, being a part of Mount Sinai, but is much higher, and ſeparated from it by a little Valley. Thoſe who come down from this Mountain, commonly gather up ſeveral ſtones, upon which the figures of Leaves, Herbs and Trees are expreſt in Black to the Life, and which though broken, retain the ſame impreſs in their inner parts; but by paſſing ones Hand over them all is effaced. They who from this Mountain go to the Convent of St. Catharine, do commonly take their way through the Convent of Forty Martyrs, being the ſame way by which the Children of Iſrael marched of Old; and there is to be ſeen the Rock, which being ſtruck by Moſes's Rod, pour'd forth Water abundantly by an infinite number of Slits, which are the wonder of all Spectators. In the ſame Valley is ſeen a great and long Stone, upon which they ſay the Brazen Serpent was erected; and farther from thence, they ſhew Travellers two great Stones ſunk in the Earth, and hollow, which as they ſay, ſerv'd for a mould to Caſt the Golden Calf. Monconi's Travels. Thevenot's Eaſtern Travels.

SAINT CATHARINE, or the Iſle of Providence, a ſmall Iſland in America in the North Sea, towards the Coaſt of New-Spain, and the Province of Honduras, from whence it is twenty Leagues diſtant, and hath a very commodious Haven, with a Citadel. The Spaniards were Maſters of it, until the Engliſh who have twice taken it, put themſelves in poſſeſſion of it ſome years ſince, and gave it the Name of the Iſle of Providence.

SAINT CATHARINE of Mount Sinai, the name of an Order of Knights formerly Inſtituted in Paleſtina. The Jeruſalem Pilgrims, that came to Honour the Relicks of this Saint, in the Monaſtery aforementioned, at the Foot of that Mountain in Arabia, received this Order at the Hand of the Chief Caloyer or Abbot of this Monaſtery, which was a Wheel pierced with ſix Rayes or Spokes Gules, nailed Argent, which they bore upon the Jeruſalem Croſs, in memory of the Martyrdom of St. Catharine. Favin.

SAINT HELEN, an Iſland in the Atlantick Ocean, in 16 Degrees of South Latitude, by ſome called, The Inn of the Sea, becauſe of the uſefulneſs of it to Veſſels paſſing between Europe and the Eaſt Indies. It was firſt diſcover'd by John Pimentel, Vice-Admiral of the firſt Fleet King Emanuel of Portugal ſent to the Indies, who being driven by a Tempeſt, ſtranded upon this Iſland the 21 of May 1508. being the Feſtival of St. Helen. The Portugueſe coming on Shore here, found neither Fruit-Trees, nor any living Creatures that were good for Food, and ſo betook themſelves to the Planting of ſeveral Lemon, Orange and Fig trees, which they had brought with them from Calicut, and built a ſmall Chappel, and ſome Huts, for the accommodating of ſome of their ſick, that deſired to ſtay there for the recovery of their Health, who ſome time after return'd to Portugal in other Veſſels. The Waters of this Iſland are not very pleaſant, moſt of them having a Mineral Taſte. The Kings of Portugal neglected the Fortifying of themſelves in this Iſland, and prohibited their Subjects from ſetling themſelves there, reſolving only to make uſe of it as a commodious Place for their ſick Mariners to recover their Health upon occaſion; and on this account ſent thither an Hermit to accommodate and aſſiſt the Sick that ſhould be left; but finding that he preferr'd the pleaſure of Hunting before his Duty in the Chapel, and taking care of his Sick, he was ſent for back to Portugal. Some time after two Cafres, or Savages about the Cape of Good Hope, and an Inhabitant of Java, having made their Eſcape from ſome Portugueſe Veſſels, with two Women into this Iſland, multiplied there to the number of 20, who keeping themſelves on the Tops of ſome ſeeming inacceſſible Rocks, came down at certain times, and cut the Throats of the ſick Portugueſe, taking away all they found with them; but ſome Forces being ſent into the Iſland afterward, they took theſe Murtherers, and carried them to Lisbon. The Iſland is about 13 Miles in compaſs, and lies at a vaſt diſtance from other Lands, between Africa to the Eaſt, and Braſil to the Weſt. The Engliſh about 23 years ago ſetled a Colony here, which is very thriving, and Built a Fort to ſecure it: They have planted ſeveral ſorts of Fruit-trees, and have Oxen, Sheep, Goats, and divers ſorts of Tame Fowl, which thrive very well here. The Iſland is very much ſubject to terrible ſuddain Storms and Guſts of Wind, and dreadful Thunder and Lightning, eſpecially about the time that the Sun approaches the Equinoctial, which obligeth the Maſters of Ships to carry little Sail, to preſerve their Maſts and Veſſels in the midſt of thoſe violent Tempeſts, commonly followed by great Calms, which are very troubleſome to thoſe that want Water or Proviſion, when they chance to miſs of this Iſland in their paſſage between Mozambique, or the Iſle of Madagaſcar, to the Heſperides, commonly call'd the Iſles of Cape Verd. In the Sea, which is between this Iſland and that of Aſcenſion, are a ſort of flying Fiſhes as big as a Herring, and very good meat, theſe being purſued by other Fiſhes, take a Flight into the Air, which laſts no longer than their Wings are moiſt, and ſo are fain to plunge themſelves into the Sea to recover new ſtrength to avoid the hungry Jaws of their Purſuers. Davity de l' Afrique.

SAINT LUCIA, one of the Caribbee Iſlands in America, lying between Martinico and St. Vincent; it belongs to the French.

SAINT MAGDALENA, a vaſt River in South America, which ariſeth in the Kingdom of New-Granada at St. Juan de Lus Llanous, receiveth Guali, Pati, Carare, Pompatoo, and St. Martha, and is navigable above a hundred Leagues up into the Continent of America; ſo that by it the Merchandiſe of Europe is carried to Granada, and the Treaſures of the latter are in three Weeks brought down to the Atlantick Ocean, into which this River falls with a vaſt Mouth, twenty ſix Leagues Eaſt of Cartagena Nueva in Granada; ſo that it maintains its Current ten Leagues into the Ocean, with ſuch ſtrength, that it cauſes abundance of dangerous Whirl-pools. In the Mouth of this there is an Iſland five Leagues Long, and half a League broad: The Hollanders do all affirm it has three Mouths where it falls into the Ocean, Laet. Pa. 369. The Mouth lies in the Lat. of 11. 40. from the Line to the North. Its Head is near the City Popayan in the Andes. From the Head to the Fall are 400 Leagues, and is Navigable to St. Fee de Bogota. This River is in the Maps called St. Martha, becauſe that River unites with it at Mopex.

SAINT MARGARITA, an Iſland in the Tyrrhene Sea, between Tuſcany and the Iſland Corſica. It was formerly in the Poſſeſſion of the Republick of Genoua, but belongs now to the Duke of Florence. This is the Gorgon of the Ancients, and accordingly the Italians call it La Gorgona.

SAINT MARGARITA, or La Margarita, an Iſland of South America, in the North Sea, upon the Coaſts of Terra firma, eight Leagues from New Andaluzia, and forty from the Iſland St. Trinidada to the Weſt. It was diſcovered by Columbus in 1498, and has been ſince Famous for the Fiſhery of Pearl: It is about 50 Miles in compaſs, and has a Town of the ſame name which is a Biſhop's See.

SAINT MARIA PANDITARIA, an Iſland in the Tyrrhene Sea, on the Coaſt of Terra di Lavoro, a Province of Naples, whither Agrippina the Mother of Caligula was Baniſh'd by the Roman Emperor Tiberius, according to the Cuſtom. It's ſmall and deſolate, and lies about thirty Miles from Puteoli.

SAINT MARIA DE FINIS TERRÆ, called by the Spaniards, Il cabo de Finis Terræ, by the French, Le Cape de fin Terre, is a Promontory in Gallicia, and the moſt North-Weſtern Point of Spain has its name from the Town of St. Mary, which is about ten Leagues Weſt of Compoſtella.

SAINT MARY DE LUCA, an Epiſcopal City of Terra di Ottranto, in the Kingdom of Naples.

SAINT MARY, an Iſland in the Atlantick Sea, formerly called Noſſi Hibraim, i. e. Abraham's Iſle; it lies towards the Bay of Antongil, two Leagues from the Eaſt Coaſt of Madagaſcar. It is eighteen Leagues in length, and three in breadth; the whole Iſland is ſurrounded with Rocks, which when the Tide is in, are covered with the Sea, ſo that Canoes go over them; on theſe Rocks grows abundance of White Coral, and upon the Eaſt ſhoar of the Iſland is found Ambergreaſe, which the Negro's uſe to burn upon the Sepulchres of their Anceſtors. The Soil is very fruitful in Rice, Sugar-Canes and Fruits, and abounds with ſweet Gums and Cattle; but the air is very moiſt, ſo that ſeldom a day paſſeth but it Rains more or leſs. The Inhabitants call themſelves Zaffe Hibrahim, i. e. The Off-ſpring of Abraham, and are governed by a Prince of their own Nation. Since the French ſetled a Colony here, they have built ten or twelve Villages. The Tabaco of this Iſland far ſurpaſſeth that of Madagaſcar in goodneſs. Flacourt.

SAINT MARTHA, a Province of New-Caſtile, or Caſtilia del Oro, in the South-America upon the North Sea. This Country is hot towards the Sea, but the more In-land parts of it are cold, by reaſon of great Mountains cover'd with Snow. It abounds with Limon, Orange, Pomgranate-Trees and Vines, and the Soil is very Fertile of Mayz. The Foreſts are full of Lions, Tigers, Bears, and other wild Beaſts. There are alſo rich Mines of Gold, and ſeveral ſorts of precious Stones are found here, whereof ſome are found to cure the Stone, the Bloody-flux, and other Diſeaſes; beſides Jaſper, Porphyry, and other kinds of Marble. There are many places where they make good Salt, which is tranſported to the Neighbouring Provinces. The Savages of this Country are very fierce and War-like, many of them being to this day ſtill govern'd by their own Kings, and make ſtrong head againſt the Spaniards: They uſe poiſon'd Arrows, and wear Mantles of Cotton of divers Colours. This Province hath a City of the ſame Name, being its Capital, on the Coaſt of the North Sea, in a Healthful Air, with a large and commodious Haven, being half a League wide; over againſt the City is an high Mountain, which ſecures it from the Violence of the Winds. The Town was formerly very populous, but ſince the Spaniſh Plate Fleet has ceas'd to touch there, it is much decreaſed: It is a Biſhops See, under the Archbiſhop of Sancta Fee in New Granada; it hath been ſeveral times plunder'd by the Engliſh and Hollanders. Sir Francis Drake burnt it in 1595. and the next year it was plunder'd again by the Engliſh under Sir Anthony Shirley; and the Hollanders took it in 1630. from whom the Spaniards redeem'd it. There is alſo a Mountain of this Name. See Sierras Nevades de Laet. Hiſt. de Nov. Mond.

SAINTE MARTHE, (Scevole or Gaucher) This Famous Man was Preſident and Treaſurer of France, in the Lieutenancy of Poictiers, was Born the 2d. of February 1536. of a Family Famous for Wit and Worth. He was an Orator, Lawyer, Poet, and Hiſtorian, and well skill'd in the Latin, Greek, and Hebrew Tongues; and beſides a very Vertuous good Man. He was a good Friend, a great lover of his Country, and Loyal to his Prince: The City of Loudun, which he ſav'd from Ruin, conſider'd him as the Father of his Country, where he died March 29. 1623. being 78 years of Age. Joſeph Scaliger, Juſtus Lipſius, Caſaubon, Thuanus, Janus Douſa, ſpeak of him with great commendation. He wrote Gallorum Doctrinæ Illuſtrium qui ſua, Patrumque memoria floruere Elogia Lib. 5. Pædotrophia, ſeu de Liberorum Educatione, Lib. III. &c. He left ſeveral Children worthy of ſuch a Father, but I ſhall only here take notice of Scevola and Lewis de Sainte Marthe, Twin-Brothers born at Loudun December 20. 1571. who were both of them the Kings Counſellors, and Hiſtoriographers of France. Their Country is greatly beholden to them for the Genealogical Hiſtory of the Houſe of France, in two Volumes in Folio; at which they labour'd fifty years together: As alſo for their Gallia Chriſtiana which was publiſh'd by Scevola's Son. They wrote alſo the Genealogical Hiſtory of the Houſe of Beauveau, &c. Authors beſtow upon theſe Brothers a Character due to their ſingular Worth and Merit. Blondel calls them decora Franciæ Lumina, and Fronteau the Jeſuit, in a Funeral Oration of his, gives them this Encomium, Sanmarthani Fratres, Geminum Galliæ Lumen, naturæ miraculum, Hiſtoriæ noſtræ Promptuarium. Scevola died at Paris the 7*th* of September 1650. above 78 years of Age, and Lewis, the 29*th* of April 1656. Aged 84 years and upwards, and were buried in the ſame Tomb, in the Church of St. Severin. Scevola left three Sons behind him, viz. Peter Scevola, Lewis-Abel, and Nicolas; who added what was wanting to Gallia Chriſtiana, publiſh'd it 1656. and preſented it to the Aſſembly of the Clergy of France. The firſt of theſe, Peter Scevola, worthily maintains the great Reputation of thoſe of his Family. The Books writ by him are The State of Europe, in four Volumes in 12s. The Original of the Flower de Luces, and the Genealogical Hiſtory of the Houſe of Tremoille, prepared by his Father: Beſides which he hath promis'd to oblige the publick with theſe following pieces, viz. Two Volumes of Additions to the Genealogical Hiſtory of the Royal Family of the French Kings: Of the Original of Soveraign Families, with their Arms and Titles: Of the Vice-Roys and Governours of the Kingdoms and Provinces of Europe. Orbis Chriſtianus in VII Volumes, and Hiſpania Catholica, ſeu de Epiſcopis Hiſpaniæ.

SAINT MAURA, in Latin, Leucadia and Neritum, an Iſland in the Ionian Sea, on the Coaſt of Epirus and Achaia: It is nine Miles from Ceſalonia. This Iſland of old was joyned to the Continent; but they of Achaia cut through the Neck of Land, and made it an Iſland; but not long after, this Channel being fill'd with Sand, turn'd the Iſland again into a Peninſula: But this Sand having ſince been much waſh'd away, the Inhabitants have built ſeveral Wooden Bridges, which joining divers little Iſlands, ſeparated by ſmall Channels, ſerve for a Paſſage to the Continent. It is about 70 Miles in Circuit, and abounds with Corn, Wine, Oyl, and Tabaco. It has a Capital City of the ſame Name, with a Biſhops See, under the Archbiſhop of Lepanto, and about 30 Villages inhabited by Greeks. It hath ſeveral good Havens, whereof the chief are that of Sancta Maura, (in which are about 6000 Inhabitants) and Demata, and is joined to the Continent by the foreſaid Wooden Bridges. There is alſo a magnificent Aqueduct belonging to this place, of about a Mile in length, and ſupported by 300 Arches over a great Lake, which the Inhabitants make uſe of for a Bridge to paſs to ſome parts of the Iſland; but it's ſo narrow, that two cannot go a-breſt. In 1479. the Turks took this Iſland from the Greeks; and in 1502. the Venetians took it from them, but reſtor'd it again to Bajazet II. to obtain a Peace; ſince which time it became a Den of Pyrates. In 1625. a City of this Name was taken by the Knights of Maltha, after a bloody Fight, wherein loſing moſt of their Men, they were forced to quit their Conqueſt ſoon after; and in their return, two of their Gallies were Sunk, and the reſt much diſabled by the Turks. In 1684. Moroſini took this place for the Venetians. In this whole Iſland are but thirty poor inconſiderable Villages, all Inhabited. The Baſſa of the Morea puniſh'd the Pyrates in Burning their Gallies.

SAINT SOPHIA, the chief Moſque of Conſtantinople. This magnificent Edifice, is but the Remains of a much greater, begun by Juſtin, and finiſhed by Juſtinian, both Emperors of the Eaſt, who Conſecrated it to the Divine Wiſdom, under the Name of Hagia Sophia. The Turks have taken away great part of this Building, and chiefly preſerved the Dome, which was but the Quire of the ancient Chriſtian Church. The Diameter of this Dome is of about 113 Foot, and it is ſurrounded with two Rows of Galleries, each of which are ſupported by ſixty Pillars of the ſame Faſhion, but of different matter; ſome being of Porphyry, others of White Marble. Whilſt this Church was poſſeſt by the Chriſtians, all the Women had their places in the Galleries, which are very large; this Cuſtom ſtill continues in the Eaſtern Church, of having the Women ſeparated from the Men, in places dedicated to Divine Service: And the ſame is alſo obſerved in ſeveral Churches of Portugal. Without this Moſque are four Minarets, that is, Turrets or Steeples, with Balconies round them, into which one of their Prieſts called Meuzins get up five times a day, at certain hours, to call the Turks to their Naama or Prayers; for they do not uſe Bells to call People to Divine Service, as is cuſtomary amongſt us. Above the great Gate of the Church within are yet to be ſeen the Image of our Saviour ſitting, and giving his Bleſſing to an Emperor proſtrate at his Feet, as alſo that of the Bleſſed Virgin at his left-hand. 'Tis very ſtrange the Turks have left theſe Images in their Moſque, ſeeing that in all other parts thereof they have broken them down, or cover'd them over with Mortar. At the entry of the Church on each ſide, between two Porphyry Pillars, are placed two Urns of Marble full of Water, where the Chriſtians were wont to waſh their Faces, or at leaſt their Eyes, to repreſent the Purification that was neceſſary for thoſe who preſented themſelves before the Divine Majeſty. And it is obſerv'd, ~~that~~ formerly there was writ over this place with letters of Gold, this curious Greek Verſe, made with that art as to be read backward and forwards, putting them in mind to waſh their Sin, not their Face only. But at preſent, the Cuſtom of the Turks is to drink of this Water, after they have heated themſelves by their Prayers, their frequent Bowings and Kneelings, and by their continual Exclamations, and loud repetitions of the Name of God, or ſome of his Attributes, one of the Officers of the Moſque handing it to them in another Veſſel, with ſeveral Cups for them to drink out of. On the South-ſide of the place, where formerly ſtood the High Altar, is the Mirabe or Marahab, that is, the Niche, where the Alcoran is kept, with two great Candleſticks with Wax-Candles in them ſtanding by it. This Niche looks towards the Keble, or Moſque of Mecha, where the Tomb of Mahomet is; for this way the Mahometans turn their Faces at their Prayers. In the upper part of the Wall is a Tribune, whither the Grand Signior comes by a Back-Stairs; but what the Turks look upon moſt, is a Marble, on which, they ſay, the Bleſſed Virgid waſh'd our Saviour's Clouts. They alſo ſhew a Tomb, which they will have to be that of the Emperor Conſtantine; before the Portal are little Buildings in form of Chapels, cover'd with Domes, wherein ſome of the young Ottoman Princes are buried; beyond a Portique that anſwers the whole Front, and whither the Mahometan Women come ſometimes to Pray, are nine great Braſs-Doors, whereof the fifth gives entrance into the Moſque. The Ornaments of the Porch and inward parts of this Building are all of the fineſt Marble, Alabaſter, Serpentine, Porphyry, Mother of Pearl, Cornelian, and other Stones of great value. The Pavement is Marble made into Chequer-work, and all cover'd with large Turkey Carpets. The Dome is all of Moſaick-work in Figures, and imbelliſh'd with Gold. The whole is certainly one of the moſt magnificent Edifices that is any where to be ſeen, though far ſhort of what it was in the time of the Chriſtian Emperors; for ſome ſay the preſent is only the Quire of the firſt. Behind the place where the great Altar ſtood, there is ſtill to be ſeen, in the middle of a half Dome, embelliſh'd with Moſaique, and enrich'd with Gold, the Image of the Virgin ſitting upon a Throne, holding the Infant Jeſus on her Knees, giving Benediction; and above the Image our Saviour's Face engraven; on both ſides two Angels, whoſe Wings hide the reſt of the Body; higher up, under the Arcade, are ſeen four Saints, with the Virgin in the middle, and ſome embelliſhments of Architecture; between this Arcade and the Eaſtern part of the Dome are two Seraphims, having ſix Wings each. Grelot. Voyage de Conſtans.

Νίψον ᾽Ονόμημα, τὰ μὴ μόνον ὄψιν.
Α α

SAINTES MARIES, or les Trois Maries, a ſmall Town in Provence at the mouth of the Roſne, and is the ſame place which the Ancients called Templum Delphicum, becauſe thoſe of Marſeilles had built there a Temple in honour of Apollo of Delphos. The Roman Legends tell us, that it was at this place that the Veſſel without Sails or Oars firſt arrived, which carried the three Maries, viz. Magdalene, Jacoba and Salome, together with Lazarus and other Saints, whom the Jews had thus expoſed to the mercy of the Winds and Waves. They further ſay, that the Bodies of theſe three Maries, viz. Magdalene, Jacoba and Salome, were buried here, afterwards hid under the Church to preſerve them from Barbarians, until found in 1448 by Renatus King of Jeruſalem and Sicily, and Earl of Provence, who had them removed in great Solemnity, and laid up in an Urn. Bouche Chron. de Provence, lib. 4.

SAINTE VAUTRUDE, a famous Abbey of Canneſſes, at Mons in Haynault, which took its Name from St. Vautrude a Kinſwoman of Dagobert King of France, and Wife of St. Vincent. It was at the firſt only a Monaſtery, which this She-Saint founded above a thouſand years ago for her own Retirement, but hath been ſince that time changed into a Chapter of Canoneſſes, whoſe Protector and perpetual Abbot is the Earl of Hainault for the time being. None but Perſons of the higheſt Quality are admitted to theſe Places, and before their admiſſion muſt make proof of their Noble Extraction by Father and Mother's ſide for ſeveral Deſcents; which makes the Perſons of Quality in Flanders ſo ſhy of allying themſelves beneath their Condition, for fear of depriving their Daughters of the advantage of enjoying theſe Canonries. Theſe Female-Canons do daily ſing in the Quire the Canons Office, in their Canons-Hoods, and a kind of Eccleſiaſtical Habit peculiar to themſelves, but have leave all the reſt of the day to wear Secular Garments when they have a mind to go abroad in the Town. They have their Lodging every one of them in a diſtinct Houſe, but all contained within the ſame Cloyſter. They may all of them reſign their Canonſhips, and marry, excepting only the Lady-Abbeſs and the Lady-Deaneſs. The Revenue of this Foundation is very conſiderable, and the Canoneſſes are admitted very young. This is a peculiar Order, the like whereof is not to be found elſewhere in France. Vie d'Ann de Meleun Fondatrice des Religieuſes Hoſpitalieres de Baugè, lib. 1. cap. 3.

SAINTES or Xaintes, a City of Aquitaine, which is the Capital of the Province of Saintonge, and a Biſhop's See under the Archbiſhop of Bourdeaux. It ſtands upon the River Charante, 20 Leagues from Bourdeaux to the North, 11 from Rochelle to the South-eaſt, and 7 from Bourges to the Eaſt, and at the ſame diſtance from the Ocean. The Romans called it Mediolanum Santonum, Santones, and Urbs Santonica, being often mentioned by Cæſar, Strabo, Tacitus, Auſonius, Gregorius Turonenſis, &c. There be many ancient Ruines here which witneſs the long ſtanding of this City, the moſt conſiderable of them are an Amphitheatre, Aqueducts, and a Triumphal-Arch upon the Bridge over the River Charante, with ſeveral Inſcriptions upon it. St. Eutropius was the firſt Biſhop of this place. This City ſuffered much in the laſt Civil Wars of France, between the Papiſts and Proteſtants.

In 563 Emeritus Biſhop of the Place was depoſed by a Council, for entring the Chair by the King's Authority, without conſent of the Metropolitan and the Biſhops of the Province, but the Authors of this Decree were ſeverely proſecuted by the Court. Julius Cæſar. St. Marth.

SAINTES (Claude de). In this place, Morery, as Monſieur le Clerk obſerves, is juſtly tax'd with ſeveral Miſtakes; as firſt, for making the Place of his Birth Chartres, whereas it was in Perche; ſecondly, in affirming that he aſſiſted at the Colloquy of Poiſſi, after his return from Trent, whereas he did not go to Trent till after the Colloquy; thirdly, in concealing the reaſon of his Impriſonment by Henry IVth's Order, which was, not only upon the account of his being a violent Leaguer, but becauſe he had maintain'd that Henry III. was juſtly aſſaſſinated, and that Henry IV. deſerv'd the ſame uſage. See Claude de Saintes.

SAINTONGE or Xaintonge, a large Province of France, bounded on the Eaſt by Angoumois and Perigorde. on the Weſt by the Ocean, on the North by Poictou, and on the South by the Garonne, which ſeparates it from Guienne. It is a Country very fruitful of Corn and Wine, &c. which was the reaſon why the Romans ſettled themſelves here, as we find from the Writings of Cæſar and others, who ſpeak of the Abſinthium Xantonicum, now called Roman Wormwood, which ſtill grows here in abundance. Great quantity of good Salt is alſo made here. It is a common ſaying with the French, That if France were an Egg, Saintonge would be the Yolk of it. The Rivers Garonne, Charante, Seudre, and ſome others, are of great uſe to this Province for the tranſporting of their Merchandiſes. The Inhabitants that live upon the Sea-Coaſt do to this day wear thoſe kind of Couls or Hoods of which Martial makes mention, lib. 14. Epigram. and Juvenal, Sat. 3. under the name of Bardocucullus or Cucullus Santonicus. The Capital City of this Province is Saintes, the reſt are Blaie, St. Jean d'Angeli, Jarnac, Brouage, Pont Soubiſe, &c. This Province in former times was governed by its own Earls. Landri Earl of this Country lived in the Reign of Charles ſirnamed the Bald, and waged War againſt Emenon Earl of Angoulême. Agnes tranſlated this Earldom into the Family of the Earls of Anjou; and Eleonor of Guienne, whom King Lewis ſirnamed the Younger divorced, brought this Province into the poſſeſſion of the Engliſh, by marrying Henry II. of England. It was confiſcated from King John, and after divers Revolutions was given up to the Engliſh by the Treaty of Bretigni, in 1360; but ſome time after being conquered by the French, was re-united to that Crown with the reſt of Guienne. Cu Cheſne, Papire Maſſon.

SAINTS, or Bahia de Todos os Santos, Lat. Sinus omnium Sanctorum, a Gulf in Southern America, in Brazile. It gives its Name to a Province called Capitania de la Bahia de Todos os Santos, between the Capitanate of Capitania Dos Ilheos and that of Seregippo del Rey. All theſe Countries belong to the Portugueſe. The principal Town of the Capitinate of the Bay of All Saints is St. Salvador.

SAISSETI (Bernard) Biſhop of Pamiez, a Perſon very famous in the Hiſtory of Boniface VIII. and King Philip of France, ſirnamed the Fair, as being the cauſe of the Difference which happened between that King and the Pope. He was at firſt Abbot of St. Antonin of Pamiez, and having inſinuated himſelf into the favour of Boniface VIII. he raiſed that Abbey to a Biſhop's See, and named Saiſſeti to be the firſt Biſhop thereof. This Proceeding of the Pope vexed the King, who had a Right to the City of Pamiez ; and though he had conferred his Right upon Roger Bernard Count of Foix, Lord of Bearn, yet being Sovereign of this place, he thought that the Pope ought at leaſt to have conſulted him about this Matter. The King knowing the Ambition of Saiſſeti, and having in reſolute terms declared his Diſſatisfaction about the Popes Proceeding, to give the King ſatisfaction, the Biſhoprick was given to St. Lewis of Provence, who was alſo Biſhop of Tholouſe, and died in 1298, as is mentioned elſewhere. After whoſe death Saiſſeti was admitted to the Biſhoprick with the King's conſent ; which Condeſcention of the King was not able to ſatisfie this new Prelate, who ſuppoſing himſelf to have been highly affronted by the King, reſolved upon a Revenge : A fair occaſion was preſented him ſoon after, for the Pope having ſent him upon ſome buſineſs to the King, this factious Prelate ſpoke to him with ſo little reſpect, that King Philip being incenſed at his Inſolence, cauſed him to be ſeized, in 1301, and committed to the cuſtody of the Archbiſhop of Narbonne, who was then at Court. The Pope having underſtood what had paſs'd, writ to the Archdeacon of Narbonne to pray the King to ſet Saiſſeti at liberty. But the King making no great haſte to ſatisfie the Pope's requeſt, gave occaſion to the miſunderſtanding that aroſe between them. Neither was it long after till Saiſſeti found cauſe to repent of his misbehaviour, when, after the death of Boniface, he was fain to beg the King's Pardon, who very generouſly gave it him. *Spondan. SAITES, a Name of the Kings of Egypt, which had their reſidence at Sais, a City of Delta in the Lower-Egypt. Of theſe they count three Dynaſties, whereof the firſt was ſet up by Bocchoris, or by his Father Gnephacte, who reigned at Thebes in the Upper-Egypt, and who left this Kingdom to his Son Bocchoris, who was the only King of this firſt Dynaſty, becauſe ſix years after he ſucceeded in his Father's Kingdom. The Head of the ſecond Dynaſty was Pſammetichus, who made himſelf Maſter of all Egypt, and ended with the ſixth King called Pſammenitus, who was vanquiſhed by the Perſians. The third Dynaſty was renewed by Amyrteus, who was the only Prince thereof, and died after a Reign of ſix years. Paul Pezron, Antiquite des Temps.

SAL, Sale, Lat. Sala, a Town of Sweden in the Province of Weſtmania, between Upland and Nericia, five Swediſh miles Weſt of Upſal, and was famous formerly for its Silver Mines.

SALACON, a certain Perſon among the Greeks, who though he was extremely poor, carried himſelf as if he had been very rich, to that degree, that his Name was proverbially made uſe of to denote Perſons who in a low fortune are proud and ſtately. The Greeks alſo made uſe of this word Salaconizein to denote ſuch as affected effeminate Gates and Behaviour, from one Salaco an effeminate Catamite. Eraſm. Adag.

SALADIN, a moſt warlike King of the Turks, Sultan of Grand Cairo ; he at firſt was General of the Army of Noradin, Sultan of Damaſcus, and in 1164 conquered Egypt, and married the Widow of the Prince of Grand Cairo. After the death of Noradin, he was called to that Government during the Minority of the Prince his Son. Being advanced to this Power, he reſolved to attack the Chriſtians ; and accordingly, in 1177, having raiſed an Army, he endeavoured to ſurprize Jeruſalem, but was defeated with a great ſlaughter on Friday the 25th. of November. This Loſs put him upon thoughts of Revenge, and in 1180 he paſſed the Euphrates, took ſeveral Cities, as far as Niſibe, and made himſelf formidable to all his Neighbours. He took Aleppo the 5th. of June, 1184. But not long after the Chriſtians put a ſtop to his Conqueſts by a Ceſſation of Arms. But the Earl of Tripoli being jealous of Guy King of Jeruſalem, perſuaded Saladine to break the Truce ; who following his counſel, defeated the Chriſtians the 1ſt. of May 1187, and having raiſed an Army of above 800000 Men, he obtained a ſecond Victory over them, taking Guy in the Purſuit, together with the Wood of the Holy Croſs, beheaded all the Knights Templars and of St. John, made himſelf Maſter of Acre, Barut, Giblet, Saide, and divers other places, and at laſt of Jeruſalem too. Pope Urban II. upon the hearing of this News, died for Grief. Saladine ſeveral times ſtormed the City of Tyre, but was often repulſed ; and after ſome other Loſſes ſuſtained from the Chriſtians, he died in 1193, whoſe Death was followed with great Diſſentions among his Children. Baronij Annal. Geſta Dei per Francos, Gulielmus Tyrius, &c.

SALADINE, or Decimæ Saladinianæ, the Name of a Tithe impoſed in France and England in 1188, for ſupporting of the Holy War againſt Saladine Sultan of Egypt, after that he had taken the City of Jeruſalem. This Ordinance imported, that all thoſe who did not go to the Holy War, even Eccleſiaſticks themſelves, (the Carthuſians, Bernardins, and the Religious of Fontevraud being only excepted) ſhould pay the Tenth of their Revenues and Moveables, with exception only of their Cloaths, Books, Arms, Jewels, and Holy Veſſels and Ornaments. But notwithſtanding that this Ordinance of the Tithe was accepted of by the Biſhops of both Nations, yet there were not wanting ſome Eccleſiaſticks who oppoſed it with a great deal of earneſtneſs. The famous Petrus Bleſenſis, Archdeacon of Bath, one of the moſt learned Men of his Age, writ about it to Henry of Dreux, Biſhop of Orleans, and the King of France his Nephew, in very ſharp terms, calling this Ordinance an Encroachment upon the Privileges of the Church. But his Opinion could not ſway the Judgment of the Biſhops of both Nations, who thought it but Juſt that ſome part of the Goods of the Church ſhould be employ'd to deliver ſo many Chriſtians out of Slavery, and almoſt all the Eaſtern Churches from the Oppreſſion and Tyranny of the Infidels. Maimbourg. Hiſt. des Croiſades.

SALAMANCA, Lat. Salmantica, ſuppoſed to be the Urbs Vetronum of Ptolemy, and by ſome the Elmantica of Polybius, a City of Spain in the Kingdom of Leon upon the River of Tormes, which is a Biſhop's See under the Archbiſhop of Compoſtella, and an Univerſity founded by Alphonſus IX King of Leon, in 1200. This City abounds with fine Buildings, large Squares, Fountains, and ſumptuous Churches, beſides a great number of Colleges. The Schools, where all manner of Sciences are taught, are very large and beautiful ; it is divided into two parts, the firſt of which, called the great Schools, is a great ſquare Court ſurrounded with very fair Galleries ſupported by Arches, through which they enter into the ſeveral Schools that are round the Court : The Library is above the Gallery, which contains a vaſt number of Books, as alſo many Statues of famous Authors, beſides many Figures of Anatomy : The Church belonging to the Schools is under the Galleries. The Order obſerved in this Univerſity is as follows : There are eight Divinity Profeſſors, whereof four read in the Morning, and four in the Afternoon, and have a Penſion allowed them of a Thouſand Crowns a piece. Beſides theſe eight chief Profeſſors, there are others of the ſame Faculty, who each of them read of what Subject they think fit ; theſe have a Sallary of Five hundred Crowns a year, and have their Lectures at different hours. There is one Chair appointed for the Doctrine of Durandus, and another for that of Scotus. Beſides theſe, there are other Profeſſors who have no allowance from the Univerſity, and yet read as well as the other Profeſſors, in hopes of being admitted upon the next Vacancy. Theſe latter are called Pretendientes, as the former Cathedraticos. And the ſame is obſerved for the Civil Law, the Canon Law, Philoſophy, and the Mathematicks. There are alſo many Profeſſors of Phyſick, and of ſeveral Languages, ſo that the number of them all that daily read in this Univerſity amount to fourſcore. Monconis Itinerar.

SALAMENES, a famous Anchorete about Bethlehem during the Reign of Valentinian and Valens : He was born of a Noble Family of Gaza in Paleſtine, and had embraced this kind of life, together with three of his Brothers, under the conduct of the great Hilarion. Euſeb. Hiſt. Eccleſ.

SALAMINE, or Salamis, a City in the Eaſtern part of the Iſle of Cyprus, and an Archbiſhop's Seat ; the Church is ſaid to have been erected by the Apoſtle St. Barnabas, whoſe Body was pretended to be found by the Biſhop Anthemius in 485. This City was ſince called Conſtantia, and ſome take it to be the Modern Famaguſta. This place was the Theatre of the incredible Fortitude of Anaxarchus whom Nicocreon the King cauſed to be put into a great Iron Mortar, and pounded to death with Braſs Peſtles, who in the midſt of this Torment cried out to the Tyrant, Pound on ; you may beat Anaxarchus's Jacket, but you can never reach either his Perſon or his Vertue. Whereupon the enraged Tyrant commanded his Tongue to be cut out ; but he preventing him, bit it off, and ſpit it in the Tyrant's Face. See Famaguſta. Alſo an Iſle of Greece. See Coluri Hiſtoire de Royaume de Cipre.

SALAMIS, now Coluri, and Sancta Bruſia, and by ſome called Salamina, an Iſland of Attica, being the Salamuniachus of Pliny ; it ſtands ten miles North of Egeina, hath a large Haven, near which the Perſian Fleet commanded by Xerxes was defeated by the Grecians. Baud.

SALANDRA, Lat. Salandrilla, or Acalandra, by the Italians called Fiume di Roſeto, a River of Italy in the Baſilicata in the Kingdom of Naples ; it runs by the Town of Roſeto, and diſcharges it ſelf into the Gulf or Bay of Tarentum. Plin. Strab. Cluv.

SALANKEMEN, Lat. Aquemencum or Rhittium, a Town of the Lower-Hungary upon the Danube, over-againſt the River Maniſus, near Peterwaradin, four miles Weſt of Taurunum, famous for a great Victory obtain'd by the Imperialiſts under the Conduct of Prince Lewis of Baden againſt the Turks, in 1691.

SALASSI, an ancient People of Gallia Tranſpadana, at the foot of the Alps, who inhabited that place now called the Valley of Aoſte, in the Dutchy of Savoy. Cluverius.

SALATHIEL the Son of Jechonias, and Father of Zorobabel, mentioned in our Saviour's Genealogy, St. Matth. chap. 1.

SALAWAR, a County of the Kingdom of Hungary upon the Frontiers of Stiria, having the River Drave on the South, and the County of Veſprin on the North. In this County is the City of Salawar or Zalawar, of old called Sala; it belongs to the Turks, as alſo doth the County of Salaia. The City of Caniſa lies in this County of Salawar, about three Leagues from the City of the ſame name. Baud.

SALAZAR (Jean de) Councellor and Eſquire of the Body to Charles VII. King of France, and Captain of an hundred Lances under Lewis XI. This Prince had ſo great an eſteem of his Courage, that he truſted him with the Command of the Vanguard of his Army at the Battel of Montleheri, together with the Great Seneſchal of Normandy; and the Sieur de Barbezan. He ſome time after got into the City of Paris, and defended it againſt the leagued Princes. He commanded four hundred Lances and ſix thouſand Archers for the Inhabitants of Liege, againſt their Biſhop. And in 1469 he maintained the Siege of Beauvais againſt the Duke of Burgundy, under the Earl of Dammartin, and Joakim Rouhaud Marſhal of France. He alſo aſſiſted in the Conqueſt of the Franche Compte, where he had the Government of Grai beſtowed upon him, and died at Trois, December 12. 1479. He had by Margaret de la Tremoille a Son called Triſtan de Salazar Biſhop of Meaux, and afterwards Archbiſhop of Sens in 1474. This Prelate concluded in 1480 the Confederacy with the Suiſſes, who then firſt engaged themſelves to fight under the Banners of France. In 1488 he was Embaſſador in England about the buſineſs of Bretany, which King Charles VIII. had conquered after the Battle of St. Aubin de Cormier. Some time after he followed King Lewis XII. into Italy, who made an Expedition thither to be revenged of thoſe of Genoua, in 1507. He died at Sens, February 11. 1518.

SALCES, Salſulæ, a ſmall Town of France in the County of Rouſillon, four Leagues from Perpignan, and two from the Mediterranean, was built by the Spaniards upon a high ground, with a ſtrong Cittadel to oppoſe that of Leucate, about two Leagues diſtant from it. This City, which has its name from a neighbouring Salt Fountain, was taken in 1640 from the Spaniards by the French, in whoſe poſſeſſion it was left by the Pyrenæan Treaty. Near to this place is a Pool called the Pool of Leucate, in which there is a floating Iſle, and where Mela tells us there was formerly found a live Fiſh in the Earth. *Euſeb. Nieremb. de Mirac. SALE, or Sala, a City of the Province of Fez, being the chief of the Kingdom of that name, ſeated at the mouth of the River Sala on the Atlantick Ocean, and near the place where the River Burregred, which ſeparates the Province of Fez from Temeſna, runs into the Sea, and half a League from the Town of Rabat, which lies on the other ſide of that River. When the Goths were Maſters of this part of Africa, Sale was the Capital of the Kingdom of Fez; but as ſoon as the City of Fez was built, it loſt that Honour. The Buildings of this City are very fair, the Fortifications ſtrong, and the Caſtle well provided with Artillery. The Houſes have Portico's adorned with Pillars and Tables of Alabaſter and Jaſpar-ſtone, and all the Streets are built exactly on a line. It hath a good Haven, though but little. This City formerly was a Commonwealth, but is now under the King of Fez, neither is it ſo conſiderable for Trade as formerly. The King of Fez and Morocco maintains a Governour here, who hath three hundred Horſe and ſome Foot for the Safeguard of the City. The Country about abounds with Cotton, whereof the Inhabitants make Cloth and Fuſtians. There are two Towns, diſtinguiſhed by the Names of New and Old Sale; but although a place of good Trade, it has been infamous as a Neſt of Pyrates. The Spaniards took it in 1287, but loſt it in ten days after. In 1632, King Charles I. of Great Britain being ſolicited by the Emperor of Morocco with an Embaſſy and a very Complemental Letter, ſent a Fleet againſt it by Sea, whilſt the ſaid Emperor beſieged it by Land; ſo that the City being reduced, the Fortifications demoliſhed, and the Leading Rebels executed, King Charles had a Reward of three hundred Chriſtian Slaves. Here are ſome Antiquities built of Brick, and amongſt others two large Sellars where they lay their Merchandices, and ſell the Chriſtians they take at Sea. Their principal Moſque and great Tower, which they call Summataſſe were built by 30000 Chriſtian Slaves whom Maule-Jacob Almanſor brought from Spain, employing at the ſame time 30000 at Morocco to build Aqueducts. This City is 20 miles South of Marmora, and 70 from Arzella, 100 from Tangier, and 100 from Fez to the Weſt, Longit. 6. 40. Lat. 33. 5. Villalain Divity Deſcript. de L. Afriq. Marmol.

SALEM, a City where Melchiſedeck was King, afterwards called Jeruſalem; the word in the Hebrew ſignifies Peace. See JERUSALEM.

SALEMI, a well inhabited Town in Sicily in the Valley of Maſera, on a riſing-ground by the River Selmis, 18 miles North of Maſara; it was formerly called Alicia. Baud.

SALENTINI, an ancient People of Italy, who dwelt in the Country which is now called Terra d'Otranto, in the Kingdom of Naples. Their Territory formerly extended betwixt the Bay of Tarentum, the Adriatick-Sea, and Apuleia. The Promontory formerly Salentinum is now called Janicium.

SALERNO, Salernum, a City in the Kingdom of Naples, which was a Roman City and Colony called Urbs Picentinorum; it is now an Archbiſhop's See, a Principality, and the Capital of the Hither Principate. It is ſuppoſed to have taken its Name from two Rivulets Sale and Erno. It ſtands upon the River Buſanola, in a very fruitful Plain ſurrounded with pleaſant Hills upon the Shore of the Tyrrhene-Sea, where it hath a Bay of its own Name, and a ſafe large Haven, 24 miles from Naples to the South-eaſt, and 30 from Benevento to the South. The School of Phyſicians that is here is famous for the great Men it has produced, and for the Book of Verſes known by the name of Schola Salernitana, dedicated to one of the Kings of England, which ſome ſuppoſe to have been Richard I. others Edward I. who paſſing through this place in their Journey to the Holy-Land, did give occaſion to the Dedication of that Book. It formerly had Princes of its own, and in Monte Bono near this City are abundance of Antiquities; in this City they pretend to have the Body of St. Matthew the Apoſtle. The Archbiſhoprick was founded by Pope Boniface VII. in 974. The Eldeſt Son of the Kings of Naples had formerly their Titles from this Place. Baud.

SALES (St. Erancis de) Biſhop and Prince of Geneva, and Founder of the Order of the Viſitation, the Bull of whoſe Canonization imports, That he converted Seventy two thouſand Hereticks. He died at Lyons on the Feaſt of the Holy Innocents, in the Year 1622.

SALESICA, Lat. Saleucia, a Town of Sileſia in Aſia-Minor, being an Epiſcopal See under the Patriarch of Antioch, 12 miles North of the Mediterranean, and 70 Weſt of Tarſus; Longit. 64. Lat. 38. 40.

SALETTES, a Chartreuſe Convent of Ladies of Quality on the Borders of Dauphiné towards la Breſſe, the Nuns whereof make Profeſſion of their Rule before the Biſhop of Grenoble; which Ceremony is called their Conſecration, in that Country. When they make their Vow, they preſent themſelves before the Biſhop with a Wax-Taper in their Hand, adorned with Eſcutcheons of their Family, who puts a Ring on their Finger, and a Crown upon their Head like to that which is given to the Daughters of France. Memoirs de Temps.

SALGADO de Somoza, Abbot of Alcala in the Kingdom of Grenada, was born at Corunna, commonly call'd the Groyne, in Galicia, and died in 1664. The King of Spain was deſirous to beſtow upon him ſome conſiderable Biſhoprick, but the Court of Rome oppos'd it, as not approving of ſeveral of his Opinions. He hath writ, De Regia Protectione vi Oppreſſorum appellantium à cauſis & Judicibus Eccleſiaſticis, Tom. II. Tractatus de Supplicatione ad Sanctiſſimum, à Bullis & Literis Apoſtolicis nequam, & importunè impetratis, &c. Nichol. Antonio Bibl. Scrip. Hiſp.

SALGANICO, Lat. Salganea, the Saganius of Ptolemy, a Town of Græcia on the Euripus, where there is a ſhort Paſſage over into Eubœa. Baud.

SALIAN or Saillan (Jacobus) a Jeſuit of Avignon. He entred into the Society in 1578, being then One and twenty years of age, and taught with great applauſe. He was Rector of the College of Bezanſon, and died at Paris the 23d. of January, 1640. 'Tis to him we are beholden for that excellent Work, The Annals of the Old Teſtament, in Six Volumes, beſides other devout Treatiſes. He knew very well that Abridgments are often a cauſe of the loſs of many conſiderable Hiſtories; for which reaſon he dexterouſly put by Spondanus's Requeſt, who deſired leave to Epitomize his Annals, as he had already done thoſe of Baronius; and fearing leſt ſome other might attempt the ſame thing ſome time or other, he undertook the task himſelf, and compriz'd what he had at large deliver'd in his Annals, with ſo much Art, that the Readers are forced to have recourſe to his firſt Work to be fully inſtructed concerning the things they deſire to be informed of.

SALIANS, Lat. Salij, an ancient People of Germany, ſuppoſed to be the ſame who are alſo called Franci or Franks, and their Country Franconia, who having driven out the Gauls, gave their Country the Name of Francia. The Memory of which People, and their Name, we find preſerved in that Tract of Land in the Province Tranſiſulana, now Over-Iſſel, called Sallant, near the River Aa; where is alſo the Town of Oldenzee, in Latin called Oldeſalia, that is, Old Salia. Alſo a People of Provence, who lived in that Tract which lies between the Cities of Aix and Nice, as appears from Strabo, Plinius and Mela.

SALIJ, Prieſts of Mars, inſtituted at Rome by Numa Pompilius; they were twelve in number, and had their Name given them à Saliendo, becauſe upon certain Days they went Dancing and Leaping through the City of Rome in the manner as follows: They were dreſs'd in a Coat embroider'd with Gold, called Trabea, a Cap on their Heads ending in a ſharp point, and a Leather Belt, at which hung their Sword; they carried in their Right-Hand a little Buckler, after the manner of the Thracians, called Ancile, and in their Left a Javelin, with which they muſically ſtruck upon their Braſs Bucklers, to which Noiſe they harmoniouſly accommodated their Steps and Voice, and in this manner went dancing and ſinging through the City. On theſe Occaſions they were entertained by the Citizens very ſumptuouſly, with all manner of Delicacies; whence Saliares Epulæ was uſed proverbially by the Romans, to denote Feaſts abounding with all manner of Dainties. At theſe Feaſts the Salij were uſed to ſit down with Garlands made of the ſmall Boughs or Twigs of Poplar-Trees. Alex. ab Alexand. lib. 1. cap. 26 Roſin. Antiq. Rom.

SALINE, Lat. Ctenus, a Haven of Taurica Cherſoneſus in the Leſſer-Tartary, where were anciently Salt-Pits. It's four miles North from the Cape Crinmetopon, and twenty five from Dandae.

SALINE, called by the Italians Didimo, one of the Lipari Iſlands belonging to Sicily, twelve miles in circuit, and produces great ſtore of Allum. In 1676 the French defeated the Dutch in a Sea-Fight near this place.

SALINES (Franciſco de) a Spaniard, one of the Prodigies of the laſt Century; for having loſt his Sight at ten years of age, neglected nothing to add to the light of his Underſtanding; and he ſped ſo well, that having learn'd the Tongues, eſpecially Latin and Greek, he made great progreſs in Mathematicks, eſpecially Muſick, and compos'd very good Verſe and Proſe. The Great Men, his Contemporaries, as Pope Paul. IV, the Cardinal of Gravelin, John Alvarez, Gaſpar Quiroga, &c. highly eſteemed him. He taught Muſick in the College of Salamanca, and compos'd an excellent Treatiſe thereof in Seven Books. He died in 1590, aged 77. Thuan.

SALINGUERRE, one that ſeized the Principality of Ferrara, and grew ſo powerful, that contemning the Authority of the Pope's Legates, and of the Marqueſs Azzo of Eſte, he put all thoſe that were of their Party out of the City. But the Marqueſs reſolved to avenge this Affront, and laid Siege to the City; whereupon Salinguerre preſently offered to treat of Peace with the Marqueſs, and let him come into the City: But the Marqueſs being too difficult in accepting the Terms of Peace offer'd, he was ſhamefully driven out of the City again. P. Gerard. de Padua.

SALINS, Salina, a City of Burgundy, ſo called from a ſalt Spring that is there, whence the Inhabitants make Salt. Its ſituation is very extraordinary, between two Mountains, in a fruitful Valley call'd Scoding, whence this City by ſome Latin Writers is call'd Scudingum. It is a ſtrong City, and its Citadel, which ſtands upon a ſteep Rock, is in a manner impregnable. It is eight Leagues diſtant from Dole to the Eaſt. It contains four Pariſhes, and ſeveral Religious Houſes. The preſent French King took it in 1668, and reſtor'd it by the Treaty of Aix la Chapelle; but having ſince that taken it again, it was, together with the Franche Compte, left to him by the Treaty of Nimeguen.

SALINSTAT, or Selingenſtat, Lat. Salingoſtadium, a Town of Germany, in Franconia, upon the River Maine, four miles Eaſt of Francfort, and ſubject to the Elector of Mentz. It was made a Biſhop's See by Charlemaign; but in 780 the Chair was removed to Hailbron or Halberſtad, according to Baudrand. It was then a large City, but now much decayed.

SALIQUE, the Name of a famous Law eſtabliſhed by the Franks when they entred into Gaul. Some are of opinion that this Law was made in Tranſiſulana, now Over-Tyſſel, from the River Yſſel formerly called Iſala; and the Inhabitants of that Country, Salij, are ſuppoſed to be the ancient Franks, that were the Authors of this Law. Others ſay it was in Taxandria, which makes a part of Brabant, and of the Country of Liege; and their chief reaſon is, becauſe here are found the four Country Towns which were the Lordſhips of thoſe four Perſons who compiled the Articles of this Law; for Saleheim, ſay they, is a Town near Dieſtburgh, which ſince hath been made an Earldom. Boedenhoven or Boedenheim is near the Town of Lewen. Windeheim or Windehove is about eight miles diſtant from the two forementioned Towns, ſo that they lie as it were in a Triangle. The Caſtle of Wiſogaſt, which was the fourth Lordſhip of theſe French Lords, is not to be found here, though it ſeems probable to ſome that it is the ſame with the little Town called Miſherch, commonly called Wuſtharch. The Germans pretend that this Law was made on the further ſide of the Rhine; and Goldaſt puts this Inſcription upon it, Theſe are the Salique Laws of Faramond firſt King of the French, formerly made by the People and their Lords in the Country of Salize; which he interprets in the Margin to be Saltzburg, upon the River Saal in Franconia. But the French at that time were not in poſſeſſion of any part of that Country, which was never call'd Franconia till a long time after the compiling of the Law. Theſe Salique-Laws were likewiſe called Ripuariæ. M. Bouterone pretends that the word Salique ſignifies as much as Salutaris, or wholſome, profitable and beneficial, as all Laws ought to be. As to the time, it is evident that this Law was made before Clovis, becauſe in it mention is made of Beaſts offered in Sacrifice, which was not in uſe but amongſt the Heathens: but the Chriſtian Kings ſince reformed it, and added ſeveral Articles to it. This Law at firſt was digeſted by four Lords, whoſe Names were Sale-gaſt, Windo-gaſt, Bodo-gaſt (or according to other Copies Atogaſt,) and Wiſo-gaſt, who in a Convention with the Elders of the People, at ſeveral Seſſions, made a Collection of ſuch Laws as they thought moſt beneficial to the Government, and for the adminiſtring of Juſtice. The Collection we have at preſent of the Salique-Laws, bears this Title, The Pact or Agreement of the Salique-Law; and contains Twenty four Titles or Heads, in which is ſpoken of different Matters and Crimes. The ſixth Article under the Head of Alleuds or Free-holds, imports, That no part of the Salique Land may paſs over or be left to Females, but that the Males muſt always ſucceed in the Inheritance. Many have been of opinion, that the Cuſtom which excludes the Daughters from the Crown of France, was founded on this Article; wherefore alſo, by way of excellence, it hath been call'd the Salique-Law. To this Collection of the Salique-Laws there is prefixed a ſmall Treatiſe concerning the firſt French Legiſlators, which informs us, That King Thierry I. being at Chalons, made choice of four very learned and experienced Men, with whoſe help and advice he made the Laws of the Germans, French, Bavarians, and of all People that were his Subjects, adding and taking from it what he thought was needful, reforming the Heathen Cuſtoms in ſuch a manner as that Chriſtians might make uſe of them. That Childebert likewiſe began to make ſome further Amendments in the ſame, which were perfected by Clotharius; and that Dagobert having caus'd them to be reviewed by four worthy Perſons, in a manner renewed them, and put them in a better order than ever they had been before. Mezeray Hiſt. de France.

SALISBURY, or Sarisbury, otherwiſe called New Sarum, Lat. Sarisberia, Sorbiodunum, Severia, a Biſhop's See in the Province of Canterbury, and chief Place of Wiltſhire, ſeated in the North-weſt part of that County, near the borders of Hampſhire and Dorſetſhire, upon the Rivers Willy and Alan, reckoned 70 miles South-weſt from London. This City was rais'd out of an old one, known to the Romans by the Name of Sorbiodunum, which ſtood about a mile from this North-eaſtward, on an Eminence, being a Place deſign'd only for Strength, whereas this is pleaſantly ſeated among ſeveral Rivers, whoſe Streams water moſt of the Streets; near which is the prodigious Plain which takes its Name from hence, and where is to be ſeen the Wonder of England, the Stone-Henge, of which in its proper place. The Streets of this City are large and ſpacious, accommodated with a fine Market-place, adorn'd with a fair Town-houſe, and a ſtately and magnificent Cathedral, which being began by Richard Poor, Biſhop of this See, and finiſh'd in 1258 by Bridport the third Biſhop from him, was dedicated to the Bleſſed Virgin. This Church has twelve Gates, fifty two Windows, and three hundred ſixty five Pillars great and ſmall, which anſwers the number of Months, Weeks and Days in a Year. Its Steeple has a lofty Spire, and, which is remarkable, an Imperial Crown, that ſtood on the top of all, was by a ſudden blaſt of Wind thrown down at the very time when the late King James was at Salisbury in order to oppoſe the Prince of Orange's Forces coming that way from the Weſt. This Biſhop's See ſucceeded in the Rights of two ſeveral Dioceſes, whereof the one had its Cathedral at Sherburn in the County of Dorſet, the other at Wilton, once the chief Town of Wiltſhire; but ſince the growth of Salisbury is very much decay'd; of theſe Sherburn was the ancienter, whoſe Dioceſe extended once over all theſe Counties, which are now ſubject to the Juriſdiction of Salisbury, Briſtol, Wells and Exeter. Thus it continued about three hundred and fifty years, viz. from 705 to 1056, under twenty five Biſhops, the firſt of which was St Adelmus, and the laſt Elfwoldus; whereas the Biſhoprick of Wilton continued but an hundred and fifty years, viz. from the year 906, when Ethelſtan was made firſt Biſhop hereof, to the year 1056, when Hermanus the laſt Biſhop of Wilton being made Biſhop of Sherburn, removed both Sees to Salisbury, of which himſelf and Succeſſors took the Title, and where it has continued ever ſince. The Biſhops heretofore claim'd to be Precentors to their Metropolitan, and of later days to be Chancellors of the Noble Order of the Garter. Since Dorſetſhire was diſmembred from this Biſhoprick, and laid to Briſtol by King Henry VIII. it contains only the Counties of Berks and Wilts, wherein are five hundred forty four Pariſhes, of which one hundred and nine are Impropriated. It's valued in the King's Book 1367 l. 11 s. 8 d. the Clergy paying for their Tenth 901 l. 8 s. 1 d. There are in it three Archdeaconries, viz. Saliſbury, Berks, and Wilts. Kinrick, King of the Weſt-Saxons, was the firſt of that Race who poſſeſſed this Town after a Defeat of the Britains, in 552. Canutus the Dane much damaged it by Fire, in 1009. William the Conqueror ſummon'd hither all the States of England, to take an Oath of Allegiance to him. Since thoſe times the City is removed Northward into the Plain near Avon, as has been ſaid before. In 1153 Patrick d'Evreux was created Earl of Saliſbury, and his Son William ſucceeded in that Honour. In 1197, William Long-Eſpee, a Natural Son to Henry II. by the beautiful Roſamond, marrying Ella the Daughter of William d'Evreux, had this Honour. In 1393 William de Montacute, King of Man, became the fifth Earl, whoſe Male-Line in four Deſcents enjoy'd the Honour till the year 1428, when it paſs'd to Richard Nevil the ſecond Earl of the Line. In 1477, Edward, eldeſt Son of Richard III. married Ann the ſecond Daughter of the ſaid Richard Nevil, and had this Honour. In 1514, Margaret, Daughter of George Duke of Clarence, was by Henry VIII. created Counteſs of Saliſbury. In 1605, Robert Lord Cecil was by King James I. created Earl of Saliſbury, in which Line it ſtill continues.

SALLAND, Lat. Salandia, ſo called from the ancient Salij, a Tract of Land in the Province of Over-Yſſel, a third part of the whole ſubject to the Dutch, and extends betwixt Drent to the North, Tuwenſia to the Eaſt, the River Yſſel and Zuider-Zee. Its principal Towns are Deventer, Swole, Campen, and Stenwic. Baudrand.

SALLO (Denys de) Lord of Hedouville, and Councellor in the Parliament of Paris, was a Pariſian, originally of Poictou, of a very ancient Family. It was he who in 1664 conceiv'd the firſt Project of the Journal of the Learned, which he began to put in practice the next year: And foraſmuch as the Stile could not be uniform, as being a Collection from the Writings of ſeveral Perſons, he took care to adjuſt the Materials that came to him from divers hands, and to give them ſome proportion and regularity. He was complained of the firſt year, for the too great liberty he took (as was ſaid) to cenſure all manner of Books, and ſome learned Men in high terms expreſs'd their diſlike of it: Whereupon Monſieur de Sallo having given over this Undertaking after the publiſhing of his third Journal, and left the care of carrying on the Work to the Abbot Gallois, who took a more pleaſing method, and ſuperſeding all manner of cenſure, made it his buſineſs only to give an Extract of the ſeveral Books, without any more ado. However, certain it is, that the Deſign of this Journal was wonderfully approved of at home and abroad, ſo that it has been tranſlated into Latin, Italian and German, and many in other Countries have imitated his Model, though indeed ſome of the Undertakers have highly improv'd it. The moſt famous are thoſe of England, Italy and Germany, together with News from the Commonwealth of Learning, The Univerſal and Hiſtorical Library, and The Hiſtory of the Works of the Learned. This Emulation of all the Nations of Europe, makes it appear how much the Publick is obliged to him who was the Author of the firſt Journal. Monſieur de Sallo was a Man of a good Temper, and above all things lov'd an entire liberty in expreſſing his Thoughts, and could by no means endure the leaſt reſtraint upon his Mind, but withal was ſomething ſharp in his Reflections. This incomparable Wit had extraordinary ways to profit by his Reading; for beſides ſome that he hir'd to write his Thoughts and Reflections, he employ'd others to make Extracts of the Books he liked and had not time enough to read 'em with ſufficient application: ſo that he could compoſe a Book upon any Subject with incredible expedition, as appeared when Cardinal Chigi, Legate in France, rais'd a Diſpute about Precedency that the Hiſtoriographers could not determine; He being deſir'd to write upon that Subject, publiſh'd an incomparable Treatiſe upon it in eight days. And a Doubt riſing at Court, whether the Queen ſhould be called Mary Thereſe of Auſtria, or Mary Thereſe of Spain, the King deſired Sallo to clear the Point; which gave him occaſion to write his curious Treatiſe of Names, which he compleated in fifteen days. He died at Paris in 1669, being Forty nine years of age. Memoirs du Temps.

SALLUSTIUS, Biſhop of Jeruſalem, ſucceeded Martyrius in 485. Immediately after his Conſecration, ſome factious Monks made their Complaint to him againſt Sabas their Abbot; but he being fully ſatisfied of his Worth and Piety, ſent for him, and in the preſence of his Detractors ordained him Prieſt. Baron. in Annal.

SALLUSTIUS (C. Criſpus) a Latin Hiſtorian born at Amiternum a City of Italy, ſuppoſed by ſome to be the ſame that is now called San Vittorino. He was educated at Rome, where he had ſeveral important Employments. Never did any Man ſet down better Sentences than he, in commendation of all Vertues, nor make ſharper Invectives againſt the Luxury and Avarice of his times; and yet for all this, his looſe and debauch'd manner of living was the cauſe of his being baniſh'd the Senate by the Cenſors; and having been taken in Adultery by Milo, he could not eſcape being whip'd and fin'd for that Offence, as Aulus Gellius tells us from Varro. Moreover, we find from an Oration attributed to Cicero againſt him, that he had ſquander'd away his Patrimony, and that even during his Fathers life his Family was diſcredited by the Debts he had brought upon it. True it is, that Cæſar reſtor'd him to the Dignity of a Senator, got him made Prætor, and ſent him into Numidia; where having outrageouſly pillaged that Province, he return'd with ſo great Riches to Rome, that he purchaſed a moſt ſumptuous Building upon Mount Quirinal, with thoſe Gardens which to this day are ſtill called the Salluſtian Gardens; beſides his Country-Houſe at Tivoli. Euſebius tells us, that this Hiſtorian married Terentia the divorced Wife of Cicero, and that he died in the CLXXXVth Olympiad, about the year of Rome 719. We have nothing but ſome fragments of the chief Hiſtory of Salluſtius, which he begun from the firſt Building of the City of Rome; and the two only entire Pieces we have of him, are, The Conſpiracy of Catilina, and The War of Jugurtha. Some Authors blame him for affecting too much the obſolete Expreſſion of Cato's Origines; others, for having made too bold in coining new Words, and uſing harſh and far-fetch'd Metaphors, and meer Greek Phraſes. However, we find that he is deſervedly eſteem'd as the moſt conſiderable Author of the Roman Hiſtory, according to Martial's judgment of him in Apoph.

Hic erit, ut perhibent Doctorum corda virorum
Criſpus Romana primus in Hiſtoria.
Voſſius. La Mote. Le Vager.

SALLUSTIUS Criſpus, the Siſter's Son of the aforeſaid Salluſtius, a Man in great favour with Auguſtus and Tiberius, and is the ſame Horace mentions in his Odes, and Seneca lib. 1. de Clement. Tacit. lib. 1. & 3. Annal. Plin. lib. 34. cap. 2.

SALM, Salmona, a City of Lorrain, with a Caſtle, on the Borders of the Lower-Alſatia, eight Leagues from Strasburg to the Weſt, fourteen from Marſal to the South eaſt, and twenty from Nancy to the Eaſt. It is the Capital of a Territory advanced to the Title of a Principality ſince 1622, by Ferdinand II. in favour of Philip Otto of the Rhine-graves Family, which before was only an Earldom, and whoſe Son Philip Leopold, in 1654, was received in the Aſſembly of the Princes of the Empire. It's eight Leagues Weſt of Strasburg, and twenty North-eaſt of Mentz. Limn. de Jure Publ.

SALM, a Caſtle of the Netherlands, in the Dutchy of Luxembourg, and Dioceſe of Liege, upon the River Alpe, near La Roche, within ſix Leagues of Lembourgh to the South, and fifteen of Treves.

SALMACIS, a Nymph (as Ovid fables) who being fallen in love with Hermaphroditus, the Son of Mercury and Venus, got into the ſame Fountain with him, where he was bathing; but finding her ſelf unable to overcome his Obſtinacy, ſhe prayed the Gods they might both become but one Body, in which both Sexes might be preſerved. The Moral of this Fable ſeems to refer to that cloſe Union there ought to be between Man and Wife, ſo as to be but one Body, and one Heart. Ovid.

SALMANASSAR, or Shalmanezer, King of Aſſyria, Son and Succeſſor of Tiglath Pilezer, who having impos'd a Tribute upon the Ten Tribes, King Hoſhea refuſing to pay it, and having allied himſelf with the King of Egypt, to ſhake off his Yoke; Salmanaſſar thereupon comes and beſiegeth Samaria, and after a three years Siege takes it, in the Year of the World 3514, and died A. M. 3518, being ſucceeded by Senacherib his Son, 2 King. chap. 17. and 18. Spond. Torniel, Salian.

SALMASIUS. See SAUMAISE.

SALMERON (Alphonſus) a Jeſuit, one of the firſt Companions of Ignatius Loyola. We have a great many of his Works in Sixteen Volumes, eleven whereof are upon ſeveral Evangelical Queſtions, and the other five upon the Acts of the Apoſtles, and the Canonical Epiſtles. Ribadineira and Alegamb. Bibl. Soc. Jeſ. Euſeb. Nieremberg de Vir. Illuſt. Soc. Jeſ. &c.

SALMON, the Son of Naaſſon, Prince of the Tribe of Judah. After the taking of Jericho he married Rahab, and by her had Boaz the Husband of Ruth, and Great-Grand-father of David. St. Matth. c. 1. ver. 4, 5.

SALMONEUS, the Son of Æolus (not he who is fabled to be the God of the Winds) King of Elis a Province in the Peloponneſus, now called Belvedere, he was ſo preſumptuous as to affect the being thought a God by his Subjects, and to this end got a very high Bridge made of Braſs, ſo that it cover'd great part of his capital City, upon which riding in a Chariot, and throwing from him lighted Torches, he endeavoured to make himſelf believed the Thunderer; and to give the more credit to this, he had Men appointed, who immediately killed thoſe on whom his Torches lighted; but Jupiter, provok'd with this Impiety, piety, ſtruck him Dead with a Real Thunderbolt. Servius, in Æneid. 6th. Virg.

SALMONS LEAP, a place near Kilgarran, upon the River Tivy in Pembrookſhire, where the Water falls from a great heighth, which when the Salmons, coveting to get farther into the River, come at, they bend back their Tail to their Mouth, and ſpring as if a bended twig were let go, and ſo to the great Admiration of Beholders get over this heighth. Cambden.

SALO, Lat. Salodium, a large City of Brixa in Italy, on the Weſtern Bank of the Lake Benacum betwixt Brixia and Trent, whence it lies twenty Miles, and thirty Weſt of Verona, ſubject to the Venetians. Baud.

SALO, now Xalon, a River in that part of Spain which the Romans called Tarraconenſis in the Country of the Celtiberians; it riſeth in Old Caſtile, and paſſing through Arragon, waters the Town of Baubula, where formerly ſtood the ancient City Bilbilis, whence it falls into the River Ebro, formerly called Iberus, four Leagues above Saragoſſa. The Water of the River is excellent for the Tempering of Iron. Euſeb. Nieremb, Hiſtor. Nat. lib. 1.

SALOBRENA, Lat. Salambina, a Town in Betick Spain according to Ptolemy, but now in the Kingdom of Grenada, being a Peninſula with a Haven on the Mediterranean, and a well fortified Caſtle; it is near the Town of Motril, ſixteen Leagues of Malaga, and 20 from Almeria. Baud.

SALOME, the Siſter of Herod ſurnamed the Great, who perſuaded her Brother that Mariamne his Wife had a deſign to Poyſon him, whereupon he cauſed her to be Beheaded. She was married to Joſeph, whom Herod alſo put to Death; and after that was married to Caſtoborus, upon whom he had already conferred the Government of Idumea and Gaza; but he ſome time after falling into a great Difference with his Wife Salome, ſhe ſent him a Bill of Divorce contrary to the Cuſtom of the Jews, who allow this Power only to Husbands. Herod ſoon after put him to Death alſo. In the mean time Salome endeavoured to ſtir up Hatred in her Brother againſt Alexander and Ariſtobulus his Sons by Mariamne. Some time after Syllæus Miniſter of State to Obodas King of Arabia, being come to treat ſome buſineſs with Herod, he fell in Love with Salome, who was no leſs taken with this Stranger; ſo that the Kings Wives openly diſcourſed it, that ſhe had refuſed him nothing. She would alſo fain have married him, but Herod was againſt it, and married her to Alexas. She died not long after her Brother Joſeph. Lib. 15, 16, 17 & 18. Antiq. & 1. de Bell.

SALOME, the Mother of St. James, and St. John. Alſo another of that Name, the Daughter of Antipater, Herod's Son.

SALOMON King of the Jews, the Son of David by Bathſheba, was born A. M. 2996. his Name ſignifies Peaceful. He was declared King, and proclaimed during his Fathers Life, notwithſtanding the deſign of his Brother Adonijah to ſupplant him. God having bid him ask whatſoever he pleaſed of him, he pray'd for Wiſdom to govern wiſely the great People committed to his Charge; which requeſt of his was ſo pleaſing to God, that together with it to an extraordinary degree, he gave him greater Riches than ever any Prince had before him. His Book of Proverbs and Eccleſiaſtes are an evident proof of his great Wiſdom; and if we had all his other Writings mentioned in the Scriptures, we ſhould ſtill have more abundant evidence of it. After David's Death A. M. 3020. Salomon then but 24 Years of Age, governed the Kingdom of Iſrael alone, putting his Fathers Orders in execution, puniſhed thoſe that had conſpired againſt him, ſought the King of Egypts Alliance, and married his Daughter, extended his Territories as far as the Euphrates, and laid a Tribute upon all the Infidels that dwelt among the Iſraelites. In the midſt of all his Proſperity he was overtaken with the Love of Women, and thence fell into Idolatry, for which cauſe God divided the Kingdom of Iſrael, and left only two Tribes to his Son. He had ſeven hundred Wives who were all called Queens, beſides three hundred Concubines, though the Law which allowed plurality of Wives forbad ſuch numbers, and Alliances with Strangers, and his complaiſance for his Egyptian Wives, and for thoſe which he married among the Ammonites and Moabites, made him build a Temple to the Deities they ador'd, and commit great Abominations. We ſhall ſpeak of the Queen of Sheba's Viſit to him, and of the Magnificent Temple that he built in Jeruſalem in their proper places. He reigned forty Years, and reach'd the 64th Year of his Life, and died A. M. 3099. I cannot but take notice here, that ſome have accuſed King Salomon of Magick, chiefly becauſe Joſephus makes mention of a Book he had made, teaching the way to caſt Devils out of the Bodies of poſſeſſed Perſons. There are ſeveral Books attributed to him of this kind, but the very Titles of them are a ſufficient Argument to prove them none of his.

SALOMON King of Hungary, was the Son of Andrew I. whom his Brother Bela I. dethroned in 1061. but the Emperor Henry IV. entred into an Alliance with Salomon, and reſtored him to his Fathers Throne, whereupon in 1063 he was Crowned at Alba Regalis, waged War againſt the Bohemians, and reigned till the Year 1074, when his Couſins Geiſla and Ladiſlaus, Sons of Bela, chaſed him from his Kingdom. After this he took a Monks Habit, and died at Pola in Iſtria 1095. Bonfin.

SALOMON Duke of the leſſer Britany, he ſucceeded Hariſpoge of Haruſpee, who was murthered. Some Authors tell us he was his Son, and that he had a hand in the Murther of his Father; but it is certain that he was only his Kinſman. The Britains choſe him for their Prince, becauſe he was a tall handſome Man, and very Pious, ſo that he paſſed for a Saint. He uſurped the Title of a King, and in 863 he ſubmitted himſelf to Charles ſurnamed the Bald, and aſſiſted him againſt the Normans, who were their common Enemies, and was killed in 875. Argentre.

SALOMON, a Jew who lived in Spain at the beginning of the Sixteenth Century, and was a Phyſician amongſt his own People. He wrote a Hiſtory of what hath happened to the Jews from the Deſtruction of the Temple of Jeruſalem until his time. This Book bears the Title of Schebet Juda, that is to ſay the Tribe or Rod of Juda, and hath been Tranſlated into Latin by George Gentius, and Peter Niel publiſhed it at Amſterdam 1651 in one Volume in Quarto. The Jews do highly value this Work, which they have tranſlated into divers Modern Languages, as High Dutch, Portugueſe, &c. This Book gives an account of the Calamities they have undergone during their Diſperſion; as alſo of ſeveral publick Diſputes maintained between the Chriſtians and Jews, the moſt remarkable of which is upon an Explication of a Paſſage in the Talmud, whence Joſhua Lurki ſince called Hieronymus de Sancta Fide, proved that the Meſſiah was come. There are ſeveral Editions of this Book in Hebrew. The Latin Verſion of Gentius has this Title, Hiſtoria Judaica, res Judæorum ab everſa Æde Hieroſolymitana ad hac fere tempora uſque complexa.

SALOMON, there have been ſeveral Rabbies of this Name, but the moſt Celebrated of them is Raſchi, by the Chriſtians generally call'd Solomon Jarchi, who was Born at Troyes in Champaigne, in the XIIth Century. Lyranus in his Commentaries upon the Scriptures makes great uſe of this Rabbi, whoſe Expoſitions upon the Scripture have been Printed with the great Hebrew Bibles of Venice and Baſil. The Jews look upon him as their beſt Expoſitor, becauſe he commonly follows the ſenſe of the Talmud, and is very zealous in the Defence of their Traditions. Beſides his Commentaries upon the Scripture, he has likewiſe Gloſs'd upon the Babylonian Talmud, which Work is much valued by the Jews. P. Simon.

SALOMON'S ISLES, Iſlas de Salomon, large Iſlands in the South Sea, called Mare Pacificum, towards New-Zealand and the Antartick Pole, which were diſcover'd in the Year 1567 by Alvarez Mendoza, being Eighteen in number, viz. The Iſle of St. Elizabeth, St. George, St. Mark, St. Nicholas, The Iſle of Rocks, St. Jerome, Guadalcanal, Boaviſta, St. Dimas, Florida, Malacta, Atregado, The Three Maries, St. James, St. Chriſtopher, The Name of God, St. Anna and St. Catharine. Theſe are all of them great Iſlands, but little frequented by the Europeans.

SALON, Salum, a City of France in Provence, between Aix and Arles, five Leagues from the firſt, and ſeven from the other; it hath a Collegiate Church, and divers Religious Houſes. Michael and Cæſar Noſtradamus were born here, and the firſt died here in 1566, as alſo Peter Hozier a French Herald, who died at Paris 1660.

SALONA, a Caſtle built by the Venetians near a Ruinous City of the ſame name in Dalmatia. It ſtands on the Sea five Miles North of Spalatro. Long. 38. 50. Lat. 44. 50.

SALONA, a City on the Coaſt of Dalmatia, now ruined by the Sclavonians, but formerly was a Biſhops See under the Archbiſhop of Spalato, and much mentioned in ancient Writers, and more particularly Famous for the retreat of the Emperor Diocleſian. This City took Cæſar's part in the Civil War: Octavius having laid Siege to this place for Pompey, the Inhabitants defended themſelves with ſo much Obſtinacy, that being reſolved upon no terms to ſurrender, they ſet their Slaves at liberty, and made them take up Arms; and of their Wives Hair twiſted Cords to ſet their Warlike Machines at work; and having ſet all their Women upon the Walls to make a ſhew of their number, they made a Sally, and forced their Enemies to raiſe the Siege. It is five Miles North of Spalato, which roſe from its Ruins. Strabo, &c.

SALONIA the Wife of the Emperor Gallienus, who being a zealous Admirer of the Platonick Philoſophy, which ſhe had learnt of Plotinus, perſuaded her Husband to permit Plotinus to build a City, where he might eſtabliſh a Commonwealth, conform to the Sentiments of Plato, with the name of Platonopolis. But this Deſign, though ſupported by the Credit of an Emperor, had no good Succeſs, ſo that Plotinus was fain to own that his Maſters Commonwealth, though it was very agreeable in the Speculation, yet was not good in the Practice or Execution. From whence Baronius takes occaſion to repreſent the Excellence of the Chriſtian Religion from its happy Eſtabliſhment, notwithſtanding that by the Severity of its Laws, it croſſeth Mens Inclination to Pleaſures, and the corrupt Maxims of Worldly Wiſdom. Porphyr. Baron.
